Opening Reception At the Y. M. C.

The Quincy Y. M. C. A. social and athletic season was inaugurated Wednesday evening at the association building, and a big representation of the young men of Quincy were on hand to take advantage of the open house.

The building was brilliantly lighted from top to bottom, and the boys had the full run of the house, using the bowling alleys, pool tables and other amusements at will.

An excellent program had been arranged for the benefit of the guests. On entering the building the first thing to greet the newcomer was a hearty handshake and a word of welcome from one of the committee. The strains of music which could be heard, came from the instruments of the Y. M. C. A. Mandolin club, which was seated in an alcove on the left of the reception room. Their concert was first on the program.

The concert, which was very enjoyable and creditable, lasted till 8.15, and then all were asked to go to the "gym." There under the direction of Physical Director Maxwell the boys gave a fine exhibition of gymnasium work.

Refreshments were served, during which time H. P. Dowst gave a short talk on departmental and social work., He told of the various features of the coming year, and promised that there would be plenty of life in the social line the coming winter. He was followed by George H. Brown and George H. Maxwell, who spoke on the educational and physical departments respectively.

The company then proceeded to the hall upstairs to see the final feature of the evening, a laughable farce entitled "Hotel Runners," in which the well known performer, Erastus Osgood, was the leading character. He was supported in fine style by Paul Frowhein, Edward W. Keeler, Henry Hallowell, Harold McDowell, J. G. McGregor, Charles E. Detrick and H. A. Belden.

This closed the program for the evening, a program which was enjoyed by all.

This reception will do much towards increasing the membership enrollment.

It was announced that the next social event will be a garden concert to be held October 28. The election returns of the National vote will be given at the Y. M. C. A. November 3, and this should prove to be quite a drawing card.

—The captains of the various fishings in Gloucester are complaining about the fleet of steam travelers at work off the Grand Banks. They say the steam trawlers are a menace to American fishermen and show no consideration to anyone.

QUINCY MUTUAL

Loses by Death It President Of Many Years Chas. A. Howland

Charles A. Howland, one of Quincy's most prominent business men, and president of the Quincy Mutual Fire Insurance Co., passed away this morning at his home on Adams street, his death being due to a complication of diseases.

Mr. Howland had been in poor health for some time. It has been his custom ever since the marriage of his daughter to Lieut. Lister of the British navy to visit Europe every year. It was his intention to do so the past summer, but poor health presented. His health has been failing for some months although he has not been confined to his home until recently.

Mr. Howland was born in Worcester, Sept. 4, 1829, and was a son of Southworth Allen Howland, a direct descendant of the seventh generation of John Howland whose signature is the thirteenth of the forty-one names appended to the memorable compact made in the cabin of the Mayflower, in Cape Cod harbor, Nov. 21, 1620.

He attended the public and high schools of his native place and afterward studied with a private tutor completing his education at the Leicester academy. While at school he learned the book binders trade of his father. Leaving school he was employed for two and one half years in the office of the registry of deeds, spending his leisure time in the office of his father who had changed his business to an insurance agent, representating several companies among which was the Quincy Mutual Fire Insurance Co., of which he later became president.

He helped his father in making surveys, applications, plans, etc. Some of those found their way into the home office where they attracted the attention of the secretary, who wrote to Mr. Howland, senior, to learn who his clerk was. Being informed that it was his son Charles, he offered him a position in the office at a salary of $11 per week. Mr. Howland accepted the profer and came to Quincy, where he has since resided.

In three months he had mastered the details of the work, and during the first year adjusted some losses. The second year he was made adjuster, and the following year assistant secretary. Dec. 13, 1860, the secretary had a stroke of paralysis, and the duties of the office devolved upon Mr. Howland. On April 14, 1861, he was installed as secretary filling that position for 24 years. In 1884 he was elected president and treasurer which position he has since held.

In January, 1879, he was elected a director of the Mt. Wollaston National bank, and has been on the board of directory ever since, and president of the bank since Oct. 17, 1893. He was also a trustee of the Quincy Savings bank, a director of the Hingham Cordage Co., and the Lawrence Duck Co. He was one of the prime movers in the formation of the Citizens Gas Light Co., and was for many years its treasurer. He has also served the city as chairman of the Board of Managers of the Adams Academy, and he was a member of the Psychological society of Boston.

Mr. Howland has always been a staunch Republican, but never cared for political office. He was twice married, his first wife being a daughter of the late Israel W. Monroe. Jan. 5, 1871, he married Miss Helen M. Moore, a daughter of Rev. Joseph Moore of Duxbury, who survives him. He also leaves a son and daughter, Charles A. Howland, Jr., and Mabel, who is the wife of Francis H. Lester, chief engineer of the British navy.

THE BUSINESS MEN'S CARNIVAL.

Friday and Saturday nights promise to be the events of the season. Indications point to Music hall being crowded to the limit both nights. Mrs. A. I. Davis will appear in two skits.

The society chorus and adnce participated in by 30 young women, beautifully gowned, with Miss Bertha Carlson as soloist and Miss Helen Rhines and Miss Eva Sheldon as leaders of the dance, will be one of the features of the Business Men's Carnival on Friday night.

BOYS IN COURT.

Six Houghs Neck juveniles were in court this morning for setting fires in that section. There have been a number of small fires at the beach this summer, particularly in a partly burned cottage on Sea street. This cottage was burned some time ago and since that time it is alleged the boys have tried several times to finish the job it having been set fire five times since Aug. 20.

Governor Haskell Makes Vigorous Reply to the President

ATTACKS BASED ON HEARSAY

Says Roosevelt Received $260,000 For Campaign Fund Shortly After Granting Oil Franchise--Union Labor Approved Veto of Child Labor Law--Explains His Position as Defendant In Government Suit

Guthrie, Okla., Oct. 1.—Governor Haskell, formerly treasurer of the Democratic national committee, last night gave out a long letter to President Roosevelt repeating his published defense to the charges made against him. The letter begins:

CHARLES N. HASKELL.

"Yesterday I was engaged in writing a communication to you as the chief magistrate of the United States, assuming that a few days of reflection might have brought you to a realization of the fact that the people of our country had placed you in the highest position of authority and respect and that with the authority you had assumed the obligation of meting out equal and exact justice to every citizen of our country, and that, realizing your obligation, you would know that one of the principles of a free government is that no man shall be condemned without a hearing; knowing that not one word that you have ever spoken concerning me was of your personal knowledge, but entirely hearsay which has reached ears as a result of intense partisan conflict; that you do not know me personally, and never heard a word from my lips.

"The serious character of your charge should have suggested to you that you, as chief executive, should proceed with deliberation and certainty before making such hearsay statements your own declarations.

"Your attack upon me finally rested upon my conduct toward the Prairie Oil and Gas company, in this state. I have said that you were responsible for granting a franchise before statehood, thereby creating vested rights. You seek to evade the issue and create wrong impressions. You said the interior department had no power, except where crossing an Indian reservation. You would have your readers believe that Indian Territory was then conducting its own government and that only parts of the same were Indian reservations.

"Mr. Roosevelt, you know it isn't true. You know all the land was Indian land without county, township or territorial government. What halo of integrity surrounded you last week like the mist has faded away and the interior department holds the record which convicts you.

"You granted the franchise at the solicitation of Senator Depew and a few days thereafter received $260,000 in cash for your campaign fund.

"You charged me with having attempted to bribe the attorney general of Ohio. That was presumably nine years ago. You have abandoned that position. Charles P. Taft says, through his paper, that no evidence was ever produced that would convict me of the charge.

"In touching upon the state university question you pretended to quote from The Outlook magazine, but how dishonestly you enlarged on the magazine article. That article charged me with substituting Democratic for Republican professors, for political purposes. I have shown that statement to be false, but I charge you with trying to enlarge on that magazine article and give the world the impression that we were improperly using the money appropriated to conduct that institution.

"Your charge that I vetoed a child labor law you have not apologized for, notwithstanding you knew that I did it with the approval of union labor, and that our state constitution, which you said was 'so bad your opinion of it would not look well in print,' contains more detail and child labor legislation than all you have recommended to the New York legislature as governor or to the congress of the United States as president, and that I had approved fourteen acts of our legislature passed at the solicitation of union labor.

"You said in your first statement that I had suits brought against me to recover title to Creek Indian land. I overwhelmed you on that statement. Adopting your usual policy, you flee from that statement without just apology and adopt the statement now that it was government town site lots that you charged me with being sued for.

"Yes, I believe I am a defendant as to certain government town site lots in one of nearly 11,000 suits that you have brought against as many different honorable and high-minded citizens of this state during this presidential campaign year, and you will not undertake to deny that petty politics for the purpose of Republicanizing about 20,000 Indian voters was your whole motive for having those suits brought; and I charge you with knowing that there has been no delay in the cases, except that occasioned by the court's deliberations, taken by himself as time he deemed necessary to consider whether or not there is any merit in the petition filed by your attorney.

"You say that on that land question you will see that I get a hearing in court. Yes, sir, I will come to your hearing. Call to your assistance all the power that your high office commands, present your case in any form you like. I am ready to meet it and before its conclusion the people of America will be disgusted that they ever elected you President of the United States."

Bryan Ends Whirlwind Tour

Creston, Ia., Oct. 1.—Traversing the southeastern and southern portions of Iowa all day, William J. Bryan last night concluded his whirlwind speaking tour of more than three weeks at this place, where a big open-air meeting was held. No greater demonstrations have been accorded Bryan anywhere than in Iowa. When he took a late train for Lincoln he had delivered during the day fifteen speeches to immense crowds. In all of these talks he devoted himself principally to a discussion of the platforms of the two parties, with special reference to publicity of campaign contributions, election of senators by direct vote and the tariff. He again declared that the president had degraded the high office he holds by participating in the campaign instead of leaving Taft and himself to fight it out alone.

Hughes In West Virginia

Martinsburg, W. Va., Oct. 1.—The whirling political tour of Governor Hughes of New York through West Virginia, beginning at Clarksburg in the early morning and ending at Washington Junction, was marked by large crowds and much enthusiasm. Hughes discussed Mr. Bryan's proposition for trust control by prohibiting any company from manufacturing and selling more than 50 percent of the total quantity of any article used in the United States. This, Hughes declared, was "impracticable, dangerous and a step toward a bureaucratic government. The shop in order to pay good wages must run to the maximum of its efficiency." Hughes prophesied Republican victory "if we can bring the people to understand the issues and the conditions clearly."

Nomination May Go Begging

Manchester, N. H., Oct. 1.—It is generally understood here that Judge Bingham of this city, the Democratic nominee for governor of New Hampshire, has declined to accept the party leadership in the state campaign and has made known his position in the matter in a letter to Chairman Carr of the Democratic state committee. In the meantime, John T. Almy has notified his associates of the committee of notification to meet him in this city on Friday for the purpose of waiting upon Judge Bingham and announcing officially to him his nomination.

Chicago's Mayor Sues For Libel

Chicago, Oct. 1.—Charles McCormick, an Independent candidate for congress in the First district (Chicago) was indicted for criminal libel on complaint of Mayor Busse. McCormick is accused of having published a pamphlet attacking the mayor. What is alleged to be an excerpt from the pamphlet is quoted in the indictment as follows: "President Roosevelt should know that Mayor Fred A. Busse, high priest and chief worker of the Republican party, is a moral leper."

Papermakers' Strike Continues

Albany, Oct. 1.—The strike of the local unions of the National Brotherhood of Pulp, Sulphite Workers and Papermakers in New York and New England states, inaugurated on Aug. 1, seems as far from settlement as ever. Delegates representing the various unions, after an all-night session and two sessions here yesterday, were unable to effect a compromise.

Teddy Roosevelt Goes to Work

Thompsonville, Conn., Oct. 1.—Theodore Roosevelt, Jr., has entered the employ of the Hartford Carpet company, whose mills are located here. On his arrival late yesterday he was received by Vice President Higgins and other officers of the company. He entered upon his duties as an office clerk this morning.

Order For Fifty Æroplanes

Lymans, France, Oct. 1.—Lazare Weiller, the French aeroplane promoter, has given an order to Wilbur Wright for the construction of fifty Wright aeroplanes. The amount of this contract is $100,000, and Weiller is convinced that Wright can carry it out.

WELCOME TO SYNAGOGUE

No Discrimination Against Marine Because of His Uniform

Boston, Oct. 1.—Rabbi Phineas Israeli of the Congregation Adath Jeshurun last night issued a statement denying that a United States marine had been refused admission to the synagogue of his congregation recently because he was wearing a uniform.

Israeli states that he has investigated the matter thoroughly and has found that a marine named Williams approached the two ushers at the door of the synagogue on the day in question and asked whether a certain man was in the synagogue. On being told that the ushers knew of no such man, the sailor walked away without saying another word.

Israeli also states that the vice president of the congregation, J. Rudnick, had never made the statement that any marine in uniform would be refused admission, but, on the contrary, had told the reporters who inquired about the matter that anyone was welcome to the synagogue, whether wearing a uniform or not.

BABY PATRICK'S DISTINCTION

Born Among Castaways on the Barren Christmas Island

Suva, Fiji Islands, Oct. 1.—The castaways from the British steamer Aeon, who spent nearly two months on Christmas island, an almost barren coral formation in the Pacific ocean, arrived here on steamer Manuka, all well and increased by one in numbers. A daughter was born to the wife of Chaplain Patrick, U. S. N., twenty-four hours before the Manuka was sighted, and this event, together with the arrival of the rescuers, was made the occasion of much rejoicing.

The Manuka reached Christmas island Sept. 23. Six hundred bags of mail were transferred to the steamer during the night and the passengers and crew of the Aeon were taken aboard the next morning.

The Aeon left San Francisco on July 6 for Auckland by way of Apia and was carried on the coral island by the strong currents setting in shore. The steamer speedily broke up, but the mails were saved and a large quantity of stores. The refugees suffered few privations, but found themselves amid the remnants of former wrecks, indicating the danger of the reefs and tides.

In addition to the officers and crew the Aeon carried Mrs. Patrick and her children and the wife of Lieutenant Riddle, U. S. N. Rude shelters were built, but later quite an artistic cottage was erected for Mrs. Patrick and her nurse out of lumber and cabin fittings of the ship. Among the stores saved were plenty of fresh vegetables, and the men of the crew secured fish in abundance by the use of clubs in the surf. A supply of fresh water was found at a depth of seven feet, and, according to the story of the castaways, under the circumstances they fared well indeed.

Mrs. Hains Wants Her Children

New York, Oct. 1.—All doubt as to what would be the attitude of Mrs. Hains in the forthcoming trial of her husband, Captain Peter C. Hains, Jr., accused of the murder of William E. Annis, was dispelled by the inauguration by her of proceedings in the supreme court, Brooklyn, in which a general denial is made of the allegations of wrongdoing with Annis, which Hains had made in his suit for divorce against her and had formed the basis of his defense for the shooting of Annis. The proceedings instituted by Mrs. Hains are for the purpose of securing the custody of her children, who are now said to be in the care of her husband's family.

Boston Has $100,000 Fire

Boston, Oct. 1.—A spectacular fire, which burned for more than three hours last night, destroyed the three-story brick block occupied by A. C. Dawson as assignee for the Lewis F. Perry & Whitney company, house furnishers, at 44 Winchester street, and burned out nine families from the closely packed tenement houses adjoining. At one time a Greek Orthodox church, which adjoins the Perry & Whitney building, was afire and threatened, and a valuable painting of "The Last Supper" was cut from its frame and carried out. The total loss is about $100,000.

Charges Against Hanly Were False

Indianapolis, Oct. 1.—Governor Hanly was completely exonerated in the report by the committee appointed by the lower house of the special session of the Indiana legislature to investigate charges made against the governor by Representative Knisely, who charged that the governor had tried to influence his vote in favor of the county option bill by offering him a position.

Assault May Result Fatally

White River Junction, Vt., Oct. 1.—Fred L. Euber, aged 45, foreman of Gibbs & Wheeler's stable in this place, charged with assault upon William E. Blood with a pitchfork handle, was held in $5000 bonds. In default of bail he was committed to jail. Fears are entertained that Blood will not live.

Killing Probably Accidental

Pawtucket, R. I., Oct. 1.—Charles L. Lyons, aged 19, was shot and almost instantly killed by Joseph Prario, a companion of about his own age. The police state that they believe that the shooting was purely accidental.

Democrats Not Dismayed by Defeat and Internal Dissensions

ADDRESS OF CHAIRMAN PETERS

Power Too Long Placed In Same Hands Lead to Abuse--Bay State Particularly Feels Burden of Present Tariff Laws--Right of Free Speech Denied In Congress--Disregard For Expenses of the State Government--New Labor Laws

Upon assuming his position as permanent chairman of the Massachusetts state Democratic convention, Andrew J. Peters gave his hearty thanks for the honor and expressed the hope that it would be found that the confidence shown in him was not misplaced. The presiding officer's speech follows:

Massachusetts in the history of our country has ever been in the forefront of enlightened progress, and in her citizens there has always been found a ready response to demands for patriotic service. For generations her people have chosen this hall for their meeting place and the words of liberty spoken within its walls have resounded through every village of our country. Its every tradition makes of it a most fitting place for the convention of a party which stands, as does the Democratic party, as the champion of the people's liberties.

We meet here today to take one of the essential steps by which our Democratic form of government is carried on. Our government is one of parties, and we have upon our shoulders the burden of putting before the people the issues upon which one of the principal parties will ask on election day their endorsement. It is a matter of congratulation to its members and to the people of our state that today the Democracy stands forth vigorous and united, and no more convincing evidence could be given of the vitality of its issues than the fact that, after continued defeat and the internal dissensions of recent date, it now presents a united front and confidently prepares for the coming contest.

The forefathers of our country gave us a constitution and a code of laws, but the individual liberty thus intended to be secured can only be preserved to us by an intelligent and upright citizenship, a citizenship conscious of the duties a Democracy places upon its people and ever alert to perform them.

Never more than today has our country had need of the best thought its citizens can give and never have issues more wide-spreading in their effects come before our people for solution. During almost fifty years one party has had partial or complete control of our government. Confident in the position this continued power has given it, the leaders of the Republican party have come to regard its welfare as the paramount duty of its members and the government of the United States as a more or less important, though secondary, responsibility. Power too long placed in the same hands leads to abuse, and the danger which frequent elections were intended to guard against soon becomes an immediate one when one party remains for too long a period in continuous control.

Our government is one not of persons, but of parties, and it has ever been the custom to keep from our national campaigns the bitterness of personal attack. That such attacks excite the public mind and prevent a calm consideration of the real issues to be decided by the election can be doubted by no one. When the holder of the highest office in the gift of the people forgets the respect which is its due and throws himself into an attack of personalities, the average citizen can feel only the deepest regret. Whatever opinions may be of the political exigencies of the situation there can be only condemnation for acts which serve to rob the office of president of the dignity which is attached to it.

The Tariff

The citizens of our state, oppressed for years by the high duties of the tariff, have long been asking for a revision of its schedules. Massachusetts, from her situation and her dependence on other states for the raw materials of her industries, more than any other section of the country has felt the burden of our present tariff laws.

Influenced by the national policies of their party, the Republicans of this state have given our citizens but little encouragement in their demands. Now, however, the country as a whole is demanding a revision of the tariff—a revision not as all those made by the Republican party have been, solely in the interests of its controlling powers, the protected manufacturers—but a real revision in the interests of consumers.

The Republican party has met this demand by declaring in its platform in favor of "such duties as would equalize the difference between the cost of production at home and abroad, together with a reasonable profit to American industries." Such a revision may as well be upward as downward. In fact, the spokesman of the Republican party in congress boldly said on the floor of the house that certain schedules may be raised and others lowered. A tax on the American people to produce a "reasonable profit" for American manufacturers is a tax for private and special purposes. In this the Republican party boldly advocates a principle unlawful in its plan and vicious in its purpose. Who before has ever advocated the taxing of the people to produce a profit of industry?

The House of Representatives

The house of representatives was created to give expression to the will of the people of our country, and yet the Republican party has become so confident in its power that it has placed in the office of speaker, and supports by its members, a man who has taken away from the representatives of the people their right of speech.

The ballot box, and not the speaker's gavel, was intended as a check upon the members of the house of representatives. Three rule-made members sitting in that body legislate for eighty million free American people. Nothing of advance, nothing of reform, no revision of the tariff in the interests of the people can ever pass the house of representatives while the present Republican speaker thus holds sway.

The trusts, secure behind the barriers of the Republican tariff, view with ill-concealed contempt the mimic warfare waged against them by that party. No clearer warning could be given that the Republicans must heed the demand of the country for a genuine revision of the tariff than that the state of Massachusetts should this year place at its head a Democratic governor.

Extravagance of State Government

Continuous control breeds in the ruling party not only contempt for the liberties of the citizens, but a disregard for the expenses of the government. The citizens of our state are becoming more and more alarmed at the increase of the taxes it yearly collects. From $1,500,000 in 1898, the state tax in ten years has increased to over $4,000,000, or almost three times, and that the people of the state are entitled to an explanation of this increase seems to be the only point upon which the three candidates for the Republican nomination for lieutenant governor agree.

The burden, in its ultimate distribution, comes in no small part on the all-too-small returns of our wage-earners. The citizens of Boston especially are concerned with this subject, as the recent substantial increase in the city's tax rate is said to be due solely to the increase in the state tax.

Candidates by Inheritance

Our system of conventions provides a method for filling offices by the choice of delegates elected by the people. The machine system of the Republican party, however, has so far overcome this plan that we now have the spectacle of delegates elected one year to fill an office picking candidates for another office three years in advance.

State Commissions

The continued control of our state government by the Republican party has brought along with it the development and growth of government by commissions, and we now have fifty-three boards and commissions engaged in many forms of state activity and spending each year large amounts of the people's money—commissions whose members for the most part hold office after the end of the terms of the governor who appoints them and for whose acts no one is directly responsible. Undemocratic and pernicious, this system can develop only a dangerous and irresponsible administration.

Labor

Massachusetts, situated as she is, and with 95 percent of her products consisting of manufactured goods, is almost solely dependent for her prosperity on the industry and intelligence of her citizens. She has within her borders a large number of skilled workmen whose services are indispensable to her welfare and whose training and skill in their occupations place them second to the citizens of no region in the world.

To protect these citizens properly in their labor and to educate and develop their children is one of the most important duties of our state and is a responsibility which requires the most careful thought. As the methods of our manufactures develop, new conditions are evolved under which the operatives' work.

To meet these new conditions we must have new and progressive laws. Not only must the hours of labor be reasonable, but the conditions under which the operatives work must be healthful and as free as possible from danger. A state founded upon the principle of universal suffrage must carefully provide for the health of the mothers and children and in no way must it slacken its vigil in providing protection for them and in forbidding the employment of children in dangerous occupations or until they have reached an age at which education is completed.

Untrammelled by selfish control, the Democratic party always has stood for the interest of our citizens. No small amount of the progressive legislation of our state has been forced from an unwilling majority by the Democratic members of our house and senate, to whom belongs the credit of having blazed the way to progress. And that this work is not without appreciation the action of this convention will show. Active, courageous, aggressive, a young man of our party has shown in our senate capabilities of so conspicuous a nature that the demand for his leadership has become widespread. He is confidently mentioned for the highest nomination in the gift of this convention.

The campaign just commencing is one of vast importance to the country and to our state. At no time has there been greater need of clear-sighted consideration of public questions than now. Let us present our issues to the people in a manner straightforward and direct, and appeal not by prejudice or passion, but by reason and common sense. Confident in the intelligence and good sense of the people we can await without fear the verdict of election day.

VAHEY HEADS BAY STATERS

Unanimously Named For Governor by the Democrats

PEACE AT STATE CONVENTION

Bitter Antagonisms of Last Year Appear to Have Been Buried--Richard Olney Squelches a Boom Started In His Own Behalf--Labor Leader Golden the Nominee For Second Place on the Ticket

Boston, Oct. 1.—The Democratic state convention met in Faneuil hall today for the selection of a state ticket and two presidential electors. Unlike the meeting a year ago at Springfield, it is an unusually harmonious affair. There was but one avowed candidate for governor, State Senator James H. Vahey of Watertown.

JAMES H. VAHEY.

Many of the party leaders who were such bitter antagonists at Springfield that two conventions were held in the same hall are present and several assisted Chairman Synan of the state committee in completing the details for the convention.

The committee on platform held an executive session at which the various planks were presented by the chairman, John Golden of Fall River. Deleman, John Golden of Fall River.

Senator Vahey's name was presented to the convention by former Senator Hayes of Springfield and was seconded by Senator Mitchell of Marlboro. The nomination was unanimously endorsed by the convention.

The balance of the ticket follows:

For lieutenant governor, John Golden of Fall River; secretary of state, L. C. Bliss, Brookline; attorney general, John A. Thayer, Worcester; auditor, Simeon Viger, Lawrence; presidential electors-at-large, Richard Olney of Boston, James E. Cotter of Hyde Park.

An ineffectual attempt to turn the convention over to Richard Olney and block James H. Vahey shook the Democracy assembled last night at the Quincy house. But before the evening was over word was received from Olney that he would not accept under any circumstances.

John Golden of Fall River, who consented to run for governor, announced that he preferred Vahey as a running mate, and that if another were to be nominated he would refuse the nomination for second place. The Golden announcement practically clinched the Vahey candidacy.

Young Roosevelt at Harvard

Cambridge, Mass., Oct. 1.—In sumptuous apartments in the exclusive Claverly hall, Kermit Roosevelt, the second son of President Roosevelt, has taken his place at Harvard as the representative of the Roosevelt family. Kermit, who was graduated from Groton last June, registered yesterday at Massachusetts hall as a freshman, handed in his list of studies and became a real Harvard man ready to engage in all the activities of his college mates.

Sisters Burned to Death

Rockland, Me., Oct. 1.—Mrs. George Cook of St. George and her sister, Mrs. Kate Floyd, lost their lives in the burning of the former's home at Martinsville. There is no clue as to how the fire caught. The building and contents are a total loss. Mrs. Cook was a widow and had no near relatives living save her sister. She was about 45 years old. Mrs. Floyd is survived by her daughter, Mrs. S. Munroe of Natick, Mass.

Forest Fires Break Out Again

Lowelltown, Me., Oct. 1.—The forest fires in this vicinity were believed to have been so checked by the rain Tuesday as to be practically under control, but they have broken out again and seem to be raging as seriously as ever. It is estimated that 40,000 acres of forest land has been burned over thus far.

Hundred and Forty Lives Lost

Smyrna, Oct. 1.—A Turkish steamship ran down the steam ferryboat Stambul outside the harbor yesterday afternoon. One hundred and forty persons were drowned.

LONGER HOURS

For Money Order Business Is Ordered for Quincy Postoffice

One of the first benefits to be enjoyed by patrons of the Quincy post office since its consolidation with Boston, is the extension of the time in which the money order department is to be open for business.

Up to the present time this department has closed at 6 o'clock, except on Saturday evenings, and it has often been a source of inconvenience to people who desired to send money by mail or to cash orders received.

Tuesday, Postmaster Mansfield promulgated orders and commencing Oct. 1 all full carrier stations and branches of the Boston office, including Quincy, will be open for the transaction of money order business at any time when the office is open.

Here in Quincy it means that hereafter it will be possible to purchase or cash money orders as late as 9 o'clock every evening.

In Boston proper, an all-night service in this department has been inaugurated ,and a late delivery has been extended to some of the stations in Boston proper.

Quincy does not expect all-night money order service, but it would like an evening delivery in the business centre. This may come later.

It is also announced that fifteen new clerks and five new carriers are to be appointed today, and Quincy may get one of them.

One of the improvements promised Quincy, and which may come at any time, is an all-night clerk at the Quincy office, and a midnight collection of the boxes. When this goes into effect, the outer door of the office will be closed at 9 o'clock as usual. but there will be a clerk on duty who will sort a mail to arrive on the 11.50 train from Boston, and dispatch a mail for Boston on the 11.20 train and on the early morning inward train.

Kind Wishes For Their Matron

Those at the Pondville Home, supported by the King's Daughters, evidently regret the resignation of the matron. The following testimonial was adopted this week at the end of her term of service:

"We, residents of the Pondville "Home" at the present change of administration, desire to express our kind regard for the Matron, Mrs. Rachael A. Nichols, and her husband, Mr. T. Odber Nichols, by this statement of our sincere thanks for their uniform and very remarkable special attention to the requirements of each and every one placed under their care.

"With no dissenting voice we thank them for the exceedingly agreeable condition made possible for us all during their occupancy of the very arduous and responsible position, and unite in the earnest wish that prosperity may continue to follow them in their new relations, growing brighter and brighter as the years go by. Desiring the same kind remembrance from them in return, we are, very sincerely your friends."

Signed by Mrs. Eliza N. Hartshorn, Mrs. Catherine Johnson, Miss Mary Goddard, Mrs. Adaline A. Wilkins, Mrs. Louisa J. Richardson, Mrs. Susan C. Pratt, Mrs. Angie Marion, Mr. Alfred Harding, Mrs. G. M. Smith and Mr. G. M. Smith.

Firemen Stop A Dog Fight

A false alarm on Wednesday evening about 6.30 called the department to box 612. The only sign of a fire was a bonfire in the rear of a house on Hancock street. Good service was done, however, in stopping a dog fight which was in progress. A pole and lantern had to be brought from one of the wagons before the animals could be separated.

Brief Locals Of a Busy City

October.

Mr. and Mrs. Herbert T. Drake of Quincy will be guests this week of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert L. Tinkham of Brockton.

Several of the stores in City Square closed Wednesday afternoon that the clerks might attend the Brockton fair.

Several automobile parties from Wollaston visited the Brockton Fair Wednesday, and report having had a very agreeable time.

Among the many delightful features of the Business Men's Carnival tomorrow night will be a musical sketch by Mrs. H. Y. Follett and Mr. Walter Hatch.

The submarine Octopus, Viper, Cuttlefish and Tarantula, all built at Quincy, are making a 300 mile race today from Newport to Philadelphia, to take part in the founder's day exercises Oct. 5.

A carriage of W. B. Rice and an automobile of Mr. Sturtevant met on Hancock street, near Dimmock street, Wednesday. As a result the carriage was somewhat smashed. No one was injured.

Next Monday evening at the High school building H. B. Cole ,head instructor of the commercial department, will open a night school in business studies. His long experience in both school room and business office insures most practical work to all those who enroll.

The Whatsoever Circle of King's Daughters are making active preparations for their annual fair which will be held this year in the Baptist vestry, Wednesday, Oct. 14. Many do not know of the work which this society is doing here in Quincy, helping with food, clothing and flowers the sick and needy. Already there have been many calls for help, and when so many persons are out of employment there will doubtless be more need and suffering to relieve this winter than ever. Consequently it is hoped that this fair will be well patronized, so that a good sum may be realized for the winter's work.

—One of the prettiest of the new flannel waist models is a tucked skirt with a body and sleeves in one. Anther has a shallow yoke and groups of tucks. It is worn with the Parisan two button collar that fastens on a line with the coat closing of the waist. A third is severely tailored like a man's shirt.

—The striped cheviot is a material from which some of the smartest of the autumn suits are being made.

The love affair of Lady Betty will be an interesting bit of gossip for the ladies of Quincy.

Chapter 2

ONLY ten days have passed, but I feel as if they were a hundred, I have lived so much. I've heard people near me in deck chairs saying that it's been a "dull voyage," but whatever else it has been for me it hasn't been dull.

In the first place, I've never been on the sea before, except crossing the channel, which doesn't count, of course. And now that I've been thrown with so many people—all sorts of people—I realize how few I have known in my life so far. If I had about twice as many fingers and toes as I have I believe I might tick off every human being I've ever met as actual acquaintances outside my own relations.

I've lived always at dear, beautiful old Battlemead (it seems doubly beautiful as I think of it now from far away), and till last year most of my time was spent in the schoolroom, or walking, or pottering about in a pony carriage with one of the governesses I used to drive to distraction. When we had house parties I was kept out of the way, as mother said it spoiled young girls to be taken notice of and I should have my fun later. When the others went up to town for the season, as they often did, I was left behind, and though Battlemead is within twenty-five miles of London I suppose I have not been there more than two dozen times in my life. When I did go it was generally for a concert or a matinee, and, of course, I enjoyed it immensely, but I don't know that it taught me much about life. And the one time I was taken abroad we had nothing to do with any one we met at hotels. Being on this big ship seemed at first exactly like being at a play when I had been brought in late and found it difficult to know which were the leading actors, which the villains and villainesses and what the plot was about.

Now, though, I've been through so many experiences I feel as if I were in the play myself, not watching it from outside.

Everything was very nice, though very strange, to begin with.

Dear old Stan came out of his shell and actually traveled all the way to Southampton to see me off, which was good of him, especially as Vic explained that he and Sally Woodburn had been thrown at each other's heads in vain.

He'd bought me a great box of sweets, a bunch of roses and several magazines, and just as we were starting he slipped something small but fat into my hand.

Just as we were starting he slipped something small but fat into my hand.

"That's to help you keep your end up, kid, in case you're imposed on," said he. "You are only a kid, you know, but all the same don't let them treat you like one, and if you get the hump over there just cable me. I'll see you through and have you back again with your own sort, mater or no mater, hanged if I don't."

Stan never made me such a long speech before, and after we sailed and I got time to look at the fat thing he'd put in my hand I found it was a lot of gold pieces bundled up in two ten-pound notes. The gold made twelve sovereigns more, so Stan had given me altogether more than thirty pounds. All that money, with the twenty pounds mother had told me to use only "when strictly necessary," made me feel a regular millionaire. I've never had a sixth part as much before in my life.

Stan's kindness was just like a cup of something warm and comforting when you're tired and cold, so that I began to brighten up and feel happy.

I liked our suit, with two staterooms, a bath and a dear little white and blue drawing room about as big as the old doll's house I inherited from Vic. I was thankful to find I was to chum with Miss Woodburn, not Mrs. Ess Kay, for I never could have stood that. It was fun finding places to hang up our things when they were unpacked, and Mrs. Ess Kay's French maid Louise helped me get settled, paying me so many compliments on my hair and my eyes and my complexion that I grew quite confused, but perhaps that's a habit in which American ladies encourage their maids.

"But the marvel that is miladi's hair! It is of the color of gold and with a natural curl. It will be so great a joy if I may dress it. And her complexion! It is beyond that of any English demoiselle I have ever seen, yet all the world knows they are best on earth. With such eyes no doubt miladi can wear any color, and she has the figure for which the make of corsets is of no import."

If it had been in English I should have wanted to order her out of the room, but things like that don't sound so objectionable in French.

Miss Woodburn's and especially Mrs. Ess Kay's clothes looked so exquisite that I was mortified to have Louise unpack mine, though I have brought my smartest things, and Vic had two or three pretty blouses of hers altered in a great hurry, for me. Besides, mother said my outfit was quite good enough for a young girl in England and that I was not to let myself feel dissatisfied if in another country they chose to overdress.

Anyhow I will say for Mrs. Ess Kay that she didn't appear to be ashamed of me at first. On the contrary, she had a way of seeming to show me off, almost as if she thought I did her credit.

When we had unpacked we three went to luncheon and took the first seats which were vacant. But presently Mrs. Ess Kay sent for the chief steward or some one important. "I am Mrs. Stuyvesant-Knox," said she in a haughty voice, "and I have as my guest Lady Betty Bulkeley, daughter of the Duchess of Stanforth. You must give us three of the best seats at the captain's table."

I couldn't help hearing, and my ears did tingle, but Miss Woodburn only smiled and looked down, with a funny twinkle under her eyelashes, which curl up so much that it always seems as if she were just going to laugh.

I thought if I were the steward I would give us the worst seats on the ship to teach us not to be proud. But he didn't do anything of the sort. He was as meek as a lamb, so I'm sure he can't have any sense of humor. He said Mrs. Stuyvesant-Knox might count on him, and she and her party should have places on the captain's right hand.

Mrs. Ess Kay was as bad with the deck steward. She found that he hadn't put our chairs (which she had brought on board herself) in the right place, and she had him called up and made a great fuss. The cards of a Rev. Somebody, his wife and daughters were on chairs in the position which she had made up her mind to have, exactly amidship and on the shady side.

"I must have my chairs changed and put here," she said. And then—oh, horror!—I'm certain I caught her repeating the formula she'd used at luncheon. "I am Mrs. Stuyvesant-Knox, and I have as my guest," etc. To be sure, she had walked off to a little distance with the deck steward, where our chairs were, and I might have been mistaken, but two or three people who were standing near looked suddenly very hard at me, and I know I turned scarlet with annoyance, to be labeled in that way, as if I were a parcel marked "glass" and to be handled with care.

Afterward when I came to read the passenger list I found that there was nobody else on board with any sort of title, not even an honorable anybody; otherwise, of course, Mrs. Ess Kay's little maneuver, which I'm afraid must have been meant for snobbishness, wouldn't have excited the slightest notice.

"Now," said Mrs. Ess Kay when we were settled in our places, "I know a good many people on the ship, but most of them are nobodies, and I do not intend to be troubled with them, nor do I think that the duchess would care to have me let Betty mix herself up with anybody and everybody. I shall do a great deal of weeding and select her acquaintances carefully."

"Betty," indeed! I'd never told her that she might call me Betty, and I hate having persons I don't care for take hold of my name without using a handle to touch it. It makes me feel as I did when I was a child and mother commanded me to let myself be kissed by unkissable and extraneous grownups.

Thank goodness, Vic and I have come into the world with something of poor father's sense of humor. My share often serves me as well as balm on a wound or as a nice, dry, crackly little biscuit which you're enchanted to find when you're hungry and thought you had nothing to eat, and I got a good deal of quiet comfort out of it during Mrs. Ess Kay's "weeding" process, which otherwise would have done nothing but make me squirm.

When we had been on deck for a short time a number of people came up to speak to Mrs. Ess Kay and some to Miss Woodburn. The water was as smooth as the floor of a ballroom when it's been well waxed for a dance, and there was no excuse for the most sensitive person to be ill; consequently the deck was something like a kaleidoscope, with all its moving groups of men and women, girls and children. Most of the best looking and best dressed ones were Americans, and a great many seemed to know each other. Some of them laughed a good deal and talked in high voices, putting emphasis on prepositions, which Miss Mackinstry and the others would never let me do in writing compositions. Somehow, though, when these people spoke it sounded very nice and cordial, more so than it does when English people greet each other, though the voices weren't so sweet, except a few that drawled in a pretty southern way, like Sally Woodburn's.

I could tell which were the poor things that Mrs. Ess Kay wanted to weed out of her acquaintance garden for next season, by the way she acted when they came to say "How do you do?" to her. She screwed up her eyes till they looked hard and sharp enough to go through you like a thin knife or more like a long, slender hatpin jabbing your head, and having waited an instant before returning their greeting, slowly answered: "Very well, thank you. Yes, I am going home rather early. I'm due at Newport as soon as possible;" then fingered her open book, which she hadn't peeped into before, and made a little, just noticeable gesture with her lorgnette.

Then the poor people were too much crushed to stop and try to talk to Miss Woodburn, though she always looked at them sweetly, as if she would make up for her cousin being a dragon if she could.

By and by, somebody else would sail up, perhaps not half as nice to look at as the one who had gone. But lo, Mrs. Stuyvesant-Knox would be suddenly transformed. She would smile and hold out her hand. To their "How do you do?" she would respond "How do you do?" and though I don't think she's really much interested in any one but herself, she would ask where they had been, what they had been doing and how it happened they were going back so soon. The next thing, she would say to me: "Betty, dear, I should like you and Mrs. So-and-so to know each other, as I hope you'll meet again, while you're staying with me. Lady Betty Bulkeley, etc., etc. I wonder if you have ever met her brother, the Duke of Stanforth, and her cousin, the Marquis of Loveland, over in London?"

C. PATCH & SON.

Our Motto: "Don't Let Us Alone!"

That National Prosperity Association wants everybody to quit "agitating." Its motto is "Let Us Alone." Well, that may be all right for the immense commercial concerns of the country—the manufacturers, etc.—but it is all wrong for the ordinary business house.

You don't want people to let you alone. You want them to come around and buy goods, don't you?

But they will let you alone unless you "agitate."

And the way to agitate is to ADVERTISE.

CAMPAIGN CONTRIBUTIONS

Roosevelt's Policy Has the Hearty Endorsement of Taft

ANSWERS BRYAN AT LINCOLN

In Favor of Law Requiring Publication of Expenditures as Well as Receipts--Object Sought Can Be Fully Accomplished by Publication After Election, Rather Than In the Manner Suggested by Bryan

Lincoln, Neb., Oct. 1.—Accepting the challenge of William J. Bryan, William H. Taft, in the home city of the Nebraskan, not only endorsed President Roosevelt's position on the policy of campaign contributions, but defended that position as sound and argued that Bryan's position was one simply for pre-election effect.

Mr. Taft made eleven speeches in Nebraska yesterday before reaching Lincoln and five speeches in Lincoln last night. His audiences throughout were large and enthusiastic and his reception in Lincoln was made particularly gratifying to him by the enthusiasm and friendliness exhibited by the immense crowds which greeted him at all points. The city was alive with bands, marching clubs and general campaign exilaration and excitement.

Mr. Taft had intended in the big meeting last night at the auditorium to reply to the challenge from Bryan concerning campaign contributions. He, however, made only incidental reference to this phase of the campaign, and made answer to the challenge in a formal statement which he last night gave to the press. The statement follows:

"Mr. Bryan challenges me to take the same position that President Roosevelt takes with reference to the time when publicity should be made of campaign contributions, and I accept the challenge," said Taft. "I take exactly the same position as that of the president. I have always been in favor of a law which will require publicity of both contributions and expenses immediately after election. Mr. Bryan seems to favor the publication of contributions before the election, but postpones the publication of expenditures until after that time. I confess I see no reason why, if contributions are to be published before elections, expenditures should not also be published. I think that the character of expenditures is quite as important as the character and source of the contributions.

"The proper object of a publicity law is to prevent the use of money for bribery and other improper purposes in elections and to enable the law officers of the government and the public to determine whether the contributions made were properly expended for legitimate purposes.

"The requirement that the names and amounts of the persons contributing also should be shown is for the purpose of enabling the public and the prosecuting officers of the government to judge whether subsequent official action has been improperly affected in favor of the contributions by the successful candidate. This can all be accomplished by publication after the election.

"The chief objection to the publication of contributions before the election is that it makes certain that in the heat of the controversy the motives of those who contribute to pay the legitimate expenses of the campaign will be misconstrued, perverted and misrepresented. The candidates in whose behalf the contributions are made will be charged in a most unfair way as being completely under the control of those who make the contributions. It is entirely natural and proper that men who are able to contribute and who are deeply interested from patriotic motives and from motives of a desire to continue the general prosperity, should contribute to the party whose administration of governmental affairs is likely to be in accordance with their views of proper government. It is not good policy to discourage those who desire to contribute to the legitimate purposes of the campaign from so contributing by exposing them to the bitter diatribes of unfair attacks or slanderous condemnation of partisans in an electoral fight.

"After the election is over and the expenditures and contributions are published the temptation to misrepresent the motives of the donors will largely be minimized, and the public may then arrive at a just conclusion with respect to the matter.

"A rigid law requiring the publication in detail of contributions and expenditures within ten days after the election so that the public may know where the money came from, how much came, how much was expended and for what it was expended, is all that public policy requires.

"The known publicity to be given to the contributions after the election will greatly reduce the probability that a contribution will be made for the purpose of seeking privileges or favors at the hands of the candidate and tends to secure purity of motive in the making of such contributions. Mr. Bryan looks rather to the publication of such contributions for platform purposes and references than to the main purpose of a publicity law which is to secure the public against bribery in elections and the improper influencing of official action."

NATIONAL LEAGUE SHIFT

New York Moves Up to First Position and Pittsburg to Second

New York again is in the lead for the pennant as the result of yesterday's play in the National League. The sensational possibilities of the race are well exemplified in the fact that today not one of the three leading clubs is in the position which it occupied before Wednesday's games were played. Chicago, in the lead yesterday, is today in third position. The chances of New York for landing the flag emblematic of the league championship are vastly bettered through yesterday's turn of events on the diamond. It is still anybody's pennant, however, the positions of all three clubs potentially hanging on a single day's play. The standing is:

	Won	Lost	Pct
New York	93	53	.637
Pittsburg	95	55	.633
Chicago	94	55	.631

At New York:	R	H	E

American League

In the American League only two of the leading clubs, Cleveland and Detroit, took part in games. Both won and the relative standing of the three leaders was not changed except that the winning clubs each drew three points further away from Chicago. The standing is:

	Won	Lost	Pct
Detroit	87	61	.588
Cleveland	87	62	.584
Chicago	85	62	.578

At Detroit:	R	H	E

WAS MARRIED ON HIS DEATH BED

Young Man Passes Away Soon After the Ceremony

Boston, Oct. 1.—Walter Scott Sawyer of 16 Browning road, Somerville, died last evening at the Somerville hospital from peritonitis, following an operation last Saturday for appendicitis. The case is an exceedingly sad one, as yesterday was the young man's wedding day.

Yesterday morning Sawyer was married at the hospital to Miss Ella P. Adams of Roxbury. The ceremony was performed by Rev. William H. Pierson, pastor of the First Congregational Unitarian church of Somerville, in the presence of the immediate friends of the two families.

Some time ago the wedding ceremony was set for yesterday, but the invitations were cancelled because of the serious illness of Sawyer, who recently underwent an operation for appendicitis, from which it was doubtful if he would ever recover. Fully realizing his serious condition, Sawyer was anxious that the marriage should take place, therefore his wishes were complied with. Sawyer was in the real estate business, with an office at 2 Kilby street, this city.

Two Men Struck by Train

Bridgewater, Mass., Oct. 1.—An express train struck two men who were walking on the tracks near North Middleboro station, killing one and injuring the other. There was nothing in the clothes of either man to identify him. The injured man is suffering from leg fracture and multiple bruises.

Cholera Kills 30,000

Pekin, Oct. 1.—There have been 500 deaths from the bubonic plague at Tong Sha, sixty miles northeast of Tien Tsin, since the outbreak of the epidemic. No alarm is felt, however, and it is not believed that the disease will spread. More than 30,000 have died in the province of Hankow from cholera.

NEWS IN BRIEF

Charles K. Brewster, aged 65, for ten years county commissioner of Hampshire (Mass.) county and former representative in the Massachusetts legislature, dropped dead while attending the Cummington (Mass.) fair.

The greater portion of the business section of West Fairlee, Vt., was destroyed by fire, with a loss of $25,000.

Marcel Jambon, the French decorative painter, died at Paris. He was born in 1848.

THE PLATFORM

Indorses Bryan, Declares For Anti-Injunction Bill, Condemns State House Lobbying and Demands Liberal Labor Laws

The platformas adopted by the convention follows:

We, the representatives of the Democrats of Massachusetts, in convention assembled, pledge unswerving allegiance and support to the Democratic national candidates and platform. We record our confidence and pride in the great leader of Democracy, William Jennings Bryan. No foe has been found mendacious enough to question his integrity, and he stands today the foremost champion of the rights of the people.

We reassert Democracy's position upon the tariff. Massachusetts suffers because of the tax upon our raw materials, and these duties should be immediately repealed.

We approve the declaration of our party restricting the issuance of injunctions. When a contempt is committed outside the presence of the court, the accused is as much entitled to a trial by jury as a man who commits any criminal offense. An injunction should not issue in any case in which it would not issue if no industrial dispute were involved.

We also endorse the declaration that there should be no abridgement of the rights of wage-earners and producers to organize for the protection of wages and the improvement of labor conditions to the end that such labor organizations and their members should not be regarded as illegal combinations in restraint of trade.

We favor the election of the United States senators by the direct vote of the people. We condemn the action of successive Republican legislatures in refusing to submit to the people of our commonwealth the referendum on this vital issue.

State issues of far-reaching importance, and long standing abuses in government call for immediate attention and correction.

We denounce the extravagance in state administration which has increased the burdens of taxation for every municipality in the state. The increase in the state tax has been radically disproportionate to the necessities of prudence and economy.

This lavish and injudicious expenditure is directly traceable to government by commission. Commissions have been created which take from the people the right to rule, and are constantly increasing the burdens of taxation.

We are in favor of preserving the rights of local self-government.

We denounce the pernicious and corrupting influence of the lobby. It dictates nominations, controls elections and dominates legislation.

We believe in the sanctity of the ballot, and we demand that every safeguard shall be thrown around the voter in the exercise of his franchise.

We favor the referendum.

We denounce the failure of the Republican legislature to submit to the people important questions of public policy.

We favor legislation which will prevent monopoly and discrimination in the necessaries of life. We condemn the Republican party for defeating such remedial legislation.

We believe in an eight-hour day. We believe that women and children should not be compellitd to work more than fifty-four hours a week.

We denounce the action of the Republican legislature which defeated the bills regulating the hours of labor for women and children, and for peaceful persuasion in industrial disputes. We point to the hypocrisy of Republican senators who reported favorably upon the latter measure, and then voted against their own report.

With this declaration of principles we confidently appeal to the people of the commonwealth to support our national and state candidates. The problems which confront us at the present time, some old and difficult, some new and unsolved, require the best effort and highest purpose of our people, and it is with the belief that the solution of these questions can be more wisely entrusted to us than to a party which professes but does not perform, that we appeal for the support of all the people of Massachusetts who believe in a square deal, and when we assure that our platform and our canddates mean "equal rights to all, special privileges to none."

DAWSON KILLED HIMSELF.

Saxonville, Mass., Oct. 1.—The body of Fred R. Dawson, superintendent of the Saxonville woolen mill, who suddenly disappeared Tuesday evening, was found in Lyman's brook, East Sudbury. It was lying in two feet of water, face downward. Medical Examiner Palmer gave his opinion that Dawson committed suicide. Those who have known Dawson most intimately state that the mill superintendent had been brooding for some time over the affairs at the mill.

RUSSIA'S BIG WAR BUDGET.

St. Petersburg, Oct. 1.—The war budget for 1909, as submitted to the duma, carries an increase of $20,000,000 in the current expenditures, of which $8,000,000 is assigned to meet a general raise in the salaries of officers and $11,500,000 to the betterment of the conditions of the service and quality of the rations.

New System at Johnson Bros.

The way that our trade has taken to our

demonstrates to our satisfaction that we are giving them just what was needed in Quincy, and we have decided to extend our liberal offer, and will say, that to all our customers who find it impossible to carry their purchases home with them, if they bring or send their order to our store, and PAY CASH for it, we will deliver the same and allow 2% DISCOUNT from amount of purchase.

Now we think that this plan will give everyone a good Square Deal, and every intelligent buyer must see that we are more than doing our share to give them what every cash buyer deserves today, first class goods at a low price.

Now, don't forget our other proposition, that all who purchase goods of us, pay cash and carry their purchase home—we will give a Discount of 5% off the amount of purchase, besides selling our goods at the very lowest mark.

We will make a feature of having some special article each day marked at Genuine Bargain Price.

Now read this over carefully and we feel confident that you can see it just the way that we do—something that is surely needed in Quincy—a high grade of goods sold at a very low price.

Remember Your 5% and 2% Discount,

Masonic Visitation.

Alfred Howard Nash, D. D. G. High Priest of the seventh capitular district, assisted by Charles F. Dudley, as D. D. G. captain of the host, made an official visitation to St. Stephen's chapter, Royal Arch Masons, Wednesday evening. During the first part of the evening there was an exemplification of the most excellent masters' degree by High Priest Chas. E. Monroe and officers of St. Stephen's chapter. During the ceremony music was furnished by the Bostonia quartet. After the business of the evening a banquet was served. The deputy complimented the officers of St. Stephen's chapter on the excellence of the work.

Taken Away by Unknown Woman

The lost child call was sounded at 6.12 Wednesday evening to summons help to search for a six-year old boy named Milton O'Hare, who was missing from the home where he lived at Atlantic. It appears that the boy was taken from a home by P. F. Downer, who sent him to the Quincy school. Shortly before the afternoon session a strange woman was seen near the school evidently waiting for some one. From what was afterward learned, it is alleged that the woman in question was about to or had just become the bride of the boy's father. It is further alleged that when the boy came along she carried him away with her.

DID NOT GET TO BROCKTON.

A young fellow, whose home is said to be in Neponset, was arrested in City Square this morning by Officer Murray. The young man in company with others, came into City Square on a street car, bound for Brockton. They made a nuisance of themselves all the way up on the car. Arriving in City Square they continued their fun, as they called it. The young fellow in question was particularly active. He scratched matches on the side of the cars, and bumped into ladies who happened to be in the street waiting to take cars. All this was seen by Officer Murray, who placed him under arrest, and sent him to the police station. This served to quiet the remainder of the gang.

—A portrait bust of the late Senator George Frisbie Hoar was unveiled in the State library at the State House, Wednesday, by Gov. Guild, in the presence of the executive council.

Quincy Locals Briefly Told

Only a month to the Presidential election.

Cyrus Patch & Son had another barge of coal arrive this week, with four varieties.

F. D. Fellows has moved from Hancock street to the John Hall estate on Revere road.

Maurice Powers of Bigelow street, who was operated on for appendicitis, is comfortable and convalescent.

The Mt. Wollaston National bank has declared a semi-annual dividend of 3 per cent., payable Oct. 1.

The new system at Johnson Bros. is appreciated and many customers are surprised how the discount checks accumulate.

The Y. M. C. A. secured a very large cast for their Business Men's Carnival, including the following ladies gentlemen and children:

Miss Mary Chase of Marion street left this week for Newton where she has a position as teacher at Mount Ida a private school for girls.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Rigby of Manchester, England, who have been boarding on Coddington street have left Quincy to reside at Dorchester.

Miss Margaret Brown the little daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James G. Brown of Highland avenue met with a painful accident last Saturday. While gathering nuts, she fell from a tree and struck on a sharp board.

Antonio Savoja of West Quincy was arraigned for snaring birds at the Metropolitan reservation and was fined $15. A second complaint for hunting without a permit was placed on file.

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

Granite City Club Whist Tournament

The weekly whist tournaments at the Granite City club which were so successful last winter, were inaugurated Wednesday evening, and will continue every Wednesday evening through the winter. The best scores of the evening were secured by Thomas G. Smith and John W. Bell, and today their better halves are admiring beautiful silver spoons. At the conclusion of the evening's play, ice cream, cake coffee, crackers and cheese were served. One of the attractions at the club rooms Wednesday evening was the famous piano squash of President Tilden of which members have heard so much.

Record Crowds At Brockton Fair

Yesterday was Governor's day at the Brockton Fair, and the perfect weather sent thousands on their way to the Shoe City show. It was the second day of the fair and the big attraction besides the Governor was the race between those two speedy horses Sweet Marie and Major Delmar. They tried to break the track record, but both failed. The Major beat Sweet Marie in the race however.

Lieutenant Governor Draper represented Gov. Guild, and three bands escorted his party to their box on the grand stand. Senator Lodge, Speaker Cole and members of the Governor's staff were in the party. They watched the horse races for an hour and then made a tour of the grounds.

The horse show opened Wednesday, and there were some fine performances.

The midway and all the amusement places were crowded all day long, with one of the largest Wednesday crowds in the history of these fairs.

THE PRICE PROPOSITION ON WATCHES.

We are going to give the people what they want at the price they wish to pay.

Do not ay you are not interested before you have seen our proporsition, and if possible one of our watches.

Until you have seen it, you do not know what it is, or whether you will be interested or not. You may have become sceptical on watch buying for various reasons. STOP ! ! therefore and investigate our proposition. REMEMBER, please, that it is your own case you are deciding, not ours.

We are going to give a few friendly pointers about things that may be found profitable to you, regarding WATCHES.

The first, and the most important is to tell you all that you need to know and as you know in these days of strong advertising competition, if a concern is to market its goods successfully, the advertising must be tremendously large or absolutely a big fact in a small space.

In this issue we merely call attention to the grades of Watches and of our entry in the race of price competition, which will be more fully illustrated in advertising space later. We are distributors of Howard, Waltham and Elgin Watches, and shall be pleased to show the various grades or send one to you by mail or by our representatives.

Hot Bowling For Silver Cup

Over fifty bowling fans watched twelve men fight on Wednesday evening for the handsome silver cup offered by the Pandora alleys for the highest three consecutive strings. The fight was pretty close up to the third string, but Gaffeney of Brockton ran away from the bunch, winning by eighteen pins.

Lyman Kelley and Alfred LaBrecque tied for second place and rolled two extra boxes. LaBrecque bowled first and got nine on the first box, and got a spare on the second box, getting five on the spare, making a total of twenty-five for the two boxes. Kelley got seven on the first box but only eight on the second, losing by ten pins.

A very pretty watch fob was given to LaBrecque for the second prize. The cup was anybodys at the end of the second string, four of the men were within seven pins of each other. Brown lost his nerve on the last string and bowled weak. Kelley was a new man at bowling and did some very good work. He is only a young man and promises to be a crack bowler in time.

The summary was:

H. Gaffeney	83	100	96	279
Alfred LaBrecque	88	91	82	261
L. Kelley	80	101	80	261
F. Galvin	94	78	85	257

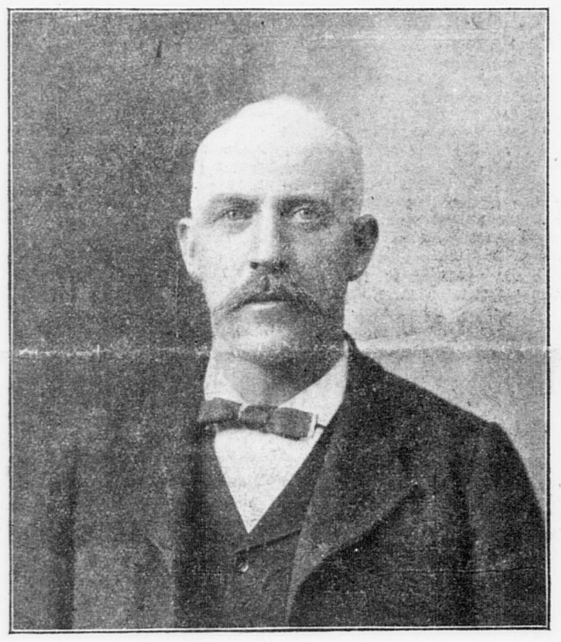
Quincy's Mayor For Presidential Elector



The horoscope of Mayor Shea must be all right this week, for honors seem to be coming his way thick and fast.

Wednesday he was the best man at a wedding, which is usually honor enough for a man in any one week.

Thursday he was selected as a Presidential elector at the Democratic State convention representing the Tenth Congressional district.

There is still another day this week and some other honor may come his way.

Mayor Shea has long been prominently identified with the Democratic party, having in addition to other things been a member of the State committee from the First Norfolk Senatorial district for many years.

Juvenile Court.

Commencing next week the juvenile session of the district court at Quincy, which have been held Thursdays, will be held on Tuesdays. As Tuesday is also the day for civil business, two sessions of the court will be held. Judge Avery will preside over the civil session, and one of the special justices will preside over the criminal and juvenile sessions.

BOSTON MARKET,

FATAL ACCIDENT

Painter at The Shipyard Struck by Plank And Killed

A fatal accident happened Thursday morning at the Fore River works, when the new dreadnought, the North Dakota, claimed another victim. The unfortunate man was Charles A. Duggan, a well known and highly respected resident of Atlantic.

Several versions of how the accident happened, were reported on the street Thursday, one of which was that Mr. Duggan fell from a fifty foot staging to the ground. This, however, is not correct according to the official report given out by the Fore River Co. According to officials of the company, Mr. Duggan was in the starboard engine room of the battleship North Dakota, and was struck on the head by a plank that fell from the deck of the vessel.

Medical aid was of no use, but fellow workmen carried the injured man hastily to the yard hospital. The doctor found him to be dead, and the ambulance was sent for. He was taken at once to his home in Atlantic.

Mr. Duggan was 43 years old, and is survived by a wife, Mrs. Mary (Lavelle) Duggan. He was a brother of the late John A. Duggan of Atlantic, a well known railroad man of Quincy, and uncle of John A. Duggan, the prominent Quincy lawyer and assessor.

Mr. Duggan will be buried Sunday afternoon from his late home at 55 Hancock street, at 1.30 o'clock. Services will be held at 2, in the Sacred Heart church. A high mass will be celebrated at 9 o'clock Monday morning in the Sacred Heart church.

Noon Temperature Below 60 Degrees

Today is the coldest day of the season, the temperature at noon registering but 59 degrees. The nearest to this mark was on Sept. 5, when it was 61 degrees at noon. The lowest point the mercury reached at noon in October last year was 46 degrees, on Oct. 21. A year ago today it was 60 degrees.

MORTGAGES ON OFFICIALS

Large Contributions Used For That Purpose, Says Bryan

THE QUESTION OF PUBLICITY

Nebraskan Expresses Surprise at Opponent's Endorsement of Roosevelt's Views--Charge That Voters Are Liable to Be Misled Characterized as an Insult to Intelligence

Lincoln, Neb., Oct. 2.—William J. Bryan last night issued a statement criticising the adoption by Mr. Taft of President Roosevelt's announced views on the subject of the publicity of campaign contributions.

"Mr. Taft," says Bryan, "makes the same charge the president does—the astounding charge that the voters are so liable to be misled that the knowledge (as to the amounts and sources of campaign contributions) must be kept from them." Following is Bryan's statement in its essential parts:

"I am surprised to find that Mr. Taft endorses the president's views on the subject of publicity as to campaign contributions, but since he holds these views, I am glad that he makes them known now.

"We now have publicity before the election as to his opinion, even if he does not believe in publicity of contributions until after the election. He fails to see the difference between the publication of contributions before election and the publication of expenditures before election.

"The publication of expenditures is required to show whether corrupt methods have been employed in the election, and, as the expenditures continue up to the close of the polls, it would be impossible to complete publication until after the election. The publication of contributions ought to be before election, to show the public the sources from which the contributions come, in order that the public may know which party predatory interests are supporting.

"Every disinterested voter knows that large contributions have been used to secure mortgages upon officials. The publication of contributions throws a great deal more light upon the influence at work in politics than the publication of expenditures, for the publication of contributions shows to whom the party is indebted and to whom repayment is likely to be made, while the publication of expenditures shows what has been paid out, and disbursements do not create obligations that affect the course of the administration.

"'The candidate,' Mr. Taft insists, 'in whose behalf the contributions are made, will be charged in the most unfair way as being completely under the control of those who make the contributions.'

"Here he makes the same charge that the president does, the astounding charge that the voters are so liable to be misled that the knowledge must be kept from them. I insist that it is an insult to the intelligence of the voters, and it does little credit to Mr. Taft's judgment of the men to whom he is making his appeal. Mr. Roosevelt may have made his statement thoughtlessly and on the impulse of the moment, but Mr. Taft brings the same indictment against the voters with deliberation and after he has read a criticism of the president's views.

"The people have a right to know in advance of election whether those with special interests to look after are contributing sums larger than public spirit, patriotic motives and general interest would explain.

"It is only fair to assume that in using Mr. Hughes' case as an argument Mr. Taft means to say that he will not object to contributions from trust magnates, railroad magnates and tariff beneficiaries, no matter how much those contributions may be, even though he may, if elected, be compelled to pass upon questions where their demands may be on the one side and the interests of the general public on the other."

WILL EXCHANGE VIEWS

Chairman Hitchcock to Meet President Roosevelt at Washington

Washington, Oct. 2.—Chairman Hitchcock of the Republican national committee is expected in Washington today. The general understanding here is that while in the city he will call on the president for the purpose of exchanging views with him regarding the conduct of the campaign in behalf of Mr. Taft.

There is excellent authority for the general statement that a number of complaints as to the management of the campaign have reached the executive mansion, and the understanding is that, although he has not requested the presence of the chairman of the national committee, President Roosevelt will welcome the opportunity to talk with him and to obtain from him such explanation of these criticisms as he may be able to make.

So far as divulged the censure seems to point to the fact that the national committee has this year failed to cooperate as completely and zealously with the congressional committee as in past years, and it is understood that some of the criticisms have come from Republican candidates for congress.

On the other hand, it has been explained to the president that the national chairman has been very busily engaged in arranging the details of the national campaign and has been inclined to give the major portion of his attention to that subject rather than to the election of members of congress, because he regarded that as his especial work, while he was confident that the congressional committee would be abundantly able to look after the interests of congressional candidates without his particular assistance.

Taft Says He Will Be Elected

Omaha, Oct. 2.—"I am going to be elected." This statement, made by W. H. Taft, sums up in a word what the candidate thinks of the effect of his speech-making tour thus far. The belief is based, Taft explained, on the manner of his reception in states thus far traversed in which there was reported to be defections among the Republican ranks.

Thirteen speeches were made by the candidate yesterday in a swing around the southeastern part of Nebraska, terminating here last night with two big meetings.

Throughout the day Taft confined his speeches to picturing conditions under the last Democratic administration and contrasting them with Republican rule. As he has done during his two days in Nebraska, he did not fail to pay his respects to Bryan whenever he spoke. On several occasions he delivered his labor speech and declared to be a lie the statement that he had ever declared that one dollar a day was enough for any laboring man.

Chanler Accepts Nomination

Poughkeepsie, N. Y., Oct. 2.—Standing on the broad front porch of the ancestral Chanler home at Barrytown, Lieutenant Governor Chanler accepted the Democratic nomination for governor. The other members of the state ticket also were notified by Alton B. Parker, who served as permanent chairman of the Rochester convention. In accepting the nomination Chanler outlined the state policies but briefly, saying he would devote detailed attention to them as the campaign progressed. "Free from all hampering obligations," he declared, "I shall know no master but the people's will and the people's interests."

Labor Vote Cannot Be Delivered

Washington, Oct. 2.—Declaring that it would be suicidal to the labor movement for "any man or set of men" to deliver the vote of organized labor to any party, President McPhail of the Boston Typographical union has written a letter to Chief Moore of the United States weather bureau, declaring that the labor vote as a body cannot be delivered.

Hughes Is Hustling

New York, Oct. 2.—Governor Hughes made a whirlwind campaign tour of Manhattan and the Bronx late yesterday and last night. Everywhere he was received by enthusiastic crowds, while fireworks, red fire, marching clubs and bands of music gave notice to the people of New York that the Republican campaign had begun in real earnest.

Negotiations Are Off

Livermore Falls, Me., Oct. 2.—Notices announcing that the International Paper company will refuse to have any further dealings with the International Brotherhood of Papermakers, Pulp, Sulphite and Paper Mill Workers, and that the company intends to resume operations at once in its various mills, were posted here today for the benefit of the 500 employes of the Livermore Falls plant of the concern. The notices as a whole are identical with those sent to the other mills of the company.

A Brutal Old Man's End

Union Hill, N. J., Oct. 2.—Because his son, Richard, refused to give him money which he demanded, John Burkhardt, 66 years old, shot and seriously wounded the younger man, then drank carbolic acid and jumped from a window of his home in an effort to end his life. While father and son were being rushed to a hospital in an ambulance, the old man sprang upon the wounded boy and attempted to strangle him. He then fell back and died. Young Burkhardt will probably recover.

Alleged Concealment of Assets

Rockland, Me., Oct. 2.—Joseph Adams, a dry goods dealer in this city, was arrested on a charge of conspiring to conceal assets of the Young & Holland Co. of Providence, in anticipation of the company being petitioned into involuntary bankkruptcy. It is alleged that Adams received eighty-five cases of goods, valued at $25,000, from the Providence house, sold part of the consignment and distributed a large quantity among Assyrian pedlers.

Time For Deer Hunting

Kineo, Me., Oct. 2.—The deer hunting season swung wide open at daylight yesterday morning and numerous kills were reported last evening. Among those on the trail were many women, including Mrs. Myra D. Paterson of New Jersey and Mrs. E. H. Outerbrdge of New York. The latter killed a large black bear early in the week.

New Bishop of Washington

Washington, Oct. 2.—Dr. Alexander Mann of Trinity Episcopal church, Boston, was elected bishop of the Protestant diocese of Washington on the seventh ballot. Bishop Brent of the Philippines had twice declined the honor after being elected. The vacancy was caused by the death of Bishop Satterlee.

MORTGAGEE'S SALE

By virtue of and pursuant to the power of sale contained in a certain mortgage deed given by Charles Warren and Margaret S. Warren, in her own right, both of East Weymouth, in the County of Norfolk, in the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, to Lorenzo D. Baker, dated December twenty-seventh, A. D. 1905 and recorded in the Registry of Deeds for said Norfolk County, Book one thousand and seventeen, Page one hundred and thirty, for breach of the condition of said mortgage and for the purpose of foreclosing the same, will be sold at public auction on the premises hereinafter described, in said Quincy, on the twenty-sixth day of October A. D. 1908, at three o'clock in the afternoon thereof, all and singular the premises, in that part of Quincy known as Quincy Point, in said County of Norfolk, described in said mortgage deed, namely:

A certain parcel of land situated in that part of Quincy known as Quincy Point, being lots numbered seventy-six, seventy-seven and seventy-eight on a plan of Riverside Lawn made by H. T. Whitman, Civil Engineer, and recorded at the Registry of Deeds for said Norfolk County and further bounded and described as follows: Beginning at the north-west corner of Washington Street and Riverside Avenue, as shown on said plan, thence running in a north-easterly direction along the boundary line of Riverside Avenue two hundred and twenty-seven (227) feet, thence in a northwesterly direction fifty-five and eight tenths (55.8) feet, thence in a southwesterly direction turning at an obtuse angle along the boundary line of the estate of H. M. Federhen, Trustee, two hundred and twenty-five and three tenths (225.3) feet thence in a south-easterly direction sixty-three (63) feet along Washington Street to the point of beginning; containing in all thirteen thousand eight hundred and eighty-one (13,881) square feet, more or less and being the same premises conveyed to the said Margaret S. Warren by deed of the said Lorenzo D. Baker duly recorded in said Registry of Deeds.

Said premises will be sold subject to any and all unpaid taxes, liens and assessments.

Three hundred dollars ($300.) will be required to be paid by the purchaser at the time and place of sale and the balance of the purchase price in ten days.

LORENZO D. BAKER, JR.
Executor of the last will of Lorenzo D. Baker deceased, and present holder of said mortgage.

Where Does Democratic Economy Propose to Hit the American People?

The hazy indefiniteness which characterizes Bryan's utterances when he talks about what he would do with the United States government should the American people decide to let him monkey with it is extending to other pleaders for the Bryanite cause. Judge Morgan J. O'Brien in his address to the New York Democratic state convention said

"If returned to power the Republican party must increase the tariff or resort to new and untried methods of taxation to meet the extravagant expenditures which its policies involve, thus placing greater burdens on the people.

"The Democratic party," adds Judge O'Brien, "is united in favor of economy in public expenditures and currency reforms."

Why not define where the Democratic cut down in expenses is to begin and end?

Do the Democrats propose to cut down by abolishing the rural free delivery system? Very possibly, for the Democratic platform, on which Bryan stands, includes the carriers on the 39,000 free delivery routes as among the unnecessary officeholders whom the Republican party has imposed on the country. It is well, by the way, that voters living on the rural free delivery routes should note this declaration in the Denver platform and prevent Bryan from having a chance to make it effective.

Do the Democrats propose to economize by stopping work on the Panama canal?

Does the Democratic policy of economy contemplate the nullification of the pure food and drug law and the meat inspection law?

Do the Bryanites propose to economize on expenses for the improvement of rivers and harbors?

Does the Bryan programme of economy contemplate curtailment of the funds now expended for the improvement of agriculture, the suppression of insect pests, the introduction and propagation of useful plants and similar work?

Where is the econmy t come in, then? Be definite, and let us know just where you mean to hit the American people, so that they can take warning and action accordingly.

In the meantime it may not be amiss to inquire whether the Democratic methods which have built up an enormous and ever increasing indebtedness for the city of New York are to be regarded as an illustration of the Democratic economy which Bryanism would establish in Washington.

Make Bryan's Defeat Final and Emphatic!

Is there an intelligent voter, Republican or Democrat, who is not glad that Bryan's free silver scheme of 1896 was defeated and Bryan, as its champion, overwhelmingly rejected in the election of that year? It is safe to assume that of all who voted for Bryan then very few are sorry now that he went down in defeat, that the workingman was saved from having his wages cut down one-half in value and that the United States was saved from sinking to the level of a few second and third rate countries in which silver is the standard. The evils resulting from such a condition are so nearly incalculable that the failure of Bryan in 1896 may well be regarded by the American people as their greatest blessing since the suppression of the rebellion.

The progress of the nation within the past twelve years is largely due to the fact that Bryanism was so emphatically condemned and its standard bearer routed when he confronted American voters with the banner of repudiation and financial dishonor. Had the free silver platform been accepted and Bryan instead of McKinley elected it would have taken many years for American credit and American commerce and industry to recover from the blow and to get within appreciable distance of the prosperity which has been achieved under Republican rule with every dollar worth 100 cents.

The fact that the country escaped the peril of Bryanism twice—in 1896 and 1900—is no reason for too great confidence in face of the same danger today. Bryan's character and purpose are the same, and, although he offers a different kind of bait to catch votes, there is no difference in what he means to do if he gets votes enough. Of the crowds that listen to him with curiosity, if not with credulity, many will doubtless be drawn after him, as in 1896 and 1900. That he will be defeated may be taken as certain, but it would be highly imprudent to be indifferent on that account. Every citizen interested in preserving American finance, industry and commerce from the paralysis that the election of Bryan would bring upon them should give some personal time and effort to winning votes for Taft and Sherman, candidates of the Republican party for president and vice president of the United States, and thus give final notice to the political harlequin masquerading in the garb of a degenerate Democracy that his occupation in that role is over and that he has made his last futile attempt to fool the American people.

La France SHOE for WOMEN

If you will come in and ask to try on La France shoes yours will be an unusual case if you don't make some flattering exclamation as to their comfort as soon as you feel them on your feet.

Then you will realize that never before have you tried on a shoe which made your feet look so shapely, neat and dainty. And if you buy the shoes — as we believe you will when you see them — you will in the course of time discover that these qualities of comfort and fit stay with the shoe as long as it lasts, and that it lasts longer than any shoe you ever bought for the money.

There are reasons for this—good reasons—materials, careful workmanship, patient attention to those little details which alone can make a shoe both beautiful to look at and comfortable to wear. But the shoes themselves speak louder than anything we can say in our advertising—come and see them.

Perhaps the La France Flexible Welt shoe will particularly interest you. It permits a remarkable flexibility in the sole of the shoe which makes it wonderfully comfortable, especially when standing or walking.

Alger of Quebec, Canada; any heirs, devisees or legal representatives of James C. Goodhue and of Horace Alger, late of Braintree, in said County of Norfolk, deceased, and of Jane Alger, late of Eaton, in the Province of Quebec, deceased, who have not released their interest in the premises hereinafter described; and to all whom it may concern:

Whereas, a petition has been presented to said Court by Albert Nelson of said Quincy, to register and confirm his title in the following described land:

A certain parcel of land with the buildings thereon, situate in said Quincy, bounded as follows: Southerly by Gilmore Street one hundred and one (101) feet; easterly by land of the heirs of Richard Larkin one hundred and nineteen (119) feet; northerly by land of H. M. Faxon and of William Mewis one hundred and one (101) feet; and westerly by land of the Waltham National Bank one hundred and twenty-one (121) feet; containing twelve thousand one hundred and twenty (12120) square feet of land.

Petitioner claims as appurtenant to the above described land a right of way over Gilmore Street (private way) as shown on the plan hereinafter mentioned to and from Hancock Street in common with the owners of other lands on said Gilmore Street.

The above described land is shown on a plan filed with said petition, and all boundary lines are claimed to be located on the ground as shown on said plan.

You are hereby cited to appear at the Land Court to be held at Boston, in the County of Suffolk, on the nineteenth day of October A. D., 1908, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, to show cause, if any you have, why the prayer of said petition should not be granted. And unless you appear at said Court at the time and place aforesaid your default will be recorded, and the said petition will be taken as confessed, and you will be forever barred from contesting said petition or any decree entered thereon.

Witness, Leonard A. Jones, Esquire, Judge of said Court, this twenty-third day of September in the year nineteen hundred and eight.

ULTIMATE INDEPENDENCE

No Tendency to Discourage the Belief of Filipinos

CHANGE AT PRESENT UNWISE

Vice Governor Forbes Points Ou That Uniform Dialect Must First Be Established--Present Civi Government Has Paid All Its Expenses and Has Several Million Dollars Left For Public Improvement

Boston, Oct. 2.—The achievements of W. C. Forbes, the United States commissioner and vice governor of the Philippines, was a fruitful theme for the speakers at the dinner given in his honor last night by the Merchants' association of Boston.

All the speakers were asked to treat the Philippine islands and their administrations in a non-political aspect and all held true to the trust imposed upon them by President Storrow. In addition to Forbes, whose address dealt with the present status of the Philippiuts and also his belief in their ultimate independence, the speakers were Secretary of War Wright, British Ambassador Bryce, President Eliot of Harvard university, Senator Lodge and Mayor Hibbard of Boston.

Nearly all the speakers found occasion to mention the work of Forbes' paternal grandfather, John M. Forbes, as a wise counsellor to Abraham Lincoln and Governor Andrews during the Civil war, and of his maternal grandfather, Ralph Waldo Emerson.

Mr. Forbes, who was also mentioned as a former coach of the Harvard football team, was the first speaker of the evening and prefaced his remarks by a brief description of the Philippine islands and their inhabitants. He said that the question in those islands today was not political, but economic. There is no question of the ability, he said, to maintain a government when they have a uniform dialect. There is no idea to discourage them from this belief, but any present change would be detrimental. He decried the efforts of persons who advocate self-government at the present time or believe that the Americans are not competent to maintain a government there.

Mr. Forbes asserted that the present civil government has succeeded in paying all its expenses and had several millions left for public improvement. As to the question of the size of the army in the Philippines he said that the question of defense depended more upon the navy than of the fortification of 11,000 miles of seacoast.

He strongly advocated freer trade with the Philippines, and compared the small revenues with the prosperous trade between this country and Porto Rico. He spoke particularly of the newly formed Merchants' association of Manila and hoped that similar organizations in this country would soon be in touch with it.

Secretary Wright described the work of Forbes in the Philippines and said that he had showed not only good business judgment in suggesting improvements, but energy in having them carried out. Forbes, he said, not only inaugurated a comprehensive railroad system, but had reorganized and improved the merchant marine of the island.

Ambassador Bryce said that all the European nations were interested in the work of this country in the Philippines. He said in dealing with such a people three attributes were necessary—justice, patience and sympathy.

New Postal Rates In Effect

Boston, Oct. 2.—The reduction of postage from 5 to 2 cents on sealed letters to England had a marked effect on the business of the Boston postoffice, business houses and others having held up their mail the past few days to take advantage of the reduced rates, which went into effect Oct. 1. The average number of letters handled a day for Great Britain is 1800, which yesterday was increased to over 3000.

Aunt Dinah's Dance.

By CLARENCE L. LOWER.

Copyright, 1908, by Clarence L. Lower.

FOR some time after Maria had finished the story the little girl sat looking thoughtfully out of the window.

"So Mr. Rabbit was only pretending?" she said presently, seeing that the old colored woman showed no sign of continuing the narrative.

"Dat's all, honey," said Maria, poking the week's wash into the steaming boiler with the laundry stick. "Dat's all 'e wuz, des a-pertendin'. Some folks 'spec's dey kin fool yuther folks yeah in an' yeah out wid deir pertendin'. Sometimes dey does, an' sometimes dey don't. Dey all gits found out in de aind, dough, laik ol' Aunt Dinah, after she'd done gone on a-foolin' Mars' John de lan' knows how long wid her pertendin'.

"Now, I dunno dat ol' Aunt Dinah wuz mo' lazier dan de common run ob cullud folks or ef she'd hoodooed Mahs' John inter favorin' her above de res'. But, w'en de rheumatics doubled her up so's she c'u'dn't walk 'ceptin' wid two crutches, Mahs' John he give out dat she wuzn't ter do no work 'tall, but des tek her time a-settin' at her ease a-doin' ez she liked. So on good days Aunt Dinah set in de sun by de cyabin' do' a-smokin' her pipe, an' a-jowerin' de pickaninnies; an' on bad days she set by de fire, still a-smokin' her pipe an' a-jowerin' de pickaninnies an' keepin' 'em all a-runnin' heah an' yon at her beck an' call. An' dat's all she done, an ez fur ez she went, day after day. But yit folks by day is ez diffrunt f'om folks by night ez de shinin' sun is f'om de dahk ob de moon, an' dat's de troof de roun' worl ober!

"Ebery oncet in er while Mahs' John he'd go down de bayou ter Memphis an' be gone days at de time. Whiles he's gone de overseer hab charge. An' all night long de overseer's a-projeckin' eroun', peekin' heah an' peekin' yon, fo' ter see whut's gwine on in de quahtehs after dahk.

"So one day, w'en Mahs' John come back, de overseer go ter 'im, an' 'e say, 'Mahs' John, bettah look out fo' ol' Aunt Dinah, 'kase she's des a-pertendin'—dat she ain't lame 'tall, an' she kin dance ez libely ez de spriest yaller gal in de quahtehs.' But Mahs' John he on'y say 'Pooh!' an' go 'bout his bus'ness.

"Well, bimeby Mahs' John he go ter Memphis fo' a week. Des ez soon's he's gone Aunt Dinah invites all de darkies in de quahtehs fo' ter come dat ebenin', 'kase dar's gwine ter be a dance an' er possum supper at her cabin, an' Aunt Dinah wuz gwine ter cook de supper, fo' now Mahs' John wuz gone away dey c'u'd have all de highfalutin times dey liked. So w'en de moon come up big an' bright all de darkies come ter Aunt Dinah's cabin. Dar wuz young an' old, gray an' grizzled, an' dey filled de room ez full ez hit c'u'd hold. An', um-m! Talk o' yo' suppers! G'way, chile! Dat are wuz a supper ez wuz a supper, I tell yo'! De folks dey eat an' drink an' laugh an' joke ez merry ez crickets. An' all de ebenin' ol' Aunt Dinah stan' up ez peart an' straight ez enny, a-washin' up de supper dishes ez de folks e't 'em empty an' a-laughin' an' a-jokin' wid de best.

"Bimeby dey cl'ar de flo' fo' dancin'. Ol' Unc' Jim he tek de chair an' begin fo' ter tune de banjo. An' I want yo' ter know, chile, dat ol' Unc. Jim wuz de champeen banjo picker ob de quahtehs. Dey might er bin some ez t'ought dat dey cud pick hit, but hit tuk Unc' Jim ter show 'em how. He wuz up ter all de tricks ob de trade in de banjo pickin'. He cud t'row de banjo eroun' behind him, an' swing hit by de neck an' toss hit in de air an' ketch hit ag'in an' go right erlong a-pickin' an' nevah miss de tune. I tell yo', Unc' Jim wuz a dandy at de banjo, an' w'en he stahted in ter play dey wuz sompin' doin'.

"Well, w'en Unc' Jim he stahts in on de banjo Sukey Snow she teks de flo' fo' ter dance. Sukey wuz er rale bright mulatto gal. She'd got de idee in her haid dat she cud outdance de bes' in de quahtehs. An' I tell yo', chile, de way dat gal fling her feet about wuz er caution! She'd put her han's on her hips an' sway herse'f back an' fo'th an' luk over her shoulder at de boys an' grin laik she dared 'em, an' all de time she keep her feet goin' to beat de ban'.

"De crowd dey all laffs an' whoops an' claps dey han's an' pats dey feet fo de flo', an' dey all 'low whut Sukey's de champeen dancer ob de quahtehs—dat is, dey all 'lowed she wuz 'ceptin' Aunt Dinah. An' Aunt Dinah, she stud in de kitchen a-washin' up de supper dishes an' a-lookin' on wid her nose in de air, an' she 'low ter herse'f dat Sukey mek de orneriest kin' ob a dancer dat she ebbah see in all her bawn days.

"Todes de las', des ez Sukey wuz a-railroadin' her pooties', Aunt Dinah kain't stan' hit no longer."

"'Umph!' sez she. 'D' yo' call dat dancin'? Git off de flo', gal. Hit teks me ter show yo' how ter dance!'

"An', wid a whoop, Aunt Dinah jumped inter de middle ob de flo', shoved Sukey erside an' begun ter jig erway laik all possessed. Ol' Unc' Jim he struck up er rattlin' tune an' played faster'n ebbah. De faster he played de faster Aunt Dinah dance. She cut de pigeon wing, she railroaded an' she do de hoedown; she whirl roun' an' roun', she spring high in de air an' she toss her arms; she sway back an' fo'th an' she shout an' sing, an' all de time she keep er-flappin' her feet in de libelies' kin' ob er way an' nebbah miss de tune. Hit mek de folks roll dar eyes, I tell yo', fo' ter see her! Talk erbout bein' he'pless an' crippled wid rheumatiz! Shoo! Aunt Dinah wuz sho' 'nuff pertendin'!

"Bimeby, w'en de tune's ended, Unc' Jim lay de banjo down, an' he 'low dat playin' an' dancin' is dry wuhk an hit wuz time dey wuz passin' roun' sumpin'. All dis time nobody pays no 'tention ter a po' cracker white dat wuz er-settin' quietly by de chimbly corner er-lookin' on. He'd come to de cabin do' des ez Sukey wuz erbout ter staht de dance an' axed Unc' Jim c'u'd he please come in an' set by de chimbly corner an' res', dat he wuz trompin' 'cross de kentry an' wuz nigh plumb tuckered out an' hongry ez er dog. Unc' Jim 'lowed he c'u'd set in de corner twell de shindig wuz ober, an' den ef dar wuz enny scraps lef' de white man c'u'd have 'em ter eat. De man wuz suttenly de shackliest po' white dat 'd ebbah bin seed roun' de quahtehs, but he set quietly by de chimbly corner wid his ol' hat drawed down ober his eyes an' his arms folded watchin' de goin's on an' nebbah sayin' a wuhd er makin' er move.

"So now Unc' Jim call ter de white man, an' dey tek er tray ob mugs an' go down cellar, whar Unc' Jim had stowed erway a kag ob Mahs' John's bes' applejack dat day onbeknowst. De cracker white hel' de tray an' de candle, an' Unc' Jim ups wid de ax an' knocks in de haid ob de kag, an' fills de mugs wid de applejack. Den Unc' Jim he tells de cracker white to go upstairs an' serbe de applejack to de ladies an' gemmen, whiles Unc' Jim stays down by de kag ter fill up de mugs ez dey's brung down empty.

"'An' min' out how yo' does hit, too, white man!' says he. 'An' min' out dat yo' don' slight nobody, 'kase ef yo' does we'll kill yo'!' Yo's de on'y white man in de quahtehs ternight, so bettah watch out!'

"Well, w'en eberybody'd bin serbed wid applejack 'roun' an' 'roun' ag'in, an' dey wuz feelin' happy, Unc' Jim comes up from de cellar an' de cracker white set down by de chimbly corner wid er mug ob applejack dat Unc' Jim gib 'im. Unc' Jim tek up de banjo an' stahts ter pickin' ag'in, an' Aunt Dinah she begin fo' ter dance some mo', an' eberybody else keep time a-clappin'. Unc' Jim, he look up at de ceilin' an' sway his body back an' fo'th, an' pat his foot on de flo', keepin' time to de music.

"Bimeby he commence ter sing:

"'Ol' Mahs' John gone ter Memphis today.
Clap yo' han's, niggahs. Mek yo' feet go pit-a-pat.
Ol' Mahs' John long time gone erway.
Oo-ah, niggahs, ain' yo' mighty glad ob dat?

"'Possum am a-fryin' an' de taters bustin' white.
Clap yo' han's, niggahs. Mek yo' fee' go pit-a-pat.
Gwine ter hab gre't times at ouah house ternight.
Oo-ah, niggahs, ain' yo' mighty glad ob dat?

"'Gwine ter pick de banjo an' dance de buck an' wing.
Clap yo' han's, niggahs. Mek yo' feet go pit-a-pat.
Gwine ter eat an' drink all night an' all night gwine ter sing.
Oo-ah, niggahs, ain' yo' mighty glad ob dat?'

"All de while Aunt Dinah she kep' on a-dancin'. She ben' her body back, an' she ben' her body fo'th, twell she mos' bow to de groun'. She dance ober to whar de cracker white's a-settin' by de chimbly corner, an' she bow low befo' him twell her haid mos' tech his'n, an' she look him in de face an' roll her eyes. Den she dance back ter whar Unc' Jim's a-settin' pickin' de banjo, an' she whisper ez she pass him:

"'Unc' Jim, I's 'spicious 'bout dat 'ar white man!'

"'Wha' yo' mean?' Unc' Jim whisper back.

"'Wait!' sez Aunt Dinah.

"So Aunt Dinah danced across ter de cracker white ergin ah' ben' low befo' him twell her haid mos' tech his'n an' look him in de face an' roll her eyes. Den back she danced ter Unc' Jim an' sez:

"'Unc' Jim, I 'low dat ain't no cracker white!'

"'Who yo' 'low 'tis, den?' sez Unc' Jim.

"'I 'low 'tain't nobody in de roun' worl' but Mahs' John his own se'f!' sez Aunt Dinah.

"'Shoo!' Unc' Jim 'spon', an' he go right erlong playin' de banjo.

"Oncet mo' Aunt Dinah danced across ter whar de cracker white's a-settin'. An' dis time w'en she ben' low befo' him she sez:

"'White man, speak up an' tell de troof. Ain't yo' all Mahs' John?'

"'Ah am!' sez de man. An' he stud up an' pulled off his ol' hat an' false beard, an' hit sho'ly wuz Mahs' John! He hadn't gone ter Memphis 'tall. He wuz des a-pertendin'. He'd come dar disguised ez er cracker white fo' ter see whut troof dar wuz 'bout Aunt Dinah's dancin'.

"'Oh, de law gorramity!' screams Aunt Dinah. An' she t'rows up her han's an' draps ter de flo', dead ez a doornail, an' nebbah moved ag'in.

"Well, dat put er stop ter de high jinks mighty quick. Eberybody quit dare clappin' an' stompin' an' rolled dare eyes. Unc' Jim frowed down de banjo an' jumped ter his feet. He gib one look at Mahs' John an' one look at Aunt Dinah. Den he sez, 'Feet, carry off de body!' an' le'p' t'rough de winder, tekin' sash an' all, an' lit out. De res', dey foller suit, an' dey tuk off helter skelter t'rough doahs an' winders, whicheber happened handy, an' scattered in de night. An' ez fo' Unc' Jim, nobody ain' nebbah laid eyes on him since, an' whar he lit out ter after he le'p' t'rough de winder de goodness on'y knows!"

"HE STUD UP AN' PULLED OFF HIS OL' HAT."

Had to Get Up.

Many years ago Dr. Oscar Blumenthal, the director of the Lessing theater in Berlin, had an unpleasant experience of the vigilance with which the authorities carried out their duties.

In his comedy, the "Orient Reise," one of the characters was afflicted with a mother-in-law of the most objectionable kind. This lady died and, according to the belief of her relatives, went to heaven. The prospect of a fresh acquaintance with his dreaded mother-in-law so terrified her son-in-law that he announced that if this should be his fate "when the resurrection comes I shan't get up."

This was sufficient for the authorities. Twenty-four hours after the production of the piece an ominous blue envelope arrived at the Lessing theater containing a peremptory order from the president of police that the lines in question should be immediately suppressed "as being calculated to wound the religious feelings of the lieges."

The Ideal Forester.

To be a good forester a man should combine something of the naturalist with a good deal of the business man. To know how to use the forest he must be able to study it. He must have, therefore, the power of observation, a fondness for nature and the ability to penetrate her secrets. But if he is to succeed he must also have good practical judgment and the ability to meet and handle men. He must be resourceful, able to stand by himself, willing to undergo the privations of rough life and capable of commanding the respect of rough men, who quickly recognize virility and genuineness of character, but will not tolerate pretense or the assumption of superiority. A forester needs a vigorous mind in a vigorous body. He must be of the kind that likes to get things done and does not give up when things are not going his way. He will have to face difficulties and work out problems far from outside help, relying solely on himself. He ought to be hard to whip.

A Business Asset.

The owner of the only red brick building in a downtown block of gray buildings decided to paint his building the prevailing tone. Without previous announcement of his intention to the tenants he sent the painters around on Monday morning to begin work. When the tenants learned his purpose, a mighty howl was raised by them.

"Change the color of this building!" they exclaimed. "Why, this vivid red is one of our best business assets. It helps to locate us. Being the only red building in the neighborhood, it sticks in the minds of people who can't remember the number, but who can direct others to us just because we are doing business in a red house. We have stayed here all these years on account of the conspicuous color. If that is changed, we shall move."

The owner listened to these plaints patiently. Then he went ahead and painted the building, but he painted it a still brighter red.—New York Press.

Imagined ills painted by our fears are always greater than the true.—Metastasio.

EDITORIAL.

The slow manner in which the grade crossing hearings are progressing makes it look as though it would be some years yet before the four tracks will laid through Quincy and the crossings at Saville and Water streets abolished.

Two more noble elms,—the last of five or six which surrounded the new Federal Building lot on Washington street, when it was purchased,—are being cut down today, much to the regret of many who have admired the beauty of the Public Library grounds. The sacrifice may have been necessary because the building was located so near the streets, but the location was unnecessary and a mistake, and has occasioned many unfavorable comments. The city should now move for an enlargement of the lot.

"We find him first in Congress in the second administration of Mr. Cleveland, a member of the ways and means committee and most active in formulating the provisions of the Gorman-Wilson tariff bill. After five months' debate it passed both houses and came to Mr. Cleveland and in such a shape that he denounced it as a piece of perfidy. It leveled the industries of this country to the ground. It threw out of employment millions of wage-earners. It destroyed all business profit. Farm products for a lack of a market fell to a point never so low in forty years. Coxey's army marched from the west to Washington to protest against a government under which such things were possible." This reference to Bryan and Cleveland should be remembered. The above is the way Mr. Taft tersely tells the effect of free trade.

Criminal Business For the Past Year

The annual report of Probation Officer Francis A. Spear for the court year ending Oct. 1, shows the total number of criminal cases before the district court for the year to have been 1888. This total does not include the juvenile and delinquent cases which have not been included in the criminal records since Oct. 1, 1906.

The total for the year shows an increase of 38 over the year ending Oct. 1, 1907. Those for drunkenness head the list with 698 cases. Other cases were : assault, 180; larceny, 161; and violation of the automobile speed laws, 129. The balance of the cases were for various offences.

The reports for September show the number of cases that month to have been 194, an increase of 43 over September 1907.

YACHTSMEN WIN.

The Metropolitan Park Commission has decided to allow yachts to be hauled across the parkway at the Wollaston beach. Arrangements are now being made for entrances on to the beach at the foot of Beach street and also at the foot of Appleton street.

—It is said that a company has been formed in Europe to run first-class hotels in the cities and towns of Greece. The promoters might go to Athens for a time and learn what a really first-class hotel is. MERRILL WINS

Is Renominated By Republicans For County Commissioner

Hon. John F. Merrill of Quincy was renominated this morning as County Commissioner at the Norfolk County Republican convention, which was held in Wesleyan hall.

There were two candidates in the field seeking the nomination, Mr. Merrill and Everett M. Bowker of Brookline.

Hon. Eugene H. Sprague who entered the contest for delegates in Quincy did not enter the convention.

Mr. Merrill receiveld 59 votes, while Mr. Bowker received but 19.

John D. Cobb was nominated for register of probate and insolvency, having no opposition.

The county committee elected is the same as last year.

After the convention the delegates dined at Young's hotel.

—A young chap in California the other day was "dared" by a girl to catch hold of a balloon just as a man was going up in it to make a parachute drop. The boy grabbed a rope and was carried 6,000 feet up in the air. The aeronaut left him on the balloon when he cut loose and the youth made a long flight and at last landed safely. The risk was a terrible one, and he is not apt to take it again.

Miss Keith Bride of William F. Blanchard

One of the prettiest home weddings of the fall season took place on Thursday evening at Quincy Point, when Miss Ada Clarice Keith of River street, daughter of ex-Councilman Aubrey R. Keith, and niece of Harrison A. Keith, our former Mayor and present City Clerk, became the bride of Mr. William F. Blanchard of 59 Bay View street.

The ceremony which took place at the future home of the couple, a new house on Bay View street, was performed by the Rev. Alfred R. Atwood of the Washington Street Congregational church. The house was very prettily and appropriately decorated with red dahlias and roses, on which the red light of a beautiful lamp, a gift to the bride, shone with charming effect.

In the parlor had been erected a beautiful floral arch of white roses and ferns, with a dove suspended from the centre. As the bride entered on the arm of her father, preceded by Rev. A. R. Atwood, the groom, best man, and bridesmaid, she was presented to the clergyman who in an effective and beautiful manner gave her over to the groom, who stood beneath the arch waiting to receive her, who was to be his companion "till death should them part."

After the ceremony there was a reception from 8.30 to 9, and the happy couple were assisted in receiving by Mr. and Mrs. Walter Randall, Miss Edith Randall, Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Mellen, and Mrs. G. A. Thompson of North Weymouth.

The bride was very daintily gowned in a dress of white imported lace, with insertions of cluny and garnitures of embroidered taffeta, and carried a bouquet of white roses. She was attended by her cousin, Miss Ethel Randall of Spear street, who was dressed in a gown of white organdie. The best man was Chester B. Mellen of Bay View street, a cousin of the groom, and the ushers were Mr. Reginald K. Randall of Quincy and Mr. John Downs of Orleans.

There were many beautiful and useful presents, gifts of her many friends, who were present from Quincy, North Weymouth and vicinity.

Mr. and Mrs. Blanchard left on a short wedding tour, and on their return will reside at their new home on Bay View street, where they will be at home to their friends after Nov. 1.

Brief Locals Of a Busy City

The Boston market continues to quote very low prices on meats.

The Squantum Yacht club will hold the last dance of the season at the club house on Saturday evening of this week.

Rev. Mr. Pratt, at one time pastor of Wollaston Unitarian church, is leaving Hopedale November first, for Winnipeg, Canada, where he is to establish a church.

Prof. Leon Vincent of Boston will lecture on Thackeray next Monday evening at 7.30 to the teachers, pupils and friends of Quincy Mansion school in Livermore hall.

The Jolly Ramblers of Atlantic, composed of young men in that vicinity, are making extensive preparations for their annual dance which will take place next month.

"Dick" Childs, the cashier at Quincy office of the Old Colony street railway, is having his vacation. Mr. Childs has enjoyed the Brockton fair and will go to Coney Island and New York for a few days.

The second district councillor convention is being held in Boston this afternoon. There are three candidates seeking the nomination Albion F. Bemis of Brookline, Arthur P. Russell of Quincy and Franklin L. Codman of Boston.

The engagement is announced of John S. Knight, of Holbrook, formerly of Quincy, to Miss Alice Shaw of Holyoke. Both are employed in the store of J. R. Smith of that town, Miss Shaw as bookkeeper and Mr. Knight in charge of the fruit department.

Carpenter Chisholm has started another house on Bay View street. This is number three, and is to consist of five rooms and bath. The other two houses just built, were disposed of before completed. This shows what kind of houses are most in demand in that district and others like these are to be built.

The submarine race from Newport to Philadelphia has been postponed, on account of a slight accident to the machinery of the Cuttlefish, built at Quincy. The accident is not serious, but just how long the repairs will take is not known. When the Cuttlefish is in condition again, the race will be started.

One of the great hits of tonight's Business Men's Carnival will be "The trials of an editor," representing the Quincy Daily Ledger," with Mrs. A. J. Davis as an antique poetess, Miss Beatrice Morrison as stenographer, J. E. Claflin as editor, and Curtis Arnold as the printer's devil. This number alone is worth the price of admission.

The Men's club of Christ church will open the season on Monday next, when John D. Mackey, L. L. M., will speak on "The right of the accused." On Oct. 21 there will be a debate on the resolve: "That our merchant marine should be fostered by a ship subsidy law." A program to cover the entire season has been prepared. Merton A. Turner is the president this year.

The Westland Quartette, composed of Miss May Belle Dadmun, Mrs. Emma Schufeldt Moore, Miss Alice Gertrude Coe and Mrs. Dorothy McTaggart Miller, which had a most successful summer concert trip, has established its new name high up in the musical world. The quartette was formerly known as "The Bostonia." The singers are exceptionally fine. One of their number, Miss Coe, who has pleased Atlantic as well as other audiences for many years, is a resident of Billings street, while Mrs. Moore another member resides on Biglow street, Quincy.

Quincy Boy For Quartermaster

Chester B. Mellen, of Bay View street, has accepted a position as quartermaster on the steamship Creole, built at Quincy. This is quite an honor, for "Chet" only graduated from the Enterprise about two weeks ago. While on this training ship Mr. Mellen made an enviable record. During the two years he spent aboard, he never had a demerit and when the strict discipline in vogue on such ships, is considered, it is indeed a record of which he may be proud. To add to this honor, the young cadet was also distinguished by having three stripes give nhim on graduation. Only one man can get this honor in each class, and in the classes of seamanship and navigation Chester was the lucky boy. "Chet" is only 19 years old, so this position holds out brilliant prospects for the youthful quartermaster.

State Convention Of Sunday Schools

The annual State convention of the Massachusetts Sunday School Association will convene in Worcester, October 6, and continue Wednesday and Thursday. The principal sessions will be held in the First Baptist Trinity M. E. Old South Congregational and First Presbyterian churches on Main street.

A new feature this year will be denominational assemblies at 10 A. M. Tuesday under the direction of committees of each denomination, and will assemble in churches of their respective denominations as follows: Advent, Baptist, Congregational, Episcopal, Friends, Methodist Episcopal and Presbyterian.

At 1.45 P. M., Samuel L. Beiler, Ph. D., Professor of Practical Theology, Boston University, will conduct a Pastors' Conference. At 3.15 the Preparation Hour conducted by Rev. Clarence A. Vincent, D. D., of Boston; at 4.30 there will be simultaneous services in Trinity M. E. for children twelve years of age and under and in the First Baptist for young people thirteen years of age and over. From 5.30 to 7 P. M. His Honor, Mayor and Mrs. James Logan will receive the members of the State executive committee, district presidents and Sunday school superintendents at their residence on Salisbury street.

Tuesday evening the greetings to the convention will be given by Mayor Logan and the president of the Board of Trade and Vice-President Augustus R. Smith of Lee will respond. A message from the State Committee Chairman, Harry P. Bosson, of Reading, will be followed by an address "The Layman's Religion" by Rev. Harry Emerson Fosdick of Montclair, N. J.

Mr. D. J. Pratt will conduct a praise service at the opening and closing of each evening's session and have charge of the music throughout the convention.

An equally attractive program is arranged for Wednesday including a banquet at 5.30 P. M., and a double session in the evening.

On Thursday, morning, afternoon and evening meetings. Closing session of the convention, Thursday evening, will be addressed by Bishop J. W. Hamilton of the M. E. church and Rev. O. P. Gifford, D. D., of Brookline.

An exhibit of an educational and business character combined will be open in the vestry of the First Baptist church throughout the three days.

The Worcester Committee provide entertainment on the Harvard plan, lodging and breakfast free, in the homes of the Sunday school workers and the railroads have granted reduced rates from all distant portions of the State tickets good to go from October 2 to Oct. 8 and returning Oct. 6 to Oct .12.

Programs or further information may be obtained of any Sunday school superintendent or at the Massachusetts Sunday school office, 602 Ford building, Boston.

Convention of The W. C. T. U.

The thirty-fifth annual convention of the Massachusetts W. C. T. U., will be held in the First church, Church street, Lowell, October 6, 7 and 8, commencing Tuesday at 2 P. M. After the usual opening exercises, welcome responses, minutes and business, Mrs. Stevenson, the State president, will give her annual address.

Tuesday evening will be jubilee night for county presidents whose counties have made gain in membership. The lecturer for that evening will be Miss E. P. Gordan, National evangelist.

Wednesday morning, department-quiz, each superintendent given five minutes to answer questions. "Memorial service" comes in this session.

In the afternoon, Loyal Temperance Legion, Young Woman branches and department-quiz. Introduction of guests and fraternal delegates.

In the evening, chief feature, General A. S. Daggett's lecutre. Gen. Daggett comes from Washington D. C. This is followed by ten minute addresses by city pastors.

Thursday morning, service of song led by Mrs. Olmsted, musical director, and followed by annual election of officers.

Thursday afternoon, proposed amendments to constitution considered; committee report; dropped stitches; questions.

In the evening, a happy hour with the World's W. C. T. U. and demonstrations by L. T. L. Ys., and departments; introductions of hostesses and closing exercises of the convention. Benediction by the pastor.

The Observations In the Daily Walk

The Registrars of Voters will meet tonight at Quincy Point to add names to the voting lists.

There have been frosts on the low lands in Quincy and vicinity bot vegetation is not much injured.

Jack Arnold and Eliot Johnson will give a great comedy specialty as two Jews, at the Business Men's Carnival tonight.

Miss Abbie Penley as the leading soprano of the Squanky Concert Co., with Herbert Poor as Lanjer DeWalf, give a most humorous musical skit at tonight's Business Men's Carnival.

The Brockton fair people who passed through Quincy on the way home Thursday night were much quieter than usual, owing to the rain.

The case of Luigi Conchieri vs. the Granite Railway company has been settled by agreement, the plaintiff receiving $1,325.

Thursday evening 7.30 a missionary concert will be given in the Swedish Baptist church under the auspices of the King's Daughters. There will be singing by the choir and others. Miss Brown, missionary of Boston, will deliver an address. Refreshments will be served.

The N. Y., N. H. & H. R. officials should be censured for the great risks they take at the Quincy station in allowing two trains to pull into the station at the same time, especially as the outward train unloads onto the inward track. There have been several narrow escapes this week.

A Few Changes by New Timetable

A new time-table on the N. Y. N. H. & H. R. R., goes into effective Sunday, Oct. 4. The week-day changes are as follows:—

Outward week-day train now leaving Boston at 8.27 A. M., due Quincy 8.49 A. M., is withdrawn, and the Plymouth via South Shore train, leaving Boston at 8.45 A. M., will make Wollaston at 8.58 A. M., and Quincy 9.02 A. M.

On Saturdays only, Plymouth via South Shore train, leaving Boston at 12.45 P. M., making Quincy at 1.02 P. M., will leave at 1.10 P. M., making Quincy at 1.27 P. M.

Inward week-day train now leaving Braintree 3.06 P. M., Quincy 3.13 P. M., is withdrawn. To partially cover its work, train leaving Braintree 358 P. M. will make Quincy at 3.03 P. M., Wollaston 3.06 P. M., thence running express to Boston.

The Political Calendar.

The State and Presidential election is only ten weeks off, and the following dates will be of value:

Sept. 21—Independence League caucuses in cities and towns which have not adopted the provisions of the joint caucus act.

Sept. 22—All caucuses of political parties in Boston and cities and towns which have adopted the provisions of the joint caucus act.

Sept. 23—Democratic caucuses in cities and towns which have not adopted the provisions of the joint caucus act.

Sept. 27—Earliest day for calling and holding republican conventions except representative conventions.

Sept. 30—Earliest day for calling and holding Republican representative conventions.

Oct. 1—Democratic State Convention, Boston, (Faneuil Hall, Boston.)

Oct. 3—Republican State Convention, Symphony Hall, Boston.

Oct. 13—Latest date for calling or holding conventions for the nomination of candidates for offices to be filled at a State Election other than those to be filled by all the voters of the Commonwealth. Must be called and held before 5 P. M.

Oct. 5—Certificates of Nomination for offices to be filled by all of the voters of the Commonwealth must be filed.

Oct. 12—Nomination Papers for the same must be filed .

Oct. 15—Certificates of Nomination for all other offices to be filled at a State election must be filed.

Oct. 16.—Nomination Papers for the same must be filed.

All of these papers must be filed with the Secretary of the Commonwealth before 5 P. M. on the dates specified.

Oct. 14—Registration closes at 10 P. M.

Nov. 3—State and Presidential election.

Did You EVER THINK of That?

IT WILL HELP QUINCY!

IT WILL HELP YOU!

Don't You Like This Town?

You live here. Your business interests are here. Your home is here.

You are reading a Mail Order Catalogue. That indicates that you are not spending your money in this town. You are spending it with strangers in a big city. That city has no use for this town except to get your money.

This town has use for your money. If spent here, your money will help to build up the town. It will help to build up your own business.

In the long run more of your money will come back to you if you spend it at home than if you send it to Chicago or some other large city. You spend a dollar with Smith, up the street. Smith spends it with Brown, around the corner. Brown is just as likely to spend it with you as with anybody else. Did you ever think of that?

All of us have to spend money. There is an art in spending it where it will do the most good. If spent so that it will circulate around this town and community, it will help this town and community. You belong to this town and community. Therefore it will help you. Isn't that good logic?

Suppose you think it over next time you pick up the Mail Order Catalogue.

Lady Betty Across the Water

By C. N. & A. M. WILLIAMSON ❋ COPYRIGHT, 1906, BY McCLURE, PHILLIPS & CO.

Loveland would have had a fit if he could have heard her, for of course at home only the lower middle classes of such people hurl a marquis' title at his head in that fashion, but I suppose foreigners, unless they've been in England a long time, don't know the difference.

When I got a chance, I asked Sally Woodburn how Mrs. Stuyvasant-Knox made her distinctions in snubbing some people and preening herself to others.

"My deah," said Sally (I'm to call her "Sally" now; it's been understood between us for some time), "my deah, you're a poor, innocent child, and I reckon you've been brought up in darkness, without even so much as hearing of the Four Hundred?

"What are the Four Hundred? Are they a kind of light brigade, like the Six Hundred?" I asked. "Or is it a sort of governing body like—like the Council of Three?"

She laughed so much at this, with her charming, velvety laugh, that I grew quite nervous, for it's embarrassing to have said something funny when you've meant to be rather intelligent. But soon she took pity on me. "You perfect love," she said, "that's really two sweet. It deserves to be put in Life, or something. And yet you're not so far wrong, when one comes to think of it. The Four Hundred is a kind of governing body, only I believe it's really reduced to Two Hundred now. They govern New York, and Newport, and Lennox, and Bar Harbor, and several other places which are considered very nice and important."

"Oh! Are they Republicans or Democrats?" I inquired, sure that I really was being intelligent at last, for I'd heard Stan say that in America the Republican party was rather like our Conservatives, and the Democrats like our Liberals, and I'd remembered because I believe I should be very much interested in politics if only I understood more about them. But Sally seemed to think that question funny too.

"They can be either, my poor lamb," she exclaimed, "and they can be almost anything else they like if only they're just awfully, dreadfully rich and can manage to scrape up a family crest. It used to be the crest that counted with the man who invented the Four Hundred, but since his day that idea has got buried under heaps and heaps of gold, and pearls and diamonds, especially pearls. In those places I was telling you about you don't exist unless you're in the Four Hundred, which is now being sifted down to Two Hundred, and will probably be Seventy-five in a year or two. You may have the bluest blood in America in your veins; you may be simply smeared with ancestors, but if you haven't managed to push forward in a clever, indescribable way, neither they nor you will ever be noticed, and your gray hairs will go down to the grave in the wrong set. Now do you understand why my cousin Katherine makes narrow eyes for some people and broad smiles for others?"

"Ye-es, I suppose I do," I answered. "Only—we are quite different at home. I haven't been about at all yet, but I know; because some things are in the air. How did Mrs. Stuyvesant-Knox ever have the poor wrong setters for acquaintances, though?"

"Because (she'd kill me if she heard this) she has only lately got into the right set herself and after trouble enough to give an ordinary woman nervous prostration. That kind of thing does give it to a lot of women—especially if they fail. But Cousin Katherine very seldom fails. She almost always carries things through. If you knew anything about America in general and New York in particular you'd be able to realize what a hard time she's had, when I tell you that till her husband died she lived west of Chicago. To get into the Four Hundred if you've lived west of Chicago (unless you're Californian, which is getting to be fashionable), is just like having to climb over one of those great, high walls of yours in England, bristling with nails or broken glass."

"My goodness!" I exclaimed. "How funny! Fancy if people who live in Surrey should glare at people who live in Devonshire."

"That's different. You see, Chicago is new."

"But so is all America, isn't it?" I asked stupidly. "What difference can a hundred or so years make?"

"We haven't begun to think in centuries yet on our side of the water, my deah." (She has the most delicious way of saying "my deah," and all her "r's" are soft like that; only it's too much trouble to write them for nobody but myself to see.) "Anyhow, it is so, between New York and Chicago people—that is, the people who count in Society with a big S—and it was a great triumph for my cousin to become the three hundred and ninety-ninth in the Four Hundred. She did it by buying a Russian prince."

"Buying a"—

"Yes, love, he was going to the highest bidder, and she bought him. That is, she entertained him so gorgeously and did so many nice things for him that he posed as her property, and, as every one was dying to meet him, it made her. She'd been working killingly hard before that, for a whole year after taking her house on Fifth avenue and building her cottage at Newport, but it was buying the prince which did the trick. On the strength of that episode and its consequences, she went to Europe with very nice introductions, and, as you know, deah, she has made some valuable as well as pleasant friends. To live up to them and her reputation, she will have to be busy for a while dropping a lot of old acquaintances."

"How horrid!" I couldn't help exclaiming, though Mrs. Ess Kay was going to be my hostess.

"Yes, it seems rather miserable to me because I'm a weak, lazy, southern being, who would be right down sick if I had to hurt any human being's feelings. Yet perhaps it looks fair to her. She's so ambitious, and she's worked so hard she has deserved to succeed. As for poor me, she just regularly mesmerizes me all through. She mesmerized me into coming up from Kentucky and visiting her this spring. Then she mesmerized me into going with her to Europe. But I'm not sorry I went, for I've had a right good time."

"I'm so glad you went," said I, "because if you hadn't I shouldn't have met you. I'm sure I should love Kentucky if all the people there are like you. But these things you've been saying seem so odd. Do you mean to tell me that the people who lead society in New York want to keep their set limited to a certain number and refuse to know others, even if they're extraordinarily clever and interesting?"

"They don't like them to be too clever because they call such people 'queer'—that is, unless they happen to be 'lions' of some sort from England or other places abroad. Then so long as they're not American, they welcome them with open arms."

"I'm glad society isn't like that in England," I said. "There the real people—the people who have the right to make social laws, you know—are delighted with any one who can amuse them. Of course deep down in our hearts we may be proud if we have old names, which have been famous for hundreds of years in one way or another, but we are so used, after all those centuries, to being sure of ourselves that we just take our position for granted and don't think much more about it. If people who haven't got quite the same position are gentlefolk and amusing or clever or beautiful or anything like that which really matters, why, we're only too pleased with them."

"That's all the difference in the world! You've been 'sure of yourselves for centuries.' You've said the last word, my deah. 'Out of the mouths of babes'—but Cousin Katherine's finished gushing to that silly old Mrs. Van der Windt. We mustn't dare discuss these things from our point of view any more. I reckon she would faint."

There are a good many young men on board, and some of them seemed to be quite devoted to Mrs. Ess Kay the first day out, but she was cold to them all. I couldn't think why, as some of them seemed very nice, and she had always appeared rather to like being with men. I asked Sally about it, but she laughed and said I might perhaps solve the mystery myself when we were at Newport if I remembered it then.

I never heard of such breakfasts and luncheons as they have on this ship, and the first menu I saw surprised me so much that I couldn't believe they really had and could produce all those things if anybody was inconsiderate enough to ask for them. I hardly supposed there were so many things to eat in the world. But the captain heard me exclaiming to Sally, so he smiled and told me to test the menu by ordering a bit of everything on it. He'd guarantee that nothing would be missed out. This was at breakfast the second day, and when he saw that I ate several dear little round things shaped like cream colored doilies, which are called pancakes (though they aren't a bit like ours) with some perfectly divine stuff named maple sirup, he said my taking such a fancy to American products was a sign that I should marry an American.

What nonsense! As if I would dream of marrying, especially a foreigner. But for all that pancakes and maple sirup are delicious. I've had them every day since for breakfast, after finishing a great orange four times the natural size, which isn't really an orange, because it's a grape fruit. You have it on your plate cut in two halves, with ice in each, and you scoop the inside out of a lot of tiny pockets with a teaspoon. You think when you first see it that you can't eat more than half, but instead you eat every bit, and sometimes if the morning is hot you even wish you could have more, though, of course, you wouldn't be so greedy as to ask.

It was on the second day out, too, that all my troubles began—and in a queer way which nobody could have guessed would lead to anything disagreeable.

EDUCATION IN HYGIENE

Should Be Given Both to School-children and Adults

THE WAR ON TUBERCULOSIS

Most Important Effort Should Be Toward Checking Contamination of Human Beings by Each Other --Little Ones Must Be Regularly Instructed In Science of Combatting the White Plague

Washington, Oct. 2.—"Of more importance than any other feature in the crusade against the scourge of the white plague is the campaign of education."

This emphatic declaration was made by Dr. Robert Koch, the eminent German scientist, who again figured prominently in a controversy on tuberculosis before the national congress on tuberculosis. This utterance was made just after a report had been submitted by Dr. G. A. Heron, delegate of the Royal Society of Medicine of London, on "the teaching of elementary hygiene in the training colleges and elementary schools of Great Britain and Ireland," and which was read and discussed by the section of the congress on "elementary and popular education."

Dr. Koch, in his comment on the report, regretted that thus far most of the educational efforts in the campaign to stamp out tuberculosis have been made quite confinedly with adults. He emphasized the importance of teaching hygiene to children, and called attention to the duty which imposed itself upon the teachers to instruct their scholars in all of the sanitary measures and precautions to be taken in combatting tuberculosis. He added that both teachers and pupils must be thoroughly and competently taught.

"I have long felt that in this generally infectious disease of tuberculosis," continued Koch, "that every effort must be taken to prevent the spread of this contagion, and most important of all, the contamination of human beings by each other. I recommend to you, as very important, to study the very complete exhibit of the state of New York on tuberculosis, the methods and appliances there shown to be utilized to prevent the spread of this infection. But it is not sufficient to see the means and apparatus. One must know how to use them. Therefore, the thing most important in this crusade against tuberculosis is the campaign of education."

Dr. Heron, in his report, told of the great step which was taken last August in England and Wales which ended "the evil system which, till that date, allowed the study of hygiene to be optional with those who meant to become schoolteachers." Now, he said, an "intending teacher" is required to take a special course in hygiene and the schoolchildren are regularly instructed in that science. "Sound education in hygiene, given both to schoolchildren and to adults," declared Heron, "is the chief means by which we cannot only immensely lessen, but practically end the existence of tuberculosis."

That strong effort will be made to place the congress on record in favor of the establishment of a national department of health was indicated at the session of the section on "state and municipal control of tuberculosis," of which Surgeon General Wyman is at the head. Wyman announced that there was good prospect of the accomplishment to this end.

Professor Irving Fischer of Yale university favored creating a national board of health in order to concentrate the work of fighting diseases in this country under one head.

Dr. Liston H. Montgomery of Chicago has prepared a resolution which he will lay before the congress for creating "a national department of public health," the head of which shall be a medical scientist or member of that profession who shall have a seat in the president's cabinet.

Cuban Governors Assume Office

Havana, Oct. 2.—The successful candidates who were elected to office in the towns and provinces throughout Cuba in August officially entered upon their new duties yesterday. As a consequence of this the officers of the United States army who were appointed last April by Governor Magoon as governors of the various provinces for the purpose of securing better conditions, have been withdrawn.

Yankee May Be Floated

Newport, R. I., Oct. 2.—Such good progress has been made in controlling the leaks in the cruiser Yankee, ashore on Spindle rock, that it is the belief of the wrecking crew that with favorable weather an attempt can be made to float her by Sunday, with chances in favor of success. The lightering done thus far has raised the Yankee about eighteen inches forward.

Roberts' Wound Almost Healed

Atlantic City, N. J., Oct. 2.—Charles B. Roberts of Baltimore, who was shot more than a month ago while he was riding in a board walk rolling chair with Mrs. W. S. G. Williams, a Baltimore society woman, has left the city hospital and is at the Hotel Brighton. Mrs. Roberts is with him. Roberts' wound is almost entirely healed, but he is still weak.

LASTERS ARE CALLED OUT

Forty-Four Lynn Shoe Factories Involved In General Strike

Lynn, Mass., Oct. 2.—A general strike of the lasters and lasting machine operators in the forty-four shoe factories in this city has been ordered to begin this afternoon, as a systematic move in support of the lasters of the Joseph Caunt company's factory. The men called out will include employes of all factories in the city operated by firms connected with the Manufacturers' association.

A meeting of the Lasters' union was held last night at which the vote to strike was taken. This union, which includes nearly all the lasters in the city, is independent of the Boot and Shoe Workers' union, many of the lasters of Lynn having seceded from that organization some time ago. No action regarding the situation has been taken as yet by the lasters who still remain affiliated with the Boot and Shoe workers.

The grievance of the lasters has to do with the fact that early in September the Caunt concern installed assembling machines, put female operators at work, and, it is alleged, reduced the piece work price 9 cents a pair.

SLUGGED IN HER OWN DOORWAY

Woman Relieved of Handbag Containing $75 In Silver

Boston, Oct. 2.—Mary Newall of 1196 Dorchester avenue was knocked down by a thief as she was entering her home last night and robbed of a handbag containing over $75. In her stocking she carried over $400 in bills, which the thief did not get. Miss Newall is employed as a cashier in the grocery store of John T. Connor, at 951 Dorchester avenue, and is the second cashier of this firm who has been robbed by a highwayman within a week.

Miss Newall, who is 20 years old, left the store shortly after 6:30 o'clock last evening with the day's receipts in her possession. In a handbag Miss Newall carried all the silver, which amounted to over $75, while in her stocking there reposed over $400 in bills.

As she entered the doorway of her home, a well-dressed young man approached her and, tipping his hat, inquired if she could direct him to Greenmount street. Upon being told that it was the street directly opposite, the stranger politely tipped his hat again and started down the few steps.

Miss Newall opened the door to go into the house, when the man suddenly pulled her coat with one hand, while, with the other, he dealt her a severe blow on the back of the head with a blackjack, rendering her unconscious. The thief then grabbed the handbag and made off.

Curiosities Aboard Ship

Boston, Oct. 2.—Skulls of men and animals, skins of reptiles and fish, and warlike implements from every quarter of the globe, the results of twenty-eight years' search and discovery, fill the cabin of Captain Berndt of the German steamship Germanicus, which arrived here with a cargo of sugar from Java. The captain's collection is said to include many rare and valuable specimens, the entire exhibit being valued at $10,000. On board the steamer was a six-fingered black monkey from Sumatra and a red monkey of great size and ferocity, as well as several other animals, the property of various officers.

Pittsburg Celebrates Anniversary

Pittsburg, Oct. 2.—Over a score of persons were injured, some of them so painfully that hospital treatment was necessary, during the great historical and industrial pageant, in celebration of Pittsburg's sesqui-centennial anniversary. At times the crush was so great that many persons were thrown to the ground and trampled upon. Last night the streets of the city were crowded with gay masqueraders. Street car service in the down-town section was entirely suspepnded, while thousands of persons threw confetti and the din of horns and bells was terrific.

Atlantic Fleet Off Manila

Manila, Oct. 2.—The Atlantic fleet was reported fifty miles off the mouth of the harbor at 8 o'clock this morning and is expected to pass in by Corregidor island at about 1:30 o'clock this afternoon. Launches have already gone out to meet the fleet down the coast and accompany it into the harbor.

Three Killed In Wreck

Poughkeepsie, N. Y., Oct. 2.—Three laborers were killed and seven injured in a collision on a curve between a work train and a freight train east of this city. The engineers and firemen jumped and were uninjured, but the men on the work train were pinned in the wreckage.

Fall River Death Mystery

Fall River, Mass., Oct. 2.—The bodies of two men were picked up in Mount Hope bay near this city. The first body to be discovered was floating in the south basin of the Staples Coal company's wharf. A bullet wound in the right temple gave evidence of foul play.

Expenditures Exceed Receipts

Washington, Oct. 2.—The monthly comparative statement of the government receipts and expenditures shows that for the month of September, 1908, there was an excess of expenditures over receipts of $4,588,571, as against a deficit for August of $3,909,128

Humor and Philosophy

By DUNCAN M. SMITH

PERT PARAGRAPHS.

Perhaps some men would find life more pleasant and endurable if they could get their wives' tempers insured.

Money is a useful and expensive article that creates much inconvenience and unhappiness by not being present.

Some women neglect their families shamefully—in some cases the families have reason to be truly thankful.

The trouble seems to be that there are more fortune tellers than there are fortune makers.

It is hard to judge of a man's intelligence by the smoothness of his pate.

It is enough to make a clock suspicious the way some people watch it.

Don't make up your mind until you have good, substantial material and plenty of it to use in the process.

The man who really knows how to do a thing isn't around making a loud and continuous outcry about it.

Many a man is tagged a fool solely because we judge entirely by results.

The easiest way to climb the ladder of success is to possess and keep in active service both a push and a pull.

His Firstborn.

The proud and happy father,
Erect, sedate and strong,
Who takes the baby buggy
And pushes it along
Imagines all his fellows
With jealousy are mad
Because he owns a baby
That looks just like its dad.

He feels that men and ladies
Must look at him and say,
"My, what a fine procession
Is passing down this way!"
And then he steps up lively
And elevates his chest
Until he puts in danger
The buttons on his vest.

It does not as he passes
Occur to him that some Might point him out to others
With a derisive thumb
Or say they'd bet a cooky
Could they but read his heart
He'd rather see a ball game
Than push a baby cart.

The father with his firstborn
Moves on as in a dream.
He thinks himself and baby
Present a charming team.
When several small attractions
Are added to his flock
He does it as a duty.
Not for the pleasant shock.

Unresponsive.

"I have a bone to pick with you."

"Indeed!"

"But I have."

"Then you ought to be muzzled."

Read the Signs.

"He was sadly in need of a manicure."

"How do you know?"

"I could see."

"Why, man, he did not remove his gloves!"

"I could tell by his ears."

Lucky Baby.

The baby and the bumblebee
Are playing on the lawn.
The bumble has the start, you see,
And that's the only reason that they keep on playing.

No Argument There.

"Have I the right to kill myself?"

"I don't know anything about your right."

"Well, have you the right to kill yourself?"

"That is none of your business."

His Estimate.

"It is as much as my life is worth to go through that dark alley at night."

"Much as your life is worth?"

"Yes."

"About $1.50, say?"

Chance For an Attraction.

"You find it hard to make a living."

"Yes, indeed. All avenues appear to be closed to me."

"What a pity you were not born a two headed calf."

Pity.

"He is a good talker."

"Yes; too bad too."

"What is?"

"That his talk isn't good."

Progression.

The candidate was on the stump
And dealing out the "con."
A natural place it seemed, for he Was up one later on.

AMUSEMENTS.

Keith's Theatre.

One of the most important announcements of the season is made for Keith's theatre, the week of October 5, when La Sylphe, the classic dancer, will make her first appearance in Boston. This exponent of the biblical dances has been the sensation of New York the past six months and was the first of a long line, who entered into this form of entertaining when it became popular. The only real rival of the Slyphe has been Maud Allan, who has been a London sensation for more than a year. La Sylphe is strikingly, if not daringly ,original in her conception of the dances described in the Bible, and her appearance at Keith's will undoubtedly be one of the events of the season.

Boston Theatre.

For the opening of the regular season of the Boston Theatre Stock Company, on Monday, October 5, Mr. B. F. Keith has arranged a production that is sure to attract wide spread attention. With a lavish expenditure, and one of the largest companies ever put on in stock, he will present E. H. Sothern's greatest success, "If I Were King," a historic and romantic play in four acts by Justin Huntley McCarty. This is a play of the period of Louis XI, in which Francis Wilson, the poet adventurer, is made the leading character, becoming involved in court intrigue and winning the affections of a court lady, in which he is so successful that the death sentence is commuted to life imprisonment.

Orpheum Theatre.

The Orpheum theatre, Boston, under the management of William Morris, Inc., resumes its place as a vaudeville house on Monday, Oct. 5 and matinees will be given every day. The first week's list is an unusually good one, and is headed by William Courtleigh & Co. in George V. Hobart's little classic "Peaches." "The College Girls and the Teddy Bears" is a bit from the musical comedy success of last season at Blaney's, in New York. It is a very amusing spectacle and pleases the kiddies and those of more years who have not yet lost an interest in youthful life and action. Grace Cameron, the original "Dolly Dimples," wears a sheath gown of eccentric cut, and makes a number of costume changes in her remarkable singing act. Cliff Gordon, the best German stump speaker on the stage today, has a lot of new talk in his character of the German politician. Among the novelties on the Orpheum's first bill are the Taylor Twin sisters in a skating act which is lively and full of exciting tricks, and Canfield and Carleton in a unique sketch called "The Hoo-doo."

Castle Square Theatre.

It is still further evidence of the enterprise of Messrs. Gulesian and Craig and of their desire to give their patrons the best that the theatrical world affords, that they have secured "Strongheart" for production at the Castle Square theatre next week. From beginning to end "Strongheart" makes a strong appeal to our best feelings and emotions, and it is in many ways so thoroughly a play of the strenuous life that President Roosevelt could not help but give it his approval, for it is a typical of everything that he believes in and encourages. All playgoers will be glad to hear the news that Mary Hall, one of Boston's actresses, and some seasons ago leading lady of the Castle Square and Empire Stock companies, has been especially engaged to appear at the Castle Square for a limited series of performances. She will make her debut a week from Monday in "The Stubborness of Geraldine."

Quincy Locals Briefly Told

Smelts are biting.

Business is better.

Supt. Charles Sherburne reported 197 in attendance at the Point Sunday school last Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Howard Rogers of Hancock street are being congratulated on the birth of a son.

George Craig, Jr., the new janitor at the Massachusetts Field school, was appointed from the civil service lists.

Bethany church and the Washington Street church were well represented at the conference on Tuesday, in Stoughton.

Rev. Edward Anderson of Presidents Hill observes the 50th anniversary of his ordination to the gospel ministry, Oct. 11 and 13, and his former parish at Quincy Point are, planning some special features in connection with that anniversary. It is expected that the Colonel will preach there Sunday Oct. 11th.

Six public hearings before the City Council on the acceptance of new streets are advertised today. The hearings are for the meeting of Oct. 19. The streets upon which hearings will be held are Franklin street, Broadway (Ward Six) Everett street, Marlboro street, Murdock street and Quarry street extension.

The new scout cruiser Birmingham built at Quincy, sailed Wednesday morning from the Charlestown navy yard, for Newport, R. I. There she will take on board several government officials and then go to Rockland, Me., for her final acceptance trials. She will probably be back at the navy yard about, Oct. 9.

Mrs. Edmund Pope is visiting her daughter, Mrs. Elijah Hall of Newbury avenue. Recently she had a fall which, being in her ninety-sixth year, was feared would have serious results. However, no harm seemed to be done, and Mrs. Pope is walking about again with assistance. She is genial and happy and has many friends in Atlantic.

The rain Thursday night was the hardest for several weeks, and did an immense amount of good. There were some slight sprinkles during the afternoon, but the real hard rain did not come until the late afternoon and early evening. As the evening wore on the rain increased, and at 10 o'clock it come down in good shape. The rain was much needed and did a great amount of good.

If all the City officials at the Brockton fair on Thursday could have been gathered together there would have been quite a bunch of them. Among those seen were: Commissioner Bainbridge, City Treasurer Curtis, Michael Shea of the Street department, and Walter Sargent of the Sewer department. There were probably others hidden away in the quarter stretch and grand stand.

Marathon Race And Other Sports

There were 42 runners in the Marathon race when they passed through Milton this morning.

J. W. O'Mara of North Cambridge, was the first man to enter the fair grounds in the big Brockton Fair Marathon today. He ran the 25 miles from Boston in fine style, and when he broke the tape after his one lap around the track, he was in excellent condition, considering the gruelling race.

Last night's rain put a damper on the nightly training stunts of the Fore River football team, but the trainer had the boys going through exercises in the clubroom, after which each received a vigorous rubdown. The team goes to Fall River on Saturday to try its science on the Rovers. This is considered the hardest team they have to face, and it is the only team they have failed to defeat this year. They played them a 3-3 tie, in the first game of the season, but at the pace they are travelling now, the Rovers are liable to get the short end in Saturday's contest. The boys have been out every night this week training, and the manager says they are in the pink of condition. The line-up will be the same as in the previous games this season.

"Dan" Howley of Weymouth, who has been catching for the Indianapolis team of the American association, has returned to his home for the winter.

There is talk of a basket-ball league being formed between teams representing Braintree, Holbrook, Weymouth, Randolph and Stoughton, for the coming season. Why couldn't Quincy get into this league with a team? Quincy used to have basket ball a few years ago and it was a paying proposition. Get together and put a team in the field this year.

Newsy Budget From Shipyard

Commencing Monday, October 5, the hours in the ship and engine works will be as follows, until further notice: Monday to Friday, inclusive, 7.00 A. M. to 12 Noon, 12.30 to 5.15 P. M. Saturday, 7.00 A. M. to 12.15 P. M. The hours of labor in the drawing offices, general office and forge will remain as at present.

The Regal Shoe Co. is having 15 knives made at the shipyard. Those used by the Douglas Shoe Co. are also manufactured here.

A large new fire-proof corrugated sheet-steel garage has been erected by the company on its land on Howard avenue known as the Snow property. It is large enough to accommodate ten automobiles of the largest size.

Between the main storehouse and the pattern storage a new large store house is going up in which the immense quantities of stock and warehouse rivets will be put under cover.

Two auto wheels are being altered in the yard for J. Nicholson.

At the main gate inside the yard, a long house has been built for the accommodation of the workmen who use wheels in getting to and from their work. This will certainly be appreciated.

William Walker is being congratulated by his friends upon the arrival of a nine-pound baby boy at his home.

Mr. Thornton, government inspector in the bureau of steam engineering, is enjoying his annual vacation.

The U. S. first-class Curtis turbine battleship North Dakota was 50.10 per cent complete Sept. 1, against 40.50 per cent of the Delaware, a sister-ship building at the works of the Newport News Shipbuilding & Drydock Co., Newport News, Va. In spite of the fact that the Delaware was started during the month before the North Dakota the Quincy ship is ten percent ahead in the great race which the whole naval world is watching.

DEAFNESS CANNOT BE CURED.

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

Forward Passes At Quincy High

Quincy plays her first game Saturday, when she lines up against the team from Medford High. Medford is more in Quincy's class than Everett, and it ought to be a win for the home team.

Quincy did remarkably well on Tuesday to hold Everett to 12 points. Last year Everett ran up 29 points and the year before 28, while Quincy was unable to score.

If the High school boys had a little more snap and dash they would be a better team. They seem afraid to run with the ball when they get it, and they don't hit the line hard enough. This could be remedied if the backfield did not play so close to the line. Did you notice the Everett backs? They had a flying start, and when they hit the line it was hard to stop them.

That trio, Brickley, Brock and Lansing of the Everett team are certainly the goods. They were together in every play on Tuesday, pulling and pushing each other and forming interference for one another every time either one carried the ball.

Somerville, who plays Quincy in Somerville on Oct. 13, played a 0-0 game with Groton on Wednesday.

Hyde Park High was swamped by Waltham—Wednesday 72-0. The Watch City boys always have a crack team.

Brockton High and Roxbury High played a tie game at the opening day of the Fair at Brockton. Neither side was able to score.

Milton Academy and Milton High met on the gridiron Wednesday, and the High school team went down before the Academy boys by the score of 21-0.

The Roxbury High team which went to Brockton on Tuesday, went against the orders of the head master of the school. As a result the team has been disbanded and the boys are liable to expulsion from school for this insubordination. They say, however, that they played as an independent team and did not intend to disobey orders.

New York Still Leads In National League Pennant Race

For an off day in baseball the few games that were played yesterday were of vast importance to the pennant chances of the three leading clubs in the National League race. New York played two games in Philadelphia and was only able to get an even break, while Chicago defeated the Cincinnati team at the latter's home grounds. The results in these games caused the New Yorks to fall back two points in their percentage and the Chicago club to draw two points closer to New York. The standing of the three first teams in the National League is as follows:

	Won	Lost	Pct
New York	94	54	.635
Chicago	95	55	.633
Pittsburg	95	55	.633

At Philadelphia:	R	H	E
New York	4	9	1
Philadelphia	3	10	1

Batteries—Mathewson and Needham; Corridon, Richie, Dooin and Jacklitsch.

Second game:	R	H	E
Philadelphia	6	9	0
New York	2	4	2

Batteries—Covaleskie and Dooin; Wiltse, McGinnity and Needham.

At Cincinnati:	R	H	E
Cincinnati	0	2	4

Batteries—Reulbach and Kling; Spade and Schlei.

At Brooklyn:	R	H	E
Brooklyn	2	8	3
Boston	1	5	0

Batteries—McIntyre and Dunn; McCarthy and Graham.

American League

Only the second division teams of the American League played yesterday, the leading teams being on the road. This leaves the standing of the leaders as it was after Wednesday's games, as follows:

	Won	Lost	Pct
Detroit	87	61	.588
Cleveland	87	62	.584
Chicago	85	62	.578

At Philadelphia:	R	H	E
Philadelphia	5	8	2
Boston	2	6	3

Batteries—Plank and Lapp; Morgan and Donohue.

At New York:	R	H	E
Washington	1	5	0

Batteries—Chesbro and Kleinow; Johnson and Street.

PRIEST IS HELD AS AN ACCESSORY

One Man Convicted In the San Toro Murder Case

Rutland, Vt., Oct. 2.—A verdict of murder in the second degree was found by a jury against Vito Turciana, charged with the murder of Accarito San Toro. As soon as this trial was completed a jury was empanneled for the trial of Vincenzo Dioia, who is also accused of murder in connection with the same case, and after this trial is completed it is expected that Rev. Francisco Crociata, who is held as an accessory in the case, will be brought to trial.

According to the contention of the prosecution, the two respondents, Turciana and Dioia, together with others, waylaid San Toro on the night of July 22 in the vicinity of "76" bridge and inflicted wounds which caused his death. It is said that a girl named Black was concerned in the affair and that the plan was to strip San Toro of his clothing and send him home naked and ashamed because of his attentions to the girl, but that in the scrimmage San Toro was fatally shot and stabbed.

ANNOUNCEMENT.

I beg to announce to the former patrons of Miss C. S. Hubbard that BUTTERICK PATTERNS which have been on sale at her store for the past twenty-two years will in future be handled by me exclusively. This company creates and moulds the styles adapted everywhere in the world as the highest standard of dress. It is the only company with permanent connections in every foreign fashion centre. Other companies copy styles after they are introduced by the Butterick Co. Cheap patterns appear on the market from time to time under various names and have short lives. They are dangerous to use so don't risk cutting your cloth from any, except a Butterick. A Butterick is just as cheap in price and they are guaranteed for accuracy and stylishness. Before a tissue paper pattern is offered for sale, a cloth garment is cut and fitted to a living model from every style decided upon. Every month I will receive all the latest styles, and as my stock is complete there will be no waiting for the sizes wanted. COME AT ONCE AND GET A FASHION SHEET. I solicit your patronage on patterns and other goods and assure you that your orders will always receive prompt attention.

The Social Realm

There is a low, sad rustle in the air,
Among the yellow banners of the corn,
The faded sunflower droops her faded head,
The garden border of its wealth is shorn.
A subtle stillness broods o'er all the scene,
The benediction of the year has come;
The sheaves are garnered from the fading field,
The husbandman has sung the Harvest Home. --David Star Jordan.

PRETTY PROGRAM

At the Grand Business Men's Carnival of The Y. M. C. A.

A novelty in the way of an entertainment was the Business Men's Carnival which opened last evening at Quincy Music hall, under the auspices of the Women's Auxiliary of the Young Mens Christian Association. The entertainment was conducted by Mrs. M. A. Harris, the author, with William Weston as piano accompanist. It was a very unique affair and created a great deal of merriment. The attendance was not as large as anticipated although there was a fair sized audience. Any other place but Quincy would have enthused over it.

The scheme of the entertainment was to advertise the various business houses of the city. Twenty-seven had contributed for advertising space for the opening night, and each was given a special sketch varying in length from five to ten minutes. This lengthened the entertainment so that it was 11 o'clock before the curtain dropped on the last act.

The program opened with a march and song of the fairies, with Miss Dorothy Lowe as the Queen. She was attended by sixteen little tots dressed as faries who executed a very pretty march and sang the chorus to Miss Lowe's solo.

The Clothing sold by Remick Bros. was then illustrated by "An Animated Dummy," the characters being R. Picard, C. Coffin and George H. Newcomb.

Twenty-three young ladies led by Miss Minnie Hardwick and gowned as Japanese girls, illustrated "In Old Japan" for Berry Bros. Miss Hardwick sang the solo "My Almond Eyed Boy."

Miss Edith Chapman, illustrated the "Strenuous Life" and sang the solo, "Mandy Lane" for a shoe firm.

The summer girl, illustrating the well known house of D. E. Wadsworth & Co., was a musical number entitled "The Summer Girl." Twenty-four young ladies gowned in charming summer costumes composed the chorus for the solo "There's not another Girlie," which was sung by Miss Bertha Carlson. A loud encore followed the act, but owing to the length of the program encores were impossible.

J. R. Arnold and Elliot C. Johnson represented two Hebrews and told of the good fire insurance policies issued by Oscar Frisk. Their song, "Solomon and Levi," brought down the house.

The only extra on the program was given at this point when Miss Teresa Keating, sang sweetly "Little Yellow Bird."

When the curtain went up for the next number the stage was found to be set with handsome furniture from the house of W. G. Shaw. It was the modern furniture shop and Mrs. A. I. Davis from "Way Back" did her part to perfection. "What's there; it will do no harm to look!"

Miss Gertrude Shaw and Miss Ruth Keating illustrated the use of the toilet articles purchased at E. J. Murphy's.

Miss Ruby Bates and George H. Newcomb in their number formed by consulting the Daily Ledger that Sandberg Bros. was the place to buy wedding presents. The solo "Blossom Land" was sung by Mrs. Mary V. H. Slade.

Fun in a photograph gallery, with Miss Beatrice Morrison and Brewster Walker in the cast, brought down the house. It was very funny.

Mrs. Bertha Coupal sang "The girl with the marcel wave" for H. H. Albee, showing the transformation due to a visit to Miss Mabelle Wales.

Miss Dulah Miller, after visiting her friend Miss Alice Webb, decided to have her new house equipped with electric lights by the Electric Light Co.

Miss Marion Hatch and Robert Sibley did a black face sketch for J. F. Sheppard & Sons.

The cardinal principal of good looks was due to having purchased their supplies at Johnson Bros. market, so said Miss Isabelle Mitchell to Miss Isabelle Williams. Their duet was entitled "Little Bo Peep."

M. S. Nicoll as "Buster Brown" and Miss Lora M. Hunt as "Mary Jane" sang "Smarty" in a musical sketch for McLeod & McQuinn's market.

Miss Ida Poore sang a solo, "Will you be my baby boy," while exhibiting her stunning new fall hat purchased from Miss E B. Collins.

The next number was a tableau "America" illustrating the electrical work of E. S. Becford. Miss Edna Wood posed as "America." She wore a girdle of electric lights. Tiny lights sparkled in her hair and a cluster of lights were at her feet. The effect was very beautiful. Mrs. Slade sang America and the audience arose and joined in the singing. The "Star Spangled Banner" was given for an encore.

Miss Alice Webb and C. B. Nash in a musical sketch illustrated Mr. Nash's new position at a local market. Mr. Nash sang a solo, "When the little pigs begin to fly."

The next number illustrated the Daily Ledger and was one of the best sketches given, causing no end of laughter. Miss Beatrice Morrison made a charming stenographer for Curtis Arnold, the editor; while J. E. Claflin interpreted the office devil true to life. Mrs. A. I. Davis with her contribution on spring brought down the house, but the editor collapsed decided to leave her 20 poems for desided to leave her 20 poems for $500.

Miss Etta Holmes as "Barbara Anne" laid down the law to "Hiram" represented by G. S. Maxwell, when she declared that she would have one of Henry L. Kincaide & Co's Glenwood ranges.

Miss Abbie Penley made a charming cliant for Lawyer Herbert Poore who forgot all about his usual fee when she sang "Will You?"

Miss Daisy Brooks and Miss Muriel Rogers in their act illustrated "A Modern Conscience" for Sanborn & Damon.

Miss Beulah Hatch and A. J. M. Cowe, Jr., had a comical sketch in illustrating "Blue Monday" for a laundry.

Miss Jessie and Miss Edna Fowler had a very pretty musical sketch entitled "Cupid is Captain" illustrating the paints carried by William West-

The sound that came from the platform as the curtain went up for the next number reminded one of a blacksmith shop which it proved to be illustrated. The young men showed how shoes were put on "Refractory steed," and A. L. Hayden sang "The song of armor."

Marion Barker and H. E. Glover, the former as Mrs. Hiram Brown, and the latter as a clerk for R. E. Foy & Co., illustrated how they do business at an up-to-date grocery, where nothing but fresh goods of the best quality are sold.

The last number was a musical sketch entitled "The tailors." The monologue and solo was by Miss Marion Thomas and Robert Davis, with a chorus by eight young ladies and gentlemen.

Tonight's program will include but one or two of the sketches given the opening night. It should be greeted by a large house.

Lady Betty Across the Water

By C. N. & A. M. WILLIAMSON ✱ COPYRIGHT, 1906, BY McCLURE, PHILLIPS & CO.

In the afternoon I was reading in my deck chair, drawn close to Mrs. Ess Kay's side, when that Mrs. Van der Windt whom Sally called a silly old thing, toddled up and spoke to us. "Do come and watch them dancing in the steerage," she said. "It's such fun."

Mrs. Ess Kay likes sitting still on shipboard better than anything else, but it seems that Mrs. Van der Windt is so important that if all the Four Hundred Sally told me about were pruned away except about twenty-five she would be among the number left; so probably that is the reason why Mrs. Ess Kay takes long walks up and down the deck with her, though it makes her giddy to walk, and Mrs. Van der Windt is not in the least entertaining.

She got up now, like a lamb about to be led to the slaughter, except that she smiled bravely, which the lamb would not be able to bring itself to do. "Come, Betty," she said to me, "it will amuse you."

"Yes, do come, Lady Betty," repeated Mrs. Van der Windt. Whereupon I obeyed, little knowing what I was laying up for myself.

Our deck is amidships. Aft, on a level with ours, is the second class deck, and for-rard, down below, like looking into a pit, is the steerage. We walked to the rail, over which quite a number of men were leaning, to see what was going on, and several moved aside to give us room. I didn't like to take their places away, especially as they were laughing and enjoying themselves, and I could hear the sound of dance music coming up from below (such odd sounding music!), but Mrs. Ess Kay murmured to me that I mustn't refuse. "American men are never so happy," she said, "as when they're giving up something for a woman. They're used to it."

An elderly, pinched little man was monotonously scraping a battered fiddle.

And evidently she, as an American woman, was used to taking it. She and Mrs. Van der Windt slipped into the vacant spaces with a bare "thank you," and I had to follow their example. We peered down over the rail, and there was a sight which would have been comical if it hadn't been pathetic.

On rather a rough looking deck, about twelve feet or more below us, a dense crowd was collected around two small squares, which they purposely left open. Besides those little squares every inch was occupied There wouldn't have been any more room for even a baby to sit down than there was in the Black Hole of Calcutta. In the crowd were old men, young men and boys, all poorly dressed, and old women, young women and girls, big and little. They wore crude, vivid colors, and more than half of them had bright handkerchiefs tied over their heads. They scarcely took any notice of the first class passengers staring down superciliously or pityingly at their poor amusements; they were far too much absorbed in the dancing which was going on busily—I can't say gayly—in the two hollow squares. In one of these an elderly, pinched little man who looked almost half witted, was monotonously scraping a battered fiddle for two solemn couples to dance around and around, always on the same axis. But the other "dancing salon" was more lively There a man dressed like a buffoon, with a tall hat, a lobster claw for a nose, a uniform with big red flannel epaulettes and pasteboard buttons covered with gold paper, was pretending to conduct the band. And what a band it was!

It consisted of four sailors, rather sheep faced and self conscious. One musical instrument was a wooden box rigged up with strings and a long handle, another was formed from a couple of huge soup spoons tied together on which the player beat rhythmically with a smaller spoon; the third was a poker dangling from a string banged heartily with an enormous nail as it swung to and fro; the fourth was a queer homemade drum, which looked as if it had been made out of a wooden bandbox.

Somehow they contrived to coax out music of a sort, and a few young men and girls were solemnly gyrating to it in a way to make you giddy even to watch. When a man thought he had had enough or wanted to dance with another girl, he dropped his partner with alarming suddenness, bowed stiffly without smile or word and left her It was evidently etiquette not to speak to your partner. At the end of a dance the conductor with the lobster claw rose looked up to our deck, bowing low, with his hand on his heart, and then all the audience leaning over the rail began fumbling in their pockets if they were men or opening their purses or gold bags if they were women. Down poured a shower of small silver and copper, little boys scrambling to pick it up and hand it to the conductor, who would, Mrs. Van der Windt said, divide the money among the members of his quaint band.

I had a few shillings with me, and I'd been so much amused that I feit like being generous. Luckily mother couldn't see me and scold. I took half a dozen coins—shillings and sixpences—and, wrapping them hurriedly up in half the cover torn off a magazine I was reading, I aimed the little parcel to fall at the comic conductor's feet.

Generally I can throw fairly straight, for Stan took some pains with that part of my education when I was a small girl, but just at that instant some one standing next me moved, knocked me on the elbow and spoiled my aim.

Instead of falling in front of Mr. Lobster-Claw, the parcel hit the ear of a very tall young man among the crowd below, who had been standing with his back to me. He turned quickly, not knowing what had happened, glanced up and caught my eyes, as I was looking down quite distressed.

I had noticed his figure in the crush because he towered nearly a head over every one else, and I had a dim impression that he had good shoulders, but seeing his face gave me a great surprise.

It was as different from all the rest of the steerage faces as day is from night, and somehow it gave me quite a shock that such a man should be among those others, as if something must be wrong with the world or it could not happen. I had even a guilty sort of thrill, as if I had no right to be well dressed and prosperous, staring at him and his companions as though they were a show which we others paid to see—daring to amuse ourselves with the hard, strange conditions of their lives.

I've heard mother say that good blood is sure to prove itself, that a gentleman can't look like a common man even in rags. Stan disputes that theory with her when he isn't too lazy and wants to bet he could so disguise himself that she would take him for a green grocer or a fishmonger, who have the air of being commoner than other men, I think—at least in our village at Battlemead—because they wear fat tufts of curls frothing out over their foreheads from under their caps, which are always plaid and made of cloth.

Anyway, if mother is right this man in the steerage must have the bluest of blood in his veins, for I never saw one with clearer, nobler features. And yet, he doesn't give the impression of a broken down gentleman who has gone the pace and paid for it by stumbling into the depths. I thought, as he looked up straight into my face that first time (and I think still) that no face could be finer or more manly than his. Brown—deep brown it is, like bronze, and clean shaved (not rough and scrubby), with dark gray eyes (I knew at once they were gray because the light struck into them) rimmed with black lashes so long you couldn't help noticing them; black eyebrows and hair short and sleek like Stan's or any other well groomed man one knows. Besides, commonness shows in people's mouths more than anywhere else. It's hard to define, but it's there, and this man's mouth is the best part of his face, unless it's the chin or perhaps the nose, I'm not quite sure which, though I've thought a good deal about them all, because of the mystery of finding such a man in such an unsuitable place. It would be just the same if you saw a tall palm suddenly shooting up in the kitchen garden and couldn't find out how it had been planted there.

I'm afraid I must have shown how surprised I was and admiring, too, maybe (how can one keep from admiring what is fine and noble, whether it's a strange person's face, or the profile of a mountain against a sky at sunset?), for the handsome steerage passenger looked at me a long, long instant as if he were as much astonished as I was, and yet with such a nice look that, instead of being annoyed, I couldn't help being pleased.

In the meantime the little packet of money had fallen on the deck; but, though it had struck him from behind, he seemed to realize exactly what had happened and, stooping down, he picked it up. Then he raised his hand high, so that I could see he had the crumpled ball of paper in it, and edging his way determinedly, but not at all roughly, through the crowd, he opened the parcel and gave the money to the conductor.

"What a splendid looking man!" I said in a low voice to Mrs. Ess Kay. "Isn't it extraordinary that he should be in the steerage?"

"Come away, my dear child," she answered. "I can't have you standing here to be stared at by low creatures like that. The fellow's not in the least splendid looking. He's only a big, hulking animal. Don't take to making up romances about the steerage passengers, my love. They're not worth bothing your little head about, because if they weren't born for that sort of thing, they wouldn't be there, I assure you."

I didn't say anything more, though I was vexed with her, both for being so stupidly conventional and for speaking to me in such a loud tone that she attracted people's attention.

We went back to our deck chairs, and there was nothing to remind me of the little episode except the torn cover of my magazine, on which, I now remembered, Sally Woodburn had scrawled my name over and over again in pencil, just in idleness, while she and I had been talking that morning If Mrs. Ess Kay had known, no doubt she would have been furious that a piece of paper with my name on it should have gone down into the steerage. But I didn't mind, for I remembered that the young man had opened the parcel, given the money to the conductor, and kept the cover, which probably he had soon after thrown overboard or twisted up to light a pipe.

Nothing more happened that day, but there are two nice American girls on board, about my own age or a little older (they seem years older, for they are so charming and self possessed) and Mrs. Ess Kay encourages me to like them, as they are in Mrs. Van der Windt's party. I grew quite well acquainted with them the third day out, and they asked me to go and watch the people in the steerage, who had a trick dog which was lots of fun. I went and saw the bronze young man again. He was standing with his arms folded across his blue flannel shirted chest, leaning against one of the supports of a kind of bridge, looking up toward the first class deck. Our eyes met as they had before, and I was so absurd that I felt myself blushing. I could have boxed my own ears, and though the trained dog really was a pet I didn't stay long.

It is strange how certain kinds of eyes haunt me. You see them in the air, as if they were really looking at you—especially when you are just dropping off to sleep. I think gray ones do this more than others. Perhaps it is because they are more piercing.

But it was the fourth day that the climax came—the climax which has ended by upsetting me so much and has made everything so uncomfortable.

The weather was glorious—all blue and gold after a sulky, leaden day—and there was dancing down on the steerage deck again. Though it was so fine, the water was not smooth like a floor as it had been at first, but broken into indigo waves ruffled irregularly with silver lace and edged with shimmering pearl fringe.

The same performance was going on down there on the crowded deck that I'd seen the first day, and Sally Woodburn and I, who had been walking—counting the times we went around to make two miles—stopped to glance at the show.

FIRE REDUCES HOTELS TO RUINS

Three Large Cottages Also Destroyed at Winthrop Beach

THE FLAMES SPREAD RAPIDLY

Firemen at a Disadvantage Because of Low Water Pressure--Cement Building Unable to Stand Terrible Scorching--Hotel Guests Panic Striken--Conflagration Subdued After Aid Had Been Received

Boston, Oct. 3.—Winthrop early this morning was visited by a conflagration that threatened to destroy the stretch of summer hotels and residences lining the magnificent shore boulevard.

The fine hostelry, Crest Hall, has crumbled into a mass of ruins. Beside it the big Ocean View hotel was reduced to embers and the Millbank villa, with the one-time finely appointed Crest Hall Annex, were burned.

The firemen of the town were from the very first heavily handicapped. Breaking out in Crest Hall, fronting the boulevard at the corner of Ocean avenue, the fire licked up the buildings almost in a twinkling, it seemed.

In a very few minutes the entire block of buildings from Ocean avenue to Irwin street was in flames. Crest Hall is a high structure and built of wood.

Firemen, with hose in their hands from which the water spurted but a few feet, were unable to accomplish much, and many of them even turned to the work of saving household effects.

On the ladders some of the firemen saw them burned beneath them as they stood upon the rounds, and in one instance a fire fighter nearly lost his life by falling two stories into part of the Crest Hall ruins, but was dragged forth by comrades, only to plunge desperately into the work again.

From the very inception of the blaze, Winthrop authorities, seeing full well that the apparatus at hand was entirely inadequate to cope with a conflagration of such size, telephoned to the neighboring district of East Boston for assistance.

Even stricken Chelsea, that on two occasions has witnessed the destruction of the greater portion of its once proud city, sent down one of its steamers to assist in what was to be accomplished. Engine 11, located at Saratoga street, East Boston, made the long run of three miles to the beach at a furious pace, and then even the Boston fire fighters shouted in desperation when they saw the condition of the water pressure. Other engines in the East Boston district were also dispatched to the scene by orders of Fire Commissioner Parker.

Close to the scene of the start of the fire lay the big Young's hotel, and many of the guests of the summer season, who remained there, fearing that they might participate in the enactment of like spectacles presented along the beach, began hurriedly to move out belongings.

Even the cement building recently constructed behind Crest Hall to take the place of that portion of the building destroyed by a fire a year ago could not withstand the terrible scorching to which it was subjected and its interior portions were soon a mass of flames.

Crest Hall has been run by Fred H. Hall as a hotel all the year round, and last night contained in the neighborhood of forty guests.

The cottage of George Millbank, south of the Ocean View, was occupied by Mrs. Larrabee and was valued at $8000. The next cottage to the south was known as the Milford cottage and was occupied by Walter Haines and W. W. Morrisson. This was valued at $20,000. Both these cottages were burned, as was also an unfinished cottage to the north of Crest Hall, owned by M. H. Power, valued at $9000. The cause of the fire is unknown. The total loss will exceed $150,000.

Serious Situation In Bulgaria

London, Oct. 3.—A dispatch from from Sofia says that M. Malinoff, president of the council, has telegraphed Prince Ferdinand, who is making a tour of Europe, to return to Sofia. All the factories capable of supplying war material, the dispatch adds, are working day and night, and preparations for mobilization are being openly pushed forward.

NEWS IN BRIEF

Fire caused considerable damage in the after-hold of steamer Rio Grande, at Mobile, and it was necessary to flood the hold to extinguish the flames. The Rio Grande sank in twenty-three feet of water.

William R. Moran, 65 years old, superintendent at the works of the Bowker & Torrey Marble company, Boston, was almost instantly killed by being buried beneath a mass of falling granite.

Mrs. Joan Dunsmuir, widow of Robert Dunsmuir and mother of James Dunsmuir, lieutenant governor of British Columbia, died at Victoria, B. C.

After deciding to meet next year in Montreal and electing officers, the League of American Municipalities adjourned its annual convention. Montreal won the next convention.

While leaving a building at Boston Harry E. Clark, aged 53, slipped and fell down a flight of steps, sustaining injuries which caused his death.

THE GIANTS DROP BACK

Pittsburg Forges to the Front In the National League Race

Pittsburg is in the lead in the National League pennant race, the two victories won by that club in St. Louis breaking the tie with Chicago and increasing Pittsburg's percentage mark by five points. New York and Chicago both won their games, but, playing single-headers, each gained but two points, New York dropping to second and Chicago to third position. The standing as it has here been figured is left unaffected by President Pulliam's decision last night, declaring the New York-Chicago game of Sept. 23 a tie and finding that Chicago has no claim to a forfeited game on the day following. The standing:

Club	Won	Lost	Pct
Pittsburg	97	55	.638
New York	95	54	.637
Chicago	96	55	.636

At St. Louis:	R	H	E

TURNED ON GAS, WANTED TO DIE

Woman and Her Children Barely Escaped Death

Medford, Mass., Oct. 3.—Following an alleged domestic difference with her husband, Mrs. Anna Hickey, the wife of John J. Hickey, who lives at 12 Harvard avenue, was found unconscious in bed, having been overcome by gas. In the same room were the three children of the couple, Anna, aged 5 years; Margaret, 3 years, and John, 4 months. All the gas jets in the room were open, and the doors and windows tightly closed. One end of a rubber tube was connected with an open gas jet, while the other end was in Mrs. Hickey's mouth.

According to the police and the neighbors, Mrs. Hickey had refused to allow her husband to enter the house Thursday night. It is alleged by the police that the husband had been drinking and that his wife was afraid of him.

Nothing was seen of either Mrs. Hickey or her children during yesterday forenoon. Yesterday afternoon a neighbor whose apartments adjoin those occupied by the Hickeys smelled gas. She notified another neighbor and the police. The house was broken into and Mrs. Hickey and her three children were found unconscious in a bedroom.

The three children were revived last night and seemed to be none the worse for their experience. Mrs. Hickey has not regained consciousness fully, but is apparently in a fair way to recovery. The husband appeared at the house during the afternoon and was locked up on a charge of drunkenness.

Adams Held In Conspiracy Case

Providence, Oct. 3.—Joseph Adams of Rockland, Me., held in $7500 bail at Portland, Me., on a charge of conspiring to conceal the assets of the Young & Holland company of this city, was brought to this city and taken before Commissioner Cross. He was released on bail to appear before the United States court here on Nov. 16.

Actor Goodwin Gets Divorce

Reno, Nev., Oct. 3.—Nat C. Goodwin obtained an absolute divorce from his wife, Jessie D. Goodwin, known as Maxine Elliott. Judge Pike granted the decree on the ground of desertion. There was so semblance of a contest on the part of the attorneys representing Mrs. Goodwin.

SELECTED HISTORY.

Napoleon crossed the Delaware—
Or was it Buffalo Bill?—
The Delaware or Hudson,
The Rhine or some such rill.
I get so mixed on rivers,
Locations, names and dates,
But still I know that some one
Crossed something, history states.

And Washington, the hero,
You know he scaled the Alps
When out one pleasant morning
And red hot after scalps,
Or was it Marco Polo
Who crossed the Andes high?
I know there was some crossing,
For history cannot lie.

Columbus crossed the ocean—
I feel quite sure of that—
And all the folks confounded
Who said the world was flat.
He crossed it in a vessel
Quite small, but rather trim,
Because, as you may reckon,
It was too far to swim.

This crossing and recrossing
Make up a lot of life,
Though one might find a hero
Who never crossed his wife,
And there was bluff King Henry,
The eighth, a turtledove,
Who, as the records tell us,
Was never crossed in love.

Looking Higher Up.

"He fell in love with his schoolteacher, who was five years his senior."

"I suppose she let him down easy."

"She was as considerate as possible."

"Promised to be a sister to him?"

"No; she said she would do her best to be a stepmother to him."

Not Up to Date.

"I don't have much hope for Henry. You see, he is twenty-three years old now."

"But he earns his own living."

"Yes, but he has never yet invented a flying machine."

No Place For Him.

"He'll have to quit the police force."

"Doesn't he like the work?"

"Yes, but the poor man is troubled with insomnia."

Which?

"What have they named the baby?"

"Bill."

"Bill?"

"Yes."

"Cautious parents, aren't they?"

As a Handicap.

"His is what they call a squaw man."

"Married an Indian woman, did he?"

"Well, he married a fine half section of land. I believe an Indian girl was thrown in."

Ever Felt It?

The goldenrod, the goldenrod—
Atchoo! Cachee!—
Upspringing from the prairie sod—
Oh, my! Oh, me!

Its golden spikelets fill the air—
Atchoo! Atchoo!—
With spicy perfume rich and rare.
They do! They do!
It bends its head of purest gold—
Cachee! Cachee!
I gather all my hands can hold—
For heaven's sake take the stuff to the back yard and make a bonfire of it and send for the doctor!

Facts are sensitive things; when fiction gets busy they get so ashamed of themselves.

Some people lie simply because they feel the need of keeping in practice.

Probably your neighbor's sins will eventually find him out, but don't aid and abet him in it.

The best guarantee of a man's honesty is his need of work—and your liberality of payment.

Probably the reason it is hard for some people to concentrate their thought is because it is so difficult to find a space small enough to bring pressure to bear.

Some stories are hard to believe—until belief becomes necessary.

Some people esteem themselves so necessary to the progress of the world that they can do nothing but assert their claim.

When a man has it in for you the best thing to do is to have it out with him.

It is often considered good to be smart, but we can't recall that it has been esteemed exactly smart to be good.

It is curious how a lot of talk against vice is supposed to be an encouragement to virtue.

The Hunters

[Original.]

Marcus Hunter was left an orphan when he was seven years old. He had no brothers or sisters, no home, no money, no anything. An uncle who was well to do took him to his house against his wife's wishes, and the boy's life there was one of misery. When he was seventeen the uncle died, and the aunt turned the boy out of the house. He found a position as clerk in a business house. In ten years he set up for himself.

His relatives who during this period had ignored him now began to nod pleasantly to him when they met him and invited him to their houses. The aunt, who had made life a burden to him, reminded him of the pleasant days that he had spent under her roof and how happy it had made her to be a mother to him.

Just as Mark was getting on his feet in a business way a commercial panic came on. He needed a little assistance to tide him over the crisis and applied to those of his relatives who were able to help him. He began by telling them that he would like to talk over his affairs with them with a view to getting their advice. He got no further than this, for each and every one of them pronounced himself incompetent to advise him. This shut the poor fellow off, as they intended. He failed. Then his relatives dropped him again.

When the commercial storm was over Mark went to work for a man who was a business genius. He took a great fancy to his clerk and promoted him rapidly, finally making him second only to himself. Then the employer died childless and left about all there was of the business to his protege.

Marcus died a multimillionaire. Just before his death he made a will, in which he directed that the house in which he had passed his lonely life—he never married—should be closed by his executor from the day of his death till one week after the funeral, when an auction should take place of everything it contained. No one was to be admitted to the sale except his relatives.

Since he left no direct heirs, most of the relatives were present at the reading of the will, each hoping for a substantial remembrance. When they heard this singular provision and learned that the testator had left no legacy to any one of them they naturally inferred that he had concluded to remember them by leaving their legacies in different articles of furniture. But what a singular way! Ten thousand dollars might be in a hollow cane, while but $1,000 had been placed in a rosewood desk. Yet the cane might be knocked down for a dollar, while the desk might bring $100. Was there ever such a way devised for distributing millions of money? The will further stated that the amount realized from the sale was to be expended by the executor for a monument to the deceased.

When the day of the sale came around it was astonishing how many relatives Hunter had left behind him. There were Hunters innumerable both by name and in reality. A protest was made to the executor that many of them were not related to the testator and should not be admitted. But he argued that by the terms of the will the sale must take place then and there and there was no time to examine credentials.

The crowd were kept waiting while articles were first sold that could not possibly contain anything, such as uncovered crockery. On these there were only such bids as would serve to get them out of the way. But when it came to articles in which stacks of bills could be placed the bidding became furious. As soon as an article was knocked down the buyer wished to get at it, but was informed that he could not have it till after the sale. The bidders had every variety of opinion as to what articles were most likely to contain large amounts, so that anything wooden or hollow brought excellent prices. A kitchen table with a drawer (locked and no key) brought $100, an upholstered sofa $200, a cane fishing rod $150. A stewpan with a hollow handle large enough to contain a dozen $1,000 bonds brought $275. One of the favorites was a plaster bust of Abraham Lincoln. Such busts are usually hollow, and this would naturally attract an ingenious hide. It brought $655 and was the cause of a protracted quarrel between two different branches of Hunters.

Well, the last article was finally knocked down, and buyers were told that they might take away their purchases. A rush was made for the articles, but few were removed. Several purchasers had brought hammers and with these began to smash their articles. The signal was a crack on the head of Abraham Lincoln's bust, which dropped into a couple of dozen pieces. An exclamation of rage went up from the man who had paid the enormous price for it. From that moment the crash of furniture, the ripping of upholstery and the smashing of glass and stoneware were mingled with oaths and exclamations of disappointment. Not a single article knocked down by the auctioneer contained one cent or one cent's worth of property.

The next morning the newspapers announced that the late Marcus Hunter had a few days before his death given away his whole property, $4,000,000, to institutions for the poor.

LARGE LAND SALE.

Papers were passed this morning in one of the largest real estate transfers that has taken place in Quincy for some time. The property transferred comprises a lot containing twenty acres belonging to Mrs. Fanny C. Adams bounded on the northerly side by Sea street and on the easterly side by Palmer street. It extends from Sea street in a southerly direction to near Town river. The purchaser was W. A. Dunham. The price is not named.

HEN THIEF CAUGHT.

Officer Haley while patrolling Squantum street, East Milton, this morning, picked up a man who had a large bag in which were ten hens. The man gave his name as Joseph Robinson, and it afterward developed that he had robbed the hen roost of Josiah Bass. In court he was sentenced to six months in the house of correction.

Bemis Renominated For Councillor

Hon. Albion F. Bemis of Brookline won the Republican Councillor nomination yesterday on the fifth ballot. His rivals were Arthur P. Russell of Quincy and Franklin L. Codman of Boston. Mr. Bemis led on every ballot. On the first he had 99, to 74 for Russell and 36 for Codman. Only 105 votes were necessary, and on the fifth Mr. Bemis had 108. It will be the third term for Mr. Bemis, who has always been found worthy as representative, senator and councillor. He formerly resided at Foxboro.

Baptismal Service By Adventists

The Swedish Adventists, who have been holding religious services in a tent at South Quincy, will have a baptismal service this afternoon at the City bath house. Although the bath house has closed for the season, Jack Starr, the keeper, will open it up so that it may be used as a dressing room for those to be baptized.

Silver Wedding Anniversary

Mr. and Mrs. Harry S. Nicol of Independence avenue were treated to a surprise on Wednesday evening. The occasion was the celebration of the 25th anniversary of their wedding. Our ex-Councilman and his wife were utterly unaware of the little plot their friends were hatching until the door of their fine home was sprung and the host marched in, bearing with them a handsome piece of furniture (a sideboard) which they set in the dining room. They bade Mr. and Mrs. Nicol accept it as a token of the esteem in which they are held by their numerous friends.

Of course Mr. Nicol had to say something, but the unexpected suddenness of the call somewhat stunned him, and it was a moment before he could give voice to an acknowledgement of his surprise and unpreparedness for such an effort. He thanked everybody for remembering him and his wife on such an occasion. Mrs. Nichol was so much affected that she could hardly believe she was not dreaming.

After a few jokes and some banter the surprised couple were invited to get ready and repair to Doble's hall, where preparations for a jollification were in progress. About 150 were present, and an evening of amusement it was with as much vim and enthusiasm as if every one of Mr. and Mrs. Nicol's old time friends had just been treated with some rejuvenating elixir.

Just after Mr. and Mrs. Nicol entered the hall, the formality of introducing them took place, and Mr. Nicol had to respond with a speech. He had had a little time to collect his thoughts, and expressed himself as highly pleased with the honor accorded him and his wife. He said he could hardly realize that twenty-five years had slipped by since they had been made man and wife, but, though he felt about as young as he ever did, he could not help noticing that his old friends were showing signs of advancing years, and he supposed that they also would notice that he too was not just like he was a quarter of a century ago. Of course, he said he was not speaking for Mrs. Nicol, on this subject, because the ladies don't get old nowadays, but he ventured to say that Mrs. Nicol had her reflections on the matter, and if she did not say anything she nevertheless took it for granted that everybody knew she was not the girl she was twenty-five years ago. Time, he said, is the passing moments, and as the evening is getting along let us enjoy ourselves.

Mr. and Mrs. Nicol extended on invitation to all present to visit them in their new home.

The evening was spent in a most enjoyable manner and before parting all wished Mr. and Mrs. Nicol long life and happiness. All joined in singing "Auld Lang syne."

Rev. Albert D. Smith was recognized on Thursday as the new pastor of the First Congregational church, several clergymen taking part in the service, including Rev. G. Wolcott Brooks, Rev. George H. Credeford, Rev. P. B. Davis, Rev. Edward Anderson of Quincy, Rev. F. E. Emrich, D. D., Rev. Roderick Stebbins and Rev. E. N. Hardy, D. D., of Quincy.

The flower, fruit and vegetable show of the Milton Education society was very successful.

Milton Academy vs. Concord High today on the gridiron.

The Republicans of the Milton-Canton district have nominated Roger Wolcott, a son of the late Governor, for Representative to the General Court. In accepting the honor he said that he wished to make plain his position on a number of points. He stated that he is against the abolition of capital punishment; that he is in favor of a proper observance of Sunday, including the prohibition of all noisy pastimes; and is opposed to woman suffrage. Although he formerly worked for the Boston Elevated he stated that he is not prejudiced on that account. Although himself a Spanish War Veteran he said he is not in favor of a preference law for them. If the question of Boston's charter comes up in the next legislature Mr. Wolcott said he should favor simplifying the system and reducing the number of officials.

A man who registered as Orrin Perrin, and who is supposed to live in East Milton, committed suicide at the United States hotel, Boston, on Thursday. The man registered Wednesday night and was found the next day with a bullet hole in his head. He was about 33 years of age.

There was a large crowd on Randolph avenue Friday morning to see the Marathon racers o ntheir way from Boston to Brockton.

Chief Engineer Choate is much interested in the work of Brockton's new horseless engine, as Milton has voted to purchase one for its department.

The Thursday Evening club opened its season's entertainments this week with a whist party.

Milton was well represented at the Brockton fair this week, one party chartering a special car.

WEYMOUTH.

The Pythian Sisterhood held a successful rally at Pythian hall on Monday.

Mrs. Oliver B. Loud and baby daughter left for Oklahoma on Friday of last week. She remained until Thursday with her father, Dr. Shule of Chicago, Ill., and then resumed her journey westward to Lawton, Oklahoma.

The first meeting of the season, of the Susannah Tufts Chapter, was held at the residence of Miss Mary F. Loud of Commercial street, Weymouth. Nineteen members were present. The regent, Mrs. F. O. Sterling was ready with plans for the year's work. The chapter voted to support two free scholarships for the poor white in the southern states. The hostess served ice cream and cake at the close of the session.

The officers of the Monday Club met with Mrs. Jennie B. Worster, at her home Commercial street on Monday afternoon.

Mrs. S. F. Linton of Brooklyn, N. Y., with her grandaughter Dorothy Stockholm has visited Mrs. Eliott Pierce the past three weeks.

Miss M. L. Foye of Brockton was the guest of Mrs. E. C. Richards at lunch on Wednesday.

Mr. Lysander Nash and Mrs. Jeremiah Bailey were guests at the Old Folks Dinner at South Weymouth, Union church. Mr. J. J. Loud was present and male a short address. Mrs. Percy Davidson of Wollaston, Mrs. H. B. Bachelder, Miss M. A. Loud attended the exercises in the afternoon.

A little son was welcomed into the family of Mr. and Mrs. Otis Hollis of Baker avenue on Sunday, Sept. 27th. Congratulations.

Among those who attended the conference of Congregational churches at Stoughton, Tuesday, were Mrs. William H. Bond, Mrs. Derby Tirrell, Miss Avis Smith, Miss Mattie Nash, Miss Martha A. Loud and Miss Mary F. Loud.

The Temple quartet, of which our popular baritone Percy F. Baker is a member left this week for a concert tour of the south.

Miss Irma Skilton, who is training for a nurse at Boothbay hospital, Boston, visited friends in town this week.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter F. Sanborn of Tremont street, accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. Harry Smith of East Weymouth left Friday, in the former's automobile, for a tour of New Hampshire.

After a long illness, Mr. Elzeard Bourke passed away at his home on Tremont street, Thursday afternoon. Mr. Bourke is well known in this town and vicinity, having carried on an express business for many years. Much sympathy is extended to his widow and daughter. Funeral services will be held at his late residence Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock.

It is rumored that a kindergarten school is soon to be opened on Baker avenue.

New System at Johnson Bros.

The way that our trade has taken to our

New Cash and Discount System

demonstrates to our satisfaction that we are giving them just what was needed in Quincy, and we have decided to extend our liberal offer, and will say, that to all our customers who find it impossible to carry their purchases home with them, if they bring or send their order to our store, and PAY CASH for it, we will deliver the same and allow 2% DISCOUNT from amount of purchase.

Now we think that this plan will give everyone a good Square Deal, and every intelligent buyer must see that we are more than doing our share to give them what every cash buyer deserves today, first class goods at a low price.

Now, don't forget our other proposition, that all who purchase goods of us, pay cash and carry their purchase home—we will give a Discount of 5% off the amount of purchase, besides selling our goods at the very lowest mark.

We will make a feature of having some special article each day marked at Genuine Bargain Price.

Now read this over carefully and we feel confident that you can see it just the way that we do—something that is surely needed in Quincy—a high grade of goods sold at a very low price.

Manslaughter Case Dismissed

Dismissed for want of prosecution, was the finding in the district court this morning in the case of Stephen E. Enman, on the complaint charging him with manslaughter at Quincy.

Enman was the motorman on the street car which killed Fannie Gailer, the little Hebrew girl on Water street Sept. 12. When the car reached City Square, Enman was arrested by Officer Riley and was arraigned in court the following morning upon the charge of manslaughter.

The hearing on the case was continued until this morning, that an inquest might be held. The inquest was held before Judge Avery last week. As a result the court ordered the complaint dismissed.

DEAFNESS CANNOT BE CURED

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

RUNNING MATE FOR DRAPER

Three-Cornered Fight Goes to the Floor of Convention

FROTHINGHAM, COLE AND LUCE

Trio of Aspirants For Lieutenant Governorship Have Waged a Hot Contest Since Last Spring--Australian Ballot to Be Used For the First Time In Convention--An Exceedingly Lively "Night Before"

Boston, Oct. 3.—The settlement of a long and animated three-cornered contest for the nomination for lieutenant governor is the feature of the Republican state convention which met here today for the selection of a state ticket and presidential electors.

No opposition is anticipated to the advancement of Lieutenant Governor Draper of Hopedale to the head of the ticket, nor to the renomination of Secretary of State Olin of Boston, Treasurer Chapin of Holyoke, Auditor Turner of Malden and Attorney General Malone of Greenfield.

EBEN S. DRAPER.

For the second position on the ticket, however, three aspirants have been in the field since last spring, and the 1550 delegates, it is anticipated, will be asked to decide between John N. Cole, speaker of the house of representatives; former Speaker Louis A. Frothingham of Boston, and Representative Robert Luce of Somerville.

The caucuses for state delegates were held Sept. 22 and the press returns indicated that Frothingham led in the sentiment of those chosen. Cole promptly and earnestly disputed the accuracy of the figures, and all the candidates continued the campaign with great vigor. As the caucus returns gave no candidate a standing within 100 or more of the 776 votes, a majority vote of the convention necessary to secure the nomination, the contestants announced that the fight would be carried to the convention. At different times reports have spread that agreements had been reached, but to the eve of the convention the three-cornered fight progressed with all the intensity which the near approach of the crisis awakened.

The name of Luce will be presented by Rev. A. E. Winship of Somerville. Cole's name will be placed before the convention by C. H. Bosworth of Springfield and Frothingham's will be offered by United States District Attorney French of Randolph.

The wildest night before that the Republicans ever had at the American house wound up with the promise at Symphony hall of the most rancorous struggle that ever convulsed a Republican state convention. With harmony thrown to the winds, it is to be a smashing, tearing fight from start to finish.

At the close of the evening Speaker Cole's managers sent out a statement charging that the Hibbard machine had rushed Democrats with Frothingham badges into the hotel corridors in an attempt to make a showing for Frothingham, and said that but for the intervention of Cole men Speaker Cole would have suffered violence in his own reception room at the hands of men wearing the red.

Bedlam broke loose. The Luce men, armed with megaphones, shrieked from the balconies at the surging crowds. Long files of Cole, Luce and Frothingham men formed flying wedges, tipping each other over right and left. Hats were lost and collars wilted. The demonstration, however, was not ill-natured.

It was the busiest day that Republican affairs have seen for many a year. The first announcement of the evening was that the Frothingham men had yielded to the demand of the Luce-Cole combination for a secret ballot at the convention today. It is not only the first time that the Republican machine has changed its program at the behest of those opposed to it, but it is the first time that the Australian ballot has been used at a convention in Massachusetts.

BRIGHAM PREFERS BENCH

Carr Is Selected to Lead the Democracy of New Hampshire

Manchester, N. H., Oct. 3.—Declaring that he had no political aspirations and that his present service was both pleasant and congenial, Judge George H. Bingham, who was nominated as the party candidate for governor at the New Hampshire Democratic state convention on Sept. 25, positively declined to accept the nomination.

Previous to the convention Bingham had stated that he was not a candidate and that he would not accept the party leadership in the state campaign. Nevertheless, he was nominated by the convention, and his final and positive refusal to participate in the campaign was made known when the notification committee of the convention formally announced to him the honor which the convention had bestowed upon him.

Judge Bingham stated, in refusing the nomination, that he had spent many years in preparing himself for his present position and that he considered that the office of judge of the New Hampshire supreme court was a greater trust than being governor of the state. By training and experience, he said, he was far better fitted for law than for politics.

While the refusal of Bingham to accept the nomination had been feared, it was thought among the party leaders that he might be prevailed upon to lead the party contest, and much disappointment was expressed at his decision.

The executive committee of the Democratic state committee, acting under the authority vested in it by the last Democratic state convention, met last night in this city and selected Clarence E. Carr of Andover as the party's candidate for governor, succeeding Bingham. Carr is at present chairman of the Democratic state committee. He is a wealthy manufacturer of Andover, although educated for the bar. It is understood that he will accept.

Bryan Replies to Criticisms

Lincoln, Neb., Oct. 3.—Speaking last night before the German Bryan club of Lincoln, William J. Bryan answered the criticisms which had been made of him by Governor Hughes and other Republican leaders that his experience in public life was not sufficient to qualify him for the presidency.

Mr. Bryan asked his audience "why this new-born zeal for experience?" He cited Abraham Lincoln, General Grant, Benjamin Harrison and Mr. McKinley as having had no particular experience previous to their nominations. As for Governor Hughes, who, he said, had laid special emphasis on Taft's experience and qualifications, he declared he had had but two years' experience as governor of the state of New York, and he thought three months ago that he was as well qualified for the presidency as Taft.

Taking up the charge that he may not make wise appointments if elected to the presidency, Bryan insisted that the argument should not be made by a Republican because, he said, for the next two years at least the senate would be Republican and would pass upon all important appointments, thus sharing in the responsibility if any objectionable men are named.

"I am satisfied," he said, "that I can find such excellent men that even a Republican senate will not dare to reject them." After discussing a number of issues he said: "The Republican argument that we hear so much of now is that Democratic success will disturb business. Our contention is that Democratic success will restore prosperity. How can the Republicans threaten us with a panic, when a panic came under the present president and is still upon us?"

Taft Discusses Beet Sugar

Denver, Oct. 3.—In the Denver Auditorium, William H. Taft last night addressed a tremendous throng, setting forth reasons and arguments why the Nebraskan should not be elected. His subjects ranged widely over the various issues of the campaign. He paid his respects to Mr. Bryan several times, and received encouragement from the audience in so doing. One new feature of his address was in handling the subject of the beet sugar industry, which he took as an illustration of Democratic proposals towards the trusts. Beet sugar, he said, was a trust-made article. The Democrats proposed to put all such articles on the free list just to punish the trust. This would, he said, not only punish the trusts, but would also punish many innocent farmers and producers as well.

Roosevelt Again In 1916

Rock Island, Ills., Oct. 3.—"Theodore Roosevelt for president again eight years from now," was the declaration of the president's son-in-law, Congressman Longworth, in a speech he made on the grounds of the Tristate exposition to a large audience that cheered the sentiment again and again.

Mr. Longworth's statement was made during the course of a eulogy and defense of the president's administration. He first proposed that the Republican leader for the next eight years, William H. Taft, should be returned to that office for a second term. Following Taft as president, seriously declared Longworth, Theodore Roosevelt should be returned to the chair.

Revenue Collector Removed

Washington, Oct. 3.—As the result of a report made by the civil service commission, President Roosevelt removed Lincoln Avery, collector of the port at Port Huron, Mich., and also directed the removal of Charles H. Dailey, special agent of the treasury at that place. The civil service commission found proof of charges of serious violations of the rules and regulations in regard to campaign assessments, and which also involved, on the part of Dailey, "pernicious activity in politics."

GOT $3000 WORTH OF BOOTY

Arrest of Young Men on Charge of Burglarizing Jewelry Store

Boston, Oct. 3.—George Kelly, aged 20, of Lawrence, and Arthur McAuliffe, 18 years old, of Boston, were arrested on Salem street, the Jewish pawnshop district, on the charge of robbing the W. S. Lee & Co. jewelry store in Salem early yesterday morning. At the police station a large quantity of jewelry, said to be worth in the vicinity of $3000, was found on the men. Kelly has a police record in Lawrence, and McAuliffe has a record in this city.

Another arrest was made shortly before midnight. Michael Driscoll, aged 17, was taken into custody at a West End hotel by Inspector Rooney, and the police claim that the young man made what he called a "clean breast" of the theft of the jewelry, in which he is said to have stated that McAuliffe was not concerned directly in the crime, and that he and Kelly had entered the store by means of a transom.

According to the police, Driscoll said that they then came to Boston and went to a West End hotel, where they met McAuliffe, and that McAuliffe and Kelly went out together to dispose of the booty, which they were endeavoring to do when arrested.

SMALL CHANCES OF SAVING YANKEE

Cruiser Is Now In Extremely Precarious Position

Newport, R. I., Oct. 3.—Requisition for additional hose to be used in pumping out the cruiser Yankee, ashore on the Spindle, leads to the belief that the cruiser suffered badly in the hard blow yesterday. No direct word as to the condition of the cruiser has been received, however.

The boats of the cruiser have been swung on their davits and the flotilla about the wreck is in readiness to take off the crew whenever it becomes necessary. The wind is blowing hard from the northwest and there is a nasty sea.

Mariners about here who have visited the scene of the Yankee's mishap are skeptical of her chances in getting off. They report her position as extremely precarious and many express the belief that even with favorable conditions the Yankee will be a total loss.

Commander Marsh received word last night asking for fifteen-inch hawsers, which he will secure from the Charlestown navy yard, and, according to the present plans, efforts will be made to pull off the Yankee on Thursday.

O'Mara Wins Marathon Race

Brockton, Mass., Oct. 3.—Almost a repetition of the collapse of Dorando, the Italian runner who failed of victory in the last 100 yards of the Olympic Marathon, was the victory of J. W. O'Mara of Cambridge in the Marathon run from Boston to Brockton. Staggering toward the finish line on the track at the fair grounds, the dazed O'Mara stopped in front of the judges' stand, fifty feet from the finish. He was on the verge of collapse. Quickly he realized that his race was not won. He gathered himself together and crossed the finish line. O'Mara's time was 2 hours, 35 minutes, 25 4-5 seconds for the distance of about twenty-three miles.

Graft Revealed In New York

New York, Sept. 3.—Frank E. Brown, chief of the electrical bureau of the department of water supply, gas and electricity, was arrested in connection with exposures made at an investigation into the conduct of the license bureau. Gaetano d'Amato, deputy chief of the license bureau, was previously arrested, charged with having extorted money from the proprietor of a moving picture machine show. Witnesses told of "renewals" of licenses which never had been issued. The men to whom these "renewed" licenses were issued paid on an average of $20 each for them, whereas the regular price for licenses was $4.

The Business Situation

New York, Oct. 3.—R. G. Dun & Co.'s Weekly Review of Trade says that seasonable weather has stimulated retail trade materially, and the better distribution to consumers brought a larger movement in wholesale and jobbing departments, but in most leading industries there is still hesitation. On the whole there is improvement in mercantile collections, yet in many lines, especially at the east, irregularity is noted.

Fireman Shocked to Death

Portland, Me., Oct. 3.—While fighting a small fire in the Congress Square hotel last night, Charles Barrett was almost instantly killed when he received 2000 volts of electricity in grasping an electric light wire which had become crossed with telegraph wires. Barrett had resigned from the department and had volunteered to work last night until a new man was assigned to his position today.

Charges Against a Minister

Rochester, Oct. 3.—Charges of a serious nature have been brought by the Western Methodist Book concern against Dr. Drier, who is superintendent of the Central Methodist district, who lives here. In executive session, Bishop Cranston presiding, it was decided that the charges be heard before a select committee of fifteen. Rev. Dr. Winchester will preside.

OUR HOSPITAL

(Legal Title: City Hospital of Quincy)

INCORPORATED 1889

The Trustees of the City Hospital of Quincy earnestly appeal for donations and bequests for the Endowment fund. This now amounts to over $60,000, but a fund of at least $100,000 is urgently needed.

Five Thousand Dollars ($5,000) will endow a Free Bed to which such name may be given as the Donor may desire, but any sum for this noble institution which stands ready to serve us all in the hour of need will be most gratefully received.

The Secretary, TIMOTHY REED, Adams St Quincy or the Treasurer, RICHARD D. CHASE Savings Bank Building, Quincy, will be very glad to confer with any one or to answer any inquiries.

THE

Young Men's Christian Association

OF QUINCY, MASS.

(Legal Title—Incorporated 1892.)

The Directors of the YOUNG MEN'S CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION of Quincy, with a firm faith in the great value of the work which is being done for the young men and boys of our city, make their appeal for donations and bequests toward paying the mortgage indebtedness on the new Association Building. When the building is free from debt it will serve as an endowment, as there is a goodly income from the dormitories.

Should the Donor prefer, such sum as might be given could be used as an Endowment for an educational class or classes, the Boys Department, or as a special fund in other ways, and could be designated with the name of the Donor.

The Treasurer, WILLIAM F. CUMMINGS, 7 Clive Street, Quincy, or the General Secretary, ERNEST G. GAY, will be happy to answer inquiries.

NOT A SUCCESS AS A PROPHET

Gardner Thinks Bryan Is Perhaps Not Sorry For It

PARTIES' RECORDS COMPARED

Reasons Between Labor and Capita Discused at Length--Dingley Tariff Bill Has Well Served Its Purpose, but Needs Adjustment--Roosevelt Rejected Nomination of 1908--Draper Has Cast Lie at Traducers

The address of Congressman Augustus P. Gardner of Hamilton, permanent chairman of the Republican convention, was warmly received. The address follows:

Mr. Bryan as usual announces that he stands for the plain people and I acknowledge that it is some satisfaction to find that in one matter at least he enunciates the same doctrine which he has always preached. Yet, after all, can any of you remember a single occasion when Mr. Bryan did not proclaim himself in favor of that group or that policy which for the time being appeared to have most votes on its side? For any legislator who keeps his ear to the ground it is an easy matter to predict the position which Mr. Bryan will take on any current question, even before the great Commoner himself has formulated it. Just so the mariner can tell the direction from which a breath of wind is coming before he notes the gyration of the weathercock.

As a prophet, I think you will agree with me, Mr. Bryan has not proved himself a conspicuous success. Perhaps he is not sorry for it, after all, as the industrial collapse and abject poverty which he foretold in 1896 has been supplanted by a period of great prosperity in which, if reports say true, Mr. Bryan has managed to participate to a marked degree.

I do not suppose that he is equally well satisfied with the failure of his presentiment that he would some day be President of the United States. I have just as good a right to a presentiment as has Mr. Bryan, and I am obliged to confess to a feeling that he will again prove to be mistaken and that the White House will continue to forego the pleasure of his occupancy.

The Republican Record

I do not care to recall in particular to your attention the glorious record of our party for fifty years. The tale is twice told already. We cannot live on our record unless we follow it with present action, although it may well serve the people as a guidepost to the road we shall pursue in the future.

Mr. Bryan in his letter of acceptance grudgingly admits that the Republican party has enacted some good legislation in the last few years, and then with gentle chiding he bases his claim for the Democratic party on the ground that there are still some subjects left on which to legislate. Following the example of our own candidate, I readily admit that there is still much to be done and, what is more, we have promised to do it. In spite of all the silly filibustering of the minority, do it we shall.

I charge the Democratic minority in the present house of representatives with the adoption of a deliberate program for impeding the public business by availing themselves of every opportunity for delay which the rules afford. If we have not completed all the legislation we desire it is not the Republican party or the procedure of the house which is to blame, but that party which in its platform assails the very rules which they themselves have made necessary.

No one would rejoice more than I if the rules of the house could be relaxed and I hope to live to see them changed when the proper day arrives; but I tell you this, gentlemen: When the time comes for us to enact the legislation which we have promised the people, if we have a majority of the house of representatives and if the Democrats persist in their tactics of delay and obstruction, the stringency of the Reed rules will not be abated one jot or one tittle till our task is accomplished.

Labor

The relations between capital and labor must ever be a matter of great concern for any party in a Democratic nation which desires to remain in power. The Republican party does not approach this question either from the point of view of the man who thinks that any demand of labor must necessarily be wrong and unwise nor from the point of view of the man who believes that any demand must necessarily be just and proper.

No one knows better than the president that every just and wise demand of labor must be met, on penalty of defeat at the polls. The Republican party follows its president in readiness and eagerness to fulfil to the uttermost the just and wise demands of workingmen made through their leaders or in any other way that they may think best. We have promised to meet your just demands, workmen of the United States, and we shall fulfil that promise, be the opposition what it may. But we shall not abandon the trust imposed on us by the whole nation at the dictation of any one man. Be he master workman or master capitalist we shall render justice, no more and no less, let the threats of reprisal be what they may.

The platform of the Republican party relative to the writ of injunction follows the line of the Gilbert bill introduced in the house of representatives two years ago after full conference, as the president tells us, with the department of justice and with various leaders who have the cause of labor deeply at heart. President Gompers expressed himself as dissatisfied with that bill and in fact with any anti-injunction bill which did not embody his particular ideas on this particular question. Failing to persuade the Republican party to cast its views of fairness and wisdom to the winds at his behest, he turned with success to Mr. Bryan and in return; so far as in him lies, he has undertaken to persuade organized labor to support the Democratic party at the polls. Now, if I understand correctly the full meaning of the matter, when a man joins a labor organization he undertakes loyally to refrain from cutting prices on his fellow-workman either directly by accepting lower wages or indirectly by working longer hours, all of which is perfectly sensible and in accordance with the principle of collective bargaining which evolution has brought us. On the other hand, as I understand it, his surrender of a workman's economic isolation in no way implies a surrender of his political independence and he is therefore at liberty to act at the polls in accordance with his preferences, his interests and his beliefs.

What is the workman offered in return for his services in backing up President Gompers in his particular views with regard to injunctions? He is receiving an invitation to assist in turning over the government to the hands of the southern Democrats, who, as I need hardly tell you, by a large majority control the Democratic party both in the senate and house. Think of it, gentlemen, the workman is invited to turn over his interests to legislators who were brought up in the belief that the proper relation between capital and labor is best expressed by a system under which capital owns labor, to be bought and sold as a chattel on the block of the slave auctioneer.

"Yes," says the Bryan man, "but that was in the old days of Jefferson and Jackson. Slavery has been dead for nearly half a century.' Dead it is, thank God, and no thanks to the Democracy; but its baleful influence exists unchanged in the statute books of every southern state. Do you mean to tell me, ye Bryan men from the south, that labor has its due in your states where women and little children are still the unrestricted prey of greedy employers?

The Tariff

After all, what most interests and affects the workman is the amount of his wages and the steadiness of his employment. I don't think that all the soothsayers of the Democratic party are likely to induce him to lose sight of this nor of the beneficial results which high tariffs have brought him. It is a singular fact and I doubt if it is a coincidence, as the Democratic party would have us believe, that wages and steady employment have always kept pace with the fluctuation of our tariff laws.

In 1892 a wave of discontent swept over the land and the Democratic orators persuaded the workman that a tariff could be devised under which everything that he bought would be cheaper and yet the articles which he made would sell at the same old price and yield the same old wages, if not even higher. It is this identical jugglery which we are again promised. Where the steel worker lives, whether or not he is in the employ of a trust, he is told that he has nothing to fear on the score of his wages or the steadiness of his employment, and yet Mr. Bryan promies us to put steel on the free list as a trust product. Now, we all should rejoice if the poor workman could buy his steel rails and bridges somewhat cheaper, but if this beneficent result is to be attained by reducing his wages or throwing him out of employment it seems to me that the railroad and building companies might possibly reap the only benefit. However, the Democrats would have the fun of smashing a trust along with all its small competitors and the workmen it employed. It is always possible to arrest the course of a disease by killing the patient.

That good old ship, the Dingley tariff law, has been sailing the seas now these eleven years and the Republican party has decided that the time has come to put it in the drydock for such repairs as may be necessary. It has been a staunch and seaworthy vessel and many an American mouth has it filled, but, like all good instruments, from time to time it needs adjustment.

Repairing a ship, by the way, is one thing, while scuttling her and sending her to the bottom is quite another. Scuttling, however, is what is promised us by the Democracy in whispers or in screeches, in unlimited or in limited degree, according to the particular interests or views of the different communities that they wish to influence.

I feel safe in promising you that two principles will be observed when the Republican party revises the tariff. We shall not lose sight of the imperative necessity for preserving and, if possible, raising the standard of living of American workingmen. Neither shall we forget the fact that if a man, be he employer, employed or trader, desires to make money he must not squirm with jealousy because some one else is making money also.

Roosevelt

I believe that the American people in 1898 wished to elect the same president that they elected in 1904. Contemptible persons, judging others by themselves, felt convinced that a shrewd plan was afoot by which our present chief magistrate was endeavoring to secure a renomination without apparently breaking his word not to run again. How they misjudged him, time has shown Never did office so eagerly seek the man. Never did man so persistently and sternly refuse the office.

Arguments did not shake him, calumny did not frighten him. From first to last he steadily thrust aside the temptation. He had given his word and that was enough for Theodore Roosevelt.

The ten commandments may not be new; but there is one of them which cannot too often be repeated to erring man, be he high or be he low. "Thou shalt not steal," whether you be seller or buyer, whether you be employer or employed, whether you be rich or poor, whether you be corporate or individual. If you disregard this commandment, as many have lately found to their cost, don't look for mercy from the head of this outraged nation, but beware of his strong arm and his inflexible will. But if you suffer from injustice, if you are oppressed by the mighty, you will not plead in vain to the same man whose knightly face is never turned away from misfortune. Like Launcelot, he is head of all Christian knights, the kindest man who ever strake with sword, the sternest knight to the mortal foes of his country that ever put spear in rest.

Taft

But to Launcelot it was not given to complete his work. The finding of the Holy Grail fell to his noble son, Sir Gallahad. Fortunate indeed was Launcelot to be able to bequeath his sword to so worthy a successor; but thrice more fortunate a country whose rod of empire passes from the hands of its greatest citizen, not to some paltry time-server, but into the hands of a tried and true friend of the nation, an upright and noble champion of truth, an unswerving foe to wrong, into the hands of another Gallahad, William Howard Taft. On the bench in Ohio, as a ruler of the Philippines, in the cabinet at Washington, over and over again he has been tried and not found wanting. Again and again the metal has been struck and has always rung out as the truest of steel.

His doctrines are not fashioned to the varying hour, he does not preach one faith at one time and another faith at another time; nor does he pose as the one true friend of the people in 1896 only to throw himself four years later into the foul embrace of Tammany Hall.

He does not pose as the especial champion of any particular class of group of men, but from first to last he is the true friend of every honest American, be he rich or poor, black or white, high or low.

Guild

My friends, there is a noticeable similarity today between the political situation in the United States as a whole and the political situation in Massachusetts. Here too at home a great chief magistrate is surrendering the sceptre to a great successor.

Whether fortunately or unfortunately, I do not pretend to say, this old commonwealth never chooses the same governor more than three years in succession. Since the Civil war many distinguished men have been our chief magistrates, but not once has the rule been broken. Were it not for that fact, he would be an ignorant man indeed who could doubt for a moment that the people of Massachusetts by a large majority would again summon to their head a man who stands out as a mighty man among mighty men, as a shining star in a brilliant constellation, the man whose firm grasp still holds the helm of our ship of state. Who is there among you who would not be proud to cast another vote for Curtis Guild?

Draper

But, for weal or for woe, the helm is passing into other hands. A man stands ready to receive it who has grown in the estimation of the people year by year as perhaps no other man has grown in my political memory. Man after man who voted against him three years ago has frankly acknowledged the error and has now become his warmest partisan. Never, so far as I can remember, has any man in public life in Massachusetts been the object of such persistent misrepresentation and vituperative attack as he whom we are about to nominate for our leader. His acts have cast the lie in the teeth of his traducers in a way that he who runs may read. The sense of fair play has been aroused among our people to such a degree that his popularity bids fair to bear a just relation to his worth as a man, his ability as an administrator and his humanity as an employer of labor.

It is easy for the demagogues to mislead for a time those voters who only see a candidate in the distance; but, thank Heaven, they cannot mislead the voters in his own small town where his neighbors know him and his workmen reside. You and I, my friends, do not know what the labor conditions are in Hopedale, no more does the yellow press nor the howler on the Democratic stump; but the whole state may learn the story and act accordingly by giving heed to the voices of the people of Hopedale, most of whom, directly or indirectly, draw their living from the great factory there.

Once a year those workmen and those neighbors there throng to the polling booths, each of them to express in secret on his ballot his opinion of the foremost citizen of his town. No chance there for the oppressive employer or the unneighborly magnate to shield himself from the just condemnation of his fellow-citizens.

The day of reckoning came Nov. 5 last year. The citizens of Hopedale solemnly and secretly registered their opinions and when the day was done their verdict went out to the country by the overwhelming vote to 411 to 17 that the man they believed in and the man they trusted was Eben S. Draper.

During the month of October every eye is turned toward the oval

Our purpose in advertising in this space is to turn the eyes of everybody, during the whole year, toward the "Oval". Of course we mean "Creamalt" - the oval loaf.

For beauty of shape and for delicious nuss of flavor, you won't tackle anything in the class of Creamalt. It's the only "Oval" people never "kick" at. Game starts next time you eat.

GENERAL TIEUP IN LYNN SHOPS

Certain to Occur If Lasters Carry Out Their Strike Order

CAMPAIGN ALREADY BEGUN

Great Demonstration In Front of Factory Where Men Who Wished to Join Strikers' Ranks Were Locked In--Workmen Jumped Over Fence and Joined Crowd Outside--Soon Followed by Fellow Employes

Lynn, Mass., Oct. 3.—The 1200 lasters who went on strike in fifty-four of the shoe factories of this city at noon yesterday lost no time in starting a campaign in an effort to add to their ranks the men who still remained at their machines, and in the afternoon the first of a series of demonstrations was held.

About 1000 strikers gathered at the union headquarters and marched to the factory of Hennessy & Thompson at West Lynn, where the lasters had remained at work, one and a half miles away. Finding the gates of the factory locked, they congregated in front of the building and made a great uproar, hooting and yelling, and urging the men to quit their work and join them.

Finally one of the lasters in the factory jumped out of a window and, standing on the fence in front of the building, made a speech to the strikers. He was an Armenian and in broken English he made known the attitude of the men who remained at work in the building. He said that he and a majority of the lasters sympathized with the strikers, but that at noontime, when the strike was declared, the gates of the building were closed and the men were locked in.

Concluding his remarks, he jumped off the fence into the crowd and called to his fellow-workers to follow him, which the most of them did. Afterwards many of the Hennessy & Thompson lasters started back to their room after their kits, but were refused admittance. The strikers remained at the factory until late in the afternoon, continuing their demonstration.

On their way back to the headquarters the strikers visited the Albert Creighton & Son factory on Willow street. They arrived there just as the employes were leaving the factory for the day, and the lasters assured their striking brothers that they would not return to work today.

The union officials state that the demonstrations will be continued and every factory where men are at work in the lasting departments will be visted.

A mass meetng was held upon the return of the strikers to the union headquarters, and a committee was appointed to discuss the issues of the strike at all the factories where the lasters may be inclined to return to work.

Besides the action of the Joseph Caunt company in installing new pulling-over and assembling machines and employing girls to operate them, thus doing away with the services of fifteen men, there is another issue in the strike, a wage reducton which went into effect recently, which lowered the rate per dozen pairs from 25 to 16 cents.

All the lasters employed by every concern which is a member of the Lynn Shoe Manufacturers' association, a branch of the National Shoe Manufacturers' association, the strkers declare, will be made to go on strike, and as most of the shoe manufacturers are members of the association, if the strike order is carried into effect, it will mean a general tieup of the shoe manufacturing industry in this city.

At the meeting yesterday afternoon, however, it was decided by the union that if any manufacturer could conclusively prove to the executive board that he was not a member of the Manufacturers' association his employes would not be disturbed, and his lasters would have the privilege of choosing their own alternative. Already one manufacturer, the G. K. & A. H. Jones Co., has resigned from the association, and the firm of Hennessy & Thompson have declared their intention to do so.

The Manufacturers' association have made no effort to treat with the striking lasters as yet, as they did not anticipate that the strike would include more than the Caunt company operatives, and no meeting has been called.

Sailors Not Allowed to Land

Manila, Oct. 3.—While the American battleship fleet sailed into Manila bay, its arrival brought little elation to the American element of the city. This was because of the navy department's strict orders that none shall be permitted to land from the fleet for fear of cholera contagion. As the Connecticut led the line past Corregidor the garrison there fired the admiral's salute. Four cases of cholera are reported in Manila, including that of C. D. Mitchell, an American dentist, whose wife died of the disease a fortnight ago.

An Old Man's Sad Fate

Bangor, Me., Oct. 3.—Joseph N. Farrar, aged 90, who had been missing since Thursday noon, was found last evening lying near the railroad tracks in upper Union street. He was breathing faintly, but died before medical aid could be summoned. It is believed that Farrar, who was very feeble, was overcome by cold and exhaustion while taking his usual walk.

BRAINTREE.

Amana Rebekah lodge is rehearsing to prepare for degree work, for the evening of October eighth. Members of the Stoughton lodge are to be guests.

Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Cumming of North Cohasset were guests of Dr. and Mrs. F. W. Brett of Summer street this week.

Mrs. George Drummond and son of Franklin street are visiting relatives in Brockton, this week.

Dyer & Sullivan, the popular grocers ,are receiving many compliments these days concerning their beautiful new firm sign.

Miss Louise Burleigh of Washington street entered upon her first year at Radcliffe college, Cambridge, Thursday.

The people in this locality are thoroughly aroused at the repeated attempts at burglary and when it is reported that on consecutive nights the houses of Mr. Ellis Dyer and his father, Mr. Adoniram Dyer of Hancock street were singled out, it would seem that it was time to put a stop to such affairs. The thieves did not gain entrance to the first named house but on Sunday night entered A. J. Dyer's house and had selected considerable silver when they were frightened away.

The Loyal Knights and Ladies will hold the social meeting for October at the home of Mrs. C. A. Hobart, 691 Washington street, Wednesday evening, October 7. A full attendance is requested as plans for the rally meeting, October 17, are to be made. Rally meeting at East Weymouth, Oct. 3d. Electrics leave Braintree at 7.05 P. M.

J. P. Drollett is building an addition to his factory with the prospect of increasing his business as much again as he has been doing.

The Braintree, Holbrook and Avon representative convention will be held in the Braintree town hall this Saturday evening at eight o'clock.

Monatiquot lodge K. of P., Rank Staff will hold its first rehearsal Monday evening, Oct. 5, preparatory to doing the winter's work, which seems to promise well. The members who have not secured a souvenir book of the convention of Aug. 3 to 8, should do so for it is well worth the price. Order of the K. of R. S.

Miss Marjorie White and Miss Shaw gave the children of the primary department of the First church Sunday school a very pleasant afternoon last Saturday. The little tots were entertained with games and music from two until four, when refreshments of ice cream and cake were served. The little folks look forward to these parties each year.

HOLBROOK.

Gordon Whitcomb of South Franklin street has resigned his position with Macey Co., Boston, to give his entire attention in the automobile business.

Mr. and Mrs. W. Clark have returned from Hawkley beach.

Miss Lydia Whitcomb of South Franklin street is the proud possessor of a Waverly runabout.

Mr. and Mrs. W. F. Mullens of Chandler street are the parents of a beautiful baby boy born Sunday morning.

Master George Jennings has returned from his vacation in Sharon, Maine.

The Holbrook Fire Department is the proud possessor of a new hose wagon. It is certainly a beauty and took the blue ribbon at the Worcester county fair last week. An old bell used fifty years ago has been placed on the wagon as a memorial.

Sloyd Woods is confined at Massachusetts General hospital with appendicitis.

Russell E. White of Franklin street, aged 29 years and 10 months, son of Mr. and Mrs. E. E. White, passed to that great beyond Saturday evening, after a month's illness with typhoid fever. Mr. White was born in Holbrook and received his education there. He was employed by the H. N. Clark Stove Co., Boston. Mr. White was a member of the old Foggy Dew club, and Norfolk Union lodge, A. F. and A. M. He is survived by his father, mother and sister. The funeral services were held at two o'clock Tuesday, Rev. Edward Evans, his pastor officiating. Interment was in family lot in Union cemetery.

Marathon Race And Other Sports

The annual game between the Wellesley and Needham football teams has been settled after quite a discussion, and the teams will meet in Needham on Thanksgiving day.

Somerville High against Cambridge Latin, and Dorchester against Rindge today. All four of these have games wilh Quiucy High this fall, and from the result of today's conflict, the Quincy boys can size up their own chances.

Three Massachusetts men captured the big fall Marathon yesterday from the B. A. A. clubhouse on Exeter street to the fair grounds at Brockton. "Jimmy" O'Mara of the Cambridgeport "gym" finished first, and almost three minutes later, Eddie Ryder of the Oakdale A. A. came down the stretch into second place. Ryder had hardly finished when Charles Henry of Lynn was seen coming through the crowd, and after him came that flyer from the Mercury A. C. of Yonkers, Sammy Mellor, one of the best known distance runners in the country. The time of the winner was 2 hours, 35 minutes and 24 seconds and considering the conditions, a gale was blowing and clouds covering the sun, this was excellent time. The roads were in fine condition, the rain of the previous night having laid the dust.

"Joe" Elcock, the Quincy sprinter, who has been running for the South Boston A. C. all summer, and trimming them all, failed to get a place yesterday at the Brockton Fair games. It is about time you let somebody else win, Joe. Hhe people of Quincy may not know it, but as a matter of fact, yesterday was the third meet in which Joe ran and failed to get a prize and it was the 25th meet he had entered. He has made a fine record this summer, and he has watches enough to start a jewelry store. In all Joe has captured 22 prizes this season, only three times failing to get a place. On the Fourth of July he went the limit. He ran in the games on Boston Common at 7.30 and came in second, going from there to Lynn where he got third in the 100 yard dash. From Lynn he jumped over to Locust street and won the 100, getting a gold watch, and when the team races came off, Joe was on the winning South Boston team, getting a beautiful smoking set. The St. Mary's were running a set of games that day also, but when Joe got to West Quincy it was too late to run. This is going some, to win four prizes in one day, and the people of Quincy should be proud of "Joe." Again the relay team on which he ran was composed of some of the fastest men in the country, McVicar, Sheehan and Duffy being the three besides Joe. Frank Sheehan is the National junior half mile champion, and ran in the Olympic games in London this summer, while McVicar is the New England one mile champion. Duffy is almost as fast as these two, and Elcock was picked from a bunch of 25 to team up with them. Joe's brother "Tom" has been doing some good running this year too, having beaten many good quarter and half milers. With two men like these in Quincy, some interest should be taken in track athletics, and whenever Quincy boys run, a delegation should go and root for them. For those that never saw a good fast relay race, let it be known right here, that it is one of the most exciting things a person could wish for.

At the Brockton fair playout yesterday, the Hancock of Brockton won the first prize, with the Protector 3 of the same place, third. The Hancock threw a fine stream sending the water 225 ft., 10 1-4 in. The Washington 2 of Brookville was sixth and the Hingham Vets were ninth. The Braintree and Weymouth tubs failed to get a prize. The Hancock of Brockton has got a prize in every muster this summer, the largest win being at the big muster at Lowell, when she won from tubs from all over New England. The prize given to the winner yesterday was $300, a purse of $1,550 having been gathered together for this muster, the largest ever offered for an event of this kind.

ANNOUNCEMENT.

I beg to announce to the former patrons of Miss C. S. Hubbard that BUTTERICK PATTERNS which have been on sale at her store for the past twenty-two years will in future be handled by me exclusively. This company creates and moulds the styles adapted everywhere in the world as the highest standard of dress. It is the only company with permanent connections in every foreign fashion centre. Other companies copy styles after they are introduced by the Butterick Co. Cheap patterns appear on the market from time to time under various names and have short lives. They are dangerous to use so don't risk cutting your cloth from any, except a Butterick. A Butterick is just as cheap in price and they are guaranteed for accuracy and stylishness. Before a tissue paper pattern is offered for sale, a cloth garment is cut and fitted to a living model from every style decided upon. Every month I will receive all the latest styles, and as my stock is complete there will be no waiting for the sizes wanted. COME AT ONCE AND GET A FASHION SHEET. I solicit your patronage on patterns and other goods and assure you that your orders will always receive prompt attention.

PERSONAL.

A Boston papers reports an engagement which will be of interest to Boston, New York and Philadelphia society, made public on Saturday, that of Miss Mary Frederick Faxon, the granddaughter of the late Mrs. Joseph Carr, of Quincy, and ward of Mr. George W. Anderson, to Mr. Percy Corbett Browne, Harvard '01. Mr. Browne is an only son of the late Rev. Percy Browne, who was for many years rector of Christ Church, Roxbury, and the closest friend of Phillips Brooks. Mrs. Browne was Katherine Wetherill of Philadelphia, Miss Kitty Wetherill, the only sister, married the Rev. Lucian Rogers, a son of Gen. Horatio Rogers, who was judge of the supreme court of Rhode Island. For several years Mr. Browne and his mother have lived in New York, where the young people will live after their marriage in April.

SEVERAL HEARINGS.

Tonight's meeting of the City Council promises to be a busy one. In addition to numerous committee reports there will be several public hearings. The hearings scheduled for that evening are on acceptance of a part of Nightingale avenue, granting the street railway a location for a curved track to connect its tracks on Quincy avenue with the private railroad of the Fore Rive Co., on the need of repairs on Squantum street and on petitions of the Electric Light and Telephone company's for pole locations.

QUINCY INCLUDED.

Quincy is among the cities and towns that are reported to have entered into a reciprocal arrangement whereby the only scholastic requirement for admission to a high or latin school, in Boston, or in any of the other communities mentioned in the agreement, will be graduation from a grammar school. This arrangement is so that grammar school graduates moving from one city or town to another will not have to submit to an examination for entrance into a higher school.

Pretty Wedding
Titus--Klingenhagen

A pretty wedding was solemnized Saturday evening Oct. 3, at 7.30, when Miss Elizabeth Wilhelmina Klingenhagen, of 10 Kemper street, and Mr. Leonard Lee Titus, of 18 Standish avenue, were married by Rev. F. C. Wurl, at their future home 20 Kemper street.

The bride who was given in marriage by her sister, Miss Anna M. Klingenhagen, wore an exquisite princess gown of imported satin superba, trimmed with silk embroidered net, and insertions, and carried a shower bouquet of white roses and lilies of the valley. A diamond brooch, the gift of the groom, was her only ornament. The maid of honor embroidery, and she wore the bride's Wollaston, in pink silk muslin over white silk, trimmed with white silk embroidery, and she wore the brides gift, a gold brooch with pearl setting.

Mr. Carl W. Gram of Wollaston was best man, and the ushers were Mr. Willard M. Titus of Amherst, Mr. Horace G. Titus of Wollaston, Mr. Harrison Harwood of Salem, and Mr. Frank H. McCammon of Newton, and they received gold sleeve links from the groom. Miss Freda M. Klingenhagen played the wedding march.

The ceremony was followed by a reception from 8 until 10, the groom's father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph H. Titus, and Miss Anna M. Klingenhagen, assisted in receiving.

The house was beautifully decorated with potted plants, carnations and asparagus fern. The happy couple left on a trip to the White Mountains.

Mr. and Mrs. Titus will be at home to their friends at 20 Kemper street after December first.

Coddington School.

Work on the new Coddington school building is progressing very favorably and is being rushed along toward completion as fast as a large gang of men can do it. Owing to a strike during the early part of the summer there was some little delay, and it is very doubtful if the building is completed and ready for occupancy by the time specified in the contract, Nov. 1.

Mr. Brigham, the architect, who is at the building nearly every day, says that while he does no anticipate the building being completed on time, it will not be many days later. When completed the building will without doubt be the best and handsomest school building in the city.

Practically all of the rooms have been plastered, and some of the rooms have been sheathed.

Veteran Dead.

Charles M. Bent a Quincy veteran of of the Civil war, died at the Soldiers' Home, Chelsea, on Saturday. Services were held at the home this morning at 10 o'clock, and were attended by a delegation from Paul Revere post, 88, G. A. R. The body was brought to Quincy for interment at Mt. Wollaston.

FORMER PASTOR
Gives Eulogy At Funeral of Charles A. Howland Of Adams Street

The funeral of Charles A. Howland, for more than fifty years connected with the Quincy Mutual Fire Insurance Company, was held Sunday afternoon from his late residence on Adams street. The services were very largely attended by banking and insurance men from all over the State. Many of these institutions sent flowers and there was one of the most beautiful floral displays ever seen in Quincy. So many were the flowers that it was almost impossible to see the casket containing the remains.

The services were conducted by Rev. Ellery Channing Butler of the First church, assisted by Rev. Daniel Monroe Wilson of Northfield, a former pastor of the church. The eulogy was by Rev. Mr. Wilson, who spoke of the many qualities which went to make Mr. Howland a worthy citizen and a successful business man.

During the services the Apollo quartette sang "Eternal goodness," "Lead kindly light," and "Abide with me."

The bearers were Hon. Charles H. Porter, Henry M. Faxon, Thomas Curtis and Theopilus King of Quincy. and Charles G. Hathaway of Plymouth. The remains were taken to Forest Hills for cremation.

Red Men and T. A. Society at Funeral

The funeral of Charles A. Duggan, who was killed at the shipyard last week, was held Sunday afternoon from his late residence at 58 Hancock street, Atlantic.

The services were attended by many of his fellow employes at the Fore River and Hodenosaunee tribe of Red Men. The latter held their burial services at the house.

Members of St. Gregory's Total Abstinance society of Neponset and the Holy Name society of the Sacred Heart church were also present at the Sacred Heart church where services were held later by Rev. John P. Cuffe.

There were very many beautiful flowers, the employees in the painters department at the Fore River sending a large floral piece.

The burial was at St. Mary's cemetery, West Quincy. Mass for the deceased was celebrated at the Sacred Heart church this morning by Rev. John P. Cuffe.

Last Night of The Carnival

The attendance Saturday night at the Business Men's Carnival at Music hall was somewhat larger than on the opening night.

The program was carried out as advertised with the addition of an electrical display by E. S. Beckford which was similar to that given on the opening night. The number for D. E. Wadsworth & Co., which met with such a hearty encore the first night was repeated; also that of Remick Bros., and there was a new sketch for W. G. Shaw by Miss Webb, Miss Sibley and Mr. Maxwell.

All of the other numbers on the program were new. The characters, however, were largely impersonated by the same persons both nights.

Among the interesting numbers was the musical sketch, "The tailor makes the man," by F. D. Fellows & Co.; a specialty, "The best place," for George W. Jones, and a musical number "The language of flowers" for the City Flower store.

The solos of the evening were given by Miss Dorothy Lowe, Gorham Nickerson, Miss Minnie Hardwick, L. B. Weston, Miss Bertha J. Carlson, C. W. Stocker, Miss Helen Rhines, Miss Ruth Hardy, Miss Winifred White, Mrs. H. Y. Follett, Miss Ruth Keating and Mss Theresa Keating.

Six Baptized In Town River

There was quite a crowd of spectators at the City bath house Saturday afternoon to witness the bapismal service of the Swedish Adventists Years ago it was a common occurrence to hold baptisms in Town river, but none have taken place for a number of years. Although the City bath house had been closed, Jack Starr, the keeper, opened it up Saturday that it might be used as a dressing room. There were five women and one man baptized, and they found the water rather cold. They were taken one at a time and the ceremony was of but short duration.

C. C. Mellen For Legislature

The Republican representative convention of the eighth Norfolk district (Braintree, Holbrook and Avon) was held in the Braintree lower town hall last Saturday evening. Besides the delegates there were members of the republican town committees of the district and a few friends of Mr. Charles C. Mellen present. Mr. Southworth of Holbrook was chairman of the evening. Mr. Mellen had no opponents and he was the nominee for representative by a rising vote. Messrs. Otis B. Oakman and Henry W. Davenport were appointed to search for Mr. Mellen and escort him to the convention. They soon returned with Mr. Mellen between them and the captive was called upon for a speech.

Mr. Mellen expressed his gratitude to the convention delegates for the nomination and said he would do his duty for the district if elected in November. He said he was in the fight to win and hoped that the republican town committees of each town and all republicans would give him all the support possible. While it looked to many that there was no more need of work, that the republican nominee was sure to win, he thought the fight should be kept up to the last. Mr. Mellen said he always did his duty regardless of friendship an would continue the same policy if elected. He spoke of his former nominations and defeats, and made them clear. His speech was very much enjoyed, being instructive and full of hope.

Refreshments were served consisting of doughnuts, cheese, wafers, pickles, coffee, etc. Cigars were circulated.

Enthusiastic speeches in favor of Mr. Mellen were made by Henry M. Storm, Mr. Southworth, John Kelley, Henry A. Monk and B. Herbert Woodsum.

It was voted that in case the nominee could not be a candidate that the republican town committee of Braintree fill the vacancy. Voted to adjourn.

,"There's that good looking man Cousin Katherine classifies as a hulking animal," said Sally. "I must really consult the dictionary for a definition of the word 'hulking.' I don't know whether it's a verb or adjective, do you?"

"No, I don't," said I. "But whichever it is, I'm sure he doesn't or isn't He's a gentleman, and something strange has happened or he wouldn't be there. I do think it's a shame. It must be horrible."

"Don't you think Cousin Katherine knows more about such persons than you?" asked Sally, and there was such a funny quaver in her voice that I turned to see what it meant. She was laughing, but whether at me or at Mrs. Ess Kay or at the man with the lobster claw nose I couldn't tell, and before I could answer her question by asking another something happened which put the whole conversation out of my mind.

The ship courtsied to a wave of more importance than any that had gone before, then righted herself quickly. We slid a little, everybody who could catching hold of the rail or of some friend's arm, laughing, but down on the steerage deck there rose a cry which wasn't laughter.

"Child overboard!" some one screamed. And I realized with a horrid feeling like suffocation that a tiny boy down below, who had climbed up on the rail to watch the dancing, was missing.

It was a woman who had screamed and everything followed so quickly that my mind was confused, as if a whirlwind had rushed through it and blown all the impressions on top of one another in a heap. There was a babel of voices on the steerage deck, more cries and shouts and screams, and people surged in a solid wave toward the rail to look over. But of that wave sprang one figure separating itself from the other atoms, and then I heard myself give a cry, too, for the man who had been in my thoughts had thrown off his coat and vaulted over the rail into the sea.

"Jove! He'll be caught by the propeller!" I heard somebody near me say.

I turned sick. The thought of his life being crushed out while we all looked on helpless was awful. The sea was terrible enough in itself—the great, wide, merciless, blue water, which sparkled so coldly and laughed in its power—but to be crunched up by the jaws of a monster—I shut my eyes and couldn't open them until I heard men saying the strong wind to starboard might save him. I believe I must have been unconsciously praying, and my hands were clasped so tightly together that afterward my fingers ached.

People on our deck made a rush toward the stern, on the port side, for the ship had been steaming so fast that already we were forging away from the child who had fallen and the man who had jumped after him. Sally and I were carried along with the rush. She seized me by the hand, but we didn't speak a word. If dear friends instead of two strangers in a far remote sphere of life had been in deadly danger I don't think the sickness at my heart could have been worse. I would have given years if at that moment I could have had the magical power to stop the ship instantly with one wave of my hand.

But it was being stopped by another power than mine. I felt the deck shiver under my feet like a thoroughbred horse pulled on its haunches. The accident had been seen from the bridge. An order to stop the ship had been telegraphed down to the engine room and obeyed. Still when Sally Woodburn and I had been carried by the crowd far enough toward the stern to look out over the blue wilderness of water we were leaving behind the ship's heart hadn't ceased its throb, throb, to which we had all grown so accustomed in the last few days.

"He's got the child!" exclaimed Sally. "See, he's hauling the little creature onto his back with one hand and swimming with the other. Glorious fellow!"

Yes, there were two heads bobbing like black corks in the tossing waves close together. I pictured so vividly what my sensations would be if I were down there a mere speck in that vast expanse of blue that I almost tasted salt water in my mouth and felt the choking tingle of it in my lungs.

Then suddenly the ship's heart ceased to beat, and the unaccustomed stillness was as startling as an unexpected noise. A boat shot down from the davits, with several sailors on board. A few seconds later they were rowing away toward those two bobbing black corks, and I loved them as they bent to their oars.

I can't remember breathing once, or even winking, until I saw the child being lifted into the boat and the man climbing in after. What a shout went up from the ship! Sally clapped her pretty, dimpled hands, but I only let my breath go at last in a great sigh.

There was such a crush that I couldn't see them when they came on board, but there was more shouting and hurrahing, and men slapped each other on the shoulders and laughed.

Throb, throb went the machinery again, and there was no sign that anything out of the monotonous round had happened, except in the excited way that people talked. Several men we knew paid a visit to the steerage and came back with stories which flew about from group to group in the first class cabin and no doubt the second too.

It seemed that the little boy who had fallen into the sea was the only son of his mother, a widow. They were Swedes, and the woman, who is on her way to the States to try and find a place as a servant, was quite prostrated with the agonizing suspense she had suffered. As for the little boy himself, he was not seriously the worse for his experience. The doctor was with him and said that he would be as well as ever in a few hours. A subscription for the mother and child had already been started among the first class passengers and would probably be made up to quite a good sum.

"But what is going to be done for the one who saved the little boy's life?" I asked the man who was telling me the news, a Mr. Doremus, who is a cousin of Mrs. Van der Windt's, very full of fun and good natured.

"A nice little pedestal labeled 'Our Hero' will be built out of the ladies' admiration and given to him to pose on," said Mr. Doremus. "However, I must say for the gentleman—though I've only seen him dripping wet and shaking himself like a big dog—he didn't give me the impression of being the sort of chap to say 'thank you' for the perch."

"Of course he isn't!" said I. "But I do think it's a shame if he's left out when subscriptions are going round. Of course he must be poor or he wouldn't be traveling in the steerage. Something ought to be done to show him that the passengers admire his bravery—not anything fulsome, but something nice."

"I guess you don't know the American disposition yet as well as you will after you've wrestled with it on its native heath for a few months," remarked Mr. Doremus in his quaint way. "That chap down in the steerage is an American, whatever else he may be, or I'll eat my best hat, and I wouldn't for five cents be in the deputation to present him with the something 'not fulsome, but nice' on a little silver salver. I should expect him to give me the frosty mitt."

This expression struck me as being so funny that I burst out laughing, though I had to stop and think for a second before I could quite see what Mr. Doremus really meant, but I wouldn't forget my point in a laugh.

"Perhaps it wouldn't do to offer money," I went on. "Suppose we got up a subscription to buy him a second class passage for the rest of the way. That would show appreciation, wouldn't it?"

"It would," replied Mr. Doremus gravely, "and if you'll start the subscription, Lady Betty, it'll go like wildfire."

"Very well, then, I will," said I, "though I'd rather some one else did it."

"It wouldn't be so popular from any other quarter. I'll help you. We'll go floating around together and pass the plate, and if you like I'll do the talking."

I agreed to this, and if I'd thought about it at all I should have supposed that Mrs. Ess Kay would be as pleased as Punch with such an arrangement, because Mr. Doremus, as a relative of Mrs. Van der Windt's, is the only man on board to whom she makes herself agreeable. It appears that he has started several fashions in New York, the most important being to drive in some park they have there without a hat. But probably if the truth were known he lost it, like the fox that tried to make his friend chop off their tails.

Mrs. Ess Kay had gone to her state room soon after lunch, as the motion of the ship had given her a headache, and I didn't happen to be near Sally Woodburn. So I said "yes" to Mr. Doremus on the impulse of the moment without stopping to think whether I ought to ask permission first.

We had great fun going about, for Mr. Doremus was so witty and said such amusing things to the people he begged of that I could hardly speak for laughing, and every one else laughed too. I wished that he wouldn't put me forward always and say it was my idea and I had started the subscription. But he argued that I must sacrifice myself for the success of the charity just as I would at home if I had to work off damaged pincushions or day before yesterday's violets at a bazaar. Of course, not being out, I've never sold anything at a bazaar, but Victoria is continually doing it in the season, and she makes quite a virtue of forcing perfect strangers to "stand and deliver," as she calls it. This seemed much the same sort of thing to me, and so I felt nice and virtuous, too, as Vic does when she comes home with a new frock torn and stepped on and lies in bed late next day, with Thompson to brush her hair and me to read to her.

One of the most curious of all known phosphorescent larvae is found in British Guiana, near the Brazilian border, where it is known to the natives by the name of macadoub.

The Oldest Map.

E. B. Tylor in his "Early History of Mankind" says that the oldest map known to be in existence is that of the Ethiopian gold mines, dating from the time of Sethos I., the father of Rameses II., long before the time of the bronze tablet of Aristogoras of Greece.

BERLIN TREATY IS SHATTERED

Balkan Situation Has Assumed a Most Serious Phase

PROSPECT OF IMMEDIATE WAR

Prince Ferdinand Proclaims Independence of Bulgaria to Include Rumania--Austria-Hungary Takes Over a Large Slice of Turkish Territory "Sick Man of Europe" Must Face Two Enemies

London, Oct. 5.—Events which threaten to change the political face of Europe are crystallizing with lightning rapidity. Almost over night the horizon of the Near East, which seemed gradually to be assuming a peaceful appearance, has become crowded with war clouds.

News reaches here from several sources that two definite strokes are impending which cannot fail to bring matters to a crisis and perhaps force an immediate war. One is the proclamation by Prince Ferdinand of the independence of Bulgaria, which will include Rumania, taking for himself the title of "czar." The other is an announcement by Austria-Hungary of the practical annexation of the provinces of Bosnia and Herzegovina as appanages of the Austro-Hungarian crown.

Either action will be equivalent to the tearing up of the treaty of Berlin, while Prince Ferdinand's course seems almost certain to precipitate a war between Bulgaria and Turkey. Before these possibilities the quarrel over the east Rumanian section of the Orient railway sinks into insignificance.

Both armies are reported to be quietly and swiftly mobilizing near the borders. Bulgaria is said to be buying up munitions and horses on an extensive scale.

The Bulgarians have faith in their army, which has reached a high state of efficiency, although it is perhaps lacking in officers, and the war, for which Bulgaria has long been suspected of preparing, could be fought with more advantage for her now than when the new Turkish government had time to reorganize its forces, which have become enervated by the corruption and neglect of the old regime.

The Emperor of Austria, it is understood, has dispatched a letter to the President of France, setting forth his intentions regarding Bosnia and Herzegovina, although the contents of the letter are kept secret and he is sending similar notes to the other powers.

It seems incredible that Emperor Francis Joseph, who always has been a scrupulous observer of forms, should reveal his plans to the rulers of other nations before he has communicated them to his own parliament. One explanation is that the letter was not intended for delivery until Tuesday, when identical notes would be presented to the other powers.

While Austria's action with regard to the two provinces may not technically be called annexation, it is believed it will amount to that, whatever it may be called. Apparently the emperor is determined that the destiny of these provinces shall be Austrian, not Turkish. For thirty years they have been administered by Austria-Hungary, but they have always remained theoretically Turkish territory and Austria pledged that her administration should not derogate Turkish rights.

English public opinion is with Turkey in the Bulgarian dispute, as all the powers except Austria seem to be, and it remains to be seen what the English attitude will be toward annexation if that becomes a fact.

Austria is suspected of encouraging the recent Bulgarian-Turkish trouble for her own interests, but the British government has made proposals to the two countries looking to the settlement of the railway case, and the other powers have agreed to give support to the plan, which contemplates the temporary restoration of the railway to Turkey "to save her face," and then transference from the company to the Bulgarian government.

The English press expresses surprise that Austria and Bulgaria should plot against Turkey and asks if the great powers will submit to having obstacles placed in the way of the regeneration of Turkey.

Won't Give Up Railway

Sofia, Oct. 5.—The latest communication from the Bulgarian government to Turkey is a flat refusal to surrender the Oriental railway. The principality declines to deal with Turkey in the matter, according to current reports.

The greatest excitement pervades the people, and yesterday all the ministers left for Rustchuk on the Danube, where they will meet Prince Ferdinand, who is returning from abroad. A council will be held which is expected to bring the matter to a crisis.

The attitude of the English press against Bulgaria causes surprise here and general dissatisfaction.

Killed by Brother While Hunting

Brunswick, Me., Oct. 5.—Irving Pushard of Dresden, aged 21, was accidentally shot and killed by his brother, William Pushard, Jr., while hunting in the Dresden woods. Irving, hearing the report of his brother's gun, ran up to see what he had shot. A second shot struck him, causing death almost instantly. The authorities will investigate.

Bound to Make Somebody.

By FRANK H. SWEET.

Copyright, 1908, by Frank H. Sweet.

"LADY, what you call-a-dis?"

The lady's eyes were raised languidly from the book she was reading. But as they became focused upon the strange figure before her they acquired a momentary interest.

"What is it?" she asked.

"Dis," and the boy leaned eagerly over her chair, without removing his dirty finger from the picture which he held up for her inspection.

She drew back with a slight frown. But it was only momentary and was succeeded by a quiet look of amusement.

"It is an elephant," she answered. "Have you never seen one?"

"Dey ain't live in my country, no. I t'ink dey is Ameriky."

"Oh, no; they are not Americans," she said, smiling. "They belong to a warm climate. You have not been over long, I suppose?"

"I t'ink it be t'ree—what you call him—mont's," the boy replied doubtfully.

"What made you come to this out of the way place?" she asked, after a moment's silence. "Surely there is no work here for your father and mother."

Instantly the merry smile disappeared, and his face became grave and thoughtful.

"De fader an' moder die on de vessel with de fever," he said slowly, with an awed look in his blue eyes. "I haf two-t'ree dollar, an' I no like stay in de big New York with the brudders an' sisters. It be bad place for small peoples. We come on de boat till de monna be gone, den we walk an' walk till de little ones be tired. Den we stop. Den we be here."

The lady had unconsciously allowed the book to slip from her lap to the sand at her feet, and her face was losing its expression of bored indifference.

"Are you the oldest?" she asked.

"I be de fader now," he replied gravely. "I t'ink we live here. It be nice place for bring up de little ones. I like it more as any place I see. It make me t'ink of home country—only betta."

"Not better than your own country?" she said, in some surprise.

"Yes, Ameriky de betta country for teach little ones. Dey learn t'ings an' make somebody, mebba."

"How many of you are there," she asked, "and how do you manage to get along? What do you do?"

"Dere be two brudders an' two sisters," he replied, with the smile returning to his face, "an' dey all be more little as me. An' we get along fusta rate. We find de clams an' de crabs an' de feesh an' sell to de people, an' de sisters do sell flowers. We haf some room in a barn, an' it not costa much to live in summer."

"IT IS AN ELEPHANT," SHE ANSWERED.

"So you catch crabs and fish. I am very fond of them. What are crabs worth?"

"Fi' cent," eagerly.

"Well, suppose you bring me a dozen tomorrow—to Mrs. Roper, at the stone house on the hill."

She watched him as he went briskly down the beach and across to the narrow bit of wharf where there were several men fishing. Here he evidently found a job, for she saw a man give him a rod and a fish basket and point across to one of the hotels. Then she opened the book and soon lost herself in its contents.

But hers were not the only eyes that had glanced curiously at the gay figure of the boy. He was a bright dash of color for the dull background of these quiet New England streets, and there was artist enough in the hearts of the onlookers to be pleased with the innovation. Once upon a time his jacket had been brave with bright colors and gay buttons, but time and the sun and the rain had been at work, and now it was an uncertain mixture of dull greens and yellows, and the buttons had all disappeared. But his trousers had fared better. Perhaps the plant which had furnished the coloring material had more vitality or the dyer had been more conscientious in his work. At any rate, their flaming glory had been scarcely dimmed by the vicissitudes they had been through. They reached only as far as his knees—below that was the firm, brown skin—but they and the saucy little head covering which was neither hat nor cap soon became the envy of the small boys of Seaview.

Originally Seaview had been a small settlement which had furnished the surrounding farmers with the few necessary things they could not raise. But one day an artist stroller wandered in and did the place the honor to be pleased. After that came a gradual transformation. A dozen or more cottages took possession of the more picturesque points, and here and there a hotel rose to meet the wants of those who could not own cottages. It had the reputation of being very exclusive.

When the group of strangely dressed children came into town there were many who gazed at them with suspicion. But as the days and weeks went by and nothing was missed the distrust gradually gave place to idle curiosity. A few even showed some friendly interest. The children were neither beggars nor thieves; that much was now conceded by all. At present they seemed perfectly able to take care of themselves. When cold weather arrived it would be time enough to take some action in the matter.

Every day they could be seen on the beach, along the banks of the river, on the wharf, catching crabs, digging clams and fishing. Even the tiny little fellow in picturesque kirtle spent most of his time in racing up and down the beach with crab net and basket. Every morning the girls went back into the fields after wild flowers or over to the shallow lake after pond lilies. And as the days went by and the people became more familiar with their bright faces and eager ways they grew more liberal in their patronage. The signs of prosperity began to show in the disappearance of the showy rags and the substitution of such garments as were worn by the village children. The transformation began with the little fellow in the kirtle and extended by slow degrees to the girls and the other small boy.

The oldest boy still wore the faded jacket and red trousers. He was here and there and everywhere, working, smiling, asking questions, making notes and taking his new knowledge home to the children.

A few days later as Mrs. Roper stood idly on her piazza she saw him going toward the kitchen entrance with a basket of crabs.

"Say, boy," she called, "come here a minute!"

The basket was quickly set upon the ground, and he hurried across to the piazza.

"You haven't told me your name yet," she suggested.

"Name Paoli; fader's an' grandfader's name before me."

"Well, Paoli, I want you to tell your sister to bring me a large bunch of pond lilies tomorrow. How old are you, Paoli?"

"I nebba know. I t'ink I pretty old. I seen a good many t'ings. How old you s'pose I be?"

"I should say about fourteen or fifteen."

"Den I t'ink I 'bout dat old—'bout fo'teen or fi'teen. You have some crab tomorra?"

"Yes, you may bring me a few, and—oh, Paoli, what is the matter with your hands?"

The boy laughed and held up his hands complacently.

"I wash dem—scrub, scrub, scrub!—an' I make de brudders an' sisters wash, an' we clean de room an' fix up t'ings. I see dat Ameriky peoples no had dirt like peoples in home country. We Ameriky peoples now." Then a sudden sparkle came into his eyes. "De school begin next mont', an' I hab de brudders an' sisters to go. I got dem all dress up nice like Ameriky peoples. I t'ink dey make somebody."

"But why don't you get some American clothes and go to school yourself, Paoli?"

The boy's face became grave.

"I like to, but no ready yet. Dese t'ings costa monna, an' de fader"—the ready smile returning to his face—"haf to look out for de little ones. When dey go to school somebody haf to make de monna. Mebba I go some time."

The next day Mrs. Roper was again on the piazza when she saw him coming up the path. This time he had no basket, and there was no smile on his face. Instead of going round to the kitchen he came directly up the piazza steps.

"What is it?" she asked kindly.

"Dis." And he took from beneath his jacket a pair of small opera glasses.

"My glasses!" she exclaimed in surprise. "I had not even missed them. Where did you find them?"

"My brudder—stole dem."

"What?"

"Stole dem," he repeated gravely. "He come with crabs one day an' see dem on de table an' take dem. He mean to sell, but get scare an' tell de sisters. Dey tell me."

"But what did he want to sell them for? Did he need the money?"

The boy flushed and hesitated a little before answering.

"He—he tell de sisters dat he buy clothes for Paoli so all go school togedder. He verra small boy," apologetically.

"Yes, I know he is."

Paoli looked at her anxiously.

"He musta be punish," he said in a troubled voice, "an' I like for you to help me. He be good boy an' smar-rt an' I t'ink make somebody some time if he no get bad. He musta be punish for lesson."

"But how am I to help you?"

"You been tell me rake grass an' pick up leaves an' t'ings. S'pose you haf Luigi do it. He hate dat kind work. He love catch fish an' crabs an' t'ings like dat. Mebba it take him two, t'ree week, an' you musta pay him not'ing—not'ing!" emphatically.

She looked surprised.

"I do not wish any one to work for me without pay."

"He stole glass, you make him work. Dat all right, an' be lesson for him. He willing. I haf long talk with him dis morning, an' he verra, verra sorry an' say he do it no more. But he must be punish."

"Very well, if you think it is best. But you must not be too hard with him, Paoli. He is such a bright little fellow."

As he was going down the steps she called him back.

"What are you going to do this winter, Paoli?"

"Catch feesh an' clams an' t'ings," he replied, the gravity not yet gone from his face.

"But you cannot live in that barn all winter. You would freeze."

"We no need live dere," he said eagerly. "We get fine place soon—f-i-n-e. De bazaar-r man go off in de winter, an' he say we haf his place for two dolla a mont'—t'ree room an' stove an' chair an' bed, an' we use dem all if we be careful. He say he trust me to look out for t'ings."

"That will be nice. Now, I have been thinking of a plan, Paoli, that may be of use to both of us. When I came here this spring I found that one of my shutters had become loose and a window was broken. The rain and snow had driven in and spoiled a carpet and some furniture. This winter I wish to leave some one in charge. I shall want him to visit the place at least once a week and see that the shutters and windows are secure and everything all right. Several of my neighbors feel about their cottages as I do mine. Now, you could look after them all, Paoli, and still have most of your time for other things. We will pay altogether, say, $15 a month. Would that be satisfactory?"

Paoli did not answer for a moment, but his eyes were shining. Then:

"Fi'teen dolla—a mont'. Dat will pay for all t'ings, an' we all go to school togedder. It be gr-a-nd!"

Poisonous Baby Coaches.

"In buying this first coach," said the physician, "be sure, madam, to get a nonpoisonous one."

The young and pretty mother gave a cry of fear.

"Gracious me!" she said. "Is there poison in baby coaches?"

"There is sometimes," the physician asserted. "Only last August I was suddenly summoned to Ocean Grove. The little firstborn of a popular evangelist was very low. The child died. The coach was the cause of his death.

"It was a new coach, and while riding in it on the romantic shores of Fletcher lake the baby sucked vigorously the beautiful bright green strap confining it to its seat. That strap had been painted with a paint heavy with arsenic, and a few hours after my arrival the babe passed away, a victim of a poisonous baby coach.

"So, madam, insist on a coach decorated with pure and harmless vegetable decorations. Examine the article as though you were a food inspector."—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

The Man Who Shaved Him.

The man of learning strolled into his club at about 11 a. m.

"It's a strange thing," he told the members present, "but I was shaved this morning by a man who really is, I suppose, a little above the ordinary barber. I know, for instance, that he took a double first class at Oxford, that he studied at Heidelberg afterward and spent several years in other foreign educational centers. He has also contributed scientific articles to our best magazines and has numbered among his intimate friends men of the highest social standing. And yet," exclaimed the savant, "he can't shave a man decently!"

"By Jove!" exclaimed the younger members in astonishment. "But, with all those accomplishments, what is he a barber for?"

"Oh, he isn't a barber!" said the bookworm, smiling. "I shaved myself this morning!"—London Tatler.

THE RACE IS ON.

Quincy people will be interested in the outcome of the race between the submarines Cuttlefish, Viper, Octopus and Tarantula, built at Quincy, from Newport to Philadelphia. The race started Saturday, and the tender Hist went along with the submarines. The start was originally planned for Wednesday but an accident to the Cuttlefish caused the delay. Lieut. Chas. E. Courtney is in command of the flotilla.

Bitten by Cat.

There was quite a little excitement in City Square about Sunday noon, caused by a pet cat biting a little girl on the wrist. Mr. and Mrs. Arthur W. Wedger, who have been at Houghs Neck during the summer, started for home Sunday. Their seven-year-old daughter was carrying a pet cat in her arms. The legs of the cat were confined in a bag its head only being out. When the car reached City Square the cat struggled to get free, and in its struggle it buried its teeth in the wrist of the little girl. The cats jaws were pried apart with difficulty, and the child taken to the office of Dr. Burke for treatment. A few minutes later the cat died, probably from fright. The animal was taken to the office of Dr. Abele who will make an examination to determine if it had the rabies.

Knocked Twenty Feet.

Joseph McCourt and Richmond Stillman, who claim that they belonged in Quincy, were struck by an automobile at Weymouth Sunday night. The two men it is alleged were under the influence of liquor and were occupying the whole street when the automobile came along. It struck Stillman throwing him twenty feet into the bushes. The driver of the automobile notified Officer Nash and a physician. The two men were taken to the police station where it was found that they were not seriously injured. They were locked up for drunkenness. In court they were fined $10 each.

Row at Weymouth.

Officers Bishop and Doran arrested two Letts in City Square on Sunday, upon request of the Weymouth police. The two men gave their names as Anton Deuiuulis and Branei Deuiuulis. One of the men had a bad cut on the forehead which was claimed to have been made by another Lett with a beer bottle. From what could be learned these two men were mixed up in a drunken row at Bradley's during which beer bottles were used freely. It is alleged that the two men arrested had assaulted Joseph Grigas with a bottle. Owing to the parties concerned being unable to speak English, but little of the true facts of the case could be learned. The man with the cut on his head had his injuries dressed at the police station by Dr. Hallowell.

Mason Anniversary.

Fifty or more Quincy Masons, representing Rural and Wollaston lodges, attended the Sunday services of St. Johns lodge of Boston in celebration of the 175th anniversary of Masonary in the United States. The sermon was by Rev. Bro. John W. Hamilton, and the Wor. Rev. Edward A. Horton and other clergymen took part. The music was a grand feature, the chorus being made up of five male quartettes, 27 voices, the Albion, the Schubert, the Weber, the Harvard and the Adelphi. The celebration will continue most of the week.

FALL BEHIND

Water Receipts To October 1 Smaller Than Last Year

The water receipts of the city seem to fluctuate, and again they are less to Oct. 1, than during the first nine months last year. True the loss is small, but the Assessors estimated quite an increase and with that expectancy reduced the amount to be raised by taxation.

WATER RECEIPTS.

Here are the figures of the City Auditor for three years:

In 1906 to Oct. 1,.....	$95,541.14
In 1907 to Oct. 1,.....	97,560.97
In 1908 to Oct. 1.....	97,510.54

SEWER RECEIPTS.

The sewer receipts are also smaller than for two years as will be seen:

In 1906 to Oct. 1,.....	$13,727.73
In 1907 to Oct. 1,.....	10,864.15
In 1908 to Oct. 1,.....	7,399.93

TAX PAYMENTS.

Although the tax levy is increasing annually, the collection of taxes is smaller, as will be seen below:

In 1906 to Oct. 1,.....	$191,108.22
In 1907 to Oct. 1,.....	183,713.59
In 1908 to Oct. 1,.....	176,942.94

The above figures include taxes for several years, not for one year only; also assessments.

Of course it was not expected that the taxes of 1908 would be paid because it was only last week that the tax bills were issued, but it is on back taxes where a Collector does his best work for the city. The payment of the taxes of the current year is purely voluntarily (except the polls) and cannot be pushed.

The tax levies, aside from all assessments have been as follows. In the second column is given the uncollected tax for the tax of that year only:

	Total tax.	Uncollected end of that year
Tax of 1904,..	$452,863.70	$181,702.35
Tax of 1905,	491,218.52	180,097.68
Tax of 1906,	520,909.62	178,517.02
Tax of 1907,	557,811.42	217,046.16

There are uncollected taxes for several years.

The September expense account was:

Pay rolls, ...	$34,133.54
Bills, ...	28,376.65
Interest, ...	4,376.25
Bonds redeemed	12,636.44
Total	$79,636.44

Fire Alarm At Houghs Neck

The one round that was sounded from Box 17 at 1.12 this noon was a false alarm. The Houghs Neck apparatus responded to the box which is located near Dunham's store, but no fire could be found. The box was open and it is thought that some children had opened the door of the box and pulled the hook down part way. The recall sounded five minutes later. Chief Williams and the relief hose wagon started from the central station.

SERIOUSLY INJURED.

A little Quincy Point boy lies in a serious condition at his home, as a result of a fall received while playing. About a week ago, when Paul Dorley aged 14, of River street, a pupil in the Washington school, fell from a low shed, he landed on his back. He did not notice anything the matter at first and went to school the next day. But the following morning he was unable to move out of bed. This was last week Tuesday, and he has been in bed ever since. The doctor was called but he would not say just what was the matter. The boy's spine is probably injured, and he suffers great pain continually.

Shipbuilder In the Pulpit

Sunday, Oct. 4, a Fore River shipbuilding employe, Mr. W. H. Lavery, late of Belfast, Ireland, where he was a prominent worker in Y. M. C. A. and Temperance circles, occupied the pulpit at the opening evening service after the vacation in Trinity Congregational church at Neponset, Rev. C. W. Washburn, pastor.

Great interest had been aroused in this interesting event among a large section of the Fore River men, many of whom were present from the surrounding district, anxious to hear what their fellow employe had to say regarding his subject, "Christ and the brotherhood of man."

Mr. Lavery based his remarks upon the account of the Good Samaritan, as recorded in Luke x: 25 to 37 verse, and commanded the closest attention during the entire service by the lucid and telling manner in which he set forth the claims of Jesus Christ upon the democracy of every land.

Fatalities at New York Fire

Ten people perished in a large fire in the Italian tenement district in New York city early this morning. The fire is supposed to have been caused by the Black Hand society. The police are investigating.

NEW MUSIC ASSOCIATION.

The Music Students' Association in the early summer, by means of several informal musicales, consisting of solos, duets and part songs by singers and instrumentalists in Quincy, and neighboring centres, interest was aroused to form an association, with the motto "Study is unending." The object: to sustain the ambition of members for continued study in music; encourage local talent by kindly criticism; giving opportunity for recitals; provide public performance of best choral works with orchestra under competent conductor.

Such a conductor has been found in Mr. Arthur Wonson of Gloucester. He has won the complete confidence of the community there, where he has conducted a society for several years. Mr. Wonson is a composer and a member of Mr. Mollenhauer's orchestra, being thus especially trained for the work needed in Quincy.

An opportunity is being arranged for all interested to meet Mr. Wonson at a date to be announced next week. The weekly choral rehearsals will begin in November. Active and associate members and guarantees will be needed to carry out the plan. Already thede has been a generous response.

Brief Locals Of a Busy City

Dr. and Mrs. F. Ramon Burke are at Cohasset for a few days.

Fred L. Hewitt has been appointed one of the administrators of the Edward Billings estate.

Although this is the season for smelts, no very large catches have been made yet in Quincy waters.

Miss Nellie M. Drummond is the new organist for the upper grades of the Sunday school of Christ church.

Several from Quincy participated in the annual fall excursion down the Hudson river to New York city.

The Ernest Workers Lend-a-Hand club will meet with Kathrene Adams, Brook street, on October 6, at 4 P. M.

There will be opportunity for registration of voters at Atlantic next Wednesday, and South Quincy next Friday.

Although late in the season the dalhia display of George F. Elcock of Copeland street is more beautiful and extensive than ever.

The Woman's Guild of Christ church will hold its opening meeting next Wednesday afternoon. Mrs. H. E. Ricker is president.

A missionary institute opened Sunday evening at Bethany church with an interesting illustrated lecture, and will be continued tonight.

The Wollaston Unitarian church will hold a parish meeting in the vestry on Monday evening, October 12, at 7.45, for the selection of a minister.

The fall meeting of the auxiliary to the Y. M. C. A. will be held Friday, Oct. 9 at 3 P. M. at the Y. M. C. A. hall. The directors will meet at 2.30.

Mrs. J. P. McCabe of Squantum street has been entertaining friends from Springfield for the past three days and Friday the party took in the Brockton fair.

Charles Campbell of Belmont street has returned home from his visit to several large cities, including Montreal and Washington, in the employ of a decorating company this summer.

The regular business meeting of the social and benevolent society of the Wollaston Baptist church will be held in the chapel on Wednesday, Oct. 7, at 3 P. M., when officers will be elected for the ensuing year.

The first meeting of the Wollaston Unitarian club for the season of 1908 1909 will be held in the Unitarian vestry on Tuesday evening, October 13. These monthly gatherings of men have been very popular.

The Republican City Committee will give a reception tonight to J. Mitchell Galvin, candidate for congressman from the tenth district. The reception will be held at Republican headquarters and will be for members only.

The funeral of William Laing was held Sunday afternoon from his late residence on Atherton street and were conducted by Rev. Edwin N. Hardy. Merrymount lodge, A. O. U. W., of which the deceased was a member, attended the services. The burial was at Mt. Wollaston cemetery.

Sunday was a beautiful day, although the weather was not as warm as the week previous. It was an ideal day to be out of doors, as there was just chill enough to make the air bracing. Thousands of people were out, many making one more visit to the beaches. It is doubtful if there will be many more such Sundays this year.

New Car Line To Shipyard

The workmen at the shipyard are expected to be present in large numbers tonight at the City Council meeting to speak in favor of the petition of the street railway for a location for a curve track to connect its line on Quincy avenue with the private railroad running into the shipyard.

Such a line would be appreciated by the thousands of workmen. As it is now the men must walk nearly three-fourths of a mile to reach the nearest car line. In stormy weather and during the winter months this is a great hardship. With the building of the curve track petitioned for, workmen would be landed within a few steps of their work.

At night after work they could take the cars in the yards and would reach their homes from fifteen minutes to half an hour earlier.

One of the drawbacks the company has experienced is the difficulty in getting good men because of the lack of facilities for getting to and from work.

If the location asked for is granted the line will probably be built this fall. It is not proposed to run cars to the shipyard at all times but simply mornings and nights.

BRAINTREE.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter B. Arnold have moved from Dorchester to 236 Middle street. Mr. Arnold lived in Braintree the early part of his life and is a brother of George H. Arnold.

Miss Ruth H. Simms entered the freshman class at Simmons college, Boston, last week, she is recovering from her recent attack of ptomaine poison.

Clinton Nash, Mr. N. H. Goodspeed and Mrs. L. F. Bates attended the old folks' dinner at South Weymouth Union church on Wednesday. Mrs. L. W. Hobart enjoyed the exercises in the afternoon given in the church.

Harold South of Shaw street left on Monday of last week to take up his studies at Amherst college. He will be missed by his many young friends in East Braintree, especially by the members of the choir of the Union Congregational church of which he was a member.

Miss Mabel Johnson of Allen street and Mrs. Augustus Johnson of Hayward street, attended the first meeting of the season of the Providence District Deaconess Aid society which was held at the Trinity Union Methodist Episcopal church at Providence, R. I., on Monday afternoon.

Mr. W. B. Gutterson of Norfolk Hills has a rose bush that bears two roses on one stem. The stem grows out of the centre of the blossom and a perfect rose unfolds on the end of this extension. There were six stems of this kind.

At the regular meeting of Braintree Grange in I. O. O. F. hall last Monday evening the third and fourth degrees were worked upon six candidates. The lodge now has a membership of 94 gentlemen and ladies. Following the degree work a bountiful supper was served to about fifty members. It was voted to attend the Grange meeting at Canton on Thursday evening, Oct. 15 and Master Josephus Sampson will investigate the ways of conveyance. About twenty--five members signified their intention of going.

A birthday party was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Carney, 301 Union street, Braintree, Tuesday evening, Sept. 29, in honor of Mrs. Edwin Fisher of South Braintree and her sister Mrs. Everett Houston of Boston their birthdays coming on the 29th and 30th respectively. A number of beautiful presents were exchanged between the sisters. They also received many from their friends. Among them were a beautiful mahogany ladies' parlor desk, bronze clock, bronze ink-wells, jewel case, gold bracelet, beautifully embroidered center-piece and many other presents from out of town friends. Ice cream and cake were served. Several musical selections were rendered. It was generally voted a good time.

On Thursday afternoon a party of teachers and students of the High school were taken through Washington street tunnel, Boston, by Mr. O'Brien the engineer in charge. The party visited every air shaft and every passage way, starting at Haymarket square and coming out at Lagrange street. Every one was convinced that the tunnel is a wonderful piece of engineering work.

The Rev. C. F. Hill Crathern was invited to address the Congregational ministers of Boston and vicinity at their opening meeting in Pilgrim hall, Boston, as a member of the Appalachian Mountain club. The topic assigned was "Vacation Experiences while Camping and Tramping." The speaker was limited to twenty minutes and could give therefore, only a very brief account of his "Vacation Experiences." For purposes of publication we have divided Mr. Crathern's address into two parts, "Camping in Maine Woods" and "Tramping over the White Mountains." The first part of the paper appears in another column. The second part of the paper will appear in next week's issue.

There has been a steady gain in population at the state farm, Bridgewater, during the past six months. One night last week there were 2,282 men in the place. Drunkenness, hard times and the rounding up of vagrants, accounts for the record breaking number at the farm.

The Observations In the Daily Walk

The Girls' Friendly Society of St. Chrysostoms church will meet next Friday evening.

William B. Pratt of Arnold street has accepted a position with the Fore River Shipbuilding company .

Joseph K. Burns, of Payne street, Boston College, 1907, has entered Technology, where he is to take a course in engineering and mechanics.

The Men's club of St. Chrysostoms church will meet this evening in the parish house on Hancock street. The rector will speak on the Pan Anglican Congress.

The annual collection for the City Hospital is at hand. In connection therewith another issue of "Our Hospital" will be published. The editors of it will be very glad to immediately receive contributions of original or selected items, and brief articles appropriate to the subject of hospital work in our city. If sent to R. D. Chase, treasurer, Savings Bank building will be handed to editors.

MOTHERS' MEETING.

Dr. William Gallagher, headmaster of Thayer Academy, will give a talk before the Mothers' Association, at Bethany chapel, Wednesday afternoon, at 3 o'clock. Subject, "The Relation between parent and teacher." Mrs. William Gardner, wife of the former rector of Christ church, will lead the devotional exercises, and Mrs. Mary Hastings Slade and Miss Laura R. Herrig will be the soloists; Mrs. John F. Hunt, accompanist. All interested, are most cordially invited.

DEAFNESS CANNOT BE CURED.

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

Norfolk County And Vicinity

Mrs. George Wilde of HOLBROOK is entertaining her brother, Thomas Crooker of Fremont, Neb. Mr. Crooker lived in Holbrook 40 years ago. He is 84 years old, but in excellent health, and made the trip from Nebraska unaccompanied.

Heavy travel is reported through RANDOLPH to the Brockton fair. On Thursday one man counted 92 automobiles up to 2 o'clock, going to the fair.

In Odd Fellows' hall, STOUGHTON, on Thursday evening, Mrs. Gertrude Riddell, special deputy grand master, and suite visited Perseverance Rebekah lodge, I. O. O. F. The latwill visit Amana lodge in South Braintree, next Thursday evening.

Two wagons collided Thursday evening on High street, DEDHAM, near St. Mary's church. The drivers were W. H. Leonard and A. E. Colby, and the Leonard buggy was smashed. Mr. Leonard, and his cousin, a young lady, were slightly injured.

The Edwin Humphrey post G. A. R., of HINGHAM met Thursday evening in Grand Army hall, and many guests were present from neighboring posts. The veterans were inspected by Past Commander Thomas of Norwell and his staff.

Miss Helen Keller, a promising young violinist of CANTON, sailed this week for Europe. She will study music at Berlin.

The Simpson cottage in WELLESLEY has been fitted up as headquarters for Dr. Katherine P. Raymond, who is to be the head of the departments of hygiene and physical training at Wellesley College this year. This building will also be used as a college hospital.

The HYDE PARK aerie, Fraternal Order of Eagles, has engaged the Waverly Opera House for Oct. 30, and will hold a Hallowe'en party. The degree team will give an exhibition drill also.

The High school boys of SCITUATE are aroused over the fact of not having been allowed to play basket-ball in the Town hall the coming winter. It has always been the custom and the boys will appeal to the selectmen to reconsider the vote.

In the contest for lieutenant governor, Norfolk County gave Cole four delegates, Frothingham 66, and Luce 24. The number given to Cole was next to the lowest on any of the counties, Franklin giving one less than Norfolk.

U. S. Dist. Atty. Asa P. French of RANDOLPH had the honor of nominating Louis A. Frothingham for lieutenant governor. He spoke of his early education, but he did not say that Mr. Frothingham was graduated from Adams Academy, Quincy. Mr. French is also a graduate of the Academy.

The new home of Mr. and Mrs. I. Grant Forbes in the Charles River valley in DOVER is very attractive, and effective with its red tiled roof and Spanish architecture. There is a large stable and gardens surrounding, the whole comprising about 70 acres.

Thomas W. Lawson received quite a shaking up in a runaway accident Sunday in SCITUATE, and his injuries will keep him in the house for a day or two. Mr. Lawson and his daughter were out driving, the girl handling the reins, when the horse was frightened by automobiles and bolted, throwing the occupants to the ground. Miss Lawson was uninjured. The horse ran directly home to the Lawson stables.

A scholarship of $100 in the Settlement school at Hindman, Ky., will be sent by the Susannah Tufts Chapter, D. A. R., of WEYMOUTH, of which Mrs. F. O. Sterling is regent.

At a meeting of the HYDE PARK Current Events club to be held Wednesday, at 10 o'clock in the Methodist church, Mrs. A. I. McIntosh will review the summer's happenings and Henry R. Rose of Newark will lecture on "The Dream of America in the Congressional Library." A fine series of lectures has been arranged for the coming year.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles E. Nott of COHASSET celebrated their silver wedding anniversary Friday evening and the guests were surprised by the announcement of the marriage of Miss Mabel Nott to Frank L. Lord of Weymouth. The couple were married Sept. 6, and the wedding has been kept a secret ever since.

John T. McGrory of SOUTH WEYMOUTH has been elected vice president of the sophomore class at Boston College for the coming year.

Two liquor raids were made Saturday night in AVON, the residence of Printer Bonifacio and the Avon Hotel being the places searched. Both places had been watched for some time.

Mrs. John Hawkes of HINGHAM, aged 73 years, who was reported as missing, was found by some of the searching party in a well 30 feet deep. She was sitting in a foot and a half of water. It is supposed she climbed down by means of the footholds. She was uninjured.

Registration at WELLESLEY College closed Saturday and nearly all the upper class students have returned. About 1300 are enrolled this year.

The Alabama Coon Association of STOUGHTON will hold a minstrel show in their hall on Friday evening.

Arthur L. Marsh has been drawn by the HOLBROOK selectmen as a juror for the civil term of court at Dedham next week.

Free Delivery At Braintree

The postal service is continually changing but not always for the best, says the Braintree Observer.

October first the early morning collection of mail was discontinued and instead a pick-up is made by one carrier who visits several boxes during the evening between 7.45 and 10. He collects at South Braintree, then Braintree and lastly East Braintree. On a late electric he carries the mail matter to Quincy where it is sorted. The Braintree mail is held there until morning and forwarded on an early train in time for the first delivery of mail by carriers. Nearly all the rest of the mail taken to Quincy goes to Boston the same night on a late train. A letter mailed in Braintree in the box collected from during the evening will be delivered in New York on the first delivery if sent to that address. The boxes that are collected from in the evening are visited in the following order:

South Braintree Depot. Washington street, corner of Summer street.

Post Office Washington street, opposite Congregational church.

Washington street, opposite Pond school.

Franklin street, corner of Taylor street.

Washington street and Central avenue.

Washington street, opposite Monatquot school.

Mt. Vernon avenue and Washington street.

Monatiquot avenue and Washington street.

Hollis avenue and Washington street.

Elm street and Washington street.

Post Office.

Middle street and River street.

Adams street and Elm street.

Adams street, opposite Dow Portable Electric Co.

Commercial street and Adams street.

Commercial street and Factory Hill.

Commercial street, Sub station.

Liberty street and Union street.

Commercial street and Mill lane.

Allen street and Shaw street.

Quincy avenue and Allen street.

Mail dispatches from Quincy on the 10.09 train to Boston.

Mail in boxes other than the above will be collected only by the regular carriers on their delivery trips. The Sunday afternoon collection will be made as formerly.

The schedule of morning dispatches differs in that the 6.30 A. M. mail to Boston is changed to 7.30 A. M. and mails for Cape Cod, South Shore, Newport and Plymouth lines, closing at 6.30 A. M., have been discontinued.

Money orders at the postal stations in Braintree may be drawn between the hours of 6.30 A. M. and 7.30 P. M.

Observer readers can see some improvements in the handling of Braintree mail but there are many changes which do not meet approval.

NOT GUILTY.

The appealed case of August Holmy of Quincy, for the alleged larceny of a chain, was tried before a jury at Dedham last week, and the defendant found not guilty. The property had been found on a job that the defendant was working on, but it was shown that it had been brought there by a teamster who was not in the employ of Mr. Holmy.

—By clearing out the underbrush and refuse, not only from the fences and other places, but where piles have accumulated in the forest, there will be less liability of forest fires. Green trees do not take fire quickly. It is the dry material that causes the damage.

—If a lamp or candle, or a very little fire is kept burning in a fire-place at night, a draft is created up the chimney, by which the foulest air in the room is carried out with great rapidity.

SELFRIDGE'S GOOD WORK.

Aeronaut Killed by Wright Airship's Fall Recognized as a Leader.

Lieutenant Thomas E. Selfridge, who was killed by the fall of the Wright airship at Fort Myer the other day, was one of the most enthusiastic believers in aeronautics among the officers in the military service and through his own efforts succeeded in securing a detail with the aeronautical division of the signal corps. He was born in San Francisco twenty-six years ago and was appointed to the Military academy at West Point from that state. He was appointed a second lieutenant in the artillery corps in 1903 and commissioned a first lieutenant four years later.

While with the Fifth field artillery he became interested in the work of Professor Alexander Graham Bell, who was experimenting with tetrahedral kites, and about a year ago was attached to the signal corps.

Lieutenant Selfridge was one of the three officers who successfully operated Captain Thomas Baldwin's dirigible airship over a month ago when that machine was undergoing its official tests for acceptance by the government. Lieutenant Lahm and Lieutenant Folois assisted him, and Lieutenant Selfridge's management of the big airship brought him into marked prominence as a successful operator of air machines. He designed the propeller of the Baldwin craft, which was considered a marvel of efficiency.

As secretary of the Aeronautic Experiment association at Hammondsport, N. Y., Lieutenant Selfridge took a leading part, and he was closely consulted by its organizer, Alexander Graham Bell, in the construction of the big airship on the tetrahedral kite principle which Professor Bell has been building for over a year at his summer place in Baddeck, Nova Scotia. Lieutenant Selfridge in December, 1907, made the first flight in a large tetrahedral kite which was to form part of the Bell machine. The kite flew well for 168 feet, but glided into the water.

The first machine built by the Experiment association at Hammondsport was Selfridge's Red Wing. It was constructed from his own designs, assisted by the engineer, Glenn H. Curtiss, who built the engine and eight cylinder forty horsepower motor. Lieutenant Selfridge did not go up in the first flight, which was made March 12 of this year. F. W. Baldwin, a civil engineer of Toronto and an active member of the association, operated the machine, and it made a successful flight over Lake Keuka of 318 feet 11 inches. Of the flight Professor Bell said:

"It was the first public exhibition of the flight of a heavier than air machine in America."

Five days later the machine was seriously damaged, and a short time after Mr. Curtiss' June Bug was built, which has flown over a mile.

The organization of the Experiment association was brought about largely through the interest of Lieutenant Selfridge in aeronautical matters. He recognized the need for a place where practical experiments might be made.

FRUIT TO RESTORE HEALTH.

Dr. Romme Recommends a Ten Days' Fruit Orgy Twice a Year.

Dr. Romme, a well known medical authority, asks in a French journal whether man can live on fruits alone and answers in the affirmative, says a special cable dispatch from Paris. An ideal and "more than sufficient" fruitarian menu for the day is two pounds of fresh grapes, one pound of dry figs, one-half pound of almonds and one-half pound of oranges.

The menu can easily be varied. Bananas, strawberries, walnuts, chestnuts and hazelnuts are among the most nutritious fruits, while currants, cherries, plums, peaches, apricots and pears are also valuable.

Dr. Romme does not think it advisable to live entirely on fruit, but strongly recommends to every one a fruitarian regimen twice a year for a period of ten or fifteen days as a marvelous and unique health restorer.

Real Beds In Sleeping Cars.

The new sleeping cars of the L. and S. W. railroad in England are a distinct departure from the ordinary type of sleepers, says the September Popular Mechanics. Brass bedsteads take the place of the stuffy berths familiar to all who travel in this country, and heavy upholstery is eliminated. This renders the cars more hygienic and the woodwork can be kept clean. The car consists of seven single and two double sleeping compartments, extending across the car, each of which has its own lavatory.

Can Walk Backward Only.

L. H. Shroyer, a farmer in Blatchford county, Ind., was recently unhitching his team in the barn lot when a colt kicked him with both feet on the legs. Shroyer attempted to walk and found that he could not advance forward at all, and only by backward locomotion could he make his way to the house. He is still unable to walk other than crablike.

Island Refuge For Eider Ducks.

Through the efforts of the American Audubon society a perpetual lease has been obtained from the state of Maine of a small rocky island off the Hancock county coast to be used as a bird reservation, says a Boston dispatch. It will be used as a refuge for eider ducks and is the last place on the coast where they now breed.

Robinson Crusoe to Vote.

Robinson Crusoe, a Norwegian, has taken out citizenship papers at Boston to vote in the next election. Like his namesake, he is a mariner.

PRIZE GOES TO FROTHINGHAM

But One Ballot In Massachusetts Republican Convention

COLE AND LUCE WITHDRAW

Boston Man Has Strong Lead For Nomination For Lieutenant Governor and Opponents Move That It Be by Acclamation--No Contest Over Governorship and Balance of Ticket

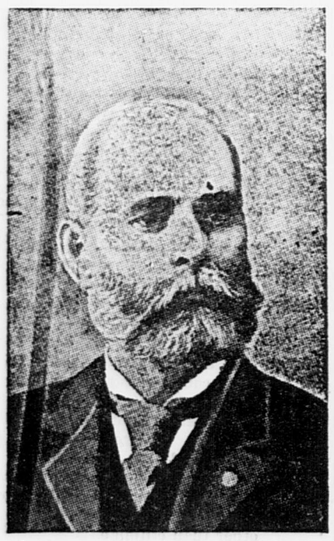
Boston, Oct. 5.—It took a single ballot for lieutenant governor to complete the Republican state ticket at the state convention here after Eben S. Draper of Hopedale and the four other state officers had been nominated by acclamation.

EBEN S. DRAPER.

Louis A. Frothingham won the second place on the ticket in a spirited contest with John N. Cole of Andover and Robert Luce of Somerville. After the first and only ballot had shown 754 votes for Frothingham, 453 for Cole and 313 for Luce, both Colt and Luce withdrew, and their suggestion that the nomination of their opponent be by acclamation was accepted by the convention. The state ticket for the November election will be as follows:

LOUIS A. FROTHINGHAM.

Governor, Eben S. Draper of Hopedale; lieutenant governor, Louis A. Frothingham of Boston; secretary of state, William M. Olin of Boston; treasurer and receiver general, Arthur B. Chapin of Holyoke; auditor, Henry E. Turner of Malden; attorney general, Dana Malone of Greenfield; presidential electors-at-large, John L. Bates, Boston; Albert H. Goetting, Springfield.



HON. WILLIAM N. OLIN.
Secretary of State.

The convention, which in point of numbers was the largest ever held in Massachusetts, there being 1546 delegates out of 1550 present, was a rather quiet and uneventful affair until the contest for lieutenant governor was reached on the program. After that there was much excitement and enthusiasm as well as a rather heated controversy over the method of taking the vote for the three candidates.

The delegates were treated to a surprise when Luce called for recognition, and, receiving it, proceeded to nominate himself for lieutenant governor, in a particularly eloquent speech, which he prefaced with an explanation that Rev. A. E. Winship, who had agreed to present his name, had been detained at home by illness. Luce's argument in his own behalf was ably delivered, and appeared to meet with considerable approval. Cole's name was then presented by Charles W. Bosworth, while Frothingham's was offered by Asa P. French.

JOHN L. BATES.

The platform was not completed until after the convention proceedings had begun because of a discussion over a labor plank. The main planks demanded tariff revision and legislation to provide a more elastic currency and endorsed The Hague conference.

COL. A. H. GOETTING.

A navy adequate to make the position of the United States impregnable and respected abroad was advocated and the administration of President Roosevelt and the candidacy of Taft and Sherman were endorsed. The only reference to labor was a declaration that the party felt no need of making any protestations of its interest in the cause of labor, being content to stand on the present state laws.

DEBS TICKET RATIFIED

Socialist Leader Receives Remarkable Ovation at New York

New York, Oct. 5.—There was a wild scene in the Grand Central railroad station when Eugene V. Debs arrived here on his famous "red special" after a speaking trip through the western states. A crowd, estimated by the police as 4000 strong, had congregated in the depot to receive the candidate and in the stampede to greet Debs the insufficient police lines were swept away, men and women were knocked about helplessly, their clothing was torn and a number were slightly injured.

The police had failed to anticipate the demonstration and provisions to handle a large crowd had not been made. Debts tried to wave the crowd back and shouted words of warning, but his voice could not be heard above the cheering. The candidate was finally taken off the train by friends and managed to reach the street.

During Sunday Debs made two speeches, one at the Hippodrome and the other at the American theatre. An admission was charged, but despite this he had large audiences at both places. The Hippodrome meeting was the national ratification meeting of the party and the appearance of Debs on the stage was the signal for a remarkable demonstration. He was cheered for fifteen minutes. Women, of whom there were many in the audience, wept hysterically, men embraced each other, and red flags were waved.

Mr. Debs' speech was in large part devoted to denunciation of the candidates of the Democratic and Republican parties. President Roosevelt also came in for caustic criticism.

There were other speakers besides Debs, notably Morris Hilquit, who discussed the alleged pledging of the labor vote to the Democratic party by Samuel Gompers. Every mention of Gompers' name called forth hisses.

At the American theatre Debs received a reception like that given him at the Hippodrome. Debs left here today for a trip through New England, speaking first at Boston and then at other large cities.

Independence League Ticket

Boston, Oct. 5.—William N. Osgood, a Lowell attorney, and Robert J. McCartney, a moulder, of Fall River, were nominated to head the Independence League party ticket in Massachusetts at the state convention.

The nominations were made by acclamation, being the only names brought before the convention for the places. The convention was a quiet one as a whole. The remainder of the state ticket was presented by a special committee named by the chair and was unanimously accepted, being as follows:

For secretary of state, John F. Williams, Waltham; treasurer and receiver general, C. C. Butterworth, Somerville; state auditor, J. E. Dempsey, Fall River; attorney general, R. J. Talbot, Springfield.

Providence Well Represented

Providence, Oct. 5.—With the refusal of Governor Higgins to be a candidate again to lead the Democratic party in this fall's campaign, the Democrats of the state are practically united on Representative Arnold of this city, whose candidacy for the nomination for governor at the Democratic state convention tomorrow is unopposed. For the second place on the ticket there is more doubt. Party leaders want former Mayor Archambault of Woonsocket, but he has expressed an unwillingness to run. State Senator Helme and John Archambault of Warwick are also mentioned as Arnold's running mate. It has been practically decided to nominate James A. Williams of this city for attorney general and Robert Grieve, also of this city, for secretary of state.

Democrats Commend Carr

Concord, N. H., Oct. 5.—The choice of Clarence E. Carr as Democratic candidate for governor, following the refusal of Judge G. H. Bingham to run, has been commended by Democrats throughout the state, according to reports received here. Carr is chairman of the Democratic state committee and has always been an active party worker.

ARMED SOLDIERS GUARDING RUINS

Thousands of People Visit Scene of Winthrop's Big Fire

Boston, Oct. 5.—Thousands of curious spectators yesterday visited the scene of Friday night's fire at Winthrop beach, which destroyed Crest Hall, Ocean View house and several cottages, causing a loss of $175,000.

The visitors were attracted by the search for missing jewelry and money lost by hotel guests during their escape from the fire and by the fact that the ruins were to be overhauled in a search for the body of Mrs. Henry Dumont of Cincinnati, who, it is believed, lost her life in the fire, as she has not been located since.

The ruins were guarded by armed soldiers from Forts Banks and Heath, however, and no one was allowed near the ruins except those having authority. None of the jewelry or money lost has been recovered and the ruins are so hot as to render it impossible to make any search for the body of Mrs. Dumont.

Woman Wore Man's Clothing

New York, Oct. 5.—Mary Johnson of California is a prisoner on Ellis island for violating the laws of New York in wearing men's clothes. For fifteen years she has masqueraded in male attire under the name of "Frank Woodhull" because she felt that as a "man" she could better earn her living. The woman, who is well educated and about 50 years old, was a steerage passenger on the liner New York.

Professional Burglars' Work

Northampton, Mass., Oct. 5.—A bold burglary was discovered when the janitor of the dry goods store of J. E. Landie & Co. found the company's safe had been blown open and that $600 in cash and a gold watch had been taken. Entrance to the building was gained through a second story window by means of a ladder. People living within thirty-five feet of the rear of the store heard no sound.

The Weather Forecast

Almanac, Tuesday, Oct. 6.
Sun rises—5:47; sets—5:18.
Moon sets—1:22 a. m.
High water—7:45 a. m.; 8:15 p. m.
Fair weather is indicated for New England.

Turks and Coffee.

The Turks have a theory that coffee makes muscle and are therefore great coffee drinkers.

Posters.

Posters took their name from the fact that in former times the footways of London streets were separated from the drives by a line of posts on which advertisements were displayed.

Mascots.

Mascots have had their place in the world for many generations. Cats, as with the ancient Egyptians; grasshoppers, as in Italy, and various other specimens of animal life have in their time been counted as sacred or lucky by different peoples.

Peanuts.

Arachides, or peanuts, are imported into France from east Africa, the British and Dutch East Indies, Argentina, Algeria, Senegal, Australia and the United States. Those imported as nuts in the shell yield edible oil, while decorticated peanut kernels produce inferior grades of oil, which are used mainly for soapmaking.

Undesirables.

The Chinese and Japanese are not the only ones excluded by the United States government. Birds, like the English sparrow and the sterling, find the ports shut to them. So do rabbits, the mongoose and the flying fox.

The Human Ear.

Experts tell us that in all the world you will not find a perfect human ear.

What DO YOU DO for Quincy?

A Little Wad of Common Sense.

A New Aid Fable.

This is not a George Ade fable, though it may sling some slang. It is a Home Aid fable.

Once there was a Geezer, who sat around and cut Kindling too small for Cook Stove purposes. He Whittled against Time and Flabbergasted against his Town. The town was No Good, he said—strictly on the Blink. Yes, it was N. G. Why, hadn't he lived Here since '84 and found that the Place was Punky? Sure, Mike!

Look at that town over in the next County. Grown like Jonah's Gourd. Must be a Jonah here. We've grown some, but I don't see that we're knocking any particularly Big Persimmons. That's the way this Gazaboo knocked his town.

One day a Sarcastic Stranger floated into the Town that was Knocked from the burg that had Blossomed like Jonah's Gourd. He Heard some of the Flabbergasting and Dropped to the situation.

"Look here, you," he remarked to the citizen who was Handing Out the Knocks. "What do you do for this town? Are you doing your part to put this Burg on the Upgrade? What's that hefty Bunch of literature sticking out of your Clothes?"

"That's a Mail Order Catalogue from Chicago—a town that is a town," replied the Geezer.

"So I thought," said the Impertinent Arrival. "Now let me hand you out a nice little Wad of common sense. For the past ten years you have been sending your money to the Chicago Mail Order houses instead of spending it among your home merchants. What would have happened to Chicago fifty years ago if all the First Settlers had shipped their Loose Coin to New York on catalogue inducements? Why, you'd have to use a sand dredger now to find the Original Site of Chicago. Now, in the Burg from which I have just Blown in we got over all this Bum Business years ago. We passed Resolutions that we would trade at home and help our own town to Spread out so that you could Sight it on the map without using Opera Glasses. But you and a Bunch of other folks in this town have wasted your Substance in Riotous Expenditures in Chicago by mail and let the sheriff hang out the 'Nothing Doing' sign in front of some of your own town's mercantile Emporiums. Look at our Town and then look at yours. What makes the Difference?"

Whereupon the Whittling Gazaboo threw a few well chosen Thoughts into his mental makeup and went down to the village store to Annex a linen collar in place of the Paper Circles which he had bought from Chicago at Two Bits a Box.

MORAL: If you want your town to grow, patronize home enterprises.

THIRTEEN HUNDRED OUT

Strike In Lynn Shoe Factories Threatens to Spread

UNION ASKED FOR ABITRATION

Board of Trade Will Try to Arrange Meeting With Owners of Factory In Which Srike Started--Associated Charities Also Endeavoring to Have Difficulty Settled, to the End That Suffering May Be Avoided

Lynn, Mass., Oct. 5.—In order to avert the serious blow to the city's business in case the strike of the lasters in fifty-three of the shoe factories here should be prolonged, the city Board of Trade and the Associated Charities held meetings Sunday to discuss methods of bringing the strikers and manufacturers together to arbitrate. About 1300 men are now out, but unless the lasters return to work other departments of the factories will have to close down, throwing thousands out of work.

President Bauer of the Board of Trade, with other members of that organization, will try to arrange a meeting today with Joseph Caunt of the Joseph Caunt company, where the strike started, owing to the introduction of new machines operated by girls who displaced the men, and an attempt will be made to induce him to submit the matter to arbitration, provided the union is also willing. It is understood that before the strike was ordered the union asked to have the matter settled by arbitration.

The lasters employed in other factories supposed to be members of the Manufacturers' association have also been ordered out and some of the manufacturers, in order to get their men back, have announced their intention of withdrawing from the association. Half a dozen announced their intention of so doing, but the executive committee of the Lasters' union decided that the men now out will not be sent back in those factories that have announced their withdrawal from the association.

This makes the strike situation more serious than before, for it had been understood that the strike would affect only those factories known to be members of the manufacturers' organization. The Associated Charities, foreseeing the suffering that might be caused by so many people being out of employment, has also taken steps to have the difficulty settled.

The executive board of the union, however, has taken measures to feed the strikers who may be unable to provide for themselves, and the usual assessment has been suspended during the strike period.

Violence by Striking Chauffeurs

New York, Oct. 5.—Scenes of disorder occurred in many parts of the city as a result of a strike of the chauffeurs of the New York Taxicab company. One strikebreaker, Alexander Schenck, was probably mortally injured, a number of others were painfully beaten and several of the taxicabs operated by the company were damaged. Only eighty cars were sent out from the garage during Sunday and each was manned by a chauffeur and a special policeman. Many of the machines returned to the garage with broken windows, dented sides and punctured tires.

Will Not Recognize Union

Rumford, Me., Oct. 5.—Hugh J. Chisholm of New York, prominent in the affairs of the International Paper company, addressed a gathering of local business men, discussing the situation brought about by the long-continued strike of papermakers. "A workman will be free to belong to any union or to no union," said Chisholm, "and every man who wants to go back to work will be protected not only at his work, but at his home and on the street."

End of Canadian Pacific Strike

Winnipeg, Man., Oct. 5.—The Canadian Pacific machinists' strike has been officially declared off, it is said here.

May Refuse Washington Offer

Boston, Oct. 5.—Rev. Dr. Alexander Mann, rector of Trinity church, who was elected bishop of the diocese of Washington to succeed the late Bishop Satterlee, may not accept the office. He preached at Trinity yesterday and he asked that the congregation would remember him in their prayers that he might decide the best thing for him to do. A large part of the congregation would not be at all surprised to learn that he had decided to remain in Boston.

Cruiser In Perilous Position

Newport, R. I., Oct. 5.—Owing to the repair work having been delayed by the high winds and rough seas of the past few days, the cruiser Yankee, which is ashore on the Spindle off Hens and Chickens lightship, is not ready to be pulled off. High water now is considerably lower than when the cruiser went ashore, which, it is feared, may make the work of saving the vessel even more difficult than was expected.

St. Petersburg's Cholera Cases

St. Petersburg, Oct. 5.—The cholera epidemic is being kept well in hand, considering the hold it had on the city before proper measures to prevent its spread were taken. In the twenty-four hours from noon Saturday until noon Sunday the new cases numbered 136 and the deaths 62.

HANGED SELF WITH CHAIN

Suicide In Cell of Man Implicated In a Curious Case

Brunswick, Me., Oct. 5.—One chapter of a most unusual and complicated criminal case came to a close when Sylvester J. Campbell of this town, who was threatened with prosecution for subornation of perjury, hanged himself in a cell at the county jail here.

It was largely through Sylvester Campbell's evidence that his brother, Willard F. Campbell of Monmouth, was convicted in the superior court at Portland a short time ago of a felonious assault upon Sylvester's wife, an insane woman. An investigation by the county authorities, based on evidence unearthed by Willard Campbell's attorney, led to a suspicion that Sylvester had trumped up the charge against his brother as a result of a quarrel over their father's estate.

Sylvester was locked up Saturday and was to have been taken to Portland today for examination. When Officer Robertson visited the cell room yesterday he found Campbell's body suspended by a chain from a grating over his cell door. Campbell used the chain which was used to support the upper bunk of the cell to the ceiling and fashioned one end of it into a noose. Death was caused by strangulation. The neck was not broken.

BATTLESHIPS ESCAPE DAMAGE

Hurricane of Tremendous Fury Strikes Manila Bay

Manila, Oct. 5.—The American battleship fleet has safely outridden a hurricane which swept Manila bay for twelve hours and did much damage ashore.

Typhoon signals were displayed early Sunday morning, but the storm broke over the bay suddenly at noon. It was impossible to hoist the cutters and launches belonging to the fleet because of the danger of their smashing against the sides of the battleships, and the little craft were sent scurrying inside the breakwater into the Pasig river, where they remained all night. The storm quickly increased in intensity and the torrential rains shut in the ships.

At 8 o'clock Sunday night the storm had reached its height and it then gradually tapered down until at midnight it was comparatively calm, although heavy seas ran across the harbor.

During the storm all the battleships had steam up ready for any emergency. Rear Admiral Sperry finally ordered the flagship Connecticut and the Kansas, Minnesota, Vermont, Virginia and Ohio under way. They were close to the breakwater and the admiral feared they might drag anchors. The six vessels steamed down to close to Cavite, where they anchored.

At times the wind blew at the rate of 100 miles an hour. All communication with the shore was cut off. It was impossible during the height of the storm to see the warships through the haze of rain and spray.

On shore it was dangerous to go about. Several carriages were overturned by the wind, trees were blown down, electric wires were prostrated and several buildings were unroofed. Among the buildings unroofed was the depot of the commissary.

Castro Again Angers Dutch

The Hague, Oct. 5.—Some concern exists here over the report, not yet entirely confirmed, that President Castro has rejected the second note of the Dutch government. The majority of the people, however, and the government still trust that the Venezuelan president will understand his own interests sufficiently to revoke his decree of May 14, which virtually put an end to Curacao's commerce.

Prelate at Death's Door

Hartford, Oct. 5.—Bishop Michael Tierney of the Catholic diocese of Hartford lies at the point of death, having suffered a stroke of apoplexy. After a consultation of physicians the statement was authorized that the bishop was very low and his surviving was scarcely looked for. The last sacrament was administered to the bishop by Rev. Thomas S. Duggan and Rt. Rev. John Synnott.

Result of Matrimonial Ad

Lapeer, Mich., Oct. 5.—In the presence of forty curiously inclined people, Mary M. Ralfston, aged 71 years, of Detroit, became the wife of Leman Rutherford, Arcadia, 75 years old. Justice Wright tied the knot. The bridegroom never saw the bride until the day of the wedding, when she came from Detroit in response to his request. He had advertised for a wife.

Forty-Seven Horses Cremated

Cranston, R. I., Oct. 5.—Forty-seven horses were burned up in a fire that destroyed the large barn owned by the J. A. Budlong & Son company in Auburn. The loss is estimated at $30,000. The cause of the fire is unknown. The company is one of the largest market gardening and pickling firms in New England.

Tusk of Giant Animal

Olean, N. Y., Oct. 5.—Excavating with a steam shovel on railroad construction work at Killbuck, near this city, workmen at the depth of forty-five feet unearthed a giant tusk, evidently of a prehistoric animal. It is six feet two inches long, six inches in diameter at one end, tapering to a point. Search failed to reveal other portions of the skeleton.

TAFT AS A SPEAKER.

His Talks to the People Winning Many Votes.

DOESN'T POSE AS AN ORATOR.

Word Pictures Not Needed to State Facts Plainly—Republican Candidate's Clearness and Sincerity Carry Conviction.

From being decidedly apprehensive as to the outcome of Judge Taft's speaking tours Republican leaders are now convinced that one of the wisest moves of the campaign was the decision to let the Republican candidate visit as many sections of the country as possible between now and election day and talk to as many voters as the time will permit. When speaking tours for Taft were first discussed the opponents of the plan based their opposition on the fact that as an orator Taft cannot be compared to Bryan. They argued that Taft, who makes no pretense to oratory, would be placed at a disadvantage appearing on the stump against the gifted Nebraskan. But Judge Taft himself solved the problem and cleared the whole situation with one sentence in his recent speech at Sandusky, O.

"I cannot dwell in the cerulean blue, but have to deal with facts," he declared. It is this dealing with facts in a clear, dispassionate manner that has made William Howard Taft what he is, that will cause him to gain strength every time he appears in public. Taft's best friends cannot claim for him that he is an orator. But he can tell the truth and does tell it. He will not have to paint beautiful word pictures of what should be done. He will not have to plead with silvery eloquence for the alleged downtrodden nor call on "the masses" to rise up and save the country from the ruin which Bryan has been predicting and finding various panaceas for during the past twelve years.

What Taft has to do is to state cold, clear cut facts, to tell the truth about himself, to give to his auditors a clear and unmistakable idea of what Taft the man is and what he stands for. And this he can do, and do well. By nature he is frank and open. It would be difficult for him to dissemble if he wished to do so.

Already Taft has begun making serious impressions on his audiences. Bryan never fails to tickle his audiences. In most instances he arouses enthusiasm, but it is an enthusiasm which rarely lasts. Those who listen and applaud go away and forget. With the Taft audiences it is different. By the clearness of his exposition and the absolute sincerity of his manner he carries conviction. His auditors are soon impressed by two things—Taft's ability and Taft's sincerity.

"That man means what he says," is a comment frequently heard after Taft has spoken. Another Taft characteristic that is winning many friends for the Republican candidate among those who knew nothing of him before they saw and heard him is his great courage. He says what he thinks, and says it in such a way that it remains fixed in the minds of those who hear him. At Athens, O., he was addressing 400 union coal miners. He told them about having issued injunctions.

"I issued them," he said, "because the rights of the plaintiffs demanded it. When I am on the bench I enforce the law. And I have no apology to make."

For a minute there was absolute silence, dramatic in its intensity. Then the 400 miners broke not merely into applause, but into enthusiastic cheers. After the meeting they were heard expressing their views.

"That man is on the level," said one. "He doesn't hand out any 'con' talk. He knows where he stands and is not afraid to come straight out with a thing. He ain't the orator Bryan is, but he says things that Bryan wouldn't dare say."

Unlike many of Bryan's utterances, Taft's utterances will bear inspection. He will make no declration that is open to doubt. "I have to deal with facts," he said. In some of his speeches Bryan, intoxicated with the sound of his own words, frequently makes statements not entirely trustworthy. Taft has been too long on the bench, too long in high government positions, where his utterances carried weight, to permit of his making careless statements. Furthermore, Taft possesses to a marked degree the ability to discuss the most intricate subjects in the simplest language. He proved this most conclusively at Sandusky when he made perfectly plain to his audience the development of anti-trust legislation and the powers and limitations of the federal government. Everybody knew exactly what he was talking about and understood it clearly, yet there were few in the audience who realized that he was discussing abstruse legal problems without resorting to bewildering legal phraseology.

As far as personal magnetism goes, Taft and Bryan are nearly equal. But where Bryan's personality is one that creates interest and enthusiasm Taft's is one that inspires affection and trustfulness. "That man has a fine face; I would trust him anywhere," said a West Virginia woman who with a large party came over the mountains to hear Taft speak at Hot Springs. Those who meet him feel that he is not only sincere, but that he possesses the ability and courage to handle safely the many problems that confront a president. It is the knowledge of all this that makes the Taft managers glad that he is to go out and meet the people.

Quincy Locals Briefly Told

Twelve pupils won gold stars at the Point Sunday school on Sunday.

The sunshine of Sunday brought out big congregations at the churches.

There was a thick fog early this morning but the sun got the best of it before 9 o'clock.

Several of the Welsh people of Quincy attended the special service on Sunday at Charlestown.

A funeral service for Jennie White, 64 River street, was held Sunday afternoon. Rev. A. R. Atwood officiated.

As usual George F. Elcock of Copeland street was very successful last week at hunting, securing three skins.

The Dorothy Q. lodge, N. O. of L. O. L., will hold its first social dance of the season next week at Wollaston hall.

Several of the Quincy members of the Ancients were in the party that left Boston on Sunday, for the annual fall trip to Detriot,

Miss Jennie Cummings and Ruth Kemp of Atlantic, graduates of Quincy high school, class of 1908, have entered Bridgewater Normal school.

Miss E. C. Little of San Francisco who has been the guest of her sister Miss Julia M. Little of Spear street, left for California Saturday.

Mr. Leonard Elbridge Mowry formerly of Quincy and well known here, was married on Saturday by Rev. Dr. Hardy to Miss Agnes May Colton of Barton Landing, Vt. Quincy friends are extending congratulations.

At the 11th annual conference of the Eastern Public Education Association Saturday night in Washington, George 1. Aldrich was elected chairman. Mr. Aldrich was formerly principal of the Adams school and later superintendent of Quincy schools.

All friends of Col. Anderson will be at the Point church on Sunday morning Oct. 11,, to hear him preach. The occasion is the 50th anniversary of his ordination. He was a former pastor of the Washington Street church and is beloved by a large circle of kind friends.

Mrs. Maria J., widow of Mr. Patrick Phelan, passed away at the home of Postmaster Charles L. Hammond at 46 Crescent street on Saturday. Mrs. Phelan has passed the most of her life in New York. She came to Quincy eight years ago and has made her home with Mr. Hammond since that time. She was 75 years of age.

The Fresh Air Camp association is planning a Boys' gymnasium for their winter work. It is expected to be located in the Point district and all boys can attend. The first session is to be held in the vestry of the Point church, Wednesday, Oct. 7, at 7.30. A special janitor for this work has been hired by the association and competent physical directors from our Y. M. C. A. will be in charge.

ANOTHER VICTORY

Quincy High Defeat Medford By Close Score of Six to Nothing

In the second home game of the season on Saturday the Quincy High school football eleven managed to come out ahead, with a margin of one touchdown and goal. Medford High was the victim, although her team came to Merrymount park confident of victory.

The teams were very evenly matched, and neither was able to score till near the close of the second half. Then the superior physical condition of the local boys began to tell, and by steadily plugging the line, and working the ends, they sent Bates over the line, only three minutes before time was called.

Another thing besides good condition that helped to get the touchdown, was the cutting out of that forward pass. This pass was worked to death, and it failed time after time on both sides. Finally somebody got wise, and Quincy started playing football, with results that they scored. The forward pass is all right when it is working but when it has an off day, it is the worst kind of a play.

Medford won the toss and chose to defend the west goal, and Quincy decided to receive the kick. Gore caught the ball on the kickoff. and got only about two yards when he was brought to earth. On the second down, Gore tried a forward pass, but the ball struck the ground and had to be taken back, and a penalty of 5 yards was tacked on for good measure. Quincy punted, and Medford after one rush tried the forward pass. They got the same medicine as Quincy and then kicked. This, with an occasional man offside, and once in a while a short run or a good tackle, was the order of things during the first half. A forward pass would fail, followed by a penalty, and then a kick, to be repeated by the other side.

The most exciting part of the first half was when Twomley tried a goal from placement. The Medford line held like a stone-wall, and the kicker had plenty of time. He booted the ball nicely, and many thought it went between the goal posts. It certainly looked so from the side lines, but the referee, who was in a position to see and judge the play, decided that it went about a foot outside. It was a good try and lost Medford the only chance she had of scoring.

Quincy then kicked out to Medford from the 25-yard line, and on the next play the whistle blew, and the first half was over, with the ball on Quincy's 45 yard line. Score 0-0.

The second half began with Quincy kicking to Medford. Ford took the ball and ran it back 10 yards. They were then held for downs, and Quincy took the ball, trying the forward pass again. This time it went straight into the hands of a Medford player. On a fumble the ball came back to Quincy, only to return to the visitors on downs.

Medford then punted to Nash, who was downed in his tracks. After a series of kicks and fumbles, Quincy made a swell forward pass, Nash taking the ball, and making about 25 yards. This brought the ball to Medford's thirty yard line, and then followed the best football of the game.

The forward pass was thrown to the winds, and first one side of the line, and then the other, was plugged with telling effect, till the ball was on the two-yard line, Clapp and Howe doing most of the rushing. If an end play had been worked here Quincy would have scored, but as it was she tried to buck the line and was held for downs. Medford kicked and Henry, who had gone in for Gore at quarter was nailed before he started.

Then the home team started after that touchdown again, the one they should have had before. Howe went through left tackle for 8 yards, and then on a forward pass the same man got 15 more. Clapp followed around left end with 8, and then after steadily bucking the line, Bates went over for the only touchdown of the game. H. Carlson kicked the goal. Score 6-0.

The teams just had time to line up and kick the ball, when the referee blew his whistle and the game was over.

The best playing for Quincy was done by Howe and Clapp, and the Cosgrone boys played well for Medford.

HYDE PARK IN LINE.

The Hyde Park Gazette says: "The Republicans of the first Norfolk senatorial district held their convention in Wesleyan hall, Boston, Monday evening, and by acclamation nominated Representative Eugene N. Hultman of Quincy as the party candidate. It is a first-class nomination, and Mr. Hultman will receive the united party support. He has been an able and influential member of the House, and his promotion is deserved in every way. H. Clifford Gallagher of Milton was re-elected as a member of the Republican state committee. At the close of the convention, Mr. Hultman entertained the delegates at a substantial lunch at Young's Hotel."

THE CRITICAL PERIOD

Pittsburg Out of the Reckoning in National League Race

The National League battle is all but decided. Sunday's decisive game in Chicago put Pittsburg out of the final reckoning and left Chicago assured of more than an even chance with New York for landing the flag in the senior organization, it being impossible for New York to do more than tie the Chicago team. It can do that by winning all three games it is scheduled to play with Boston today, Tuesday and Wednesday, the season in the eastern division lasting three days longer than that in the western division of the league, inasmuch as the western series ended with Sunday's games in Chicago and Cincinnati.

	Won	Lost	Pct

American League

In the American League Detroit, last year's championship team, Cleveland and Chicago remain contestants for the pennant in the games to be played today and Tuesday, with Detroit still holding the advantage. By winning all of the games yet to be played Cleveland would get the pennant, provided Detroit loses another game to Chicago. By winning one of the remaining two games from Chicago, Detroit will win if Cleveland drops two games to St. Louis.

LAWSON SERIOUSLY KICKED BY HORSE

Financier Meets With Accident While Out Driving

Egypt, Mass., Oct. 5.—Thomas W. Lawson, the financier, was thrown from his carriage while driving near North Scituate late yesterday, and seriously injured by the fall and by being kicked by the horse he had been driving. Lawson was picked up unconscious and taken into a nearby drug store and attended by a local physician. Later he was removed to his home, Dreamwold, in this town, in an automobile. He did not recover consciousness until late last night.

Lawson was driving with his daughter in a basket phaeton. A passing automobile frightened the horse and he shied. Lawson and his daughter were both thrown out, Miss Lawson escaping injury. Mr. Lawson was thrown against a railroad station platform and the fractious horse began kicking and struggling over the prostrate form of Lawson. The horse succeeded in freeing itself and only until then were the bystanders able to get at the body of Lawson, lying unconscious under the wreck of the phaeton.

Arnold Lawson stated this morning that it was not believed that his father was suffering any internal hurt, and that otherwise his injuries were such that he would be able to get out in a day or two.

Many Victims of Auto Wreck

Mahanoy City, Pa., Oct. 5.—In an automobile plunge over a twenty-five-foot embankment at Gordon, Mrs. Peter Young, 34 years old, and her daughter, Helen, aged 8 years, were instantly killed, and her husband, Peter Young, Sr., Peter Young, Jr., 6 years old, and Charles Clark, a nephew of the dead woman, sustained fractured skulls and internal injuries and are not expected to survive. The steering gear of the machine failed to work.

NEWS IN BRIEF

A mortgage note for $4600 was cremated at the services in the First Methodist Episcopal church, Somerville, Mass. This marked the closing exercises of the fiftieth anniversary of the establishment of the church.

An unknown, middle aged man committed suicide at Nahant, Mass., by jumping off the rocks into the ocean.

A mass meeting was held in Faneuil hall, Boston, to protest against the extradition of Jan Pouren, a Russian political refugee, being held in New York.

Fore Rivers Lose To Fall Rivers

The Fore River soccer football team went to Fall River on Saturday to play that speedy aggregation known as the Fall River Rovers, and met their first defeat of the year 2-1. In the opening game of the season these teams played a tie game at Quincy Point, and both were confident of victory, on Saturday.

A big bunch accompanied the team to root for the Fore River boys, and they had plenty of chance to let out their voices.

The game was close and exciting from the start, neither side being able to gain the advantage. Up to within five minutes of time in the second half, the score was 1-1.

It looked like a repetition of their former match, a draw. But this was not to be. The Rovers by a burst of speed and team work took the ball down the field, and sent it spinning into the net for the goal that won the game.

It was a hard game to lose and was the first game the local team has lost this year. There was considerable rough playing, especially by the Rovers, who have a reputation of being a roughhouse team. It will be remembered that at the first meeting of these teams, the game was marred by a free fight. Nothing like this occurred Saturday, but it seems as if a team might play clean ball once in a while. The officials of the league should get after these Rovers and warn them to cut out these roughhouse tactics.

The summary:

A members' handicap was held at the Wollaston golf club on Saturday, the first sixteen to qualify for the Shumacher cup. A. A. Goodale made the best gross score, and tied with J. H. Steadman for the best net.

The first hare and hound race of Tech A. A. was held from Hyde Park Y. M. C. A. on Saturday and a big squad turned out. G. H. Magee '10, and N. Ransohoff '10, were the hares. P. D. White '11 won the race for home.

At the open golf meeting of the Oakley Country club on Saturday R. E. Sproule of the Wollaston club stood fourth in the list on net scores having a score of 75.

"Jack" Finn, the well known baseball player of West Quincy, formerly of Adams Academy and Boston College, will enter St. Anselm's College, Manchester, N. H., this year. "Jack" will strengthen the base-ball team of the New Hampshire college.

Mrs. C. B. Tilton Passes Away Today

Mrs. Lila M., wife of Charles B. Tilton, passed away this morning at her home on Merrymount road. Mrs. Tilton's health has been poor for several months, but it was not until very recently that her illness took a serious turn. Although in poor health she has been able to be about up to last Thursday. That morning she felt so ill that she did not rise, and she has been confined to her bed since that time. Even then the seriousness of her illness was not realized, and it was not until Sunday that the attending physician said there was but little hope of her recovery.

Monday morning her illness took a turn for the worst, and she remained in a state of coma most of teh time until shortly before 9 o'clock this morning, when she passed away.

She leaves besides a husband, a daughter, who is the clerk in the office of the Board of Health.

Mrs. Tilton was a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Magee, who with a brother and sister survive her.

Funeral services will be held Thursday at 2 o'clock, from her late residence, 24 Merrymount road. The burial will be private.

LOANS ORDERS Advanced in City Council For Various Improvements

Monday night's meeting of the City Council was one of the most important of the year. In addition to hearings on accepting Nightingale avenue, granting the street railway a location for a curved track on Quincy avenue to connect with the shipyard track, and repairs of Squantum street, a large number of reports were received from the Finance Committee and several appropriation orders were passed.

Councilman Cantfill and Hogan were absent.

COMMUNICATIONS.

A communication was received from the Mayor appointing Lawrence Curtin as election inspector of Ward Six, precinct two, in place of Cornelius M. Duggan resigned. Confirmed.

From the Mayor inclosing bill of Michael Sweeney for the loss of a cow that died from eating grass near a tree that had been sprayed. The amount of the bill was $80. Referred to Finance Committee. Later in the evening it was referred to the Executive.

From Mayor with inclosure from the Harbor and Land Commissioners, giving notice of a hearing on petition of the Quincy Yacht Club to build a pile structure in Quincy bay. The hearing is Oct. 14. Referred to Committee on Legislative Matters.

PETITIONS.

The Telephone company presented a petition for a location for poles which was referred to the Committee on Streets.

TIME LIMIT On Construction Of New Street Railway to The Shipyard

HEARINGS.

A public hearing was held at 7.40 on petition of the Electric Light Co. for a location for poles. Supt. Austin explained what the poles were for. Order recommitted.

A public hearing was held at 7.50 on petitions of the Telephone Co., for location of poles and attachments. John Green of the company explained what was wanted. Order recommitted.

REPORTS.

The Committee on Licenses reported orders granting minor licenses which were adopted.

The same committee reported an order approving the incorporation of the Zenas Zedek society. Adopted.

FINANCE REPORTS.

The Committee on Finance reported as follows:

Ought to pass on the order appropriating $5000 for extension of water service. Referred to Ordinance Committee.

Why Do Country Boys Flock to Big Cities?

Most small towns are short of young men. As a rule there are plenty of agreeable girls who would not object to matrimony; there are plenty of old people and enough babies to go around. But the boy—oh, where is he?

The boy, the young man, has gone to the city, where he imagines there are opportunities. To him the old home town is dull and stupid. He sees no future for himself there. Both for social and financial considerations he rushes off to the great city. Very frequently he finds that he is lonesomer there than at home—nearly always so; and even more frequently he finds that riches do not grow on ten story walls.

BUT STILL HE GOES TO THE CITY.

In going there the boy simply follows his daddy's dollars. For years his daddy and his mother and his big sister and his Aunt Mary Ann have been mailing their money to the big city for Mail Order bargains.

Result: Home merchants don't thrive, grass grows in the streets, no jobs are to be had, no opening for a new business, and the young man goes to the city because it is a place where people have traded at home and built up their own community and provided opportunities for outsiders as well as for themselves.

IF YOU WANT TO KEEP YOUR BOY AT HOME BUILD UP YOUR TOWN SO THAT HE CAN BUILD UP HIS CAREER AMONG HIS HOME FOLKS.

Nathan Straus, Pure Milk Crusader

Merchant Prince and Philanthropist Who Heads the National Democratic Business Men's Bureau — Founder of Pasteurized Milk Depots and Saver of Many Lives.

By JAMES A. EDGERTON.

THERE is a soul satisfying sound about the word philanthropist—lover of man. It is the term universally applied to Nathan Straus, the New York merchant who has crowned a life of charity by establishing pasteurized milk depots throughout America and Europe. If there were a word that meant lover of children, it would be still more appropriate to Mr. Straus, as he has saved the lives of thousands of little ones by his pure milk crusade. This should entitle him to a fame as much above that of the conquerors as it is greater to give life or preserve it than it is to take it away.

Mr. Straus is the head of one of New York city's immense department stores. His brother, Oscar S. Straus, is a member of President Roosevelt's cabinet and was formerly minister to Turkey under President Cleveland. Nathan Straus, however, is a Democrat and was recently appointed chairman of the committee to organize the business men of the country in behalf of the Bryan ticket. Despite his work as a business man and philanthropist Mr. Straus has always found time to devote to public affairs. He has been park commissioner and president of the health board in New York city and has served on the forestry commission in the state. In 1894 Tammany nominated him for mayor, and the nomination was equivalent to an election. After considering the matter for two days Mr. Straus declined. He has preserved his personal independence in politics and has refused to submit to party dictation.

Only Nominal Prices Charged.

In his philanthropic work Mr. Straus has always avoided the appearance of giving charity, believing that this degrades and pauperizes the recipient. He has insisted on those he helps paying something if possible. This amount has always been less than the cost of the article to Mr. Straus and has been insisted on simply to preserve the self respect of the recipient. Thus during the panic of 1893, when so many men were out of work in New York city and so much suffering prevailed among the poor, Nathan Straus established coal supply stations, grocery stores and sleeping houses throughout the city. He saw that the people were being robbed by the small coal dealers who sold in twenty-five or fifty pound lots. By establishing several coal offices and buying in immense quantities he was enabled to sell the coal to the poor at about half what they had been paying. This represented a loss to Mr. Straus, but relieved the suffering. The same was true of his groceries, in which work he was helped by J. Pierpont Morgan and others. The prices charged were little more than nominal, but the people still felt that they were paying for what they got. In the sleeping houses the men only gave 5 cents a night, or prices as ridiculously small, but they did not have the sense of receiving without giving an equivalent, and so the great psychological law of recompense, which is so necessary to a feeling of independence, was not violated. Later on, when Mr. Straus established the pasteurized milk depots in the parks and on the public piers, he worked on the same principle. The milk was sold at a small amount per bottle or per glass, not nearly enough to repay the cost, but still enough to remove the sting of a patronizing charity from those helped. Even then the price was not insisted on in all cases.

If a mother applied for milk for her infant and said she was not able to pay, the milk was given gladly. Not only was pasteurized milk furnished at these booths, but a physician was in attendance to advise mothers as to their little ones. This service was free of charge. Through such means the lives of thousands of babies were saved annually. The work was not confined to New York, but was opened in other American cities and then in Europe. The name of Nathan Straus is now almost as familiar across the water as at home.

Milk Booths Erected In Parks.

The pasteurized milk crusade is a story in itself that some day will be read by the world with thrilling interest. The pathetic and inspiring tale can only be touched here. It has been over a dozen years since Mr. Straus became alive to the fact that impure milk causes more deaths than almost any other one cause; that it spreads typhoid, diphtheria and other like diseases; that it sweeps off thousands of children through summer complaint and that it is a great avenue for the carrying of consumption. Scarcely any raw milk is free from disease germs of some sort, though in much of it they are not in sufficient quantities to affect adults or children of vigorous constitutions. Many diphtheria, scarlet fever and other similar scourges have been traced to this source. In one experiment made by Mr. Straus, where the infant mortality had been over ninety in a hundred, he reduced it to twenty. In New York the year before he began his work the infant mortality during the five hot weeks of July and early August had been 136.1 per 1,000. The next year, after he began distributing pasteurized milk, it fell to 117.9.

During ten years he kept up the distribution, and the death rate among children was still further decreased to 72.1. He began by giving the milk free to physicians of the board of health and those engaged in charitable work. Then he started erecting booths in the parks. In this he was opposed by many officials and at first had little encouragement from any source. He persevered, however, extending the work to Philadelphia, Chicago and other cities, and the press began to comment favorably on his efforts. It was the writer's fortune to be an editorial writer on one of the New York dailies during Mr. Straus' crusade and to assist in a small way by writing many editorials in his behalf. I remember that at the beginning of one summer Mr. Straus had five pasteurized milk depots ready to open in various parks of the city. He offered to supply any number of additional booths that the city would erect with pasteurized milk free of cost except the nominal charges to patrons. The appropriation required was only the trifling sum of $8,000, and yet the officials were so slow that even this niggardly amount was not forthcoming. Mr. Straus then erected twelve more booths himself, making seventeen in all.

He had a similar experience in some European cities. Of one of these he said in an interview:

"I had a desire to establish my milk system in the town of Lille, France, where the infant mortality was—oh, I've forgotten the figures, but it was something frightful! I made the offer and endeavored to arrange for the acceptance of the gift, but it seemed there were too many difficulties in the way — official difficulties, precedents, red tape and all the rest of it."

Honored by Royalty.

Nevertheless he did succeed in Europe, and now his milk depots are to be found in many cities. Not only so, but at a recent international pure milk congress Mr. Straus was given an ovation. He has been received and honored by royalty for his work abroad, and through his efforts France, Germany, England and other foreign nations have been awakened to the impure milk peril almost as much as has his own land. Recently Mr. Straus spent fourteen months abroad for the purpose of preaching his crusade for the preservation of life and in that time made great progress. In Sandhausen, a small village near Heidelberg, the establishment of a pasteurization plant caused an immediate fall in the death rate of children. In Karlsruhe the dowager Grand Duchess Luise of Bavaria gave her cordial support to Mr. Straus in the establishment of a pasteurization plant, as did the Countess of Aberdeen, vice reine of Ireland, in Dublin; the Princess Arnulf of Bavaria, in Munich, and Dr. E. W. Hope, officer of health, in Liverpool. Baron von Beinerth, minister of the interior of Austria, promised Mr. Straus to introduce the pasteurization of milk throughout that country, and the demonstrations given by Mr. Straus in Frankfort, Berlin and Vienna were attended by physicians, men of science, philanthropists and government and health officials.

Mr. Straus' platform in this work may be judged by this vigorous summing up: "Neither war nor pestilence nor famine claims as many victims as impure milk. It is the most terrible foe of humanity, all the more because it gives no outward sign of the danger. Let us pasteurize our milk supply. Let us have for our motto, 'Medicines and hospitals are possible cures, while pasteurization is positive prevention.'"

Supported by the Government.

In America even greater success has attended his crusade. A year or more ago the government came to his support. The agricultural department, after thorough tests, gave out a report that agreed with all of Mr. Straus' contentions and urged the pasteurization or boiling of milk in all cities, villages and homes of the land. The warning awakened the medical profession, the health boards and the public generally to the peril of impure milk. Since then the work has been going forward more rapidly. It takes a long time to get the great inert mass of humanity to moving—it has taken Mr. Straus fifteen years, and much yet remains to be done—but, once started, it goes with its own momentum. This movement will proceed with all the greater force because it will have behind it the love of children. Once let mothers and fathers thoroughly understand that impure milk means the possible murder of their little ones, and pasteurization will be swiftly established from ocean to ocean.

At the time the government gave out its report on the subject it also imparted a formula for home pasteurization. This I do not remember in detail, but it will be supplied any one writing to the agricultural department at Washington and asking for the bulletin. As I recall the formula it is to bring the milk slowly and gently to the boil and then let it as gradually cool. It should be kept above a certain temperature—not the boiling point, however—for some time, as that is necessary to kill the germs. If allowed to boil too violently or too long, the life giving properties in the milk are killed. Better than home pasteurization, however, is the establishment of pasteurization plants in all cities and villages of the country.

Nathan Straus, the man who is chiefly responsible for bringing this peril to the attention of mankind, and not only so, but who has done more than any other dozen men to remove the danger, was born in Rhenish Bavaria in 1848. His father was Lazarus Straus, who came to this country before the war, going into business at Talbotton, Ga. Mr. Straus was a pronounced Union man, however, and secession sentiment was so strong about him that he was compelled to move to Columbus, Ga. In 1865 he again removed, this time to New York, where he went into the crockery business under the name of L. Straus & Sons. Nathan up to this time had been in Lavant college, but now at the age of seventeen went on the road for the firm. In 1874 he took charge of the crockery department of his present business house, a few years later was made a member of the firm, and now, with his brothers, controls a majority of the stock.

Authors and Speakers of Ability.

Of these brothers there are two—Hon. Oscar S. Straus, already mentioned, and Isidor Straus, almost as well known, since he has been a member of congress and prominent in his opposition to a protective tariff and free silver. There is no family in New York more thoroughly respected than the three Straus brothers. They belong to that high type of philanthropic Jews of which the world contains many noble examples. They are unostentatious, cultured, public spirited, intellectual and given to good works. All are authors and speakers of ability, all have held high public place, all are capable business men, and all are objects of public esteem.

Of the three, Nathan Straus excels in works of philanthropy. He is rather slight in build, of nervous, intellectual face, which is covered by a full beard running to two points. Mr. Straus has a home of quiet elegance, loves a fast horse and tells a good story on occasion. One tale of his relates to a stableman. One morning Mr. Straus found this man rubbing the leg of one of his trotters with a spike nail dipped in liniment. When asked what he was doing the man replied that the directions said to apply the medicine "with a nail or tooth brush," and as he had no toothbrush he thought if he had to use a nail he had better take a spike. The stableman was evidently not acquainted with nailbrushes.

Mr. Straus has a sad face, seeming to feel the suffering of all the unfortunate. Yet if the saving of many lives can give joy, he should be the happiest man in the world.

PEACE EFFORT GETS SETBACK

Lynn Lasters Decline Proposition of the Board of Trade

MAYOR TO FORCE SITUATION

Whole State Board of Arbitration to Make Investigation at His Request --Several Factories Fail to Open, and Others May Close Unless Settlement Is Speedily Reached--Three Thousand Men Out

Lynn, Mass., Oct. 6.—The effort of the Lynn Board of Trade to settle the strike of the lasters and lasting machine workers by arbitration received a temporary setback last night, when the board's committee learned that as a condition of returning to work, pending arbitration, the lasters would demand that their union be recognized in all factories and that the blacklist be abolished.

The Board of Trade's committee had hoped for a speedy settlement of the difficulty by arbitration, as it was thought the strikers could be induced to return to work pending an adjustment of the trouble in the Caunt factory, where the strike, which is entirely sympathetic as far as most of the lasters are concerned, had its origin. The attitude of the agent of the lasters, however, put a damper on these hopes.

Mayor Porter had a conference in Boston yesterday with members of the Massachusetts state board of conciliation and arbitration in reference to the Lynn strike, and announced that he had arranged to have the entire board visit the city today for the purpose of investigating the situation. He also sent a request to a number of prominent shoe manufacturers, as well as the local strike leaders, to attend a conference today.

President Bauer of the Board of Trade announced that he believed that the board would be able to bring about a settlement of the strike by arbitration within a reasonable time.

Yesterday forenoon was given over to parades of strikers, about 1000 persons participating. Visits were made to several factories, but there was no disorder. Meetings of strikers were held during the day and relief committees were appointed. It was arranged that the various shoe centres of New England should be visited and appeals made for funds. About 400 non-union men have joined the strike.

That the extensive shoe manufacturing industry of Lynn is likely to suffer seriously as a result of the strike was evident when several of the factories failed to open and the managers of others announced that, should the strike be still in progress when they had disposed of the orders at hand, they also would suspend operation of their plants.

There are almost 1500 lasters on strike, about an equal number of other operatives are kept from work by the closed shops, and indications point to additional thousands being shut out before the end of the week if many more of the factories are closed.

RECKLESS SMOKING OF CIGARETS

Perhaps Responsible For Great Conflagration In Chelsea

Boston, Oct. 6.—Acting District Attorney Dwyer will investigate the causes and ultimate results of the great Chelsea conflagration. His efforts will be directed toward indicting those who are charged by Judge Cutler with being responsible for the fire.

According to Cutler the fire which caused the death of eighteen persons and laid two-thirds of the city in ruins was caused by the reckless smoking of cigarets on the part of men employed in the shop of the Rubin brothers, which was located near the corner of Cutler and Seconds streets.

Israel Smulsky, the foreman, is charged by Cutler as being the person responsible for the smoking and as a result Smulsky will face the district attorney when the latter starts his investigation.

Police Chief Exonerated

Haskell Questions Roosevelt

Guthrie, Okla., Oct. 6.—In an open letter addressed to President Roosevelt, Governor Haskell asks the president to explain certain transactions in connection with the granting of a lease of 680,000 acres of Osage Indian lands to the Prairie Oil and Gas company in July, 1906.

Ex-Slave For Taft.

An ex-slave living in Philadelphia has sent to the Philadelphia Ledger the following letter:

To the Editor of Public Ledger:

I have read many of the different views as to whether it would better the condition of the working people for the colored people to vote for Bryan for president, a vast number of the colored race belonging to that class.

My belief is that it would be political suicide for any colored person to vote the Democratic ticket, as Democrats have been the enemy of my people ever since slavery days, and today in the solid south it is almost impossible for a colored person to go near the polls, not saying anything of voting.

Bryan's election would give the Democratic party power to entirely disfranchise the colored voters.

HOWARD ANDERSON,
"Ex-Slave."

Philadelphia, Sept. 10.

So Unkind.

"That man is my worst enemy."
"He seems friendly."
"Yes, but he had a chance to marry my wife once and didn't."

Fine Rainmakers.

Since we have dropped the Teddy bears
The surplus we should crate
And send them to the heathen
For idols up to date.

Best He Could Do.

"What are you doing for a living these days?"
"Working."
"Is that possible? I heard you were in hard lines, but I did not suppose it was as bad as that."

PERT PARAGRAPHS.

It is really rubbing it in to be stout and have dyspepsia too.

No matter how good a man may be, we somehow find it hard to forgive him for it.

If you are going in for self culture, the only proper way to do it is to begin with your grandparents in their infancy.

It is very clear that the man who hadn't a word to say wasn't a woman.

It is just as hard to encourage some men as it is to discourage others.

The reason why some people can't win is because others don't lose.

Some left handed supporters of Bryan assert that, with a Republican senate to check him, the Nebraskan could do no harm as president. Just think what would happen with a Bryan secretary of the treasury and a Bryan attorney general.

Mr. Bryan says he is not running away from his record. He cannot, however hard he may try.

Are You Living In the Cobweb Kingdom?

There are cobwebs on the windows,
There are cobwebs on the door,
There are cobwebs swinging, swaying
From the rafters to the floor.
Now the place is Cobweb Kingdom,
Though it used to be a store.

If the Cobweb Kingdom's ruler
Were a man discreet and wise
He would have no cobwebs swaying,
Swinging round and catching flies;
He would crowd his store with buyers—
He would simply ADVERTISE!

MAP OF EUROPE IS CHANGED

Bulgaria Issues a Formal Declaration of Independence

TURKEY IN A BAD POSITION

Austria About to Despoil Sultan of More Possessions In Europe by Annexing Two Provinces--Question of War Is Uppermost In Minds of European Diplomats--A Scramble Among Powers Likely

London, Oct. 6.—In the ancient capital of Tirnovo the independence of Bulgaria was proclaimed yesterday, with the czar of the Bulgarians as ruler. Czar of the Bulgarians is recognized to mean more than czar of Bulgaria, because it is a distinct intimation that he regards his country as having sovereignty over all people of that blood in the Near East.

Within a day or two Austria-Hungary, which has been working with Prince Ferdinand in this preconcerted plan, will proclaim the new status of Bosnia and Herzegovina. The question which has been stirring the whole of Europe more deeply than any similar question in the memory of the present generation is, does it mean war?

From all the capitals come reports indicating that it means, first of all, another European congress of the signers of the treaty of Berlin to consider the situation and probably to revise the treaty. Turkey, caught in a moment of weakness, is the victim of this situation, and while some international animosities have been stirred up, probably no power is willing to make war.

Reports from the emancipated Turkish press reaching London indicate that the "Young Turks" will swallow this bitter pill as best they can, and, if they do, naturally the Bulgarians, while willing and eager for war, will have no cause on which to base the beginning of hostilities.

From the British standpoint the whole affair has been more than a surprise, because for the first time in years the British government felt itself, with apparently a perfect understanding with France and Russia and complete friendship with Italy, to be in a position where it dominated European politics, reserving out of this consideration the almost open enmity between itself and Germany.

Probably never in the history of Europe have politics taken such amazingly kaleidoscopic revolutions as during the past week. An entangling situation will come when the signatories of the Berlin treaty meet to consider what action shall be taken regarding the violations of the treaty. Great Britain last night served notice that it does not recognize the right of any of the parties to this treaty to violate its provisions without consulting the others, but English diplomats know that the conference will resolve itself into a scramble among the powers to get what is termed in European politics "compensating advantages," which Austria, backed by Germany, has already obtained.

The official statement issued by the British foreign office says: "His majesty's government cannot admit the right of any power to alter an international treaty without the consent of the other parties to it, and it therefore refuses to sanction any infraction of the Berlin treaty and declines to recognize what has been done until the views of the other powers are known, especially those of Turkey, which is more directly concerned than any one else."

The chances of war between Bulgaria and Turkey are being minimized by Great Britain and France, who are working together and who have advised Turkey against it. Turkey apparently is disposed to follow this advice, and it is believed that if hasty action on the part of Turkey can be prevented, Bulgaria will have difficulty in finding an excuse to begin war.

The action of Prince Ferdinand in proclaiming the independence of Bulgaria is condemned alike by the governments and press of Europe, but in some quarters this is considered a matter of minor importance so long as it does not eventuate in war, as compared with the threatened annexation of the provinces of Bosnia and Herzegovina by Austria-Hungary.

Reports from Belgrade indicate that Servia has been aroused to the danger point, bands of Servians marching the streets of Belgrade and shouting for war with Austria rather than annexation.

The danger of war is believed to lie in precipitate action at Constantinople. Forced by the "Young Turks" party, which may fear a blow at its prestige if it acquiesces in the loss of Bulgaria, and by the military party, which wants to restore the old order of things, it is feared that Turkey, although ill-prepared, both from a financial and military standpoint, may proclaim war. Should this be the case, the efforts of the powers will then be directed to limiting the war to Bulgaria and Turkey.

As Viewed at Washington

Washington, Oct. 6.—Commercially, American interests in the Balkan states affected by recent developments in that section of the world are not very important and it matters little what the states' political affiliations or condition may be, so long as American interests are on an equality as affecting trade and the rights of its citizens with those of other European countries. Imports from and exports to Bulgaria for the last year, for which the statistics are available, practically balanced, amounting in each case to about $280,000. Bosnia and Herzegovina sent sheep and goat skins in large quantities to Great Britain and the United States. In diplomatic matters it probably would be more satisfactory to the United States to deal directly with Bulgaria as an independent sovereignty instead of through the medium of Turkey, as now.

The whole situation is a very interesting one, in the view of the officials, but it is no concern of this country, according to the statements made at the state department, and no memorandum on the subject has been transmitted to this government.

In diplomatic circles, however, the Balkan situation is the one topic of discussion.

BRYAN'S ENDURANCE.

How the Presidential Candidate Stands Stress of Campaigning.

LEADS THE SIMPLE LIFE.

Knows How to Take Care of Himself and Can Sleep Soundly at Any Time. Has Digestion of Youth and Muscles of Iron.

Swinging through the country with William Jennings Bryan, the Democratic candidate for president of the United States, one hears asked a hundred and more times a day the question, "How does he stand it?"

What about four persons out of five who hear Bryan speak and see him in the midst of the whirlwind of the last weeks of a campaign are curious to know is what there is about his physical and mental makeup and manner of living that enables him to endure the stress of three presidential campaigns almost unscathed. He is now past that age when most men are at the zenith of their powers of endurance. In this contest he has already done weeks of trying and vigorous campaigning, yet he shows almost no signs of the strain and is in excellent general health and condition, says a Philadelphia correspondent of the New York Globe. Whereas the vocal organs of most men who have gone through such a speaking ordeal as he has lately would be badly shattered and they would be vigorously fortifying themselves with cough drops and throat lozenges, Mr. Bryan seems never to give the preservation of his voice more than a passing thought.

Leading the simple life has a great deal to do with Bryan's capacity for the sort of campaigning he is now engaged in. He has, of course, a powerful physique, and nature gave him a voice in a million, but he has preserved himself well and avoided excesses. The men who are traveling with the Democratic candidate, some of whom were with him in his former campaigns, say he lives the most simply of any member of his party and that this adds much to his marvelous capacity for hard and sustained work.

For one thing, Mr. Bryan can sleep. He is what is called a good sleeper. He is so constituted that the troubles of the day do not follow him into the night. When he is whirling through one state after another, making one or two long speeches a day, with probably numerous short car end talks, and goes to bed thoroughly tired out, he drops off to sleep in five minutes and sleeps eight hours without a break, unless he is called out to address an early morning crowd somewhere.

"Mistah Bryan, he sleeps awful sound," is the way one of the colored functionaries on his car tells it. "Lots of times, when I want to wake him, I have to take hold of him and shake him."

To a fine faculty for sleeping at night Mr. Bryan adds the ability to take a short nap at almost any time he wishes to and to wake with mind cleared and body refreshed. This serves him in good stead when touring the country, as he is at present. "A short nap is better than a drink of whisky," said one of Bryan's admirers the other day. Mr. Bryan seems to hold to this doctrine. At least he avoids liquor and catches a nap if he feels like it.

Tens of thousands of those that have heard Bryan have marveled at his voice and wondered at his power of oratory, but probably have not given thought to his digestion. Half of the battle of life consists in having a good stomach, and Mr. Bryan is the fortunate possessor of one. He eats anything that other men who work hard eat and has an appetite like a blacksmith or a harvest hand. He enjoys not only his dinner, but all his meals, and no small measure of the cheerfulness with which he goes through the hardships of a campaign is due to this fact and the further fact that his digestive powers, never having been weakened by drinking or smoking or the use of tobacco in any form, are unimpaired and as good as they were when he was twenty-one.

They tell a story on the Bryan private car that for breakfast in a St. Paul cafe the other day the candidate searched through the bill of fare and finally gave an order for four pork chops and some fried onions. To these dainty products of the cuisine Mr. Bryan did the most ample justice.

Yet some people have said that if Bryan is beaten for president this time the blow will be too much and will kill him. Nothing but a green old age would seem to await the man who at forty-eight can wrestle successfully with four pork chops and fried onions for breakfast. Nature did not intend him to die of politics.

While Mr. Bryan is beginning to get along in years and to take on flesh he is far from fat. He has muscles of iron, and big ones at that. He understands how to take care of himself. After a hard, long speech, if he has the chance, he takes a rub down and changes his moist underclothing for dry garments, and then he is as good as new. He is particularly careful about this in cold and chilly weather. Consequently, though he undergoes exposure of all sorts sufficient to hurry most men to the grave, he is generally in the pink of physical condition and not troubled even with a cold.

He is naturally hospitable and is extremely considerate of the men around him—those who in any fashion are in his employ or service or who travel with him in a campaign.

EDITORIAL.

The order reported by the Finance Committee to the City Council Monday evening for the addition to the Lincoln school building contains a clause which is a new idea in Quincy. In brief it provides that if the building can not be built for the sum specified in the order, the architect shall forfeit his commission.

Cities and towns all over the Commonwealth have met with the same experience as has Quincy with its new buildings. The architect whose plans are accepted submits an estimate from a reliable builder for what the building can be constructed. The sum named is appropriated and bids invited. Almost invariably the bids exceed the amount estimated by the architect. A case at hand being the Coddington school building.

The feeling now among cities is that architects when they give an estimate know that the building cannot be constructed for that amount, and that they give a low figure in order to have their plans accepted.

It is claimed by those in position to know that if the order appropriating money for a building contains the clause above referred to, it is perfectly legal and the architect cannot collect.

In the case of the Lincoln addition the estimate of the architect was $11,000. The Finance committee believe that too small and have increased it to $12,000.

The editors of the Daily Ledger extend sympathy to Fred H. Miller of the Hingham Journal over the loss of his wife and helpmate. It was a pleasure to know Mrs. Miller and enjoy her company. She was in her 53d year and an estimable lady.

In fairness to the contractor of the Coddington school building, work upon which was delayed in the spring by a strike, it should be said that the strike was not among the workmen employed at the building. The strike which caused the delay was that in the granite industry.

Evening School Opened.

The Evening schools of the city opened Monday night, and there was a fairly good attendance. There were between 50 and 60 at the Adams school, and about the same number at the Willard, and about 20 at the drawing class. Many more are expected tonight, for yesterday was a holiday for some, and this kept the attendance down. The evening schools are in session four days a week, Monday, Tuesday, Thursday and Friday evenings.

A substitute order for $2,000 for regrading and draining Grove street. Rules suspended and order passed.

Ought to pass on the order appropriating $1,700 for completing the work on Smith street. Rules suspended and order passed.

Amendment to the order for $450 for completing the repairs on Broadway, Ward Two, making the amount $500. Rules suspended and order passed.

A substitute order for $1,400 for repairs of Webster street. Rules suspended and order passed.

A substitute order for $1,824.75, for draining and repairing Baxter street. Rules suspended and order passed.

A substitute order for $5,166 for surface drainage. Rules suspended and order passed.

A substitute order for $800 for defining the lines of Sea street near "the Willows." Rules suspended and order passed.

Ought to pass on the order appropriating $5,200 for furnishings for the Coddington school building. To Ordinance Committee.

A loan order for $22,200 to cover appropriations made for the repair of Grove street, relocating Sea street, furnishing the Coddington school, addition to the Lincoln school, completing Broadway, and completing Smith street. Read and ordered to a second reading.

A substitute order for $12,000 for building the addition to the Lincoln school. The order also provides that if the addition is not built within the appropriation the architect is to receive no commission. To Ordinance Committee.

A loan order for $8,400.75 to cover appropriation for Webster street, surface drainage and repair of Baxter street. Read and ordered to a second reading.

The Committee on Health reported an order for $1,500 for miscellaneous expenses and contagious diseases of the Board of Health for 1908. Referred to Finance Committee.

PUBLIC HEARINGS.

A public hearing was held at 8 o'clock on the acceptance of Nightingale avenue. Andrew Milne, Jr., and Peter T. Fallen appeared in favor and no one against. Order recommitted.

RAILWAY TO SHIPYARD.

At 8.30 a public hearing was held on the petition of the street railway to build a curve track on Quincy avenue to connect with the Fore River railroad.

Supt. Conway said the object was to accommodate the workmen at the yard. After consultation with the Fore River Co. it was thought best to run the cars to the gate. In reply to question, he said he knew of no reason why his company did not intend to build the Chubbuck street line.

Mr. Marr representing the workmen spoke in favor. He regretted that the Chubbuck street line had not been built. He believed this would accommodate a large number of people. It should be stipulated when the location should be built.

Treasurer Sedgwick of the Fore River Co. believed the line would be of great benefit to the workmen. He hoped the location asked would be granted.

President Hobbs then read a petition in favor signed by 530 workmen.

No one appeared against the petition and the order was recommitted.

Later the Council took a recess after which the Committee on Streets reported an order granting the location. The order provided it shall be built before Dec. 1, and should be used for passenger traffic only. The order was then ordered to a second reading.

THE CAUSEWAY.

At 8.45 a public hearing was held on the need of repairs of Squantum street. A large number of Squantum people were present.

J. J. Callahan said Squantum was taxed for more than $100,000. He had been unable to find where any benefit had been received by the taxpayers. It was a much prettier spot than Winthrop, and the hundreds who located there and the South shore would come to Squantum if proper facilities were provided. What was needed was a good street, sewer, water and lights.

Mr. Kilpatrick, representing the Burkhardt estate, said he paid $1,100 and $1,200 a year in taxes, and he rented the whole property for $1,000. We do not use your schools but we do pay taxes on $50,000 of property. We need a good street, sewer, water and lights.

Ex-Councilman George F. Sawyer, Jr., told of the beautiful spot Squantum was, and said it was very desirable that something should be done for it. With a good street, lights, water and sewer the valuation would be doubled.

Mr. Wilson, representing the McSweeney property, also spoke of the need of a good street, lights, water and sewer.

Mr. Callahan, superintendent at Moon Island spoke along the same lines.

The hearing was closed and the order recommitted.

NEW ORDERS.

Councilman Freeman offered an order refunding Ellerton T. Williams $3.85 for poll taxes paid twice in 1905. Referred to Finance Committee.

Councilman Freeman offered an order for a gas light on Bromfield street. To Executive.

Councilman Gilson offered an order appropriating $6,000 for the purchase of a lot of land at Houghs Neck for a school building. Referred to Committee on Public Buildings.

Councilman Gelotte offered orders for lights on Putnam street, Ward One, and Franklin street, Ward Three. Referred to Executive.

Upon motion of Councilman Bryant it was voted when the Council adjourn it be until next Monday evening.

Adjourned at 10.03 until Oct. 12.

WHAT THE KIDNEYS DO.

Their Unceasing Work Keeps Us Strong and Healthy.

All the blood in the body passes through the kidneys once every three minutes. The kidneys filter the blood. They work night and day. When healthy they remove about 500 grains of impure matter daily, when unhealthy some part of this impure matter is left in the blood. This brings on many diseases and symptoms—pain in the back, headache, nervousness, hot,dry skin, rheumatism, gout, gravel, disorders of the eyesight and hearing, dizziness, irregular heart, debility, drowsiness, dropsy, deposits in the urine, etc. But if you keep the filters right you will have no trouble with your kidneys.

Mrs. Deborah Prouty, living at 85 North St., Quincy, Mass., says: "I am in a position to speak in the highest terms of Doan's Kidney Pills. My back ached nearly all the time and caused me considerable trouble. Any sudden movement, or if I attempted to stoop, sent sharp pains, through my loins. My health was much run down and I had but little strength or energy. I was very much alarmed about my condition when Doan's Kidney Pills were recommended to me. I had known so many people who had used them with beneficial results that I procured a supply at the Cox Drug Store. Three boxes convinced me that Doan's Kidney Pills were the best kidney remedy to be had and I am now in perfect health."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

Brief Locals Of a Busy City

Station Agent Arthur Poquett of Atlantic has returned from his two weeks' vacation at Alburgh, Vermont.

Miss Minnie Murdoch has returned to her home in Pictou, Nova Scotia, after a month's visit with her cousin, Mrs. Charles H. Wilkins of Old Colony avenue.

John Morgan of Standish avenue was a passenger on the "Ontario" Saturday night. He transferred to Providence and continued on to Baltimore.

Congratulations are being extended to Mr. and Mrs. Frank P. Hill from their many friends on the arrival of a son this morning. Mother and babe are both doing nicely.

Miss Ruth Bassett of Walker street returned Monday from an automobile trip to Campton Village, N. H., where a party of fifteen were registered at The Hillside Hotel over the week end.

Rev. A. Edwin Clattenburg of Wollaston is leaving town today. While away he will officiate at the wedding in Brooklyn of Miss Hodgskin and Paymaster Barron Dubois of the United States navy.

Owing to changes being made at Doble's corner, the East Milton cars will leave East Milton five minutes later than at present. In the future they will leave on the hour, 20 minutes and 40 minutes past the hour.

Miss Elizabeth Gordon, the temperance evangelist for the National organization, will be the speaker on Friday evening at the special temperance service in Bethany chapel. The Loyal Temperance Legion has been invited to attend.

Miss Mary Gilraine, Miss Mary Costello, Miss Agnes Collagan Miss Nellie Connolly, Mrs. May McCloskey were delegates from the Ladies Auxiliary, Dept. 24, A. O. H., Quincy, to the convention held in Boston last Saturday.

Charles E. Folsom of Dorchester, who went to Moosehead Lake on Sept. 22, for a fortnight, will return to his house boat at Squantum for the smelting season. His brother-in-law, Benjamin M. Truley of Ainsly street, will be an over Sunday guest of Mr. Folsom's on his return to Squantum.

W. F. Robinson of Ashmont, formerly librarian of the Boston Public Library, and twice a resident of Atlantic, wishes his many friends in this district to know that his youngest son, W. F. Robinson, Jr., is stationed at Monterey, Cal., where he is a lieutenant in the regular army. At present he is adjutant of the 8th infantry, and is officiating as quartermaster and commissary. These honors Mr. Robinson, Jr., who is twenty-seven years old, bears with great dignity.

Opening Chapters Of Lady Betty

Are you reading the Daily Ledger new serial,—"Lady Betty across the Water?" If not, it is not too late. It is said to be one of the six best novels ever written. A synopsis of the two opening chapters is given below, and an instalment will be found in the Ledger every day:

SYNOPSIS.

CHAPTER I—The story is told in the first person by Lady Betty Bulkeley, the pretty young sister of the Duke of Stanforth. She is to visit America in care of Mrs. Stuyvesant-Knox (Mrs. Ess Kay,) a leader of American society, and the latter's cousin, Miss Sally Woodburn, in order that her elder sister Victoria's prospective fiance, Sir Gilbert Mantell, may not be attracted by her.

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

ANNOUNCEMENT.

I beg to announce to the former patrons of Miss C. S. Hubbard that BUTTERICK PATTERNS which have been on sale at her store for the past twenty-two years will in future be handled by me exclusively. This company creates and moulds the styles adapted everywhere in the world as the highest standard of dress. It is the only company with permanent connections in every foreign fashion centre. Other companies copy styles after they are introduced by the Butterick Co. Cheap patterns appear on the market from time to time under various names and have short lives. They are dangerous to use so don't risk cutting your cloth from any, except a Butterick. A Butterick is just as cheap in price and they are guaranteed for accuracy and stylishness. Before a tissue paper pattern is offered for sale, a cloth garment is cut and fitted to a living model from every style decided upon. Every month I will receive all the latest styles, and as my stock is complete there will be no waiting for the sizes wanted. COME AT ONCE AND GET A FASHION SHEET. I solicit your patronage on patterns and other goods and assure you that your orders will always receive prompt attention.

CALVIN CONFIDENT

Believes He Has Excellent Chance Of Election in Tenth District

J. Mitchell Galvin, the former city clerk of Boston, has already put considerable enthusiasm into his candidacy for Congress in this district, and is confident he will be elected.

Monday evening at the Republican headquarters in the Hancock House he was tendered an informal reception by the Republican City Committee. Some of the prominent Republicans of the city were also present, and it was a pleasure to all to meet the candidate personally, to grasp his hand and partake of his enthusiasm.

President W. M. Chase presided and spoke briefly.

Candidate Galvin was then introduced. He said it was not his purpose to discuss the issues, as he had already planned for the opening rally of his campaign in Quincy, when he expected to have such speakers as Senator Lodge and Louis A. Frothingham, the candidate for Lieutenant Governor. He proposed to make it the liveliest campaign the Tenth district has ever had, and he was positively sure of the election if he received the full Republican vote, having been promised a large Democratic vote.

Whether he was elected or not he wanted to see the principles of that peerless leader, Theodore Roosevelt upheld, in the election of William H. Taft. He also had a personal tribute to Senator Lodge, who had promised his support and that of the National and State Committees to redeem the Tenth district.

Joseph A. Campbell of Boston, who told of Candidate Galvin's success as a vote getter, and of the disaffection in the Boston wards because of the methods of his rival, Mr. O'Connell.

Other speakers were ex-Senator Sprague, Former Assessor C. H. Johnson, Hon. John O. Hall, and President Chase.

After the speaking there was a social hour to meet the candidate, when refreshments were served and cigars passed.

The Rights of The Accused

The Men's Club of Christ church opened their series of entertainments for the season Monday evening with an address by Lawyer John D. Mackay, followed by a collation, songs and orchestral music. There was a large attendance and considerable enthusiasm over the prospects for an enjoyable season.

Mr. Maskay's subject was "Rights of the Accused." He said in part: The State gives to the accused every right secured to him by the Federal Constitution, and several more, but much yet remains to be done before it can be said that the defendant's interests are guarded fully enough. It is not enough to give him the right to be represented by counsel and to have summary process to enforce the attendance of witnesses. Those are barren rights unless the defendant happens to have money to pay counsel and witness fees.

The law is steadily envolving toward greater fairness, and before long you will see provision made by the legislatures whereby the defendant in every crime and misdemeanor shall be represented by an attorney at the expense of the county if he has no means of his own to secure the same.

The lower courts, where trials by jury are not enjoyed, are the courts of last resort as a rule for the man without money. There is no more unequal contest than that of a prisoner trying his own case with officers and counsel opposed to him. The requirement of proof beyond a resonable doubt is the grandest heritage of the Anglo Saxon.

La France SHOE for WOMEN

$3.00 TO $4.00

The women of America are year by year becoming more and more attached to La France shoes —a shoe made in strict accordance with the latest Parisian styles adapted to the uses and high standards of the American women.

Women are attracted by this shoe first because of its refined and beautiful appearance. Then they find — often much to their surprise — that no other shoe they ever wore was so remarkably comfortable or held its shape so well.

This is indeed a rare combination to be found in one shoe — due to new and improved methods of leather selection and workmanship.

Mere description does not do this shoe justice — trying it on is a revelation.

We hope you will come in and try on a pair of La France shoes, as we think they will give you some entirely new ideas.

People were very kind, and, though they laughed a great deal, they gave so much that before we'd been half the rounds Mr. Doremus said we had more than enough for our friend. He wanted to know if I would like to "hit the nail on the head" and settle matters at once by arranging with the purser for a second class cabin to be put at the hero's disposal. I wanted him to do that part alone, but he pretended to be shy and said he had grown to depend so entirely on my cooperation that he felt unequal to undertaking any responsibility without it. He told the same story to the purser that he had told others about my being the one to start the subscription, and he wanted me to sign a kind of letter which he wrote, to the effect that the passengers had chosen this way of testifying their appreciation of a gallant deed and so on, but I wouldn't, and he stopped teasing at last when he saw that I was going to be vexed.

There were two heads bobbing like black corks.

After the business was what Mr. Doremus called "fixed up," he took me back to my chair on deck. Sally wasn't in her place, and as I was wondering what had become of her the dressing for dinner bugle went wailing over the ship like a hungry banshee. I said to myself that Sally must have gone early because her frock was to be particularly elaborate. I felt conscious of having heaps of interesting things to tell, and I understood exactly what Victoria means when she says she's in one of her "pretty and popular moods."

I danced into our stateroom, where only a drawn curtain covers the open doorway. No one was there, and the cabin was so quiet that it seemed to greet me with a warning "S-sh!"

Down fell my spirits with a dull thud, though I didn't know why. My joyousness changed to what story book writers describe as a "foreboding of disaster," but when I have it it's generally connected with a lecture from mother, so I know it only as a sneaky "I haven't eaten the cream" sort of feeling.

Just as I had begun to take off my frock Louise appeared at the door which leads into the little drawing room. She said that if I pleased madam would be glad to see me in her cabin. I hurried across to the other stateroom opposite to ours and there found Mrs. Ess Kay in a gorgeously embroidered pink satin Japanese thing which she calls a kimona. She was sitting in a chair in front of the makeshift dressing table putting on her rings and clasping bracelets on her wrists with vicious snaps. Sally, who hadn't begun to dress, was standing up looking almost cross—that is, with different features from hers she might have succeeded in looking cross.

"Sit down, Betty, please, I want to talk to you," said Mrs. Ess Kay.

Somehow it always makes me feel stiff when she "Betty's" me, as my old nurse says it does with your ears if you eat broad beans.

"If I do I shall be late for dinner," said I, just as if a minute ago I hadn't been dying to pour out my news.

"Never mind dinner, my dear girl," replied Mrs. Ess Kay, with an air which I do believe she tried to copy from mother. "What I have to say is more important than dinner. I hope what I have been hearing isn't true."

"That depends upon what it was," I retorted, disguising my pertness with a smile.

"Don't think I've been tattling," said Sally. "Whatever my faults may be, I haven't a rubber neck."

I didn't know in the least what she meant. But afterward she explained that if your neck is always pivoting around to pry into other people's affairs it is a rubber neck, and I shall remember the expression to tell Stan when I go home. He will like to add it to his collection of strange beasts.

Mrs. Ess Kay partly turned her back upon Sally. "The dear duchess" (she always speaks of mother in that way), "the dear duchess has intrusted you to my charge, Betty, and I don't know what I shall do if you take advantage of me by playing naughty tricks whenever I am incapacitated from chaperoning you for half an hour."

One would have thought I was a trained dog! I simply stared with saucer eyes, and she went on. "Mrs. Collingwood came in to inquire for my headache, and she told me that you have been running about begging for money to give to a common man in the steerage. I sent instantly for Sally, but she either knows or pretends to know nothing."

I rushed into explanations, sure that when Mrs. Ess Kay understood I should be pronounced "not guilty." But, to my surprise, her chin grew squarer and squarer and her eyes harder and lighter till they looked almost white.

"I don't want to be harsh," she said at last in the tone people use when they're walking on the ragged edge of their patience, "but for the duchess' sake I must be firm. It was very wrong of Tommy Doremus to let you make yourself so conspicuous. This may lead to your being dreadfully misunderstood and putting yourself and all of us in a false position. The man may be a butcher, for all you know."

"His complexion isn't pink and white enough for a butcher's," said I. "Besides, I thought that in America one man was as good as another."

"You were never more mistaken in your life, my dear girl, and the sooner you correct such an impression the better or you may get into serious trouble from which I can't save you. If the steerage man isn't a butcher, he's probably a professional swimmer and the whole thing was a scheme to advertise himself. In fact, I am pretty certain from what Mrs. Collingwood said it was that. And I want you to promise me solemnly that you will not go around helping to advertise the creature any more. If you say you admire such a person, people will think you're like the matinee girls who wait at stage doors and run after actors."

I was so angry that I "talked back," and it finally ended in our relations being somewhat strained at dinner, which ruined my appetite until a peculiarly soothing iced pudding came on.

Afterward Mrs. Ess Kay was cool to Mr. Doremus and would have been cold, I think, if he weren't Mrs. Van der Windt's cousin. He lounged up to our place on deck to give me the news that the third class hero (as he calls the bronze young man) refused to be second class. He had asked permission to give the cabin offered him to the child whose life he had saved and the mother.

"It's for you to say yes or no, Lady Betty," announced Mr. Doremus, "because it's your show. You set the top spinning."

"She is to have nothing more to do with the affair," Mrs. Ess Kay answered for me quickly. "She is very sorry she commenced it and has lost the small interest she felt in the beginning. I do hope that tramp or beggar or whatever he is hasn't got it in his conceited head that Lady Betty Bulkeley has bothered herself about his insignificant affairs, or he'll be thrusting himself upon her notice in some way which will be very disagreeable for me, as her guardian."

"Well, he has sent a message of thanks to every one concerned," said Mr. Tommy Doremus. "I don't know whether he put Lady Betty at the top of the list or not, and if that's the way you feel about our nice little stunt I expect it's just as well not to inquire further."

All the rest of the trip has been spoiled for me by the hateful way in which the excitement of that day ended, and it does seem too bad, for everything might have been so nice.

Whether people really do make ill natured jokes or not I don't know. But anyhow, Mrs. Ess Kay keeps hinting that they do, which is almost as disagreeable for me. She says that they have nicknamed the bronze man "Lady Betty's hero," and this has made me so self conscious that I can't bear to go near the part of the deck where you look over into the steerage for fear some silly creatures may think I'm trying to see him. I feel as if I had been a conspicuous idiot, and I'm so uncomfortable with Mrs. Ess Kay now that I expect to be wretched in her house. I can't talk it over even with Sally, because after all she's Mrs. Ess Kay's cousin. I wish I had a nose two inches long and green hair, and then perhaps mother and Vic would have let me stop at home.

Still I can't help taking an interest in ship life, and now that it's the morning of the last day on board I look back on it all as if it ought to have been even more fun than it was.

I enjoyed hearing about the marconigrams when they came. It seemed like living in a tale by Stan's favorite, Jules Verne, to have messages come flying to us in midocean like invisible carrier pigeons. I enjoyed having Mr. Doremus tell me about his luck in the big pools when the men bet on the day's run, and I'm afraid I rather reveled in seeing a row on deck one evening when one man accused another of being a cheat and a professional gambler and almost cried about some money he'd lost. If I had been the first man I wouldn't have trusted the other in the beginning, because he had fat lips, greasy black curls and wicked eyes so close together you felt they might run into one if he winked too hard on a hot day. But if I had been so stupid as to trust him I would have been ashamed to make a fuss afterward. I think people ought to be sporting.

I liked the "captain's dinner," too, in honor of the last night on board, with the flags and paper flower decorations, the band playing military music, the dishes on the menu named after famous generals and the stewards filing in in a long procession when the salon had been darkened, each carrying a bright colored, illuminated ice and cake with tiny English and American and German flags stuck into the top.

Yes, I liked everything, except—but now it is nearly over. America is just round the corner of the world.

Humor and Philosophy

By DUNCAN M. SMITH

THE CONTENTED.

When crops are good and prices high
The man with wheat to sell
Cannot believe that times are hard
And all things are not well.
For him the outlook is so fair,
So rosy is the hue,
He cannot see why all the world
Can't take his point of view.

The man who has a pleasant job
That pays him ready cash
Cannot believe the world is just
About to go to smash
Or that the times are out of joint
Since he is in the swim.
There may be rumblings underground,
But things look good to him.

The chap with money in the bank
And rents that come to hand
An outcry of calamity
Can hardly understand.
Since he can meet the grocer man
With an unflinching eye,
He cannot see how any one
On dollars can be shy.

And so it is, if fortune has
Been of a friendly turn,
He cannot see why every one
Has not some change to burn.
The world looks good to him indeed,
As melons ripe on ice,
And everything is quite O. K.
If he has got the price.

Diplomatic.

In one of the progressive western states where the women go to the polls along with their brothers and deposit their ballot for the candidate they like best an orator was addressing an audience in which the fair sex predominated.

"I see before me," he said, "so many who will cast their ballot for the first time"—

He got their votes.

Joking.

"Oh, say, can't you take a joke?" asked the smart young man as the fellow whose ear he was tickling scowled.

"Oh, yes, I can take a joke all right and shove it right along," returned the scowling young man as he reached for smarty's chin with his right.

Unresponsive.

"My dear, I think we must have been married in a former incarnation."

"Does it seem that long?" replied the brute.

Averaging Up.

The man who doesn't know his mind
And can't tell what to do
Should go at once and get a wife.
She'll have a mind for two.

Made Him Desirable.

"Had a good time, Johnny?"

"You bet. Been playing with the Burr boy."

"Do you like him?"

"Naw, but I ain't allowed to play with him."

Matter of Fact Youth.

"But can you support a wife?"

"Sir!"

"I said can you support a wife."

"I have never been married. How can you expect me to answer that question?"

Vulnerable Spot.

"Knocked him out in one blow, I hear."

"Yes, and no wonder."

"Why?"

"Hit him in the solar perplexus."

"CANNONISM" ISSUE IN WEST

Churches Are Taking an Active Part In the Campaign

PUBLIC SENTIMENT AROUSED

Several Republican Nominees For Congressional Seats Pledge Constituencies Not to Vote For Uncle Joe For Speaker--His Record Attacked In Methodist Conference--Re-election, However, Anticipated

Chicago, Oct. 6.—One of the most illuminating phenomena of this campaign is the widespread and active hostility in the middle western states to Joseph G. Cannon, speaker of the house of representatives. This antagonism against the continuance in power of Cannon emphasizes more distinctly and more acutely than any other phase of the present canvass the aroused and awakened moral sentiment which is at present the dominating political factor in the upper Mississippi valley.

SPEAKER CANNON.

"The preachers and the church folks are after Uncle Joe, and in this country when they go after a man they generally get him sooner or later," said a man from down the state. "Cannon laid himself open to a stinging reply when he asked Bryan where he got his money. The reply of the Democratic candidate left the speaker floundering. He has never told where he got his fortune."

More than half a score of the Republican nominees for congressional seats from Wisconsin, Minnesota, Nebraska, Missouri and Kansas have pledged their constituencies not to vote for Cannon for speaker of the next congress. Virtually every Wisconsin Republican nominee for congress will have to promise not to vote for Cannon for speaker. They have been forced to do this by the public sentiment in their districts.

Republican nominees for congress from various nearby states have come here to Republican headquarters and told their friends that they did not want Cannon sent into their districts to make speeches; that in the present state of public opinion his presence would do them more harm than good.

How hotly contested is the fight Cannon is making in his own district for re-election may be measured by the number and the prominence of the speakers who are being sent into it by the campaign committee. James S. Sherman, Representative Longworth and Representative Wilson were the principal speakers at a meeting in Danville.

While these speeches were being made in Cannon's home town, the speaker was being made the target of severe criticism at the annual Rock River conference of the Methodist Episcopal church at the Woodlawn Park church here in Chicago. The opening session of the 300 ministers was given over to a demonstration against the liquor traffic.

Rev. P. A. Baker, general superintendent of the Anti-Saloon league, was the chief speaker. He was applauded when he referred to Cannon as "the greatest barrier to moral advancement in the country," and again when he asserted that "from ocean to ocean the applause responded" when Cannon's record was attacked. "There is no surrender in this war," said Baker. "If we have to make an entirely new congress to get rid of this man, we will."

It is pretty plain that "Cannonism" is an issue of the campaign in this part of the country. It is not generally expected, among those who are opposing Cannon, that he will be defeated for re-election, or that he will be refused the speakership of the Sixty-First congress in the event of the Republicans again have a majority.

DEBS AT THE HUB

Attacks Old Parties and Gets Back at Bryan and Gompers

Boston, Oct. 6.—Large crowds turned out at Westfield, Springfield, Worcester, Natick and Boston to greet Eugene V. Debs, Socialist candidate for the presidency, in the dash of his red special across Massachusetts yesterday. The climax of the enthusiastic receptions was in Boston last night, where Debs, nearly three hours late, addressed an audience that had overflowed Faneuil hall.

Eight thousand people, with three bands, waited at the South station for the red special, but obtained no glimpse of the Socialist leader, as he was asleep, and the train was switched to the North station. It was in this switching that the long delay occurred.

In the meantime Socialist leaders were holding the attention of the crowd at Faneuil hall. The crowd waited patiently for Debs' arrival and when he appeared the throng, among whom were many women, burst into frantic cheering and a rush was made to the platform to grasp the candidate's hand. Red flags were waved, but beyond the outbursts of enthusiasm there was no disorder and the large squad of police had little difficulty in keeping the crowd within bounds.

Mr. Debs spoke for less than an hour, criticising the Democratic and Republican parties severely and lashing Bryan and Samuel Gompers, linking the name of the labor leader with the so-called tobacco trust. The greater portion of Debs' speech, however, was devoted to an exposition of the socialistic theories, and a plea for the laboring men to realize their power and to throw it for the Socialist party.

Taft In the "Show Me" State

Macon, Mo., Oct. 6.—William H. Taft made three speeches in Kansas and thirteen in Missouri yesterday. Eight of the stops were arranged upon urgent demands from towns through which the special was to have passed without stopping. This resulted in delaying the Taft special more than hour and the big audience at this place had to wait until nearly 10 o'clock for the appearance of the candidate.

Throughout the day Taft hammered away on the necessity for the voters of the country to know that Democratic tariff revision meant a destruction of the market and prices of the products of the farm; that Republican revision meant a continuation of present prices and prosperity. He told the Missourians that Bryan would destroy the trusts by putting trust-made articles on the free list and by making a law prohibiting a trust from manufacturing or controlling more than 50 percent of any article. While such a law, Taft believed, would be difficult to enact, he predicted that its enforcement would be disastrous.

The Bay State Campaign

Wayland, Mass., Oct. 6.—With a flag-raising, followed by the unfolding of a banner bearing the pictures of the Republican candidates for president and governor, the Republican campaign was opened in this state here before an audience made up of Republicans and Democrats alike from surrounding towns. The speakers included Lieutenant Governor Eben S. Draper, candidate for governor, and Louis A. Frothingham, candidate for lieutenant governor. Draper's speech was more of a personal than political one, as, he said, he was talking to the friends of his family, his father and grandfather having been born in Wayland. He said that his paternal ancestors were instrumental in founding the first free public library in the state, which was established in this town.

Bryan Greeted With Fireworks

Havelock, Neb., Oct. 6.—William J. Bryan's arrival here from Lincoln in a special trolley car, accompanied by 100 members of the Lincoln Home Guards, was the signal for a great demonstration. The carriage in which he rode to the city park, where he spoke to a large audience, ran a gauntlet of red fire and roman candles while the throngs on the sidewalks vociferously cheered him. His remarks dwelt mainly on the subject of campaign publicity, election of senators by direct vote of the people and the labor planks in the Denver platform.

"Got $100,000 From Standard Oil"

Baltimore, Oct. 6.—"When President Roosevelt so sweepingly condemned Haskell for his alleged connection with the Standard Oil company, he perhaps forgot that in 1904 his Roosevelt committee received $100,000 from the Standard Oil company for the campaign fund, and spent it." This statement by Alton B. Parker of New York brought to their feet in a burst of wild applause some 6000 Democrats, who assembled here last night to hear him.

Never Spoke Against Pensions

Lincoln, Neb., Oct. 6.—In an interview given out late yesterday by W. J. Bryan, he denies that he ever made a speech or wrote an editorial against the granting of pensions to soldiers. On the contrary, he declares that all of his platforms have endorsed pensions and that he favors a liberal pension policy.

Denial From Longworth

Cincinnati, Oct. 6.—Congressman Longworth denounced as a campaign lie the story that in a speech at Rock Castle, Ills., he proposed that after W. H. Taft had served two terms as president, that President Roosevelt would again be a candidate for the presidency.

Died by Her Own Hand

Phillips, Me., Oct. 6.—A verdict of suicide was reported by the jury which held an inquest on the death of Mrs. Carroll Knapp, whose death by shooting in her home here was believed by her relatives to have been caused by foul play at the hands of a stranger. A doctor testified that Mrs. Knapp had expressed to him a desire to die, saying she could not stand her mental trouble much longer.

Kermit on Football Team

Cambridge, Mass., Oct. 6.—Kermit Roosevelt, the second son of President Roosevelt, was yesterday given first choice as tackle on the freshman football team in the first day of scrimmage the eleven has had. Roosevelt went in at right tackle on the first eleven, and, although the second team continually sent plays at him, he made a good showing.

TAFT'S WORK IN CHINA

He Rehabilitated Our National Reputation.

CHECKED COURT ABUSES.

Cleared the United States Banner From the Dishonor That American Criminals Had Brought Upon It. Readjusted Consular Service.

It was chiefly through the influence and at the instigation of Mr. Taft that the recent rehabilitation of our national reputation in China was accomplished by the establishment of the United States court in China. Until Mr. Taft became a paramount figure in the far east scandalous conditions had prevailed in Shanghai and other cities of China where the United States exercised extra territorial rights. Undesirable subjects of the United States, men and women, had degraded the American flag by using it as a cloak under which to conduct numerous nefarious enterprises. American sharpers, gamblers and promoters of questionable schemes had long worked in conjunction with discredited lawyers to their mutual and illegal gain. In various instances these criminal endeavors were aided and abetted by American consular officers, who were dismissed from the service. The former practice of adjudicating all causes in which Americans were parties in consular courts gave rise to abuses. The American flag, in Shanghai particularly, stood for national dishonor in the eyes of other nations who by legislation and the creating of proper courts had spared their flags the disgrace that descended upon the United States banner.

When he was at the head of the Philippine government in Manila Mr. Taft by his proximity to China soon appreciated the seriousness of the conditions there and foresaw the loss of standing in the eyes of the Chinese to which we were indifferently exposing ourselves by our failure to keep in check American criminals. He brought the matter to the attention of the state department and joined with Secretary Root, Representative Edwin Denby of Michigan, a son of the former United States minister to China; Charles Denby, another son, who is now consul general at Shanghai; Senator Spooner and some others in an endeavor to remedy conditions. He exerted his influence to obtain the passage by congress of a bill creating the United States court for China. Lebbeus Redmond Wilfley of Missouri, who had been Mr. Taft's attorney general in the Philippines, was named as judge.

Mr. Taft from the first took a deep personal interest in the work of Judge Wilfley and his court. In a way he supervised its work and was frequently appealed to by Judge Wilfley for advice as to procedure and other details. The lack of adequate laws hampered Judge Wilfley, but by proceeding in accordance with the common law he quickly made the court effective. Within a few months after the court was organized Shanghai and other cities in China where conditions were such as to require it were thoroughly and drastically cleaned up. Shyster American lawyers were disbarred, so that the gamblers, disreputable women and other offenders against the law were deprived of legal support. The reputable American lawyers in good standing aided Judge Wilfley. Heavy fines and terms of imprisonment exercised a deterrent effect upon the lawbreakers, many of whom summarily fled from China before the court could bring them to account for their misdeeds.

When Mr. Taft was in Shanghai last fall he was heartily thanked and congratulated by the law abiding Americans there for the part he had taken in removing the stigma from the American flag and restoring the good fame of the national name in the orient. In his speech before the American association in China he paid a high tribute to Judge Wilfley, saying in part:

"Our government was forunate in the selection as the first judge of the court of a gentleman who had had four years' experience in the orient as attorney general of the Philippines and who went to Shanghai with an intimate knowledge of the method of uniting in one administration the principles of the common law of the United States with the traditions and conditions of a foreign country. His policy in raising high the standard of admission to the bar and in promoting the vigorous prosecution of American violators of law, which eliminated from that community many undesirable characters who had brought disgrace upon the name of Americans in the cities of China, cannot but commend itself to any one interested in the good name of the United States among the Chinese people and with our brethren of other countries who live in China."

Free trade England is alarmed again at the physical deterioration of her "submerged classes." In this land of protection the rule of social progress is that of emergence and physical, mental and moral development.

Public ownership of the railroads would add $1,000,000,000 to the public debt, but William Jennings Bryan doesn't worry about a little thing like that.

Republican voters will make the "peerless one" without a peer in the number of his defeats.

Bryan has discovered the proper ratio between paralysis and prosperity. It is himself.

STRIKERS LOSE LONG FIGHT

Canadian Pacific Railway Mechanics Surrender to Employers

Winnipeg, Man., Oct. 6.—After severely denouncing the leaders of the strike at a mass meeting held here, J. H. McVetty and Bell Hardy in particular coming in for a scoring, the Canadian Pacific railway mechanics who have been on strike accepted the terms of surrender offered. This is a complete victory for the company.

Montreal, Oct. 6.—D. McNicoll, first vice president and general manager of the Canadian Pacific railway, gave out a statement on the strike situation. He said:

"The company has made no terms and has offered the strikers no conditions. The men, if they return to work, will do so on the same conditions that existed prior to the strike. The company will give employment to as many men as it can find room for. The men employed since the strike began will not be discharged except for inefficiency."

WILL TESTIFY AGAINST HUSBAND

Mrs. Hains Will Render No Assistance In Murder Trial

New York, Oct. 6.—Although counsel for Mrs. Peter C. Hains, Jr., failed to file an affidavit of specifications in support of her motion for alimony, counsel fees and the custody of her children, in the suit for absolute divorce brought by her husband shortly before his shooting of William E. Annis, that fact, it appears, is not to entail a default by her in the proceedings. Weldon C. Percy, attorney for Hains in the divorce action, was notified that Mrs. Hains' affidavit would be filed today.

The omission to enter the affidavit yesterday gave rise to a rumor that Mrs. Hains had decided to admit the truth of her husband's charges and thus aid him in his forthcoming trial for the murder of Annis, but this was set at rest by Percy. "If Mrs. Hains takes any active part in the murder trial," said Percy, "it will be as a witness for the prosecution and not for the defense."

The October grand jury, to which the Hains case will be presented, was sworn in yesterday at Flushing. The prompt return of an indictment is expected against Hains.

DEATH SUMMONS BISHOP TIERNEY

He Displayed Great Vitality After a Stroke of Apoplexy

Hartford, Oct. 6.—The long and busy life of Rt. Rev. Michael Tierney, bishop of Hartford, ended yesterday afternoon, when he succumbed to the stroke of apoplexy which bore him down on Saturday evening. In the sick room at the time were gathered many of the priests of the diocese, in addition to the clergymen of the household and of St. Joseph's cathedral, a number of members of religious orders and the immediate relatives of the prelate.

The end had been expected since Sunday night, yet only an hour before death came the physicians had marvelled at the vitality of the patient and even thought he might live several hours. There had been three sinking spells during the day, but a slight rally followed. Bishop Tierney did not regain consciousness, which left him early on Sunday, and he died peacefully and with a smile on his face.

Horse Thieves Rob Deputy Davis

North Castle, N. Y., Oct. 6.—The stables on the country place of Richard Harding Davis, the author-playwright, here, were broken into and three valuable horses stolen. Only a few weeks ago Davis was appointed a deputy sheriff of Westchester county, the news giving rise to considerable comment of a humorous character. Losses of horses from other stables are reported in the neighborhood.

Ten Eyck Settles With Gauss

Salem, Mass., Oct. 6.—The proceedings against James H. Ten Eyck, Jr., have been discontinued. Young Ten Eyck was charged with the larceny of $1500 from Stephen S. Gauss of this city. Ten Eyck's lawyer came here and paid $1500 to Gauss' father and also made payment to the city and county officials for all the expenses of the proceedings against Ten Eyck.

Twenty Thousand In Parade

Philadelphia, Oct. 6.—Business in Philadelphia was practically at a standstill while the citizens gave themselves over to the celebration of the 225th birthday anniversary of the city. Probably the greatest throng that ever gathered along Broad street witnessed the parade of 20,000 soldiers and sailors of the United States and of the National Guard of Pennsylvania.

Matron Stakes Won by Helmet

Belmont Park, N. Y., Oct. 6.—James R. Keene's Helmet, ridden by Notter, easily won the $11,630 Matron stakes for colts and geldings over the six-furlong straight course at Belmont Park. S. C. Hildreth's Joe Madden, purchased from J. E. Madden recently for $10,000, was second, with August Belmont's Practical third.

Norfolk County And Vicinity

A socialist orator mounted a box in Central square, RANDOLPH, on Saturday evening, but he was not allowed to go very far in his speech, because boys interrupted him and wouldn't let him speak.

Constables Packard and Oliver of AVON arrested Dominick McGrassea, on Sunday at his home on High street for drunkenness and disturbing the peace. He had been tearing down fences about adjoining property.

The new road built on Plymouth street, HOLBROOK, has caused much trouble to teams passing that way. Last week two granite teams got stuck there and had to be pulled out.

Bishop Lawrence will confirm a class at St. Stephen's Episcopal church, COHASSET, on Sunday, Oct. 25.

The smelt fishermen were out in large numbers Sunday in Weir river and HINGHAM bay. The catches average the best of the season. There were many down from Boston and vicinity and had good luck.

Mrs. Mary E. Seeley, wife of William Seeley, V. C. V., of SHARON, died Sunday at her home Bay road.

The condition of the diphtheria patients in WELLESLEY is much improved. The board of health has allowed the Hunnewell school to be opened. The school has been closed the greater part of the week, and has been thoroughly fumigated. It is thought that precautions were taken just in time.

James Manning Seamans, the oldest member of the Boston Chamber of Commerce, died Monday at his home in BROOKLINE. He was 84 years old. Mr. Seamans was in the grocery business for forty years, and retired about three years ago. He leaves a daughter and a son, the latter carrying on his grocery business.

The automobile "traps" in Dedham and Norwood made a great catch last week, several over-speeding machines being stopped. The owners were fined in the Dedham court on Monday to the amount of $195 in all.

Foot Ball And Other Sports

The High school team plays its third home game this afternoon at Merrymount Parn, Watertown being the opposing team. The local team has shown up much better than the Watertown eleven, and should be a winner this afternoon. The same team that beat Medford on Saturday will line up against Watertown today, and a fast game is expected.

The American league whist score published in Sunday's papers, placed Hoxie and Dow, the Quincy players near the bottom of the list with a score of four and one-half minus. The score should have been four and one-half plus which would place them third in the list.

Prof. Skibini, the world's greatest aeronaut, will make an ascension each day, at the mammoth sale at Paul Wild terrace. He will go up in his big balloon and drop to the earth in a parachute. All this to please the people and attract them to this land sale where the greatest bargains are in store. Only three minutes from Quincy Square.

It is gratifying to note that the suggestion made in the Daily Ledger last week, in regard to roping off the football field, has been carried out. The results, as seen in Saturday's game, surely warrant the action, for there was no trouble whatever with crowd, and there was a good crowd there, too. Even when the ball was on the 2-yard line, the most exciting point of the game, there was no trouble.

In the crowd at Saturday's game were noticed Duncan and Comins, former stars at High school. The latter played on Capt. Moody's crack team of 1905, which went through the year without being scored against.

Clapp and Howe of the local team played as fast a game in the backfield, as any of the visiting backs that have been here this season. This pair certainly played a fast game against Medford on Saturday.

The forward pass was tried about a dozen times by each side on Saturday, and it worked just twice for Quincy. This play, if worked right, makes the game spectacular, and is a great ground gainer, but if it is failing time after time, it slows up the game and loses ground.

The Quincy team wants a good kicker now, and a lot of time should be given to this department of the game. The kicking Saturday was wofully weak, on both sides.

Our Motto:
"Don't Let Us Alone!"

That National Prosperity Association wants everybody to quit "agitating." Its motto is "Let Us Alone." Well, that may be all right for the immense commercial concerns of the country—the manufacturers, etc.—but it is all wrong for the ordinary business house.

You don't want people to let you alone. You want them to come around and buy goods, don't you?

But they will let you alone unless you "agitate."

And the way to agitate is to ADVERTISE.

AMERICAN LEAGUE RACE

Today's Games Will Decide Which Team Takes the Pennant

The eyes of the baseball world are centred upon Chicago and New York today. In the former city the American League championship is to be decided. In the latter, the chances for New York to compete with the Chicago Cubs for the honors in the National League will again be weighed in the balance.

Cleveland's defeat by St. Louis in the first game yesterday eliminates Lajoie's team as a pennant possibility. It is either the Detroits or the Chicago Americans.

Stewart Reported Unfit For Service

Washington, Oct. 6.—The medical board of army officers, in the case of Colonel William F. Stewart, placed in command of the ungarrisoned post at Fort Grant, Ariz., by President Roosevelt, reported that officer incapacitated from active service "on account of heart disease which he first exhibited thirty-four years ago." This action does not end the case. Stewart will present testimony and produce witnesses of his own before a retiring board.

Slight Prohibition Loss

New Haven, Oct. 6.—A great battle was fought in about eighty of the towns of Connecticut yesterday between the temperance forces and those who favor the licensing of the sale of intoxicating liquors. The result cannot be accurately told, as returns from towns come in slowly. Last year the result showed 72 license towns to 96 no-license. This year the result promises to be about 75 license to 93 no-license.

Long before the Christian era the philosophers of Egypt, Greece and Rome knew far more about eclipses and the cause of them than is known by a large majority of the men of average education at the present day.

The Regent Diamond.

The Regent diamond, probably the most perfect brilliant ever cut, weighs in its present state 136¾ carats. The Kohinoor lost in the recutting 82½ carats and now weighs 102½ carats. The Regent was so named from the fact that it was acquired from Louis XV. by the Duke of Orleans, then regent of France.

Reception to the Founder of D. R.

Adams chapter of this city was well represented on Monday at the reception given by the State society at the Vendome to Mrs. Flora Adams Darling of Washington, founder of the Daughters of the Revolution.

In the receiving party with Mrs. Darling were the president-general of the national society, Mrs. Adeline F. Fitz of Wakefield, Mrs. Alice M. Granger of Randolph, the Massachusetts state regent; also the past state regents, Mrs. Sarah Lee Mortimer, Mrs. Mary A. Chapman and Mrs. Caroline P. Heath.

Mrs. Darling has presented to the Massachusetts society, Daughters of the Revolution, a valuable collection of books, documents and photographs relative to revolutionary and historical persons and events in memory of her sister, the late Mrs. LeRoy Sunderland Smith, who was a charter member of the society.

This afternoon Adams chapter has the honor of entertaining Mrs. Darling at their headquarters the birthplace of President John Adams. She is accompanied by a sister and other relatives.

NEW ENGLAND FAIR.

Monday, Oct. 5, a reception and dinner was tendered the members of the Massachusetts Press Association and ladies by the Massachusetts Retail Grocers' Association at the Mechanics building, Boston. The march to dinner, from the reception room to the banquet hall was headed by Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Dowse, Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Humphrey, Mr. and Mrs. A. T. Faunce, Mr. and Mrs. Henry W. Mansfield, Mr. and Mrs. George C. Fairbanks.

About 150 people enjoyed the seven course dinner while Simmons' Woman's orchestra played popular selections. After dinner brief speeches were made by Mr. Dowse, secretary of the Massachusetts Retail Grocers' Association and Senor Valino M. Freza, leader of Mexican band. Then in twoes a procession was formed and the places of interest in the mammoth building were visited. The principal attractions were Bostocks arena in the basements and the Mexican banks.

The fair formally open to the public that evening at seven o'clock and there was a grand rush for admittance at each entrance. It is estimated that 50,000 people were admitted. Many of the booths were not completed, but now the fair is fully open and we can truthfully say it is much better than last year in many respects.

BALLOON ASCENSION.

The Northern Land company will hold a mammoth land sale at Paul Wild Terrace, Washington street, on Thursday, Friday and Saturday. Balloon ascensions and parachute jumping are among the features arranged for the enjoyment of the people at this sale. The prices are away down and this is the last chance to buy one of these lots at such a low price. See "ad" in today's paper.

Reception to The Founder

Adams chapter, Daughters of the Revolution, had the honor on Tuesday of entertaining Mrs. Flora Adams Darling of Washington, D. C., the founder of the Daughters of the Revolution, an estimable lady about 65 years of age. She was very anxious to visit the "City of Presidents" as she is a descendant of the Adamses. Mrs. Darling was accompanied by sister, Mrs. Jones of Fall River, and her niece, Mrs. Thompson of Dorchester.

In the absence of the regent, the vice regent, Mrs. Frank Brewer, received the distinguished guest. The reception was entirely informal and social.

The visitors were delighted with their inspection of both the Adams houses, for they visited the birthplace of President John Quincy Adams as well as President John Adams, and went from cellar to attic. They were much entertained with the reminiscences of Benjamin King, the curator of the Quincy Historical Society, who was acquainted with Daniel Webster, and told of his dying hours. Flags were flying at both houses.

Mrs. Darling presented Adams chapter with a picture of her late sister, Mrs. Smith; a piece of Confederate money in a frame; and a memorial of her nephew in the recent Spanish war.

Refreshments were served by the ladies of the chapter.

Mrs. Darling left Quincy on the 5 P. M. train.

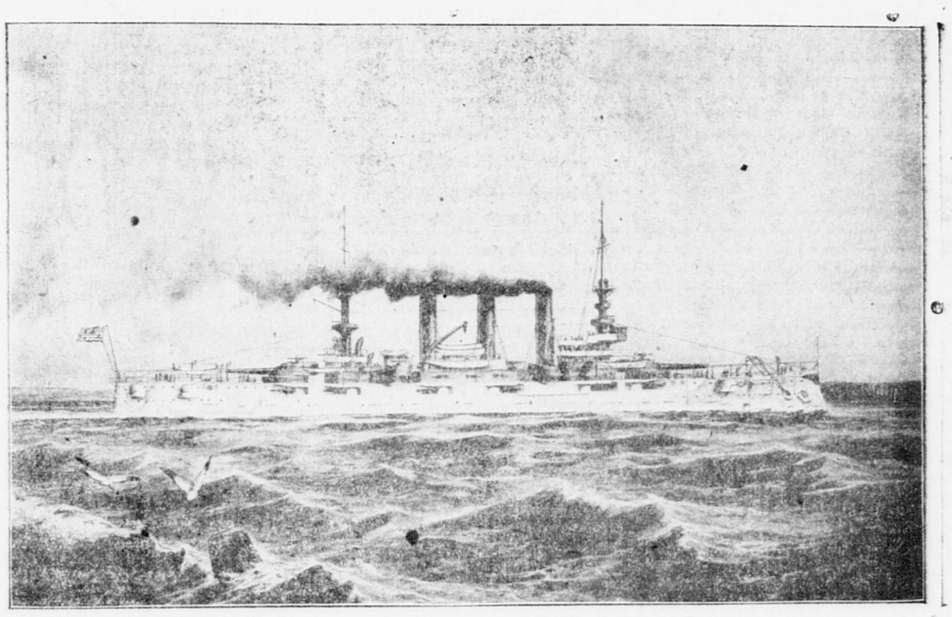
Today she is entertained on one of the warships in Boston harbor.

New Dolphins At Point Bridge

The monthly meeting of the trustees of the Fore River bridge was held this morning in the office of Mayor Shea at City Hall. The matter of needed repairs to the bridge was discussed, and it was voted to put in some new dolphins, and make some needed repairs. Work on these repairs will be commenced immediately.

QUINCY BUILT WARSHIPS.

To Go Through the Suez Canal Early in January, and Then Visit France and Italy---The Revised Itinerary.



BATTLESHIP VERMONT.

Launched at Quincy, August 31, 1905.

The Quincy built warships—the Vermont, the Rhode Island and the New Jersey—are expected to reach the Suez canal on Jan. 5.

A revised itinerary of the Atlantic battleship fleet, under the commandof Rear Admiral Charles S. Sperry, from Manila to the United States, has been made out by the navy department.

The 16 battleships are expected to leave Manila Dec. 1, after having made a visit to Japan; will arrive at Colombo Dec. 14, leave there Dec. 20, and arrive at Suez Jan. 5.

The vessels will pass through the canal and coal at Port Said as expeditiously as possible, and as soon as they are coaled will proceed to Mediterranean ports, the dates of the arrival at these ports being approximate and dependent upon the rapidity with which the ships can pass

A PRACTICAL ANNEXATION

Austria Gathers In the Provinces of Bosnia and Herzegovina

TURKEY APPEALS TO POWERS

Demands Protection Guaranteed Her by Berlin Treaty--War Considered Out of the Question--Francis Joseph Severely Criticised--Conference of Powers Expected to Be Held to Consider Complication

London, Oct. 7.—The second and culminating step in the Austro-Bulgarian program for the aggrandizement of themselves at the expense of the status established by the treaty of Berlin was consummated last night, when Emperor Francis Joseph formally proclaimed the practical annexation of Bosnia and Herzegovina to the dual monarchy.

The present situation is as follows: Turkey calls upon the powers to preserve to her what they guaranteed by that treaty. Austria and Bulgaria strongly declare their determination to keep what they have taken. Servia is protesting belligerently against being hemmed in more strongly between two unpopular neighbors and against having the Servians in Bosnia absorbed into the Austro-Hungarian nationality.

The other powers concerned in the Berlin treaty are discussing the holding of an international conference, a mere preliminary of which the present situation is one of the most delicate problems. Turkey's unexpectedly restrained policy minimizes the possibilities of war, which now is considered out of the question.

The English papers unite in praising Turkey's moderation and in denouncing Austria. The Standard, in a typical utterance, says:

"We are sorry for the aged emperor. We regret that so late in his long and honorable career he has chosen to sully his name with a deed which will go down in history alongside of the partition of Poland."

Several of the London newspapers question whether or not Emperor Francis Joseph is acting against his will.

A conference of the powers is expected to be held within two or three months if it can be arranged, but no one imagines that it will undo this week's work. Austria declines even to discuss annexation and the most that is expected is some arrangement that will save Turkey's pride.

Before the powers agree to enter upon a conference they probably will be obliged to define its scope, which will be a hard task. British statesmen suggest that compensation be made to Turkey and that guarantees be given against further disturbance of the status quo.

It is considered beyond belief that any congress would risk a general war by attempting to undo the acts of Bulgaria and Austria. The supreme test is being applied to the Young Turk party. If it should insist on war it is undone. It may be believed that the patriotism and intelligence that enabled it to win a bloodless victory over the sultan will prevent it playing into the hands of the old regime.

Of course there always is the chance that an unauthorized frontier clash may precipitate hostilities, especially, as is well known, the Bulgarians think very well of their Army and believe that it could enter Constantinople before the Turkish army could be mobilized for its defense. And the danger does not lie wholly in the hands of Bulgaria and Turkey. Servia is greatly agitated over the Austrian annexation of Bosnia and Herzegovina and has called out her army reserves.

Will Not Recognize Independence

St. Petersburg, Oct. 7.—The unwelcome news that Russia had decided for the present at least not to recognize the independence of Bulgaria was communicated to the Bulgarian minister in reply to the notification of Prince Ferdinand's proclamation. Russia stated that she had determined to adhere strictly to the provisions of the Berlin treaty until the treaty had been formally amended by the signatories.

Servians Are Aroused

Belgrade, Servia, Oct. 7.—A mass meeting of 10,000 persons was held last night in the public square, the mayor of the city presiding. The leaders of all political parties made addresses and resolutions were adopted calling upon the government to induce the powers to save Bosnia and Herzegovina from annexation and pledging the lives of the Servian people for the cause. The newspapers demand war.

Cannot Budge the Yankee

Newport, R. I., Oct. 7.—An unsuccessful effort, on a high tide, was made to float the cruiser Yankee, ashore on the Spindle on Hen and Chickens rocks in Buzzards bay. Colliers and tugs strained on the cruiser in vain. Another attempt will be made later in the week, probably. The weather remains excellent, with a smooth sea.

Copper Magnate's Big Estate

Boston, Oct. 7.—An inventory of the estate of the late Quincy A. Shaw, the copper magnate, just filed by the executors, gives the total value as $7,150,482.88. The bulk of the property is personal. Stock in the Calumet and Hecla Mining company is appraised at $8,300,000.

Did You EVER Think of That?

IT WILL HELP QUINCY!

IT WILL HELP YOU!

Don't You Like This Town?

You live here. Your business interests are here. Your home is here.

You are reading a Mail Order Catalogue. That indicates that you are not spending your money in this town. You are spending it with strangers in a big city. That city has no use for this town except to get your money.

This town has use for your money. If spent here, your money will help to build up the town. It will help to build up your own business.

In the long run more of your money will come back to you if you spend it at home than if you send it to Chicago or some other large city. You spend a dollar with Smith, up the street. Smith spends it with Brown, around the corner. Brown is just as likely to spend it with you as with anybody else. Did you ever think of that?

All of us have to spend money. There is an art in spending it where it will do the most good. If spent so that it will circulate around this town and community, it will help this town and community. You belong to this town and community. Therefore it will help you. Isn't that good logic?

Suppose you think it over next time you pick up the Mail Order Catalogue.

AN IDEAL TICKET

Draper and Frothingham Nominated by Republicans

Brief Sketches of Candidates For Governor and Lieutenant Governor

In presenting to the people of Massachusetts the Hon. Eben S. Draper of Hopedale as its candidate for governor, the Republican party honors itself as much as it honors the man.

Mr. Draper has served three years as lieutenant governor of the state, receiving the support of the solid men of both parties, notwithstanding the campaigns of misrepresentation and abuse which he has had to face.

There is no questioning the fact that he has grown steadily in the confidence and respect of the people, and that his high character and ability are beginning to be appreciated all over the state.

Even as lieutenant governor, Mr. Draper has achieved success in a far larger degree than most men who have held the office. It is not a position in which an energetic man has a large field, as most of the real work is done behind closed doors in the sessions of the executive council, and at the meetings of its various committees.

But Lieutenant Governor Draper made up his mind in the beginning that there was work to do, and he did it with the same persistence that has characterized his whole business life. He has been a constant visitor at the state house since he was first chosen to the office and has given careful attention to all the matters which come before the council. To its sessions he has brought a frank opinion, and has been outspoken in all of its deliberations, helping to make the governor's councils for the past three years of real and vital importance to the state.

During his present term Mr. Draper has been called upon to act as governor during the illness of Governor Guild and, although his acts as governor under such circumstances were more or less circumscribed, he held the reins of state in a firm grasp and showed a wide knowledge of men and affairs. His prompt action in starting the relief to the city of Chelsea, after its great conflagration, is characteristic of the man.

Mr. Draper was born in Hopedale, Mass., June 17, 1858, and is therefore in the prime of life. He was educated in the Allen school at West Newton and at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. He then entered the machine shops and cotton mills of his father's business, andwas later admitted to the firm of George Draper & Sons. In 1896, when the firm was reorganized into the Draper company, he became its selling agent. He is also a member of the corporation of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, of the Peter Bent Brigham hospital, the Milford hospital and a director in many business enterprises.

In political matters Mr. Draper was well known prior to his first selection as lieutenant governor in the fall of 1905. He served as chairman of the Republican state committee in 1892, and in 1896 was chairman of the Massachusetts delegation to the Republican national convention and, as such, was instrumental in securing the passage of the gold standard resolution. In 1900 he was the presidential elector in the Eleventh district. He has also served as president of the Republican Club of Massachusetts, and is a member of the Norfolk, Middlesex and Massachusetts clubs.

Moreover, Lieutenant Governor Draper is a cultivated gentleman, a lover of literature and a patron of art. He has a deep interest in the village of Hopedale, acknowledged to be the best kept and architecturally the most beautiful manufacturing town in New England. He has traveled extensively, is polished in manner and a most genial companion, known far and wide as an example of the best type of a New England business man.

With such a man as its candidate for the high office of governor, the Republican party confidently appeals to the voters of the commonwealth of Massasetts, in the full assurance that such an intelligent electorate will not allow this opportunity to pass of securing for the constantly increasing business of the state such an able business man as Mr. Draper has proved himself to be.

And the times demand a strong executive at the head of our state government. The legislative tendency is towards increasing the expense as well as enlarging the functions of government by the state, and Mr. Draper, through his work in the executive council and through his wide acquaintance throughout the state, is amply and especially well fitted to continue the work.

After a hard, though entirely friendly contest for the honor, the Republican party has selected as its candidate for lieutenant governor the Hon. Louis A. Frothingham of Boston, a man universally conceded to be in every respect a fit running mate for the head of the ticket.

He was born in Jamaica Plain, July 13, 1871, of old New England stock long noted for its sturdy honesty and good citizenship. As a boy he received his education in the public schools of Boston, supplementing this by fitting for college at the Adams academy in Quincy. He entered Harvard in 1889 and almost immediately became a popular figure in the university. He was a scholar in all the best sense of the word, but he was more than that; he took part in all the social activities in the college and he soon won a prominent place in athletics, being one of the best captains and baseball players ever turned out at Cambridge.

Mr. Frothingham studied law at the Harvard law school, graduating from that institution in 1896, and immediately began the practice of his profession.

In the Spanish-American war he served as second lieutenant, U. S. M. C., having command of the marine guard on the U. S. steamer Yankee in Cuban waters, and his record in that position was quite typical of the man, for he was a good officer and at the same time a popular comrade.

It was not long before the attraction of politics began to appeal to the young lawyer, and at the age of 30 he was elected to the Massachusetts legislature. There, as elsewhere, his native ability and energy soon made him a marked figure. He began to be considered a man of influence. He got good committee appointments. In 1902, his second year, he was made house chairman of the committee on taxation as well as a member of the committee on banks and banking.

In 1903 he served as chairman of the street railways committee, and at that time was so prominent that he was considered for the speakership of the house and in 1904 he was elected to that high office, being re-elected unanimously in 1905. No speaker was more popular or highly respected. Mr. Frothingham displayed an immense amount of energy in the chair and under his administration business was expedited as it had not been for decades before. In his second term as speaker the session comprised but 143 days, the shortest session for twenty-five years.

Mr. Frothingham's record as a lawmaker was admirable. He was always to be found on the side of good order and the best interests of every citizen of the commonwealth. He was the introducer of the resolve which led to the revision of the corporation laws, a very much needed and useful reform. He was the first to introduce a bill providing for laws governing the conduct of trust companies. He was always and is today a constant advocate of general instead of special or class legislation.

In the fall of 1905 he abandoned further service in the legislature at the call of duty, and accepted the Republican nomination for mayor of Boston. The story of that campaign is well known to all, and his defeat for that office added new lustre to his character and proved him to be a man who put public duty in a higher place than personal ambition.

As a citizen apart from the practice of politics Mr. Frothingham stands high in many walks of life. He is a member of the board of overseers of Harvard university, being the youngest man in that body. He is president of the Blackstone Savings bank and has various other interests, yet amidst all his wide variety of duties he practices law with conspicuous success. He is tolerant, broad-minded and considerate of the views and feelings of others. He is a typical Massachusetts citizen of the best and most highly respected kind and those who know him well are firm in their belief that he will adorn any office to which he may be called.

His acquaintance with the needs of the state, through his long service as a member and as speaker of the house of representatives, and his public spirit in sacrificing himself as a Republican candidate for mayor of Boston, three years ago, are ample evidence that in its nomination of Mr. Frothingham for lieutenant governor the Republican party still maintains its proud record of excellence and continues its high standards of the past.

CONFERENCE BEARS FRUIT

Indications of Speedy Settlement of Lynn Lasters' Srike

CAUNT MEETS UNIONS' AGENTS

Alleged Grievances In Other Factories a Contributory Cause of Sympathetic Strike Following Trouble In His Factory--Willing to Arbitrate With Strikers, Under Condition Which May Adjust Difficulty

Lynn, Mass., Oct. 7.—The prospect for the settlement of the lasters' strike in this city seems brighter than it has since the inauguration of the trouble last Friday. At the conclusion of a conference held in the office of Mayor Porter between Joseph Caunt, in whose factory the strike was first declared, and the business agents of the two striking unions, C. W. Whidden of the Lasters' union and M. J. Tracy of the lasting Machine Operators' union, Caunt declared that he and the lasters understood each other better and gave it as his opinion that an amicable settlement would soon be reached.

The conference was held at the suggestion of the state board of conciliation and arbitration, which came here to hold a joint meeting with the local Board of Trade in an effort to bring about an adjustment of the difficulty. Caunt was about to leave for New York when he was requested to meet the lasters' representatives, but postponed his trip.

At the conference it was made plain to Caunt that, although the strike was called as a direct result of his action in installing the new assembling machines, certain alleged grievances in other factories had been a contributory cause of the sympathetic strike. He told the union men he was willing to arbitrate with the strikers in his factory and that he was willing to take the matter up with the representatives of the lasters. He said, however, that it must first be determined whether he was the sole cause of the strike or whether the strike was brought about by the dissatisfaction existing in the other factories.

If the lasters decide that the trouble exists in Caunt's factory alone, Caunt said he would demand that all the lasters who went on strike in the other factories should go back to their work before he would make any concession to his own men, but that if the latter condition prevails, then he must insist that the other manufacturers be made a party to settlement action.

The lasters called a meeting to consider the proposition and Whidden and Tracy will meet Caunt and Porter in the mayor's office again today.

Strike Rio New York

New York, Oct. 7.—There was a riot last night in front of the garage of the New York Taxicab company, whose chauffeurs are on strike, when 500 strike sympathizers attempted to rescue a striking chauffeur from the police. The man was charged with having assaulted a strikebreaker. Fights between the strikebreakers and strike sympathizers occurred intermittently all day. Many taxicabs were returned to the garage badly damaged.

Strikers Are Dissatisfied

Winnipeg, Man., Oct. 7.—Great indignation was expressed at a meeting of the Canadian Pacific railroad strikers yesterday. The men claim they have been asked to go back under worse conditions than when they went on strike. Telegrams were read from all parts of the system, showing that the men at the several points are more dissatisfied than those in Winnipeg. The general sentiment of the meeting favored not going to work.

Billard Won't Be Interviewed

Boston, Oct. 7.—John L. Billard of Meriden, Conn., who holds a large block of Boston and Maine railroad stock, had a long conference late yesterday with President Tuttle of the road. At the conclusion of the conference Billard was asked if he would confirm or deny the rumor that John F. Stevens was to succeed Tuttle as head of the Boston and Maine system, under a new management. Billard refused to consider the question and stated he should absolutely refuse to be interviewed.

The Birmingham Out of Kilter

Newport, R. I., Oct. 7.—The new scout cruiser Birmingham, which went to sea yesterday from this port on her final acceptance trials with a board of inspection on board, returned here last night. Some leaky boiler tubes were discovered, which caused the inspection to end temporarily. The vessel will return to the Charlestown navy yard for repairs, which may take a week.

Robbers Murder Twelve Persons

Tiraspol, Russia, Oct. 7.—Robbers in the neighboring village of Slobodze entered the house of a Jewish family named Cohen and killed twelve persons in their efforts to get away with a small amount of loot. The authorities took the murderers into custody.

Two More No License Towns

New Haven, Oct. 7.—A final revision of the little town elections makes it evident that there will be ninety-eight no-license towns next year, against seventy in which liquor can be legally sold. This is a gain of two for no-license.

A NEW CITY CHARTER

Haverhill to Be Governed by Commission Along Des Moines Lines

Haverhill, Mass., Oct. 7.—The new city charter, providing for a government by commission, which was presented to the state legislature and allowed by that body at its last session, was adopted by the voters of the city at a special election, the vote being 3067 to 2241.

The charter is copied from the Des Moines plan. Under its provisions a board of commissioners or aldermen is elected every year, with a salary of $1800 each, and the old board of seven aldermen and fourteen common councilmen abolished. The mayor is also elected every year at a salary of $2500 instead of $2000, as heretofore, but is to have no veto power. The old school board of twenty-one members will be replaced by four members elected at large.

The initiative and referendum is given the voters and also the right to remove any member of the government who does not hold true to the pledges of his office by a petition signed by 25 percent of the voters.

The new charter will go into effect at the beginning of the municipal year, Jan. 1, 1909.

UNTIL HIS FLESH WAS BURNED OFF

Young Man Hung on to a Live Electric Wire

Marlboro, Mass., Oct. 7.—After dangling from a live wire for nearly ten minutes, with 2300 volts of electricity playing through his body, while a crowd of horrified spectators stood by unable to assist him, James Clancy, 21 years old, is now hovering between life and death at the Marlboro hospital, and the physicians there hold out very small hopes of his recovery.

Clancy was engaged in picking chestnuts, and in leaning out from the limb on which he was standing he lost his balance. In his fall he grasped one of the wires which ran through the branches. There he hung until the electricity burned the flesh off his hands and released his grasp, when he fell to the ground, a distance of twenty-five feet.

He was rushed to the hospital, where it was found that his hands had been terribly burned and a hole burned in his head to the base of the brain. The doctors say that if he does not die his injuries will develop into spinal meningitis.

Historical Sword at a Bargain

New York, Oct. 7.—A sword which John D. Rockefeller refused to accept as a gift from Miss Annie Parry of London was sold at auction at the customs appraiser's warehouse for $5.50 to pay the duty on it. It was purchased by a laborer in the warehouse. Miss Parry sent a letter with the sword, saying that it was lost during Oliver Cromwell's bombardment of the Leigh parish church in London and had been under ground for 150 years. When Rockefeller declined to accept it, Miss Parry was notified and she requested that the sword be returned to her, but neglected to forward payment of expenses.

Debs In the Granite State

Concord, N. H., Oct. 7.—Eugene V. Debs, the Socialist candidate for president, spoke before a large and enthusiastic audience in Phenix hall last night. He compared the Socialist agitators with such men in history as Patrick Henry, Garrison and others, whose theories came out all right, as Debs predicted the Socialists' ideas would. He arraigned capitalists and both of the leading parties, but did not mention local state politics.

Peary Confident of Success

North Sydney, N. S., Oct. 7.—Confident of success and starting under the most favorable conditions in his final dash for the pole, Commander Peary will make a determined effort to reach the northern goal, says Henry Johnson of New York, one of the crew of the steamer Roosevelt, who was injured on the ship and who passed through here on his way home. The Roosevelt left Etah on Aug. 18 to push north towards the pole.

Millitary Man Shot and Killed

Philadelphia, Oct. 7.—Captain J. C. Erb of the Third regiment, National Guard of Pennsylvania, and actuary for Israel W. Durham when he was state insurance commissioner, was shot and killed at his home, Red Gables, in Village Green, last night. The shooting came as the climax to a series of domestic troubles which Erb had recently experienced with his wife.

Mill Hand Instantly Killed

Lawrence, Mass., Oct. 7.—While carrying a bag of wool from the wash room to the drying room at the Union mills here, John Conelli, 40 years old, was instantly killed by being dragged into some overhead shafting, into which the bag he was carrying had caught.

"Fresh Fish" Easily Caught

Ithaca, N. Y., Oct. 7.—The neatest bunco game ever played on green Cornell freshmen was worked when several bunco steerers, supposed to be upper classmen, sold $84 worth of campus tickets to members of the entering class.

THE COMING MARVELS

Marconi Predicts Ships Will Be Run by Electricity.

AIRSHIPS FOR COMMON USE.

Inventor Also Sees a Better World With Fewer Children, but of Higher Quality—Operas to Be Heard and Seen From a Distance.

That steamships will be run by sunshine is the opinion of Guglielmo Marconi, who recently discussed the marvels of the future.

The inventor of wireless telegraphy has come to America to increase his transatlantic service from a capacity of 5,000 words a day to 20,000. After predicting a great future for wireless telegraphy he said to a reporter of the New York World:

"There seems to be a happy fate in the coincidence of scientific discoveries, which on first thought are quite unrelated to each other. The development of the airship, as shown in the astounding performance of Orville Wright's machine in Washington, would seem to have nothing in common with the perfection of wireless communication, and yet, if one looks into the future, the great airships which are to come, sailing at incredible speed and at unforeseen and varying altitudes, could never without the wireless 'speak' each other as ships do at sea and so remain in touch with those safely at home.

"And the airship is certain to come into general use, and that within the lifetime of our generation, not for freight perhaps, but for people surely. In fifty years the people of New York will be freed of the vexing problem of rapid transit. There will be no need for surface cars, elevated roads, subways, tunnels and ferries.

"In fact, as I look into the years to come I am convinced that life will be an easier problem, a more genial function in the scheme of things, than it is today.

"Aside from the economy of labor which follows the conquest of nature's forces, there will be fewer people among whom to divide the benefits. The birth rate will continue to decrease, as I believe it should, at least for the present. With the growth of intelligence among the mass of people there will come a realization of the folly of rearing more children than can be properly fitted to be efficient members of society. Quality, not numbers, will come to be the standard of racial excellence, and the present anomalous condition wherein the number of children in a family is in inverse ratio to the earning capacity of the parents will have disappeared.

"The condition today is not one of 'race suicide,' but of social common sense. And if the present enlightenment of the average men and women continues to its righteous turning point there will come an end of congested cities, with their wretched and starving children of the tenements, their crimes, their killing competition and their discouragement of the gentler aspirations of men.

"In all ways science is more and more studying to perfect the practical comfort and well being of the world. Of course there will always be ships upon the sea. The mysterious primeval voice of the ocean will continue its spell over the human imagination. But there will not always be steamships. They will pass the way of their predecessors, and ere long we shall cross the ocean in ships run by electric power. There will be no grime of coal smoke, no sickish odor of stale steam, no blazing caverns in the hold, where human beings with starting eyes and blackened faces sweat their lives away that the pulse of the engines may not stop. The storage battery will take the place of coal and fire and water. Instead of coaling the great ship will quietly and cleanly renew her batteries at her journey's end, and if coal is used it will be far from the linen and the noses of men.

"Furthermore, I look for the time when coal will cease to be our only source of energy. In every land men of science are patiently studying the problem of utilizing the energy of the sun—storing it, in fact—so that the generation of electric force may be cheapened by its use to a point where the storage battery on a large scale will be an economic as well as an academic possibility. The wasted energy in coal as now used may in the interval be brought to do its work and so bring about the monster storage battery sooner than we now expect. But sooner or later we shall enslave the sun's rays to our uses as we have the other products of his being.

"Ah, yes, life is going to be a better experience for our children than it is for most of us now. In many little ways it will be so. Do you know that in many laboratories they are coming close to letting us see the person who is talking to us at the other end of the telephone connection? And if they can do this, if they can transmit the light waves of images at a distance—and it looks as if science is bound to accomplish it—I am voicing no extravagance in saying that we may yet sit in our homes on a cold winter's night, turn a switch and not only hear, but see, the opera in progress in a faroff building.

"And, going back to my own hobby of wireless communication, I want to say that we shall not have to wait long for the wireless telephone. De Forest and his colleagues are doing great things in that direction."

The King's Messenger

[Original.]

"Captain Piccardt," said the king, "a treaty is in process of arrangement between us and the king of Prussia favoring a defensive and offensive alliance against the French. The final draft has been made, and the Prussian envoy has requested us to forward a copy of it to his sovereign for approval. King Louis of France knows that a treaty is being discussed and is anxious to defeat it, or if it is made to know its terms. The real king of France, Cardinal Richelieu, has placed men on every available route between here and the Prussian capital, and it is next to impossible to transmit a copy.

"You have been recommended to me not only for your daring, but for your ingenuity. Invent a plan for concealing a bit of paper which when compressed will be about the size of an almond. Go and bring me a solution as soon as you have made it."

"I have often thought of such a necessity and have invented such a plan, but several weeks are required for preparation."

"We can wait that long provided the plan will surely succeed."

Three weeks from that day spies of Cardinal Richelieu located near the boundary line between Holland and Germany were notified that the messenger had left Zwalle the day before, though they were not furnished with a description of him. There were few travelers in those days, and the only person the spies encountered was a friar, who said he was starting on a pilgrimage to the Holy Land.

"Good father," said one of the gang, "say a paternoster for us."

The friar made excuses which did not satisfy those who had stopped him, whereupon, concluding that he was a sham mendicant, who didn't know a prayer, they searched him. Not finding anything on his clothing, they stripped him and made an examination that would have discovered an object no larger than a pea. But they found nothing and permitted him to proceed.

Crossing the Ems, he went on, begging by the way, till he reached the outskirts of Quakenbouk, where he was met by a man, who said to him, "Holy father, I have an order from his eminence Cardinal Richelieu to invite you to his palace in Paris."

"Lead on," replied the friar. "I am honored in an invitation coming from so great a churchman."

The man turned his back for a moment, and the friar brought his staff down on his head. He sank on the ground with a broken skull. "You think it heavy?" said the friar. "So it is. It is filled with lead." Then the ungrateful and unmerciful friar proceeded on his way.

The next of the cardinal's interceptors had not been so well informed as to the guise of the messenger of the king of the Netherlands. He was stationed at a ferry across the Weser river and did not suspect the friar.

"Ferry you across, holy man?" he said. "That I will."

There was now but one route available for some distance, and the cardinal had directed that every traveler passing that way be searched. A number of times the friar was stripped and carefully examined. One party even broke to pieces the rosary that hung about his waist. For this the father called down upon the man who committed the sacrilege the anathemas of the church. They were a superstitious people in those days, and the fellow, convinced that the pilgrim was what he pretended to be, begged on his knees that he would withdraw the curse. The friar told him that he had often been molested on his pilgrimage and would not remove the curse unless he were furnished with an order that he be permitted to travel without further interference. This was given him He withdrew his anathemas and gave the party his blessing.

The friar went on, begging by the way, giving his blessing to those who gave him sustenance and shelter, till he came to the Elbe. On the banks of this river the passages were all guarded by the cardinal's secret emissaries, who, had they been known to the Prussian government, would have been hanged and quartered. This was the last line it had been thought advisable to guard. The friar had crossed the river and was tramping through a wood when men sprang from behind trees and downed him. As soon as he could make himself heard he told them of his pass and produced it. They were much astonished, for they had been advised that the messenger was traveling in the guise of a mendicant. However, they knew the men who had given him a free passage and let him go. This was the last time he was stopped.

One morning the king of Prussia received word that an envoy from the Netherlands was in the antechamber. The king, who was expecting news of the treaty, ordered the envoy admitted at once. When he saw a friar he was astonished. But the friar, who had thrown off his saintly mien, told the king that he had brought a copy of the treaty. When directed to produce it he said he must have a surgeon. A surgeon was called, and the friar, exposing his side under the ribs, told him to feel till he detected a small lump. The surgeon, having discovered it, was requested to make an incision over it. This done, a piece of wax was withdrawn from between the muscles. The wax was broken and a lump of thin compressed paper revealed. This being carefully unfolded, the king had a copy of the treaty.

OUR HOSPITAL

INCORPORATED 1889

The Trustees of the City Hospital of Quincy earnestly appeal for donations and bequests for the Endowment fund. This now amounts to over $60,000, but a fund of at least $100,000 is urgently needed.

Five Thousand Dollars ($5,000) will endow a Free Bed to which such name may be given as the Donor may desire, but any sum for this noble institution, which stands ready to serve us all in the hour of need, will be most gratefully received.

The Secretary, TIMOTHY REED, Adams St., Quincy, or the Treasurer, RICHARD D. CHASE, Mines Bank Building, Quincy, will be very glad confer with any one or to answer any inquiries.

Young Men's Christian Association OF QUINCY, MASS.

(Legal Title—Incorporated 1892.)

The Directors of the YOUNG MEN'S CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION of Quincy, with a firm faith in the great value of the work which is being done for the young men and boys of our city, make their appeal for donations and bequests toward paying the mortgage indebtedness on the new Association Building. When the building is free from debt it will serve as an Endowment, as there is a goodly income from the dormitories.

Should the Donor prefer, such sum as might be given could be used as an Endowment for an educational class or classes, the Boys Department, or as a special fund in other ways, and could be designated with the name of the Donor.

The Treasurer, WILLIAM F. CUMMINGS, 7 Clive Street, Quincy, or the General Secretary, ERNEST G. GAY, will be happy to answer inquiries.

Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

Norfolk, ss. Probate Court.

TO the heirs-at-law, next-of-kin, and all other persons interested in the estate of MARION C. WILLIAMS, late of Quincy, in said County, deceased.

Whereas, a certain instrument purporting to be the last will and testament of said deceased has been presented to said Court for Probate, by Walter E. Williams of Townsend, Mass., who prays that letters testamentary may be issued to him, the executor therein named, without giving a surety on his official bond;

You are hereby cited to appear at a Probate Court to be held at Quincy, in said County of Norfolk, on the fourteenth day of October, A. D., 1908, at nine o'clock in the forenoon, to show cause, if any you have, why the same should not be granted.

And said petitioner is hereby directed to give public notice thereof, by publishing this citation once in each week for three successive weeks in the Quincy Daily Ledger, a newspaper published in Quincy, the last publication to be one day at least before said Court, and by mailing, postpaid or delivering a copy of this citation to all known persons interested in the estate, seven days at least before said Court.

Witness, JAMES H. FLINT, Esquire, Judge of said Court, this twenty-third day of September in the year one thousand nine hundred and eight.

EDITORIAL.

Unless a street has proper surface drainage money expended in regrading that street is money thrown away. Much money has been expended in Quincy in regrading streets only to have the gravel washed away. This is because of poor surface drainage. The City Council has begun to realize this, and all the street repair orders passed at Monday night's meeting contained a clause calling for the proper surface drainage of that street.

There are a number of streets that are sadly in need of drainage and last May a blanket order calling for an appropriation of $4,000 for surface drainage of streets was introduced in the City Council. This order has been smouldering in the archives of the Council until last Monday night when a substitute order, calling for an oppropriation of $5,166 was reported and passed under suspension of the rules.

This order specifies upon what streets the appropriation shall be expended The streets and amounts are as follows:

Adams street	$320.00
Bates avenue	254.00

This appropriation is provided for in a loan order for $8,400 extending over a period of years.

Several of these streets mentioned in the order are sadly in need of being drained, particularly Bennington street, where cellars were flooded one spring during a thaw and rain.

If the City Council will make an appropriation each year for surface drainage it will not be many years before streets are in good condition.

The organization of the railroad men in the interests of Taft and Sherman has taken on a national scope. The headquarters for the western states is in Chicago, while the East is taken care of from New York. This organization has on its mailing list 200,000 active, working railroad men in all parts of the country. This most intelligent labor vote is strong for Taft.

William B. McKinley, chairman of the Republican Congressional Committee, reports that there is no doubt that the next House will be Republican, although he is not willing to state just how many districts will be carried. The whole country is responding, he said, to the appeal of President Roosevelt to send Republican representatives to Washington in order to give Mr. Taft the support he must have to carry on the Roosevelt policies, to which he has pledged himself.

This campaign has been run on lines that differ materially from the conduct of previous campaigns. All the "red fire" work has been left for this month. A great deal of work has been carried on up to this time, however, but it is not the kind the people can see. The rural free delivery for one thing has brought the farmer within closer touch of the mailing department of national headquarters and the newspaper influence.

It is to be hoped that in the three cornered scrimmage between Messrs. Roosevelt, Bryan and Hearst, Mr. Taft may not share the fate of the "innocent by-stander."

Social Gathering Of Catholic Club

The members of the Quincy Catholic club held its first social gathering of the season Tuesday evening at Colonial hall, the lady friends of the members being the guests of the evening. During the first part of the evening there was a pleasing program, which included a piano solo by Miss Margaret Webb, vocal selections by Miss Celina Beliveau and Miss Angela McCarthy, and readings by Miss Nellie F. Reid. A social hour followed, during which refreshments were served. The evening was a very enjoyable one, and was the forerunner of many social events planned for the coming winter months.

New Social Club At Wollaston

Many young people from the Wollaston churches and several from Quincy attended the first meeting of the new young people's social club held in the Unitarian vestry on Monday evening. About sixty were present and all entered into the spirit of good fellowship most heartily.

A short business meeting preceded the games at which those present signed and were admitted to the club. The evening was then placed in charge of Mrs. McLane, Mrs. Brigham and Mrs. Nickerson and progressive games were in order. Partners were chosen by matching dissected proverbs and soon all were busily engaged in pit, jack-straws ,authors and other games.

During the evening several piano selections were rendered by William Weston and several vocal solos by Miss Winifred White accompanied by Mr. Weston. Grape punch and fancy crackers were served.

After passing a most entertaining evening the party broke up about ten o'clock closing with several good old songs. It is certain that future meetings of the club will be well attended.

The officers are: Mrs. William E. Rowe, president; Mrs. E. Tyler Brigham, secretary and Miss Jennie W. Foster, treasurer. These with a committee of seven to be appointed by the president, will comprise the governing board.

Meetings will be held on the third Tuesday of each month at which some form of entertainment will be provided and many other good times are planned for the coming winter.

A nominal membership fee is assessed and any young person of 18 years or older is eligible as a member.

VERSATILE PATROLMAN.

Genial "Jim" Murray the police officer whose route is around Quincy square, is, without doubt, one of the most versatile patrolmen I have ever met. While talking to him Sunday I heard him direct at least a dozen people to different parts of Quincy, speak Italian and Polish to two of his questioners and finally wind up with an argument on the pennant race.

"Jim" is a great favorite among the young folks, and after school hours the children flock around him, to his apparent enjoyment.—Observant Citizen in the Post.

Cruiser Yankee Ashore.

A Newport dispatch to the Boston Journal says: An unsuccessful effort, on a high tide, was made Tuesday to float the United States cruiser Yankee, ashore on the Spindle on Hen and Chickens rock in Buzzards Bay. Colliers and tugs strained on the cruiser in vain, and more pumps will be used to keep the vessel clear of water on the next attempt. Another attempt will be made later in the week, probably, when the tides will be higher on a full moon. The ship's captain, Commander Charles G. Marsh, is hopeful of getting the Yankee from the rocks. The weather remains excellent, with a smooth sea.

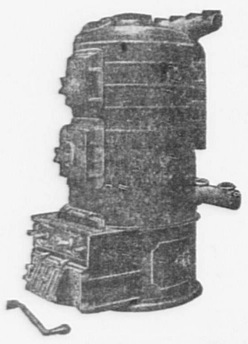
Your Attention Mr. Prospective Heating Customer!



Did you ever pause to consider the difference in various make boilers? Does it not appeal to your better judgment that a boiler the construction of which is such that it places a series of thin layers of water directly or indirectly over the fire surface and travel of hot gases, before they escape into the smoke flue, is sure to be economical in the consumption of fuel?

Another advantage that should be considered in a boiler of this description the parts of necessity must be small, therefore, in the event of breakage they may be easily and cheaply replaced. Of course there are cheaper boilers that are made in one piece from base to dome. These boilers contain surface on which the fire does not shine, or over which the hot gases do not pass, therefore, they are useless. These boilers without doubt can be made and sold cheaper than the boiler made of several units. But you Mr. Consumer, must pay the difference in consuming of coal in the long run.

Miss B. A. Welch Becomes Mrs. Forrest

A quiet wedding took place at noon today in St. Joseph's church, Newton Centre, when Mr. Thomas H. Forrest of Hancock street, Wollaston and Miss Beatrice A. Welch of Chestnut Hill, were married by the Rev. Fr. Daniel Reardon.

The best man was Mr. Thomas R. Pendergast of Highland avenue and the bridesmaid was Miss Annie Welch of Chestnut Hill ,a sister of the bride.

After a wedding trip to New York and Jersey City Heights, visiting relatives of the groom, Mr. and Mrs. Forrest will be at home to their friends after December first, at 61 Warren avenue, Wollaston.

Noon Wedding At Christ Church

A quiet wedding was solemnized Tuesday noon at Christ church, when Miss Vesta Louise, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Pawsey became the bride of Mr. Clarence Andrew Perkins of Cambridge. The ceremony was performed by Rev. William E. Gardner, the double ring service being used.

Miss Sarah E. Pawsey sister of the bride was maid of honor, and Mr. Albert H. Perkins, brother of the groom, was best man.

Mr. and Mrs. Perkins left for a brief trip, and on their return will reside at 3 Haskell street, Allston, where they will be pleased to see their friends after Nov. 15.

Battleship Contract.

A Washington item in a Boston paper says: It appears that there will be no shipbuilding firm on the Pacific coast to seek the contract for the new battleship which is the sister of the vessel to be built at the Brooklyn navy yard. The requests for plans and specifications received at the navy department indicate that the competition will be confined to the usual Atlantic coast shipbuilders who have hitherto been represented in the effort to obtain such contracts.

Leaky Tubes Alleged.

A Newport dispatch of Tuesday to a Boston paper says: While the new scout cruiser Birmingham, Commander Burns T. McLean chairman a number of leaky tubes were discovered by the firemen on watch. The ship will return to the Charlestown navy yard for repairs which will take about a week to complete. The ship returned to Newport this evening.

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

ESCAPE PROOF PRISON

Nashville's Bastile Will Defy Most Skillful Jail Breaker.

FILE PROOF STEEL FOR CELLS

Model Jail Also Home of Criminal Court—Prisoners Can Be Tried, Convicted and Executed All In the One Building.

Work upon the new criminal court and county jail building in Nashville, Tenn., is being pushed forward as rapidly as possible, and, despite the many delays which have retarded the undertaking, it is more than probable that the edifice will be ready for occupancy by Dec. 1.

This was practically the answer of Superintendent of Construction Charles M. Little in response to a reporter's question. The exterior work is all finished, with the exception of a small awning which will be erected over the central archway entrance to the main court and building.

It is probable that no city in the south and very few anywhere in the United States will possess a more perfectly appointed and secure bastile than will Nashville, and the prisoner who escapes therefrom when once the jailer has turned the key upon him will need all the cunning of a Jack Sheppard, and then it is likely that he would fail to gain freedom. There is a system of locks and counterlocks, cages within cages and steel barred corridors that is enough to baffle the most skilled jail breaker in the world.

A more compact and complete arrangement for the handling of criminals would be hard to imagine, as the criminal court will also sit in this building, and it will be possible to try, convict and execute a prisoner without his ever leaving the building. There are provided kitchen, scullery, laundry, toilets and baths for prisoners and others who remain in the building all the time, and everything has been provided that could possibly be needed in connection with the several departments.

In the basement are the boiler and engine rooms, heating boiler and ventilator fan rooms, laundry and ironing rooms, all finished in concrete and well aired and lighted.

The main entrance to the building is through the grand archway, to the right and left of which are the jailer's office, road commissioner's office, board of charities and board of health. In addition to these there are a guard room, locker room and closets for the use of colored and white people. The light well or central court is at the center of the building, and when the prisoners are brought in the big mob gates may be closed before they are taken into the utility corridor, which is entered from the light well and which traverses the main building for its entire width. The cells open off this corridor and are arranged in five tiers, there being a hundred of them in all, arranged in tiers of twenty. Each cell is fitted with four bunks, and there are four cells in a row, with a bath cell with a porcelain tub at the end of each tier of four. There is a prisoners' corridor outside of the four cell groups and a jailers' corridor outside of this. A large steel barred cell is arranged at the center of the cell court, and here visitors will be allowed to see the prisoners. In order to keep them from passing articles such as files, etc., to those confined the visitors' cell is screened with a fine meshed wire steel screen or net.

The cells are controlled from a locking box in the outer corridor and may be locked all together or one at a time. The condemned cells, which will be known as "murderers' row," are four in number and will be located so that the interior may be seen by the turnkeys and jailers at all times. All the cells on the upper three tiers are of saw and file proof steel, and the entire top ceiling is drill proof. Even the ventilating shafts are steel lined and barred. In addition to the regular cells there will be three padded cells for insane prisoners, one detention cell and three misdemeanor cells. There is a small corridor between the cell rows, and here are the closet pipes, ventilating pipes and other fittings which it is undesirable to have in the cells themselves. The floors and ceilings of the cell are of steel, the flooring being reenforced with four inches of concrete.

The second floor of the building is devoted almost exclusively to the criminal court. The main courtroom, which is two stories high and 48 by 54 feet, will have a gallery for negroes and will be perfectly appointed. The offices of the judge, attorney general and assistant attorney general, witnesses and jury rooms, grand jury room and jury dining rooms are also on this floor.

In the rear, in the utility corridor, a trap opens to the third floor, and, looking up, one may see a huge iron ring in the ceiling from which condemned prisoners will be hanged.

On the third floor will be the operating room, female hospital, jury bedrooms, etc. In the space between the third floor and the roof there is a huge ventilating fan driven by a dynamo that will draw all the foul air from the prison and other parts of the building and force it outside. The roof is of steel and concrete, covered with tarred paper and gravel, guaranteed to be waterproof and durable. The main halls of the building will be tiled, as will the lavatories and closets. The entire jail property, which includes a large concreted yard, will be surrounded by a wall twenty feet high and absolutely sheer, over which no man could climb unaided. Hot water will be used for heating the building.

New Books at Public Library

Only the remainder of this week for the exhibit of the photographs of the charming English lake country.

Attention is called to a list of new books to be published in Saturday's Ledger and Patriot. Among them may be noted Prof. Palmer's life of Alice Freeman Palmer, Chesterton's critical study of Charles Dickens, and Mary R. S. Andrews' perfect tribute to Abraham Lincoln. An altogether charming book is Stopford A. Brooke's sea-charm of Venice. The Friday club, who are going to devote their winter to Venice, will find other books added from time to time as well as the willingness and opportunity to obtain what we do not own from the Boston Public Library.

Two new bird books are Job's sport of bird study, and Burba's our bird friends, being "things young folks ought to know, and likewise grown-ups."

Another book for the children is Harper's electricity book for boys. A book of interest to kindergarten teachers and all who have to do with young children is Sara C. Bryant's, how to tell stories to children.

Lady Betty Across the Water

By C. N. & A. M. WILLIAMSON

Copyright, 1906, by McClure, Phillips & Co.

SYNOPSIS.

CHAPTER I—The story is told in the first person by Lady Betty Bulkeley, the pretty young sister of the Duke of Stanforth. She is to visit America in care of Mrs. Stuyvesant-Knox (Mrs. Ess Kay,) a leader of American society, and the latter's cousin, Miss Sally Woodburn, in order that her elder sister Victoria's prospective fiance, Sir Gilbert Mantell, may not be attracted by her.

II—On board ship Betty is attracted by a young American steerage passenger, who saves a child from drowning. Mrs. Ess Kay, who is very "exclusive," objects to Betty's interest in the young man. Betty also meets Tom Doremus, cousin of Mrs. Vander Windt, of New York society.

AFTER you have seen nothing but water for days it's odd how excited you are on seeing a little land. Just a little, little land and not at all interesting to look at; a strip of gray sand or a patch of green grass, and you have been only a few days away from such things, yet somehow you want to jump up and down and shout for joy.

More than half the first class passengers on our ship were Americans, coming home, and I suppose they had gone away because they wanted to go. If they had liked they could have stopped in their own country as well as not, and I heard some of them saying during the voyage that if they could they would spend nine months out of the year in Paris. But they made as much fuss over the first lump of sand we saw as if we were discovering the north pole. Some of them had taken this trip a dozen times or maybe more, but any one would have thought it was as new to them as to me.

It seemed as if I were sailing in a dream to a dreamland, and everything would be a dream till I found myself waking up at home. If any one had pinched me I hardly believe I should have felt it as I stood by the rail while we steamed toward New York. We passed a big fort and some neat little houses, which looked like officers' quarters. There was Long Island and Coney Island, which Mr. Doremus said I must be "personally conducted" to see some day when I felt young and frivolous. And by and by I heard people exclaiming: "There's Liberty—there she is! Bless the dear old girl!"

While I was wondering whether they were talking of a lady or a ship I caught sight of a majestic giantess, obligingly holding a torch up to light the world. Then I knew it was the statue which I had read about.

"What do you think of her?" asked Mr. Doremus.

"She's a grande dame," I said. "Now I know why your girls hold themselves so well. They're trying to live up to the ideal American woman. But she isn't as big as I thought she would be. Nothing ever is as big as you think it's going to be, especially when Americans have told you about it, for one has been brought up to believe that their big things are bigger than anybody else's in the whole world."

"So they are," said Mr. Doremus, "only where all the things are big you don't notice them for the high grass. And over there's some of the grass."

He pointed, and I saw a great number of enormous objects, shaped like chimneys and apparently about a mile high, scattered aimlessly along the horizon, which was a brilliant, limpid blue.

"What are they?" I asked. "Great, strange factories of some sort?"

"No. Houses where pretty women live and offices where men make the money for them to live on."

"You must be joking. Women would be afraid to perch up there in the sky. Besides, it would take too long to go up and down."

"Nothing takes long in America. And it comes natural to our women to perch up high. Statues aren't the only things we buy pedestals for this side of the porpoise tank. You just wait and see."

"I don't need to wait to see that American men are nice to women," said I. "Perhaps no nicer than Englishmen, really, only you seem to take a great deal more trouble. Fancy all the men at Mrs. Van der Windt's table drawing lots every night for the right to sit by her and the two Misses Eastman. I don't believe it would have occurred to Englishmen. The ones who really wanted to sit there would have tried to get to their places first, that's all. I do think it was pretty of you."

"Wasn't it? Especially supposing none of us particularly wanted—but never mind. Talking of pretty things, here are the docks."

They were big enough to satisfy even my expectations, and I wished that I'd insisted on being taken by some one long ago to visit the London docks, so that I might know whether ours were better or worse. One never thinks of going to see things at home, but I began to suspect that I might some day be stabbed with jealous pangs and need to be stuffed with a lot of facts about England, though until I knew Americans I've been in the habit of thinking facts the least interesting things in the world. They seemed like chairs to sit on or floors to walk on without noticing what you were doing, but I suppose it might be awkward without chairs and floors.

Soon we were near enough to New York to see the tremendous chimney things clearly, and they sharpened the impression that I was sailing straight into a dream. There could be no such things in the real world. They wouldn't be possible. But the dream felt very interesting and intense all of a sudden, and I didn't want to wake up from it just then in spite of Mrs. Ess Kay.

The tall shapes were bright and vivid now, as giant hollyhocks growing in irregular rows. Still they did not look one bit like houses or offices where people could work without going stark, staring mad. I got a queer idea in my head that the houses themselves must be buried deep underground, like bulbs, with only their towers sticking up.

The next thing that happened in the dream was slowing majestically into our own dock, and that was wonderful. The whole place was alive with faces, mostly pretty girls' faces, under fascinating hats, gay as flowers in a flower show, parterre above parterre of brilliant blossoms. And they had all been grown in honor of us.

There was a wild waving of handkerchiefs on the ship and a frantic fluttering of white among the flowers, as if a flock of butterflies had been frightened up into the air. Still we were a long time getting in, and I grew quite impatient. But finally Louise, who had attended to my packing, took charge of my handbag, my sunshade and coat, with her mistress' and Miss Woodburn's things. The moment had come to bid the ship goodby.

"Now," said Mrs. Ess Kay, slipping her arm into mine, "I wonder, dear child, if you would mind being left alone to deal with the custom house people? You'd stand under your own letter 'B,' of course."

"Oh, Katherine, do you think even Letter B, which sounds so like a warning to young men, a proper chaperon for a duchess' daughter?" exclaimed Sally Woodburn.

I laughed, but Mrs. Ess Kay didn't. She evidently considers things connected with the American custom house no fit subject for frivolity. She went on without answering: "I'm under 'K' and Sally 'W.' We'll both have all we can attend to wrestling with our own fiends, and Louise will be just as busy. But you're a British subject, on a short visit to this country, and they won't be as diabolical to you, dear. I did all the swearing necessary for you in the saloon with my own when the tiresome man came on board, and there's really nothing left for you to bother with on the dock except to open your boxes and say you have nothing to declare."

I was glad that since profanity had been called for in the saloon owing to the tiresomeness of a man it had been Mrs. Ess Kay who was obliged to give vent to it, not I; but I felt rather defrauded that I couldn't have heard, and I wondered if she had gone so far as to mention "damn." All I said out loud, however, was that I was sure I could manage very well in the docks and Mrs. Ess Kay appeared much relieved. "That's perfectly sweet of you, Betty," she said, launching a daggery glance at poor, inoffensive Sally for some reason which I couldn't understand. "I hope you won't think I'm horrid not to have asked you to label your baggage 'K,' so it could go with mine. It's better not, for every one concerned. I'll explain afterward why, and Louise shall take you to 'B.'"

Louise did take me to "B," which they had thoughtfully printed very large and black on a wooden wall of the dock in a row with all the other letters of the alphabet. A good many people from the ship were collecting beneath theirs, as if they were animals getting ready to join the procession for the ark under the heading of "cat" or "elephant," as the case might be, and they all seemed worried and apprehensive, as you do at the dentist's even when you try to distract your mind by looking at the pictures in Punch.

Louise put my bag on the wooden floor and folded my coat on it. "Miladi will do well to sit down," said she. "It may be that the baggage do not come immediatement." With this she bustled away to the Louise rabbit warren, wherever it was, leaving me to the tender mercies of fellow "B's," who began to swarm around me and buzz distractedly.

A Rondeau.

She uses slang at times, I grieve to say.
I note the tendency with grief and pain
For slang in women is a thing I hate
She thinks, of course, that it is up to date,
The proper language of the girl today.

But it's bad taste, which girls should not display.
When I say that, she says, "Don't get too gay."
"Impertinent" seems quite inadequate,
She uses slang.

"Nit" is equivalent to "no" or "nay."
And things provincial she declares are "jay."
Then a small minded person is a "skate."
She "hurries?" No; she "hits a lively gait"
Or "beats it." Why, it's simply fierce the way
She uses slang!

LINCOLN, Neb., July 11.—William Jennings Bryan and Charles F. Murphy clasped hands here to-day before a battery of cameras and under the eyes of cheering hundreds. The Tammany leader, accompanied by Lewis Nixon, Francis Burton Harrison, Martin Littleton, Orlando Thayer Robert E. Luce and Daniel Cohalan, passed through Lincoln homeward bound at 3 o'clock this afternoon.

Murphy had wired the news of his coming and Mr Bryan was at the depot to meet him. The candidate drove down from Fairview behind a pair of thoroughbreds, the gift of Kentucky admirers, with Secretary Rose beside him and Mrs Bryan on the back seat. It was the hottest day of the season with a blistering sun and lifeless air, but the master and mistress of Fairview were in high good humor. A long night's rest had done wonders for them.

Promptly on time the Murphy train rolled into the crowded depot, while two local bands struck up La Paloma the battle hymn of the campaign. Mr Murphy's private car was at the tail end of the long train, and Mr Murphy displayed no haste in making his appearance. It was Lewis Nixon who first forced his way through the cheering crowd to the spot where Mr Bryan stood bareheaded under a sun hot enough to poach an egg.

"Glad to see you, Bryan," shouted the New Yorker, grasping the candidate's extended hand and shaking it heartily.

"Thanks, Nixon," was the reply as Mr Bryan's keen eye travelled around in search of the tardy Tammany boss.

Mr. Murphy Approaches.

A moment later Mr Murphy appeared strolling leisurely up the platform toward the centre of the excitement. He wore a drab gray suit that looked brand new and a wide-brimmed, low-crowned Panama. He was coldly calm and unsmiling.

"Here's Murphy, now," shouted Mr Bryan as he sighted the slowly advancing Tammany leader.

NOMINATED BY ACCLAMATION

Arnold Named For Governor by Rhode Island Democrats

NATIONAL TICKET IS ENDORSED

Position Assumed by Party In Two Last Campaigns In Regard to Bossism Is Reaffirmed and Men of Other Parties Are Invited to Aid In the Fight—Head of Ticket Predicts Its Success In November Election

Providence, Oct. 7.—The annual Democratic state convention to nominate party candidates for state offices and a set of presidential electors was called to order by Chairman Fitzsimmons of the state committee, followed by the reading of the call. Richard D. Comstock was elected temporary chairman, and the regular order continued with the call of the roll of delegates.

Mr. Comstock delivered a brief speech in which an allusion to Mr. Bryan was cheered for three minutes. He paid high tribute to Governor Higgins, saying that his name had become a household word in every home in Rhode Island, and before many years would be a national name known in all the homes in the land. There would be no "back stepping," he said, in the work of reform in the state.

As soon as the temporary organization had become permanent, the name of Olney Arnold, as the candidate for governor, was presented to the convention by Frank E. Fitzsimmons and the nomination followed by acclamation. The balance of the ticket was made up as follows:

Lieutenant governor, Adelard Archambault, Woonsocket; secretary of state, Robert Grieve, Providence; attorney general, T. B. Corcoran, Pawtucket; general treasurer, T. D. Babcock, Westerly; presidential electors, A. E. Stiness, Providence; E. O. Ronniar, Woonsocket; J. E. Cottrell, Newport; J. E. Canning, Providence.

The platform was presented to the convention by P. H. Quinn. After endorsing the national ticket and platform the platform continues:

"The Democracy of this state reaffirms and reasserts the position assumed by it in the two last campaigns—that the overshadowing issue of this state is the destruction of the boss and of bossism, and we gratefully acknowledge the assistance rendered in this fight by those patriotic men of other parties who joined hands with our organization in its fight for better government. Not for party advantage, but in the interest of our state, we solicit a continuance of their assistance.

"But in this fight against the boss it should be borne in mind that the disruption of the system that permits bossism is more important even than the removal of a particular boss. And it must have been apparent to all thinking citizens from the results of the campaigns of 1906 and 1907 that before any permanent relief or reform may be had in this state a change must be made in the present constitution which will give equal representation in our law-making bodies to the manhood of the state regardless of whether men live in cities or in towns.

"And inasmuch as under the present system no amendment to the constitution may be submitted to the electors of the state without the consent of the representatives of a small minority of the state's population we demand the immediate submission of an amendment to the state constitution which shall empower a number of qualified electors, not exceeding 10 percent of the vote cast for governor at the last preceding election, to initiate by petition amendments to the organic law of the state and to have the same submitted to the electorate for adoption or rejection by majority vote."

Then follow various issues which are to be emphasized during the campaign.

The resolutions were accepted by a unanimous vote, and Candidate Arnold was sent for, and soon appeared, being greeted with applause. Arnold accepted the nomination and predicted the success of the entire ticket in November.

Taft's Western Tour Ended

St. Louis, Oct. 7.—With a twelve-hour demonstration of cordiality, political enthusiasm and intense interest, St. Louis furnished a climax to the western campaign trip of William H. Taft, which ended yesterday.

The candidate spoke to an immense audience in the nearly finished Coliseum, followed this with an open-air address at Clayton, a suburb, and then rushed to East St. Louis, Ills., where he addressed a large gathering of employes at the stock yards.

Many thousands of strangers came to St. Louis for the occasion. From the station to the hotel crowds of people blocked either sidewalk and part of the street, and Taft was compelled to stand, hat in hand, the entire distance of more than a mile, acknowledging the salutations.

Before reaching St. Louis Taft had a strenuous day in a number of Missouri towns. He reached Moberly before 8 o'clock in the morning and spoke to a large crowd in the local theatre. Good times had resulted from protection and bad times from a Democratic tariff was the burden of his speeches throughout the day.

As governor of the Philippines and secretary of war, Taft told his hearers at Mexico, he had been one of the country's best customers. He had bought many mules there for the government. When he asked if there were any arguments needed to convince them of their own prosperity there were many negative expressions.

Bryan Swings Through Iowa

Cedar Rapids, Ia., Oct. 7.—"I present myself as an example of one who has outlived the venomous attacks of his opponents. You heard me called a demagogue twelve years ago. You saw them bury me and you heard them chant their songs over my grave, and now they have to explain why it happened that I was not dead."

With all the fervor that he could muster, William J. Bryan, facing a vast assemblage between Tama and Toledo, Ia., delivered himself of this utterance. At no time during the present campaign has he spoken so earnestly or with such vigor. His remark followed a bitter denunciation of Mr. Taft for refusing to agree to a publication of campaign contributions before election. "No honest man and no political party conducting an honest campaign," he declared, "need be afraid of the light."

At Woodward he heaped ridicule on the Republicans, charging them with taking credit for the growth of crops, the shining of the sun and the bringing of rain. "In fact," he said, "they seize upon anything that they think gives a plausible excuse for voting the Republican ticket."

Drawing large, cheering crowds all day in the course of his travels through the state, the Democratic candidate hurled defiance at his opponents and challenged them to meet his arguments. Fifteen speeches and handshaking with thousands constituted his day's work, the concluding speech being made here last night in the Auditorium, which was filled to overflowing. The keynote of his principal remarks last night was that Republican policies meant disaster, while Democratic policies meant prosperity.

Chairman Mack Overworked

Chicago, Oct. 7.—Norman E. Mack, chairman of the Democratic national committee, collapsed last night as a result of fatigue and a severe cold. He is under the care of a physician and a trained nurse. The illness of Mack came suddenly and alarmed fellow-members of the Democratic committee.

NORMAN E. MACK.

Dr. Hammond was summoned and he said that Mack was suffering of overwork and nervous exhaustion. He did not believe the illness serious, and intimated that the patient would be able to resume his duties in a few days. Mack arrived in Chicago from New York Monday afternoon.

Political Confab at White House

Washington, Oct. 7.—The political situation at large and practically the prospects for the state and national ticket in New York was carefully gone over at a prolonged conference at the White House last night, which lasted until midnight. Secretary Loeb told the newspapermen there would be no statement given out relative to the conference. One of those who took part said, however, that a review of conditions showed that the general situation was very encouraging to the Republicans. Incidentally the question of campaign finances came up as a result of the visit of Treasurer Sheldon to the White House during the afternoon.

Roosevelt Won't Take Stump

Rochester, Oct. 7.—President Roosevelt will not take the stump in the campaign this fall, Bishop Earl Cranston, D. D., of Washington, presiding bishop of the Genesee Methodist conference, said to a number of clergymen at the close of the conference here last night. "If anyone tells you he will, say to him that he is mistaken," said the bishop.

When asked how he was able to speak positively, Cranston took out a letter and said that in it President Roosevelt had assured him that he would not go on the stump. Cranston is a personal friend of the president.

Sherman Talks to Farmers

Toledo, Oct. 7.—Farmers flocked in great numbers to listen to speeches made by James S. Sherman, Republican vice presidential nominee, in a series of meetings across the northern tier of counties in Indiana and Ohio. The candidate started the day with the intention of making but two speeches, but by night he had visited eight towns, in all of which he delivered addresses.

Falling Off In Registration

New York, Oct. 7.—Comparative apathy among the voting population of the city seems to be indicated by the figures for the second day of registration in Greater New York. For the whole city the figures for the two days' registration total 408,407, as against 434,761 in 1904, a falling off of 26,354.

ROOSEVELT SCORES,

Points Out the Fatal Weakness of Socialistic Schemes.

Prominent Socialists Declare His Strictures Unfair, but Are Confuted by the Statements of Other Members of Their Own Party.

Judging from the angry replies of Socialists, President Roosevelt must have struck home in the address in which he recently paid his respects to socialism in the following words:

"We have made this country what it is partly because we have measurably succeeded in securing in the past equality of opportunity. That is very different from equality of reward.

"I believe emphatically in doing everything that can be done by law or otherwise to keep the avenue of occupation, of employment, of work, of interest, so open that there shall be, so far as it is humanly possible to achieve it, a measurable equality of opportunity—equality of opportunity for each man to show the stuff that is in him. But when it comes to reward let him get what by his energy, foresight, intelligence, thrift, courage, he is able to get if the opportunity opens. I don't believe in cuddling any one. I would no more permit the strong to oppress the weak than to tell a weak man or a vicious man that he ought by rights to have the reward due only to the man who actually earns it. Very properly we in this country set our faces against privilege.

"There can be no grosser example of privilege than that set before us as an ideal by certain socialistic writers—the ideal that every man shall put into the common fund what he can, which would mean what he chose, and should take out whatever he wanted. In other words, this theory is that the man who is vicious, foolish, a drag on the whole community, who contributes less than his share to the common good, should take out what is not his, what he has not earned, that he shall rob his neighbor of what that neighbor has earned.

"This particular socialistic ideal would be to enthrone privilege in one of its grossest, crudest, most dishonest, most harmful and most unjust forms. Equality of opportunity to render service—yes, I will do everything I can to bring it about. Equality of reward—no, unless there is also equality of service. If the service is equal let the reward be equal, but let the reward depend on the service. And, mankind being composed as it is, there will be inequality of service for a long time to come, no matter how great the equality of opportunity may be, and just so long as there is inequality of service it is eminently desirable that there should be inequality of reward."

The tenor of the Socialist criticisms of this address is shown by the following quotations from replies, most of which appeared in the New York Evening Call, a Socialist organ:

"This peculiar statement of Roosevelt makes it clear that he does not in the least understand socialism."—Robert Hunter, Millionaire Socialist.

"He is truly most ignorant concerning the principles of the most vital question of our day. If Mr. Roosevelt wishes to abuse socialism he must learn what socialism is."—Rose Pastor Stokes, Wife of Another Millionaire Socialist.

"The president's idea of socialism is absurd. But who could expect him to say anything different? He would make people believe that Socialists were communists. As a matter of fact, we want each man to get just what he earns through his own efforts and no more. If a man earns $5 a day, then give it to him. If he earns $10, give him that. But we would assert that one man who does inferior work to another should not get the same pay."—Morris Brown.

It is unfortunate that President Roosevelt worded his remarks so that they could be construed into an identification of socialism and communism. He undoubtedly is well aware that, while all communists are Socialists, few American Socialists are communists. It is perfectly evident that what he was protesting against was the doctrine that all workers should receive the same pay without regard to the quality of their work. This doctrine is repudiated by Morris Brown and also by Warren Atkinson, who, in a lengthy rejoinder to President Roosevelt, says:

"The answer is simple and conclusive to this question, how to determine the pay in the industrial republic—just as we do it now. The Socialist party has never proposed to determine the relative pay for different kinds of work in any different way from the way in which it is determined now by the ordinary action of supply and demand."

This answer is not ingenuous. Mr. Atkinson knows very well that the Socialist party platform by no means fully represents the ideals of the party. It was toned down to catch votes—the votes of those who have something to lose, either of property or skill, and are therefore more conservative than those to whom any leveling process would involve a betterment of conditions—the unskilled, the incompetent and the thriftless.

The appeal that socialism makes to his latter class will be found in its papers and pamphlets rather than in its platform. If we turn to these we shall find that the "proletarians," as the Socialists delight to call them, are asked to vote for socialism because it puts all men on a plane of earning equality—one day's pay for one day's work, and all work, with some exceptions, to count as of equal value. Even the exceptions favor the "proletarian," for the suggestion is that workers in unattractive employments, miners, stokers, etc., shall work only one-third or one-fourth as many hours per day as doctors, teachers, etc.—in other words, that a premium shall be placed on ignorance and that skill and ability shall be penalized. In proof of these statements the following quotations are made from three typical Socialist pamphlets, at least two of which are specially recommended by the most prominent Socialist organ in this country:

"Now, note that the reason for different degrees of remuneration is due to the fact that the grades above common labor need to be compensated for years of apprenticeship and study given to qualification. But it is certain that after socialism has been in operation a few years, and artisans and professional men were supported by society during their years of qualification, then another rule would be applicable. The ratio of differentiation would gradually diminish until all labor would receive equal remuneration for equal labor performed. Economic equality is the ideal. It will ultimately be attained.

"For every day's labor a certificate would be issued against the wealth created, which would enable the laborer to exchange the note for the product or for any other commodity containing a like amount of labor time."—"Principles of Scientific Socialism," by Rev. Charles H. Vail.

"Socialists demand that when one does a day's labor he shall be given an evidence of labor performed, and this evidence he can exchange for anything on earth the labor cost of which is one day.

"If a person worked a day he could then command the average product of a day's labor of any commodity.

"But what should constitute a day's labor? So many hours' work, but not necessarily the same number of hours per day for all sorts of toil—not at least under the conditions that will prevail when a co-operative commonwealth is first inaugurated. Adverse critics of socialism often ask: 'Under the system you propose who would do the work in dust and heat? Who would perform the menial labor?' Ask such a critic, 'If two hours constitute a day in the dust and heat and eight hours a day as a bookkeeper, which would you choose?' and the chances are a thousand to one that if he is a man of superior ability or is ambitious to develop along praiseworthy lines he will choose the dust and heat."—"Introductions to Socialism," by N. A. Richardson.

"But after all said in favor of equal wages for equal effort, as we have already mentioned, it is not absolutely necessary to the success of socialism—that is to say, socialism inaugurated with a small inequality would be fairly successful. I am inclined to the opinion that it will start this way, though I have but little doubt that the question will finally be settled in favor of equality.

"The standard hour's work or day's work will probably become the standard for measuring all values.

"Let us not forget that the performance of disagreeable work deserves great remuneration and that under socialism the physical work requiring the least skill will be generally the most disagreeable and the most avoided and therefore would be, strictly speaking, entitled to the highest wages."—"A Plain Analysis of Socialism," by L. F. Eccles.

These may not be the views of the Socialist critics of President Roosevelt, but as they are probably the views of the great mass of voting Socialists the president was fully justified in making them the basis of his strictures upon that un-American ideal of discriminating against the competent in favor of the incompetent.

Scrapping a Good Pump.

The city of Joliet, Ill., has just been put to a heavy and unnecessary expense because of the lack of permanence of important employees, which is one of the characteristics of municipal operation. The Municipal Journal and Engineer tells the story:

"After having purchased and installed a 3,000,000 gallon pump it has been discovered that the city might have increased the capacity of its old pump 1,200,000 gallons by a slight and inexpensive change to an old pump. When this pump was installed some ten years ago it had a sixteen inch plunger. As the boiler capacity of the plant was then short and there was an insufficient supply of steam, the sixteen inch plunger was taken out and a fourteen inch substituted, with a proper fitting. This circumstance was apparently not recorded and was unknown to the present officials."

Disguised Payments.

City payments are sometimes disguised so that the actual amount paid by the city must be carefully investigated. In some cities under municipal ownership there is no charge for hydrant rental, but interest charges, repayment of bonds, appropriations to meet deficiencies, etc., may equal or even exceed a proper hydrant rental. This is bad bookkeeping and should be corrected.—Charles Carroll Brown, M. Am. Soc. C. E., in Water and Gas Review.

The Woonsocket (R. I.) Gas company is replacing its old meters by new ones, as they were all slow. This was discovered by a consumer who objected to his bill being too large. Upon testing the meter it was found to be 37 per cent slow, and then he was sorry.—Progressive Age.

The municipal electric light plant of Hastings, England, closed its fiscal year with a loss of nearly $15,000, with no allowance for depreciation.

Quincy Locals Briefly Told

The funeral of Edward Fahey was held this morning from St. John's church. Mass was celebrated by Rev. John J. Casey. The burial was at St. Mary's cemetery.

Carpenters are at work tearing down the partition between the clerk's office at the district court, and the room recently occupied by Dr. Sherman. The two rooms will be made into one large room.

There is not much doing in local politics as yet, but things are expected to start in with a hum in a few days. By the time national affairs are at their zenith municipal affairs will begin to look up some.

A large crowd is sure to be attracted to the land sale at Paul Wild terrace, which opens tomorrow afternoon. In addition to $1,000 of presents to be given away, Prof. Skibeni, the aeronaut, will make a balloon ascension and parachute leap every afternoon.

FREE PASS TO GAME.

Free pass to Y. M. C. A. boys for Harvard-Springfield Training school game. The first thirty-five boys who are members of the boys' department of the Quincy Y. M. C. A., applying at office, will receive a free pass for the Harvard-Training School game, Oct. 17. This game is expected to be one of the best to be played at Cambridge this year. This is a rare treat for the boys and it will be necessary to come early if you wish a pass.

Quincy High Downs the Football Team Of Watertown

In the most interesting and spectacular game played this season, on Merrymount Park, Quincy High defeated Watertown High Tuesday afternoon by the score of 22-8.

The local team showed great improvement over their work of last week, and at no time were in danger of defeat.

Watertown started the scoring, Osborne grabbing one of Quincy's forward passes, after the local team had advanced the ball down the field in fine style, and running 60 yds, towards Quincy's goal, when he was nailed by Marsh on fine tackle. Then Weller dropped back and sent the ball spinning over the goal posts for a score of 4 points.

Nothing daunted by a mere goal from the field, the Quincy boys received the kick again, Bates running it on 15 yards. Then between fumbles and fluke forward passes the ball went from one team to the other, and finally Quincy started to play the line and work the ends. Clapp was the man of the hour just at this point, for try as they would they couldn't stop him. Three times in succession he went through for 25 yard gains, till the ball was only a yard from the goal line. Then Bates was pushed over, and Clapp kicked the goal. A minute later time was called and the first half was over. Score 6-4.

SECOND HALF.

In the second half the Quincy team kept right after the visitors. H. finally Quincy started to plug the was held and forced to kick. Gore caught the ball, and started, sending Clapp and Bates at the line. By this steady plugging Bates scored, but H. Carlson failed to kick the goal.

The next touchdown came easy, and on a most spectacular play. The ball had just been kicked off, Watertown kicking to Quincy, when Gore tried an onside kick. Hill who had just gone in for Marsh, grabbed the ball, and with both teams running wildly down the field after him, Hill crossed the line for a touchdown, after a 60-yard run. They failed to kick the goal.

Watertown kicked to Quincy again, and again on a forward pass the ball went to the opponents. Then the visitors worked the ball in front of the goal posts, and Weller proceeded to make his second goal from the field. This made the score 16-8.

At this point the game was marred by an unforunate accident. Hackett, the star half-back of Watertown had his collar bone broken. Mr. Herman the physical instructor of the Quincy school, was on the field, and tied the unfortunate youth's arms so as to keep the bone in place. He was then put in a carriage and taken to Dr. Hardwick's. Hackett went back home with the rest of the boys.

On the next play, the other visiting halfback, O'Brien, was knocked out for 10 minutes. He was game, however, and although he was staggering he stayed in the game.

These accidents slowed up the Watertown team and the local boys had no trouble in scoring again, Clapp getting the touchdown and kicking the goal.

Quincy was going after another touchdown, but the referee's whistle stayed them in their progress, and the game was over. Score 22-8.

DETROIT TAKES PENNANT

American League Victor of 1897 Again Captures Coveted Prize

Chicago, Oct. 7.—What is said to have been the closest pennant contest ever waged by American League baseball clubs came to an end here, when Detroit, champion of 1907, captured the emblem for another year by defeating Chicago 7 to 0. Detroit, Cleveland and Chicago struggled all season for first place, never being far from each other in the matter of games won and lost table. The final standing of the clubs follows:

	Won	Lost	Pct
Detroit	90	63	.588
Cleveland	90	64	.584
Chicago	88	64	.579
St. Louis	83	69	.547
Boston	74	78	.487
Philadelphia	67	84	.444
Washington	64	85	.430
New York	51	100	.338

National League

In the National League, New York's second victory over Boston puts them one-half a game behind the Cubs. If New York should win today, it will be a tie for the lead.

Yesterday the directors of the National League ruled that the disputed Giants-Cubs game was a tie and directed that it be played off Thursday at the polo grounds, should New York demand it. The championship is, therefore, likely to be decided in the metropolis tomorrow.

CERTAIN JURYMAN NOT COMPETENT

Claim Put Forward by Counsel For Hains Brothers

New York, Oct. 7.—John F. McIntyre, attorney for Captain Peter C. Hains, Jr., and his brother, T. J. Hains, the former held for the murder of William E. Annis and the latter as an accessory to it, has served notice on District Attorney Darrin of Queens county that he will challenge the array of the grand jury empanelled to pass on the cases of his clients.

McIntyre bases his action upon information that a member of the grand jury was a warm personal friend of Annis and further, according to McIntyre's informant, that on several occasions since this man's selection as a juror he has been heard to express a determination to do everything in his power to "hang them both"—referring to the Hains brothers. McIntyre, therefore, avers that the juryman is not competent to sit in the jury room and demands the calling of an entirely new panel.

In the event of the district attorney disregarding his protest, McIntyre will apply to the supreme court for an order dismissing any indictments that may be brought against his clients by the present grand jury.

The divorce action, which has been made a corollary of the murder trial by the filing of an affidavit by Mrs. Hains in which she denies all allegations of improper conduct with Annis, is not to be passed upon until after the action of the state has been disposed of. Mrs. Hains' affidavit and a controverting one by Hains were filed yesterday with Justice Carr in the supreme court of Kings county. Decision on the motion for allimony, counsel fees and the custody of children, made in behalf of Mrs. Hains, was reserved.

Praised Roosevelt Policies

Melrose, Mass., Oct. 7.—Senator Lodge, Lieutenant Governor Draper and Lewis A. Frothingham were the principal speakers at a Republican rally at the Auditorium here last night. Particular stress was laid on defining the Roosevelt policies. Frothingham declared that "Mr. Bryan's recent jump to desiring the guarantee of bank deposits and favoring the election of judges would prove his undoing."

Killing Not Accounted For

Bridgeport, Conn., Oct. 7.—Antonio Valetta of Waterbury, who came to this city and killed Angelo Christiano by shooting on the street, pleaded guilty to manslaughter and was sentenced to state prison for not less than eight years nor more than fifteen. The state has never been able to find out what differences the men had had. Apparently there was no dispute at the time of the shooting.

SCHOOL BANKS

Surprising Success On Opening Day Over 1500 Depositors Over $320 Cash

The school savings banks were inaugurated in all grades of the public schools of the city below the High school on Monday when the first collections were taken. A week or two ago the teachers explained to their pupils the objects of the banks which have been established at no expense to the city through the good work of the Civic Betterment Committee of the Quincy Women's Club. A pass book is given for all money deposited at the schools and the money is immediately deposited in the Quincy Savings Bank. When the individual deposit is large enough, the Quincy Savings Bank will issue a book to that individual, and pay interest on all deposits.

In some schools it was not definitely known that a collection would be taken last Monday, but nevertheless the figures are astounding. Out of 5,400 pupils, 1,568 became depositors, on the first day, and the amount was $321.52 an average of 21 cents each. It is the small sums that are wanted, the pennies and nickles, and the children will be surprised at the way their bank accounts grow if they make a small deposit each Monday, when collections are taken.

Thanks are due to the Quincy Woman's Club for inaugurating this systematic method of saving money.

LIVE TOPICS

Discussed at October Meeting Of the Quincy Board of Trade

There was no special topic for discussion at the meeting of the Board of Trade on Wednesday evening. A number of subjects, however, were considered informally.

President Walter E. Piper presided, and there was a good attendance of members.

The committee to consider the privilege of aychtsmen crossing the boulevard at Wollaston beach reported that the commission had given the yachtsmen the permission desired.

It was announced that the exhibition of the Metropolitan Improvement Association, under the auspices of the Mayor, would be held in the Council chamber on Wednesday, Oct. 21. It would be a stereopticon lecture.

Attention was also called to the signs being missing from a number of streets in the city, and that some of the streets were not properly numbered.

Some of the members spoke informally on the benefit that would be derived if manuel training was introduced in the grammar schools as well as at the High school.

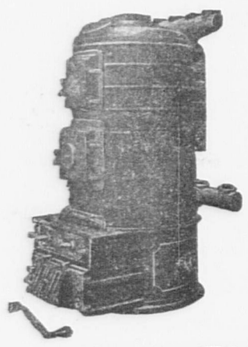
It was voted to communicate with the Mayor in regard to having the Neponset and Quincy Point bridges better lighted

There was some discussion on the crowded condition of certain trains to and from Boston, passengers often being obliged to stand. In connection with the steam railroad, the matter of the twelve ride books was discussed, also that signs should be placed in the depots giving the prices of the various forms of tickets sold.

NEW VOTERS.

The Registrars of Voters met at Atlantic on Wednesday night and added 72 names to the voting lists. Of this number, 5 were added to the Ward Five list; 28 to Ward Six, precinct one, and 36 to Ward Six, precinct two. The additions made to the Ward Five list swells to total registration of that ward to 963.

Your Attention Mr. Prospective Heating Customer!



Did you ever pause to consider the difference in various make boilers? Does it not appeal to your better judgment that a boiler the construction of which is such that it places a series of thin layers of water directly or indirectly over the fire surface and travel of hot gases, before they escape into the smoke flue, is sure to be economical in the consumption of fuel?

Another advantage that should be considered in a boiler of this description the parts of necessity must be small, therefore, in the event of breakage they may be easily and cheaply replaced. Of course there are cheaper boilers that are made in one piece from base to dome. These boilers contain surface on which the fire does not shine, or over which the hot gases do not pass, therefore, they are useless. These boilers without doubt can be made and sold cheaper than the boiler made of several units. But you Mr. Consumer, must pay the difference in consuming of coal in the long run.

Knockers' Club Open the Season

The Knockers' club held their first dinner of the season on Wednesday. Mayor Shea occupied the seat of honor at the head of the table. At his right was President Spear. Others were Chief of Police Burrell, Chief of Police Maurice Pierce of Milton, T. J. Collins, S. J. McMaster, P. J. Sullivan, and Inspector Goodhue.

The menu included: soup, scollops, German fired potatoes, roast sirloin of beef, sweet potatoes, cranberry sauce, royal plum pudding, mixed salad, Parker House rolls, cheese, toasted crackers, black coffee, fruit, ice cream and cake.

During the courses there were various side remarks under the good of the order. Mayor Shea explained how he expected to win out again next year.

President Spear told that oft repeated story of the garden on Thayer street. Chief Pierce told how he captures automobile speeders, and keeps from being photographed.

Inspector Goodhue, who was the guest of the day, told of his being "Jonnie on the spot," and how sorry he was not to have been present on other occasions.

Tim Collins told how his co-worker Mr. Cobb had passed his recent vacation, and Mr. McMaster of how the Elks beat the Knights of Columbus.

Phil Sullivan had a word to say of Braintree politics. Chief Burrell said nothing. He was too full of scollops to talk.

Mothers' Meeting On School Questions

Supt. Parlin has extended an invitation through the children of the public schools to all women of the city to attend an educational meeting next Thursday afternoon at High School hall. It is particularly designed for mothers of pupils, but all women of the city, and men also, may attend if they wish. All will be welcome.

It is proposed to discuss questions of vital interest to the schools of the city, such as school banks, playgrounds, half time for primary pupils, etc.

Relative to the short session for primary pupils, Supt. Parlin says half time has now been inaugurated in all the first grades throughout the city, and in the second grades at the Cranch building, the Gridley Bryant, and the Wollaston.

Only nine persons have personally protested to him against the change, and eight of these came to the conclusion that the plan was best when explained to them.

Gospel Meetings.

A series of Gospel meetings will be held Friday and Saturday evenings, and all day Sunday at the Swedish Congregational church on Garfield street.

The hour for the evening meetings is 7.30. On Sunday the services commence 10.45 A. M., 3 and 7 P. M.

The visiting clergymen who will preach are: Rev. August Erikson of Boston, Rev. C. G. Ryden of Milford, Rev. P. E. Sandberg of Manchester, N. H., also the pastor Rev. G. W. Palmgren.

Special singing by the male chorus and a double quartette. Scandinavian Americans are cordially invited to attend.

DECLARED "BILL IS ALL RIGHT"

Banqueters Enthusiastic Over Meeting of Bryan and Taft

A MOST INTERESTING SCENE

Words Which Passed Between Rival Candidates When They Clasped Hands Could Not Be Heard Because of Tumult--They Later Indulge In Friendly Chat--Chairman's Happy Introduction of "Big Guns"

Chicago, Oct. 8.—W. J. Bryan and W. H. Taft, rival candidates for the presidency of the United States, met last night at the fourth annual banquet of the Chicago Association of Commerce.

Mr. Bryan, having been in Chicago all day, was the first to arrive at the banquet hall in the Auditorium hotel. Mr. Taft, having delievred a speech at the opening of the deep waterways convention in the forenoon, went to Galesburg, Ills., to deliver another address during the afternoon, and returned to Chicago after the banquet was well under way.

Intense interest in the meeting had been manifested since it first became known that the two candidates were to meet in public, and every seat in three banquet halls, thrown together for the occasion, was occupied when the first course was served, save only a commodious chair reserved for Taft.

An ear-splitting shout gave warning of the arrival of Taft. Bryan, in common with everyone else, rose and looked toward the entrance. A huge frame came slowly up the narrow aisle between the tables. Those at a distance occasionally could catch a glimpse of a smiling face acknowledging greetings. Bryan turned his head slowly as his political opponent drew near, smiling slightly.

The dramatic moment which had been anticipated with such deep interest was soon over. Bryan's hand awaited that of Taft. A single lingering pressure, a word or so which none could overhear, because of the tumult, and the Republican leader passed on to a chair at the right of President Hall of the Chamber of Commerce. The cheering continued for a minute or so after those at the speakers' table had taken their seats. At the first moment the noise subsided Bryan, leaning to one side and smiling broadly, asked Taft if he had had a good day.

This display of friendliness on the part of the two candidates stirred the crowd to renewed cheering and words were useless in the din. Taft stroked his throat for answer. Then he laughed and the applause increased.

"What is the matter with Bill?" cried some one in stentorian tones.

"He's all right."

"Who's all right?"

"Bill's all right."

It took music by the orchestra and a song by the guests to restore a semblance of quiet. When talking in ordinary tones became possible the two candidates entered into an animated conversation, in which President Hall joined.

Besides Taft and Bryan, the speakers of the evening were A. C. Bartlett and David Forgan. Bartlett was the first speaker and Forgan was sandwiched between Bryan and Taft. In introducing Bryan, President Hall said:

"As I look upon my distinguished associates I am forced to resort to the familiar protestation of the perplexed lover, 'How happy could I be with either, were t'other dear charmer away.' The evolution of politics has brought to a commanding place in the eyes and regard of his countrymen a citizen of Nebraska. His life has been an honorable progress from the day he received his degree from his alma mater to the hour of his choice as standard-bearer of one of the great national parties by legions of enthusiastic countrymen. With the principles of an American, he has sought and held leadership in a career of courage, fidelity and kindness. Millions accept his captaincy, the energy of his service, the purity of his patriotism. Gentlemen, Mr. Bryan."

President Hall's introduction of Mr. Taft follows:

"In the fortunes of war we acquired alien and subject races. Our government assumed to lead them to the lofty eminence of American civilization. For the accomplishment of this purpose the president sent to the Filipinos a typical citizen and eminent counsellor and a man with courage of his convictions. He accomplished the high purpose of his mission, winning both the confidence of his countrymen and the love and gratitude of a nation to be. Success and honor have crowned his every effort in an active life as citizen, jurist, peacemaker and cabinet officer. Through all his career and in our insular possessions he has stood for the integrity of his government and the majesty of right. Gentlemen, Mr. Taft."

The speeches of both Taft and Bryan were non-partisan. This was in consonance with the wishes of the Chicago Association of Commerce, which is a non-partisan association.

Messrs. Bryan and Taft both preceded their formal addresses with witty remarks which immensely pleased their audience. They were applauded liberally.

When the last course of the dinner had been served, both of the distinguished guests were kept busy signing menu cards. Meantime the banquet hall remained in good-natured disorder. Through it all the two candidates labored with smiling fortitude, signing their names. The tumult which began with the entrance of Taft lasted for forty-five minutes.

DEBS HAS STRENUOUS DAY

Attentive Crowds Greet Socialist Candidate on His "Red Special"

Providence, Oct. 8.—The third day of the New England tour of Eugene V. Debs, the Socialist candidate for president, ended last night with a visit to this city, where he addressed a large and attentive audience in Infantry hall, his remarks being frequently cheered. Debs spent the entire day in delivering speeches in various cities and making rapid runs from place to place in his private car, "The Red Special."

Mr. Debs left Concord, N. H., yesterday morning after passing the night there. He expressed himself as pleased with the reception accorded him by his audiences in New Hampshire. From Concord he went to Lawrence, Mass., where 2000 people gathered in the freight yard greeted him as he descended from the train. His fifteen-minute speech was clamorously applauded. From Lawrence the "red special" took him to Haverhill, where the shoe workers gave him a reception similar to that in Lawrence.

From Haverhill a quick run was made to Boston, where the train was shifted to the tracks of the New York, New Haven and Hartford railroad. Brief stops were made at Walpole and Franklin, Mass., and Pawtucket, R. I., the candidate speaking briefly at each stop.

Bryan to Business Men

Chicago, Oct. 8.—For more than an hour William J. Bryan addressed the Business Men's National Bryan and Kern association in the parlors of the Auditorium. The Democratic candidate addressed himself particularly to the issues which affect the business men as a class, especially the tariff, trusts, the guarantee of bank deposits and the enonomic administration of government.

"Republicans," he asserted, "threatened a panic if there should be a Democratic victory this year; they should give bond to keep their promise that there would be prosperity if the Republicans were successful. President Roosevelt, with Mr. Taft as the most conspicuous member of his cabinet, had been unable to avert the present panic. How then could Judge Taft hope to prevent a panic alone with Roosevelt gone to Africa?"

"Hughes, 1912; Sheldon, 1916"

Hastings, Neb., Oct. 8.—After having spoken in fourteen towns within a radius of a few hundred miles of the home of the Democratic candidate for president, Governor Hughes of New York declared that he was convinced that "the voice of Mr. Bryan's own country would not be the weakest in repudiating the Bryan and reaffirming the Republican policies next month." At Lincoln Hughes was escorted through the streets by Governor Sheldon in an automobile placarded: "Hughes, 1912; Sheldon, 1916."

Yancey Swamped by Brown

Atlanta, Oct. 8.—Returns from the state election indicate the election of Joseph M. Brown, the Democratic candidate for governor, by a majority of more than 80,000 over Yancey Carter, the Independence party's nominee. Returns from a majority of the counties indicate the ratification of the constitutional amendment providing qualifications for voters. This amendment makes the ownership of property one of the qualifications.

Roosevelt to Make No Speeches

Washington, Oct. 8.—During a call of Senator Hemenway of Indiana at the White House he asked President Roosevelt regarding the report that he would take the stump. The president replied that he had received numerous requests to do so, but he thought it was unnecessary and made the unequivocal statement that he would not make any speeches.

Meat For Army Purposes

London, Oct. 8.—A report has been current in this city that the London representative of a Chicago firm has been commissioned by certain continental countries to secure 20,000,000 pounds of canned meats for army purposes. The manager of the firm in question says that negotiations are pending to supply a limited amount of rations to a continental country, but that the amount reported is ridiculous.

Much Damage by Earthquakes

Kiev, Oct. 8.—Earthquakes in southwestern Russia have caused serious panics, many persons being injured in attempting to escape from public buildings. No fatalities, however, have been reported. The disturbances have done considerable damage to buildings and railroad bridges.

The English Cotton Srike

Manchester, Eng., Oct. 8.—Representatives of the cotton manufacturers and their employes conferred ineffectually here in an attempt to end the strike. Winston S. Churchill, president of the Board of Trade, will make an effort to arbitrate the case next week.

Wright Gets Æro Gold Medal

Paris, Oct. 8.—The governing committee of the Aero Club of France has awarded its gold medal for 1908 to Wilbur Wright, the American aeroplanist.

What DO YOU DO for Quincy?

A Little Wad of Common Sense.

A New Aid Fable.

This is not a George Ade fable, though it may sling some slang. It is a Home Aid fable.

Once there was a Geezer, who sat around and cut Kindling too small for Cook Stove purposes. He Whittled against Time and Flabbergasted against his Town. The town was No Good, he said—strictly on the Blink. Yes, it was N. G. Why, hadn't he lived Here since '84 and found that the Place was Punky? Sure, Mike!

Look at that town over in the next County. Grown like Jonah's Gourd. Must be a Jonah here. We've grown some, but I don't see that we're knocking any particularly Big Persimmons. That's the way this Gazaboo knocked his town.

One day a Sarcastic Stranger floated into the Town that was Knocked from the burg that had Blossomed like Jonah's Gourd. He Heard some of the Flabbergasting and Dropped to the situation.

"Look here, you," he remarked to the citizen who was Handing Out the Knocks. "What do you do for this town? Are you doing your part to put this Burg on the Upgrade? What's that hefty Bunch of literature sticking out of your Clothes?"

"That's a Mail Order Catalogue from Chicago—a town that is a town," replied the Geezer.

"So I thought," said the Impertinent Arrival. "Now let me hand you out a nice little Wad of common sense. For the past ten years you have been sending your money to the Chicago Mail Order houses instead of spending it among your home merchants. What would have happened to Chicago fifty years ago if all the First Settlers had shipped their Loose Coin to New York on catalogue inducements? Why, you'd have to use a sand dredger now to find the Original Site of Chicago. Now, in the Burg from which I have just Blown in we got over all this Bum Business years ago. We passed Resolutions that we would trade at home and help our own town to Spread out so that you could Sight it on the map without using Opera Glasses. But you and a Bunch of other folks in this town have wasted your Substance in Riotous Expenditures in Chicago by mail and let the sheriff hang out the 'Nothing Doing' sign in front of some of your own town's mercantile Emporiums. Look at our Town and then look at yours. What makes the Difference?"

Whereupon the Whittling Gazaboo threw a few well chosen Thoughts into his mental makeup and went down to the village store to Annex a linen collar in place of the Paper Circles which he had bought from Chicago at Two Bits a Box.

MORAL: If you want your town to grow, patronize home enterprises.

Now that YOU KNOW the Difference

DEMOCRAT ADVOCATES NEGRO DISFRANCHISEMENT.

National Committeeman Atwood, Bryan's Close Friend, Openly Favors Taking Vote From Colored Men of Kansas.

Disfranchisement of as many colored voters as possible is advocated by John H. Atwood, Democratic national committeman from Kansas, chairman of the speakers' bureau of the Democratic national committee, one of Bryan's closest friends and a man who, it is said, Mr. Bryan intends to make attorney general if he should be elected president.

Disfranchisement of the colored men of Kansas was advocated by Mr. Atwood in the following letter published in the Kansas City Post of Kansas City, Kan., May 7, 1908:

Letter Urging Disfranchisement.

"By one of those strange ironies of fate which sometimes overtake the benefactors of individuals, peoples or races the state of Kansas, which has done more perhaps for the negro than any other state in the Union, is now suffering a grievous political wrong from the hands of the freedman and his descendants.

"William A. Harris would now be governor of Kansas had it not been for the ignorant negro vote, and there have been times in the past when the Democratic party could have elected its state ticket had it not been for the ignorant black vote of Kansas City, Kan., Leavenworth, Atchison, Lawrence and Topeka.

"There was a time when the negro vote was not a considerable factor in Kansas politics, but that time has passed. The influx of negroes from the south, the rapid multiplication of those native to Kansas soil and the increasing insistence of the negro upon social equality make the Kansas negro not only a political factor, but a social and political menace.

Atwood Favors "Jim Crow" Schools.

"If the last election be a criterion, the negro now holds the balance of political power in Kansas, as he does in Missouri. This in itself is bad enough, but in Kansas we have suffered for long years the outrage of mixed schools, fastened upon us by the Republican politician.

"Mixed schools lead the negroes to aspire to a mixed society, and this close contact of the races is productive of troubles from which Kansas would be free if the negro had less political power and were not admitted to the same schools with the whites.

"Kansas has long been weary of the negro politician, and it is more than weary of the mixed school. Patience has its limits, and I believe that the time has come when the people of Kansas will join with the people of Missouri in restricting negro suffrage.

"I do not advocate the disfranchisement of the negro on the ground of his color. That idea is abhorrent to the principles of our free government, and its execution would be in conflict with the constitution.

"But our constitution will permit the disfranchisement of the ignorant, depraved, lazy, vicious and debauched negro, and this disfranchisement should be accomplished to the end that our free institutions may not suffer."

AMERICAN GOODS ABROAD.

Policy of Cheaper Sales Has Consent of Both Parties.

Secretary Shaw estimates that out of every $1,000 worth of manufactures exported from this country 30 cents' worth are sold abroad cheaper than at home. So far the complaint of the Democrats that our manufactures sell abroad cheaper than at home seems to be true. But this is not as great a discount in the export trade as the advantage given to manufactures in the importation of raw materials, that they may employ American labor at American wages in the manufacture of goods that are to be sold abroad in competition.

It has been the policy of the Republican party for a number of years to encourage such competition in foreign markets. The drawback on materials imported for manufactures that are to be exported is not peculiar to the Dingley law. The same provision was in the McKinley law, and it was incorporated in the Wilson-Gorman law by the Democrats. It was kept in the law when the Dingley act was passed because it became the policy of the government by common consent of both parties.

Last year we imported $10,000,000 worth of materials which went into manufactures for export, and the drawback was paid on about 5 per cent of our imports. This would make it possible for the American manufacturers to sell about 5 per cent of their exports, or $120,000,000 worth, cheaper abroad than at home. The advantage given by the drawback was given for the purpose of enabling them to go into foreign markets and compete, even if they had to sell cheaper than at home. And this advantage was given in the Democratic tariff act of 1894, just as it had been in the McKinley act of 1890 and as it is now given by the Dingley act of 1897.

It is therefore not a partisan question, because it has had recognition from both political parties. It is a part of the policy to meet competition in foreign markets rather than protection for the home market. Its definite purpose is to enable manufacturers in this country to give employment to American labor for the production of goods for consumption in Europe instead of leaving that manufacture to European producers employing European labor.

FIERCE FIGHT IN A TEMPEST

Sea Captain and Dogs Battle For Possession of Plank

SHIP STRUCK BY HURRICANE

Terrible Experience of Her Commander, Who Is Sole Survivor of Crew of Twenty-Six, Results In His Losing His Reason--Tossed About In Tempestuous Sea For Thirty-Six Hours Before Rescued

St. Pierre, Miq., Oct. 8.—Rescued from a dory plank to which he had clung for thirty-six hours in the tempestuous waters of the north Atlantic, the captain of the French three-masted schooner Juanita was brought to this port a raving maniac. He was picked up by the fishing schooner Archamore, and was the sole survivor of the crew of twenty-six aboard the Juanita.

The most thrilling portion of the captain's adventure was his fight with two of the ship's dogs for possession of the plank which kept him from drowning. The disaster, which is the worst that has happened on the Grand Banks for years, occurred during the West Indian hurricane.

The Juanita was plunging down from an unusually dizzy height when a swiftly following second wave caught her and the bow of the fisherman split in two. The craft had received her death blow and almost in the twinkling of an eye plunged bow first beneath the waters. So sudden and complete was the catastrophe that the crew had no time to seek possible means of safety.

Struggling desperately to the surface, the Juanita's captain by a miracle grasped a plank as it was sweeping by. While he was swept along by the waves he made out through the blackness of the night two dark objects close by him. For a moment he thought they were two more of his crew, and shouted a word of encouragement.

The objects approached more closely, and he saw his mistake. They were two of the big dogs carried by the ship. Then began a struggle that did more than physical exhaustion to drive the captain mad.

The dogs were wild with fear. By instinct, they knew that the plank to which the captain clung offered a hope for life. Swimming up to the frail support, they attempted to climb up on it. It was barely large enough to support one man, and, realizing the danger, the captain made a desperate struggle to hold to his advantage. He aimed a blow at the dogs with his fist.

With a snarl of rage, they turned upon him and there in the blackness of the storm on the broad Atlantic commenced one of the most thrilling fights for life in the history of the banks.

Clinging with one hand to the plank, the captain defended himself from the sharp fangs of the dogs. They were powerful brutes and maddened with fear. The captain fought with the disadvantage of one hand engaged. Watching his chance, as one of the dogs swam close upon him, he shot out his free hand and grasped the brute by the throat. The struggle carried the captain and his enemy below the surface with the man still clinging tenaciously to the plank.

The dog fought wildly to free itself, but the captain had a grip of steel. The fingers did not relax until the dog's struggles ceased, and dropping him to the mercy of the waves the captain turned upon the other brute, which by this time was close enough to sink his teeth into his master's neck.

With a superhuman effort the captain swung around, and throwing his one disengaged hand over the animal's neck forced the brute's head beneath the water. The dog lashed violently about, but the strong arm of the captain, nerved to desperation, never weakened, and as the animal straightened out limp the captain took away his arm. He had the plank to himself.

For thirty-six hours he was tossed about. His eyes were half closed and his fingers were just slipping from the plank when the Archamore swept up. The captain was unconscious.

Patiently the men of St. Pierre worked over their unfortunate countryman and in a few hours their efforts were rewarded. It is thought he will never fully regain his reason.

Peary Strikes Bad Weather

Washington, Oct. 8.—Commander Peary, who is now on a Polar expedition, in a letter received at the navy department dated at Etah, North Greenland, Aug. 17, says there had been almost continuous winds and frequent snowstorms. Peary says he has on board the Roosevelt a good supply of Esquimos, dogs and walrus meat. All his company are well.

Fire Destroys Old Hotel

Farmington, Me., Oct. 8.—The Stoddard house, the principal hotel in this village, caught fire last night from a defective chimney and was completely destroyed. The thirty guests got out in safety with all their effects. The building was a three-story wooden structure, built in 1849. The total loss is about $5000.

Fleeced Out of $20,000

Los Angeles, Cal., Oct. 8.—A son of ex-Senator Clark of Montana was fleeced out of $20,000 in a roulette joint here. Now he is seeking the aid of the authorities to get back his money.

THIRTEEN PERSONS KILLED

Explosion of Grain Elevator Shakes Vermont Village to Its Foundation

Richford, Vt., Oct. 8.—An explosion of dust and gases in a large grain elevator in this village caused the death of at least thirteen persons, while it is possible that the death roll may be still further increased. Of the victims eleven were men employed in the elevator, while the other two were women who were walking on the railroad track nearby.

The explosion occurred while work was going on within the elevator. It is supposed that it was due to spontaneous combustion of the dry grain dust, ignited possibly by the sun's rays through a window.

The elevator was owned jointly by the Canadian Pacific and Boston and Maine railroads and was occupied by the Quaker Oats company. It was 150 feet in height, 130 feet long and 90 feet wide. The exact amount of grain which it contained could not be learned, but it is known that the quantity was very large.

While the excited villagers watched the blaze the heat set fire to a flour shed, and seventy-five freight cars which were standing near the shed were also burned. Every building in the village was shaken as if by an earthquake when the explosion occurred and many people who were on the streets near the elevator were thrown to th ground with elevator were thrown to the ground with considerable violence. The property loss is estimated at $400,000.

EIGHTH PRESIDENT OF WILLIAMS

Notable Gathering of Educators at Garfield's Inauguration

Williamstown, Mass., Oct. 8.—Simple but impressive because of their dignity were the exercises in connection with the inauguration of Harry A. Garfield, eighth president of Williams college. The induction exercises brought together one of the most notable gatherings of educators ever assembled in the United States, while men prominent in every walk of life were also in attendance. The presidents of seventy-nine American colleges participated in the ceremony, Governor Guild representing the commonwealth, while greetings from the English university of Oxford were presented by James Bryce, the British ambassador.

The induction of President Garfield was notable in two ways. First, because of the distinguished educators in attendance, and second, because of the address of the newly installed head of the college, in which he outlined his purpose and ideals as president of Williams. Briefly, as outlined in his address, Garfield intends "to fit citizens for citizenship," his conception of citizenship being based on Christ's law, "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy strength, and with all thy mind; and thy neighbor as thyself."

The exercises consisted of morning prayer in the Thompson Memorial hall chapel, the induction ceremonies and the conferring of honorary degrees at the Congregational church, the alumni luncheon at Lasell gymnasium and a reception by President and Mrs. Garfield at the president's home to the guests in attendance. An alumni smoker at Jesup's hall last night brought the festivities to a close.

At all of the exercises Mrs. James A. Garfield, widow of the martyred president and mother of the new head of Williams, was an interested spectator. Secretary of the Interior Garfield, Irving M. Garfield and Abram Garfield, brothers of the new president, and all of them Williams men, were also in attendance.

Result of Erb Inquest

Chester, Pa., Oct. 8.—That there might be no delay in firmly fixing the responsibility for the murder of Captain J. C. Erb, national guardsman and politician, who was shot to death at his country home near Media, a joint inquest and hearing was held here last night at which time Mrs. Erb was committed to jail as an accessory in the murder of her husband, and her sister, Mrs. Catherine Beisel, was held, charged with the killing.

The Queen of Cruisers

Glasgow, Oct. 8.—The British cruiser Inflexible, at her official trials, attained a speed of 27 1-4 knots, breaking all records. It was stated after the trial that her speed would have been greater, had not the fog hindered.

NEWS IN BRIEF

M. Neergaard has consented to form a new Danish cabinet, the previous cabinet having resigned at the request of the king, following the disclosures in connection with the arrest of M. Alberti for embezzlement.

Canadian Pacific railway shareholders voted to ask the sanction of the governor-in-council of Canada to the raising of $50,000,000 of new capital for the company.

President Roosevelt has approved the recommendation of the war and navy departments that the employes of all navy yards and arsenals be paid weekly instead of semi-monthly.

Lucien Meyer, delicatessen and baker, Boston, filed a voluntary petition in bankruptcy, giving his liabilities as $11,406 and assets as $27.

One fireman was killed and eight were injured in the collapse of the burning walls of a small grain elevator at Buffalo. The loss is $100,000.

WHAT THE KIDNEYS DO.

Their Unceasing Work Keeps Us Strong and Healthy.

All the blood in the body passes through the kidneys once every three minutes. The kidneys filter the blood They work night and day. When healthy they remove about 500 grains of impure matter daily, when unhealthy some part of this impure matter is left in the blood. This brings on many diseases and symptoms—pain in the back, headache, nervousness, hot,dry skin, rheumatism, gout, gravel, disorders of the eyesight and hearing, dizziness, irregular heart, debility, drowsiness, dropsy, deposits in the urine, etc. But if you keep the filters right you will have no trouble with your kidneys.

Mrs. Deborah Prouty, living at 85 North St., Quincy, Mass., says: "I am in a position to speak in the highest terms of Doan's Kidney Pills. My back ached nearly all the time and caused me considerable trouble. Any sudden movement, or if I attempted to stoop, sent sharp pains, through my loins. My health was much run down and I had but little strength or energy. I was very much alarmed about my condition when Doan's Kidney Pills were recommended to me. I had known so many people who had used them with beneficial results that I procured a supply at the Cox Drug Store. Three boxes convinced me that Doan's Kidney Pills were the best kidney remedy to be had and I am now in perfect health."

NEW USE FOR HICKORY

Noiseless Wheels to Be Made From Tree Stumps.

PROCESS PREVENTS RATTLE.

East St. Louisan Provides Market For Bane of the Farmer's Life—All the Butts In Sight Are Being Busily Cornered.

A corner in hickory stumps is in sight. E. C. Sendelbach of East St. Louis threatens to buy up all of the stumps and make wheels out of them. He has a patent on the idea. If Sendelbach's idea is successful, he expects to use all of the tree except the sap.

Heretofore the stumps have been a waste and a bother. They stubbornly held their ground and were in the way when the soil was opened for cultivation. Modern methods may put an end to the stump nuisance. With the short cuts from the stumps Sendelbach, according to the St. Louis Post-Dispatch, says he can make as good wheels as are made and will do away with the rattle. The tires will not have to be set every time there is a dry spell, he says.

Nowadays the rim of an ordinary buggy wheel is made from pieces six to eight feet in length, requiring choice cuts of timber. When the spokes become worn and the rim gets dry and loose it causes the familiar rattle. A visit to the blacksmith shop and a tedious wait until the tires are set is about the only remedy.

By the stump method the rim will be made of short pieces from six to ten inches long, fitted into iron flanges at the end of each spoke. The iron will not dry up or warp; hence there will be no rattle. The short cuts will also make the wheel much cheaper to manufacture, it is said, and the longer lumber can be used for other purposes. Mr. Sendelbach has ordered an equipment of special machinery costing $150,000 for sawing the stumps and making the wheels. Sawmills he owns in Illinois and Arkansas will supply the lumber from the stumps he purchased in that territory.

Sendelbach now has representatives in Illinois, Indiana, Missouri, Arkansas and eastern states buying stumps by the acre. Automatic machinery will be used to pull the stumps from the ground. The farmer can then plant his crop without annoyance from the vexatious stumps.

The stump cuts can be utilized in making all kinds and sizes of wheels, Sendelbach says. Samples are now being made for two St. Louis breweries and the New York fire department for an experiment as to their commercial value.

HOME WITH MOVABLE ROOF.

Novel Feature Introduced Into Boston Man's Cottage on Casco Bay.

One of the newest and handsomest cottages on Casco bay is that of Frank B. Thompson, the principal of the high school of commerce of Boston, which has just been finished on Birch island, Mass. The cottage is the largest on the island and one of the best arranged.

A most pleasing feature is the large living room, which takes up practically the entire first floor and is large enough for fifteen or twenty couples to dance in comfortably. A large fireplace at the end of the room adds to its attractiveness.

One feature of the cottage which is greatly appreciated by the occupants is the large flat roof over the center of the cottage. This roof is so made that while it can be used to sit on to enjoy the magnificent view it can during a hot spell be lifted up, thus giving plenty of fresh air for the chambers.

Anna Held's Narrow Escape.

Anna Held, otherwise Mrs. Ziegfeld, looking as pretty and petite as ever, who recently arrived at New York from Germany, had been through an automobile accident while abroad that nearly cost the actress her life.

"Mr. Ziegfeld and myself and our chauffeur," said the dainty Parisienne, "had just crossed the line between France and Switzerland when we became confused by the signs and did not know whether our road lay to the right or the left. We started to one side when the chauffeur suddenly jumped up and violently wrenched the wheel that Mr. Ziegfeld was operating. He turned so sharply that the machine crashed sidewise against a pile of wood, and two wheels were smashed. It was hard to understand why the chauffeur had acted so until we saw the wood fall over a deep precipice which we would surely have gone over had we kept on our way."

Worldwide Craze For a Song.

The methods of the Teuton in winning his inamorata have been delineated in a quaint German love ditty which has been very popular in the United States during the last few months. It is entitled "The Glowworm" and was written by Paul Lincke, who at the present time has four different operas running in France and Germany. "The Glowworm" song has been given 2,000 times in the "Frau Luna" opera at the Konigstadt theater, Berlin. The song has an odd theme. The glowworm's light is invoked to lead the lovers on their dark way, and the little insect is beseeched to guide them with its twinkling "candles." A peculiar characteristic of the ballad's melody is a boldly developed obligato running through the music. The song has been translated into no less than eight languages.

ODD WAY TO REACH POLE.

Explorer Baldwin Would Use Portable Houses and Ice Floes.

What is pronounced by experts to be the best plan for north polar research is the novel one proposed by Evelyn Briggs Baldwin.

"I am soon to lay this plan in detail before the Harvard union at Cambridge," said the explorer recently at New York, "but I'll tell you this much now:

"Give me a cargo of logs, another of rasks partly filled with emergency supplies and a single vessel specially constructed, and we can go from Bering strait to the pole and right across the Arctic ocean. Scatter the logs, portable houses, casks, etc., upon a group of heavy ice floes surrounding the ship, shifting the supplies if necessary by means of windlasses, motors or dogs, and we'll succeed. A single crew can manage the three cargoes.

"Had the Jeannette expedition adopted this plan it would have won. In my support Rear Admiral Melville stated to me that a small house erected on the ice at the beginning of the drift of the Jeannette having been blown away before it had been fastened down was found two years later less than two miles from the ship, thus proving that the ship and ice proceed just as a balloon moves with the atmosphere in which it floats.

"With portable studios and laboratories our artists and scientists may work in tranquillity. With balloons we will view a wide belt of territory and, as did the Baldwin-Ziegler expedition, frequently dispatch messages homeward. With our logs as fuel we'll barbecue the walrus, seal and polar bear. With the casks as emptied we'll form a flotilla filled with duplicates of our collections.

"'Good scheme,' said Admiral Schley the other day."

PLEASE, MR. STORK, A BABY.

Little Girl Writes For a Nice One For a Christmas Present.

A little girl who had heard that babies were brought by the stork hit upon the brilliant idea of writing to Mr. Stork as if to Santa Claus to let him know she wanted another addition to the family. She had heard of the stork in the Central park zoo at New York city and addressed her letter, "Mr. Stork, Central Park," so it eventually fell into the hands of Park Commissioner Smith. The girl evidently is not particular whether she gets a little brother or a sister, for she didn't make any specifications. Her letter reads:

Dear Mr. Stork—My name is Anna Trainor, and I would like you very much to send me a nice little baby, for I like them very much. My friend, whose name is Hazel Carney, told me that she wrote a letter to you, and a few days after she received a letter from you telling her that you would send a baby Christmas or before Christmas. Well, Mr. Stork, my letter must come to a close, but don't forget to send each of us a baby, no other time but this Christmas, Dec. 25. Hazel said that she did not get her baby yet, so don't forget to send them Christmas.

ANNA TRAINOR,
412 East Thirty-fourth Street.

My friend's name is Hazel Carney, 401 East Thirty-fourth street.

P. S.—Write soon to each of us. Bring Hazel's first, because she wrote before me.

The letter is written on a page of a school notebook.

FIRST SEAWEED FEAST.

"Dehydro" Banquet Had Dishes of Ocean Vegetation Only.

That the process of dehydration may solve the food problem of the world when the population shall have exceeded the food productivity of the earth by turning the seaweed of the great Sargasso sea into a valuable food product was the theory advanced by Judge M. S. Griswold at a "dehydro" banquet given the other day at Waukesha, Wis.

It was the first of the kind ever served in the world and was prepared by Miss C. A. Lyford, a domestic science expert of the State Normal university of Bloomington, Ill.

At this banquet the piece de resistance was seaweed done into fries, roasts, purees and many other contrived dishes by the skillful cook. Every diner claimed to have enjoyed it hugely, and all were up and about the next day.

Taxpaying by Churches.

The Rev. A. A. Nellis, pastor of the Second Baptist church, Auburn, N. Y., in a recent sermon on the obligation of the church to the community, said that one obligation that should not be shirked was to pay taxes. There is no good reason for church exemption, he believes, and the church should not be a tax dodger.

The Modern Carrier.

There is something at home that keeps crying,
With the funniest kind of a squeak.
In a bundle by mamma it's lying,
And they just let me in for a peek.
When I ask them to tell how they caught it
The nurse walks me out by the ear,
And she says that an aeroplane brought it,
But I know that a stork left me here.

I have looked all around for some traces,
But I can't find the least bit of proof,
So I s'pose it was due other places
And just dropped him down on our roof.
And, though nurse and most all of the others
Declare that it's true, it looks queer
For an airship to peddle new brothers
When I know that a stork brought me here.

Well, I guess that I'll have to believe it,
Because they all say it is so,
But 'twas mean in the fellow to leave it
And never let any one know.
My, it seems like the funniest thing! It
Perplexes, for how can it be
That the aeroplane fellow should bring it
When the stork is the one that brought me?

EDITORIAL.

A two column article on the new City Charter of Haverhill is crowded out today but will appear tomorrow.

The credit for the appropriation for surface drainage of streets belongs to Mayor Shea. The proper drainage of streets has been his pet hobby all the year. Early in the spring he caused an order to be offered in the City Council appropriating $4,000 for this purpose, and later sent communications to that body urging action on the order. The Committee on Streets sent the order along to the Finance Committee, but it was not until last Monday that this committee reported the order. Then they increased the amount to $5,166, and stipulated what streets it should be expended upon.

Some time ago Mayor Shea, by request of the City Council, forwarded to that body, sketches for a school building at Houghs Neck. Nothing has been done with them, however, for the reason that it would be useless to appropriate money for a school building until the lot on which the building is to be located was selected. The city has no location at Houghs Neck at the present time for a building, and it is a question what lot will be selected.

By request however, Councilman Gilson introduced an order in the City Council on Monday evening calling for an appropriation of $6,000 for a lot.

It would seem unwise to pass an order appropriating $6,000 at the present time, for it means that owners of land, knowing the amount of money available, would see to it that the price of the land was made to fit the appropriation, and the city might be the loser.

The proper mode of procedure would have been for the Houghs Neck Associates, or other interested parties to have decided upon the location desired. Then get an option on the site. When this was done ask the City Council to make the necessary appropriation.

Now its looks as though they were going at the whole matter backward; first by getting plans and then by appropriating money for a site before that site has been selected.

It is like a man first building a house, then the cellar and lastly hunting for a lot upon which to put his house and cellar. There is a right way to do these things and why not do them right in the first place?

Gov. Hughes of New York, James S. Sherman, Vice-presidential candidate, and Senator Albert J. Beveridge of Indiana, have started out on the task of bringing in the West for Taft. Mr. Taft himself has accomplished great things. In Chicago, for example, he addressed a large audience of railroad labor men on his own record as a judge in injunction cases and other labor disputes. He took the position that what he decided was law and justice, and that he had no apology to make for it. The effect of his attitude in this was to win over thousands of laboring men who had been listening to Gomper's call to vote for Mr. Bryan's promises.

Mr. Sherman addressed a large meeting of colored men while in Chicago, and the effects of this have been seen in the reports from the headquarters of the negro voters. There is little doubt, in the opinion of the leading men of the race, that the negroes will stand by the Republican party this year.

CHANCES BRIGHT

In All Parts Of the District For Election of Galvin to Congress

J. Mitchell Galvin, Republican candidate for congress in the Tenth district, entertained the Boston ward committeemen at a dinner, on Wednesday, which later was turned into a conference of the ward chairman and republican workers in the Boston end of the district, says the Boston Advertiser.

H. Clifford Gallagher said that at a meeting of the Milton town committee held the other evening, it was felt that Milton would increase the republican vote by at least 150 this year for the republican congressional candidate.

Mr. Gallagher said that if each of the Boston wards would show the same increase in the vote for the republican candidate for congress, there would be no question about the election of Mr. Galvin to congress.

Secretary Hormel of the republican city committee quoted election figures of a year ago to show that the district was not as hopelessly democratic as most people generally regarded it. He said that it was up to the republicans to get their votes to the polls.

W. W. Hibbard of the ward 24 committee declared that his ward would give a good account of itself Nov. 3.

Frank Atwood of ward 16 said that the prospects for a big republican vote in his ward were never better than this year.

REWARD for ANCIENT DEED of LAND in QUINCY.

A reward of Fifty Dollars will be paid by the undersigned for the production before October 19th 1908 of the original deed from WILLIAM VINAL of Quincy to OLIVER JENKINS of Scituate, dated 1806, conveying land in Quincy. The land conveyed is at Quincy Point. This deed may perhaps be in the possession of some descendant of Oliver Jenkins, who died about 1835, his home being then in Quincy, leaving a widow Fanny Jenkins and as heirs Cynthia Jenkins, Louisa Hobart, Samuel B. Hobart, William H. Jenkins and Sarah S. Jenkins. Or said deed may be in the possession of some descendant of Nichols Land of Quincy, or in the possession of some descendant of Peleg F. Jones of Quincy who died in 1876 leaving a widow Priscilla R. Jones, and as heirs Priscilla R. Lawrence, wife of Benjamin Lawrence, Thomas B. Jones, David A. Jones, George H. Jones, and Sarah V. Hill, wife of Edward L. Hill. Or said deed may be in the hands of some other person either in Quincy or elsewhere.

Richardson--White Home Wedding

At the residence of Mr. and Mrs. John H. White, of Devon street, Dorchester, on Wednesday evening, their daughter Miss Ellen was united in marriage to Mr. Waldo Richardson, the photographer of the Fore River Shipbuilding Company. The officiating clergyman was the Rev. Dr. Geo. Cady, pastor of the Pilgrim Memorial church at Upham's Corner.

The bride was attended by Miss Alice Puffer of Dorchester, and was given in marriage by her father. The best man was Mr. Dana Wood of Belmont.

Wendell H. Luce of Quincy a friend of the groom, officiated at the piano, playing Mendelssohn wedding march as the bridal party entered the parlor. The house decorations were of hydrangias and ferns.

A reception followed from 8 until 9.30; which was very largely attended. The gifts were many and beautiful.

Mr. and Mrs. Richardson will reside on Beach street, Wollaston, on their return from their wedding trip and will be at home after December 1.

Q. D. N. A. TAG DAY.

Saturday, September 26, was observed as Tag Day for the benefit of the Quincy Day Nursery, and bright and early on the morning of that day, members and friends of the nursery and all the young people who could be pressed into the service were to be seen in groups, in busy centres of our city, smilingly way-laying passers by, ringing door bells, soliciting the butcher, the baker, the candlestick-maker, the ice man, the grocer, and all who came their way. One and all willingly surrendered, and the friendly interest manifested in the good cause cheered the hearts of the busy workers and by night several hundred dollars had been added to the treasury of the Quincy Day Nursery Association.

It is hoped that Tag Day may be observed for the benefit of the Nursery next year. The collection boxes were kindly donated by Mr. Emanuel of City Square.

The committee for the day and assistants were:

President, Mrs. Arthur Sibley; chairman, Mrs. Frank S. Davis; committee Ward One: Mrs. Theo. King, Mrs. E. E. Davis, Mrs. N. S. Hunting, Mrs. R. Allen, Mrs. W. E. CAMPING IN MAINE

Rev. Crathern Of Braintree Writes of His Experiences

A few weeks ago I received a letter from a ministerial friend who had been spending the summer on the Cape, in which he said "Crathern, I am convinced that you have solved the vacation problem until that time I did not know that there was such a thing as "A Vacation Problem." But I remembered that years ago I used to look forward to the vacation season with some anxiety and concern, wondering how I was going to give the family the maximum of a good time at the minimum of expense But for several years now I haven't had a moment's worry. When school days are over and the first Sunday in July is past I know just as surely as I know my own name where we are going, how we are going, and how much the "going" is going to cost us.

Perhaps some of the brethern like myself with large families and small salaries may like to know how I solved the problem. Pastors with small families and large salaries have no problems to solve. We have five children so that there are seven of us to plan and provide for, and if the surprise and consternation of a Boston photographer, when I asked him to show me some family groups of seven as sample pictures are any criterion, I should judge the biblical number is above the average. In arranging them for a party of seven persons for a period of seven weeks I shall probably reach the limit of the ordinary man both in size of family and duration of time.

The average minister of course likes to spend his vacation with his wife and children and if he goes away from home he usually does one of two things, he either hires a cottage at the seashore or goes to some boarding house in the country. We have tried both and neither is a satisfactory solution of the vacation problem. In the first place a cottage involves considerable expense, for which you get only modern inconveniences, and in the second place boarding presents the danger of furnishing bigger appetites than the people who expect to make money out of you can afford to take care of.

Of these two necessary evils the one to be avoided is "the cottage." If there is one person in this world who needs a vacation more than the minister, it is the minister's wife, and to take a summer cottage at the beach with the furnishings put in on the instalment plan is for her at least to transfer the household duties and the household drudgery from a well equipped parsonage in the suburbs to a poorly equipped bungalow on the shore. Don't do it.

You haven't solved the vacation problem until you have solved it for your wife as well as for yourself My solution of the vacation problem is found in "The Summer Camp." We need to get back to the prophetic and patriarchial imperative "To Your Tents O Israel."

I believe in the canvas house pitch your tent on a hillock in the woods and guy your ropes to the trees of the forest and you have a habitation fit for kings and queens and like Robinson Crusoe you can be monarch of all you survey.

My camping ground is in the pine woods of Maine 175 miles from Boston. We reach it with only sixteen miles of railroad traveling. We leave Boston on the Portland boat arriving in the Maine city early the next morning after a delightful sail down the harbor and along the north shore. A half hour's ride on the cars brings us to Sebago lake where we transfer to a small steamer for a most enchanting and fascinating trip across Sebago lake, through the Songa river, the crookedest stream I imagine in navigation, over the famous Bay of Naples ,and into the beautiful waters of Lake Wyonegonic.

At the end of the boat journey an old-fashioned four-horse coach takes the passengers from the landing to the village. Here a farmer's wagon meets us and takes us four miles out of town to "The Lake in the Woods" where we step into our own boat and row to our own wharf a mile up the lake. And there on the shores of a lake two miles long and one mile wide, surrounded by a thousand acres of pine woods and pasture land, far from the nodding crowd and with only a few personal friends in the vicinity, we spend the summer ,as happy as the proverbial clam.

We have three sleeping tents and one large living tent where we cook and dine and spend rainy days. The tents have board floors and the sleeping tents are provided with single cots and spring mattresses.

Each tent is pitched on a knoll of ground in the open which is a natural watershed, and a fly over the top makes every tent perfectly waterproof. The cook tent is supplied with a thousand paper plates and napkins which take the place of crockery and linen and reduce dish-washing to a minimum.

A nearby farmer furnishes us with daily supplies of milk, cream, eggs, butter, berries, vegetables and other things at prices that prevail in the country and a local grocer answers for the rest.

July and August are the Lenten season in camp so we eat no meat. We have no use for chops, or steak or roast at market prices. The lake is our packing house, and when I tell you that last year we took out of it more than 200 fine bass weighing from 1 1-2 to 3 pounds you may know that we had no use for Chicago products.

With a family of seven, a cold storage like that is worth no small consideration. With the man in camp as cook, housekeeping for the rest of the family is like child's play.

With the pond for a bath tub, a slab for a wash board, birch boughs for a besom, pine needles for a carpet and an orange box for a bureau, the servant girl problem never enters your head. Each person folds up his own blankets and keeps track of his own duds and when you have done that the day's work is all over, the rest is sheer fun and recreation. Our girls are all boys in camp. As soon as we arrive we pack away their petticoats and pull out their bloomers, loose them and let them go. We have four between seven and fourteen and like the boy every one of them can swim, dive and float, like young acrobats as well as bait a hook catch a fish, row a boat and climb a tree.

The saving on clothes and laundry alone is a family of girls during the summer is enough to make a man wear a smile that won't come off. Our cast off garments at home become our every day clothes in camp, and the only time we are really dressed up is when we don a bathing suit. Every sunrise finds us taking a plunge in the lake. This is our morning dip. Later in the day we enjoy a swim and revel in the water for thirty or forty minutes.

Every day brings its own pleasure and pastime. It is a go as you please life. Fishing, boating, bathing, berrying, botanizing, sleeping, reading, lounging according to your fancy. Hammocks, swings, rustic seats, and easy canvas chairs invite you under the pine trees, and the lively bass rising to a fly on the placid lake call you to the charms of rod and reel.

The dining tent is the rendevous for the family. At least three times a day around a bountiful table of farm and lake products we meet without grumbling to let "good digestion wait on appetite."

These are some of the best hours of day. Under the shade of mammoth pines where the squirrels are chattering and scolding amid the branches, the broad expanse of water shimmering at your feet, and plenty of good things to appease an appetite that needs no tempting, you are in love with everything and everybody.

The camp-fire after supper under the star-lit sky brings the day to a close, and the early night finds us sleeping under the minister roof of the stars, in the safest sanctuary in the world—the woods—where the silence reigns, broken only by the distant barking of a fox or the sudden screeching of an owl. At sunrise the song of the woodland thrush calls you up to matin.

COUNTY LETTER

Politics Quiet But the Courts Are Very Busy Notes of Interest

(Special to Daily Ledger.)

Dedham, Oct. 8, 1908.

With hardly a ripple on the calm surface of the political pond the election this year is the quietest in the history of the old shire town. In fact it has been hard to believe that there is an election of any kind let alone a national campaign. The Democrats are dead, or seem to be so, for nothing has been heard from the town committee since last spring. The law was covered in the calling of the caucuses, but since then it has not been heard from. A meeting has not been held even, and apparently the committee is going to let the election go to the Republicans by default. On the part of the Republicans there is but little for the locals to enthuse over. The defeat of Representative Soliday for the senatorial nomination has taken the heart out of their fight, and with the representative nomination in Needham there is little incentive to work hard.

Louis A. Cook, clerk of courts of Norfolk county, returned to his duties on Monday from a trip to Denver, where he attended the conclave of the supreme body of Odd Fellows as a delegate from Massachusetts. He was gone three weeks and reports a good time.

Judge Emery Grover of the district court accompanied the Ancients on their trip to Detroit this week. As treasurer of the company he is rather a necessary personage for the full enjoyment of a trip.

The friends of D. Edwin Mulready of Rockland, the probation officer for the superior courts of Norfolk and Plymouth counties, are much pleased over his appointment as deputy probation commissioner by the new commission this week. This is a recognition of effective work and ability which Mr. Mulready has shown in his work for the past ten years in probation work in Norfolk and Plymouth counties. His friends throughout the county will be sorry to lose him, but believe that the commission could not have done better.

During the month of September the district court at Dedham handled 145 criminal cases, a considerable drop from the business in August.

Frederick J. Grady of Dedham has qualified as bail commission under an appointment by Gov. Guild. Being a justice of peace Mr. Grady receives his appointment as bail commissioner under the law which provides that in towns where none of the justices or clerks of the district court in which jurisdiction the town may be situated reside, the Governor may appoint a justice of the peace as bail commissioner with a term coincident with his justice of peace ship. There is no bail commissioner in Dedham with the right to take bail and serve warrant, and Mr. Grady now fills that legal vacancy.

The business in the district court on Monday was almost a record breaker with 35 cases. Violations of the automobile law led with 18 cases. There were six drunks, five making a disturbance on a public conveyance, three being present where gaming was going on; two larcenies, and one gaming on the Lord's day.

"Because the diminutive is a source of great annoyance and inconvenience" Lottie Elizabeth Williams of Brookline petitioned the probate court to have her name legally changed to Charlotte Elizabeth which was allowed this week and now the young lady can rightfully demand to be called "Charlotte" instead of "Lottie," the shorter name given her by her parents 20 years ago when she was born in Charlestown. "Lottie" seemed all right then, but it is different now and she wanted and now has the more dignified name of Charlotte.

Among the jurors serving at the present session of the superior civil court are: James Hector, William J. Parker, George Shepherd and George T. Westland all of Quincy, Austin P. Mulligan and James J. Hennessey both of Weymouth, and Francis S. Bolles of Braintree.

—Boston will inaugurate this month fortnightly steamship service with South American ports by steamers St. Quentin and St. Jerome.

Lady Betty Across the Water

By C. N. & A. M. WILLIAMSON

Copyright, 1906, by McClure, Phillips & Co.

SYNOPSIS.

CHAPTER I—The story is told in the first person by Lady Betty Bulkeley, the pretty young sister of the Duke of Stanforth. She is to visit America in care of Mrs. Stuyvesant-Knox (Mrs. Ess Kay,) a leader of American society, and the latter's cousin, Miss Sally Woodburn, in order that her elder sister Victoria's prospective fiance, Sir Gilbert Mantell, may not be attracted by her.

II—On board ship Betty is attracted by a young American steerage passenger, who saves a child from drowning. Mrs. Ess Kay, who is very "exclusive," objects to Betty's interest in the young man. Betty also meets Tom Doremus, cousin of Mrs. Vander Windt, of New York society.

I subsided on the bag, which was very like sitting on the floor. But it was stifling down there among people's feet. Besides, mine soon got "pins and needles." So presently I popped up like a Jack out of his box and almost knocked off a man's nose with the crown of my hat.

I said, "I beg your pardon!" though what the nose was doing so near the top of my head I couldn't conceive until its owner (fumbling with one hand for his handkerchief to stanch a drop of blood and snatching off his straw hat with the other, already full of notebooks and things) blurted out abruptly, "Are you Lady Bulkeley?"

I was surprised!

"No," said I, "I'm Lady Betty Bulkeley."

"That's all right," said the nose man as if he forgave me for being myself. "I didn't know but you'd want to be called Lady Bulkeley by strangers."

"It isn't my name," I said, more puzzled than ever. I would have tried to be dignified, as he was a perky looking young man in an alpaca coat. But when you have just made a person's nose bleed with your hat it would seem unfeeling to be so frigid, though I believe an application of ice is supposed to be beneficial.

"Shall I call you Lady Betty then?" asked the man, patting his nose with his handkerchief, which luckily for my nerves had already a pattern of pink dots on it.

"I don't see why you should call me anything," said I.

With that he produced a card with a whole string of words printed on it and poked it under my eyes. "I was just going to introduce myself," he said. "I represent the New York Flashlight, and I've been sent by my paper to get something from you if you'll oblige me."

"Something from me?" I repeated, bewildered. "Is it anything to do with the customs? I've nothing to declare."

"Just tell me, please, something about your family. Your brother's the Duke of Stanforth, isn't he?" (He pronounced it "dook.")

"Yes. But"—

"Thanks. Young and unmarried, isn't he?"

"Yes. But"—

"Ever been on this side?"

"No. But"—

"He'll come some day, won't he? Most unmarried dukes do."

"I don't know, I'm sure. Really, I think"—

"Excuse me. You're going to stay with Mrs. Stuyvesant-Knox, I believe. Will you make a lengthy visit?"

"I don't"—

"You must have met one or two of our smartest young men on board. What do you think of them as compared with Englishmen?"

Long before this I had made up my mind that he couldn't have anything to do with the customs or if he did that it was no wonder Mrs. Ess Kay had been driven to swearing in the saloon. I was glad now that his nose was bleeding, and I turned my back upon him, because it was the most emphatic gesture I could think of. But as I faced round the other way, wondering if my luggage would ever come, another man pushed through the "B's" who had got their boxes and almost bounded into a foot of unoccupied space in front of me.

"Lady Bulkeley?" he shot at me, like history repeating itself, only he pronounced me as if my name were founded on my size and weight.

This time I did not answer. I simply stood at bay and stared, trying to look as much like mother as possible. But the new man didn't seem to mind this in the least, so apparently my effort was not a success.

"I'm the Evening Bat," he remarked hurriedly, with an air of valuing his time at so much a second.

I was sorry he was a bat, for I've always been fond of bats, they are such soft, gray, velvet things; and I should have liked to tell him that he was much more like a chicken hawk, only that would have been vulgar; and, besides, I didn't intend to pose as chicken to his hawk. By way of not letting myself be gobbled up, I remained silent; but I couldn't help

"I'm the Evening Bat," he remarked.

starting when a voice behind me exclaimed: "Ah, there, my chappie. You're welcome to the milk. I've skimmed off the cream. Ta, ta."

It was the Flashlight flashing at the Evening Bat.

The creature was not blinded, however. He seemed difficult to disconcert. The only response he made was to grin and push his hat a little farther back on his head. An inch more and it must have slid down over his collar—which was so low in the neck in front that it gave me the creeps.

"There's plenty of milk and roses, too, I guess," said he, staring in such a way that I blushed and was vexed with myself for blushing. I peered anxiously about hoping to see a face I knew, even ever so slightly, which might be summoned to the rescue. But all the "B's" were passionately minding their own business, and while I was wishing that Mr. Doremus began with a "B" instead of a "D," I caught the eyes of a man looking straight at me. The very nicest eyes, and with an expression in them that filled me with joy!

They said, "Do let me come and get rid of that fellow for you," and mine said: "Yes—yes—yes. Please come at once."

So the eyes came, without waiting for more, and it was the hero of the steerage who brought them. That was the reason I'd telegraphed "yes, yes," for I thought, "He saved a little boy, why shouldn't I trust him, without an introduction, to save me?"

"Look here," said the bronze man to the Evening Bat, "I've got just five minutes to spare. You can have them if you like."

The Evening Bat looked at him, crossly at first, then his sharp little face seemed turning into a point of admiration. "By Jehosaphat!" he ejaculated. "Homemade goods will get the preference over British this time, duty or no duty."

I couldn't think what either of them meant, though at first I was afraid my man intended the other to understand that the five minutes would be devoted to knocking him down, or something else violent, as a punishment for impertinence to a defenseless foreigner. But my mind was almost instantly relieved, for the two men walked off together quite amicably and stood talking at a distance.

A moment later one of my boxes went by, looking very fat and friendly, on the shoulders of a porter who apparently had no head. I rushed out and seized it—not the head, but the box; so there was something encouraging, but I had two pieces of luggage to wait for still.

Most of the other "B's" were more fortunate about getting their things; nevertheless they seemed far from easy in their minds, and, though they protested almost tearfully that they'd nothing whatever to declare, stern persons in uniform stirred up their boxes as I used to do with the nursery pudding when all the plums had sunk to the bottom.

Ancient Barbers.

Barbers in the early days of the Christian era were not permitted to talk while shaving a patron. Indeed, silence was so much appreciated by persons while under the barber's hand that mutes were preferred for the service.

GROWING OF FORESTS

Experiment Stations to Be Established For Scientific Work.

TRAINED MEN FOR EMPLOYEES

In All Western States Having National Forest Preserves Bureaus to Study the Means of Cultivating Woods Will Be Maintained—Germany's Work.

Forest experiment stations will soon be established in a number of the national forest states of the west according to plans which were recently completed by the United States forest service. These new stations are expected to do the same for the development of American forests as agricultural experiment stations have done for the improvement of the country's farms, says a forest service bulletin.

As a first step in this work an experiment station has already been established on the Coconino national forest in the southwest, with headquarters at Flagstaff, Ariz. Stations in other national forests will be established later, and it is the intention ultimately to have at least one experiment station in each of the sylvicultural regions of the west.

One of the most important parts of the work of the new experiment stations will be the maintenance of model forests typical of the region. These areas will furnish the most valuable and instructive object lessons for the public in general, for professional foresters, lumbermen and owners of forest land and especially for the technical and administrative officers of the national forests.

In the recently established station on the Coconino national forest one of the first problems to be taken up will be the study of the reproduction of western yellow pine and the causes of its success and failure. A solution of this problem of how to obtain satisfactory reproduction of the yellow pine is of the greatest practical importance to the southwest, since the yellow pine, which is by far the most valuable tree there, is in many cases not forming a satisfactory second growth. The study will be carried on largely by means of sample plots, which will be laid out for future observations to determine the effects of grazing, of the different methods of cutting and disposing of the brush and of other factors on the success of reproduction.

Other studies which will be taken up soon are a study of the light requirements of different species at different altitudes and the construction of a scale of tolerance which will be based on the actual measurements of the light intensity and not only, as has hitherto been the case, on general observations alone; the taking of meteorological observations to determine the effect of the forest upon temperature, humidity, melting of snow, wind velocity, etc.; a study of the relative value of the germinating power of seeds from trees of different sizes, ages and degrees of health and similar studies of value to the region. A complete collection of the flora of the forest will be made to form a herbarium, which will be kept on the forest and will be available for reference at any time.

These stations will carry on scientific experiments and studies which will lead to a full and exact knowledge of American sylviculture and the indirect benefits of the forests and will deal particularly with those problems of particular importance to the regions in which they are located.

While work of this character is new in the United States, it is not without precedent abroad. The value of the systematic organization of forest research work was officially recognized in Germany in 1870, when the first forest experiment station was established in Baden in connection with the Polytechnikum at Carlsruhe. Half a dozen of the German states followed the example, instituting main experiment stations in connection with forest schools and branches in various forest districts. The work done is intensely scientific, and the policy of forest experiment stations is steadily growing in favor.

In India, where after half a century of administration the status of the forest is hardly better than in the United States at present, the work of research has been almost wholly neglected, and the result is apparent in the poor progress of technical forestry. Very lately, however, the need has been recognized by the government, and an imperial forest research institute and college has been created at Dehra Dun, with a faculty chosen from the imperial forest service.

In the United States considerable research work has already been done in connection with forest problems, but the chief trouble so far has been the lack of persistence and permanence which has characterized the work and failure frequently to consider all the factors which are involved. The new system provides for the permanent assignment in a given region of specially trained men who will have an opportunity to become thoroughly familiar with their region, and the work will thus be conducted with the greatest effectiveness and least expense.

The work will be not only scientific in character, but will also be extremely practical and will aim in every case to solve problems of most importance to the lumberman, the forester and the people as a whole. Valuable results will undoubtedly be obtained in this way which were not possible under the old system of general observations.

London, Oct. 8.—The people on the Island of Crete, stirred by the events in southeastern Europe, the independence of Bulgaria and the annexation of Bosnia and Herzegovina by Austria, have arisen and proclaimed a union with Greece.

Ten thousand men surged to the governor's palace at Canea and lowered the flag of Crete, raising the Greek flag in its place. The flags on all the public buildings were similarly replaced by the flag of Greece.

A special issue of the government journal was distributed at Crete last evening containing the decree signed by five councillors, who announced their compliance with the people's decision and directed all officials henceforth to conduct the business of the country in the name of the Hellenic government.

The Turkish government has sent to the powers a circular note protesting against the Bulgarian proclamation and asking the powers what steps they mean to take looking to the re-establishment of order in Bulgaria and the maintenance of Turkey's interests which were guaranteed by the treaty of Berlin.

Great Britain, in reply to the notification of Austria-Hungary's proposed annexation of Bosnia and Herzegovina, has refused its sanction to this action and has practically requested the Austro-Hungarian government to reconsider it.

Both Premier Asquith and Foreign Secretary Grey, in public addresses, touched upon the Balkan question, the former asserting that the British government would not stand alone among the powers in its present attitude. The latter expressed the belief that nothing has happened thus far that would lead to a breach of the peace.

Italy has demanded that, in addition to the evacuation of Novipazar, Austria renounce the protectorate wrich she has exercised over Montenegro under the Berlin treaty. Italy is one with Great Britain, France and Russia in counselling the holding of a conference of the powers for the purpose of examining into the complications that have arisen, and, if necessary, revising the treaty of Berlin.

There is no disguising the fact that the European situation created by the changes in the Balkans suddenly has become tense. This does not mean that there will be war.

Yesterday morning it was confidently asserted that there would be a European conference for the purpose of revising the Berlin treaty. All of the powers were agreed to this. Yesterday afternoon the complexion of affairs changed. Russia has upset the proposed conference by saying that in any revision of the treaty which originally aimed at her she will demand compensation. This has switched Great Britain to an about-face, and she has advised Turkey to settle the affair, if possible, without an appeal to Europe.

Servia is greatly excited over the annexation by Austria of Bosnia and Herzegovina. The populace is clamoring for war and the government, listening to this, not only has addressed a protest to the powers, but has called out about 200,000 reserves to meet any contingency that may arise. There are many Servians in Bosnia and they do not want to become Austrian subjects, their aspirations being autonomy with Servian protection. But an appeal to arms might well result in the obliteration of Servia, for Bulgaria, who with Austria helps to hem her in, would lean toward Austria.

In this whole Balkan affair it again has been demonstrated that treaties and the rules of international law are not worth the paper they are written on when the interests of a strong nation are at stake. And the interests do not have to be vital either, as witness the case of Austria's formal annexation yesterday of Bosnia and Herzegovina. Bulgaria comes under the category of a nation in captivity struggling for freedom and not bound by the fetters placed upon it by others.

To add to the difficulties of the present situation in Europe comes Crete. For scores of years Great Britain and her allies have protected the Turk in his hold on conquered territory. Russia's hand was stayed and the Armenian and Bulgarian massacres were possible. The Cretans won their right to decide their own fate and Great Britain hauled down their flag.

The powers will not dare to interfere with Bulgaria's freedom nor the annexation of Turkey's provinces by Austria. Will they solemnly descend in their might on Crete and restore the Turkish yoke? It might serve to "save their face," but the eventual union of Crete and Greece has been inevitable and it is doubtful if Europe will demand more than suitable guaranties that the Moslem population there will be given absolute justice.

The Legend of the Black Glen.

By GEORGE A. WILLIAMSON.

Copyright, 1908, by American Press Association.

"LESLIE looks quite broken down since his wife's death."

"Yes, poor chap! You know, of course, that Mrs. Leslie died while they were away on their wedding trip. Here is poor Leslie's story as he told it to me:

"'You know,' he began, 'that Mary and I were married on the 8th of June, just nine weeks ago, and that we went to the highlands to spend our honeymoon at Glen Dhu.

"'Let me try to describe the place to you. One naturally begins with the inn. It lies just at the entrance to Glen Dhu, a few yards off the coach road to Corven. It is an old fashioned house, built, one would imagine, a room at a time, and fastened together by long, narrow corridors that emerge in quite unexpected directions. From the outside the inn, with its whitewashed walls half hidden under a tangle of roses and honeysuckle, looks the embodiment of cleanliness and comfort, and Mrs. Stuart's careful housekeeping keeps faith with the promise of the exterior.

"'From the back of the inn a narrow road gives access to Glen Dhu. This path, for it is little more, runs alongside the brawling Dhu burn and ascends very rapidly. Toward the end the path becomes too steep for any save youthful limbs, and only the keen sportsman or the enthusiastic lover of Nature in her sternest mood ever toils up as far as Loch Dhu. This little sheet of water, pent in by steep rocky walls, effectually bars farther upward progress. Beyond the loch rise the mighty mountains of Corven.

"'The glen had but one inhabitant. "Evan the boatman," as he was known to visitors at the inn, owned the only boat on Loch Dhu and was supposed to earn enough during the fishing season to keep him through the winter. His wretched sheiling crouched in the shadow of a huge rock that overlooked the loch. Tall and spare in figure, with black hair and beard touched with gray, Evan would have been a handsome man but for a pronounced stoop and a somewhat vacant expression. The stony, unchanging stare of the hills was in his eyes. No one knew much about him. Mrs. Stuart had found him in possession of the hut when the inn passed into her hands, and the years seemed to change him as little as they changed his surroundings. It was useless trying to cross examine Evan himself. Taciturnity was perhaps the most remarkable trait in his character. The only thing that brought a look of interest into his sphinxlike face was the sight of a flask, for Evan was a hard drinker.

"'On our arrival at the inn we found that we were not the only guests who intended to stay till the end of the month. Three students from a Scotch university had, like ourselves, fixed on June for their holiday with a view to avoiding the regular tourist season. Very soon, however, we became quite friendly with them, and from joining in conversation at mealtimes we came to arranging our daily excursions together.

"THEN WHAT IS THAT?"

"'One day after dinner Duncan, the youngest of the three students, asked us if we knew the legend of Glen Dhu. "I have it," he said, "from Mrs. Stuart, our good landlady, and it's rather a weird one." In response to our call he told it thus:

"'"Long ago (of course) this glen was inhabited by the Clan Dhu. In the neighboring glen—between these hills and the Corven mountains—there lived the powerful Clan Dearg. Between such near neighbors there arose, as was to be expected, differences of opinion from time to time, mostly as to the proper distinction between mine and thine. From little civilities of the cattle lifting order they drifted into a savage tribal warfare. Clan Dearg, being the more numerous, kept the weaker sept in a continual state of alarm, so much so that sentinels were posted night after night at both ends of this glen to guard against a surprise. One night in summer the sentinel at the Loch Dhu end—Is not the great rock there called the Watchman's tower to this day?—found on mounting guard that some one had been kind enough to leave a horn of liquor on his beat. Thanking heaven, no doubt, for this good fortune, he tasted the liquor and, finding it good, yielded to his desire to finish the horn. Whether the temptation had been cunningly presented by the subtle foe or whether it was a fatal chance, dire results followed. At midnight the chosen warriors of the Clan Dearg entered the glen by way of the Watchman's tower, where the surfeited sentinel lay 'mocking his charge with snores.' A horrible massacre ensued. Taken completely by surprise, the wretched Clan Dhu were slaughtered, man, woman and child, their roofs given to the flames and their property carried off by the merciless victors. The only survivor, the unhappy watchman whose untimely indulgence had caused the catastrophe, awoke to a scene of awful desolation.

"'"So much may be history. Here the supernatural element comes in. To the awakening sentinel, aghast at the consequences of his crime, appeared the wraith of his slaughtered chief. 'Evan Dhu,' declaimed the apparition, 'by whose swinish lust I and my race have ceased to be, this is thy doom: As each revolving year brings round this fatal night thou shalt carry one of thine unburied kinsfolk to the resting place of their fathers. Thy spirit may not pass until the full tale of my slaughtered clan be told.' And, runs the legend, Evan Dhu, the careless sentinel of that fatal night of long ago, may still be seen once a year at the midnight hour crossing the loch in his boat with a ghastly freight for sepulture in the ancient burial ground of the Clan Dhu. Is not the name of the island 'the Isle of Rest' to this day?"

"'"Capital, Duncan," said Gillespie, the divinity student. "That's the best contrived legend I've heard. But has Mrs. Stuart no witness handy who can swear to having seen this annual funeral or at least to having heard of some one who did?"

"'"Tuts, man!" chimed in Moir, the eldest of the three. "Even allowing for a fairly numerous clan—and we're told it was a small one—Evan's task has been accomplished long ago, so there's no disputing the truth of the legend. But your story, Duncan, reminds me that we haven't yet visited Loch Dhu. We might all go together tomorrow by way of a final excursion. Will you two come with us?"

"'"I'm afraid," said Duncan, "that Mrs. Leslie will not care to come after hearing my creepy tale. Come, now," he added banteringly, "confess you wouldn't like to row round that island at midnight."

"'"But that's just what I should like to do," Mary answered. "I think it would be a perfectly charming wind-up to our holiday. Jim, dear, do take me tonight. We're leaving tomorrow, you know."

"'"Nonsense, wifey," said I. "You'd be a perfect wreck next day after such late hours, and we must take you home in the pink of condition."

"'"Please take me, Jim," she pleaded.

"'It is hard to refuse anything in such circumstances as mine. Mary had evidently set her heart on going, and when I found that we could walk to the loch and be back again before 1 o'clock I really saw no reason why we shouldn't. So it was arranged that that evening we two should walk to Loch Dhu, borrow Evan's boat and row round the island. The others were to meet us on our way back.

"'Although the hour was late, the night was not at all dark. A tremulous light glimmered about the mountain tops, making it easy to discern the outlines of the hills that hemmed in the valley. After climbing steadily for nearly an hour the Watchman's tower loomed large in front of us. In the shelter of this huge rock, between it and the loch, lay Evan's hut. We quite expected to find him asleep; but, to our surprise, we caught him in the act of pushing off in his boat on some nocturnal expedition of his own. He fully maintained his reputation for surliness; indeed, at first I was afraid he was about to refuse our civilly spoken request. The sight of a whisky bottle, however, which I somewhat ostentatiously displayed during the interview, carried the day for us. Muttering something which we charitably construed as thanks, Evan withdrew with our offering into his hut, leaving us in possession of the boat.

"'With Mary sitting in the stern, I pulled in the direction of the islet, which lay perhaps half a mile away. We could just see it, with its dark pines growing right down to the water's edge, a veritable isle of rest.

"'I rested on my oars while we glided slowly and silently on our way. It was darker now, for we were entering the black shadow of the rocks that rise almost perpendicularly at the upper end of the loch. But it was the oppressive stillness rather than the growing darkness that we felt.

"'"Jim, dearest," said Mary, "isn't this the only boat on the loch?"

"'"I believe so. Why?"

"'"Then what is that?"

"'I looked where she pointed, and there on a course parallel with ours appeared the outline of a boat so like our own that it might have been its shadow. In this second boat sat Evan himself bending to his oars and looking neither to his right hand nor his left. He was evidently in haste, probably trying to make up for the loss of time occasioned by our interruption. Before I could hail him he disappeared in the gloom.

"'Mary's voice came to me in agitated tones—it was so dark now I could scarcely discern her features—"What was that in Evan's boat, and why didn't we hear his oars?"

"'I had noticed nothing in the boat save Evan himself, but why had we not heard his oars? He was pulling strongly.

"'You know my temperament is not an unduly imaginative one, but for a moment a shuddering fear ran through me. Remembering Mary, I was stammering out some reassuring explanation when a gentle shock, accompanied by a grating sound, told us our boat had drifted aground. We had stranded on the Isle of Rest. I rose up to push off, when Mary also started to her feet, exclaiming: "Merciful God! Who are these?" Hastening to her side, I supported her on my arm as I looked in the direction of her terrified gaze. Had that weird journey in the deathlike silence unhinged our reason, causing us to see what was not? There, straight in front of us, extending from the shore toward the center of the island, was a somber avenue of pine trees, and along it was streaming a crowd of the ghastliest specter forms ever conjured up by the imagination. They rose up out of the ground, collected in groups and then ranged themselves at regular intervals on either side of the way with the precision that marks the performance of an oft repeated ceremony.

"'The unexpected advent of this phantom array and the startlingly suggestive manner of its appearance were in themselves terrifying enough, but I cannot hope to convey to you the horror inspired by their individual aspect. Against the dark background of the pines the specters showed with appalling clearness—old men and women, withered and bent, gibbering in an ecstasy of terror; young men with set faces that spoke of valor overcome by despair, maidens whose ghostly features were distorted in the last agonies of a sudden and cruel death, and, most piteous of all, little children, ineffable fear stamped on their young faces. To and fro they swayed, waving their arms in a rhythmic motion to a wailing dirge that was wafted over the pines.

"MERCIFUL GOD! WHO ARE THESE?"

"'Spellbound we gazed. All physical sensation died out of us. We were partakers in this awful ceremony, expectant of what was to happen. A dread procession came in sight. At its head stalked the specter of an aged man of commanding mien. Following him four young men carried a rude bier of pine branches, on which was laid an uncovered body. Last of all, with bowed head, his whole attitude eloquent of hopeless grief and unavailing sorrow, walked Evan the boatman, the Evan Dhu of that dismal night of long ago. At his approach the slow swaying of the specter mourners quickened as if his presence inflamed their wrath. Nevertheless I seemed to discern in the unhappy man's face as he passed a look, not of hope, indeed, but almost of relief, as at the prospect of release from a burden greater than he could bear. Was the expiation of his crime now complete? Had the last of his murdered kinsfolk been brought to the Isle of Rest?

"'As the bier passed onward the specters formed in the rear and slowly wound out of our sight. The dirge sounded fainter and fainter, then suddenly ceased.

"'Mary slipped under my arm and sank down into the bottom of the boat. "Poor little woman," thought I, "she has fainted. Small wonder! I am utterly unstrung myself." Dazed as I was, her condition made me pull myself together. Rolling up my jacket—I remember my pipe falling out of the pocket—I placed it under her head and tried to force a few drops from my flask between her firmly clinched teeth, but she gave no sign of returning consciousness. I pushed off hastily from that cursed shore and rowed quickly to the hut. It was lighter now. "Evan!" I called, but no answer came. Cursing the fellow's deafness, caused, it occurred to me, by our ill timed gift, I broke into the hut. It was empty. Then I remembered how we had last seen him.

"'An hour later our friends from the inn found me bending over my wife—I had carried her into the hut—trying vainly to restore animation. Duncan knelt down beside her. Then he rose slowly. "It's a lie!" I shouted. "Great God, what a monstrous thing! It can't be. She"—

"'A week later I woke from what at first seemed only a hideous dream, but returning consciousness brought back the memory of that night with too terrible distinctness. It is with me always. By day my thoughts return to the scenes of our short lived happiness in Glen Dhu, and nightly in my dreams the horrors of that glimpse into the spirit world come full upon me. Only one circumstance is changed. As I gaze from the boat toward the specter lined pathway I know that I am standing alone and that the bier for which the mourners wait bears the body of my three weeks wife!"

"Did Evan never turn up again?"

"Leslie says he has not been heard of since that night."

High Score by President Tilden

Eight tables participated in the whist tournament at the Granite City club Wednesday evening, and some excellent scores were made. President Tilden was high liner, with a score of 85.45 percent, having won 47 points and lost but eight in the 25 hands played. There were also several with 70 percent scores, but second position was won by H. F. Stackhouse with 73 percent. Refreshments were served after the play.

It was announced that the entertainment committee had arranged with Henry P. Furnald, the caterer, to furnish the Wednesday evening lunches during the winter, and that some tempting menus would be served.

Also that three monthly prizes would be given. A 25-ride book between Quincy and Boston for the highest monthly percent; a 12-ride book for the second best score, and a five-ride ticket for the smallest total percent for the month.

Large Attendance At Mothers' Meeting

Perfect weather and an attractive program called forth one of the largest audiences of the year at the annual October reception of the Mothers' Association of Quincy. Mrs. Doble, the president, in her opening talk, spoke briefly of the most important "don't" for mothers of small scholars.

Mrs. William E. Gardner, wife of the former rector of Christ church, lead the devotional exercises, and made a most eloquent plea for the neglected girls of Quincy; followed by prayer.

Mrs. Mary Hastings Slade, the soloist of the afternoon, sang "Sancta Maria" by Faure with violin obligato by Miss Laura R. Herrig of East Pepperell, Mass.

Then followed the talk of the afternoon, "The relation between parent and teacher" by Dr. William Gallagher, headmaster of Thayer academy, who spoke from a wide experience on both sides of the question, in his usual forceful, interesting manner, holding the close attention of his audience.

Miss Herrig contributed two beautiful solos for the violin—"Recordo," by Bohm, and "Berceuse," from "Jocelyn," by Goddard; after which Mrs. Slade sang two charming children's songs by Margaret Lang—"Just Because" and "Tomorrow."

A social hour closed a most enjoyable afternoon. Refreshments were in charge of Miss Lillian Taber assisted by Mrs. Albert Coffin and Mrs. Charles Hayden. The pourers: Mrs. Guy, Mrs. V. E. Miller and Mrs. W. F. Rice. Decorations were in charge of Mrs. Eben W. Sheppard and Mrs. Hodgkinson.

A large number of children were present, under the efficient care of Miss Avah R. Gilson and Miss Addie E. Park with assistants.

Invitation Golf.

A. B. Hathaway of the home club made the best gross and best net scores on Wednesday at the invitation medal handicap of the Wollaston Golf club.

Today's Court.

Daniel E. Donovan was find $10 and Daniel Horgan $15, for drunkenness at Weymouth.

Freeman G. Burnham was arraigned for larceny from G. F. Gifford at Quincy. Case placed on file on payment of costs. Burnham to make restitution.

—The practice of putting dishes in the oven to warm them for the table is a bad one. The dry heat causes the enamel to crack in time, and then the grease soon penetrates them to their utter ruination. Put the dishes to be heated, and all the tableware, nearly, should be heated, including silver knives and forks, in a dishpan, and pour boiling water over them. Let them stand and steam until ready to serve the meal, then wipe with a clean, dry towel.

CARD OF THANKS.

Mr. and Mrs. Aaron H. Gould of Grand View avenue wish to thank their neighbors, and the people of Wollaston in general, for their protection of life and property at the recent fire at their home during their absence. Such promptness, willingness and kindness will long be remembered.

NATIONAL LEAGUE PENNANT

It Belongs to the Winner of Today's Game at New York

A tie between New York and Chicago, each having a percentage of .641 in the race for the National League pennant, resulted from New York's' third successive defeat of Boston yesterday. This means that the winner of the New York-Chicago game at New York today will take the pennant. Pittsburg's percentage is .636.

LYNN SITUATION GROWING SERIOUS

Prospects That Twenty Shoe Factories May Soon Close

Lynn, Mass., Oct. 8.—Twenty Lynn factories may be closed and thousands of operatives thrown out of employment because Joseph Caunt failed to meet the strikers, the manufacturers and the board of arbitration in conference yesterday.

That other shoe manufacturers are willing to take their striking men back at any moment was the statement made by two other prominent manufacturers.

Caunt had promised that he would be present at the conference and lend his every effort to help in a solution of the strike problem. Upon his agreement to meet the strikers and the manufacturers, representatives of the latter called the state board of arbitration into Lynn. Caunt failed to appear, with the result that after a perfunctory conference, at which nothing was accomplished, the board left Lynn, the strikers left in an angry mood and the strike is as far from settlement as ever. Upon Caunt's action hinged the continuation of the settlement of the strike.

A Question of Transportation

Chicago, Oct. 8.—A picture of days when stately ships shall carry the rich products of the central states from the Great Lakes to the Gulf of Mexico through a deep waterway, returning with products of no less value, was conjured up at the third annual convention of the Lakes-to-the-Gulf Deep Waterway association by able speakers, headed by William H. Taft. The need of such a waterway was insisted upon by every speaker. Taft's insistence that the deep waterway and the conservation of the national resources were related subjects, which called for immediate action, elicited great applause.

Miraculously Escaped Death

New York, Oct. 8.—Driving her big automobile with two of her friends for passengers, Miss Susan Bliss attempted to cross the railroad tracks at Highwood, N. J., when a locomotive struck the automobile and tossed it aside into the air. Miss Etta Amond landed on the cowcatcher and clung there. Her sister, Miss Clara Amond, was thrown on the station platform. Miss Bliss did not let go of the driving wheel and was caught in the machine when it overturned. None of the young women was seriously injured.

Yacht Mayflower Wrecked

Baltimore, Oct. 8.—Not laden with treasure rescued from a long-lost Spanish galleon, as they had hoped, but themselves castaways rescued in the nick of time from the wreck of the yacht Mayflower, a dozen men were landed here by steamer Hippolyte Dumois after having passed through the terrors of the recent hurricane that swept up the coast. The Mayflower, once the pride of the whole country as the successful defender of the America cup, is a derelict.

Escaped Prisoners Captured

Newport, R. I., Oct. 8.—A general alarm was sounded at Fort Adams, following the escape of three military convicts who attacked a sentinel and scaled the wall. Lieutenant Phipps, in an automobile with three armed privates, overtook the fugitives about a quarter of a mile from the fort and held up the fugitives at the points of rifles and revolvers and the three at once surrendered. The prisoners had been convicted by court martial on charges of desertion.

Yankee Remains Stranded

Newport, R. I., Oct. 8.—With the tide high yesterday afternoon naval colliers and tugs, with vessels of the wrecking companies, made several unsuccessful attempts to haul the cruiser Yankee from Hen and Chickens rocks in Buzzards bay, where she ran ashore two weeks ago in a dense fog. The cruiser is still hard and fast. Since she has been on the rocks the Yankee's cost to the navy department has amounted to nearly $100,000.

Evans Denies Intoxication

Manila, Oct. 8.—The taking of testimony in the case of Lieutenant Evans of the battleship Louisiana, court martialled on a charge of absenting himself from his post while officer of the deck, disrespect to his superior officer and intoxication, has been concluded. There remains only the summing up by his counsel. The chief contest by the defense was against the allegation of intoxication.

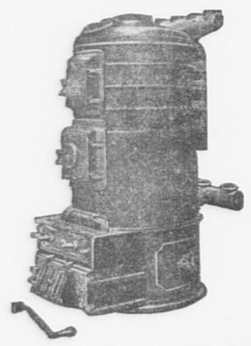
Your Attention Mr. Prospective Heating Customer!



Did you ever pause to consider the difference in various make boilers? Does it not appeal to your better judgment that a boiler the construction of which is such that it places a series of thin layers of water directly or indirectly over the fire surface and travel of hot gases, before they escape into the smoke flue, is sure to be economical in the consumption of fuel?

Another advantage that should be considered in a boiler of this description the parts of necessity must be small, therefore, in the event of breakage they may be easily and cheaply replaced. Of course there are cheaper boilers that are made in one piece from base to dome. These boilers contain surface on which the fire does not shine, or over which the hot gases do not pass, therefore, they are useless. These boilers without doubt can be made and sold cheaper than the boiler made of several units. But you Mr. Consumer, must pay the difference in consuming of coal in the long run.

Newsy Budget From Shipyard

Shipyard men are highly indignant because of the manner and the fact that a certain member of our City Council shut off a citizen of Quincy who had come to the public hearing at the Council chamber last Monday evening for the express purpose of saying a few words in the interest of the workingmen employed at our shipyard. At the request of a number of our workmen, who are voters and good citizens of this city, something will be said later upon this subject which will be of vital importance.

Frank E. Mackle, formerly employed at the works of the Fore River Shipbuilding Co., who is now in the south ,has formed one of the largest structural iron concerns in that part of the country. The many friends of Mr. Mackle wish him success in his new undertaking.

Mr. Furtaw, foreman shipfitter on the submarine torpedo boats which are now under construction at the shipyard, is in receipt of a copy of "The Metropolis" a Jacksonville, Fla., daily newspaper under date of Sept. 30, which has the following to say regarding this new enterprise:

"There has been formed in this city a company for the purpose of erecting structural steel and bridges throughout the South and Southwest. This company will be known as the Southern Erecting Company, with headquarters in Jacksonville, with offices at 306 West building. They have the contracts to erect the structural steel and ornamental iron work on the Atlantic National Bank, and the Commercial National Bank buildings, on Forsyth street, this city.

George W. Stebbins of Bromfield street, who has been ill for several weeks, has gone to Brookfield. He hopes that the change of air will aid him in recovering his health.

WATER RATES

Of Everett
Only $11 Per Year
For 8,800 Feet
Or 66,000 Gallons

It is by comparison with other cities in the Metropolitan water district that Quincy water takers may learn whether their water rates are fair or unfair. The revised rates of the city of Everett were published in the board has therefore abolished this of value:

Mayor Charles Bruce after investigating conditions has ordered a reduction of the water rate of Everett which reduction the board of public works on Thursday announced through its chairman, William J. Brickley. The reduction in the rates will take effect on Jan. 1,1909.

At the present time a rental of $2 per year is charged for 5-8-inch water meters and this charge the mayor believes to be unreasonable considering the price paid for the meters, and the bord has therefore abolished this rental entirely.

Mayor Bruce is of the opinion that the minimum rate of $12 is too high and that the limit of water allowed is too low. In these matters it was found that the board of public works is in accord with the mayor and a reduction to a minimum rate of $11 has been made and the allowance increased from $8571.43 cubic feet to 8800 cubic feet.

The rate has also been changed from $1.40 per cubic foot to $1.25. These changes made a reduction of more than $3 a year in the rates.

The board of public works was also requested by Mayor Bruce to make the rate of discount allowed on bills paid on or before March 1, 1909, 12 1-2 percent instead of 10 percent as at present, and the board has voted this change. The charge of $1 for turning on or off the water in houses for repair or in emergency cases has been eliminated except in case of nonpayment of water rates. The charge for summons has been reduced by the board from 25 cents to 20 cents.

In making these reductions Mayor Bruce and the members of the board of public works state that they believe the consumer should be given all the concessions possible. Already much satisfaction has been expressed throughout the city over the reductions made.

QUINCY—EVERETT.

The new limit in Everett of 8,800 cubic feet amounts to 66,000 gallons, which is 6,000 in excess of the Quincy allowance of 60,000 gallons.

The rate of $11 per 66,000 gallons is equivalent to 17 cents per 1000 gallons.

The old rate of $1.40 per 1000 cubic feet, amounted, to $12 for 8,571.-23 cubic feet, while the new rate of $1.25 per 1000 cubic feet amounts to $11 for 8,800 cubic feet.

Everett allows twelve and one-half per cent discount for prompt payment of bills bringing the price down to $9.62 per year for 66,000 gallons or less.

From the above figures, it would appear that the lowest rate in Everett, after the discount for cash, is fourteen and 7-8 cents per 1000 gallons, while the shipyard in Quincy pays but eight cents per 1000 gallons. Everett has a large plant the same as Quincy, the New England Gas and Coke Company, and it would be interesting at this time to know the rate the company pays for water.

Quincy and Everett have about the same population, and the following comparisons will be of interest:

	Quincy.	Everett.

SEVERAL CANDIDATES.

Among the Quincy candidates mentioned for the position of County probation officer, made vacant by the promotion of E. L. Mulready are: Timothy J. Carey, the present tax collector; Walter H. Cobb, Charles H. Johnson, formerly principal assessor, and James H. Cuningham, former tax collector. The salary, which is said to be $1,800 per year, is a very tempting bait.

A RELIC.

Men at work in the gravel bank near the Quincy Home on Thursday unearthed a stone pestle that was probably made and used by the Indians years ago. The pestle is a perfect specimen, and is shaped like a nursing bottle. It was probably used by the Indians in grinding corn. Mayor Shea will present the pestle to the Quincy Historical society.

There was a large attendance Thursday, the opening day at the sale of house lots at Paul Wild terrace. Many beautiful presents were given away free of charge. One of the attractive features was the balloon ascension and parachute leap. Prof. Skibini went up in the balloon and landed at Germantown safe and sound. A number of house lots are reported to have been sold.

Lady Betty Across the Water

By C. N. & A. M. WILLIAMSON

Copyright, 1906, by McClure, Phillips & Co.

SYNOPSIS.

CHAPTER I—The story is told in the first person by Lady Betty Bulkeley, the pretty young sister of the Duke of Stanforth. She is to visit America in care of Mrs. Stuyvesant-Knox (Mrs. Ess Kay,) a leader of American society, and the latter's cousin, Miss Sally Woodburn, in order that her elder sister Victoria's prospective fiance, Sir Gilbert Mantell, may not be attracted by her.

II—On board ship Betty is attracted by a young American steerage passenger, who saves a child from drowning. Mrs. Ess Kay, who is very "exclusive," objects to Betty's interest in the young man. Betty also meets Tom Doremus, cousin of Mrs. Vander Windt, of New York society.

I was very tired and very hot, hotter than I'd supposed people could be, except in a Turkish bath, and I was beginning to be hungry, too, for I'd lunched principally off the statue of Liberty and skyscrapers, which were more filling than lasting as a meal.

I fanned myself with my handkerchief as well as I could and felt sure I was slowly getting appendicitis, because whenever Americans feel uncomfortable in any way it seems almost certain to turn eventually into that, probably on account of the climate. Would my other boxes never come? I thought. Most of the "B's" were going home. They had homes, lucky people, and if they liked they could presently have tea.

World without tea,
Ah me!

When I was small and my nurse talked on Sundays about heaven and hell, making the one sound incredibly dull, the other incredibly painful, I used to think that I'd rather go to neither, but just be stuffed, like mother's Blenheim, Beau Brummel, whose soul I fancied had leave to stop in his body so long as moth and rust did not corrupt. He seemed rather out of things, though, poor dear, standing forever in the same position in a glass case, with one paw up begging for something which nobody gave, while the years dragged on, and I'd begun to feel as if I were falling into his state when I was roused from a stupid dream by the man of the steerage suddenly looming over me.

"I beg your pardon," said he, taking off his hat and speaking in a nice American voice, as nice for a man as Sally Woodburn's is for a woman. "Please don't suppose I mean to be rude or intrusive, but I wanted to tell you that I think you won't be annoyed again, and—just one thing more. May I thank you for your goodness on shipboard? It brightened what would otherwise have been a grim experience."

Blind Mrs. Ess Kay to pronounce this man not a gentleman just because some strange circumstances had forced him to travel in the steerage! I did wish that, without his knowing it, I could have slipped into his pocket my £30.

"Oh, I did nothing," I answered. "It was the other people who did everything—the little that was done. It's I who have to thank you for taking that person away. He and the other who came just before were so rude."

"They didn't mean to be rude," he said. "They wanted you to tell them something which they could put into their papers, and they live by doing that kind of thing. I did the best I could with them, but I wish I could have saved you from being annoyed in the beginning. I hesitated at first for fear you might misunderstand and think me as bad as they were, but I wish I hadn't now."

"After what I saw you do at sea I couldn't possibly have misunderstood," I said.

"Thank you for saying that," he returned, "though for what I did then I don't deserve any praise. It was done on the impulse, and I'm used to salt water. As a child I lived close to it for a time in California and swimming came almost as natural as walking. But I'm not here to talk about myself. It was only to tell you how grateful I was and am and shall continue to be for your kindness on the ship. I couldn't go without speaking of this, and there's something now I'd like to ask. You won't be offended?"

"If it's something you want to tell me, I know it isn't the sort of thing which could offend," I said, but I didn't say it as calmly as it looks when written. I stammered a little and got the words tangled up, and I felt my face growing hotter than ever.

"I thank you again. It's only this. If, while you're over on this side the water, there's ever any way in which a man—a man who'd be as respectful as your footman, and loyal as your friend—could possibly serve you, I wish you would let me be that man. I know it seems now as if such a thing couldn't happen, but nothing's quite impossible in this queer world, and—and anyhow I shall always be ready. You could trust me"—

"I know that!" I couldn't resist breaking in.

"I'm—employed for the present at a club in New York. If you'd send word to Jim Brett at the Manhattan club, there's nothing under the sun that Jim Brett wouldn't do for you, from finding a lost dog to taking a message across the world."

"First I must catch my dog before I can lose him," I answered, laughing. "But if I do, or—or there's anything else, I shan't forget."

"That's a true promise, then, and I have to thank you for the third time. Now, I'm not going to trouble you any longer. Goodby."

Without stopping to think who he was, or who I was, I held out my hand, and his good looking brown face grew red. He took the hand, pressed it hard once, dropped it abruptly, turned on his heel and walked away without looking back.

I was so interested in going over the conversation in my mind that I forgot to feel like Beau Brummel with one paw up in his glass case, and though I dare say ten minutes had passed, it hardly seemed two, when a wonderful little black image in the shape of a boy came sidling up to me, all rolling white eyes and red grin, like a nice Newfoundland puppy. He had some newspapers tucked under his arm, but in his hand was a small basket of peaches almost too beautiful to be real. But then, weren't they—and wasn't he—part of my dream?

He grinned so much more that I was afraid his round black face would break into two separate halves, and looking at me with his woolly head on one side, he thrust out the basket.

"Fur you, missy," said he, with a funny little accent, for all the world like Sally Woodburn's.

"They can't be for me. There must be a mistake," said I, wishing there wasn't, for the peaches did look delicious, and there were two rosebuds lying on top of the basket, one pink, the other white. "I don't know any one who could have sent them."

"The gent knows you, you bet, missy," replied the image. "He guv me a quarter and axed if I know'd my alphabet 'nuf to find letter 'B' an' tote dese yere to the prettiest young lady I'd ever seed. Most wite ladies dey looks all jes' alike to me, but you's different, missy, an' I reckon de tings must be fur you."

I had a horrible vision of this compliment proceeding from the Flashlight or the Evening Bat. "What was the gentleman like?" I asked.

"Like mos' any gent, missy, 'cept that he was powerful tall, an' I reckon if he keeps right on like he's doin' now he'll get mos' as brown as me some day."

Then I knew that I was safe in taking the present, so I did and gave the comical black image two or three little round white metal things I'd got from the purser when I changed some English money. I didn't know how much they were, and they looked ridiculously small, but he seemed pleased.

When he had run off I turned my attention to the peaches. They were so big that there was room only for four in the basket, and they seemed dreadfully pathetic considering from whom they had come.

That poor fellow must be almost penniless or he wouldn't have been in the steerage, yet he had bought peaches for me and given a "quarter"—whatever that was—to his quaint black doll of a messenger. I could have cried. Nevertheless I ate two of the peaches and reluctantly presented the other two, which I couldn't possibly eat, to a gloomy "B" child sitting on a shawl strap.

As if for a reward of virtue, just as I had disposed of my leavings and stuck the roses into my belt, the last of the luggage arrived. There were two custom house men near to choose from, and, as I've heard, in choosing between two evils it's better to choose the less, I smiled beseechingly at the smaller man, who had just crammed a pile of lace blouses into the box of a lady with nervous prostration.

Whether he was sated with cruelty, or whether he was naturally of an angelic disposition, I shall probably never know now, but the fact remains that, instead of turning out the fiend I'd been led to expect, he was one of the most considerate men I've ever met. He wouldn't even let me unlock my own boxes, but took the keys and opened them for me himself. (Didn't an executioner braid the hair of some queen whose head he was going to chop off? I must look the incident up when I have time.) Anyway, I thought of it when the custom house man was being so polite, but the analogy didn't go any farther, for my head never came off at all, and two of the boxes remained unopened.

La France SHOE FOR WOMEN

$3.00 SOLE REASON AND OTHERS $4.00

The reason La France shoes for women are comfortable is that they are made that way. If you had a pair of gloves which were full of ridges of superfluous leather, you know they would hurt you and look badly—but that is the way many shoes are made.

In La France Shoes the seams are even and smooth like those of a glove, and there are no inside ridges of leather to hurt or chafe your feet.

Therefore, they have a comfortable, glove-like feeling, and for the same reason they fit beautifully and always present—whether new or old—a neat, graceful and beautiful appearanec.

BALKAN NATIONS ARMING

War Clouds Grow Blacker as Partition of Turkey Continues

London, Oct. 9.—The continued tearing away of Turkish states has entailed the rapid mobilization of troops in Bulgaria, Servia and Austria, the opening of a guerilla warfare in Montenegro, the sending of Turkish warships from Smyrna to the Island of Samos to watch Crete, and the general furbishing of armaments among the nations of Europe who have the Turkish empire under supervision.

Bulgaria seceded on Monday; Crete broke loose, and Bosnia and Herzegovina were detached by Austria on Wednesday; Montenegro and Albania declared their independence yesterday.

Thus the whole of the dependencies of Turkey in Europe, with the exception of Macedonia and Adrianople, have broken away within four days.

War clouds are gathering blacker than ever. The possibilities are these: Turkey may again fight Greece to regain possession of Crete, which she won once before in 1897. Bulgaria, no longer afraid of Turkey, may fight her little sister provinces of Servia and Montenegro, who are angered by the Austrian gathering-in of Bosnia and Herzegovina. Italy may send troops to occupy Albania, upon whom Adriatic coast towns she has long cast a covetous eye.

In the meantime the proposed congress of the signatory powers to the Berlin treaty will be called to meet in either Paris, London or Rome, these being the capitals of the three nations which are primarily disinterested in the present mix-up.

Cretans Take Oath of Loyalty

Canea, Island of Crete, Oct. 9.—The members of the new government took the oath of loyalty to Greece yesterday afternoon, as did also the officers of the gendarmerie and the militia. The consular body protested in principle against the declaration of union, but will confine itself to submitting the matter to the four protecting powers, Great Britain, Russia, France and Italy.

EFFORTS TO SAVE HULL OF YANKEE

Job to Be Placed in Hands of Wrecking Company

Newport, R. I., Oct. 9.—While the work of stripping the cruiser Yankee, which is aground on Hen and Chickens rocks in Buzzards bay, is being continued, no further attempt will be made to move the vessel from the rocks until a wrecking company is given the contract. Everything that can be taken out of the vessel to reduce her weight is now being removed and put on board naval colliers.

Next Saturday bids from wrecking companies will be opened by Rear Admiral Merrell, commandant of the second naval district, and afterwards the contract will be awarded and the successful bidder will make preparations to save the hull of the vessel, which, while in a serious condition, can probably be repaired.

Great Work With Æroplane

Le Mans, Oct. 9.—Wilbur Wright yesterday made several flights which were witnessed by Dowager Queen Margarita of Italy. Among his passengers were Lieutenant General Baden-Powell of the British army, Count Serge Kaznakoff, a chamberlain to the Russian emperor, Mme. Bollee and Commandant Boutieaux, director of the military aerostatic park at Meudon. A public subscription has been opened here with the object of presenting a testimonial to Wright.

A Decidedly Rich Crowd

Portchester, N. Y., Oct. 9.—Unique in golf history was a tournament played yesterday on the links at Rye. The only condition of the tournament was that the players be 55 years of age or more and many of the men who participated in the contest were men of national fame, a number of them being millionaires. A statistician figured that more than $100,000,000 in personal wealth was represented by the players and spectators.

Eight Days Without Food or Water

Liverpool, Oct. 9.—Steamship Michigan, from Boston, brought here John E. Burke and John Burbine, fishermen from the schooner Bohemia of Gloucester, Mass. The two men left the schooner in a dory on Sept. 22 and were lost in a fog. They had been eight days in the dory without food or water when the Michigan sighted the boat, which was flying a shirt on an oar, and rescued them.

Nine Million Sufferers

London, Oct. 9.—The General Federation of Trades Unions has issued a manifesto declaring that there are 1,500,000 unemployed in the United Kingdom with dependents numbering 7,500,000 suffering thereby. The Federation recommends the creation of a minister of labor and a permanent "unemployed" board, and that all members of labor unions refuse to work overtime.

Train Kills Farmer and Wife

Wantagh, L. I., Oct. 9.—James Hoar, a farmer of this place, and his wife, were struck and instantly killed by a railroad train as they were driving across the tracks here. They waited for the passage of a train bound east and then drove onto the tracks in front of a west-bound express.

FACTORIES TO SHUT DOWN

Strike of Lynn Lasters Assuming a Most Serious Phase

AWAITING WORD FROM CAUNT

Unions Have Prepared Answer to Arbitration Proposition--One Condition Said to Be That Every Man Be Taken Back Immediately--Every Shoe Shop Will Close Unless Strike Ends This Week

Lynn, Mass., Oct. 9.—Negotiations towards reaching an agreement by which to end the strike of lasters, which has crippled the shoe manufacturing industry in this city, were again postponed last night by the inability of Arthur Caunt to communicate with his brother, Joseph Caunt, and get an answer from him to a tentative agreement drawn up by the arbitration conference. Arthur Caunt, however, stated that he would be able to reach his brother by wire today and a meeting of the arbitration committee will be called at the mayor's office to receive the answer of the Caunt firm and the striking unions to the arbitration proposition.

After the tentative agreement had been drawn up at yesterday's conference a meeting of the executive board of the unions was called to decide on what answer would be given by the strikers, and after reaching an agreement the business agents of both unions went to the mayor's office to submit their answer. As no statement from the Caunt firm was forthcoming, however, the answer of the unions was not disclosed, and the meeting was postponed until today.

Although the union officials are very reticent regarding their attitude as to arbitration, it is understood that the strikers will not arbitrate without making strong demands on the manufacturers. It is said by a reliable authority that one of the conditions the strikers will require is that every man be taken back to work immediately, including all the men out from the Caunt factory.

Lynn is just beginning to realize that it is the scene of a serious strike. In the something over 120 shoe factories in this city there are not more than fifty lasters at work. The few factories that are open at all are only operating one or two departments, and if the strike is not brought to a close by the end of the week every shoe factory in Lynn will be shut down. Walton & Logan, Hennessey & Thompson and Seymour & Jackson notified their employes last night that they would not reopen this morning, and Faunce & Spinney and the Joseph Caunt company will close probably before Saturday.

That serious outbreaks by the lawless element among the strikers is feared was made evident last night, when Mayor Porter, in a message to the chief of police, stated that since the strike began dealers in firearms have been making unusually large sales of revolvers and ammunition, and urged the police to take steps to suppress the sale of firearms in the city while the strike is in force. One dealer reported that he had sold forty-eight revolvers yesterday. At the home of Joseph Caunt two special police officers have been stationed, to prevent any annoyance being caused Mrs. Caunt while her husband is away.

Wooden box and paper carton manufacturers are beginning to feel the effects of the strike, and many of them are laying off the larger portion of their help or closing down altogether.

The strikers are organizing into shop crews, and appointing a chairman of the crew from each shop to take the names and addresses of every man in his division, so that in the event of a settlement all the men can be assembled and return together to their respective factories.

The soup kitchen which was established in Lasters' hall is being continued, and last night supper was served to about 500 men.

If the strike will not be settled at today's conference a big parade will be held by the strikers, with the line of march through the residential district. The men are already making preparations to make it the largest demonstration ever made by shoe workers in this city.

Forest Fires Start Up Anew

Malone, N. Y., Oct. 9.—The forest fires in this section of the Adirondacks are again assuming a most threatening aspect. With the dry leaves now falling fast, a big wind would drive the fires through thousands of acres of green timber. The conditions are considered here to be fully as bad as before the rain of a week ago.

Suffragettes' Great Plan

London, Oct. 9.—The suffragettes have issued an appeal to the public to help them rush the house of commons when it meets on Oct. 13. The leader of the suffragettes, Mrs. Drummond, says that they expect the help of 50,000 persons in storming the house.

Mistaken For a Deer

Lowelltown, Me., Oct. 9.—An unknown man was shot and killed by a man named Skinner six miles northeast of Lowelltown. Both men were in the woods with rifles looking for big game, and Skinner, mistaking the other for a deer, fired

The Big and the Little John D.

Methods of Rockefeller, Titular Head of Standard Oil, Who Is Writing His Reminiscences, and Archbold, the Active Head, Whose Policy of Publicity Has Created a Stir.

By JAMES A. EDGERTON.

THIS is a story of the two John D.'s, or the big and little boss of the Standard Oil. The likeness between the two men does not end with their front names. Both Rockefeller (without his wig) and Archbold are short on hair and long on money, both endow universities, and both are devout church members. Rockefeller was born in New York and emigrated to Ohio, and Archbold was born in Ohio and emigrated to New York. One is the president and the other the vice president of the big oil trust, but while the tall John D. shapes the general policies of the concern the short John D. works out the details. It must not be supposed, however, that Mr. Rockefeller has all the big things his own way. It is known that one very important change in the Standard's plan of campaign was brought about by Mr. Archbold. This was in relation to publicity. The Rockefeller plan had been to say nothing and gather in the earth and the fullness thereof. The Archbold method is to continue taking in the earth, but to keep up an easy flow of conversation and printer's ink while in the act. As soon as allowed to have his own way the little John D. set to work with his ready letter writer and talked back. Whenever anybody attacked the Standard Oil company there immediately appeared in the papers a letter from Mr. Archbold saying in effect that the man making the charges should be called by a shorter and uglier name. No longer was "26 Broadway" known as "the great silence." The sphinx grew vocal and gave people to understand that the eternal riddle was not much of a riddle after all. There was nothing mysterious except that the Standard had wanted the business and had got it. It never undersold an independent concern, as charged, if it could kill that concern off in any other way.

Mr. Archbold said that a mistake had been made and that henceforth the Standard would take the public into its confidence. This was a slight variation on the manner in which the public had been taken in and confidenced before, and the change was hailed with a sigh of relief. For a time the new policy worked as smoothly as the oil of which it treated, and even Rockefeller himself was converted. He grew more and more loquacious, not only in court, where he could not help himself, but at other times, when he talked only because he yearned to tell the public all about it. He joined the American Press Humorists, made the reporters boon companions and finally wound up by publishing his reminiscences in a New York magazine.

Publicity Policy Episode.

Yet Archbold, the originator of the policy, got more publicity than he had bargained for. The papers not only printed the letters that he intended to have printed, but other missives that were designed only for United States senators and other officials who needed the money and wanted to earn it by becoming errand boys for the Standard. It appears that certain trusted employees stole Mr. Archbold's letter files, and they were secured by William R. Hearst, who also believes in publicity. Then Mr. Hearst read these letters all out loud to grinning audiences. Mr. Archbold's policy of publicity had got away from him and was raising the old Ned with his privately owned herd of United States senators, congressmen and other stock of the public official class. As a letter writer Mr. Archbold suddenly awoke to find himself crowding all the other entries out of the temple of fame.

Since that episode it is said that John D. Rockefeller has come out of his ten years' retirement and has taken more active control of the affairs of the Standard. Some of those epistles would drag a ghost back from the other shore or a statesman from his job, so it is not to be wondered at that they should have pulled Rockefeller again into the fray. The public is already familiar with the famous missives concerning Senator Foraker and other high lights in the political firmament, but here is another epistolary gem from former Congressman Sibley to Mr. Archbold that may not have reached so many eyes. It runs:

Personal and Confidential.
House of Representatives,
Washington, Nov. 23, 1903.

My Dear Mr. A.—A (Rep.) United States senator came to me today to make a loan of $1,000. I told him I did not have it, but would try and get it for him and would let him have it in a day or two. Do you want to make the investment? He is one who will do anything in the world that is right for his friends if ever needed. Please telegraph me yes or no. I will give you name when I see you. I don't know but what I ought to come over and see you. Events are crowding, and I am on the inside of them and think I am playing no small hand and want to know whether to go ahead. The nomination of a Republican president is not yet settled. No man can safely predict the nominee, and guess I have got hold of the real situation as closely as any one here. If you need me for any purpose telegraph me and I will come over. Sincerely yours,

JOSEPH C. SIBLEY.

The name of this senator is not given; neither is it divulged whether or not the "investment" was made, but at a trifling little $1,000 per head the price of senators seems to have come down. At this figure the Standard could easily buy up all the senates, parliaments, congresses, legislatures and other lawmaking bodies on earth. It would seem to be as cheap to buy senators as to buy slaves in the old days. A good slave brought $1,000, and he had to be fed, clothed and housed besides, while the senator looks after these minor details for himself.

Unless Mr. Archbold is as much pleased with the latest turn of his publicity campaign as is the general public he will doubtless hereafter follow the advice of a famous American statesman and "burn that letter." Files and presses containing secret correspondence are dangerous things. The intimate side of a man revealed by this sort of yellow dog literature is so different from that which he usually presents to the public!

JOHN D. ROCKEFELLER AND JOHN D. ARCHBOLD.

Claims of the Oil Kings.

If the little John D. has been unfortunate in taking the public into his confidence, however, the big one has gone on swimmingly. In his reminiscences he chats along in a garrulous and cheerful fashion, intimating that things are not half so bad as painted and that he may tell some things which will put a new aspect on the case. So far he has not divulged any of these pleasant points, but has only hinted that he may do so. In a sort of inward chuckle he dismisses the story that he forced any of his business associates to come in with him or suffer ruin, alleging as a proof that they have stayed with him loyally all these years, which they hardly would have done if coercion had been used in the first instance. He also speaks of the liberal treatment given by the Standard to its employees, recites the fact that the company has had scarcely any strikes or labor troubles and recounts with some pride the provision of old age pensions for his superannuated workmen. There is a promise of something better in these reminiscences, however. There is not the slightest doubt that Rockefeller has a most interesting story to tell, and he seems to tell it in an easy and frank manner.

Whatever opinions we may hold of him and his business methods, we cannot but be fascinated by the tale of how the world's most colossal business was organized and the world's richest man got his wealth. We cannot deny Rockefeller intellect, say what we may of his character or heart. It will be worth while to know his side, to see on what theory he bases his actions, to find the flaw in his attitude and argument as well as that in our own. Rockefeller and Archbold seriously regard themselves as benefactors rather than malefactors. They say their wealth has been obtained honestly, that they have resorted to usual business weapons only in their fights with rivals, that the attacks on them come from competitors rather than consumers, that they have shown the power of combination in cheapening both production and distribution, that they have opened new markets throughout the world, educating the Chinese in the use of oil and thus literally taking them from darkness into light, and that finally they have given great bequests to education in their own land, thus figuratively performing the same service for the mental eyes of their countrymen as they have for the physical eyes of the Celestials. Rockefeller, it is true, does not directly mention the educational matter himself, but it cannot be omitted from a list of the services to mankind claimed by him and for him.

Charity of World's Richest Man.

A mere list of the known Rockefeller benefactions is staggering, and there are many of his donations that have never been made public. In the giving game the oil king does not let his right hand know what his left hand is doing—that is, not always. To the general education board he has made over the enormous sum of $43,000,000, and of this $32,000,000 was given at one time. He has donated $23,000,000 to the University of Chicago, $100,000 and a library on Greek art and literature and money donations to Vassar, $1,375,000 to Barnard college, $250,000 to missionary bodies, $1,000,000 to Yale, $1,825,000 to the Rockefeller Institute For Medical Research, $1,126,000 to the Southern Education fund, Harvard $1,030,000, Teachers' college $500,000 and numerous other donations to educational and religious institutions, amounting in all to over $85,000,000.

The Rockefeller charity has been organized as a regular business. It is headed by trained experts, who closely scrutinize and investigate every application for a gift. The mere administrative expense of this bureau costs in the neighborhood of $40,000 a year. The amount given out each twelve months foots up millions. But all of this is a mere bagatelle to a man who is so rich that he does not know within many millions of dollars how rich he is, according to his own admission. It is probably not true that he is a billionaire. That being does not exist on the earth—yet. If Rockefeller lives a few years longer—he is now sixty-nine and comes of a long lived race—he may reach it. There is little or no question that he is the richest man in the world. He has five residences—one in New York city, one at Pocantico Hills, near Tarrytown, N. Y.; one at Lakewood, N. J., and two at Cleveland, O., one being a town house and the other in the country. He spends some time in each of his houses, goes to church regularly each Sunday, officiating sometimes as deacon; never goes into society, plays golf as a regular recreation and generally enjoys life as much as a man without any hair and with more money than he can count or give away can be expected to do. That is John D. Rockefeller, the man who has more dollars and more denunciations than any other in the world.

Standard Oil's Active Head.

As for the other John D., the smaller one, he is only a wisp of a man, but with a prominent forehead and a combative thickness between the ears. He has more hair than Rockefeller, fewer dollars and fewer benefactions. He seems to follow in the footsteps of his chief, as he also lives near Tarrytown, a region once made famous by Washington Irving. After all, the people who live longest and are loved most are not those who take material wealth from humanity, but those who give mental and spiritual wealth to humanity. This truth proved so often of old time is being most strikingly driven home once more.

Mr. Archbold is nine years younger than Rockefeller and is now the active, as the other is the titular, head of Standard Oil. He is impervious to criticism, though he objects to the term "tainted money" and also dislikes to be called "the man behind" Syracuse university, the institution of which he is regarded as the especial patron. This is the institution from which Chancellor Day delivers broadsides at the president of the United States and defends Standard Oil. Many other men have given almost as much to this college as Archbold, but he is nevertheless looked upon as its particular mentor and friend.

Mr. Archbold has a rather pleasant face, never allowed his picture in the papers until recent years, is of the type of unemotional, well trained administrative machines that make up the disciplined corps of the Standard Oil, is the political end of the giant trust and is the same efficient and plausible gentleman whether in church, club, at an alumni dinner in Syracuse, at the administrative head of a world embracing business, writing letters to defend his company or manipulating senators and other Standard assets. Yet one day this man fought the Standard. What is the mysterious power which enables this institution to enroll an army of over a million men and to make of its one time enemies its most faithful friends?

Too Risky

Ask your doctor if he does not think it would be wise for you to keep a bottle of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral in the house.

"A hard chill, pain through the chest, difficult breathing." If this should be your experience, send for your doctor. It may be pneumonia! To doctor yourself would be too risky. If your doctor cannot come at once, give Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. When he comes, tell him exactly what you have done. J. C. Ayer Co., Lowell, Mass.

EDITORIAL.

It is expected that the Metropolitan Improvement Commission will be present in Quincy next Wednesday and illustrate by stereopticon views how the city may be made more attractive. An expert from the commission will tell of these things and be ready to ask questions.

Sometime ago the Mayor was communicated with relative to street and water way improvements needed. He in turn communicated with the Board of Trade and Citizens' Association, who thought it desirable that an expert should visit the city and give a lecture. Then suggestions could be made as to what was desired in Quincy.

This commission which was created by an act of the Legislature, is to investigate the needs of greater Boston and is to report back to the Legislature with recommendations for each place and submit to them suggestions in the way of streets and water way improvements.

The time is getting very short in which to make this recommendation, and action cannot be delayed if Quincy desires to be included.

The lecture next Wednesday is to give the citizens an idea of the scope of the commission. It will afford an opportunity to ask questions and make suggestions.

The Board of Trade did a fine piece of business Wednesday evening in discussing the great benefit to be derived from manual training. Our city has already introduced it into the High school and many parents are desirous of seeing it introduced into the grammar schools of our city, for the educational world has come to consider a manual training teacher and a physical director, almost a necessity to every well--equiped, adult school.

It looks as though young men of Quincy could spend a profitable and educational winter with free city evening schools; the Y. M. C. A. school with expert teachers and low prices; and a third evening school at $4 per month in the High school building.

There are said to be 90,000 women in New York who are over seventy years of age. This of course does not take into account the New York chorus girls who are on the road.

Mr. Hearst says he has invested a great deal of capital in this campaign. Still we should say he is getting his money's worth.

Every citizen of our city is glad to see our High school playing such good foot-ball. These out-of-door sports are best for our youths.

FUNERAL OF MRS. TILTON.

The funeral of Mrs. Lila M., wife of Charles B. Tilton, was held Thursday afternoon from her late residence, 24 Merrymount road. The services which were of a simple nature were conducted by Rev. R. Perry Bush of Chelsea. He spoke of the lessons of comfort and consolation to be drawn from the scriptures and of the joyful meeting in the hereafter with her who had gone before, to prepare a place for them. Many friends were present at the services, and the flowers were many and beautiful, almost hiding from view the casket. The burial was at Mt. Wollaston and was private, Rev. Mr. Bush conducting the committal service.

GREAT REFORM

Day of Redemption At Haverhill Says Gazette Over New City Charter

The Haverhill Gazette says editorially:

"It is the good fortune of Haverhill to have fallen at last upon inspiring days—days when it is good to be alive, days of glorious triumph for civic righteousness and the advancement of higher moral ideas in municipal government. Charter reform is no longer a dream of the enthusiast. It is a blessed reality. The people are to be served instead of the politicians. The word "politics" has been rescued and given its right name—the science of good government.

Taking that interpretation, every citizen of Haverhill should be a politician with as high ideals in political as in religious and private life The vote of Tuesday has given the lie to the charge that government in every city of New England suffers from the "half satirical, self-satisfied indifferent attitude" of the people.

Real estate and business interests are worth, intrinsically far more today than yesterday. But the work of the Civic League has only just begun It was not the touch of the "gloved hand," so cleverly referred to in the clamour of the opposition, that won the victory. It was the nailed fist of the people. It means that they not only indorse the plans and purposes of charter revision, but that they will insist on a literal performance of the promises that it involves and a personnel of sufficiently high character and capability to carry out those promises. In initiative it was a movement of the business interests and those interests must be fairly and fully represented on the board of government.

"But the working men made this victory possible and they, too, must come into their own and have a clearly distinct representation in control. There must be no mistake about that. In the crucible of last analysis every ante-election pledge of the reformers must be fulfilled.

"The failure or success of this great forward step in municipal government must rise or fall by the standard of honesty and capability that characterizes the new conduct of affairs. The pathway is so clear that the dullest mind can understand. It means merely the application of the old principles of town government to new conditions where honesty and capability and sanity, regardless of political preference, are made the first requisites in the claim for public office.

"Tht fight that was made here is the battle of every city in New England. The new rule by commission will be watched by ten thousand jealous eyes, and it is up to this community to set the standard for universal municipal reform.

"It is only a waste of time to discuss the cost of this campaign. It was an education for the people well worth every dollar of expenditure. In the dying gasps of the politicians and the place holders, it was clearly demonstrated that their language and their lungs were stronger than their faith, their judgment or convictions and that the proper time to decide on the temper of the public pulse, is after the votes are counted.

"The civic virtue was not dead. It was only asleep. The slumber was profound, indeed, as if it were the result of some painful narcotic. But it has awakened at last to the appreciation of better things. It has responded for the last time in a municipal election to the sounding brass of a mere party name.

"Hereafter candidates must stand for something and mean something. The welfare of the city must be the highest consideration. Good in government does not exist by accident. It must be nurtured by good citizens. It is one thing to be against wrong It is quite another thing to fight wrong. One is a non-combatant that never won a cause, the other a soldier in the fight.

"Plenty of men can be honest inactively, but the personnel we need on the commission is men who can be honest and capable in action. There have been many fights for progress in the history of municipal government in New England and the battle is not over yet. 'Peace has her victories no less renowned than war.' The triumph of the forces of good government here will have an influence for good for years to come. Haverhill is sending today a message of good courage and cheer that will encourage the lovers of civic righteousness everywhere.

"It is her day of redemption. She has declared her independence from the things that dishonor and depress."

Principal features of the new charter:—

The present city government is abolished and in its stead there is created the municipal council consisting of a mayor and four aldermen, and the present school board is abolished and in its stead there is created a board consisting of the mayor ex-officio and four elected members.

On the third Tuesday preceding an election there shall be held a preliminary election for nominations. When a mayor is to be elected the two persons receiving the highest number of votes for that office at the preliminary election shall be nominated and they shall be the only candidates for that office whose names shall be printed on the official ballot at the following election.

When two persons are to be elected to the same office (as in the case of the alderman) then the four persons receiving the highest number of votes at the preliminary election shall be nominated as the candidate for such office at the following election. The term of office of mayor, aldermen and members of the school committee is two years. A mayor is elected every second year. Two aldermen and two members of the school committee are elected each year. To get name on ballot 25 voters' signatures are required.

Ward lines are abolished for purposes of election and the mayor, aldermen and members of the school committee are nominated and elected at large. No party or political designation or mark of any kind shall appear on the ballot either at the preliminary elections for nominations or at the city elections, annual or special.

At the end of each month the municipal council must cause to be printed a detailed statement of receipts and expenditures and at the end of each year a full and complete examination of all books and accounts shall be made by competent accountants and the result of such examination shall be published.

Twenty-five percent of the voters may petition the municipal council requesting the passage of any desired ordinance, and 25 percent of the voters may within 10 days after the passage of any ordinance, petition the municipal council protesting against such ordinance. The ordinance shall thereby be suspended, the municipal council shall then consider it and either repeal it or submit it to the voters at a special election. If such ordinance does not receive a majority of votes at such election it shall not become a law.

Twenty-five percent of the voters may compel any election for the purpose of removing any member of the municipal council or school committee.

The mayor has a vote in the municipal council but not the power to veto. All power of appointment, election, nominations, confirmations, removal and suspensions of city officers is vested in the municipal council.

Better Days For the Farmers

President Roosevelt's mail is stacked high these days with letters concerning the commission on country life, which he recently created, and the number of communications on the subject is growing greater daily. A rather strange feature of this correspondence, considering the far-reaching significance of the commission, is that so far it has contained no word of adverse comment from any quarter. The suggestions are all constructive, and many of them will prove of great help to the Commission when it formulates its plans of campaign.

Many of the letters to the President are from men whose names are known everywhere, but the bulk of them are from the men who are most vitally interested—the farmers themselves. The general tenor of the farmers' letters shows that not only are they deeply concerned in the work of the Commission, but that they have clear-headed ideas of the President's purpose in starting the inquiry and of what the outcome may be. The writers get down to the business and set forth their ideas with a hard-headed logic and clearness of statement that makes it seem a little doubtful if the belief of some persons that rural schools ought to be improved is well-founded.

The one point in which all the farmers without exception agree with the President is that the greatest trouble with agricultural life is its isolation. The remedy for this that is most frequently proposed is better roads. Another solution that is advocated by a large proportion of the writers is that a means be sought to prevent the holding of large farms by persons or corporations who do not work them themselves.

The argument is advanced that such action would attract settlers to the country and that the wide spaces between farms would be broken up, and that further if the big tracts which are now worked by absentee owners or held for speculation were split up among independent owners, there would be greater opportunity for small farmers to come in and gain profitable livelihoods.

PHEASANTS FOR PARK.

Arthur B. Hultman, deputy of the Massachusetts Fish and Game Commission, is trying to induce the commission to liberate a number of pheasants in Merrymount park this city. He says the history of this bird is as follows: It was brought to this country under the name of Mongolian pheasant, but is quite distinct from that species to which it has only a general likeness. In 1897 F. H. Mosher confined two adult birds at Malden. They were given some choice of food and were fond of grain, weed-seeds, vegetables, fruit and insects. They ate seventy full-grown gypsy moth caterpillars in half a day. Within another half a day they ate one-hundred and eight eggs bearing female gypsy moths.

STREET RAILWAYS

Ward Two Man Thinks There Is Great Chance For Improvement

Editors of Daily Ledger:

Street railway companies, like other corporations, derive their charters, which give them the right to exist and which regulate in a general way their internal government, from the State.

The privilege of occupying a specific street or highway usually requires further authorization, and it is this authorization which is designated by the term "franchise."

In some state constitutions the legislature is expressly prohibited from granting the use of the streets and highways with out the consent of the local governing authorities, while in nearly all other states the practice of the legislature is to give the local governments control in this respect. This control involves ordinarily the right of the local authorities to impose such conditions as they may see fit at the time the franchise is granted.

During recent years widespread and active interest has been manifested in the relations between street railway companies and the local governments representing the interests of the people. In Massachusetts the railroad commissioners must approve all grants of franchises by local authorities.

In some states on petition of a certain proportion of the voters franchises are submitted to popular vote. Such use of the referendum is most common in the western states. In Colorado, South Dakota, and Utah, for example, all municipal ordinances are subject to the referendum on petition, or the optional referendum, as it is commonly called.

The same requirement is found in the San Francisco charter, and in the charters of various other cities. In Nebraska and Arizona all public franchises in cities must be submitted to popular vote. In Montana and Colorado to the vote of the taxpaying electors. In Iowa one-fifth of the voters in any city may require any franchise to be submitted to popular vote.

The optional referendum with reference to franchises exists in corporated towns of Indiana, in Parkersburg, W. Va., by its new charter, and in various other places. In Detriot a local ordinance provides that proposed franchises shall be submitted to popular vote, but such vote is purely advisory, not binding. Provisions for popular vote on franchise grants are for the most part of recent origin.

The present law in Massachusetts regarding street railways was adopted in 1898, after careful investigation by a special commission, headed by Charles Francis Adams, Jr. By the law of 1898, the consent of the local governing authorities is required for the use of the streets, and they may impose such restrictions at the time of the grant as they see fit.

An unofficial vote of the people should be taken on all franchise questions. Such a vote would have a moral effect upon our city councilmen. An ordinance should be passed in Quincy requiring that future franchises shall be submitted to popular vote, if demanded by 12 members of the city council or by 5 per cent of the voters; such a vote to be purely advisory.

The fact should be recognized that the rights of the people, as a whole, are paramount to those of our so-called public service corporations.

The City of Quincy presents the most striking example of insufficient transportation. The facilities for handling the traffic are hopelessly inadequate, so that expansion of the population and our business enterprises has been seriously hindered. Some relief should be secured. This inadequacy of street railway service consists in the insufficient speed of transit; the insufficient number of cars, insufficient heating in winter, insufficient illumination of cars, insufficient regularity in running time, etc. etc.

These conditions are so familiar to every resident of Quincy that they scarcely need to be illustrated. The total number of hours spent yearly by our shipyard men who are forced to leave the electric cars on Washington Street and walk the entire length of Chucuck Street and Des Moines Road twice daily in monotonous travel represents a great social and industrial waste.

The growth of the outlying portions of our city in my estimation has been far less rapid than would have been the case with proper transit facilities. It is an undisputed fact that our street railway service is not doing its part in distributing population within our city limits. A great many people do not use the street railway to any considerable extent, but live within walking distance of their places of employment. In time this will have a tendency towards overcrowding in some sections, while other sections perhaps more attractive although more remote will be stunted in growth.

Rather than ride in slow and overcrowded cars, sometimes none at all, hundreds of people walk considerable distance to their trains and their employment. The failure of a great many people to use the railways is due to insufficient service, and patronage would increase if proper consideration was given to furnishing adequate transportation. The time required to reach one's place of employment is quite a paramount matter to the workingman or woman who toils eight, nine or ten hours every day at a regular occupation. Surely these people are entitled to some consideration.

These conditions pertaining to our street railway service in Quincy are growing more serious from year to year. They point to the necessity of comprehensive and far-seeing plans for the reorganization of methods of transportation.

F. W. WHITCOMB NOMINATED.

The Democratic representative convention of the eighth Norfolk district, Braintree, Holbrook and Avon, was held Thursday evening in the Selectmen's room at the Braintree town house. All the delegates were present, twelve in number, six from Braintree, three from Holbrook and Avon three. Meeting was called to order by James W. Colbert, chairman of the district committee. Mr. Colbert was made temporary chairman and Moses H. McGaughey secretary. Later they were made permanent officers.

It was voted to cast informal ballots for a candidate to the legislature. Twelve ballots were cast, seven for Fred W. Whitcomb of Holbrook and five for John J. Daley also of Holbrook. It was voted that Mr. Whitcomb be the nominee by acclamation. Unanimously voted.

Voted that a committee of six; four from Braintree, one from Holbrook and one from Avon wait upon Mr. Whitcomb to notify him of the nomination.

It was voted that in case of death or withdrawal that the vacancy be filled by the convention officers. Adjourned at 9.15 o'clock.

ANNUAL BANQUET

Of Social And Benevolent Society at Wollaston Baptist

The annual banquet given by the Social and Benevolent society of the Wollaston Baptist church on Thursday evening was well attended. Tables were set for one hundred, and fully that number did justice to the repast.

An informal reception in the church preceded the banquet, and shortly before seven o'clock the orchestra struck up, and the march commenced to the vestry where the tables were spead.

The vestry presented a pretty sight with its white tables adorned with vases of bright flowers. Behind the head table ferns and hydrangeas mingled with autumn leaves were banked.

At the head table were: Rev. and Mrs. E. D. Webber, Rev. O. J. White, D. D., Mr. and Mrs. Charles E. Goodspeed, Mrs. James T. Perry, Miss Marjorie T. Rideout and Mrs. J. H. Sparrow. After grace by the pastor, Mr. Webber, the following menu was served by Westover & Foss, the caterers:

Cold Turkey Cold Ham
Cranberry Sauce.
Escalloped Oysters Apple Fritters
Lobster Salad Chicken Salad
Frozen Pudding.
Harlequin Ice Cream
Orange Sherbet Raspberry Sherbet
Assorted Cake.
Rolls Coffee

The feast over, Mrs. E. D. Webber, president, welcomed those present in behalf of the society, and called for reports from the secretary, treasurer and heads of the various committees.

The toastmaster, Charles E. Goodspeed, was then introduced. He congratulated the ladies upon their reports and said there were only two things a woman could not do; one that she cannot vote, and the other that she cannot throw a stone straight. In connection with this he told a humorous anecdote and after several other stories of similar trend, introduced the speaker of the evening, Rev. O. J. White, D. D., pastor of the Winthrop Street Baptist church, Taunton.

Mr. White took for his theme the subject of "Hope." While Faith is related to the intellect and Love to the affections, Hope is an action of the will. Although Hope is supposed to be impracticable and visionary by some, it is essential to the highest manhood and womanhood.

The pessimistic disposition should be put aside, and one should only look backward in order to gain new momentum for future successes.

In business, Hope and success must be grouped together. It is not because a man is successful that he is hopeful, but because he is hopeful that he is successful.

Hope produces health which is beautiful while pessimism brings forth disease which is not so. In closing, he said, not to be like one of the buckets in the well that was always complaining that no sooner was it filled with fresh, pure water than it was emptied again, but like the other that rejoiced that no sooner was it emptied than it was filled again for the service of man.

Mr. Webber was called upon to say a few words, and in reference to working for the church he begged his parish not to look on the commercial side of it but more as a help in the development of character.

Both Mr. White and Mr. Goodspeed added a few words expressing the regret of the parish and community at the resignation of Mr. Webber, who will soon leave for new fields of labor.

Preceding the speches several selections were given by the Wollaston orchestra. Several very pleasing tenor solos were rendered by Edward E. Bullock, accompanied by William Weston, who also favored those present with several piano solos.

In closing Auld Lang Syne was sung standing, by the audience, accompanied by the orchestra.

EXTRAORDINARY COMPACT.

Amherst Professor Said to Have Agreed to Sell His Head For $10,000.

Professor John Mason Tyler, stone professor of biology at Amherst college and son of America's greatest Greek scholar, is reported to have made an extraordinary compact with scientists of wealth whereby he has sold his head after death for $10,000. At the college in Amherst, Mass., the report was circulated, and Professor Tyler was recently asked by a reporter of the New York Herald for its verification. He declined to make a direct statement, but said that during his student days at Leipzig he believes he made some such agreement.

It is because he is reputed to have the best shaped head in America, with a most extraordinary brain development, that the question becomes of interest to science. All the experts in America are familiar with Professor Tyler's head, and it is common knowledge that they regard it of great value to the scientific world. The professor's memory and fund of information are phenomenal.

"I suppose this story may be the result of an experience I had years ago when I was a student at Leipzig," said the professor. "It was only a joke. One day an Austrian student and I were leaning over a table studying, with our heads close together, when one of the old professors entered the room. He stood looking at our heads for some time before we noticed him and then said: 'You two fellows have the finest types of the square head and the long head I have ever seen. I wish you would leave them to me after you are dead.' We promised we would.

"The young Austrian's head was very square and large, and mine was very long, so I suppose the pair of them did look rather odd there together. That is probably the way this story started."

"But is it true that you have sold the rights to your head after death for $10,000 and that Mrs. Tyler is seeking to break the contract?"

"Ha, ha!" laughed the professor. "I guess $10,000 would be a pretty good price for a dead man's head, but I am not advertising mine for sale. As for the story, I will neither admit nor deny it."

BOYS PAY TO BE SAILORS.

White Star Training Vessel Ships Forty Cadets at $1,000 Per Head.

The White Star line training ship Mersey has sailed from Liverpool on her first voyage for Melbourne, Australia, with forty cadets whose parents have paid $1,000 each to have their sons trained for four years to become officers in the merchant marine. The boys will be instructed in navigation as well as seamanship. The cadets have been recruited from the middle class families in England. After passing the second mate's examination they will be eligible for a position as sixth mate at a wage of $30 per month.

The company has been forced to equip the Mersey on account of the dearth of officers in England. Fifteen years ago the Peninsular and Oriental company had a waiting list of applicants containing over 300 names, and last summer the company was compelled to take cadets who had never been to sea before from the schoolships in the river Thames and Mersey as fifth and sixth officers on their liners to the far east.

With forty boys on the Mersey the few able seamen who have been shipped to lead the watches will not have a rosy time. The White Star line will not lose money, as it gets $40,000 cash, and the Mersey will be run at comparatively small cost.

A WANAMAKER BELFRY.

Memorial to Thomas B. at Falls of Schuylkill to Cost $150,000.

What is expected to be one of the finest belfries in the United States is to be erected as a memorial to the late Thomas B. Wanamaker at the Episcopal Church of St. James the Less, Falls of Schuylkill, Pa. It will cost $150,000 and have a set of chimes to be brought from abroad. It is to be erected by the Wanamaker family.

Beneath the tower, which will be built of granite, will be the mausoleum of Mr. Wanamaker. Heavy bronze doors of elaborate workmanship will open into the tower proper and the mausoleum. The interior will be finished in fine white marble. The design will be Gothic to conform with the church.

Tribute to Uncle Remus' Memory.

Thomas F. Ryan of New York, capitalist, has contributed $1,000 to the fund being raised for a memorial in Atlanta to Uncle Remus (Joel Chandler Harris). The check was accompanied by the following letter:

To the committee in charge of the collection of funds for a memorial to Joel Chandler Harris, who has made so many little ones smile and wonder and who has lifted, at least for a time, the burdens of care from many of us who are no longer children and growing old and weary: Please use this check as the majority of your committee may decide would be most pleasing to Harris were he able to direct its use. Yours sincerely,

THOMAS F. RYAN.

Spineless Cactus at a Banquet.

The fruit was donated by Mr. Burbank.

Bryan Expresses That Belief Before University Students

CAMPAIGN FUND ARGUMENTS

Says Republican Convention Leaders Betrayed Rank and File of Their Own Party--Roosevelt Charged With Violating Spirit and Letter of Every Civilized Law--Four Years Enough For President

Chicago, Oct. 9.—Having temporarily bridged the political chasm which separated them and shaken hands with his Republican opponent, William J. Bryan again sallied forth and resumed his warfare. Not only Mr. Taft, but President Roosevelt came in for severe verbal castigation at his hands. Yesterday forenoon was spent by the Democratic candidate in holding conferences with his lieutenants at headquarters and in the delivery of an address before the Lakes-to-the-Gulf Waterways congress. In the afternoon at Evanston he addressed several thousand students of Northwestern university and citizens of the city and last night spoke at Chicago Heights before a big gathering of laboring men. He left this morning for Joliet, Streator, Dallsburg and Quincy, Ills., and at Hannibal, Mo., will make his final address of the day.

Mr. Bryan's principal remarks yesterday were made at Northwestern university. Addressing himself especially to the students, he said he wished to get them started right. He referred to the fact that his father did not leave him much money.

"I am rather glad that he did not," he said, "for I think fortunes have spoiled more boys than they ever have aided and a fortune in expectation has paralyzed ambition more than it has ever stimulated it." He then referred to the advice his father had given him, that he could afford to be in the minority, but that he could not afford to be wrong on any question.

Mr. Bryan charged that the Republican leaders were not going in the direction that the people of the Republican party wanted to go. In rejecting the publicity of campaign funds before election, he said, the Republican leaders of the convention had in June last betrayed the rank and file of their own party and misrepresented the voters of the country. Taft had repudiated that action, but only half way. He also attacked Taft's position on the tariff, trusts and labor questions.

Once again he flayed President Roosevelt for interfering, as he said, in the campaign. The vigorousness with which he spoke aroused the crowd to cheers. The president, he charged, had violated both the spirit and the letter of every civilized law by intimidating the several hundred thousand officeholders.

"I have no corporation behind me," he declared. "I have had no rich relatives to furnish money for the campaign. I had but one thing to rely upon and that was my advocacy of things that I believe and that the people of my party believe. I have made my fight and I stand as the representative of millions of people who believe as I do, and I say to the president that he should stand aside and let his man and me fight it out before the American people."

The reference to Taft as "his man" caused a ripple of laughter among the audience. Continuing, Bryan said that he believed the president's interference "violates a sense of justice that can be found in every human heart, and I have a right to criticise this use of the presidency.

"I tried to get an amendment that would make the president ineligible for re-election, and I have said in three campaigns that if elected I would not be a candidate for re-election. I believe that when a man occupies that office and holds in his hand the people's power, he ought not to be tempted to use it for his own ambition. I believe that he ought to be there, ready to devote himself to the welfare of his country and not to concern himself about the nomination of his successor. If I am elected I want to tear from my heart every selfish ambition and for four years give to my country whatever ability I have that I may again work to make this again a government in which the people rule and under which every citizen shall draw from society a reward proportionate to the service he renders his fellow-man."

DEBS CORDIALLY GREETED

New Haven Theatre Overcrowded, Despite Admission Fee

New Haven, Oct. 9.—Eugene V. Debs, presidential candidate of the Socialist party, wound up his New England trip on his "red special" last night with a great mass meeting in a local theatre at which hundreds were turned away at the door, although an admission fee was charged. The meeting was preceded by a street parade, in which several hundred men and women with sticks of red fire and red banners, marched to band music in which "The Marseillaise" was the favorite air. A squad of police officers was necessary at the theatre to control the crowd which sought admission.

Mr. Debs made a lengthy address upon the aims of his party, the reasons for the existence of a Socialist party and discussed at some length economic conditions. He was enthusiastically received.

During the day stops were made at Plainfield, Willimantic, Manchester, Hartford, New Britain and Meriden, where the presidential candidate was greeted by considerable numbers. He was accorded a hearty welcome at every point.

A Democratic Ratification

Boston, Oct. 9.—The Democrats opened the state campaign in Boston with a ratification meeting in Faneuil hall last night, at which several of the party's candidates for state offices were present and spoke on the issues of the campaign.

The opening speaker was Thomas J. Boynton, former mayor of Everett. Charles J. Barton of Melrose, candidate for lieutenant governor, discussed the state issues and was followed by James F. Aylward of Cambridge, candidate for secretary of state. Congressman O'Connell spoke at length on the national issues.

An enthusiastic reception was given James H. Vahey, the candidate for governor, who was the closing speaker of the evening. He discussed the party issues of the two leading parties as affecting the commonwealth, deploring the increase in the state tax, arguing for the abolition of the lobby and presenting his plans for the coming campaign.

Governor Prouty Takes Office

Montpelier, Vt., Oct. 9.—Governor Prouty was inaugurated with the usual simple ceremonies. In his inaugural address he recommended a careful study of the taxation problem, which he said was in great need of reform. He recommended that all "offsets" in taxes be abolished and that the present law taxing intangible property should be repealed.

Governor Prouty favored a reorganization of the courts, assigning more work to district courts and providing for the hearing of many cases by referees. He recommended the formulation of a public service commission to supervise telegraph and telephone companies.

The governor favored the transfer of supervision over insurance companies from the secretary of state and state treasurer, as at present, to an insurance commissioner.

Taft Registers as a Voter

Cincinnati, Oct. 9.—William H. Taft is a registered voter in precinct H, ward 2, of the city of Cincinnati. He registered yesterday, his last opportunity before the November election, thus accomplishing the object for which he came here yesterday. The registry office is a plumbing shop, and when the candidate entered it he was put through the regular catechism by the registry clerk. Taft busied himself yesterday with Arthur I. Vorys in arranging the details of his Ohio itinerary. It has not yet been completed.

Cockran Not In the Race

New York, Oct. 9.—Michael Conrey, a lawyer, was nominated for the congressional seat held at present by W. Bourke Cockran at the Democratic congressional convention of the Twlefth New York district. The nominee is a strong supporter of Tammany Leader Murphy. Cockran's name was not presented to the convention.

Master Craftsman Passes On

New York, Oct. 9.—John W. Kerwin, foreman of the American Press Association's stereotyping department, died at his home in Flushing, N. Y., after a brief illness. He leaves a wife and six children. Kerwin was a native of Chicago and 46 years of age. He entered the employ of the American Press Association twenty-five years ago. Kerwin was master of his trade and recognized as one of the best stereotypers in the country.

Court Refuses a Divorce

Reno, Nev., Oct. 9.—Judge Pike refused to grant Virginia Harned Sothern a divorce from her husband, Edward B. Sothern, saying: "If the interested parties do not deem it of enough importance to grace the court with their presence, I don't see why their family disturbances should be aired here." Mrs. Sothern is seeking a legal separation from her husband on the grounds of alleged desertion and failure to provide.

Aged Man Held on Serious Charge

North Conway, N. H., Oct. 9.—Mark W. Pierce of Glen, 82 years of age, was taken into custody in connection with the investigation by federal officers of the appearance of counterfeit half dollars in circulation. Pierce says that certain dies were the property of his grandfather and had been in his possession for about forty years, but that he has never made any illegal use of them.

Filipinos Murder an American

Manila, Oct. 9.—Charles B. Trotter, an American, and Vincete Toledo and Jose Canayan, Spaniards, were killed near Dubao by a party of Filipinos. The men were murdered with bolos and their bodies were mutilated. Trotter was a contractor and landowner and had had trouble over land with a Filipino.

Another Typhoon Near Manila

Manila, Oct. 9.—Another typhoon has passed close to Manila and it still hovers nearby. The storm interrupted the loading of some supplies on the warships, but it is expected they will be loaded on board the ships today.

The Weather Forecast

There will be increasing cloudiness and rain in New England.

Did You EVER Think of That?

IT WILL HELP QUINCY!
IT WILL HELP YOU!

Don't You Like This Town?

You live here. Your business interests are here. Your home is here.

You are reading a Mail Order Catalogue. That indicates that you are not spending your money in this town. You are spending it with strangers in a big city. That city has no use for this town except to get your money.

This town has use for your money. If spent here, your money will help to build up the town. It will help to build up your own business.

In the long run more of your money will come back to you if you spend it at home than if you send it to Chicago or some other large city. You spend a dollar with Smith, up the street. Smith spends it with Brown, around the corner. Brown is just as likely to spend it with you as with anybody else. Did you ever think of that?

All of us have to spend money. There is an art in spending it where it will do the most good. If spent so that it will circulate around this town and community, it will help this town and community. You belong to this town and community. Therefore it will help you. Isn't that good logic?

Suppose you think it over next time you pick up the Mail Order Catalogue.

CLERGY INDORSE TAFT

Class Him as Highest Type of Christian Gentleman.

FREQUENT HIS HEADQUARTERS

Declare He Is Broad Minded and Represents Ideals of Best Statesmanship—A Bishop's Opinion of the Republican Nominee.

"Because he is the highest type of the Christian gentleman."

This is the way in which I heard the pastor of a Methodist church in southern Illinois end an argument with a layman on the train coming over here from St. Louis, says the Washington correspondent of the St. Louis Globe-Democrat in a dispatch to his paper from Cincinnati. The dispatch continues: The layman, paying due respect to the cloth of his opponent, was trying to convince him that he should not support Mr. Taft for the presidency and instead should vote for his Democratic opponent. The churchman defended the principles of the Republican party and, as indicated, defended the man for whom he said he expected to vote from his personal standpoint of a churchman, "because he is the highest type of a Christian gentleman."

It gave me a new idea about Mr. Taft. It seemed to answer some of the criticisms I had heard of the Republican candidate and his creed. In recent years the Democratic candidate has interlarded his well paid Chautauqua lectures with Sunday sermons before religious and semireligious societies. It seems that he has made the most of this influence in this campaign, and I was curious to discover on my arrival here whether there was support from the church and semireligious elements in the country for the Republican nominee.

My arrival in this connection could not have been better timed. As I entered the office of Mr. Taft's private secretary Friday I saw Bishop J. C. Hartzell of the Methodist Episcopal church emerging from a conference with Mr. Taft. The bishop, I knew, has episcopal supervision over the work of his great church in Africa. He has been so engaged for the past twelve years and has met and formed the acquaintance of many leading men not only in Africa, but in Europe and America. His acquaintance and influence within the Methodist church are second to those of few men, as he was for fifteen years an officer of the society which founded and now maintains a system of institutions of learning among both white and colored people in the southern states. He came to induce Mr. Taft to make a speech in Chicago before a society of which the bishop's son, Rev. M. C. Hartzell, is president.

It seemed odd to attempt to interview a churchman of his prominence on a political question at the headquarters of the Republican candidate, but I asked him for his view of Mr. Taft and the support of him by Christian people. He answered very readily:

"The American people are to be congratulated upon the fact that whether Mr. Taft or Mr. Bryan is elected president of the United States they will have a man at the head of the nation who is not only clean in moral character, but whose pen and speech and example are always for the best ideals of our civilization as represented in the teachings of the Christian church."

The bishop thought for a moment and then continued: "On some theological points I differ from both. As a good Presbyterian I suppose Mr. Bryan assents to the doctrine of 'divine decrees,' which teach that from all eternity it has been fixed who should be saved and who should be lost. I do not so read Scriptures. Mr. Taft, I understand, is one of the Edward Everett Hale type, believing that Christ was a divinely perfect man whose precepts and life on earth are the key to man's salvation in time and eternity. With the church I believe that in that perfect man dwelt the divine nature."

Applying his discussion in a practical way, Bishop Hartzell continued: "Which of these men I shall vote for will not be decided by their religious beliefs, but what they are as men and by the principles and policies they stand for in the administration of the government. I believe that in acting upon this view, as an American citizen, I am in harmony with the spirit and purpose of the founders of our republic, who put into the constitution that there should be 'no religious test as to qualifications to any office or public trust under the United States.' My conviction is that the future safety of the nation depends very largely upon our people heeding that constitutional prohibition. Our nation owes much in moral character, statesmanship, literature, art and religion to those who have not been in strict harmony with some of the dogmas of the church. The days of the inquisition are past."

Secretary Root on Tariff Wars.

Threatened tariff wars between the United States and Germany and the United States and France have been averted by commercial agreements under the power conferred upon the president in the third section of the Dingley tariff act.

Perhaps the Bryan managers display such fondness for campaign rainbows because they dream of the traditional pots of gold at their end.

It is possible to concede that after Mr. Gompers' speeches in Texas that state may go Democratic.

THE RICHFORD ELEVATOR DISASTER

Fourteen Lives Were Lost In the Explosion and Fire

Richford, Vt., Oct. 9.—It is now certain that fourteen people met death as the result of the explosion and subsequent fire in the big grain elevator here Wednesday. A careful canvass among those who escaped death resulted in the discovery that Oliver Draper, a foreman, is among the missing.

A part of the embers cooled sufficiently yesterday to enable a search to be begun, and very soon the charred form of what was once a human being was found. The clothing had been burned completely off, so that there was very little that could lead to identification. A belt buckle and a watch were found nearby and from there it is thought possible the body may be that of Lucius Wright.

Last night the flames of the burning grain pile, which is about thirty feet high, illuminated the village brilliantly and were visible for many miles.

No move toward an investigation of the elevator explosion and the death of the fourteen victims has been made as yet, but the selectmen will probably take some action in this direction today.

Only one theory of the cause of the explosion is held. That is that the grain dust and chaff which had been accumulating for seventeen years in out of the way corners of the building became overheated, and, igniting spontaneously, liberated explosive gases.

REQUESTS R. DENIED

Colonel Stewart's Arguments Fail to Move Army Retiring Board

Washington, Oct. 9.—For almost four hours yesterday Colonel W. F. Stewart of the army, who has come to be known as the Arizona "exile," struggled, but in vain, with the retiring board before which he has been ordered, to obtain permission to summon witnesses to prove that he is not incapacitated for army service and that, therefore, he should not be arbitrarily retired. He gave the names of thirteen witnesses whom he desired to have called and when he failed to obtain the board's permission to that end his attorney announced that the colonel himself would take the stand in support of his plea that he is capable of performing the duties of a colonel in the coast artillery.

When the board convened, J. W. Latimer, counsel for Stewart, proceeded to cross-question Colonel Arthur and Major Edie regarding their report as the medical experts of the board on the condition of Stewart's health. Both of them stated that Stewart is afflicted with heart disease to such an extent that any over-exertion might result disastrously to him. The fact was brought out that Stewart has been a victim of heart disease for the past thirty-five years.

Mr. Latimer asked permission to show the record of Stewart's service, how many leaves of absence the colonel had had during the past twenty-five years, stating that his object was to show that he had been almost continuously on duty. The request was refused.

Mr. Latimer also made a request that Stewart should be permitted to make the ninety-mile ride required by the military authorities and to follow it with the walk which is required as an alternative for the ride, but the request was denied. The board will meet again today.

NEWS IN BRIEF

Meningitis brought on by excitement attendant upon his first ride in an automobile caused the death of Edward H Freeman, 65 years old, of Gloucester, R. I. He had been in excellent health until he took the ride.

W. S. Carter of Peoria, Ills., was elected grand master of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen to succeed John Hanahan.

During a motor cycle race at the Copperhite track at Burke, Va., James Connelly, one of the participants, ran into a post and received injuries which resulted in his death.

Comptroller of the Currency Murray has decided to put into immediate action a plan for the formation of eleven districts of national bank examiners, with a chairman who will preside over quarterly meetings of all the examiners in each of the districts.

Stephen A. Douglas, son and namesake of the great political rival of Abraham Lincoln, died suddenly at his home at Chicago. He was 58 years old.

Joseph H. Choate was authorized by a meeting of prominent men at New York to appoint a committee of fifteen to make plans for a celebration of the 100th anniversary of the birth of President Lincoln on Feb. 12, 1909.

James Gourlay, a prominent granite manufacturer, died at his home at Westerly, R. I. He was vice president and general manager of the New England Granite works. He was born in Scotland 56 years ago.

William A. Fay, a lumber dealer, was fined $100 by Judge Lummus at Lynn, Mass., for operating an automobile while he was under the influence of intoxicating liquor.

Florence Belle, 4 years old, fell from the third-story window of a tenement at Fall River, Mass., and was instantly killed, death resulting from a broken neck.

A gang of Italians employed on the Plainville, Conn., water department went on strike after being refused higher wages. Most of the men returned to Boston.

AMUSEMENTS.

Keith's Theatre.

Alice Lloyd, the English comedienne who is making her second visit to Boston ,has again become the talk of the town, and the result is crowded houses at Keith's theatre. She has been held over for another week, special arrangements having been made to prolong her appearance in vaudeville, and the engagement is one of the most successful ever played at this popular house. Nothwithstanding the fact that Miss Lloyd is proving such a magnet ,the surrounding bill is even stronger than that of last week ,which was such a record breaker. Another strong attraction is Julius Steger and Company playing the "Fifth Commandment," a piece that has been a sort of a revelation in vaudeville. La Sylphe is another sensational feature that may be held over. The entire bill is made up of features of this character including the Adelman Musical Ensemble; Johnston and Hardy; Piccolo's Midgets, Leo Donnelly, Marseilles, Shungopavi, and a number of new acts to be announced later, making up a bill that has been seldom seen in vaudeville.

Boston Theatre.

The welcome received by the Boston Theatre Stock Company last week seems to leave no doubt as to the place held by this organization in the estimation of the theatregoers of the Hub, and that it is destined to play an even more important part, is evident from what has already been learned of the plans of Mr. B. F. Keith in regard to it. For a second week, for instance, there has been secured one of the greatest successes of recent years, one that has never been seen outside of the highest priced houses. This attraction will be "Salomy Jane," in which Miss Eleanor Gordon will appear in the title role. There is no other person now on the stage who is better fitted for this splendid character than Miss Gordon. She is a western girl, and in a play of this kind has never failed to bring with her a true atmosphere of the prairie and the mountain. The play in itself is unquestionably one of the very best that has been built around the stories of Brete Harte, and the author, Paul Armstrong, made his reptation of a playwright with it. It is in four acts, beautifully staged ,and laid among the Californian redwoods.

Castle Square Theatre.

There is a humor and liveliness to Clyde Fitch's comedies that makes every one of them a pleasurable entertainment. One of his best is "The Stubborness of Geraldine," and it will be given at the Castle Square during the coming week, beginning with a Monday matinee. Its plot deals with an American girl wha has been left an orphan in the care of a frivolous old uncle. Not wishing his life upset by the care of her, he sends her to Germany for education, and returning to America shortly after His death, she is followed by a Hungarian nobleman who fell in love with her at a ball in Buda Pesth. Complications arises through a confusion of the identity of this nobleman with a brother who resembles him, and the play proceeds to a delightful and comic conclusion. It is filled with mirthful situations and laughable dialogue, and in comedy it offers some of Clyde Fitch's very best. The John Craig stock company will be especially adapted to bring out all the romance and humor in this play. It should be remembered that matinees are given every day in the week and that they are especially attractive to playgoers who are unable to attend the theatre in the evening.

The Orpheum Theatre.

The Orpheum theatre has now fallen into the swing of its vaudeville season and for the coming week the bill offered is not only unusually strong, bue exceptionally varied. The feature of the week's bill is the first and only serious presentation of the season's success, "Salome," presented under the personal direction of Frank Rigo, stage director of the Conried Metropolitan Opera house, with competent cast and special scenic investiture. The production will include the famous dance of the "Seven Veils. Mlle. Edna Porter, interpretes the dancer's role. Another unusual feautre is the first appearance here of the Australian treefellers who have issued a challenge to Edward Moote the champion wood chopper of Vermont who recently performed a remarkable feat at Weatherfield. They offer a cash prize of $50 to anyone who will defeat them either at tree chopping or log sawing at any performance ,and in addition anyone who can equal all records held by these two will be entered in the next contest at Melbourne Australia, all his expenses paid to Australia and reurn. The money prize accompanying the title is $25,000. The Orpheum orchestra under the direction of Charles Frank has become a big feature in the vaudeville program, and the moriscope shows the very latest of motion pictures.

STATE RAILWAYS IN JAPAN.

Loss of Taxes and Poor Service Cause Public Dissatisfaction.

A special correspondent of the New York Evening Post writes from Tokyo in regard to the railways, which are now practically all in the hands of the state. The official report for 1907 shows that the receipts exceeded the operating expenses by only 17,230,786 yen. As the interest on the bonds is 24,000,000 yen this means a net loss for the year of nearly 7,000,000 yen ($3,500,000). To this loss must also be added the loss of taxes to the amount of 5,500,000 yen formerly paid by the railroad companies. The writer continues:

"At present the various municipalities that formerly were accustomed to depend largely for revenue on the taxes received from railways are suddenly deprived of this source of income and find themselves in rather straitened circumstances. Not unnaturally these are agitating the proposal that the authorities should allow them to levy local taxes especially on railway stations, but it appears altogether unlikely that the government will acquiesce in the proposition.

"Moreover, the authorities are charged with a lamentable lack of official capacity in the management of the railways. There are too many officials and too much red tape. Cars are said to be neither so clean nor so comfortable as under the regime of the private companies. There are constant complaints that the trains do not run on time and that no one assumes any responsibility therefor. Accidents, too, are alarmingly on the increase. Ticket agents refuse to furnish change, the applicant being referred to a money changer outside, an official who charges a snug percentage for breaking a note.

"More serious still, large quantities of freight are piling up all along the lines, and merchants as well as shippers generally are put to needless loss and inconvenience. The government is accused of mixing up the railway accounts with the national budget in such a manner that the public cannot follow the financial progress of the enterprise. During the last session of the diet an extensively signed petition was presented to that body from the leading men of the nation praying that the railway accounts be kept separate from the national budget, after the manner of a private corporation. The government, however, has shown no disposition to put itself in the light of a private railway company responsible for profit and loss to interested stockholders."

The Shadow of Socialism.

The tendency of municipal ownership to extend beyond the field of public utilities into the realm of ordinary business is illustrated by protests from widely separated localities.

In Seattle a dealer in electrical supplies has filed a petition asking that the city be restrained from competing with him, alleging that the sale or lease by the city of fixtures and other materials is not permitted by its charter. He holds that the competition is unfair because the city makes no profit on its transactions.

In Leeds, England, the Master Builders' association has made a report advocating the abolition of the city works department, in which it submits that "the true interests of the workmen are not advanced and that municipal trading of this character is most unfair to private traders, that its continuance is against public policy, and last, but not least, that it is indefensible on financial grounds."

Municipal ownership in England has already driven hundreds of private firms out of business, and the people are awakening to the fact that further extension of municipal trading means socialism pure and simple.

City Forbids Gas Stoves.

President Foote of the Morristown (N. J.) Gas company is again trying to persuade the common council of Madison to grant his company the right to distribute gas there. Madison adjoins Morristown directly to the east. It has been a long struggle to get this permission, for such has been asked for, to the writer's knowledge, for twenty years. The scheme was always nonsuited, the objection being that Madison owns a municipally operated electric lighting plant. The last attempt, however, seems to have a fair chance of success, since Mr. Foote and associates are willing to agree that gas shall only be used for heating, cooking and power purposes.—American Gas Light Journal.

The gas company would have got its franchise long ago if the electric plant had been owned by a company instead of by the city. Think of a place where a city monopoly deprives all the women of modern appliances for cooking!

A False Premise.

Advocates of municipal ownership point to the high character of the governing bodies of British cities as a proof that municipal ownership draws men of standing into public life and purifies city government. The fact is just the reverse. The best men in British cities were in their councils before municipal ownership was undertaken to any considerable extent, while the later tendency has been to eliminate such men partly because they cannot afford the time necessary to the proper management of such undertakings and partly because they are opposed for re-election by their subordinates.

Not Exempt From Taxation.

The supreme court of Vermont has just decided that a municipal lighting plant that furnishes commercial service or that supplies street lights to another town is not exempt from taxation. This decision is in line with those of other states.

Bryan Still For Free Silver.

William Jennings Bryan has been asked to give a frank reply to the following question:

"If you were president and an exigency should arise in which you were called upon to exercise your discretion affirmatively to maintain the parity between gold and silver, what would you do?"

The inquiry is perfectly legitimate. It relates to a momentous issue which Mr. Bryan himself forced upon the people, and his utterances upon that issue have never been rescinded or modified so far as the public is aware. His record is written in unmistakable language. In a speech on Oct. 22, 1896, he said:

"I want you to understand that in this great contest for free silver I am enlisted, not for a year, not for four years. I am enlisted for the war, no matter how long that war may last. I shall not cease to fight until the gold standard, which has cursed every nation that ever had it, is driven out of the United States across the ocean and back to the old world, where it belongs."

There is no equivocation in that declaration. It is not the utterance of a mere politician juggling a fad of the hour to advance his own ambitions. It is rather the warcry of a zealot who profoundly believes that he has discovered an infallible measure for the promotion of the public welfare and is resolved to fight for it until it has been written into the law of the land. Mr. Bryan's enmity to the gold standard is dangerous chiefly because it is absolutely sincere. He is enlisted for the war, and, having been repulsed in 1896, he was again at the front in 1900, and in a speech in Cooper Union, New York, Oct. 27 of that year he exclaimed:

"I have made no attempt to conceal my views on the money question. I would be unworthy of your confidence if I changed my mind over to suit every occasion and in order to win votes. If I should surrender my ideas on silver to become president, I might as well surrender my ideas on trusts, imperialism and militarism."

It is only fair to Mr. Bryan to take him at his word. Whenever he has spoken on the money question he has repeated his pledge of loyalty to the principles he advocated in 1896 and 1900. There is not the shadow of reason to doubt that he is in favor of free silver just as earnestly today as he was twelve years ago. It would be a reflection upon his sincerity to assume to the contrary.

Mr. Bryan's clear, consistent record on this question and his unrelenting hostility to the gold standard both warrant the conclusion that if he were president and an emergency should arise in which he were called upon to exercise his discretion affirmatively to maintain the parity between gold and silver he would promptly refuse to do so. In such an emergency he would find a longed for opportunity to strike down a monetary system which he has honestly and consistently opposed. If his own words mean anything they mean that he would let the gold standard go straight to smash, thus opening the way for free silver and financial chaos.

Bryan, Purveyor of Proverbs.

In the course of a speech at Elnora, Ind., Oct. 6, 1900, William Jennings Bryan again assured his countrymen that the fight for free silver had not been abandoned, but would go on until victory was won. "When I see a man," he continued, "who has learned by experience what he ought to have learned by reason I am reminded of one of Solomon's proverbs, which is, 'The wise man foreseeth the evil and hideth himself, but the foolish pass on and are punished.'"

Mr. Bryan's purpose in quoting from Solomon was to admonish his hearers that it was time for the wise man to get into line for free coinage at 16 to 1 and that the foolish who refused to do so would surely be punished. Everybody knows what happened in November of that year. Indeed, some of those who heartlessly disobeyed Mr. Bryan's warning were cruel enough after election day to pass out to him a few selections of their own from the proverbial wisdom of Solomon. For example:

"The wise in heart will receive commandments, but the prating fool shall fall."

"It is as sport to a fool to do mischief, but a man of understanding hath wisdom."

"A wise man feareth and departeth from evil, but the foolish rageth and is confident."

All of which, it is respectfully submitted, shows that Mr. Bryan was just as indiscreet in dragging the proverbs of Solomon into his stump speeches as he was when he adopted the "cross of gold" as one of his campaign trappings.

When the votes are counted Mr. Bryan will feel as though he had been run over by a snellpoordelooszonderspooewegpetroolrij, which is the Flemish for "automobile."

Laudations of Mr. Bryan for his winning ways are in order, but he would go farther politically if he had some winning issues.

Quincy Locals Briefly Told

Mrs. John H. Wheble of Field street passed away on Thursday evening in her 78th year.

Russell Hammond of Billings street has returned to his duties at West Newton, Pennsylvania.

Rev. E. D. Webber will close his pastorate at the Wollaston Baptist church on Sunday evening.

Miss Laura Coles of Faxon road is spending the week in Lowell where she is enjoying many festivities.

The Fore River football team line up against the Howard & Bullough team on Saturday at Quincy Point.

Rev. A. R. Atwood returned today from Worcester where he has been attending the State Sunday school convention.

John L. Merrill, D. M. D., Tufts '08, has been appointed by the faculty of Tufts College Dental school, as assistant instructor in Orthodontia.

The estate of William Wilson on Squantum street has been newly painted and is a credit to that vicinity with its green lawn and well kept garden.

Mr. and Mrs. James Kennedy of 11 Lunt street are receiving congratulations on the birth of twins, (a son and a daughter), Thursday, October 8.

The service at the Point church, Sunday morning is of special interest. Col Anderson will recall reminiscences of his 50 years of service as a minister of the gospel.

H. B. Cole, master of commercial department at High school has started Monday and Thursday evening classes at High school building. As work is given individually, students may enter any time and young people who enroll will receive careful attention by a practical office man.

The Squantum car is soon to appear in new curtains and fresh paint and as long as patrons know that better things are coming, they do not mind the inconvenience of the present car. The summer and fall season of travel on the line between Squantum and Neponset has rivalled that of any previous year.

It is rumored that the old house which used to stand on the corner of Atlantic and Hancock streets, and which has recently been removed further toward the Atlantic station on Hancock street, sold at a sum less than one hundred dollars. The building has been remodelled and set upon a pretentious foundation and the buyer has moved in and finds his new quarters extremely comfortable.

Breaks and robberies are getting altogether too numerous for the peace of mind of the residents of Wollaston Park. The last one and fourth reported, was at the house of Harry Brown corner of Elm avenue and Kemper street. On Friday evening, Oct. 2, the family were at a neighbors, and returned before 9 o'clock to find that their home had been entered and ransacked, and that several valued rings and two gold watches were missing.

PLAYED IN DEAD EARNEST

Chicago Overcomes New York In Battle For Pennant

GIANTS LOST IN THE THIRD

"Matty" Lost His Form In That Inning and Let In Four Runs--Hope of Overcoming Handicap In "Lucky Seventh" Was But Fleeting--Gloom Settles Down on New York City--A Display of Rowdyism

New York, Oct. 9.—"Chicago, 4; New York, 2." This in a phrase was the tale told at the end of the most intensely decisive baseball game played in this country in many years and which decided the National League championship for the season of 1908. In the presence of a record-breaking crowd which swamped the capacity of the grounds and left still many thousands outside long before the game began, a game was played in deadly earnest—straight baseball, with no "frills"—to settle as tensely dramatic a situation as the most ardent lover of sport could imagine.

The pennant does not wave above the skyscrapers. Its winners, who arrived here yesterday morning, have departed. The large black headlines in the newspapers—"New York, 2; Chicago, 4;"—are like mourning captions over the story of some great personage's death.

It was great baseball, witnessed by the greatest of great baseball crowds—which would have been more than doubled could the fences have been stretched out into a circle of sufficient size to include all those who had clamored vainly for admittance, and who thronged everything that offered the least possibility of catching even an echo of the applause within. Spectators who know the game, however bitter they may feel over the decision which made the game compulsory, seem to concede that the work of the Chicago team was practically perfect.

The Giants were outplayed. They lacked, among other things, that certain indefinable something, absence of which is probably in this instance explained by the results of the great and continuous strain they have been under the past week. Chicago was superb in form. Brilliant, snappy, errorless fielding, artistic base-running and opportune hitting in the third inning, which made effective in scores a double by Chance, won the game. New York could not hit at critical times. Mathewson could not hold his arm power and the effect of a moment's lapse in that third inning could not be overcome. McGraw's substitution of Wiltse in the box the last two innings may or may not have been wise. The home team needed a long hit; needed the tremendous rallying power which Mathewson has more than once inspired in them at the very finish, and brought victory out of seeming defeat.

An Impressive Moment

When the word "play" came, a hush fell over all—the tenseness could be felt in the very atmosphere. The cowbells and horns were unused. The game was on. It held the crowd as in a spell. The players felt the tension—that was evident. Chicago plainly showed it and Sheckard, facing the famous Mathewson, struck out.

The deafening greeting of this was in striking contrast with the unbroken silence as, at the game's end, the home team, out one, two, three, rushed across the diamond to their clubhouse.

The two great innings of the game were the third and the seventh. In the former Chicago made all their runs. In the latter—opening with tremendous enthusiasm following the loud-shouted slogan: "The Giants' lucky seventh"—hopes renewed, died, after one run, which kept company with that secured in the first inning on the mammoth bulletin board far out afield.

The display of rowdyism at the very end of the game by a few disgruntled spectators marred in a measure what had hitherto been fair treatment of the visiting players. It was after the game was over and the crowd had swarmed over the field that a number of roughs made an attack on Captain Chance, who, with his fellow-players, was making his way to the clubhouse. Several pop bottles were thrown and one struck Chance in the neck, inflicting what was said to be a slight bruise.

On every hand could be heard the verdict of New York fans concerning the winning of the pennant by Chicago. It was but natural that gloom should follow the blasting of New York's pennant hopes, but many New Yorkers took consolation by saying: "New York had already won the pennant; Chicago had no right to it."

Score by innings:

New York ..... 1 0 0 0 0 0 1 0 0—2

Base hits—Chicago, 8; New York, 5. Errors—Chicago, 0; New York, 1. Batteries—Pfeister, Brown and Kling; Mathewson, Wiltse and Bresnahan.

The Chicago-Detroit Games

Cincinnati, Oct. 9.—Tomorrow at Detroit the world's baseball championship series will begin. The remainder of the series will be played Sunday and Monday in Chicago, and Tuesday and Wednesday in Detroit, according to an announcement made by the national baseball commission at the end of the New York-Chicago game.

Practical Work at Y. M. C. A. School

Enrollments for the Y. M. C. A. evening school is on and is progressing with much satisfaction to the management. The class work commences next week Tuesday night, when the course in mechanical drawing begins. L. B. Doan of the engine draughting room at the Fore River will teach this class again this year.

On Thursday night three other courses commence, practical mathematics, under the direction of J. E. Neary, the instructor of the Fore River apprentice school; practical ship construction, taught again by J. B. Barnes; architectural drawing and joinery taught by Joseph Carruthers, the expert designer of the Hull department at the shipyard.

The school for granite workers will open also on Thursday night with the veteran teacher H. W. Beattie at the head of the department. Free hand, monumental drawing and design, clay-modelling and cartoon work comes into this department, and the prospects are good for a large school.

The Y. M. C. A. school has now been running for five seasons and is known throughout the city for its thorough and practical work. Some most interesting records are in the possession of the association of young men who have been so benefited by this supplementary education along the line of their daily occupation that many have secured promotion and better pay. The school costs comparatively little is consequently within the reach of any ambitious young man.

In selecting furs about which your personal knowledge is necessarily limited it is always safest to purchase from a responsible dealer who has a reputation earned by years of testing to maintain, and who does not desire and cannot afford to treat you unfairly.

For nearly fifty years we have been established in Boston as manufacturers of High Grade Furs, collecting the skins from all over the world and making them into every conceivable kind of fur attire.

This long experience in satisfying the needs of the most discriminating persons, has taught us how to give the largest possible value for every dollar expended with us.

All of our garments are fashioned after the latest Paris and London styles and are guaranteed in every respect to give perfect satisfaction, and to be superior to other fur garments when price, quality and workmanship are considered.

This is why shrewd fur buyers prefer to deal with a long established house whose entire business is centered in one location and whose workrooms are always open to inspection.

All we ask is for you to call and then decide where to purchase.

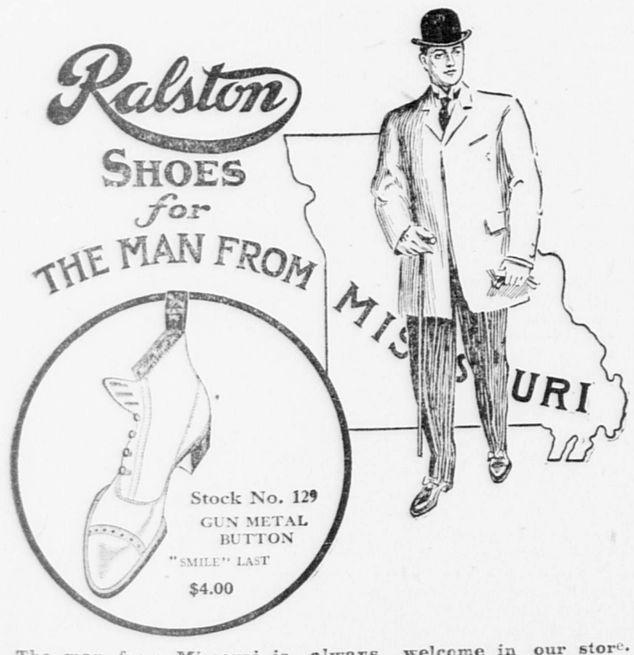
Ralston SHOES for THE MAN FROM MISSOURI



The man from Missouri is always welcome in our store. We claim much for RALSTON SHOES, but nothing which we cannot substantiate and it pleases us to hear a man say "show me."

We've been in the shoe business for a long time, but Ralston Shoes are the only shoes we know which are stylish enough to please the eyes of the most fastidious dresser without making his feet pay the penalty. There's a reason. Will you say "show me?"

GOLDEN JUBILEE

Fifty Years In the Ministry To Be Observed By Rev. Anderson

October is certainly an anniversary month for Rev. Edward Anderson of this city, one of the best known clergymen about Boston. His golden jubilee in the ministry will be observed at the Quincy Point church on Sunday and Tuesday. Tomorrow he will round out fifty years in the ministry and will preach the sermon. On Tuesday the church where he was formerly pastor will tender him a banquet.

In a few weeks Mr. and Mrs. D. E. Wadsworth will move into their new house on Presidents hill, accompanied by Col. Anderson and on Nov. 19 he will observe his 75th birthday be entertaining the Authors Club. He also became a Mason fifty years ago this month.

Col. Anderson was born in Boston, Nov. 19, 1833, and was the son of Rev. Dr. Rufus Anderson LLD and Eliza (Hill) Anderson. He received his early education in Roxbury, and after being graduated from the Roxbury Latin school, he entered Phillips academy at Andover. On leaving this latter institution he was tutored by his mother, a highly educated and remarkably brilliant woman. During his youth Rev. Mr. Anderson was prominently identified with many of the movements that had for their object the abolition of slavery and, in 1855, he went to Kansas, where he became a member of the free state.

In the prelude to the civil war that followed the rise of John Brown in Kansas, Rev. Mr. Anderson participated in all of the battles fought in that state, remaining there until Henry Gary was sent there as governor. After this he moved to South Bend, Ind., where he was professor in the Collegiate institute. He was licensed to preach at Kalamazoo, Mich. Aug. 7, 1858, and was ordained to the ministry Oct. 13 of the same year. His first pastorate was in Chicago, where he took charge of the Calvary Baptist church.

At the outbreak of the civil war Rev. Mr. Anderson became chaplain of the 37th Illinois infantry and was with his regiment in all the engagements fought in Kansas until after the battle of Pea Ridge. In February, 1864, Rev. Mr. Anderson, who had held a commissioned office during the free state war in Kansas, was given command of the 12th Indiana cavalry, and upon reaching his regiment, found a brigade of cavalry awaiting him, which he comanded until the close of the war.

As an officer of the union army, Col. Anderson saw much hard service, his brigade fighting with the armies of the Cumberland, Tennessee and the Gulf. At the close of the war he settled in Ashtabula, O., and later moved to Jamestown, N. Y. While in the latter place he was editor of the Chataqua Democrat. From Jamestown he went to Quincy, Ill., where he was pastor of the Congregational church for eight years. From Quincy he went to Toledo, and from there to Columbus in the same state. After filling pastorates in those places he went to Norwalk, Conn., and later to Danielson in the same state. His wife died in Danielson, and Rev. Mr. Anderson went to Chicago to live, where he resided until he came to Quincy to live with his daughter, Mrs. Dexter E. Wadsworth, in 1898.

While in Quincy he served as pastor of the Quincy Point Congregational church for a year, and then became pastor of Berkeley temple, Boston. Since then he has served in Weymouth, North Easton and Milton.

Rev. Mr. Anderson is a member of several secret societies and military organizations. While he was pastor in Norwalk, Conn., he was chaplain of the Loyal Legion of New York and was chaplain-in-chief of the Grand Army while the late Gov. Ray was commander-in-chief.

Rev. Mr. Anderson is one of the most accomplished after-dinner speakers in and around Boston, and his presence is constantly sought at Grand Army dinners and campfires.

Besides Mrs. Wadsworth, Rev. Mr. Anderson has a son who is instructor in physical science at Yale college, and another son who occupies a similar position in a college at Columbus, Ohio.

WARNINGS ARE UNHEEDED

Servians Demand King's Abdication Unless He Declares War

POWERS ARE IN A QUANDARY

Difficulties In the Way of Arranging a Conference of European States --Troops and Populace of Roumelian Capital Enthusiastically Receive Prince Ferdinand--Alleged Plot of Kaiser to Foment Trouble

London, Oct. 10.—Despite warnings to King Peter from Great Britain and France that the people of Servia must be kept in check, the populace of Belgrade held demonstrations yesterday and demanded the resignation of the cabinet and the abdication of King Peter unless he declared war against Austria-Hungary, which has refused to accept Servia's protest against her annexing of Bosnia and Herzegovina.

Ten thousand Austro-Hungarian troops are garrisoned along the Drina river between Bosnia and Servia ready for eventualities, and it is said 150,000 men can be thrown into Servian territory in twenty-four hours.

M. Iswolsky, the Russian minister of foreign affairs, arrived in London last night and will confer today with Sir Edward Grey, British secretary of state for foreign affairs, concerning the calling together of the powers signatory to the treaty of Berlin in an endeavor to bring order out of the present chaos in the Balkans.

The different powers are feeling about for a common ground upon which they can unite for the calling of a conference. Austria will not have the new status of Bosnia and Herzegovina discussed. Bulgaria will not consent to have the complete independence of Bulgaria brought into question. Russia may not demand the opening of the Dardanelles, but she will seek some compensation. Italy demands that Austria abandon the protection of the port of Montenegro. Germany's quid pro quo is not known, but it must be of value to her.

Turkey, at first favorable to the proposed conference, begins to see that there is little in it for her. Her compensations will be "moral," the withdrawal of capitulations, removal of restrictions in Macedonia and money returns for the Oriental railway seizure and for Eastern Rumelia, but no return to her of her lost provinces. Possibly the powers may whip Crete into submission, but it is doubtful.

Yesterday at Candia, the largest city in Crete, the militia followed the example of their compatriots at Canea, the capital of the island, and took the oath of fidelity to Greece.

Off For the Ægean Sea

Valetta, Island of Malta, Oct. 10.—Battleship Prince of Wales, flagship of Prince Louis of Battenburg, the battleship Glory, the cruisers Diana and Suffolk and the torpedo boat destroyers Angler and Banshee, have sailed for the Aegean sea. The squadron will be followed later by the battleship Canopus and the cruiser Minerva.

Satisfied With Ferdinand's Rule

Philippopolis, Bulgaria, Oct. 10.—"The Czar of Bulgaria," or Prince Ferdinand as he is still known officially tothe rest of the world, entered Philippopolis, the capital of Eastern Rumelia, last evening. He was greeted by salvos of artillery and the enthusiastic shouts of the populace. He was welcomed at the railroad station, gaily decorated in his honor, by the civil and military officials and high dignitaries of the church, who accompanied him on a triumphal tour of the city.

Outside the railroad station the people had erected an imposing triumphal arch. The mayor and the municipal corporation presented Ferdinand with the customary bread and salt, while hundreds of schoolgirls waved flags and showered flowers in the path of their ruler. The procession traversed the streets, which were all lined with troops, to the cathedral, where the clergy officiated at a mass. Philippopolis is filled with immense crowds from the surrounding country, and the demonstrative reception given Ferdinand shows that the people fully approve of his declaration of independence and his assumption of full sovereignty over Rumelia.

Emperor William Author of Plot

Paris, Oct. 10.—The Journal Des Debats publishes a letter from what it calls "an unusually well-informed source," describing the Balkan situation as a veritable plot of which Emperor William is the real author, with Baron Von Aehrenthal, the Austro-Hungarian foreign minister, a willing tool. It was the emperor's purpose to humiliate Great Britain as a friend of the new regime in Turkey and at the same time to inflict a blow on the "Young Turks," whose ascendancy threatened the German influence in the empire. Ferdinand and Bulgaria were drawn in, the writer of the letter declares, in order to involve Russian sympathy and paralyze opposition from that quarter.

New Flag Not Recognized

Constantinople, Oct. 10.—One of the boats of a Bulgarian company which runs a steamship line between Constantinople and Varna came near getting into serious trouble as a result of flying the new Bulgarian royal flag, which is unknown among the nations of the world. The steamer attempted to enter the Bosphorus and the observers in the forts, not knowing her nationality, fired two blank shots across her bows. Thereupon the steamer turned around and departed.

General Wounded In Sham Battle

Askabad, Turkestan, Oct. 10.—During the maneuvers of the Turkestan army corps near here General Mistchenko, who played a conspicuous part in the Russo-Japanese war and who is now governor general of Turkestan, was slightly wounded in the leg by a bullet in a sham battle. A revolutionist plot is suspected. The maneuvers were suspended and the weapons and ammunition of the troops were examined. Ball cartridges and traces of shot in the barrels of a number of rifles were discovered. An investigation is in progress.

CAUNT RETURNS TO LYNN

Men on Strike Inclined to Attack Those Who Are at Work

Lynn, Mass., Oct. 10.—Joseph Caunt arrived home late last night. He declined to say where he had been or what his attitude on the strike question now is. In regard to the conference planned for today he said he was ignorant of the fact that one was to be held, but if a meeting was arranged he would be glad to attend. The other shoe manufacturers, when approached on this subject, all professed to know nothing about it, but all expressed a willingness to attend if one was called.

The first evidences of trouble with strikebreakers occurred yesterday afternoon, when several hundred striking lasters and sympathizers gathered around the building where strikebreakers were employed by Harney Bros. and the J. L. Walker company to attack the strikebreakers when they came out. A squad of police officers, however, were sent to the scene when the hour for the dismissal of the employes approached, and succeeded in clearing the street around the building.

The seventeen Armenians employed by Harney Bros. were escorted by a cordon of police to their lodgings at East Lynn, and the several Hebrews from the J. L. Walker company factory were also given police protection until they took a train for their homes in Boston.

Business Agent Tracy of the Lasting Machine Operators' union says that the only issue of the strike is the trouble at the Caunt factory, and that the grievances of the men at other factories are petty ones and can be adjusted individually after the real trouble has been settled.

PHILADELPHIA'S GREAT PAGEANT

History of Over Two Centuries Is Vividly Portrayed

Philadelphia, Oct. 10.—Like pages out of the past and fraught with the memories of 225 years, the first great historical pageant planned in this country took place before 750,000 people. In this culminating feature of Philadelphia's notable celebration of Founders Week there were 5000 men and women in costume. There were seventy floats, representing months of careful study and faithful to the last detail in their portrayal of the scenes selected from the long span of years that have marked the growth of the city.

All the romance, all the legendery, all the rugged story of the days of long ago, were comprehensively grouped in this notable display. People fought to get a glimpse of it and hundreds of women were taken fainting from the congested corners. Every ambulance in the city was brought into use and every hospital was filled.

The pageant moved along in vivid change from the time of the "Onrust," the first ship to enter the Delaware in 1616, to the present day, with a concluding scene of prophecy and civic pride representing "The City Beautiful." It was a wealth of color and a fidelity to history. The pageant was prepared entirely at the city's expense and there was no stinting anywhere.

Æroplane Ascends Ninety Feet

Le Mans, Oct. 10.—Wilbur Wright made six short flights in his aeroplane last evening. Among the passengers carried by him were Lazare Weiller and M. Deutsch de la Meurthe. The machine rose to a height of ninety feet during the evolutions.

WHICH WAS THE GUILTY MAN?

[Original.]

I am retired from the banking business after thirty years' service. On one occasion during this long term a singular thing occurred. The bank I was connected with was a small affair, and we rarely had in the vault over fifty or sixty thousand dollars in currency, but at one time, owing to a peculiar financial condition of the country, we had over two hundred thousand. This money had accumulated during the week and reached the above figure on Saturday at the close of banking hours.

That Saturday night I fell to thinking about this great sum on hand. Our safe was an old pattern and could be readily opened by any bank robber with an ordinary capacity for his business. The combination was known to two officers of the bank (the president and cashier) and myself. I was paying teller. I was not thinking of any danger from within, only from without. The matter having once got into my head I couldn't get it out. I sat at home thinking about it till after midnight and then, without any definite purpose, put on my hat and walked to the bank, which was but a few blocks away. I strolled past the building, turned back and, yielding to an impulse, went in, made straight for the vault, saw no evidence of change and was about to turn away when a desire seized me to see that the cash was there. I was turning the combination knob when the door opened and the cashier entered.

"What are you doing here?" he asked, evidently astonished and at the same time suspicious.

"I came to see that the cash is all right. What did you come for?"

"I came for that too. I confess I didn't expect to find the teller of the bank opening the vault at this time of night."

"And I didn't expect the cashier to put in an appearance. Your tone indicates a suspicion that I am here to rob."

"I can't think of anything more suspicious than the teller of the bank opening the vault at 1 o'clock in the morning."

At that moment a door at the other end of the room opened, and who should walk in but the president. On seeing us he looked surprised.

"What's happened?" he asked quickly. "Any funds missing?"

"I think not," said the cashier. "But there is no telling how much would have been taken had I not arrived at the nick of time."

"I was worried," I faltered, "at having so large an amount of currency in the safe and could not resist an impulse to come and see that all was right."

"And count the funds!" sneered the cashier.

"What brought you?" asked the president of the cashier.

The cashier tried to stammer out a better excuse than I had given and, failing, finally blurted:

"And what brought you, for the matter of that?"

"I? I often come to the bank before going to bed to see that all is safe. Sometimes I get up at 2 or 3 o'clock in the morning, come here, look around and go home. Tonight, having so much currency in the safe, I was especially anxious."

"Having come first," I said, "on the same errand, I presume I am caught in the act."

"What were you opening the vault for?" asked the cashier. "Couldn't you see that it hadn't been tampered with?"

"I could see that it hadn't been blown open, but I couldn't see that the lock hadn't been picked or that some one knowing the combination hadn't opened it and taken the funds."

"Gentlemen," said the president, "we will have a look at the money and go home."

I was directed to open the safe. The bills were found in piles as they had been left in the afternoon, and the safe was closed, and we separated.

The next day I was called before the president for an examination, which lasted two hours, and when I came out of his private office I saw the cashier go in, as I inferred, for a similar purpose. Notwithstanding that I showed a clean record, the president and cashier after consultation decided to dismiss me.

I appealed to the board of directors, giving them a statement of the facts.

After a meeting for consultation the board gave out a decision that the meeting of the three in the bank was a coincidence, that there was no guilt attached to any one of us, but, rather, we were all to be commended for our watchfulness.

The only good this did me was that I retained my position. I was still under suspicion. This was fostered by the cashier, who, I supposed, won over the president to his views. Nevertheless the president acquiesced in the decision of the board and exonerated me.

It was but a few weeks after all this happened that we were startled at an announcement that the president had resigned and the cashier had been promoted to the vacant position. I was smarting under what I considered a blow, for, since the cashier considered me guilty of an intent to rob the bank, he would likely put me out in time, when the new president informed me that I had been promoted to succeed him as cashier.

I was thunderstruck. He did not refer to the past, and I went about my new duties in ignorance of what had happened to change the situation.

In ten days it came out that the president had lost $200,000 in the stock market. NELSON MAXWELL.

AFTER ALMOST FORTY YEARS

Colonel Stewart's Service In the Army to Be Discontinued

HE MAKES STRONG PROTEST

Exercised by Walking Eight to Fourteen Miles a Day While at Fort Grant, Being Deprived of the Use of a Horse Fit For Riding—Was Known For Years That His Heart Was Affected

Washington, Oct. 10.—The army retiring board which has been investigating the health of Colonel William F. Stewart, the so-called "Fort Grant exile," has concluded its work and, while the result of its deliberations was not officially made public, it is understood that the board found Stewart so seriously afflicted with valvular disease of the heart as to incapacitate him from further service in the army.

COLONEL W. F. STEWART.

The finding which has been agreed upon will be reported to the secretary of war and it is considered likely that Stewart's retirement by the president will follow. If not retired Stewart would have more than four years of active service and, since he is one of the oldest officers of the artillery corps, his friends contend he would stand a good chance of reaching the grade of brigadier general before leaving the active service. If retired, he will receive three-fourths of his regular pay.

Before the board took the subject up in executive session it heard a somewhat detailed statement by Stewart relative to his record in the army and listened to brief arguments by Stewart's counsel and Recorder Howland, the latter speaking for the service. Stewart was not permitted to go outside his medical record, and when his attorney made an effort to elicit from him the circumstances under which he had been transferred from Fort Barrancas, Fla., to Fort Grant, Ariz., Howland interposed positive objection, which was sustained by the board.

In his statement Stewart said that he was in the habit of taking horseback rides of from twenty to thirty miles a day for many years until his removal to Fort Grant a year ago. He found at Fort Grant only one horse and, inasmuch as that animal was a cripple, he was deprived of this opportunity for exercise. While at Fort Grant, however, he substituted walking for riding and generally covered from eight to fourteen miles a day. He never felt any ill-effects from either walking or riding, and up to a month ago he had received no warning from any physician against these forms of exercise, notwithstanding for thirty-five years he had been under the observation of army surgeons. He said that he had known ever since 1874 that his heart was affected, but he paid no attention to that fact. Stewart said that he had been in the service for almost forty years and that there were only four officers having a longer record.

"Do you wish to be retired?" asked Mr. Latimer, the colonel's counsel.

"No," responded Stewart, with emphasis.

"Why do you wish to continue in the service?" asked the lawyer.

"Because I have spent my life in the army and am fond of the service. I was born at a military post, grew up on the frontier and when I grew up entered the army. I see no reason why I should be prevented from remaining an officer until the arrival of the time for my retirement as fixed by the law."

The arguments of counsel were brief, Latimer, for Stewart, contenting himself with a retrospect of his client's service which, he said, had been the subject of much favorable comment, the only criticism being by General Grant, who said that Stewart was an able and efficient officer, but that his efficiency was marred by irascibility.

Captain Howland, in reply, contended that there was but one issue before the board and that was whether Stewart is now so seriously afflicted by heart disease as to be incapable of performing his duties as an officer in the army. He declared also that notwithstanding Stewart's long record he had spent only six months of that time in the field.

Battleships Leave Manila and Are Now Headed For Japan

Manila, Oct. 10.—The sixteen big battleships of the Atlantic fleet are now en route to Japan. Sailing orders were given by Rear Admiral Sperry for the fleet to depart two hours earlier than the announced time yesterday, and early this morning the flagship Connecticut got under way. Half an hour later all of the great ships were in motion and followed the Connecticut down the bay.

In the brilliantly sunlit morning the majestic line of warships presented a magnificent appearance, their white sides glistening as they moved slowly out to sea. The people had not been warned of the change in the hour of departure and few witnessed it. There was consequently no ceremony or demonstration of any kind, save the dipping of flags by the merchantmen and the whistling salutes by the launches in the bay. At 8:45 o'clock the long line had cleared Corregidor island, at the mouth of the bay, and headed north into the China sea.

Simultaneously with the departure of the fleet the authorities of Manila started a new campaign to eradicate cholera. The police were ordered to make two house-to-house inspections daily and the constabulary will perform ordinary police duty and guard infected houses. The disinfecting force has been increased and the general scope of the work broadened. The number of new cases reported averages ten daily.

LIVE QUIETLY AND VIRTUOUSLY

All Rich American Women Are Not "Idle and Unhappy"

New York, Oct. 10.—Cardinal Gibbons, in an interview published here, made what might be called a corrective reply to Dr. Andrew McPhail, who, in an article published in a London paper recently, was quoted as declaring that American women are idle and unhappy.

"American women of a certain class and a limited number," says the cardinal, "perhaps are the idlest and unhappiest in the world. I refer to possessors of exorbitant wealth, some of whom have neither religious principles nor domestic virtues to restrain them and employ their vast fortunes merely for the gratification of their passions. But also there is a portion of our very wealthy class that lives quietly and virtuously. Against them and against our middle and poorer classes the charge of idleness is absolutely unfair.

"The really good women of America, whose lives are actuated by sound principles," he continued, "that is the majority of them, never get into the society that the foreigner sees. He draws his unfavorable conclusions from a few extraordinary women who spend their lives and wealth in the pursuit of mad and meaningless pleasure. Of them the foreign criticism of which you speak is entirely just. This should be deplored as much by Americans as by foreigners."

The interviewer told the cardinal that McPhail likens the woman who works to a trick dog, and the cardinal replied that he admired the woman who works. "But that is a grave economical problem, which I would not discuss offhand," he added.

Gas Caused Four Deaths

Waterbury, Conn., Oct. 10.—Deputy Coroner Makepeace, in his report of an illuminating gas fatality which resulted in the death of four Italians in a boarding place here, declares no blame can attach to the tenants of the floor below, who, he believes, although they deny it, deposited a quarter in a long disused meter on their floor. They could not be expected, he says, to know that the meter supplied the floor above, where the tragedy occurred, or that a gas fixture on that floor had been torn away, leaving the pipe open. He attaches no blame to the gas company.

Fishermen Showed Fight

Sault Ste Marie, Mich., Oct. 10.—A fight with rifles between American fishermen and Canadian officers is said to have taken place on Lake Superior, opposite Whitefish point. Americans are said to have been fishing in Canadian waters at this end of the lake for some time and several days ago officers went to the scene to make a seizure. It is said that the fishermen escaped.

Woman Killed by Auto

Auburn Me., Oct. 10.—Dr. Charles E. Williams of this city and his wife were the victims of an automobile accident in Leeds. Their machine was overturned, pinning them beneath it. Mrs. Williams died a short time after she had been removed from the wreck and the condition of Williams is very serious. No one saw the accident.

Banker, Author and Statesman

Melrose, Mass., Oct. 10.—Elbridge H. Goss died at his home here after a brief illness of pneumonia, aged 78. He had been treasurer of the Melrose Savings bank for twenty-four years and was the author of numerous historical works. In 1874 and 1875 he represented his district in the Massachusetts legislature.

Town Destroyed by Typhoon

Manila, Oct. 10.—Reports from the provinces show that the typhoon inflicted considerable damage. The new town of Taft, on the Island of Samar, is said to have been completely destroyed.

TEDDY, JR., ON THE JOB

President's Son a Wool Sorter at $5 a Week.

IS THE GOODS, SAY WORKERS

Starts In on Lowest and Hardest Job In a Carpet Mill at Thompsonville, Conn.—Manager Says He Will Get the Big Stick if He Doesn't Behave.

When Theodore Roosevelt, Jr., became a wage earner the other day he toiled ten hours and a half in the works of a carpet company situated at Thompsonville, Conn., with 3,200 others. For five hours and a half he wore overalls and jumpers and bent his back over piles of dirty, smelly wool.

"Wool sorter" is the name of his job—the lowest, hardest and most disagreeable about the works, also the most poorly paid. Young Teddy earned by his whole day of labor exactly 83 1-3 cents. He is on the payroll of the corporation at the fabulous salary of $5 a week.

"Tired? Yes, I am," he admitted as he passed out of the gates at night when the whistle blew at 6:15. "It caught me in the back." That's what all new wool sorters say.

The president's son reached Thompsonville in the evening and went for dinner to the home of Alvin H. Higgins, general manager of the company. After dinner and a chat with Mr. Higgins he went to the small dwelling adjoining the latter's home, where he is to live with a married couple who will act as housekeepers. He turned in early to bed, for he had to be up betimes the next morning. The starting whistle blows at 7 o'clock.

The house where young Roosevelt will live is owned by Mr. Higgins and until "Teddy junior's" arrival was known as "the little white house." Now it has achieved the new title of "the little White House."

Promptly at 6:45 o'clock in the morning, when the streets were filled with mill workers starting wearily for their toil, Teddy joined the throng. He got into the office of the carpet works at five minutes before 7. Mr. Higgins and other officers made him acquainted with the clerks and department heads. At 8 o'clock he met the stenographic staff—twelve typewriter girls, some pretty, some otherwise, but all eager to meet the young man. He bowed and smiled diffidently when presented to them.

During the morning young Roosevelt was shown the office system and was taken through the works. At noon he was allowed forty-five minutes for a hurried luncheon at the Higgins home. He was attired in a dark gray, ready made "working suit," which he had purchased to begin his career in. At 12:45 he returned to the works with a package under his arm, which contained his overall suit. He put this on when the whistle blew and got on the job of sorting the wool—just as it comes to the mill, without any cleansing or deodorizing. There he stuck, without intermission, until 6:15.

Neither he nor Mr. Higgins would discuss the first day's work. "I have my eye on him," the manager said, with a chuckle, "and if he doesn't behave I'll use the big stick on him. All I have to say is that he has a splendid appetite."

It may be stated that the verdict of the working population of Thompsonville is that young Roosevelt is "the goods" and in no sense an interloper.

Among the various departments through which the president's son will pass, provided he likes the work and decides to stay and become a full fledged carpet maker, will be the filling room, shading room, designing department and dye house.

He will also undoubtedly study other lines of mill work, including the various kinds of carpets and rugs and how such a large manufacturing plant is managed, but this will altogether depend upon himself.

All the town saw Teddy during his trips to and from the carpet mills. He saw all the town, too, for there are few persons in Thompsonville except mill workers. The only social diversions he will have will be the Enfield Country club and the Calumet club, which are patronized by the not numerous wealthy citizens of the township. He is to be put up at both.

For theaters, hotels and urban life in general young Roosevelt will have to journey to Hartford, sixteen miles south, or Springfield, eight miles north. If he keeps on sorting wool, however, he probably won't care for evening diversions. Bed will be more agreeable.

Raising Almonds In Texas.

In Henderson county, Tex., Cain Cox, five miles from Athens, has not only adhered to diversification in all its forms, raising fruit, tomatoes and the cereal and hay crops as well as some cotton, but he has been investing some money in other experiments, some of which are about to turn out very profitably. One of his side experiments has been almonds, he having put in quite a number of the young trees about five years ago. The trees are now well grown and are bearing fine almonds, though not as large nor as fine as the imported variety. The trees bore a few almonds last year and many more this year, and by another year Mr. Cox thinks he will get a crop large enough to market.

Success of Woman Suffrage.

The Finns evidently have not found woman suffrage a failure. Nineteen women were elected to their first parliament. Now twenty-five have just been elected to the second.

EDITORIAL.

Some little misunderstanding seems to exist among the workmen at the shipyard over the hearing at the City Council last Monday evening, on the petition of the street railway to build a curve track connecting the street railway with the Fore River railroad, so that cars can run to the shipyard. There was no intention on the part of the City Council to shut anyone off, and everybody who desired had an opportunity to speak.

There were several hearings scheduled for that evening. That of the street railway was for 8.30 and 8.45 was the time set for the hearing of the Squantum petitioners. Mr. Conway of the street railway, and Mr. Marr and Mr. Sedgwick had spoken for the workmen at the shipyard. Peter T. Fallon had then taken the floor. He had spoken a few words in favor of the workmen at the shipyard and had branched off into a subject that was almost foreign to the matter under discussion. By that time the hour had arrived for the Squantum hearing, and a motion was made that the street railway hearing be adjourned to 9 o'clock. At the latter hour the hearing was again taken up, and the president asked several times if there was any one who desired to speak in favor of the petition, but no one did. Mr. Fallon was present at that time and was given ample opportunity if he desired to speak, but he evidently had said all he desired.

EDITORS AT TUFTS.

On invitation of President Hamilton the members of the Suburban Press association, with ladies will visit Medford Monday, Oct. 19, and inspect that temple of learning, Tufts college. The party will probably leave Boston at 10 o'clock and on reaching the college grounds will in groups of 10 persons, under the leadership of guides, inspect the building and see the college in full operation.

Lunch will be served at noon followed by some speaking. In all probability the party will have the pleasure of witnessing a football game on the campus the early part of the afternoon. The indications point to a goodly attendance of the newspaper men.

ATTRACTIVE HOUSE.

One of the best houses erected in Quincy this year is that of Ira M. Whittemore on Bigelow street, which is a credit to W. R. Lofgren, the architect; E. H. Sears, the builder; and all concerned. It is a two-family house, but on unique design, with all improvements. Mr. and Mrs. Whittemore have been residents of Dorchester but were attracted to Quincy by the beauties of Great Hill at Houghs Neck, and have now become all-the-year-round residents. They take possession of their new house next week.

CITIZENS' ASSOCIATION.

The annual meeting of the Citizens' Association will be held at the rooms of the Granite Manufacturers' Association on Wednesday evening, Oct. 14. The business includes: Election of officers for the ensuing year; and annual report of president, secretary and treasurer. The special committee on the revision of the City Charter expect to report at this meeting and a large attendance is desired in order that their report may be thoroughly discussed.

MAIL SERVICE

Improved by Evening Collections And Night Clerk At Post Office

Sometime ago when the Quincy and Boston post offices were consolidated the Daily Ledger outlined several important changes that might be expected in the near future. Several of these changes have been made this month.

Two new carriers, or rather collectors, have been put on, making a carrier force of 19 men at the Quincy office. These two men are employed in collections only, on three new collections that have been established. One of these collects from what is known as Route A, starting at 12.20, 5.50 and 8.35 P. M., from the box at the corner of Willard and Robertson streets and collecting from the following boxes: Willard and Rogers, Willard at Berry Bros. shed, West Quincy depot, Hall place, Crescent street, Common and Cross streets, Copeland street sub station, Copeland and Common, Copeland and Buckley, Brewers corner, Water street and Brook road, Water street stone shed, Penn and Liberty, Brooks avenue, Penn and Columbia, Quincy Adams depot, Independance avenue and Franklin, Water and Franklin, School and Frankin, Gay street, Water street and Quincy avenue, Elm opposite South, Quincy avenue and School, Hancock at Westlands store, opposite Kincaide's store, Quincy Department store, Greenleaf hotel, Adams building, Hancock building, Hancock and Depot streets, and Quincy depot.

The last collection on this route arrives at the post office in time for the mail for Boston to be dispatched on the 10 o'clock train.

The collector on Route B starts at the box on the corner of Quarry and Granite streets at 12.10, 5.50 and 8.10 P. M., making collections from the following boxes:—Gas place, Whitwell street at Cranch school, Avon way and Whalley road, Goffe street opposite Fairmount way, Adams street at residence of W. B. Rice, Hancock street and Merrymount road, Putnam street and Merrymount road, Greenleaf street, Hancock and Adams streets, Quincy Depot, Hancock and Depot streets, Hancock building, Hancock and Washington, Coddington opposite Spear street, Adams building and the post office, arriving in time for the mail to be dispatched on the 10 P. M. train for Boston.

This carrier then starts for Newcomb square collecting the boxes at Howard avenue, Fore River works, Howard street and DesMoines road, Washington street sub station, and the following boxes on Washington street, at Chubbuck, North, River, Mill, Edward, Canal, and Foster streets arriving at the post office for the mail for Boston to be dispatched on the 11.20 train, upon which train the last mail for Boston is despatched.

Formerly the last mail for Boston was dispatched on the 10.08 train.

On Sundays collections are made from all boxes at 8 P. M. except those at West Quincy where the collection commences at Willard and Robertson streets at 7.30 P. M. These mails are forwarded to Boston Sunday night.

Mail dropped at the post office will be collected at 9.45 and 10.45 P. M. week days and forwarded to Boston at 10.08 and 11.20 P. M. On Sundays mail dropped at the post office box is collected at 10 P. M.

The above schedule shows a new and late outward mail. There are also two new late inward mails from Boston. One of these arrives on the train due at 9.49 and the other on the train due at 11.49.

In order to handle these late mails a night clerk has been added to the office force. This clerk goes on duty at 6 P. M. and completes his labor about 1 o'clock the following morning.

It will thus be seen that Quincy is receiving exceptionally good mail service and Postmaster, or Superintendent Hammond, is to be congratulated on securing it for the city.

SUNDAY SCHOOL WORKERS.

J. L. Rand of Wollaston was elected recording secretary and Charles S. Bates of Braintree, treasurer, at the Massachusetts Sunday school convention at Worcester this week. The president is Augustus R. Smith of Lee. At the close of the convention it was announced that the total registration for all the sessions was 4156. This is 896 in excess of the attendance at any previous convention of the association. Of the number of persons registering, 1907 were from outside the city of Worcester.

Balloon Ascensions At Paul Wild Terrace

A crowd of several hundred were present at Paul Wild terrace Friday afternoon at the sale of desirable house lots. The sale, commenced at 2 o'clock and during the afternoon many valuable presents were distributed among those present. At 4 o'clock interest was centered in the big canvas balloon that was placed in position at that time to be inflated with hot air. Some little time was required to inflat the baloon and meantime the crowd was constantly being increased by new arrivals.

It was nearly 4.30 when the word was given to "let go, all together," The balloon rose slowly with Prof. Skibini seated on the rigging of the parachute. The balloon sailed gracefully into the air and was carried toward South street by a north-easterly breeze. When the professor had reached a height so that he looked like a fly speck a shot was fired. This was the signal for him to drop.

He was so high that he did not hear the first short and a second was fired. He then cut loose. The parachute immediately opened and he dropped gracefully to the ground. When the youngsters saw where the professor was likely to land there was a grand rush of children in that direction.

Another ascension will be made this afternoon at the some time.

Gold Locket and Chain Presented

At the home of her parents on Intervale street last evening, Miss Flora M. D. Thompson was pleasantly surprised by about thirty of her school friends. Miss Flora is about 14 years old and a freshman at the High school. She has a lot of friends with whom she associates, but it never occurred to her that they would ever gather altogether at her home and present her with a nice gold locket and chain..

After the party had all arrived at the house, and Flora had become aware that there was something unusual going to happen, Eva Archibald stepped up to her and in the name of her friends present, presented the locket and chain. Flora didn't know what to do. She nearly cried for joy. Of course she thanked all present for the beautiful gift. Then the fun began, and not even when Mrs. Thompson was treating them to lots of nice refreshments, could they settle to quietness. The jollification ended at ten o'clock and after many bye byes the visitors hied home delighted at having taken part in Flora's surprise party.

The timetable folders freely issued by the National Granite bank are much appreciated.

Dec. 2d is the date set for the Wollaston Congregational ladies fair and special features are being arranged.

Rev. Warren P. Landers, who has been heard in Atlantic several times, will occupy the pulpit at the Memorial church on Sunday.

J. William Lynch of Upland road and his cousin John Gallway of Dorchester are on a pleasure trip to New York city and Fall River.

The Registrars of Voters met in the South Quincy ward Friday evening and added 33 names to the voting lists as follows: Ward One, 5; Ward Three, 26; Ward Four, 2.

The draftsmen of the Fore River Shipbuilding Company and the Electric Boat Company will hold their second annual smoker on Thursday evening, Oct. 22, at Colonial hall.

James Hector has secured a release of one week from the service as a juror at the Norfolk superior civil court. Charles B. Tilton was excused for the term.

An adjourned meeting of the City Council will be held Monday evening. The meeting is held largely to hurry along the two loan orders reported at the last meeting. Any business will be in order however.

Tonight is the night for junior boys. at Young Men's Christian Association. Every boy in Quincy between twelve and fifteen years of age is invited. Music, stereopticon, refreshments are the program. Come and bring your chum and all your friends. The time is 7 P. M. "I will meet you at the Y. M. C. A."

The appearance of several articles on the subject of "Osteopathy" in recent numbers of some of the leading magazines renders interesting the arrival in Quincy of two osteopathic practitioners, Drs. E. H. and A. Holland Barker, who have just taken up their residence at 35 Russell Park. These Doctors intend to practise here and will also be three days a week at their Boston office, 755 Boylston street. Dr. E. H. Barker is Instructor in Physiology at the Massachusetts College of Osteopathy, Cambridge, of which both he and Dr. A. Holland Barker are graduates.

QUINCY MUSIC HALL.

The Location is the best of any hall in the city. The street cars pass the door.

The Elaborate, Permanent Decorations which have just been put up are most attractive, and add much to the appearance of the Hall.

The Electric Light Festoon over the entrance way, flashing first red, then white, is a unique feature of much value.

The Moonlight Effect obtained by having the electric light come through Japanese lanterns is a pleasing innovation.

The Floor is of selected maple laid with the greatest care, and is kept in perfect condition, being covered with canvas when not used for dancing.

The Ventilation—a most important consideration—is such as to keep the air pure with even a crowded Hall.

The Hall is Lighted by electricity, brilliantly and pleasantly, and with a switchboard arranged so that all desired effects can be obtained in the Hall proper or on the stage. Gas is used as an auxiliary light.

The Heating is direct—indirect, ample, and giving the most healthful results.

The Stage has been designed with care, and is furnished with a particularly generous supply of attractive and appropriate scenery.

For Advertising, the Music Hall Billboards are valuable.

To Darken the Hall, there are special window fittings so that at noonday the Hall can be made as dark as at midnight.

In case of fire there are pails of water and chemical fire extinguishers throughout the Hall. There is an asbestos fire curtain by which the Stage can be instantly cut off from the Hall proper. There are ten (10) doors opening from the Hall and six (6) separate exits.

As a whole, Quincy Music Hall has been carefully planned to meet the requirements of those who wish a large and really first class Hall.

Twenty-Five Years A Quincy Teacher

Last evening at the home of Miss Sarah A. Malone, of 470 South street, a reception was given to the teachers of the Washington school. It was the occasion of Miss Malone's 25th anniversary as a teacher in the Washington school, and in honor of the event, the teachers and a few close friends were invited to help celebrate the event.

The first part of the evening was spent in offering congratulations and recalling past events in the years of Miss Malone's work at the Washington school, interspersed with solos by Miss Bicknell and Mrs. Nina Woodsum, the latter a former teacher at the Point school.

About 9 o'clock the company adjourned to the dining room where a light collation was served. The first of the post-prandial exercises was the reading of a complimentary letter from Supt. Frank E. Parlin. T. B. Pollard, principal of the school, read the letter, in which besides praise and congratulations for Miss Malone on the completion of her 25th year as a teacher, was also expressed the regret of the inability of Mr. Parlin to be present.

Mr. Pollard then said he had a few remarks to make and in behalf of the teachers and janitor, presented Miss Malone with a half dozen solid silver spoons as a token of esteem. Miss Malone was taken completely by surprise at the gift, but responded fittingly. She was the recipient of many other gifts apart from this, including a beautiful copy of Tennyson's works from Miss Charlotte F. Donovan, and a chocolate set from Miss Euphrasia Herman, and Miss Eliza Sheehan, and many beautiful flowers from other friends.

The guests, after this diversion returned to the parlor and all joined in singing the old time popular songs, the songs that never grow old.

At a seasonable hour the party broke up, and the guests departed, wishing their hostess all the happiest returns and hoping that they would all be present 25 years hence at the celebration of Miss Malone's 50th anniversary as a teacher.

New Secretary Y. M. C. A. Auxiliary

The fall meeting of the Auxiliary to the Y. M. C. A., was held yesterday at Association hall, in the Y. M. C. A. building, with the president, Mrs. Herbert Pinkham, presiding. Although the number present, was smaller than usual, yet the interest in the good work of the new year, was just as intense.

The devotional exercises were most ably conducted by Mrs. Lincoln Crowell of Wollaston. Her helpful talk was of cheer and encouragement for the coming year's work. Not all can occupy the highest offices of our work, but all can help. The humblest work is as much needed as that of the highest officials.

Owing to the illness of the secretary, Mrs. J. S. Sedgewick, her resignation was read and accepted. Mrs Lincoln Crowell was elected secretary for the coming year.

After remarks concerning the work and present condition of the Y. M. C. A. by Secretary Gay, Mr. Clee, the boys' work secretary, gave an outline of their fall work, telling of the receptions and good times now in progress, and also of many good things in store for them this winter. The personal touch makes the boys' work a success.

The Auxiliary, is most grateful to all, who helped to make their recent business men's carnival a success. Everything done for them was truly appreciated. Willing helpers make life worth the living. After the adjournment refreshments were served.

State Highways Are Wanted

Mayor Shea represented the City of Quincy on Friday at the annual hearing given by the Highway Commission. The Mayor made a plea for the Commission to build two streets in Quincy. He asked that Willard street be built as a State highway, commencing at the Randolph line.

The other street was Quincy avenue. The greater part of this street is already a State highway. The Mayor asked that this street be completed to the end of Elm and School streets.

Marion White and Mabel Thayer have started on a short vacation to Fairfield, Maine, to visit Mrs. Filis, a former teacher here in the Sumner high school.

The Methodist church will hold a garden party in Town hall Wednesday evening next. Entertainment will consist of selections both vocal and instrumental by local talent.

The graduating class of the Sumner High school held its first social dance in Town hall Tuesday evening. A large number were present from Braintree, Randolph, Quincy, Weymouth and Avon. The floor was in charge of Tracey Brady, assisted by Warren Simonds, Robert Burns and Galan Bosworth. Music was furnished by Milo Burke's orchestra from Brockton. The special feature of evening was the moonlight dance.

Tough Experience Of Quincy Diver

David Curney of Quincy, a sub-marine diver employed with Hiram W. Phillips, had a narrow escape from a horrible death yesterday, when for twenty minutes he was pinioned below the surface of the Charles river at Boston.

Curney was employed on a lighter in charge of Mr. Phillips engaged in making alterations to the outlet of the sewerage conduit.

When re descended he cautioned his line watcher to be extremely careful in responding to signals, as he anticipated some trouble with his air tubes becoming tangled. His task was to replace a heavy coil of chains used as a weight, which had slipped inside of a wooden funnel. The water at this point was twenty feet deep.

After being down ten minutes the signal came to pull up. Mr. Phillips prepared to do so, when the life line became taut and the jerks on the signal rope told that the diver was in distress.

John Jacobson, another diver, was sent down. He found Curney pinioned under the heavy chain and his life and air lines entangled beyond use. Jacobson, finding he was unable to release him, signalled to be pulled up. As he hastily removed his helmet he gasped, "rig the derrick." The derrick was lowered and the wooden funnel was pulled to the surface.

When taken from the funnel, Curney was unconscious but was revived after half an hour's work, and hurried to the Carney hospital.

Curney is married and lives on South street. He has been employed for years as a diver and has had many narrow escapes, but that of Friday was the worst experience he ever had.

BRAINTREE.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Ashworth are receiving the congratulations of their friends on the birth of a son.

Carl Bangs, who is teaching at the University of Vermont, Burlington, Vt., writes that he is pleasantly located and is enjoying his work.

Mrs. W. E. Knowlton and her son of Crescent avenue have recovered from the diptheria. As no more cases have been reported it is hoped that all germs are extinct.

Miss Fidelia L. Dyer and her friend Mrs. Adanirium J. Dyer went to New York city Oct. 5th to visit Mrs. Charles M. Allen at her beautiful home on Cathedral Heights.

The Krow Eldeen society will meet with Mrs. Rogers, on the Heights, next Tuesday evening. Will start from Methodist church at seven o'clock. The president requests a large attendance. Plans will be made for the Hallowe'en party. Also other very important business to be transacted.

The Rev. Dudley Lyng will conduct the Episcopal services in Delta hall on Sunday afternoon, October 11.

The St. Mary's society (Episcopal) will meet on Wednesday afternoon Oct. 14, with Mrs. Bill, 91 Hollis avenue.

Mrs. Walter Hollinshead and family have returned after spending a month with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Harris Vaughan of Kentville, N. S.

Fred White is home from an extended business trip through the west and is the guest of Mr. and Mrs. William H. Godfrey.

Mr. and Mrs. F. A. Foss of Winthrop are receiving congratulations, a little daughter being welcomed to their home on Sunday. Mrs. Foss will be remembered as Ardelle Ham, formerly of South Braintree.

Mr. and Mrs. eorge Dearing are nicely settled in their new home in Dorchester. Mr. Dearing comes to Braintree each day and will continue to keep his store open for the present.

Unity circle of King's Daughters of Union Congregational church held a sale and entertainment in the church parlors last eveniug.

It is with regret that we print the sad news of the death of Emma Jane, wife of Edwin F. Watkins of Washington street, which occurred on Wednesday morning at 4.15 at the Massachusetts General hospital. It was only the day previous that Mrs. Watkins was removed to the hospital and the sad news of so sudden a death shocked and grieved the community. She had lived her entire life in Braintree and had made many friends in the forty-five years. Beside the husband, one daughter, Marion L., survives her also a very devoted sister, Mrs. James T. Weeks. The funeral will be held this afternoon at the home of the sister Mrs. James T. Weeks of Tremont street, at two o'clock, Rev. Thomas Simms officiating. The interment will be at the Blue Hill cemetery.

On Friday morning President McCurda of California college spoke to the students in the High school hall, giving some of his experiences in the Hawaiian islands. He told some interesting stories concerning the life of the boys and girls in the schools there. He then spoke briefly of San Francisco in the time of the earthquake. His talk was well worth hearing and we hope he will come again.

The next meeting of the Men's Club, affiliated with the South Methodist Episcopal church, will be held in the church vestry Wednesday evening, and the speaker of the evening is the Rev. W. F. Dusseault of Lynn, Grand Chaplain of the Odd Fellows for the Grand lodge of Massachusetts and Chaplain of the United Spanish War Veterans.

WEYMOUTH.

Our postmaster, Frank Drown, is enjoying much needed recreation in Maine.

Mrs. Frank Hoadley, formerly of this town, renewed acquaintances here this week.

Mrs. J. L. Crane of Rumney, N. H., was in town on Saturday and Sunday with her aunt Mrs. Bourk.

Miss Helen F. Loud of Commercial street left last Saturday for a visit with Mrs. N. Atherton Richards at Yonkers, N. Y.

Miss M. Ella Willoby of Baker avenue entertained over Sunday Miss Gussie Patterson of Waltham and Clarence E. North of Bangor, Maine.

The funeral service for the late Elzear Bourk was held on Sunday from his late residence, 11 Tremont street. Relatives and friends filled the house R. F. B. Cressey of Cambridge officiated. A quartet rendered two appropriate selections.

Mrs. J. G. Worster of Commercial street and Mrs. E. C. Richards of Washington street were guests of the Thursday morning Fortnightly club of Boston at their fine new club house in Dorchester. The 500 handsomely gowned women enjoyed the hour devoted to "Wagner." The music was rendered by an orchestra, chorus, and soloists.

Quincy Stone Team Hit by Electric

Ex-Representative Sandberg had hard luck with his horses Friday, losing two valuable animals. In the morning a horse valued at $400 died at the stables from an attack of colic. Later in the day he had another valuable horse killed by being run into by an electric car near Charlestown bridge.

A team with a pair of horses in charge of Charles Westberg left Quincy in the morning with a monument to be set up in a cemetery in Everett. While crossing the bridge the team was run into by an electric car. One horse, the most valuable that Mr. Sandberg owned, was killed and the second horse was so badly injured about the head that the animal will lose the sight of one eye.

Mr. Westberg the driver was thrown off and was cut about the head and bruised. His injuries however were not of a serious nature. The monument was not injured.

SURPRISE PARTY.

One of the largest parties of the season was held in Electa hall last evening, when about three hundred friends of Miss Sadie Flanagan assembled and presented her with a gold bracelet. The presentation was made by Henry Leet. Dancing and music were enjoyed until a late hour. George Wylie gave an exhibition of buck and wing dancing. Solos were sung by Billy Ahern and Charles Shortle, and a mandolin solo was given by Henry Leet. Miss Helen Connors presided at the piano during the evening. Friends from Quincy, Boston, Weymouth and Milton were present. Refreshments were served.

WHAT THE KIDNEYS DO.

Their Unceasing Work Keeps Us Strong and Healthy.

All the blood in the body passes through the kidneys once every three minutes. The kidneys filter the blood They work night and day. When healthy they remove about 500 grains of impure matter daily, when unhealthy some part of this impure matter is left in the blood. This brings on many diseases and symptoms—pain in the back, headache, nervousness, hot dry skin, rheumatism, gout, gravel, disorders of the eyesight and hearing, dizziness, irregular heart, debility, drowsiness, dropsy, deposits in the urine, etc. But if you keep the filters right you will have no trouble with your kidneys.

Mrs. Deborah Prouty, living at 85 North St., Quincy, Mass., says: "I am in a position to speak in the highest terms of Doan's Kidney Pills. My back ached nearly all the time and caused me considerable trouble. Any sudden movement, or if I attempted to stoop, sent sharp pains, through my loins. My health was much run down and I had but little strength or energy. I was very much alarmed about my condition when Doan's Kidney Pills were recommended to me. I had known so many people who had used them with beneficial results that I procured a supply at the Cox Drug Store. Three boxes convinced me that Doan's Kidney Pills were the best kidney remedy to be had and I am now in perfect health."

Lady Betty Across the Water

By C. N. & A. M. WILLIAMSON

Copyright, 1906, by McClure, Phillips & Co.

SYNOPSIS.

CHAPTER I—The story is told in the first person by Lady Betty Bulkeley, the pretty young sister of the Duke of Stanforth. She is to visit America in care of Mrs. Stuyvesant-Knox (Mrs. Ess Kay,) a leader of American society, and the latter's cousin, Miss Sally Woodburn, in order that her elder sister Victoria's prospective fiance, Sir Gilbert Mantell, may not be attracted by her.

II—On board ship Betty is attracted by a young American steerage passenger, who saves a child from drowning. Mrs. Ess Kay, who is very "exclusive," objects to Betty's interest in the young man. Betty also meets Tom Doremus, cousin of Mrs. Vander Windt, of New York society.

"You're English, aren't you?" he asked, and when I said yes, and that I was only on a short visit, he treated my belongings as if they were sacred. If he disturbed anything, he laid it back nicely, keeping up a running conversation as he went on. I told him that English women might bring home all the pretty clothes they liked from other countries, and that I considered it most ungallant in such a chivalrous nation as America to deny ladies a few Paris dresses.

"Do you happen to know, miss, what's the income tax in your country?" he asked, tenderly putting back some yellow hairpins which had fallen out of a box of mine.

"Dear me, no," I exclaimed. "But I think it's sometimes more than a shilling in the pound. I've heard my brother say so, and as for the death duties, it's more than your life's worth to die."

"A-ah!" said the nice man. "We haven't got any income tax on this side, and folks can die in peace whenever they please. I guess that kind of evens things up, don't it?"

I didn't know what to answer, so I thanked him for his kindness, and we parted the best of friends.

Mrs. Ess Kay appeared so quickly afterward that it almost seemed as if she must have been lying in wait. She was looking pale and shattered, and Louise, following close behind, was positively haggard. Only Sally had weathered the storm without being outwardly the worse for wear, but even she didn't look as good natured as usual.

"How have you got along, you poor, deserted darling?" affectionately inquired Mrs. Ess Kay, undismayed by a fixed gaze from Sally, which apparently signified reproach.

A little black image in the shape of a boy.

"It wasn't very bad, and I've quite enjoyed myself," I replied, forgetting some tedious moments in the light of others not tedious and hoping that the roses in my belt might pass unnoticed.

Fortunately they did, otherwise I should have been in a difficulty, for I should have hated to vulgarize the little episode by putting it into story form for Mrs. Ess Kay, and presumably roses have not been taught to grow wild on the New York docks, although they say Americans are so very luxurious in their tastes one would hardly be surprised at anything.

A beautiful electric carriage, bigger than a brougham, was waiting for us, and we left Louise, with a butler or some other manservant out of livery, to wrestle with the luggage and bring it in cabs (which they called "hacks") up to Mrs. Ess Kay's house in New York, where I knew she meant to stop for a few days before going on to Newport.

The minute we drove away from the docks I began to notice dozens of things which made me tremendously conscious that I was in a foreign country. One would think, as so many of these people were English, or, anyway, British, before they were Americans that their buildings and everything else would be enough like to remind one of home. But each street we turned into showed me that this isn't at all true in New York. There are bits like Paris—at least you think so on a superficial glance—but nothing in the faintest degree like London.

Something in the air, too, made me feel excited, as it does in Paris. Sparks of electricity snapped in my veins, and I had a presentiment of interesting things that must surely happen.

I've always been very sensitive to smells, which can make me joyful or miserable, just as music does. Vic says I oughtn't to tell people this, as it signifies I'm still in close touch with brute creation. But I don't much mind if I am, for so many animals are nicer than we are—dogs and horses, for instance; and then one has to acknowledge, whether one likes or not, that a monkey is a kind of poor relation. Each place I've ever visited has its own smell for me and even houses and people. I would know the smell of Battlemead Towers, if I were taken there by winding ways, with my eyes blindfolded. It's the smell of old oak and potpourri, and books and chintz, and autumn leaves and pine trees, mixed together. Mother smells like a tea rose and Vic like a wax doll. London has a rich, heavy scent, which makes you feel as if you had a great deal of money and wanted to spend it, but not in a hurry. The smell of Paris makes you want to laugh and clap your hands and go to the theater. The smell of Rome makes you feel as if you wished to be very beautiful and move to the slow accompaniment of a magnificent church organ, with the vox humana stop drawn out. But New York—the smell of New York! How shall I describe the sensation it gave me, as Mrs. Ess Kay's electric carriage smoothly spun me up town? The heavy feeling of homesickness which I had had on the ship for the last few days was gone, and instead I felt a wild sense of exhilaration, as if I'd come dashing home after a glorious run with the hounds and plunged into a cold bath with two bottles of eau de cologne poured into the water.

It was amazingly hot, but the breeze gave a hint of the sea, and every shop and house we passed seemed to keep spices stored away, for the breeze to blow over.

Even the old fashioned houses, no higher than those in London, were as different from ours as possible, and it was extraordinary to see people—nicely dressed women and pretty girls—perched on the front steps under awnings without so much as a pocket handkerchief lawn between them and the street. Persons of that class at home would be far too shy to lounge about and be stared at not only by the neighbors, but by twenty strangers a minute, yet here they sat on rugs and read or did embroidery or swung back and forth in chairs that rocked like cradles, paying no more attention to the passers than if they had been flies.

By and by we came out of the quiet streets walled in with monotonous rows of red brick or brown stone houses into a scene of terror. It was a street, too, but what a street! I thought that I'd grown accustomed to motoring through traffic, for once Stan took me in his car all the way from Battlemead to Pall Mall, where he stood me a very jolly luncheon at the Carlton hotel, but that experience was nothing to this. I felt a little jumpy with Stan when we shot between omnibuses in a space which looked twice too narrow, and once when I thought a frightfully tall horse was going to bite off my hat, but I soon got used to it.

If I were driven every day of my life for a year through this terrible street in New York, though, I should be no more used to it on the last day than on the first. The only change in me at the end of that time would be in my hair, which would have turned snow white and be standing up permanently all over my head like Strumpel-Peter's, only worse.

London roars, a monotonous, cannon-balls-in-the-cellar roar, with just a light tinkle of hansom cabs sprinkled over the top of the solid sound, but that great straight street into which we suddenly flashed had no solid sound. It shrieked in short, sharp yells, made up of a dozen distinct noises, each one louder and more insistent than the other.

There were trams and tram bells and motors and carriages and over all an appalling thunder of trains rushing to and fro above our heads on lines roofing the entire street built upon iron stilts. Every minute they swooped by, running north and south, and I trembled lest they should leap their tracks and crush us into powder.

"It's only the elevated, deah," said Sally, pitying my agitation, "and it's never fallen down yet, so I don't believe it will today. You shall take a ride with me if Cousin Katherine will let you, which she probably won't. You can't think what fun it is shooting past the windows of the houses; just like glancing into an exciting story book you know you'll never have a chance to finish. You do get a peep into tragedies and comedies sometimes."

"My goodness!" I exclaimed. "I'm thankful I don't have to live in one of those houses. It must be impossible ever to take a bath or to get engaged properly."

EUROPEAN STREET RAILWAYS

Municipal Operation Is Resulting In Slow Development and Poor Service.

Under municipal operation, or the threat of it, the development of street railways in Europe has proceeded along different lines from those followed in this country. Here we have had a rapid extension of track into new and often temporarily unproductive territory, long hour service, high speed and free transfers. In Europe the track pushes slowly even into well settled suburbs, the hours of service are shorter, the cars are slow, and no transfers are given. The one advantage that the European has secured is a low fare for a short ride, and even this fare is not as low as appears on the surface on account of the higher value of money in Europe as measured in terms of wages. Briefly, however, it may be said that in Europe cheapness has been secured at the cost of quality of service. The same conditions are apparently resulting from the semi-municipal ownership which has just gone into effect in Cleveland. The people of this country want good service first of all, and they are willing and able to pay for it. With us cheapness is a secondary consideration, as any city will find to its sorrow if it secures cheapness at the cost of service.

A Bad Railway Wreck.

A recent issue of the London Engineer contains an account of a railway accident in Australia in which forty-eight persons were killed and 419 were injured. The Australian correspondent writes:

"After the accident the state of affairs was rendered more horrible by a fire which broke out. Unlike the American trains, Australian trains are not fitted with axes, hammers, jacks and such appliances to facilitate the removal of the victims after an accident, and a great deal of the trouble and even many of the deaths may be directly traced to the delay in extricating the sufferers from the burning debris.

"Not only is Victoria an example of a country where the railways are entirely owned and controlled by the state, but for many years it has been held up as a model of the advantages which follow that political system. At one time in this state of Victoria public safety was regarded as of greater consequence than revenue. Latterly, however, the local press has been complaining that too great economies are being practiced for safety."

Passing the Hat.

Arlington, O., is passing the hat for ten dollar subscriptions to a fund for putting down a gas well to secure fuel for the municipal electric plant, thus saving "the big coal bill that seems to be the only thing endangering the financial success of our municipal lighting system," as the Arlingtonian naively puts it.

Most plants, public or private, might easily attain financial success if it were not for the fuel bills and such other expenses. When the expected "success" of this plant is reported, the cost of the gas well will not appear.

The objection to municipal ownership in the United States is based on a disbelief that there would be either competency or honesty in the management.—San Francisco Chronicle.

The town clerk of Manchester, Mass., writes that at a special town meeting the citizens voted against purchasing the local electric plant.

Unresponsive.

"My dear, I think we must have been married in a former incarnation."

"Does it seem that long?" replied the brute.

Even while Mr. Taft is campaigning the impetus he gave the work on the Panama canal goes steadily on.

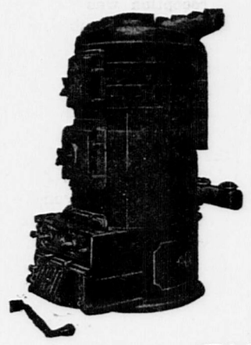
Your Attention Mr. Prospective Heating Customer!



Did you ever pause to consider the difference in various make boilers? Does it not appeal to your better judgment that a boiler the construction of which is such that it places a series of thin layers of water directly or indirectly over the fire surface and travel of hot gases, before they escape into the smoke flue, is sure to be economical in the consumption of fuel?

Another advantage that should be considered in a boiler of this description the parts of necessity must be small, therefore, in the event of breakage they may be easily and cheaply replaced. Of course there are cheaper boilers that are made in one piece from base to dome. These boilers contain surface on which the fire does not shine, or over which the hot gases do not pass, therefore, they are useless. These boilers without doubt can be made and sold cheaper than the boiler made of several units. But you Mr. Consumer, must pay the difference in consuming of coal in the long run.

THE Young Men's Christian Association OF QUINCY, MASS.

(Legal Title – Incorporated 1892.)

The Directors of the YOUNG MEN'S CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION of Quincy, with a firm faith in the great value of the work which is being done for the young men and boys of our city, make their appeal for donations and bequests toward paying the mortgage indebtedness on the new Association Building. When the building is free from debt it will serve as an Endowment, as there is a goodly income from the dormitories.

Should the Donor prefer, such sum as might be given could be used as an Endowment for an educational class or classes, the Boys Department, or as a special fund in other ways, and could be designated with the name of the Donor.

The Treasurer, WILLIAM F. CUMMINGS, 7 Clive Street, Quincy, or the General Secretary, ERNEST G. GAY, will be happy to answer inquiries.

OUR HOSPITAL

(Legal Title: City Hospital of Quincy)

INCORPORATED 1889

The Trustees of the City Hospital of Quincy earnestly appeal for donations and bequests for the Endowment fund. This now amounts to over $60,000, but a fund of at least $100,000 is urgently needed.

Five Thousand Dollars ($5,000) will endow a Free Bed to which such name may be given as the Donor may desire, but any sum for this noble institution, which stands ready to serve us all in the hour of need, will be most gratefully received.

The Secretary, TIMOTHY REED, Adams St., Quincy, or the Treasurer, RICHARD D. CHASE, Savings Bank Building, Quincy, will be very glad to confer with any one or to answer any inquiries.

"ADVANCE AGENT OF PROSPERITY"

Bryan Thus Terms Himself In Speeches In Illinois

PANIC HIS PRINCIPAL TOPIC

Says Democratic Victory This Year Furnishes Only Hope of Cure For Hard Times--Objects to Alleged Posing of Roosevelt as Dictator--Omaha Editor's Error Regarding "Funny" Republican Plank

Quincy, Ills., Oct. 10.—Fresh from his conferences in Chicago with hundreds of business men whom he also specially addressed, William J. Bryan, traveling for twelve hours yesterday through the state of Illinois and making numerous stops, held himself up as "the advance agent of prosperity."

The panic of last fall was his principal topic, and from early morning until his last word was uttered last night he hammered away at the Republican charge that his election will mean business depression and failures. He quoted statistics showing the number of failures in the last nine months have exceeded those for a corresponding period of 1893, and laid particular stress on the fact that the panic of 1907 was under a Republican administration.

Attention was called by him to a statement recently appearing in a Chicago Republican paper that 15,000 children went to school hungry every morning. A Democratic victory this year, he asserted, furnished the only hope of a cure for the hard times from which he said the people are suffering and for restoration of prosperity.

He assailed Mr. Taft for running on a platform which he did not endorse, attacked Speaker Cannon and Mr. Sherman, the Republican vice presidential nominee, as being responsible for stifling legislation in behalf of labor, and finally bitterly arraigned the president again for taking a hand in the campaign.

For the first time he referred to Congressman Longworth's alleged statement at Moline, Ills., that Taft should be elected and hold office for eight years and then be succeeded by his father-in-law, President Roosevelt.

"He shall not be permitted to nominate and elect his successor," Bryan vehemently declared, "with the prospect as announced by his own son-in-law of then dictating for eight years more. It is time that the power of the people shall be used by the people."

Mr. Bryan made fun of the Republican platform, basing his remarks principally on a recent editorial in the Omaha Bee, which criticised a part of the Republican tariff plank under the idea that it was an extract from some speech of his.

"Why, my friends," he said, "I used to buy books on humor whenever I wanted to read something funny, but now I read Republican platforms and save money. The funniest platform I ever read was the one adopted in Chicago and the funniest plank in it is the tariff plank." He read the editorial referred to and said:

"The man who edits the paper is a member of the executive committee of the Republican national committee, and so well posted that he is at the head of the publicity bureau. He says he did not write it and I am willing to take his work for it. It was written to shed light upon a public question for the benefit of the readers of the paper, and it only shows how ridiculous the Republican platform looks to a Republican when the Republican can look at it without bias or injustice."

Enormous crowds greeted him everywhere along the line of travel and enthusiastically cheered him. At some points he was caught in the swaying multitude and forced to extricate himself.

With the speech delivered here last night he had spoken fourteen times. In several instances his remarks were of considerable length. The feature of his address here was his denial of the statement printed in a western newspaper that he wrote editorials and made speeches against granting pensions to old soldiers. In his audience were a number of veterans from the soldiers' home at this place.

Accompanying the candidate through the state was a large delegation from the Democratic state committee and ex-Governor Francis of Missouri, who was a member of President Cleveland's cabinet, and who introduced Bryan here.

Democratic Fund of $220,000

New York, Oct. 10.—While the Democratic national committee will not until next week announce the amount of its campaign fund and the names of those who have contributed $100 or more, it is understood that the total is a little more than $220,000.

It is learned that there have been fourteen individual contributors of $1000 each. The Denver headquarters of the national committee has collected $5000, which is said to include a check of $1000 from former Senator Clark of Montana. The smallest contribution received was 1 cent, which came in the mail from Monroe, Wash.

The Democratic club of New York has contributed $5000, Nathan Straus of New York has given $1250, while the list of $1000 contributions includes the names of Delancey Nicolls, New York; Jacob Rupert, New York; W. F. Sheehan, New York; Archibald McNeil, Bridgeport, Conn.; Guy B. Tucker, Little Rock; M. F. Dunlay, Illinois; Roger Sullivan, Chicago; Perry Belmont, New York; Robert L. Owen, Oklahoma; J. J. Hogan, La Crosse, Wis.; E. O. Wood Flint, Mich.; E. F. Geltra, St. Louis; Moses C. Wetmore, St. Louis, and Norman E. Mack, Buffalo.

Contributions Solicited

New York, Oct. 10.—An appeal for contributions to the Republican national campaign fund of $50 each from 10,000 business men was issued by George R. Sheldon, treasurer of the Republican national committee. The appeal concludes: "I hope you will place yourself on this roll and send me your check, for which an official receipt will be sent you."

The fact that Andrew Carnegie has contributed $20,000 to the campaign fund of the Republican national committee was announced by State Chairman Woodruff yesterday, who also announced that Mrs. Russell Sage had contributed $1000 to the same fund.

All Desire Prosperity

Westminster, Md., Oct. 10.—Vice President Fairbanks made his first address in Maryland during this campaign before a large audience here last night. He declared that both the Republicans and Democrats desire the welfare and prosperity of the country; that they differ only as to the means to that end. He expressed the conviction that the tariff should be revised by the Republicans and criticised adversely the proposal to protect bank deposits by guarantee.

Empire State Labor Vote

Washington, Oct. 10.—James B. Reynolds of New York called on the president, having come here at the request of Chairman Hitchcock to discuss with the president the situation in regard to the labor vote of New York state, which he declared was looking somewhat more favorable for the Republicans than it had been. Reynolds will make a tour of New York state next week.

Taft Is Going South

Cincinnati, Oct. 10.—W. H. Taft and President Roosevelt will have a consultation in Washington, where the candidate will spend Sunday, Oct. 18. After three days in Ohio, Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday of next week, Taft will devote his attention to the south for the remaining three days of the week.

Business Is Reviving

New York, Oct. 10.—R. G. Dun & Co.'s Weekly Review of Trade says that substantial progress toward industrial recovery was made during the past week, a very large number of wage-earners resuming work in mills and factories that had been wholly or partially idle for many months. Evidences accumulate that stocks of dry goods are low almost beyond precedent and the urgency for quick shipment tends to generate confidence among buyers. Better conditions are reported at New England footwear factories.

Boy Killed by Dog's Bite

Cambridge, Mass., Oct. 10.—As a result of being bitten by a strange dog while at play with some mates three weeks ago, Mortimer Morgan, 14 years old, is dead. The boy had taken the Pasteur treatment in New York and on coming home was taken seriously ill. The four children who were attacked at the same time by the animal are Lillian Keefe, Henry Kenney, Edward F. Fineran and the Morgan boy. All the others are reported to be getting better.

Whole Mountain In Danger

Richford, Vt., Oct. 10.—Forest fires are again raging east and north of here. Jay mountain, which rises 4010 feet above the sea level, is a mass of flames about the base, and unless a heavy rain comes the entire growth of trees covering its lofty sides is likely to be burned away. Another fire of dangerous proportions is burning northeast of here. Two sets of farm buildings have been burned thus far and others are threatened.

Wins $2500 For Loss of Hair

Cambridge, Mass., Oct. 10.—Mrs. Susan Robinson of Somerville was awarded a verdict of $2500 yesterday afternoon for the loss of a part of her hair and scalp in an accident at the factory of the Sylvester Tower company, this city, two years ago. She sued for $10,000. Mrs. Robinson, who was then Miss Egan, had her hair caught in an unprotected shafting.

Strikebreakers In Paper Mill

Livermore Falls, Me., Oct. 10.—A gang of twenty-six strike breaking papermakers arrived here from Albany to go to work in the mills of the International Paper company here, which have been closed on account of a strike for over two months. Cot beds were installed in the mill buildings and the men will eat and sleep in the mills near their work.

Kaufman Whips Bradley

New York, Oct. 10.—Al Kaufman of San Francisco knocked out Fred Bradley of Boston in the fourth round of what was to have been a six-round go at the National Athletic club here. The men fought at catch weights, Kaufman being about twenty pounds the heavier.

King In Auto Accident

Placentia, Spain, Oct. 10.—The Spanish royal automobile was ditched here as the result of a tire bursting. King Alfonso was uninjured, but two of his aides were badly bruised.

The Weather Forecast

Almanac, Sunday, Oct. 11.
Sun rises—5:53; sets—5:10.
Moon rises—6:33 p. m.
High water—12 m.; 12:15 p. m.
Fair and warmer weather is indicated for New England.

The Scrap Book

It Dazed Beecher.

Among the financial friends of Henry Ward Beecher was one old broker in New York, an aggressive Unitarian, which sect he often said bore "the trademark of honesty." One day he met Mr. Beecher hurrying toward Wall street ferry to avoid the downpour of a sudden rainstorm. "Take my umbrella," said the broker. "I don't need it. The coming bus takes me to my door." At the ferry Mr. Beecher met a Presbyterian lady, a prominent worker of a sister church, who, having no umbrella, was lamenting her inability to reach her car safely. The urbane preacher forced the umbrella upon her as he said, "I will be out your way tomorrow and will call and get it." But the great expounder of truth and honesty was horrified when upon opening the umbrella the good sister at once discovered a pasted slip upon which was written in a bold round hand, "Stolen by some Presbyterian thief!"

THE LIGHT.

A tender child of summers three, seeking her bed at night,
Paused on the dark stair timidly, "Oh, mother, take my hand," said she.
"And then the dark will be all light."

We older children grope our way from dark behind to dark before,
And only when our hands we lay, dear Lord, in thine the night is day
And there is darkness nevermore.

Reach downward to the sunless days wherein our guides are blind as we
And faith is small and hope delays, take thou the hands of prayer we raise,
And let us feel the light of thee!
—Whittier.

He Failed to Pass.

General Benjamin F. Butler was one of a commission to examine young applicants for admission to the bar, and before him came a youth who failed miserably on all that pertained to jurisprudence, case law, civil law, sumptuary law, unwritten law and due process of law. Finally Butler, who rather liked the chap and wanted to see him through, asked: "What would you like to be examined in? You have failed in everything we have suggested."

The reply came. "Try me on the statutes. I'm up on them."

Butler shook his head solemnly. "My young friend," he said, "I'm afraid you won't do. You may be ever so familiar with the statutes, but what is to prevent a fool legislature from repealing all you know?"

Dumas' Quick Wit.

Dumas found a man asleep in the Theatre Francais during the playing of a piece written by his friend Soumet. "You see that?" said he. "That's your work."

Next evening a Dumas comedy was put on. The two friends looked in again and found a sleeper.

"You see, dear Dumas," said Soumet, "your works can produce sleep."

"Do you refer to that man?" replied Dumas. "Why, that's the man who was there last night. He's not awake yet!"

A Market For Cores.

The garden of the new house of the Rev. Mr. Brown backed against the play yard of an orphan asylum. Eight-year-old Johnny Brown was allowed to scale the fence and play with the orphans. Presently Mrs. Brown noticed that her apple supply was dropping low. She asked Master Johnny if he were not eating a good many apples for a small boy.

"Yes, mother," he replied. "I got to."

"Oh, indeed!" queried Mrs. Brown. "Are you quite sure?"

"Oh, yes, mother; they're needed! I just got to eat all I can stuff down."

"But why, my dear?"

"Because," said Johnny earnestly, "the orphans need the cores."

His Clever Scheme.

The man with the large head and the protruding eyebrows stepped into the cigar emporium.

"Give me the poorest cigar you've got."

"Five or ten center?" queried the man behind the showcase.

"I don't know whether you're going to give me a five or ten center. I'm going to give you a dime. Remember, now, the poorest cigar in the place."

The clerk handed out a box, and the customer selected one, calmly lighted it and puffed curiously. Then he left, with an air of supreme satisfaction.

"Ah, this tastes good!" he muttered on the outside. "I knew my little scheme would work. The fellow gave me the best cigar he had in the store."

The cigar dispenser on the inside soliloquized:

"I just took that old codger at his word. I handed him a box of three for a nickel."—Lippincott's.

Progress.

Let us, then, be of good cheer. From the great law of progress we may derive at once our duties and our encouragements. Humanity has ever advanced, urged by the instincts and necessities implanted by God, thwarted sometimes by obstacles which have caused it for a time—a moment only in the immensity of ages—to deviate from its true lines or to seem to retreat, but still ever onward.—Charles Sumner.

The Poor Cannibal.

A man once went to the circus. Near the main entrance to the circus there was a side show, and a vast and brilliant oil painting portrayed in all its horrors a cannibal feast—corpses cooking over fires, nude natives squatted in a circle, holding to their mouths grilled forearms, hands and such like delicacies. A genuine cannibal, the poster said, was to be seen within.

Paying a dime, the man entered. The cannibal, very lightly clad, sat with crossed legs on a divan, languidly toying with a spear. His teeth were filed.

The visitor was a man of markedly religious temperament, and he gazed at the cannibal with horror.

"Is this really a cannibal?" he asked the showman.

"You bet he is!" the showman answered. "Do you know how he was captured? That great living curiosity was captured, sir, in the act of boiling an aged Baptist minister over a slow fire."

"Then convert him!" the visitor cried. "Oh, my friend, why don't you convert him?"

The showman made a gesture of disgust.

"Convert him?" he said. "Do you think the public would pay a dime a head to see a Christian?"

A Reference.

A firm of shady outside London brokers was prosecuted for swindling. In acquitting them the court, with great severity, said:

"There is not sufficient evidence to convict you, but if any one wishes to know my opinion of you I hope they will refer to me."

Next day the firm's advertisement appeared in every available medium with the following, well displayed: "Reference as to probity, by special permission, the lord chief justice of England."

His Reformation.

He was rather given to late hours, and his wife remonstrated with him, so he promised her faithfully that he would reform. It would have been all right if his friends had not heard of it.

"So John H. has reformed, has he? Humph, we'll see." They "saw" him in procession. First he met one old chum, then another, and it never dawned upon him that is was a conspiracy.

The first night that John H. reached home after he had made that promise to his wife it was very late, or, rather, it was very early. In fact, it was early morning. He took off his boots, managed to hang his hat up and walked softly into the room where his wife slumbered. So far all was good. He divested himself of his coat, and just as he was hanging it on the gas bracket his wife woke up.

"Why, John,' she exclaimed, "what on earth are you getting up so early for?"

This was a poser, but John was equal to the occasion.

"That's all right," he said. "You know I've reformed, Mary, an' there's lots of people I've got to see early in the mornin'."

And he deliberately put on his coat and boots, found his hat and went out again, while Mrs. H. turned over, with a fiendish chuckle, and went to sleep.

Love.

Think what it is not to hate anything but sin, to be full of love to every creature, to be angered at nothing, to be sure that all things will turn to good, not to mind pain because it is our Father's will, to know that nothing—no, not if the earth was to be burnt up or the waters come and drown us—nothing could part us from God, who loves us and who fills our souls with peace and joy, because we are sure that whatever he wills is holy, just and good.—George Eliot.

The Drawback.

Beardman was a writer of plays, ultimately fairly well known in his day. For nearly twenty years he struggled and fought his way along without meeting with any very pronounced success, each play in turn proving more or less of a failure. At last, however, he produced a play that really caught the public taste. He and the famous Sheridan happened to be present together on the opening night. All went well. Success followed success, and applause greeted and ended each scene. At the end of the second act Beardman's elation got the better of his discretion, and, leaning over toward Sheridan—as usual, too witty to be merely sympathetic—he exclaimed:

"Sheridan, Sheridan, it's going to be a success, a complete success!"

"Ah, yes," murmured Sheridan, with exquisite compassion in his voice, "too bad, too bad!"

"Too bad?" stammered his friend, completely taken off his guard. "Why, too bad that it should prove a success?"

"Because now," retorted Sheridan, "it'll take you another twenty years to convince any one you wrote it."

Politely Put.

The manager of a fashionable hotel received complaints from several of his best patrons that the occupant of a certain room on their floor kept them awake nights with his incessant and night piercing snoring. The next day the manager sought out the objectionable snorer, who happened to be a singer of foreign renown, and acquainted him with the situation.

"Vat! I snore night?" exclaimed the artist, bristling at this accusation. "Do you know who I am? I am Spitzler, the great German basso!"

"Well, then," rejoined the hotel manager, "kindly refrain from singing nights!"

Maintained His Point.

Roger Minot Sherman while arguing a celebrated case said that his opponent could no more prove his point than he could cut a hair lengthwise.

While he was still talking the opponent, who happened to have a very sharp knife, pulled a hair from his beard and split it. As he held it up the court began to laugh, and Mr. Sherman quickly called out, "I said a hair, sir; not a bristle."

Quincy Locals Briefly Told

Considerable interest is being taken in the Rainbow fair to be held next Wednesday at the Baptist vestry, Wollaston, from 2.30 to 10.

The next meeting of Whatsoever circle, King's Daughters, will be held next Monday with Mrs. A. P. Loud, Brook street, at 7.45 P. M.

On Saturday afternoon, Oct. 31, Dr. Bradford of the Children's Hospital in Boston will speak at City hall on tuberculosis. Meeting is free to the public.

A pleasant meeting of the Wollaston Alliance on Wednesday opened the season's winter program. The meeting next week Wednesday will be for sewing.

James H. Cunningham, whose name was mentioned among those who were candidates for the position of County probation officer, wishes the Daily Ledger to state that he is not a candidate for the position.

"What is the use of growing old?" is the question asked by Mrs. Emeline Parker last week when she attended the Brockton fair and enjoyed it as much as any of the young people Mrs. Parker is eighty-five years old and is most active.

Those ladies interested in the millinery class held by the Arts and Crafts committee of the Quincy Women's club, and desirous of joining, are invited to meet the teacher at the club house on Wednesday afternoon at two o'clock, preparatory to forming the fall class.

In aid of the Tuberculosis meetings the last of the month Miss Edith Randall is to give a talk on "Sunny Italy," on Tuesday afternoon, Oct. 20th at the club house, Goffe street. Members of the Quincy Women's club and friends are subscribing liberally and a large attendance is promised.

All who heard Hon. Joseph B. Maccabe of East Boston at the Wollaston Unitarian club last winter will be pleased to learn that he will open the season this year, and talk on the recent Olympia games in England. He is an expert and enthusiastic over clean sport. Dinner will be served at 6.30.

Persons interested and having clothing and articles to donate to barrels to be sent to the southern colored schools will please send them as follows: For Tuskegee to Mrs. J. Henry Emery, Adams street; for Calhoun to Mrs. George G. Saville, Saville avenue; for Snow Hill to Miss Dora A. French, 1 Adams street.

WEST QUINCY RALLY.

A rousing rally in the interest of Louis F. R. Langelier, for Representative in the Sixth district, was held at West Quincy this week. Ex-Representative Edward J. Sandberg presided and addresses were made by Candidate Langelier, Councilmen J. Leonard Ferguson and John Moir, ex-Councilman Eugene R. Stone and Herbert S. Barker and Joseph Walker.

DANCE AT WOLLASTON.

About twenty-five couples attended the dance in Wollaston hall, last evening, given by two popular young high school pupils, Harold M. Gore and Philip S. Barnes. The dance was a representative one of the High school as the majority of those attending were either graduates or pupils and the matrons, teachers in the Quincy High school. Several from Thayer were present. The matrons were Miss L. Frances Tucker and Miss Evelyn A. Salsman. Music was furnished by Merrill's orchestra and M. R. Sparrow was the caterer.

Many people in Wollaston, who have had the pleasure of meeting Mrs. Elizabeth W. Flagg of Grafton, who has made annual visits here for the past four years, will be glad to learn that she is again the guest of her grandson, M. B. Capron of Bass street. Mrs. Flagg is certainly a most remarkable woman, being in her 93d year, and as bright and active as man yhalf her age. On Monday of the present week she visited Worcester, on Tuesday entertained the church sewing circle and Wednesday made the trip to Wollaston in company with her daughter, Miss Carolyn Flagg.

Frank H. Dearing and family have returned from Windemere, where they have been summering and will pass a portion of the winter in their home in Braintree.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. L. O. Crocker of East Braintree have issued invitations to the wedding of their daughter, Edith Osborne and Mr. Herbert Curtis of North Weymouth, on Tuesday evening. October twentieth, at eight o'clock in Union church. A reception will follow the ceremony in the chapel of the church. Mr. Curtis is well known in Quincy, being connected with the Mount Wollaston bank.

Miss Ethel Littlefield of Braintree is one of the teachers selected by the National Civic federation to visit England this fall in reciprocation for the visits a year ago of the Alfred Mosely party of English teachers. Thirty five New England school teachers have been selected; New Hampshire sending five, among them Miss Littlefield, instrutor in Greek and Latin at Robinson Female Seminary in Exeter. She will sail from New York Nov. 12, and spend six weeks in England where she will make a special study of the methods of teaching classics at Eton, Rugby, Liverpool and elsewhere. Her many Braintree friends predict for her a pleasant and profitable trip.

Miss Georgiana C. Lane of Presidents hill leaves today for a week end visit to Portland, Maine.

* * *

Hon. and Mrs. Frank E. Fitz are about to move to Wakefield where Mrs. Fitz's father has recently purchased a beautifully situated estate on the shores of lake Quannapowitt. Mrs. Fitz is well known as a composer of songs and in D. R. circles as she has been state regent and is now president general of the national society of the Daughters of the Revolution.

* * *

Mrs. Gilbert H. Rhodes of Old Colony avenue, who spent the week with relatives at Brant Rock, has returned home.

* * *

The Local club were royally entertained at the home of Mrs. Wheelock of Braintree on Thursday, all members being present. This was the first meeting of the season and was greatly enjoyed. The table was beautifully decorated with autumn leaves and a dainty lunch was served by the hostess. All pronounced it a perfect party.

Lauris Treadway of Billings road is at home on a vacation for the month of October.

Mr. and Mrs. Everett B. Goodrich, formerly of Safford street, have moved from East Braintree to Centre street, Dorchester.

Last Saturday evening, Miss Ardelia Barber of Botolph street, Atlantic, tendered a very pretty luncheon to Miss Bertha Miles and several of her friends. At seven o'clock the young ladies were seated at a very prettily decorated table where a dainty and appetizing repast was served. The guests departed at a late hour after having spent a most enjoyable evening. The luncheon was given Miss Miles in honor of her approaching marriage to Mr. Matthew Sheridan of Dorchester.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Parker Hayward, Mr. and Mrs. Nathaniel Hunt and Miss Lucy Crane of East Braintree have returned for a delightful fall trip to Au Sable chasm, New York.

On Monday evening at the pleasant home of Rev. Frederick R. Griffin at Braintree, Miss Mila Albertine, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. Allen Gage, became the bride of Herbert N. Low of Melrose. The bride was becomingly attired in a brown traveling suit and was attended by Miss Emily A. Vinton of Braintree and Mr. L. Carlton White of Weymouth. The ring service was used. After a three weeks' trip in New Hampshire the couple will reside in Wyoming, Melrose, where the groom is superintendent of the New England Telephone Co. The best wishes of their host of friends go with them.

Rev. A. Edwin Clattenburg is expected home today from New York.

The children and young people of Quincy are looking forward with much enjoyment to the dancing party which will be held at the Quincy Woman's club house on the afternoon of Saturday, Oct. 17. It will be the first affair of its kind held at the club house, and tickets are selling rapidly.

Today's Court.

George Coleman was arraigned for larceny from Carmin P. Gardiner at Quincy. Case continued until next Wednesday.

Catherine Cahill was fined $15 for drunkenness at Quincy.

DEAFNESS CANNOT BE CURED.

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

EMPLOYED BOYS.

Thursday night was Employed Boys' night at the Young Men's Christian Association and proved to be the greatest event ever held for employed boys. About one hundred fellows were present and enjoyed the informal program. Music was by the Y. M. C. A. boys' orchestra. Pool and bowling were patronized well and other fellows enjoyed watching the gymnasium class at work. Refreshments were served. A few remarks were made by W. H. Bentley and E. G. Gay. The boys all went home feeling happy and saying they had had one of the best times of their life.

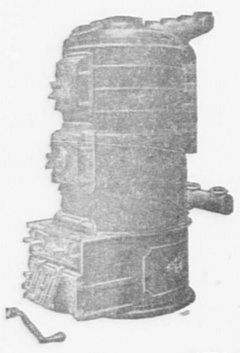
J. E. Kenily & Co., Quincy

Your Attention Mr. Prospective Heating Customer!



Did you ever pause to consider the difference in various make boilers? Does it not appeal to your better judgment that a boiler the construction of which is such that it places a series of thin layers of water directly or indirectly over the fire surface and travel of hot gases, before they escape into the smoke flue, is sure to be economical in the consumption of fuel?

Another advantage that should be considered in a boiler of this description the parts of necessity must be small, therefore, in the event of breakage they may be easily and cheaply replaced. Of course there are cheaper boilers that are made in one piece from base to dome. These boilers contain surface on which the fire does not shine, or over which the hot gases do not pass, therefore, they are useless. These boilers without doubt can be made and sold cheaper than the boiler made of several units. But you Mr. Consumer, must pay the difference in consuming of coal in the long run.

QUINCY MUSIC HALL.

The Location is the best of any hall in the city. The street cars pass the door.

The Elaborate, Permanent Decorations which have just been put up are most attractive, and add much to the appearance of the Hall.

The Electric Light Festoon over the entrance way, flashing first red, then white, is a unique feature of much value.

The Moonlight Effect obtained by having the electric light come through Japanese lanterns is a pleasing innovation.

The Floor is of selected maple laid with the greatest care, and is kept in perfect condition, being covered with canvas when not used for dancing.

The Ventilation—a most important consideration—is such as to keep the air pure with even a crowded Hall.

The Hall is Lighted by electricity, brilliantly and pleasantly, and with a switchboard arranged so that all desired effects can be obtained in the Hall proper or on the stage. Gas is used as an auxiliary light.

The Heating is direct—indirect, ample, and giving the most healthful results.

The Stage has been designed with care, and is furnished with a particularly generous supply of attractive and appropriate scenery.

For Advertising, the Music Hall Billboards are valuable.

To Darken the Hall, there are special window fittings so that at noonday the Hall can be made as dark as at midnight.

In case of fire there are pails of water and chemical fire extinguishers throughout the Hall. There is an asbestos fire curtain by which the Stage can be instantly cut off from the Hall proper. There are ten (10) doors opening from the Hall and six (6) separate exits.

As a whole, Quincy Music Hall has been carefully planned to meet the requirements of those who wish a large and really first class Hall.

Wonderful Trip Of Submarines

The Quincy built submarines made a most successful ocean voyage last week. A Philadelphia dispatch to a Boston paper says: Following a most remarkable trip of more than 300 miles, the first durability test for distance ever entered into by a fleet of submarines ended Friday night at the League Island Navy Yard, when four submarines, the Octopus, the Viper, the Tarantula and the Cuttlefish, arrived after a two weeks' sea run from Newport, R. I. As far as the durability of the little craft is concerned, the test, according to the men who made the trip, was entirely satisfactory; in fact, so wonderful that the navy department has already ordered a second test from here to Chesapeake bay and then to Charleston, a distance of nearly 400 miles.

Republican Rally At Tremont Temple

The Salem Cadet band will give a concert in Tremont Temple this evening, October 12, between the hours of 7 and 8 before the big ratification meeting under the auspices of the Republican club of Massachusetts. A very attractive musical program has been prepared.

President Joseph Walker of the Republican Club of Massachusetts will call the meeting to order and introduce as the presiding officer of the evening, former Governor John L. Bates of Boston. Secretary James R. Garfield of the Interior Department at Washington will be one of the chief speakers, and the others will be Hon. Eben S. Draper of Hopedale, Republican candidate for Governor, Hon. Louis A. Frothingham of Boston, candidate for Lieutenant Governor, and United States Senator Henry Cabot Lodge of Nahant.

The entire house will be open to the public and there will be no reserved seats. On the platform will be seated the candidates on the State ticket, the speakers, the officers of the Republican club of Massachusetts ,and other distinguished guests.

BALLOON ASCENSION.

Prof. Skibini, the aeronaut that has been making ascensions from Paul Wild terrace, made another successful ascension and parachute jump Saturday afternoon. When the professor came down in his parachute he landed among the telephone wires at the corner of Elm and Washington streets. He managed to reach the ground in safety, the only damage being one broken telephone wire. The ballon landed in a large elm tree in the yard of John W. Nash on Washington street. Hundreds witnessed the ascent and descent.

REPUBLICAN RALLY.

The Republican City Committee will hold a grand rally in Music hall Friday evening. Among the speakers will be Senator Henry Cabot Lodge, Congressman John W. Weeks. There is also a possibility that Eben S. Draper and Louis A. Frothingham, candidates for Governor and Lieut. Governor, may be present. Red fire will be burned and a band will furnish music.

THEN AND NOW

Rev. Edward Anderson Reviews 50 Years Of His Ministry At Quincy Point

A large number of the present and former parishioners of the Washington Street Congregational church were present at the morning service Sunday to hear Rev. Edward Anderson on the occasion of his rounding out his fiftieth year in the ministry.

After the opening exercises Rev. A. R. Atwood, the pastor, said such an occasion as this comes but once to a minister and there are but few such occasions. We are glad to have here today a former pastor who is rounding out his fiftieth anniversary of ministry. He came to you at a critical time in the history of the church, and its growth and development is due in a great measure to his work, and the pastor that followed him. Mr. Anderson he said would speak on "Then and Now."

Rev. Mr. Anderson, in opening, said that his text would be a motto and was from the 8th chapter of Numbers, 24 and 25 verses. "From twenty and five years old and upward they shall go in to wait upon the service of the tabernacle of the congregation. And from the age of fifty years they shall cease waiting upon the service thereof and shall serve no more."

It was therefore an old Biblical law that a man of fifty years old must stop. He considered it a privilege to be here and look back fifty years in the ministry, with ten years snapped out. It meant twenty-five years of preparation. That takes us back 75 years. An entire different state of things existed then from today. It carries us back to the times of the old whale oil lamp. Before the days of the stoves, when we had old fire places. Before the railroads. Why before the telegraph and telephone. Before the implements of farming that we have today. These seem like another time and another age. Our common schools that were ungraded and Yale college was on a grade with our High schools today. To the days of Webster and Calhoon, Douglass, Lincoln and John Brown with whom it was his privilege to have fought.

To the days when the shot at Sumpter was heard around the world. The beginning of that awful conflict that brought freedom to the slaves. We went into that war and thought we knew what we were fighting for. These years have shown us another thing. It was an upheaval. A new education. Many had not been beyond the limits of their farms. They travelled the length and breadth of the country and learned what it was.

The wiping out of slavery was the greatest blessing to the South. Before the war the cotton mills made only cloth enough for the Negroes. Since the war it has grown and there are now in the South 550 great cotton mills. Ten millions spindles in the South and 122,000,000 spindles all over the country. This is the growth due to practical men going south and teaching agriculture.

Little was known of coal in the South before the war. Now there are 62,000 square miles of coal beds that have been developed. So also was it with the iron ore. It looked as though a great country would be built in the south all because slavery was abolished. Then cotton was only thing raised. Now 8,000,000 bushels of grain are raised where it was thought not possible to raise anything. It is beyond what ever was dreamed of before the war. We realize that the country has been led by a great hand until that country of our stands preeminent in the world. No king stands on a higher plain than does the President of the United States.

So the country has gone on until we can now say with Great Britain, the sun never sets on the dominion of these United States. It is God who has brought us on. There has never been a time when God has shown his hand in leading us as in these fifty years. The country is now spanded by six great trunk lines of railroad binding the Atlantic and Pacific with a band of steel, and the telegraph brings us the news from all over the world.

Times seems to have been going faster in these past ten years. It seems strange to see those children that came here now come to be men and women and college graduates. It seems almost a marvel the advance that has been made in our colleges and schools. Nearly every college and university is now open to women, who are making the world thrill today. Woman has taken her place by the side of men of intelligence. If there is any failure in the Sunday school, it is because there has been no study of preparation for the teacher. If we could have the gospel of Jesus Christ instead of what we do have we should become better.

Religion is the moulder of character rather than belief and it is because there was not life enough of this kind in the church that there came the Young People's Society of Christian Endeavor and Young Men's Christian Association. If we can realize what God has done for us in the past we may realize what is coming in the future in the practical manner of lifting up souls, of saving them while living, and not when they are dead. Fifty years to you is simply to learn of the past and teach it in the future.

Music during the service was by the church choir. During the offertory Miss Olive Viola Bicknell sang the beautiful solo, "God shall wipe away all tears."

After the service many came forward to offer congratulations to Mr. Anderson.

The celebration of the fiftieth anniversary will be continued Tuesday evening at which time the members of the Ladies' Aid society during his pastorate will tender him a supper at the church vestry, from 6.30 to 9 o'clock.

After the supper there will be some short addresses. Arthur W. Newcomb will speak of "The parish in the past." Eugene R. Stone on "The parish in the present." Charles R. Sherburne on "Successes of our relationship." Rev. A. R. Atwood on "The joys of the pastorate," and Rev. Dr. Edwin N. Hardy will bring the greetings of the Congregational churches in Quincy.

Mrs. Percy Holman, president of the Ladies' Aid Society, will preside, and it is expected that Mrs. E. C. Page will sing.

STORM CENTER QUIETS DOWN

Servians Realize That War Will Destroy Their Nationality

THE CONFERENCE AT LONDON

Confidence Is Expressed In Ability of British Foreign Secretary to Reach a Friendly Settlement of Pending Questions--Greek Government Placed In a Peculiar Position --England Keeps Turkey Posted

Belgrade, Oct. 12.—After a secret session, lasting for more than twenty-four hours, the national assembly adjourned last evening without having arrived at any definite decision with regard to its action against Austria-Hungary. The assembly will meet again today and the session will be open to the public.

According to the most reliable information, no vote was taken on the question at issue. The meeting was a very stormy one, and was interrupted by various recesses. War was demanded with Austria-Hungary, but the leaders of the war faction cooled down after Foreign Minister Milovanovics made a lengthy statement in which he explained that one reason why hostilities were impossible was the scarcity of ammunition for the new batteries, which is now being transported here, but has been detained on the Austrian lines.

The leaders of all the parties complained earnestly that the government's protest to the powers against the annexation of Bosnia and Herzegovina was not couched in sufficiently strong terms, but the foreign minister eventually succeeded in convincing the house of the correctness of the cabinet's attitude.

Thus, for the moment, the danger point in the Balkan crisis is passed, and Servia is expected to content herself temporarily with instituting a boycott against Austro-Hungary's commerce in the way of revenge. It is stated that Milovanovics will shortly proceed to London, Paris and Rome to lay Servia's claims before the powers. A representative of the French foreign office has arrived here on a special mission.

Despite the warlike language of the crown prince on Saturday, when he declared before the angered thousands who had gathered at the palace that he believed they all soon would be able to offer their lives in defense of the king and the fatherland, demonstrations in the streets are becoming less numerous and less serious, and apparently the people are beginning to realize that war would mean the annihilation of Servia.

A Hopeful Outlook

London, Oct. 12.—The Near Eastern situation, so far as the Anglo-Russian negotiations are concerned, remains where it did twenty-four hours ago. There has been unusual activity at Buckingham palace, to which the king has returned, and at the British foreign office and the Russian embassy, where M. Iswolsky, the Russian foreign minister, is staying, the officials are busily engaged in an exchange of telegrams with the European capitals. There also have been numerous exchanges of courtesies, the king and other members of the royal family and the cabinet ministers showing Iswolsky much attention.

An official statement issued to the press last evening was as follows: "An exchange of views has taken place between Sir Edward Grey and M. Iswolsky, representing Great Britain and Russia, respectively, which affords reasonable grounds for hoping that a solution will be found for the settlement of the pending questions."

Something definite doubtless will eventuate before the close of another day. Secretary Grey will attend the cabinet meeting today and will formally acquaint his colleagues with the progress of the negotiations. This will be merely a formal proceeding, for Grey not only has the fullest support of the government, but also of the king and the whole nation. In every quarter confidence is expressed in his ability to reach a friendly settlement, and the policy he has adopted from the beginning of the crisis has had the unanimous endorsement of the government leaders, the newspapers and all parties.

After the cabinet meeting the foreign secretary will again meet M. Iswolsky and so certain are all the parties concerned that today's meeting will bring the negotiations to a successful close that it is predicted that a statement to that effect wil be made in parliament, which will assemble today for its autumn session, during the course of the afternoon or evening.

Not the slightest indication, however, has been given as to how the divergent views held by the powers with respect to the proposed conference of the signatories of the Berlin treaty are to be reconciled.

The Greek government, in reply to the British pronouncement that until a legal status has been restored in the Island of Crete Great Britain cannot hold out any hope that the Cretan aspirations will be granted, points out the difficulty of the position of the administration at Athens, which in no way prompted the Cretans to declare a union with Greece. The Greek government expresses its willingness that the powers should decide the question of union between Crete and Greece, but it declares that there is no means with in its power of forcing the Cretans to restore the legal conditions of affairs. The Greek government, the reply states, will continue to act with moderation, although it cannot understand why the powers cannot consider the Cretan affair at the same time it takes the Bulgarian and Austrian questions under advisement.

Great Britain Posting Turkey

Paris, Oct. 12.—It is understood here, in connection with M. Iswolsky's negotiations with the British foreign office, that Great Britain is keeping Turkey closely advised to secure the porte's assent to every step. The British government is especially desirous that Turkey settle the question of Bosnia directly with Austria, so that there shall be no obstacle in the way of the latter country's participation in the conference of the powers.

The Constantinople correspondent of The Temps says that Turkey is arranging to accept the annexation of the two provinces by Austria as an accomplished fact, and is now chiefly insistent that she shall obtain satisfaction from Bulgaria.

TEN-MINUTE FIGHT IN AIR

Two Policemen Have a Thrilling Encounter With a Maniac

New York, Oct. 12.—Atop the great iron tower at the Brooklyn end of the Williamsburg bridge a thrilling struggle occurred while hundreds of persons looked on from below. An insane man who had eluded the tower watchman climbed an iron stairway to the top of the tower, 535 feet above the East river, and was preparing to leap into the river when two policemen climbed up after him.

The man turned upon the bluecoats with a razor and then, on the narrow footing at the dizzy height a ten-minute fight took place which held all who witnessed it speechless with horror.

The trio were swaying on the verge of destruction, and now back on the centre of the small platform before the man was overpowered. Then he was handcuffed to a policeman and taken, still struggling, down the tower ladders.

At the Eastern district hospital the prisoner gave his name as Joseph Kratz of Brooklyn. He was placed in a padded cell.

CRUISER'S BOILERS ARE WARPED

Terrible Disaster Said to Have Been Barely Averted

Boston, Oct. 12.—The Post says: That nothing but a timely discovery on the part of a fireman prevented an appalling disaster to the big scout cruiser Birmingham, during what was to have been her final acceptance trial last Monday, was the information that leaked out in naval circles here yesterday.

In a burst of speed it was learned that seven of her twelve boilers went bad, at least two nearly melting away. The fires were still roaring under the disabled boilers, and the entire crew, in imminent danger of being blown to atoms at any moment, were desperately striving to get more speed out of her when the trouble was discovered.

Even then, it is said that nothing but the pluck of her firemen, who, with blanched faces, drew her fires in record time, averted a terrific explosion. Before the fires could be drawn, however, damage that will cost many thousands of dollars to repair, and which will put the handsome new cruiser out of commission several months, had been done.

Although the greatest secrecy has been maintained in regard to the accident and a board of inquiry has been convened to inquire into the matter, the cause of the accident has not yet been officially fixed.

Bryan Confident of Success

Lincoln, Neb., Oct. 12.—Having spent several active days last week on the stump, William J. Bryan devoted most of his time Sunday to rest, preparatory to a hard week of campaigning in Nebraska, Colorado and Wyoming. Speaking of the results of his campaigning so far, the Democratic candidate declared himself confident of success. He said that reports received by him indicate a constantly increasing sentiment toward the Democratic party.

To Stop Evasion of Laws

Washington, Oct. 12.—Comptroller of the Currency Murray has decided to increase the number of national bank examinations, in many cases from twice to three or four times a year. The new rule will be made to apply to all national banks which have in the past shown a disposition to violate or evade any of the provisions of the national banking laws or the regulations prescribed by the comptroller of the currency.

Fatally Injured at Football

Cannonsburg, Pa., Oct. 12.—William M. Potts, a football player, who was injured in a game here on Oct. 3, died yesterday, after having been unconscious since last Monday. Potts, who was 21 years old, played on the scholastic team. During a game with the high school eleven he was kicked on the head.

Where Did It Come From?
A Story In Seven Chapters.

I.
Mack and the Campaign Fund.
(New York Newspapers.)

Just before leaving New York for Chicago Chairman Mack of the Democratic national committee said that he had secured $300,000 from the past committee administration.

II.
What William Randolph Hearst Said In His Speech at Columbus, O., Sept. 17.

"Mr. Roosevelt prosecuted the Standard Oil, and the Standard Oil went out of the Republican party and into the Democratic party. The Democratic party welcomed it. Mr. Bryan appointed C. N. Haskell, political paymaster of the Standard Oil, to be chairman of his committee on platform. After a platform had been drawn up by Mr. Haskell which was satisfactory to the Standard Oil Mr. Bryan made Mr. Haskell treasurer of his national campaign fund to collect from the Standard Oil substantial evidence of the great monopoly's appreciation."

III.
What President Roosevelt Said.

"Governor Haskell stands high in the councils of Mr. Bryan and is the treasurer of his national campaign committee. * * * The publication of this correspondence not merely justifies in striking fashion the action of the administration, but also casts a curious side light on the attacks made upon the administration both in the Denver convention, which nominated Mr. Bryan, and in the course of Mr. Bryan's campaign."

IV.
What Haskell Said In His Telegram to Hearst on Sept. 19.

"Should this committee (of newspaper editors) find your charges sustained I shall withdraw from all connection with the present presidential campaign."

V.
What Chairman Mack Said.

"I regarded the question as to whether Taggart had turned over $300,000 to me as a joke, and my answer was intended as a joke also."

VI.
What Governor Haskell Said.
(From New York Evening Post. Sept. 22.)

Kansas City, Mo., Sept. 22.—Charles N. Haskell, governor of Oklahoma and treasurer of the Democratic committee, passed through Kansas City last night, bound for his home in Oklahoma, from the east, where he has been making speeches. * * * As his train pulled out Mr. Haskell shouted, "And don't forget to say that the campaign fund is growing fine."

VII.
What Governor Haskell Did.
(From Newspapers of Sept. 26.)

Chicago, Sept. 26.—Governor Charles N. Haskell of Oklahoma resigned as treasurer of the Democratic national committee shortly after midnight after a protracted conference with Judge Wade of Iowa and Josephus Daniels, director of the Democratic publicity bureau.

TAFT LABOR'S FRIEND

Rendered Valuable Service to Railroad Men.

THE TOLEDO-ANN ARBOR CASE

Advice Given In Judge Taft's Decision Adopted by the Railway Brotherhoods—Democratic Politicians Use Trickery to Deceive the Toilers.

The members of the various brotherhoods connected with the great railroad systems of the country are generally regarded as possessing more than the average degree of intelligence. Their callings and the obligations springing from those callings make the possession by them of a high order of intelligence indispensable.

Notwithstanding this fact the same system of absurd falsehood is relied on to deceive and trick them into withdrawing their support from the Republican party that is in general use by Democratic politicians to influence even the commonest and most ignorant of the unskilled laborers of the country.

One form which this system of trickery most frequently takes is that of hinting at what terrible things William H. Taft did against labor organization and its members while he was on the bench.

The one official act and declaration of Judge Taft which is being used in that way on railroad men is his decision in what is known as the Toledo-Ann Arbor case. Yet in that case through his decision Judge Taft rendered an actual, tangible and really invaluable service to the cause of labor organization. His advice given to labor organizations in that case has been generally adopted by the various brotherhoods and their members. One of the rules of a great labor organization, the Brotherhood of Engineers, which was the cause of the trouble (rule 12) has long since been voluntarily dropped as being contrary to the best interests of both the public and the organization itself.

More than all that, Judge Taft's decision in the Toledo-Ann Arbor case contains as good, broad and sound labor doctrine as ever found its way into print.

Now, what was that Toledo-Ann Arbos case? Most enlightened railroad men know all about it. Many of them, particularly the younger generation of them, do not.

A strike of locomotive engineers prevailed on the Toledo, Ann Arbor and North Michigan railway. One of the rules of the brotherhood (rule 12) required in substance that when so ordered by the head of the organization the men of the brotherhood or other roads should refuse to handle the cars of the road on which the strike prevailed.

This rule was a dangerous one. It probably never should have been adopted. The attempt to enforce it in this case brought eight or ten railroads into court. They sought protection against what on its face was at least an unwise policy for any body of men to adopt and involved in operation a possible stoppage of the carrying commerce of the entire country.

It was a case of sympathetic strike. And the sympathetic strike stands today, from choice, repudiated by all responsible organizations of laboring people and their members.

The principal outcome of that Ann Arbor case was that the right of employees to leave their employment whenever dissatisfied with its conditions was fixed beyond all possible future question and some admirable advice given to the members of the organization, to which they have faithfully lived up, both individually and collectively, since.

"We wish to make plain if we can," said Judge Taft in his decision, "to the intelligent and generally law abiding men who compose the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, as well as to their usually conservative chief officer, what we cannot believe they appreciate—that, notwithstanding their perfect organization and their charitable, temperance and other elevating and most useful purposes, the existence and enforcement of rule 12 under their organic law make the whole brotherhood a criminal conspiracy against the laws of the country."

That the rendering of this decision by Judge Taft was, then, in result an enduring service to all railroad men instead of embodying anything conflicting with their rights and privileges before the law must appear plain to any ordinary man. If there still remained any doubt on that score it would be removed by the reflection that the rules laid down by Judge Taft in that case are now made a part of the contracts and agreements of all great railroad brotherhoods.

President Roosevelt on Taft's Judicial Record.

Mr. Taft's record as a judge makes the whole country his debtor. His actions and decisions are part of the great traditions of the bench. They guaranteed and set forth in striking fashion the rights of the general public as against the selfish interests of any class, whether of capitalists or of laborers.

A Question the New Bryan Has Not Answered.

If you were president and were called on to exercise your discretion affirmatively to maintain the parity between gold and silver, what would you do?—Judge Taft to Mr. Bryan.

Mr. Taft can be trusted to exact justice from the railroads for the very reason that he can be trusted to do justice to the railroads.

A THRILLING BALLOON TRIP

American Aeronauts Have Marvelous Escape From Death

ACCIDENT 4000 FEET IN AIR

Shot Down Like a Bullet For 2000 Feet When Gas Bag Burst, the Envelope Forming a Parachute--Basket Struck a House and Crashed Through Into a Room--Crowd Horror-Stricken as It Looked On

Berlin, Oct. 12.—The international balloon race was the occasion of a thrilling incident. The Conqueror, the only American-built craft in the contest, having on board A. H. Forbes and Augustus Post, less than two minutes after the start burst at an altitude of 4000 feet. For 2000 feet it shot down like a bullet. Then the silk envelope was transformed into a parachute and they landed without serious injury, though their basket crashed into the roof of a house.

The international race, in which twenty-three balloons participated, representing Great Britain, France, Germany, the United States, Switzerland Italy, Belgium and Spain began in the presence of at least 80,000 spectators Amid the strains of "America" and volleys of cheers, the first balloon was sent away.

It was the "America II," under command of James C. McCoy, who was accompanied by Lieutenant Vogh Mann The balloon was decorated with the Stars and Stripes and it sailed away to the southeast at a rapid pace, the aeronauts waving their hats.

A representative of each of the other nations followed the American balloon in succession at intervals of two minutes, the national hymn of the respective countries ringing forth as the ropes were cast loose.

The second batch of eight balloons was led by Forbes in the Conqueror, the only American craft in the contest, which was started with some difficulty, owing to a gusty wind and too much ballast. But eventually it shot up and reached a high altitude in an incredibly short period, the basket swaying violently. Then almost instantly a cry of horror arose from the crowd, who saw the silk collapse.

The thousands who had gathered there stood for a moment petrified; some turned away, fainting, as they saw the balloon falling with lightning-like rapidity. At the same time showers of sand and appurtenances of the balloon shot downward with equal rapidity.

Forbes, who appeared to be very little the worse for his experience, exceptp that he was suffering somewhat from shock, gave The Associated Press an account of the accident.

"We had some difficulty," he said, "in getting away, but once we left the ground everything seemed to be right. As I looked at the recording instrument to make a note of the altitude, I heard a peculiar swish and said to Post, 'that sounds dangerous.' Immediately I saw that the envelope was rapidly deflating, the gas escaping in clouds.

"Instantly I threw the appendix clear of the basket and the ropes and, drawing my jackknife, cut the ropes that were attached to the thirty-nine bags of sand hanging around the basket.

"Post in the meantime threw over everything portable. We could see, however, that we were falling more rapidly than any of the ejected articles. But later, when the descent of the balloon was checked, we observed one bag of sand fall into a baby carriage, which was smashed to pieces, but fortunately the nurse snatched out the baby and saved its life.

"Both of us sprang up and held on to the ring above, hoping in this way to avoid the crash. Then above us could be seen the envelope gradually spreading out. We continued to fall with terrific speed until a sort of parachute had been formed and then we knew that, unless a further mishap occurred, we would probably be saved from death.

"Our speed did not decrease as much as we should have liked, and we were moving at a rapid pace when we reached the tops of the high houses in the streets, which greatly increased the danger. We passed over one roof, almost touching it, and still holding on to the ring.

"We avoided the next block; but finally struck the mansard roof of a house in the block adjoining, and the net and envelope fell to the opposite side. The basket crashed against the tiles and went partly through into an occupied room.

"The man in the room was terrified, but, recovering himself, assisted us to the roof, down through the skylight and to the street below, where the crowd cheered us and shook our hands. Neither Post nor myself was seriously hurt. I have cramps of the body, but otherwise I am all right."

All the competitors in the race are provided with rations for three days. This is the third international balloon cup race for the James Gordon Bennett trophy.

Miser Tom.

By FRANK H. SWEET.

Copyright, 1908, by American Press Association.

THE wind came fitfully over the broad sheet of water known as Salt pond. It was a "weather breeder," the farmers said, and they made their horses go a little faster and began to calculate how much work they could get in before the storm came. Off in the northeast sullen masses of clouds began to gather and spread out over the sky. When they crossed the sun they cast the dilapidated buildings of the town farm into alternate shadow and sunlight. And with the shadows the wind became suddenly sharp and raw, but grew warm again when the sunlight reappeared.

"Drat th' pesky wind!" grumbled an ancient pensioner as the he rose stiffly from the bench in front of the almshouse and hobbled toward the door. "When I was young th' weather had some sort o' conshunts an' didn't fiddle round like a seven minded gal. I'm goin' in 'side th' fire."

"Begorra, an' that's me idee prezactly," agreed a blind Irishman as he rose cautiously and held out his hand for some one to lead him.

One after another the rest followed until at last there was but one old man left on the bench. He sat staring at the ground as though unconscious of what was going on around him, but as soon as the last footstep died away in the entry he rose and glanced about sharply. Then he shuffled across the yard, stopping here and there as though he had no special object in view, but all the time edging in a certain direction. When he reached the wood pile he stopped and looked about abstractedly, then moved on to the pigsty and appeared to study the habits of the grunting inmates. After awhile he straightened up and glanced keenly from under his bushy eyebrows. No one was in sight. A moment later he disappeared through the doorless opening of the great, tottering barn.

At the same instant two keen old faces appeared from behind the entry door, followed presently by two bent, decrepit forms.

"Th' ole fox's gone t' peek at his money, boys," croaked one of them. "Consarn his picter! He's slier'n an ole turkey hen a-hidin' her nest. 'F I've watched him once I have a hundred times."

"An ain't I watched him fr'm th' haymaow an' fr'm th' stables an' fr'm under th' waggins?" chimed in the other. "An' didn' he go a-pokin' an' a-p'ilanderin' round like an ole fool as didn't have nothin' t' dew 'cep' keep folks a-waitin'. I b'lieve he'd scent a man like a dorg does a rabbit. He's got piles o' money some'er, but we ain't goin' t' see it."

"Who's got piles o' money?" and the old men started guiltily as the overseer came striding into the entry. He was a big, rough man, who towered head and shoulders above them. Just now his hat was pulled down over his eyebrows, and he was striking his boots impatiently with his heavy riding whip. The old men glanced at him and shuffled uneasily.

"Why, you see, 'tain't nothin'," deprecated one of them. "We's jest a-talkin' 'bout Miser Tom an' his keepin' his money hid. Ev'rybody knows 'bout it."

The overseer's face cleared a little, and he pushed his hat back from his eyebrows.

"Yes, I know somethin' about it," he said more affably, "but not enough.

"ME—GOT MONEY?"

I've had an eye on him the past six months, but don't seem to make much headway. I'd like to sift the whole thing to the bottom soon's possible. If Tom's got money, of course he can't stay on the town farm. If he ain't, why, the sooner these stories are broke up the better. But he's such a fool I can't seem to get anything out of him by questions."

"He ain't sech a fool's he 'pears," objected one of the old men dryly. "When I'm a-watchin' him I gin'rally have an idee 't I'm th' fool. An' as t' the money, he's got it—piles an' piles. I know that. How he ever come t' git on th' taown farm's a myst'ry t' me."

"He was brought here before you come," said the overseer. "Some men stopped at his hut in th' woods an' found him almost dead from starvation. He didn't want t' come at first; said he'd lived there all his life an' couldn't bear th' change. But after awhile he gee'd round an' liked it first rate. Don't s'pose he'd ever had enough t' eat before in his life. Now you couldn't hire him t' leave th' farm."

"But how'd he come t' git all his money?"

"'Tain't sure he's got any. His father lived in th' hut before him an' had th' name o' bein' a miser, so Tom comes nat'rally by it. Both was thick witted an' flighty an' kept t' themselves, an' o' course folks talked a good deal. After Tom come here he used t' go back t' th' hut sometimes, an' folks said he brought his money away in th' night an' hid it in our old barn. At any rate, he stopped goin' all t' once, an' now you can't scasely git him out o' sight o' th' barn. That's what got me t' thinkin' there might be somethin' in th' talk. But you said jest now t' you knowed he had money. What'd you mean by that?"

"I mean t' I've heard him say so himself time an' time ag'in. His bed's next mine up in th' attic, an' he's a gre't way o' talkin' t' himself arter he's 'sleep—drops off soon's he tetches th' bed an' then talks like a house afire th' whole endurin' night; gabbles 'bout his pretty babies an' his little darlin's an' his beaut'ful shiners. Las' night he got t' chucklin' t' himself an' kep' a-sayin' he'd got a fortin' an' nobody didn't know; t' he'd allers keep his little tin box shet so t' nobody couldn't see. Now, 'f that don't mean that he's got money hid away, then I ain't sayin' any more."

The overseer looked seribus.

"Yes, the fellow must have money," he said. "Well, I will have a talk with him at once an' let him know th' town farm ain't a free boardin' house fer millionaires."

Settling his hat once more over his eyebrows, he turned and left the entry abruptly. The old men looked at each other and grinned.

"Th' ole feller's sorter riled," one of them said, with a chuckle, "but I'll lay a dollar he don't git nothin' outen Miser Tom. S'posin' we foller on sorter easy like an' see th' fun."

But Miser Tom was not easy to find.

The old barn was a great, rambling structure that had been intended to meet all the requirements of a large stock farm. But the stock farm itself had been only a dream of an impecunious man of ideas. Long before it was completed the small capital had been used up, and the farm passed into other hands.

During all these years it had gradually become a vast storehouse for the useless articles of the large farm, crowded together in reckless disorder. There was another story under the roof of the barn, but this was left mostly to the pigeons and bats and to such roving hens as had not yet settled down to the unambitious ways of their kind.

To the boys who lived on the farm the old barn was always a place of wonder and delight. On hot summer nights the more courageous stole from the house and groped their way up to the piles of hay and listened all through the long hours of darkness to the strange moaning and whistling and rapping that came from the dark corners. And they shivered with delighted horror at the thought of countless ghosts flitting about them.

The overseer paused in the open doorway and glanced around. No one was in sight. Then he called sharply, but no one answered. Two or three hens flew heavily from stolen nests among the wagon bodies and disappeared through a hole in the floor. A cloud of dust rose from the debris and after a few moments settled back again softly. The overseer pulled his hat farther down over his eyebrows.

"The feller's skulkin' round here somewhere," he muttered angrily. "Jest like's not he's watchin' me from behind some waggin body."

But a thorough search failed to reveal him, and at last the overseer left the barn wrathfully.

As he stepped outside he saw Miser Tom come leisurely round the corner of the barn.

"Why, you—you scoundrel!" he called. "Where you been all th' time? Didn't you hear me call?"

Miser Tom looked up vacantly.

"Hey?"

"Didn't—you—hear—me—call?" fiercely.

"Y-es, I b'leeve I did hear somebody callin' Tom," the old man answered deliberately. "But how's I t' know 'twas meant fer me? Thar's lots o' Toms on th' place."

"Well, 'twas meant fer you. Now, look here, you an' me has some business that's got t' be settled right straight off. How much money 've you got, an' where is it?"

"Me—got money?"

"Yes, you. I know all about it. I don't want t' be hard on you, but this thing's got t' be settled right now. If you stay on th' farm you must pay your board. If you don't you've got t' clear out. Do you understand?"

Into the dull eyes of the old man came a troubled look.

"But I ain't got no place t' go," he said tremulously, "no place in th' whole wide world. An' I'm too ole t' work. I wouldn' hev no place t' sleep an' nothin' t' eat."

"That's your lookout, not mine," replied the overseer curtly. "You have money, haven't you? Come, tell th' truth."

The old eyes roved unconsciously toward the roof of the barn.

"Y-es, I've got some," he said slowly, "but not t' spend. 'F I spent it, t'would be gone, an' 'twouldn't come back no more."

He stood clasping and unclasping his withered fingers for several minutes; then he looked up piteously.

"Can't you let me stay jest a leetle longer?" he asked. "I'll do consider'ble, choppin' wood. An', you see, I've got sorter used t' th' place an' kinder hate t' go 'way. I'd most likely starve."

"Very well, starve then." And the overseer turned sharply and walked toward the house. At the wood pile he paused.

"Git your things picked up," he called. "You must leave tomorrow mornin', an' mind you don't ever let me see you back here ag'in."

Miser Tom did not answer. His limbs were trembling, and into his face had come a gray, ashy pallor. Sinking weakly upon a timber, he buried his face in his hands.

"Thar ain't no place fer me t' go," he moaned, "not any place in th' whole wide world. An' I can't spen' my babies; no, I can't, I can't, I can't. I'll starve fust."

The two old men lingered about the poorhouse door for some time and then went inside. The crouching figure on the timber was not so entertaining as they had anticipated.

After a time Miser Tom rose and went in to pick up his things, an old pair of shoes and an extra shirt and a coat and battered hat that had belonged to his father.

He would not come down to supper. When the paupers went upstairs they found him in bed, with his head under the clothes.

Some time in the night the inmates of the garret were awakened by a cry of fire. The room was brilliantly illuminated, and outside they could hear the crackling of flames. After a moment there was another cry of "The barn, the barn!"

Miser Tom sprang up with an exclamation of horror. When the others reached the open air they saw him rushing into the burning building.

"Stop 'im, some of you!" cried the overseer excitedly. "Th' barn's ready to fall!"

But it was too late, and they gazed at each other with whitening faces.

"Well, s' long's his money 'd got t' burn I guess he'd ruther burn with it," said one old man philosophically.

One, three, five minutes passed; then Miser Tom came staggering through the smoke and flames, his hair and clothing burned and his face black and livid. But in his hand was a long tin box.

"Here, take it, quick!" he called to the overseer as he tossed rather than handed him the box. "Keep it till I git back. Don't let nobody tech it. Little lame Billy's in th' barn. I seed him. He must 'a' slep' thar." And before any one thought to prevent him he was back in the midst of the flame and smoke.

They were all silent now, listening to the fierce crackling and watching the flames as they crept up the roof and along the rafters. Now and then they heard the crash of a timber as it fell into the fiery depths of the barn. Five, ten minutes passed; then they saw a movement near the door, and a moment later a figure staggered out, fell and tried to crawl toward them.

There was a great shout, and the overseer sprang forward and caught the figure in his arm. It was the lame boy.

"Where's old Tom?" the overseer asked as soon as the boy could speak.

Billy pointed to the barn.

"He brung me—downstairs," he gasped, "fur's th' door, an' then he fell an' hollered fer me t' hurry—fas' as ever I could—an' I did."

The overseer made a movement as though he would enter the barn, but at that moment there was a warning shout from the paupers, and as he sprang back the great building fell with a resounding crash. As the flames shot up he took the lame boy in his arms and moved toward the house.

"No use my waitin' here any longer," he said hoarsely.

An hour later they were all gathered in the great kitchen of the almshouse. The tin box was on the table.

"Might's well open it an' see what th' ole man had," some one suggested. "'Twon't do him any harm now."

The overseer did not answer, but he took up the box and began to unwind the long string that fastened it. As he raised the cover a curious smile crossed his face.

"There's Miser Tom's fortune," he said grimly as he poured the contents upon the table.

The paupers crowded forward and then looked at each other in dismay.

"A han'ful o' big coppers an' an old fashion spellin' book," grumbled one. "Miser Tom was a bigger fool 'n I thought."

The overseer counted the coins slowly. When he reached fifty-two he stopped.

"Fifty-two cents an' th' old book," he said quietly. "Not a very big fortune, but it meant a good deal t' old Tom. I guess we'll let Billy have it t' remember him by. Now all of you go back t' bed."

EDITORIAL.

It may be seem incredible, but the taxable acreage of Quincy is larger than eleven of the twenty-five cities of the commonwealth, viz Woburn, Waltham, Lowell, Newburyport, Lynn, Salem, Cambridge, Lawrence, Malden, Somerville and Chelsea, Holyoke and New Bedford are but a trifle larger.

Quincy has more acres of land than the aggregate of either of the following combinations of cities:

Cambridge, Somerville and Malden.
Cambridge, Malden and Chelsea.
Cambridge, Somerville and Chelsea.

The more territory there is in proportion to the population , the more the taxes are apt to be, as there are more miles of road to look after and take care of; more miles of water pipes, sewerage, etc.

Tribute to Former Director

The regular monthly meeting of the board of directors of the Quincy Co-operative Bank was held on Saturday evening and these resolutions were adopted:

Resolved:—That it is with sincere sorrow that the directors are called upon to record the death of George W. Prescott, their fellow member. Mr. Prescott had been connected with the bank almost from the beginning, having held shares in the first series, and having been a director since 1894. During all these years he has furnished a notable example of punctuality and regularity of attendance at the meetings, having rarely been absent except when out of town.

Mr. Prescott's long business career exemplifies in an unusual degree those fine old New England virtues of sterling honesty, frugality and tireless industry, which, practiced from youth to old age, enabled him to achieve success and competence from the humblest beginnings and in the face of almost insurmountable difficulties which might well have daunted a less resolute spirit.

Resolved:—That copies of these resolutions be sent to the family of the deceased and to the press.

A true copy—Attest

Farewell Sermon Rev. E. D. Webber

Rev. Edmund D. Webber, who recently resigned his pastorate at the Wollaston Baptist church to accept a call to the College church at Wolfville, N. S., took farewell of his charge at the Sunday evening service.

Rev. Mr. Webber reviewed his ministry in Wollaston, and thanked the people for the support given him, and for the many kindnesses shown to him during his pastorate. He had not achieved his ideal, but the people had been very kind and charitable toward him. He also spoke of the happy and pleasant relations with the people of Wollaston, irrespective of denomination. He had enjoyed the comradeship with the pastors of the different churches. A feeling of good fellowship had prevailed, and it was hard to sever the pleasant relationship formed during the past six years.

He also spoke of the new field of labor to which he was going. While on his vacation he had preached at the church there, and after the service had been asked if he would consider a call. He had declined, but later a call had come which he felt he could not refuse. The parish where he is going has a membership of 600 and the college and seminary students number 600 more, all of whom attended the church. It was the second largest church in the British Provinces.

Suprise Party.

At the home of Miss Edith Nelson on Faxon lane Friday evening Oct. 9, there was a very pleasant gathering of friends to attend a surprise party. Thomas Hennessy made the presentation speech. The present was a very delicate ring with turquoise settings.

During the evening games were played Music included solos by George Freeburg Thomas Hennessy, and a few selections by the Water street quartet. At eleven o'clock refreshments were served, and shortly after midnight the party broke up. The committee included Miss Ellen Nelson, Miss Ellen Anderson and Miss Rose Capiferri.

Among those present were Edith Nelson, Ellen Nelson, Nellie Anderson, Ellen Anderson, Rose Capiferre, Annie Hennessy, Mary Hennessy, Margaret Hennessy, Flora Hanson, Hulda Johnson, Elsie Johnson,, Annie Larson, Emma Larson, Cynthia Curtis, Hazel Smith and Ena Frye, Thomas Hennessy, Joe Berlucia, Arthur Richardson John Capiferri, Joe Capiferri, Joe Mercurio, George Freeburg, Edwin Borden, Edward Allan, Peter Williams, William Holt and Edward Maloney.

VACATIONISTS MEET.

There was a reunion Sunday evening at the home of Miss Charlotte F. Donovan on Chubbuck street, a number of those who spent their vacations at The Weirs, N. H., last summer, gathering to talk over old times and recall incidents of interest that happened in the popular New Hampshire resort. There were about twenty present and a very enjoyable evening was spent, during which refreshments were served. This is not the first of these reunions to be held, for this happy crowd has met several times since their first acquaintance at The Wiers, different individuals having invited the whole party to partake of their hospitolity.

Sad Ending For A Peacemaker

The funeral of Thomas Donahue was held Sunday from his home in Neponset, and was one of the largest funerals seen in this section for a long time, being at the same time a very sad affair.

Mr. Donahue attempted to play the role of a peacemaker in a quarrel of two friends about three weeks ago, and one turned on him inflicting injuries that caused his removal to the hospital. He never came out, till he was taken out for his funeral on Sunday. His mother died a few days ago and this probably hastened Mr. Donahue's death. He was employed at the Stearn's lumber company, and many of his fellow workmen attended the funeral. The Foresters also turned out in large numbers and marched to Norfolk Downs.

The funeral was from St. Ann's church, Neponset, and the burial was in the family lot, at St. Mary's cemetery, West Quincy.

Found Out What Goats Feed On

Since Hiram A. Hayden went to Pennville, Ind., and associated himself with the local paper there, he has been prominent in affairs of the town. The Journal says: At the regular meeting of Pennville lodge No. 212, F. & A. M., on Thursday evening, Oct. 1, the Master Mason degree was conferred on Hiram A. Hayden. After the work of the evening the members adjourned to Hotel Sawdy where a sumptuous banquet was served. All did justice to the excellent cooking of Mrs. Sawdy, especially the candidate, who when last seen was still at work on one of those famous New England squash pies—"just like mother used to make."

TO ATTEND HARVARD COURSE.

George H. Corliss of 51 Edison street has passed examinations and is enrolled as a member of the Harvard course in Modern Constitutional Government at the Lowell Institute which started last week in the administration building on Longwood avenue, Boston.

This course is given at the Lowell Institute, under the auspices of Harvard University in the evening, two evenings a week, commencing in October and continuing until June, with vacations at Christmas and in the spring. It is the course called Governmental at Harvard, and covers the governments of England, the United States, France, Germany, Switzerland, and other countries. Attention is given to constitutional law, the composition and power of representative bodies, the relations between the executive and legislative departments, parliamentary procedure, the organization and influence of political parties, the composition and powers of the courts, etc.

The course in Modern Constitutional Government is the same as given at Harvard; taught by the same professors ,and conducted in the same way, with the same tests and final examinations, followed by marks on the same scale. A mark of any grade obtained in this course is therefore equivalent to the same mark obtained in the course at Harvard and will be allowed by Harvard University to count toward the degree of A. B.

At the suggestion of Congressman Augustus P. Gardner, chairman of the Republican State convention, Mr Corliss is entering politics and is this year out for councilman from Ward Two.

SOME PUMPKINS.

In a communication from Boston to the New York Sun, "Faneuil" says: "Four ocean steamships and some coatswise vessels such as the daily boats from Nahant, Houghs Neck and Hingham came into port yesterday, and the magnitude of the thing was so thrilling to Bostonians that the evening editions of yesterday's papers announced the fact in "scare heads." One journal affirmed that some boats tied up to wharves had to be towed into midstream to accommodate the "many" arrivals. So you see Boston is "some pumpkins" in spite of the calamity shriekings of Galen Bowditch ,the faithful press messenger at the South Shore."

Y. M. C. A. NOTES.

The past week in the Boys' department of the Y. M. C. A. has been a record breaker. The gymnasium is now going in first class shape. The Juniors have two classes a week, Tuesday at four o'clock and Saturday at ten A. M. The employed boys have three classes a week, Monday, Wednesday and Saturday at eight o'clock. The Students have three classes a week, Monday Wednesday and Saturday at three thirty. Two opening receptions were held during the week and were great successes. Over three hundred boys visited the building last week. The first reception was for employed boys and every fellow present had a good time. Game tournaments are to be started in the course of the next week. Silver cups are offered as prizes for the two boys obtaining the greatest number of points. A silver cup is also offered for the boy most efficient in attendance at Bible Classes and knowledge of Bible at end of twenty weeks course. Enroll now for both tournament and Bible Classes. Junior reception Saturday evening proved to be a great event. Friday Oct. 16 is the night of the opening reception for students. A large number of fellows is expected. Every boy in Quincy is invited to join the Y. M. C. A. and help us make this the greatest year ever. Call at office and find out all particulars. Join now.

Home Furnishings At Lowest Prices.

It pays to be posted on furniture prices. It pays to look around. Much money is saved by furniture buyers when they make comparison of prices. It costs money to operate a high priced city store and big money too. Now who pays for all these high priced rents, high cost advertisements and enormous operating expenses. Why, it's the dear buying public. You help to keep these high priced plants in operation when you Pay their Prices. It's a fact that prices on furniture are lower in Quincy than they are in Boston. There's nothing strange about it. It costs less to do business, and when you trade here you get the benefit. Whatever you need this fall we urge you to get our Prices before you buy.

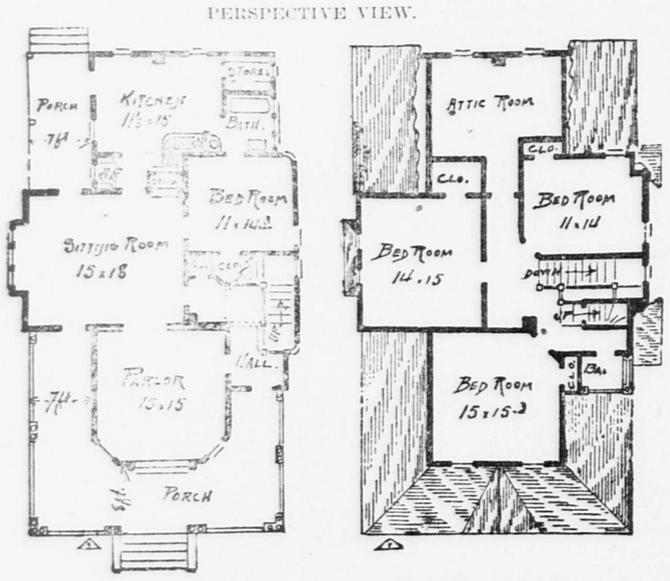
Imposing Frame House.

A Design Which Has Been Used Successfully In Illinois—Estimated Cost, $3,500.

Copyright, 1908, by George W. Payne & Son, Carthage, Ill.

PERSPECTIVE VIEW.



FIRST FLOOR PLAN. SECOND FLOOR PLAN.

The imposing frame house here illustrated is the residence of W. R. Harris of Bowen, Ill. Mr. Harris writes to the architect as follows: "Our residence, built from your design and under your supervision, is in every way satisfactory, and after occupying it for several months we cannot name a change we would desire. Comfort, convenience and cost all seem to have been consulted in its construction." The estimated cost is $3,500.

GEORGE W. PAYNE & SON.

Norfolk County And Vicinity

Mr. and Mrs. George O. White of EAST WEYMOUTH, celebrated the 40th anniversary of their marriage on Saturday at their home 419 East street, where they have lived ever since they were married. Refreshments were served and an orchestra furnished music during the evening. Mr. White was formerly an engineer, but no wspends his time in farming.

Daniel Vaughan, an old and well-known resident of SHARON, was hit by an electric car Sunday and so seriously injured that he never regained consciousness. He was 83 years old and was near sighted, which caused him to step out of the way of an automobile he saw and in front of the car he failed to notice. He died a short time after he reached his home.

At the AVON Baptist church on Sunday Rev. Alfred Fairbrother preached at the morning service on the subject "A memento from the wilderness." The evening service was at 6.30 and the sermon was on "The white devil."

A whist party and social was held Friday evening in HOLBROOK, in the rooms of the Central Social club, under the auspices of the young ladies of the town. After the whist, an entertainment was enjoyed and lunch was served.

The St. Mary's Woman's T. A. S. of STOUGHTON, held a barn party Friday evening in the Town hall, about 100 couples being present, in all kinds of farmer costume. The hall was decorated to suit the occasion, and the orchestra was also dressed costumed appropriately.

A memorial in the form of a monument has been erected in ROCKLAND in memory of Frederick O. McCartney, the great Socialist leader, who died in 1903. The monument will be unveiled and dedicated Sunday, Oct. 18, and invitations have been sent to all the Socialist leaders in this part of the state.

At the Republican county convention last week the following were named as the county committee for the ensuing year: Charles A. Pearson of Brookline; Edwin B. Nevin of Weymouth; Ephraim Snow, Jr., of Cohasset; Joseph H. Soliday of Dedham; Orion T. Mason of Medway; Fred L. Fisher of Norwood; Henry A. Boyden of Sharon; Frederick G. Katzmann of Hyde Park; Louis E. Flye of Holbrook; William B. Thurber of Milton; Henry T. Child of Needham James H. Cunningham, Quincy, and Moses E. Witt of Stoughton.

The towns of Sharon, Walpole, Mansfield, Wrentham and Foxboro have inaugurated a movement for an industrial high school.

The Norfolk County association of Kings Daughters and Sons held their 20th semi-annual convention at Brookline last week. There were reports on the "Gordon Rest" work, the Pond Home for the aged, and other works, with interesting addresses and music.

The ground has been cleared for the new Catholic church at NORWOOD, on the corner of Washington and Nahattan streets.

Dr. Edward Everett Hale presided Saturday at the autumn conference of the Lend-a Hand clubs at HINGHAM.

The Men's club of the Congregational church at HYDE PARK will hold its first meeting of the season on Wednesday evening.

Christ church at NEEDHAM will observe its 14th anniversary Oct. 25 and 26.

In the first Fulton Debating society debate of 1908, James A. Coveney of HYDE PARK will be one of the speakers. The debate will be held Friday in the Fulton rooms at Boston college. Mr. Coveney won the Fulton debating medal at college last spring.

RANDOLPH people were aroused late one night last week by a loud report seeming to come from the direction of Central square, many thinking it was a safe explosion. It was learned later that some one had set off a giant cannon cracker near the fountain.

WEDGE LIKE AIRSHIP.

New York Inventor's Arrowplane Resembles Paper Dart.

CAN SAIL IN HEAVY WIND.

Planes Operated to "Spill" the Wind if It Is Too Strong—Has Keel Like a Yacht to Keep Her Right Side Up. Automatic Rudders.

Do you remember the paper darts that the boys used to make in school and how gracefully they sailed on the air when the wind was not too strong? Well, that is the principle on which the latest airship has been planned, coupled with additional ideas caught from the flight of the arrow and the sailing of racing yachts. "Arrowplane," the inventor calls it, and, as he frequently addresses the members of the Aero club on the subject dearest to their hearts and was formerly secretary of the Aeronautical society and still an enthusiastic member of that organization, his efforts to solve the problem of aerial navigation are receiving the serious attention of the members of both organizations.

L. G. W. Schroeder is the inventor of the latest airship, which is unlike anything else of its kind. It consists of two planes forty feet long and wedge shaped. At the forward end the machine is only six inches wide. At the stern it is fourteen feet wide. There is a keel, seven inches deep, just like the fin keel on the English cutters that came over here to "lift the cup," says the New York Globe. The keel runs the entire length of the machine. There is a seven foot propeller forward, and provision is made for a larger propeller behind. These will be driven at the rate of 800 revolutions a minute by a forty horsepower, four cylinder, four cycle explosion engine.

The engine and other machinery are fastened to the bottom of the keel and close up to the front of the Arrowplane. That idea is taken from the boats that have lead on the bottom of the fin keel to keep them from turning turtle. Mr. Schroeder contends that there is little or no difference in principle between sailing on the water and in the air. By having all the weight at the bottom of the keel, he says, it will be impossible for his airship to turn turtle under any circumstances.

Sticking up out of the forward end of the Arrowplane is the steering rudder. At the rear of the horizontal planes are what might properly be called the equilibrium rudders. They are a couple of squares working up and down on hinges. These regulate the rising and dropping of the airship. By means of an invention which Mr. Schroeder is having patented the equilibrium rudders work automatically in an emergency such as resulted in the accident to Orville Wright. Mr. Schroeder is certain that under no circumstances, not excepting the breaking down of the engine, will his airship descend in any way but right side up. No heavy wind or sudden gust of wind can bother him.

The inventor's reasons for this confidence are twofold. There is nothing above the two planes, which consist of a frame of hollow steel tubing into which are set frames covered with canvas or other material strong enough for the purpose. These squares are worked by levers much as the ventilating windows in a greenhouse are manipulated. In a heavy blow these squares that comprise the planes will be tilted at an angle sufficient to "spill the wind" out of the planes, just as is done on a sailboat when a squall comes up. Then there is the fact that the Arrowplane is designed to travel on an even keel and that both direction and height are under control. If one set of rudders gives out there are others to do the work.

The machine rests on four automobile wheels, two feet in diameter, which are used in starting. To rise in the air the sections of the planes are raised sufficiently to get the greatest pressure from the air against them. The propellers are started; the machine runs forward and sails from the ground. When the desired height is reached the sections of the planes are flattened and automatically locked in their places. After that the operator goes where he pleases. There are a dial and a pendulum to tell when the airship gets off an even keel or tilts to one side or the other. It is the present purpose of the inventor to make machines that will be a success in a commercial way to the extent of building them to carry two or three passengers. Mr. Schroeder is sure he can do it.

This latest addition to the flotilla of airships is now being assembled. The inventor is confident that he has the right idea and is enthusiastic about the future of his airship. He sent out a lot of miniatures made of paper from the windows of his offices in New York city the other day. They went where he said they would.

"We naturally think our own children are finer than any other children," he said, "but that is not the reason I consider my aeroplane superior to other airships. My objection to the Wright brothers' machine is that it is forty feet wide and only eight feet long. See how little air pressure they get in the long way of their aeroplane. My machine gets the pressure for all its length. There is practically no difference between sailing in the air and in the water. If the principle of the wide aeroplane is right, why are not boats built in the same way? Boats are constructed long and narrow.

"Too many of the airships are built on the bird model, which is what makes the trouble for them. The wings are all right until a wind comes up. A bird will make its wings smaller, offering less resistance in a high wind. The wings on the airships cannot be reduced that way.

"Most of the machines with which we are familiar do best when there is little or no air. A heavy wind will not bother us at all. We can always go up when the others would not dare to. All the models with which we have experimented have behaved beautifully, and I have no doubt the machine will do the same. I think we have solved the problem and that we will be able to construct machines at reasonable cost that will carry two and three passengers."

UNION OF BALL PLAYERS.

Samuel Gompers Sees No Objection to Their Organizing.

Ball players of the future may form a part of the American Federation of Labor. President Samuel Gompers approves it, seeing no reason why, like other labor, it should not organize and tote union cards and work on a union schedule.

President Gompers saw the Browns wallop the Tigers at St. Louis the other afternoon. While he has never gained particular note as an enthusiastic fan, he is interested in the national game. After returning from the game Gompers was asked as to the possibility of organizing baseball players into a union.

"I can see no reason why they should not organize if they wish to," he said. "Baseball playing has become a skilled profession, and the thousands who assembled to see the game in which the Browns won the victory prove it has become a utility. As skill is required to play the game, I see no objection to those of the craft joining for mutual advantage."

If the ball players decide to form a union the fans may be furnished the delightful spectacle of a "strike" different from those common in baseball parks; also there may be "walkouts" when some south paw shows up for work without a card. The question of the future for applicants on major league teams may be "Do you belong to the union?" rather than "What is your batting average?"

WAR ON JACK RABBITS.

Southern California Farmers Planning a Big Drive.

A great rabbit drive on Oct. 6 is being arranged by the farmers and ranches of Delano, Cal., in Kern county, and it is expected that anywhere from 25,000 to 100,000 of the long eared pests will be slain.

The drive will be made a big holiday occasion. There will be a barbecue, with all sorts of merrymaking. A great inclosure will be prepared, and the hunters will spread out so as to form a line across the country for ten miles or more, and the animals will be forced to head into the trap, where they will be slaughtered. They will then be skinned and shipped to San Francisco and Los Angeles markets, where they bring a few cents apiece.

There are hundreds of thousands of jack rabbits in Kern county, and crops have suffered heavily from them. Efforts to establish vineyards this year failed because of their depredations.

TO TEACH POSTAL WISDOM.

School Children to Learn How to Mail Letters and Study Postal Laws.

Postmaster General Meyer issued an order the other day directing all postmasters to unite with their local school authorities with the view of adopting the most effective method of instructing school children as to the organization and operations of the postal service, particularly the proper addressing of letters and the importance of placing return cards on envelopes.

Postmasters are also directed to arrange if possible to deliver personal talks to the pupils and give teachers access to the Postal Guide and the postal laws and render them every assistance in securing necessary information.

In Africa.

A shadow clouds the endless sky
In Africa.
The jungle echoes with a sigh
In Africa.
The poor, benighted Hottentot
No longer roams the sandy plot,
But lurketh in his bamboo cot
In Africa.

The lion skulks with trembling tread
In Africa.
The tiger wishes he were dead
In Africa.
And, chattering, with grinning faces,
From bough to bough in each oasis,
The monks no longer run the bases
In Africa.

Loud wails the hippopotamus
In Africa.
"Oh, why did they discover us
In Africa?"
The pallid boa constrictor skips
Unto the gum tree's tallest tips
And hisses through his whitened lips
In Africa.

Within the deep depths of the Nile
In Africa
A pang assails the crocodile
In Africa.
No more he sunneth on the sand,
Unterrified, blase and bland,
A-snapping flies to beat the band
In Africa.

What means, you ask, this boding hush
In Africa?
This ducking to the uncut bush
In Africa?
Quite soon upon that blighted shore,
Toting his faithful "forty-four,"
Landeth the good King Theodore
In Africa.

Park Rules for Handling Boats

The Metropolitan Park Commission has adopted the following rules to regulate the handling of boats, spring and autumn at Quincy shore:

Material and gear for boats that can be carried in the hand, also small boats that can be lifted and carried by hand, will be allowed to be carried across the Quincy Shore driveway at any time, subject to police supervision and regulation.

Boats may be hauled out near the big tree at Appleton street, on land of the commission, subject to conditions contained in permits to be issued from the office of the commission in Boston. Such boats, however, shall not be hauled out before October 1st, and must be off the shore and in the water by April 30.

Between October 1 and May 31, boats may be hauled across the driveway at Beach street, at right angles, on four-wheeled trucks drawn by not more than two horses, subject to police supervision and regulation as to time and manner. Only four-wheeled trucks shall be used, and no blocking or tackle of any kind shall be used in getting such boats across the driveway. No boats on trucks shall be taken across the driveway between June 1 and September 30. A section of curbing will be removed by the commission at a point opposite Beach street.

Persons desiring to have mooring stones must ask for a special permit to move such stones across the driveway, and such permits will be granted only during the season of the year when the ground is frozen.

Lady Betty Across the Water

By C. N. & A. M. WILLIAMSON

Copyright, 1906, by McClure, Phillips & Co.

SYNOPSIS.

CHAPTER I—The story is told in the first person by Lady Betty Bulkeley, the pretty young sister of the Duke of Stanforth. She is to visit America in care of Mrs. Stuyvesant-Knox (Mrs. Ess Kay,) a leader of American society, and the latter's cousin, Miss Sally Woodburn, in order that her elder sister Victoria's prospective fiance, Sir Gilbert Mantell, may not be attracted by her.

II—On board ship Betty is attracted by a young American steerage passenger, who saves a child from drowning. Mrs. Ess Kay, who is very "exclusive," objects to Betty's interest in the young man. Betty also meets Tom Doremus, cousin of Mrs. Vander Windt, of New York society.

Fortunately for my peace of mind we didn't stop very long in that fierce street, but cut across again and came out in Fifth avenue, of which one seems to be born knowing a little more than of other streets in America. Just as almost every one in English novels lives in Park lane, so all the New Yorkers you read of live in Fifth avenue, and I should have been disappointed if Mrs. Ess Kay hadn't, because in that case I should eventually have to go home without studying home life in the States from the right standpoint.

At first I didn't see where the grand houses I'd heard of kept themselves, for everywhere were smart shops and public buildings and—so close now that we could put down our sunshades—mountainous skyscrapers. The shops were beautiful, though Mrs. Ess Kay apologized for them by saying that it was out of season, and I'd never seen so much brilliance of color or variety in a street. I tried to search for the cause of this effect, but I couldn't define it. Perhaps it was partly the clearness of the atmosphere, but there was a great deal more than that. Everything you passed seemed to be pink or pale green or gold or ivory white or ultramarine blue, yet when you really thought it out detail by detail it wasn't. And, though I'd considered the skyscrapers awful from a distance spinning along at their feet I couldn't deny them a fantastic kind of attractiveness.

At our rate of speed I hadn't to wait many minutes for the grand Fifth avenue houses, and oh, poor London—poor, dear London! I wanted to fly back and tear down Buckingham palace.

Mrs. Ess Kay had always talked about her "New York home," which made it sound rather small and modest, so I was surprised when we stopped before a huge, square pile, built of rich looking, rough brown stones, so nearly the color of a Christmas plum pudding that it made me hungrier than ever to look at it. The house is trimmed with three wide bands of carving, made of the same kind of stone, and there are carved bronze railings and lamps on the porch, and the front door is carved, too, like the door of a cathedral.

We were let into a vestibule, all colored mosaic and things, and that opened into a big, square, glassed over garden, with a great marble fountain playing in the middle. I never saw such a wonderful place in my life, but until I got used to it, I couldn't help feeling that it was more like a splendid foreign hotel than a mere house. The garden isn't a real garden when you come to examine it, for it's paved with rare stones of different colors, like the jewels in Aladdin's cave, but all around the fountain beautiful flowers are growing and pink and white water lilies float in the marble basin. There are orange trees in pots, and a forest of tall palms, all of which are reflected and repeated over and over again in the mirrors of which the walls are made, and on the little tables standing about here and there among groups of inlaid chairs are bowls overflowing with roses. The roof is a skylight, over which creepers have been trained, so that the light which filters through is a lovely green. No doors are visible at first glance, but when you are initiated, all you have to do is to walk up to the mirror wall, find a gold button, press it and a door opens into a room as marvelous as the fountain court, around which, it seems, all the rest of the house is built.

"We'll have something to drink here," said Mrs. Ess Kay, "before we take off our things." So we all sat down, among the palms and orange blossoms, and a delicious sense of peace after storm stole over us with the coolness and the green dusk and the perfume of flowers.

I supposed that "something to drink" at this time of day meant tea, but almost immediately a footman came through the glass wall, carrying a tray with nothing on it except tall tumblers. There were straws sticking out of the tumblers, and as the man moved I could hear a faint tinkle of ice.

For a minute I was bitterly disappointed, because the thought of tea had supported me for hours. But when I tasted the stuff in my glass I wasn't disappointed any longer. It had two or three strawberries, some bits of pineapple, and a white grape bobbing about on top, and it was full of chopped ice. I don't know what it was, for nobody mentioned its name, and I was ashamed to ask, lest it might seem too ignorant; but it was good, and tasted as if it might have a little wine in it, mixed with fizzy water and other things. When I had drunk mine, I felt a different girl; quite merry and so friendly toward Mrs. Ess Kay. I had never thought her such a nice woman. I laughed at almost everything that she and Sally said, and I said some rather funny things myself. Still, I'm not sure that as a regular thing I wouldn't rather have tea.

We sat resting for some time, though I wasn't tired at all now. I could have run a mile, but suddenly I felt a little sleepy, and I was glad when Mrs. Ess Kay proposed to go to our rooms. Leaving the fountain court we came into a hall, hung with tapestry, and from it a wide stairway led us up to a gallery, lighted from the top, which runs all round the house, with the doors of the bedrooms opening off from it.

Mine is so gorgeous that I haven't known one thoroughly comfy moment in it since I came, except at night when I'm asleep.

One would think, as Battlemead is ranked among the finest old Tudor places in England, and people come on Thursdays and give shillings to see it (a very good thing for us, though it's extremely inconvenient, as it pays for all the gardens and all the servants' wages) that it would be grander than quite a new house, in a country like America. But Battlemead, even in its palmiest days, must have been shabby beside Mrs. Ess Kay's "home" in New York.

Our grandest bedroom, the one where Queen Elizabeth slept, is quite a dull old hole compared to Mrs. Ess Kay's splendid room. Mine, at home, has all the furniture covered with faded chintz, and the curtains are made of plain white dimity. But I love the deep window seats where I can curl up among cushions, with a cataract of roses veiling the picture of the terrace with its ivy covered stone balustrade, the sundial, the two white peacocks, and far away, the park with a blue mist among the trees. And I haven't learned yet to love my beautiful room at Mrs. Ess Kay's, though I admire it immensely—admire to the verge of awe.

It's pink and white and silver. The carpet is pink and feels like moss, as you step. The wall is covered with pink and silver brocade, except where there are panels with Watteau-like pictures. The curtains are foamy lace, with the pink and silver brocade falling over them. The furniture looks as if it were made of ivory; there's a mirror in three parts, reaching from the floor half way to the ceiling, so that you see yourself in front and two profiles, like astral bodies, things which I've always wanted to cultivate, as they would be so nice for trying on dresses, or making calls on dull people. On the dressing table is another mirror, an oval one, framed with pink roses, each of which has an electric light hidden in its heart, and the bedspread is of pink and silver brocade to match the hangings, with a large, hard roll like an ossified bolster, at the top.

I believe it's that bed more than anything else which makes me feel that it's always Sunday in my room at Mrs. Ess Kay's. I'm used to old fashioned, ruffly pillows and a plain white coverlet smelling of lavender, on which I can flop down whenever I like, to read a novel or to have a nice little "weep." But there's no flopping on this gorgeous pink and silver expanse, and it's small consolation to know that no queen of England ever had one as handsome.

EMPLOYEE STOCKHOLDERS.

A Boston Corporation Shares Its Profits With Its Employees.

Of the 6,086 preferred stockholders of the Massachuusetts gas companies 650 are employees of the Boston Consolidated Gas company under the profit sharing plan, placed in operation two years ago at the time the sliding scale act was adopted.

Under the terms of the profit sharing plan any person who has been in the employ of the company for one year or more who is of good habits, faithful, energetic and honest is paid the same premium or dividend on the amount of his compensation that the stockholder receives as dividend on his investment—viz, as the Boston Consolidated Gas company paid 8 per cent on its stock in the June 30 fiscal year the employees received an addition of 8 per cent in their annual salary.

The amount set aside for employees is not paid in cash, but is credited to them, and when a sufficient sum accumulates to enable the purchase of one or more shares of the preferred stock of the Massachusetts gas companies the president is authorized to make the purchase. When this stock is once purchased it becomes the absolute property of the employee, and he has the right to do with it as he sees fit, but before selling it he must first notify the president of his intention to do so, and if there is any reason why he should sell it—because of the actual need of the money, for instance—he may dispose of it without restrictions. On the other hand, if in the opinion of the chief executive no good reason exists for disposing of the stock the employee may sell it, but he will be dropped from the profit sharers' list in the future. Provision is also made that any balance that is not used for the purchase of Massachusetts gas stock be placed to the credit of the employee on the books of the company at 4 per cent interest.

The object of this plan is to secure better results from employees and to encourage them to be frugal and economical. Every employee except the president is eligible as a profit sharer. In the past fiscal year the company paid about $45,000 in premiums to its employees.—Progressive Age.

Reaping the Whirlwind.

Wheeling, W. Va., has gone more deeply into municipal ownership than almost any other city in the United States. Some of its undertakings are in desperate need of reconstruction, but apparently nobody wants to lend it the necessary money, and no depreciation fund has been provided. The situation is thus described in the Municipal Journal and Engineer:

"As a result of inability to sell municipal improvement bonds, which have been authorized by citizens in a popular election, Wheeling finds itself in a very serious predicament. There were bids for but a little over $50,000 worth of the issues of $695,000, and it is likely that a new ordinance will have to be framed for resubmission to the people, entailing additional expense and necessarily retarding the work on the improvements. Bids had been advertised for, and but three were received. Two were from citizens who were willing to take a small amount at par. The third was from a Kansas City corporation, made with the proviso that all the contemplated work be awarded the company at a reasonable price."

Waste at Newcastle, Ind.

Municipal ownership of the water plant in this city has proved more expensive each year and has reached a point where radical steps must be taken by the city authorities. Since the failure of the gas wells owned by the city fuel bills have become an important item and the cost of operating the plant has largely increased.

Using water at a flat rate, consumers have become careless, with the result that thousands of gallons of water are wasted each month. The waste has become so wanton that several times this summer the city would have been in great danger had a serious fire broken out. The waste has also increased the operating expenses, more than three times as much water being pumped at the plant as is necessary.—Municipal Journal and Engineer.

A Vain Search.

Hudson, in this county, has done its own lighting for the past eleven years and run behind more than $2,000 a year in doing it. Like Wakefield, it has found a lighting plant a pretty expensive utility. There is nothing in the Hudson outfit to show that the grand deficit of $23,000 in the time mentioned has gone into the plant, and it is not easy for the townsmen to find where it has gone.—Lowell (Mass.) Citizen.

The municipal electricity undertakings of Brighton, England, caused a loss during the past year of about $18,000, bringing the losses for three years up to over $74,000.—St. Louis Times.

They Want What They Want When They Want It

People in the great cities fill many pages of the big newspapers with WANT ADS. When they want what they want when they want it, they patronize the WANT AD. columns.

The same thing can be done in this town and this paper—the introduction of the wanter to the wantee.

If you have anything for sale, for rent, for exchange; if you want to buy or rent anything, if you want to get a position or if you want to hire somebody—

A little WANT will bring you what you want.

The cost is insignificant compared to the satisfactory result.

GOVERNORS' CONFERENCE

Will Be Productive of Much Good For New England

GREAT HARMONY OF FEELING

Details of General Conference to Be Called to Plan Preservation of Our Resources--Tree Planting, Shellfish Protection, State Highways and Regulation of Automobiles Among Things to Be Considered

Boston, Oct. 12.—An official statement regarding the conference of New England governors held here Saturday afternoon was given out last night by Frank L. Dean, the secretary of the conference, with the authorization of the governors of Massachusetts, Connecticut, Vermont, New Hampshire and Maine, and the governor-elect of Maine. The statement follows:

For the first time in the history of New England, as far as known, the governors of every New England state met in conference on Saturday afternoon at the invitation of Governor Guild and definitely decided upon the program for the coming conference on the promotion of New England's interests and the preservation of New England resources.

There is a peculiar bond which unites the New England states, not only in community of aspiration, but even in material interests. The population is of a similar character throughout these northeastern states, their traditions and history are linked in the closest way, and it is found that in spite of the long years that have elapsed since they came together as provinces to promote the common interest, the same touch of fraternity still existed after the lapse of nearly a century and a half.

The conference of governors brought out a most remarkable harmony of feeling, and in every case the details of the program adopted met with unanimous approval. The general verdict was one of surprise that such an attempt had not been made earlier, and it was generally agreed that there were great possibilities of advantage to the entire section.

The representation of the various states was confirmed as follows: That the governors should themselves participate in it and should invite as members the lieutenant governors, the attorneys general, the presidents of New England senates and speakers of New England houses of representatives, together with the members of congress and senators from New England. To those official members of the conference it was decided that the governors of the different states should add prominent citizens, representing the various walks in life, to the number of two for each representative in congess and two for each senator from New England states.

It was decided that if anything was to be accomplished, the subjects of discussion must of necessity be rigidly restricted. The three topics of discussion for the first conference of its kind will be tree planting, the protection of shellfish, and the construction and maintenance of state highways, together with the regulation and taxation of automobiles.

Tree planting will occupy the attention of the conference on the first day, the protection of lobsters, clams and other shellfish on the second day, and the construction and maintenance of highways, with the possibility of uniform regulation and taxation of automobiles, on the third day. In each case expert specialists are to be invited by the governors to address the meeting.

In regard to tree planting, the experts invited will not merely discuss the planting of forest trees and the extension of forest tracts, but also attention will be given to the planting of fruit trees and the extension and improvement of New England orchards.

It was discovered that the wildest discrepancy exists in the state laws of New England in regard to shellfish, particularly lobsters. The difference of law in the various states will be made clear and experts of international reputation will be asked to establish if possible a uniform policy for the retention and extension of this important source of food supply.

On the third day attention will be given not merely to methods of construction and materials for road building, but particularly to the establishment of interstate trunk lines or thoroughfares, running logical and carefully prepared routes from one great centre of New England to another and to the confines of this section.

The widest difference of state laws in regard to automobiles, and even in regard to the principles of their regulation, will be pointed out. It is hoped, among other things, that a uniform method of automobile regulation, if not of taxation, may be adopted for all New England.

Digging For Fire Victims

Richford, Vt., Oct. 12.—The bones of five bodies were unearthed yesterday by the workmen who are overhauling the ruins of the elevator fire. None of these can be identified. The fire is gradually burning itself out. Services were held in the Protestant churches yesterday in memory of the missing Protestant dead, and in the Catholic churches for those of that faith.

NO SIGN OF SETTLEMENT

Indications That Lynn Shoe Strike Will Be Prolonged

Lynn, Mass., Oct. 12.—Little encouragement was given toward an early settlement of the lasters' strike here by the various conferences and meetings Sunday.

At a meeting late Saturday night of the various union representatives and Knights of Labor, a proposition was presented for the men to go back to work in the factories where no actual grievances existed, subject to the approval of the executive boards.

When the executive board met Sunday, however, no recognizance was taken of the suggestion. The board gave out a statement, on the other hand, that as the Manufacturers' association had not repudiated the stand taken by the Joseph Caunt company, there was nothing left to do but fight out to a finish along the whole line.

A mass meeting of strikers was held yesterday and the situation reviewed in detail. The officers of the Board of Trade will make an attempt today to resume arbitration negotiations with a portion of the manufacturers.

The Central Labor union has endorsed the strike and the situation will be placed before the State Federation at its meeting in Lowell today and an appeal made for help.

BUT LITTLE HOPE OF SAVING YANKEE

Work on Cruiser Likely to Be Soon Given Up

Newport, R. I., Oct. 12.—A heavy southeasterly gale and rough sea in Buzzards bay did still further damage to cruiser Yankee, ashore on Hen and Chickens shoals, and it is the opinion of prominent naval officials here that the vessel must soon be abandoned.

The work of taking everything movable from the cruiser that is possible is progressing daily, but the fact that wrecking companies are unwilling to take the contract to float her, and the great expense of such an undertaking and her subsequent repairs, lead to the belief that work upon her will soon be given up.

Her officers and crew will probably be sent to Charlestown navy yard to await the action of a court of inquiry to be appointed by the navy department.

"I Shall Be Elected President"

Cincinnati, Oct. 12.—William H. Taft yesterday climbed Mount Auburn, the highest of Cincinnati's seven hills, and then climbed the stairway of the water tower which surmounts the hill. Previous to his exercise, which the candidate took in anticipation of three weeks in a private car, he attended church. The Taft special train left Cincinnati this morning for three days in Ohio, three days in the south, next Sunday in Washington, a day in New Jersey and Maryland, another in Ohio, three days in Indiana, a week in New York, the closing meeting of the campaign in Youngstown, O., the night before election and then home for Taft to vote.

The candidate yesterday again said, as he did during his western trip: "I shall be elected President of the United States."

Pitched Battle In Church

New Britain, Conn., Oct. 12.—Chairs, knives and candlesticks were used with telling effect in a factional fight between the Galacians and Hungarians in the Holy Trinity Catholic church here at mass yesterday. As a result of the fight two men are in a hospital, badly injured. Seven members of the congregation are under arrest, charged with assault. The trouble started when one of the two choirs representing each faction was ordered to stop singing. A general fight ensued, which wrecked the inside of the church before it was stopped by the police.

Many Injured at Football

Schenectady, N. Y., Oct. 12.—None of the players hurt in Saturday's football game between Union and Wesleyan in this city was seriously injured except Captain Potter of Union, whose collarbone was broken. Captain Hammond of Wesleyan, who, it was feared, was suffering from a fracture of the skull, was only rendered unconscious and has left the hospital. All the other players will be in the game again in a few days. Their injuries were due to imperfect physical condition.

Protest of Conductors

Boston, Oct. 12.—More than 400 conductors and trainmen of the New York, New Haven and Hartford railroad held an indignation meeting here and framed a protest to be forwarded to the officials of the road against conductors being compelled to work on both passenger and freight trains. It was claimed the organization's agreement with the road provided for separation of passenger and freight conductors.

Supreme Justices Gather

Washington, Oct. 12.—After a recess of more than four months, the supreme court of the United States resumed business today and will continue in term until next June. As has long been the court's custom, nothing beyond the justices, the clerk and the marshal of the court making a formal call on the president took place today.

Austrian Coat-of-Arms Torn Down

Cettinje, Montenegro, Oct. 12.—During a demonstration in the streets yesterday, a band of rioters tore down the coat-of-arms from the Austrian consulate.

Educating the Filipino Woman

Some Results of American Occupation. The Task of Inducing Women to Learn Useful Accomplishments.

By ELEANOR FRANKLIN EGAN.

THE visit of the American fleet to the Philippines again directs attention to these possessions of the United States.

It seems impossible to believe that in ten years such a work could be accomplished as has been done by the American educators in the Philippine Islands for the Filipino woman. The Filipino woman needs no apologist. She is naturally strong mentally, is pretty to look upon more often than not, and she has a feminine weakness for pretty clothes, trinkets and innocent display. But with all this the so called civilized Filipino woman, up to the time of American occupation in the Philippines, was densely ignorant.

When the American educational department in the Philippines first began its work girls were in all the classes in the schools, whatever the subject taught. They were to be found, after four or five years of preliminary education, working out the intricacies of advanced mathematics, poring over difficult problems in physics, peering through microscopes at mysterious botanical specimens, glibly expounding ethical culture theories and making themselves generally ridiculous in the eyes of everybody who knew that they had not yet learned the rudiments of civilized life, for they had to be taught the dignity of labor. For a girl to become superficially learned in the sciences and arts, which could be of no earthly practical use to her, was considered an honorable achievement. But for this same girl to be called upon to perform some menial task, the doing of which would better her own material condition and that of the people about her, would have been to insult her most abominably, for menial labor was considered disgraceful by the Filipino prior to the American regime.

Through literacy they have got rid of much superstition and have arrived at a proper estimate of themselves. Now the bureau of education is putting these girls and women seriously to work. There have been installed classes in domestic economy, and girls are being taught how to cook, how to sew, how to feed themselves and their children to the best advantage on what their resources allow. They are being taught how to make their tropical homes homelike and sanitary. They are being taught, first, last and all the time, personal hygiene and all such useful accomplishments as will make them propagators of a healthy race.

As in most nations, the best material to work upon among the Filipinos exists in the ranks of the upper classes and it was almost impossible in the beginning to get either a well born woman or man to make any personal effort. Did the teacher ask Miss Carmer Rojos to bring a dish from the schoo cupboard in which to mix the omelet that was to be the object lesson in the cooking class Miss Carmen would turr to somebody of less exalted rank than herself or perhaps to her personal servant, who would be always at her call, commanding her to do the teacher's bidding. Then the teacher, if she were diplomatic, would carefully explain to Miss Carmen her duties and the dignity which lay in the performing of them without protest. If she were not diplomatic she would say, "Carmen, I asked you to bring the dish; you are to do it at once," and Carmen would very likely break it in her fine, aristocratic rage or else swing on her little naked heel and leave the class room. But the classes in domestic science are rapidly becoming popular among that class of girls which it is most necessary to reach, and it is safe to say that in the next generation there will be a vast decrease in infant mortality due to this education alone as well as the development of finer, stronger and better balanced Filipinos. Could there be a stronger objective for education than this?

MORE DEAD ONES AND FEW MOURNERS.

The electric plant formerly owned by Tawas City, Mich., is now in private hands. No information is obtainable from city officials.

The generating plant of the city electric light works of Fayetteville, N. C., installed in 1902 at a cost of $30,000, has been closed down, and a contract for current has been made with a private company.

The municipal electric light plant of Galena, Ill., was installed in 1898 at a cost of $18,000. It was sold last July for $13,000, but this price included a twenty-five year light, power and traction franchise. Under the new contract the city will get practically twice the amount of street lighting that was furnished by the municipal plant at only 15 per cent greater cost. The plant has not been a success. One account of it says:

"Its management was changed as often as new political cliques gained power, and at times there was no street illumination at all. The commercial service was inferior."

News of the action of the council spread rapidly, and a large crowd congregated in front of one of the hotels to express their delight at getting rid of the plant. A brass band was pressed into service, and speeches were made by prominent citizens.

On Aug. 1 S. G. Blatchford took possession of the municipal electric plant installed by the village of Kansas, Ill., in 1900. The mayor writes that the plant was sold "to clean up our indebtedness." The plant had been in the market for a year before it found a purchaser, the sale having been ordered by a vote of the citizens. A disinterested citizen wrote as follows last February:

"The principal cause for dissatisfaction with public ownership was inefficiency or, you may say, economy.

"The affairs of the plant were attended to until recently by three—now one—members of the board of trustees, who received no extra pay for their services and therefore were not as attentive to the business as if it had been their own or they had been properly paid.

"The man in charge of the mechanical part of the plant is an engineer, but not an electrician, more than one might be who works entirely by rule of thumb.

"The bad service deters people who would otherwise patronize the plant from using the light. There is no service after midnight. Although it is generally believed that all night service and cheaper rates would result in a substantial increase of business, the men in charge hesitate to take the responsibility of making the change, which might be a losing venture.

"Electricity has almost been displaced in the business buildings by gasoline, owing to the cheapness and being generally more satisfactory than the electrics under city management."

Socialist Testimony.

Hon. Carl D. Thompson, a Socialist member of the Wisconsin legislature, points as the foreword to his pamphlet "The Constructive Programme of Socialism" this quotation from Liebknecht:

"We are not going to attain socialism at one bound. The transition is going on all the time, and the important thing for us in this explanation is not to paint a picture of the future, which in any case would be useless labor, but to forecast a practical programme for the immediate period, to formulate and justify measures that shall serve as aids to the new Socialist birth."

Mr. Thompson then proceeds to outline the "measures that shall serve as aids to the new Socialist birth," devoting more than one-third of his brochure to municipal ownership, which he frankly calls municipal socialism and evidently regards as the most available means for accustoming the public to socialistic principles and methods. We owe a debt of gratitude to Mr. Thompson for helping to make clear the intimate connection between municipal ownership and socialism.

Mint, Anise and Cummin.

The growth of a small Wisconsin city made it very desirable to erect a high school building, but the citizens voted down the necessary bonds because it was felt that the indebtedness recently incurred for constructing a municipal light and water plant was as much as the people wanted to pay interest on at present. This is typical of what is going on all over the country. Cities are pawning their credit to invest in utilities which can be operated better and more economically by private enterprise instead of reserving it for true municipal purposes—schools, playgrounds, parks, paving, sewerage, etc. The result is that city development is checked, health is jeopardized and education is hampered because cities find it more interesting to invade the field of speculative business than to provide properly for the more commonplace but important functions of city government.

The City Pays the Bills.

The city of Kingston, Ont., has just discovered that it has been supplying current to its largest power customer at 17 per cent less than the actual cost of generating it. The city officials would not have made such a contract if they had been operating a plant in which their own money was invested.

Under the profit sharing plan adopted in 1907 by the New Haven (Conn.) Gas Light company between the corporation and its employees the men now own a total of 271 shares of the stock of the company.—American Gas Light Journal.

Quincy Locals Briefly Told

Councilman and Mrs. R. J. Teasdale are taking in the sights at the National capital.

The annual roll call of the members of Mt. Wollaston lodge, I. O. O. F., will take place tomorrow evening.

Mrs. Samuel R. Edwards, formerly of Quincy, died on Sunday, at the home of her granddaughter in Roxbury. She was in her 95th year.

F. A. Page was the speaker at the first meeting of the season of the Wollaston Y. P. R. U. in the Unitarian vestry, Sunday evening.

A large audience packed the Wollaston Baptist church on Sunday evening at the farewell services of its pastor who leaves to accept a call to Wolfville, N. S. On Thursday evening, October 15, an informal farewell reception will be tendered Rev. and Mrs. Webber in the church from 7.30 until 9.30. All friends of the church and community are invited.

Wollaston Whist Club.

The Wollaston Whist club held its first tournament of the season at the residence of Pres. J. G. Brown on Highland avenue, on Saturday evening. Eight pairs took part in the tournament and if the meeting is a sample of what is to follow, the Wollaston Whist club will have a very successful season. The next meeting will be held Saturday evening at the residence of Councilman Broughton on Taylor street. The score of Saturday evening was:

J. H. Broughton and G. R. Thompson plus 5 1-4
J. A. Hamilton and F. J. Shay plus 5
J. H. Slade and A. B. Hillman plus 2
J. A. Penniman and C. E. Bates plus 1 1-2
C. E. Barker and H. A. Stevens minus 3-4
J. G. Brown and C. B. Hoxie minus 2 1-4
S. A. Gardner, Jr. and Wm. Taylor minus 3 1-2
V. S. Brokaw and T. H. Foster minus 7 1-4

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

FORE RIVERS WIN

Defeat the Howard & Bullough Soccer Team From Pawtucket

The Fore River boys had to extend themselves Saturday in the game against the Howard & Bullough team from Pawtucket, R. I. The final score was 1-0, which shows how close the game was.

The home team started with a rush and outclassed their opponents completely in the first ten minutes of play. Richardson got a goal right off the reel, but it didn't count, as he was offside when he kicked. However, this only spurred the local boys on, and by a fast exhibition of teamwork, Richardson again sent the ball flying through into the net for the first and what proved to be the only score of the game.

After this neither team was able to score, although at many times the ball was dangerously close to both goals, but fast playing on the defensive stopped any scoring. At one time, on a penalty kick, the visiting team had free try at the goal, with only the goal tender to stop the ball. In a case like this the man in the goal has about one chance in ten of stopping the ball, if it is kicked straight. But the Howard kicker was nervous, and in trying to fool Neil, he fooled himself, and the ball curved wide of the goal posts, the visitors thereby losing a fine chance to tie the score.

By the way, this was Neil's first appearance this season with the Fore River. He is one of the best goals in the game today, and greatly strengthened the team Saturday. Neil played goal on the All America team that was defeated by the England Champion team in Boston two years ago.

The presence also of "Billy" McGregor in the line-up helped to strengthen the team, and when these two boys get rounded into the form and team-work of the rest of the team, the combination will work much faster.

The game Saturday was a decisive one for Fore River, as they were tied with the Fall River Rovers for first place before the game, and if they lost and the Rovers won, the local team would drop from first place and vice versa. But both teams won and so they are still tied for the lead.

The game was fast throughout as the score indicates, and was one of the cleanest seen in this city this season. The rivalry between the teams seemed to be friendly as it should be, and there was a marked difference between Saturday's game and the game against the Rovers earlier in the season.

Besides Neil and McGregor, Richardson and D. McDonald played well for Fore River, while G. McAllister, Pendleton and Titmes played a good game for Howard & Bullough. McAllister is former Fore River player and was considered "one of the best" when playing here a few years ago.

The exact standing of all the teams in the New England league up to date, will appear, as soon as it can be made out.

The summary:

FORE RIVER	HOWARD & BULLOUGH

Mr. Bryan declares that he does not favor government ownership of railroads. He favored it as late as May, 1907, and has not yet recanted the statement he then made that he did not believe anything could be accomplished by attempts to regulate the railroads and that government ownership of them was inevitable.

Republican success would mean that there would be no disturbance of business, no unsettling of values and no standstill congress. The country is not ready for four years of stagnation and futile agitation.

Salem Defeats Quincy High

The High school team journeyed to Salem on Saturday to try conclusions on the gridiron with the strong team of that place. "Defeated but not disgraced," the boys returned to Quincy, Salem winning by a score of 13 to 5. The "City of Witches" is always represented by one of the strongest teams in the State, and to hold them is quite a trick. The local team did exceedingly well to hold them to two touchdowns, while they scored one themselves.

Bates was pushed back over his own line and forced to make a safety, giving Salem two more points. The game was interesting throughout, although the Salem team was penalized several times for offside play.

Clapp and Howe played a good hard game for Quincy, while Doyle and Wright showed to advantage for Salem.

The summary:

SALEM	QUINCY

AROUND THE ENDS.

The local High school team plays Somerville at Broadway field, Somerville, on Tuesday, and a hard game is in store for the Quincy boys. Somerville always has a crack team, and only Saturday ran up 37 points against Haverhill. However, Everett scored 62 against the same team, while Quincy held Everett to 12 points. This dope seems favorable to Quincy, and Somerville will be lucky to get away with the game.

Waltham as scored on for the first time this season on Saturday, Brookline scoring 4 points against the Watch City boys. The Brookline team had their opponents guessing all through and Waltham was glad when time was called.

Brockton High, which appears here Oct. 30, was swamped by Everett on Saturday 38-0. This looks good for a win for Quincy when they play the Shoe city team.

OTHER GAMES.

Harvard 11, Williams 0.
Dedham 6, Norwood 0.
Milton Academy 6, Noble and Greenough 0.
Beverly 10, Dorchester 0.

AMONG THE SPORTS.

The U. S. S. Salem, built at Quincy, has a good football team, but it wasn't nearly good enough for the fast Roxbury A. A. on Saturday. The result was a swamping for the sailors by the score of 38-0.

There were two games of polo at the Norfolk Country Club grounds, Dedham, on Saturday. The single men beat the married men 3 1-2 to 2 goals, for placques given by Mrs. Gladding. In the match for the Westwood cups, the Whites trimmed the Blues 4-2.

A hearing was given by the selectmen of Scituate on Saturday night, in regard to basket ball being played in the Town hall. The board voted not to allow the game at a former meeting but a crusade by the High school boys caused them to reconsider. They reserved their decision Saturday night, but the present outlook looks good for the boys.

Miss Mary B. Adams of the Wollaston Golf club defeated Miss Marjorie Phelps on Saturday at the country Club's links, 4 up and 3 to play. It was the final round in the match for the ladies' challenge cup.

At Lincoln, Neb., July 3, 1908, Herman Ridder of New York, the new treasurer of the Democratic national committee, gave out an interview in which he said: "I said to Mr. Bryan: 'You cannot carry New York, and you cannot be elected. Why don't you step aside and permit the nomination of some man who can be elected?'" Mr. Ridder's judgment was exceptionally good at that time, and his statement of fact still holds true.

If oratorical flights counted, Mr. Bryan would have solved the problem of aerial navigation years ago.

Mr. Bryan would have fared better in Delaware had he gone there looking for peaches instead of votes.

Candidate Kern says that he is the left wing of the Bryan army. The record shows that both wings of the Bryan army are left.

WENT WILD IN EIGHTH

Donovan Allowed Six Runs and Chicago Captured the Game

Chicago, Oct. 12.—After eight innings of clock-work baseball Sunday, "Wild Bill" Donovan, crack pitcher of the champions of the American League, weakened under the strain and the Chicago world's champions captured their second game of the present series.

Detroit's hopes, which were high after seven innings, in which Chicago made only one hit, were dashed in the eighth. In that sensational portion of the game Donovan was hit for a home run, a triple, a double and three singles. Incidentally he gave one man a base on balls and allowed another to score on a wild pitch. Overall, on the contrary, was steady throughout the game, holding Detroit to four hits and one run. That run marked Detroit's despairing effort in their half of the ninth.

Score by innings:

Detroit ..... 0 0 0 0 0 0 0 0 1—1

Base hits—Chicago, 7; Detroit, 4. Errors—Chicago, 1; Detroit, 1. Batteries—Overall and Kling; Donovan and Schmidt.

WANTED TO KILL GARFIELD'S SLAYER

Jones Is Again in Public Eye, Through Killing a Man

Washington, Oct. 12.—Noted for having attempted to avenge the death of President Garfield by shooting at Guiteau, the assassin, William Jones, locally known as "Bill" Jones, a farmer, last night shot and killed John A. McPherson with a shotgun on the outskirts of this city. McPherson's breast was riddled with buckshot, several of which penetrated his heart. An unloaded Winchester rifle was found lying beside the body. The shotgun was found on the porch of Jones' house.

Jones was arrested while he was on his way to Baltimore, where he owns property. He admitted that he shot McPherson, but claims that he acted in self-defense. The two men had been drinking, it is said. The police have learned, it is said, that the two men had quarreled over the possession of a horse. McPherson, who was 29 years old, had been working on Jones' farm since he was discharged from the United States marine corps on June 24 last.

Several days after Garfield's death, Guiteau was taken to court for a preliminary hearing. While being returned to jail Jones, riding a spirited horse, followed the prison van from the courthouse to within several blocks of the jail. Then he suddenly spurred his horse, darted through the crowd, drew a revolver and fired into the van Guiteau, who was sitting near the door, caught a glimpse of Jones as he drew the weapon and dodged. The bullet sped over his head and lodged in the side of the wagon. Jones, believing that he had killed Guiteau, dug the spurs into his horse and escaped arrest at that time. He was captured shortly afterward near Fredericksburg, Va Jones was tried and acquitted.

Captain's Wife Stood by Wheel

Boston, Oct. 12.—Waterlogged, her rails just appearing above the water and threatening every minute to cap size, schooner Mary Brewer, from Bangor, was towed into port yesterday afternoon. Taking her turn at the wheel and even helping the men at the pumps to keep the little craft afloat all Saturday night, Mrs. Edna Callahan, wife of the captain, did yeoman service. Much against her will she was taken off the sinking craft with her 4-year-old son, Robert, by the lifesaving crew at Nahant, when the vessel was off Swampscott.

Would-Be Slayer Lynched

Empire, Ga., Oct. 12.—Henry White, a negro, started out to kill the family of Thomas Allen and on his way met another negro, whom he shot and wounded for refusing to join him in his expedition. He went on to Allen's home and shot him and his wife. A posse captured White and placed him in the lockup. A band of unknown men took White from the lockup, tied him to a tree and riddled him with bullets.

Suffocated While Trying Suicide

Lowell, Mass., Oct. 12.—Suffocation by smoke is the finding of the medical examiner on the death of John Dahlgren, aged 45, who was found by firemen with a rope about his neck in a double tenement house which he had recently built. It is supposed that Dahlgren found the building on fire and, in attempting to commit suicide in a fit of despondency, was overcome by the fumes.

NEWS IN BRIEF

The body of August Silvia, a mill operative, was found in Mount Hope bay, off Fall River, Mass. It is believed that Silvia committed suicide because of worry over taunts addressed to him by fellow-workmen.

Edward Sands, aged 17, was found dead in the loft of the barn of Dr. Thomas E. Gunning of Fall River, Mass. Gunning decided that death was due to heart disease.

Captain George V. Ball, a Civil war veteran, aged 64, was found dead in bed at his home at Boxboro, Mass. Heart failure is given as the cause.

Miss Georgene Cousins, aged 20, was drowned at Ellsworth, Me., while bathing. It is supposed she was seized with cramps.

The Cute Mr. Davis

[Copyright, 1906, by T. C. McClure.]

The cute Mr. Davis figured out that to get safely away with a fortune belonging to some one else he must make himself all over. He must wipe himself out and create a new character. It was a matter requiring a good deal of consideration. One slip in the programme and the whole machinery would be thrown out of gear. When taking his position he had a fine mustache and a pair of whiskers. He cultivated them and let them grow at length. He had prominent ears, and he made them more prominent by combing his hair in a new way. His speech was naturally brisk and contained a slight lisp. He cultivated the briskness and the lisp. He had bushy eyebrows that met in the middle. He called special attention to them as a heritage from a strong race.

In the two years and a half that the cute Mr. Davis was getting ready for his grand coup he learned to speak the German language of a professor. He gave a wrong name, lied about his occupation and let it be understood that he was going to Germany as agent for an American machinery house. He managed in one way and another to become better acquainted with the country for fifty miles around than any drover or peddler. Through a second party he bought a log house and a few acres of land in a poor farming district where settlers were far between and let it be understood that a German professor was to occupy it in time to make experiments in chemistry of the soils and in geology. In his own room he donned certain garments and posed before his mirror. His brisk speech in English became a sort of drawl in German. In place of his perfect gait he cultivated a slight limp. He learned something of the rudiments of chemistry and geology. He knew what chemicals to buy to stain his face and hands and give him a swarthy look. He knew what change would come about when his whiskers and mustache disappeared.

Mr. Davis would have to ride fifty miles to his retreat when his coup came off. He could go by any one of a dozen trains, but he shook his head. Before the event was ready he had bought a horse and buggy and knew every foot of the road. He had hired a room under another name in a different part of the city, and what he needed for the metamorphosis was there days in advance of the event. The programme was gone over again and again. There was no flaw in it. The cute Mr. Davis would disappear off the face of the earth some day, and how the smart detectives were to connect Professor Schmidt with the late cashier was more than he could give them credit for. He tried hard enough, because that was his destruction or salvation, but he had to pronounce his programme simply perfection.

The great day came at last. The cashier went to the bank with the largest deposit for years—that is, a coupe set him down at the bank, but ten minutes later he was out on the walk and hurrying away. He reached his rooms, changed into his disguise and then shaved himself. Then his eyebrows were thinned out, his hair combed according to programme, and the cute Mr. Davis drew a long breath and said to himself that he defied all the detectives on earth to identify him. The rest was dead easy. A German who spoke broken English drove out of town behind a gentle horse, and no one gave him any attention or cared whither he went. At the country inns where he put up no one had any curiosity about him. When he reached his house he found that his nearest neighbor was two miles distant and a Russian Jew at that.

The cute Mr. Davis had figured that his dropping out of sight would create a sensation. He was right. For the first twenty-four hours it was thought he might be the victim of foul play. Then the bonding company began to hustle for other clews. The regular police were called in, and the reward offered brought scores of private detectives into the game. Inside of three days everybody had settled down to the belief that it was a case of "skip," and all work being done was based on that theory. Never was there a hotter hunt for an embezzler. If Mr. Davis had committed murder the chase would not have been half as vigorous. Within a week the whole United States was on the watch for him, and copies of that photograph with the whiskers were flying about like leaves in a gale. At the end of a month the army of detectives had to turn in their reports with the words "No clew" attached. It was believed that the criminal had escaped to a foreign country.

The cute Mr. Davis, alias Professor Schmidt, figured on making use of his retreat for a number of months and then assuming some other guise in some other part of the country. All went well with him for a number of weeks, and then one day a rough-head of a boy who was hunting for a lost calf approached the house to ask for information and heard a man singing a song in good old fashioned English. He had been told that the occupant was a German. He went away and reported his "find," and it got to the ears of a constable, and from thence to the sheriff and the detectives, and a week later the cute Mr. Davis was dragged out of his burrow, identified after awhile and is today serving the state on a ten year sentence. He was over two years building up a programme without a flaw, and yet a boy who could not read or write or tell the time of day knocked it into a cocked hat in half an hour.

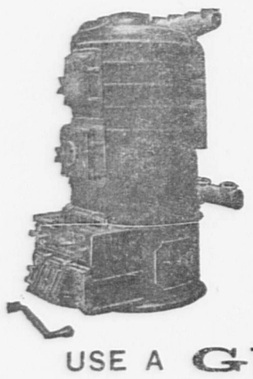
Your Attention Mr. Prospective Heating Customer!



Did you ever pause to consider the difference in various make boilers? Does it not appeal to your better judgment that a boiler the construction of which is such that it places a series of thin layers of water directly or indirectly over the fire surface and travel of hot gases, before they escape into the smoke flue, is sure to be economical in the consumption of fuel?

Another advantage that should be considered in a boiler of this description the parts of necessity must be small, therefore, in the event of breakage they may be easily and cheaply replaced. Of course there are cheaper boilers that are made in one piece from base to dome. These boilers contain surface on which the fire does not shine, or over which the hot gases do not pass, therefore, they are useless. These boilers without doubt can be made and sold cheaper than the boiler made of several units. But you Mr. Consumer, must pay the difference in consuming of coal in the long run.

Slight Blaze At West Quincy

The alarm from Box 45 at 8.59 Monday night was for a brisk blaze in a house at 3 California avenue, owned by Mrs. Alphonse Reinhalter, and accupied by Giovani Sillini. The fire probably started from an overheated stove and damaged the building $400.

CITY COUNCIL

Receive Several Reports from Committees Not All Favorable

A short but important meeting of the City Council was held Monday evening. Two loan orders, one for $22,200, and the other for $8,400 were passed, as were also orders appropriating $5,000 for water extensions, and granting the street railway a location to connect its Quincy avenue line with the Fore River railroad. These passed with the bare sixteen votes. There was evidently an effort to delay action on the loan orders, for two councilmen suddenly left the hall when these matters were reached. Sixteen members were left, however, and the effort failed.

WOODWARD LOAN.

Councilman Abele sprung a surprise when he introduced an order relative to the loans of the Woodward Fund and Property. This was adopted after some discussion.

Councilman Bryant, Cantfill, Hogan, McGilvray and Teasdale were absent.

MILTON BOUNDARY.

The Mayor sent a communication from the Selectmen of Milton relative to preambulating the Milton and Quincy boundry line.

Upon motion of Councilman Gilson the communication was laid on the table until later in the evening, when he moved a committee of three be appointed. The President appointed Councilmen Gilson, Freeman and Falconer.

Councilman Whiton presented a petition for two lights on Saville avenue. Laid on the table until later when the Councilman offered an order for the lights. Referred to Committee on Streets.

FIRE REPORTS.

The Committee on Fire Department reported on the following matters:

Ought to pass on the order appropriating $250 to concrete the basement of the fire station at West Quincy. Referred to Finance Committee.

An order for $100 for a fire alarm box at the corner of Farnum and Edison streets. Referred to Finance Committee.

An amendment to the order for repairs of the fire station at Atlantic making the amount $800. Referred to Finance Committee.

Ought not to pass on the order for a fire alarm box at the corner of Adams and Whitwell streets. Report accepted.

WATER EXTENSIONS.

The Committee on Ordinaces reported correctly engrossed the order appropriating $5,000 for water extensions.

In reply to questions by Councilman Moir, the Commission said, that extensions would be made on Phillips, Baxter, Willow avenue, Billings road, Vassal, Weymouth, Charles and Lancaster streets, also part of the amount would be for stock. He was trying to arrange with Boston to supply Squantum. The appropriation for water extension the early part of the year was not as large as usual.

The order was passed.

SCHOOL ORDERS.

The Committee on Ordinances reported correctly engrossed the order appropriating $12,000 for additions to the Lincoln school. Order passed.

The Committee on Ordinances reported correctly engrossed on the order apropriating $5,200 for furnishing for the Coddington school building.

Councilman Moir asked if it was proper to ask for bids for school furniture before the order was passed. He would like the opinion of the City Solicitor.

City Solicitor McAnarney saw nothing illegal about it, as no contract was let until the order had been passed.

Mayor Shea said that the advertisement for bids for furniture was by his direction. It was desirable to have the building ready as soon as possible. Some of the furnishings had to be made to order, and it was to save time. No contract would be let until money was appropriated.

The order was passed.

STREET ORDERS

The Committee on Streets reported an order granting the Electric Light Co. a location for poles. Ordered to a second reading.

The Committee on Streets reported an order granting the Telephone Co., a location for poles. Ordered to a second reading.

The Committee on Streets reported an order granting the Telephone Co. attachments. Ordered to a second reading.

The Committee on Streets to whom was referred the petition that the tracks of the street railway on Farrington street between Elmwood avenue and Squantum street be relocated in the middle of the street reported that in the opinion of the committee the tracks should be so relocated, and that the street railway company be requested to petition the City Council to relocate the tracks as petitioned for. Report accepted.

SQUANTUM STREET.

Councilman Moir offered an order that the Commissioner of Public Works be requested to furnish the Council with a plan of Squantum street between the Quincy Shore boulevard and Huckins street, and the amount necessary to rebuild this part of the street. Order adopted.

Football, Soul Stirring Sport

New Plays Developed to Make the Game More Open This Season. Forward Pass, the Chief Exhibit of the Reformers.

Measures Taken to Lessen the Chances of Injuries to Players. Gridiron Heroes Who Are Attracting Especial Attention.

By FREDERICK R. TOOMBS.

EVER since President Eliot of Harvard university declared that no gentleman could play football and since President Nicholas Murray Butler of Columbia university stated that the game is an academic nuisance the followers and admirers of this soul stirring, nerve tingling sport have been multiplying, all of which indicates that reformers come and reformers go, but football goes on forever. However, the reformers have left their marks on the game, the only pastime that successfully rivals baseball in popularity.

Responding to the tremendous pressure brought to bear on them, the gridiron solons have produced a sterilized brand of football that retains the spectacular features of the old game, adds some new "thrillers" and yet emasculates it in a degree to lessen the bone crushing tendencies. The developments of the reformed game will make the playing of this season more "open" and considerably faster than that of past years. While this desired end was possible to be gained last year, it was not generally reached because of the short period the new rules had been in effect.

A Striking New Play.

"Openness" in football means that players are kept somewhat separated from each other during action—that is, players of the attacking team. An open game is directly opposite to a style of game where the players of the attacking team are massed together. The wiping out to a considerable degree of the terrifically powerful massing of muscular football giants and hurling them at individual opponents has necessarily resulted in bringing into existence plays to take their place. These new plays, which are a striking feature of last year's and this year's operations and are now perfected in manner of execution, enable the average spectator to derive considerably more pleasure from the game. The forward pass is the stellar exhibit of the football reformers. They point to it and proudly say, "This is our child, our little blue eyed curly locks." The forward pass allows players to throw the ball toward their enemy's goal, which was not allowed prior to the great reformation when the Luthers and Calvins of the football world rose to their zenith of power and when President Roosevelt summoned the rulers of the game to the White House for consultation. This year the forward pass is being used in striking new combinations and in trick plays calculated to bewilder opposing players. Tossing the ball many yards along the gridiron necessarily causes the men to separate, makes for pronounced openness and contributes to the uncertainty of the sport. Under the best circumstances a football is difficult to catch, and in the forward pass men have to catch long passes while running, sometimes at top speed.

CAPTAIN WALTER P. STEFFEN.
[University of Chicago quarterback.]

The "on side kick" has also been greatly developed. This feature was introduced in its present nature through a modification of the rules governing kicking and recovering kicked balls, and by thus increasing the kicking side of the game still more openness resulted. With the game made open it follows that the players must be speedier. Resultantly there is a greater demand for fast, wiry, comparatively light men than ever before. It is only in the three center men, the two guards and the center rush that pronounced weight is an absolute requisite. In days past the three backs, who are the principal ball carriers, and the tackles were generally required to have from ten to twenty-five pounds more weight than demanded today.

Consequently the teams of today do not have the tremendous brute force, the battering ram energy that elevens had three or four years ago and that led James E. Sullivan, the well known athletic authority, to state that "the Yale football team can whip a thousand savages."

Largely a Trick Game.

The changes in football rules have effected an alteration in the basic nature of the game. Football today is largely a trick game, whereas formerly trick plays were exceptions. The forward pass and the on side kick are essentially trick plays, and their variations are likewise. Trick plays are always uncertain, and therefore the score of any game may be reversed at almost any moment. All this contributes to the value of the game from the spectator's viewpoint.

CAPTAIN EDWARD A. DILLON.
[Princeton quarterback.]

Several new alterations in the rules to lessen chances of injuries to players have been introduced this year. Added restrictions have been placed on the use of the hands in attempts to frustrate execution of the forward pass; also the intermission between the halves has been increased from ten to fifteen minutes. While this gives exhausted players longer time to recuperate and avoid results of overexertion, the spectators will not appreciate it. Pneumonia is the handmaiden of football. Hundreds of cases occur because of the long exposure of thousands of people to fall winds and temperatures. Any increase of the length of a game or intermission is inadvisable.

Has an Economic Value.

In spite of the number of deaths and injuries occasioned, football is of a vast economic value to this nation. It has materially increased the attendance at our colleges. It is the greatest advertising medium of the college world. It makes college life attractive to players as well as to nonplayers, who like to associate with the much lauded gridiron heroes. The enormous profits accruing from the contests, where from twenty to forty thousand people pay high admission prices, enable many colleges to maintain gymnasiums, rowing crews, hockey teams, etc., that they otherwise could not afford. Large sums of money are thus put into circulation, the health of almost the entire student body is benefited, and hundreds of men find employment. The tuition fees of students attracted to colleges by football swell the incomes of these colleges, contributing to their stability. Yes, football has economic value.

The American football frenzy has a deep national significance. The game had its origin in Greece and flourished under the name of phenida (feinting) when the Hellenic empire was at its height. It was in a crude form played in Rome and called fallis in the times of the Caesars. Now Great Britain and the United States are its homes. Football is thus seen to have become a favorite pastime of strikingly militant nations. It affords an outlet for national cravings for human conflict. More deadly than bullfighting, more violent than prizefighting, as thrilling as any battle between trained armies, the game is essentially a relic of ages when human suffering was considered the necessary accompaniment of existence. But here we find another evidence of the intrinsic and economic value of the game. It eliminates the weak and develops added sturdiness in the strong in a majority of cases. It acts as a set-off, a counter, to the emasculatory and effeminizing tendencies of advanced civilization. Football thus stands as a barrier between this republic and the insidious influences that have undermined men and great nations of the past.

ADOLPH W. SCHULZ.
[Famous Michigan university center.]

Thousands Spent on the Game.

There are over a million football players in America today. The leading colleges in every section of the country expend an average of over $20,000 yearly on the game. The United States government has to date spent over $200,000 in developing the game at the West Point academy, the Annapolis Naval academy and the Carlisle (Pa.) Indian school. The government officials and President Roosevelt maintain that football is invaluable as a training and developing medium for the brains and bodies of fighting men.

Football has not reached its greatest possible height in this country because there is no national championship contest. The eastern, western and southern colleges hold sectional championship contests, and there should be arranged a procedure whereby the nation's strongest team could be actually determined. The leading eastern football teams represent Yale, Princeton, Harvard, the University of Pennsylvania and Cornell. In the western division the universities of Chicago, Michigan, Wisconsin, Illinois, Minnesota, Iowa and Nebraska and Northwestern university take precedence.

If Yale, Michigan and Vanderbilt universities in the east, west and south respectively should, for example, win their sectional championship titles, would not a series of games to decide the national premier arouse national enthusiasm? Would not the football public pay thousands of dollars and travel hundreds of miles if necessary to witness them? Would not the gridiron game receive a tremendous stimulous?

Qualities a Player Needs.

The idolatry of famous football players is another indication of the hold the game has on the public. To become a member of a leading college team a man must have the qualities of a stoic, the limbs of an Indian warrior, the quick wit of an Arab chieftain and the spirit of a fighting bull terrier. In addition he must have special qualities artificially produced. For instance, Edward H. Coy, the

EDWARD H. COY.
[Sensational Yale fullback.]

Yale fullback, is certain to be a shining figure this year because of his scientific kicking and spectacular line tearing plunges. He it was who made Theodore Roosevelt, Jr., leave the Harvard freshman team and stop football playing forever. Coy was on the Yale freshman team and had the Yale scheme of play changed so that he would be the man to handle the president's son when the Harvard backs were trying an end run. Coy went at Teddy junior, who was playing end, in such an earnest way that young Roosevelt was soon forced to retire. Coy performed that feat two years ago at the age of eighteen. Adolph W. Schulz, the great center rush of the Michigan team, is just the opposite of Coy. He is the ponderous anchor of the team, who must crouch in the line and receive the brunt of the attempts to "buck the center," in which attempts as many members of the opposing team as possible participate. Schulz has been known to stagger headlong through a team with from three to six men clinging to him. Two of the team captains who are now attracting especial attention are Quarterback Eddie Dillon of Princeton and the greatest quarterback of the year, Walter P. Steffen of the University of Chicago. The quarterback is the mainspring of an eleven. He gives the signals that indicate what maneuver is to be executed and passes the ball from the renter to the runner who carries it.

New Titles For Meals.

In an effort to give variety to everything about their house the managers of a smart suburban hotel near New York do not call the three regular daily meals by the old names of breakfast, lunch and dinner. On the bill of fare appear the names "morning," "midday" and "evening" meals.

La France Shoe FOR WOMEN

A STYLISH FIT AND PERFECTLY COMFORTABLE

$3.00 to $4.00

There Is a Difference Between Stylish Appearance in a Show-Window and Stylish Appearance on the Foot.

There is a difference between the comfort of a shoe that is made to fit and one made merely with an eye to beauty. La France shoes for women are unique in this respect—they combine the highest degree of grace and stylish beauty on the foot with perfect ease and comfort.

¶ That is because the material which enters into every portion of the shoe from the sole upward is carefully chosen with a view to the particular requirements which it must meet.

¶ Every woman who has bought a pair of La France shoes at this store knows that they hold their shape and present a smooth, dainty, unwrinkled appearance as long as they last—and that they last a surprisingly long time. ¶ Buy just one pair and you will realize how true all this is.

The La France Flexible Welt combines the comfort and ease of a turn shoe with the style and smartness of a welt shoe.

QUINCY MUSIC HALL.

The Location is the best of any hall in the city. The street cars pass the door.

The Elaborate, Permanent Decorations which have just been put up are most attractive, and add much to the appearance of the Hall.

The Electric Light Festoon over the entrance way, flashing first red, then white, is a unique feature of much value.

The Moonlight Effect obtained by having the electric light come through Japanese lanterns is a pleasing innovation.

The Floor is of selected maple laid with the greatest care, and is kept in perfect condition, being covered with canvas when not used for dancing.

The Ventilation—a most important consideration—is such as to keep the air pure with even a crowded Hall.

The Hall is Lighted by electricity, brilliantly and pleasantly, and with a switchboard arranged so that all desired effects can be obtained in the Hall proper or on the stage. Gas is used as an auxiliary light.

The Heating is direct—indirect, ample, and giving the most healthful results.

The Stage has been designed with care, and is furnished with a particularly generous supply of attractive and appropriate scenery.

For Advertising, the Music Hall Billboards are valuable.

To Darken the Hall, there are special window fittings so that at noonday the Hall can be made as dark as at midnight.

In case of fire there are pails of water and chemical fire extinguishers throughout the Hall. There is an asbestos fire curtain by which the Stage can be instantly cut off from the Hall proper. There are ten (10) doors opening from the Hall and six (6) separate exits.

As a whole, Quincy Music Hall has been carefully planned to meet the requirements of those who wish a large and really first class Hall.

BRYAN THEORIES

Lady Betty Across the Water

By C. N. & A. M. WILLIAMSON

Copyright, 1906, by McClure, Phillips & Co.

SYNOPSIS.

CHAPTER I—The story is told in the first person by Lady Betty Bulkeley, the pretty young sister of the Duke of Stanforth. She is to visit America in care of Mrs. Stuyvesant-Knox (Mrs. Ess Kay,) a leader of American society, and the latter's cousin, Miss Sally Woodburn, in order that her elder sister Victoria's prospective fiance, Sir Gilbert Mantell, may not be attracted by her.

II—On board ship Betty is attracted by a young American steerage passenger, who saves a child from drowning. Mrs. Ess Kay, who is very "exclusive," objects to Betty's interest in the young man. Betty also meets Tom Doremus, cousin of Mrs. Vander Windt, of New York society.

III—Lady Betty gets her first impression of America. On the dock she is rescued from reporters by the steerage hero, who tells her he is Jim Brett, employed at the Manhattan club, New York. In Mrs. Ess Kay's splendid New York home Betty meets Lieutenant Parker brother of the hostess, who is to take them to visit West Point.

Mrs. Ess Kay and Sally escorted me to my room when I came to it first. After I'd admired everything enough to satisfy them, I was taken to see the bathroom adjoining, and then a kind of wardrobe room opening out of that. I was almost prostrated by the magnificence of both, which pleased Mrs. Ess Kay very much, and in the grand wardrobe room, smelling deliciously, though faintly, of cedar, my poor boxes—already arrived—looked mean and insignificant. Mrs. Ess Kay's and Sally's huge "Innovations" would have been much more appropriate than my dress baskets, which had been squashed into lopsided deformity under heavier things in the hold.

Louise was on the scene armed with my keys and Mrs. Ess Kay wouldn't hear of letting me do anything myself. "Now, I'll explain why I had to desert you on the dock," she said. "Or perhaps I needn't explain. If you watch Louise unpacking for a few minutes you'll see for yourself. And I do hope, sweet child, that you'll excuse my taking a liberty."

This made me curious. Louise opened one of my boxes which had had been labeled "Not Wanted," and I could hardly believe my eyes when she lifted out an exquisite poppy colored chiffon, embroidered with sprays of golden holly and berries made of some gleaming red jewel.

"Why, there's been some extraordinary mistake!" I exclaimed. "That can't be my box. I've no such dress."

"I know, love, but I have," said Mrs. Ess Kay, "and, thanks to you, I've got it and several others through without paying duty. I thought you wouldn't mind, you're such a dear pet and it's been such an accommodation. Not that I care about the money, but I do love to get the best of those fiends at the custom house, and I have, for once. You see, it was like this: When Louise went to the baggage room to get out some things for you I had them put in my trunks afterward and some of my dresses changed into yours, as your frocks had all been worn and mine hadn't. I told Louise to put my things down at the bottom, some in each of your trunks, and I was pretty sure the man wouldn't touch them, as you're a British subject. I trusted to luck that you'd be too cute to say anything and give me away if you saw the dresses while your trunks were being examined, but I just hoped he wouldn't dig down to them. I dared not tell you what was going on, as Sally said I ought to, because if I had you might have refused or else spoiled everything by being self conscious. If you'd been with me the fiends might have caught on to our little game, they're so suspicious, but where you were they never suspected any connection between us. You're just a dear."

I had been a dear in spite of myself, but there was no use in making a fuss, now the dearness was all over, whatever I might have done if I'd known beforehand that I was to be a cat's paw. Perhaps if I hadn't been given the iced stuff with the strawberries I might have been crosser; but, fortified by that, I lived up to my reputation as a dear during the half hour of the unpacking.

When my frocks all hung in a row like Bluebeard's wives, in the cedar wardrobe, and I was left alone with them at last, my first thought was to plunge my imprisoned roses in water; my second, to do the same with myself.

The hope of tea (which hadn't been fulfilled) and a bath had kept me alive through those two hot hours on the dock, and now I could choose between several kinds of bath, each one more luxurious than any I had ever known. At home there's either the big bath, in the bathroom, or there's a tub in your bedroom, so it doesn't take you long to make up your mind which you will have. But here there were so many things I could do that I grew quite confused among them.

There was the big bath, so big that two of our big ones at Battlemead could have gone into it, and instead of climbing ignominiously in in the ordinary way you walked down several glittering white marble steps. It was very alluring, but as the marble tank was so vast I feared I might have to spend all the rest of the afternoon in getting it full of water. It seemed impertinent to make a convenience of such a splendid, early Roman sort of receptacle for a mere five minutes' splash. A bath of such magnificence ought, I felt, to be what Americans call a "function," a ceremony for which you would prepare with perfumed ointments and ambergris and protract for half a day at least, not to be wasteful. Then there was the vapor bath, which you took in a kind of box with a hole for your head to stick out; a porcelain sitz bath and a mysterious shower bath into which you secretively retired behind canvas curtains shaped like a sentry box.

I dared not try the vapor for fear I should be steamed like a potato, the sitz seemed as inadequate as a thwarted ambition, and to turn on the shower without knowing how much it could do or how soon it could be stopped appeared a desperate adventure. After all, I thought, it was less worrying with us. Here, whichever thing you chose, you would probably wish you had had the other, whereas at home you did what you could and were perfectly satisfied.

I decided that I would toss up a coin; heads the big marble tank, tails the shower. It came tails, and I had a dreadful qualm, but, noblesse oblige, one must be sporting. So I was, only the hot water wouldn't come and apparently there was ice in the cold, which wouldn't stop coming, and it was very violent. I screamed once, and Mrs. Ess Kay and Sally and Louise ran to the door, which was embarrassing, but fortunately I'd locked it, and they told me how to stop the iced water. When it was all over I felt like a marble statue for hours.

Dinner was at half past 7, which seemed odd in such a grand palace of a house, because of course at home, for some extraordinary reason unless you are in the middle classes, you never have an appetite before 8 at the very earliest. If you're in France or other countries on the continent you can be hungry sooner, and evidently it is the same in America. Perhaps, if I were scientific, I should be able to classify these differences as natural phenomena.

I had dressed myself early and was ready a little after 7, because I thought it would be nice to sit in the fountain court, but just as I was going down Louise knocked at the door.

"I have come to help miladi and to bring her these flowers," said she. "They are with a million compliments from monsieur the Lieutenant Parker, the brother of madame."

"But I have never met him," I said, gazing with wonder upon a group (bunch is too mean a word) of mammoth pink roses, with thickly leaved stems longer than walking sticks. There were at least a dozen of these splendid creatures, loosely held together by trails of pink satin ribbon, wide enough for a sash. I had never dreamed of such roses. I almost expected them to speak.

"Miladi and the lieutenant will meet at dinner," explained Louise. "It is an American custom that the messieurs send always flowers to the ladies. Mme. and Mlle. Woodburn have received bouquets also, but these roses for miladi are the most beautiful. Is it miladi's wish that I untie the ribbon and take out one or two for her to carry?"

I was on the point of saying "Yes," because the flowers were so lovely and because it would please Mrs. Ess Kay, but on second thoughts I said "No," thanking Louise and asking her to put the creatures' feet in water. Perhaps it would be as well, I reminded myself, to see this brother of Mrs. Ess Kay's (of whose existence I'd never heard) before I went about armed with his roses. I had already tucked the white bud which had come to me on the dock like a dove with an olive branch into the low neck of my frilly white muslin frock, and I gave it no rivals.

"Has madame gone down?" I asked, for it occurred to me that it would be awkward to find myself alone for nearly half an hour with a strange man.

"I think madame will be in the hall," said Louise. And, satisfied, I descended in a stately way suited to the house into the fountain court. Nobody was there, however, except a young man in evening dress, who jumped up from a chair and set down a small glass out of which he had been drinking.

"Allow me to introduce myself," said he. "I know you must be Lady Betty Bulkeley. My name is Potter Parker."

I couldn't help wondering whether his friends called him "Pot" for short, and the thought made me smile more than I would have smiled at a stranger if it hadn't popped into my head. This seemed to encourage him, which I regretted, because you can see at once by his face that he isn't the kind who needs encouragement. It is something like Mrs. Ess Kay's face, only younger, with her square chin and bold blue eyes as pale as hers. The likeness is all the stronger because Mr. Parker wears no mustache, or beard, and his dark hair, which falls in two straight, thick blocks over his forehead, is parted in the middle. You would know if you saw him riding a white bear at the north pole that he was an American young man. Why or how, I'm not experienced enough in Americans to tell, but I'm beginning to think that all American men and all American women have a dim sort of family likeness to each other. With the girls, it's their chins and the way they do their hair. But with the men it's more mysterious. They look less lazy and more feverish than our men, yet at the same time more humorous, and their clothes seem always to be new.

Mrs. Ess Kay's nose turns down, and her brother's turns up, which is the principal difference in their features, and his makes him look very impudent, though rather clever and amusing.

"My sister wrote me about your dimples, Lady Betty," said he when I

Nobody was there except a young man in evening dress.

smiled, and I screwed my mouth into prunes and prisms as quickly as I could.

"I should have thought such things were hardly worth writing about," said I.

"My impression is that they're worth about a million dollars an eighth of an inch," he replied, "and I bet they'd fetch that in a bear market."

I began to wish that Mrs. Ess Kay or Sally would come, for I'm not used to having persons who have just introduced themselves make remarks on my dimples or other features.

"Don't be mad with me," he went on, "or I shall think I've estimated them too low. On mature consideration, as we soldier chaps say at a court martial, I should be inclined to set them higher. If you'll just show them again"—

"I think, if you don't mind," said I, "that I'd rather speak of the weather."

"I'm afraid you're not used to Americans," said he.

"I've met several, crossing, but none of them talked to me about—such things," I replied rather primly.

"If they had I should have challenged them," he retorted. "While you're staying with my sister I consider myself a sort of guardian of yours, and part of my duty will be to keep off men—other men—with a stick, you see."

"No, I don't see," said I. "Not that there will be the least necessity for you to do anything of the sort."

"Oh, won't there? Well, you just wait till you get to Newport, and you'll find out differently. I've applied for leave on purpose to help Kath protect you, and I expect to put on a suit of chain armor under my clothes. But first you're coming to visit me at West Point."

"I don't think I am," I said.

"Oh, but you are. It's a promise of Kath's. And shan't I be proud to show you around? You shall see Flirtation Walk the first thing. It's what the ladies admire the most at the Point. Perhaps you've heard of it?"

"No," said I. "And I never heard of West Point. Is it a suburb of New York?"

"Not much. It's our American Sandhurst. But you English people don't know anything about this side. I guess, now, you think that Florida is in South America?"

"I haven't thought about it yet," I replied.

"That's right. I don't ask anything better than to teach you the geography of the United States. We'll begin with Flirtation Walk. But see here, Lady Betty, that rose you've got on isn't a good sample of what we can grow over here. Didn't that maid of my sister's take you something a little better from me?"

"Something much bigger and grander," I said, feeling loyal to my poor white bud. "I was meaning to thank you."

"Don't do that; the things aren't worth it. I only wanted to know whether that French female had played me false or not. But here comes my sister. I wish she'd taken longer to do up her back hair. Now, I'll give you your wish and talk about the weather. Mighty hot day, isn't it? Won't you have a cocktail? I'd just finished mine when you came down."

"Of course Betty will have a cocktail. We all do before dinner," said Mrs. Ess Kay, sailing toward us in a trailing white film of lace.

But Betty didn't have one, though at this moment several little glasses appeared on a tray. I was sure that mother would not approve of cocktails for me, as it sounds so fast for a young girl who isn't yet out. When I excused myself Mrs. Ess Kay laughed and said, "Then what about that sherry cobbler?"

While I was trying to think what she meant Sally came into the hall, and immediately after I was surprised by a kind of musical moaning which began suddenly and kept on for a long time.

"That's the Japanese gong," said Mrs. Ess Kay when I looked round to see where the sound came from. "It's for dinner. Potter, give Betty your arm."

I was glad she didn't use that nickname I'd been thinking of, for if she had I should certainly have laughed.

We began dinner by eating pinky-yellow melons cut in half and filled with chopped ice. I thought at first that it must be a mistake and they ought to have come in at dessert, but everybody else ate theirs without appearing disconcerted, so I did mine, and it was good. So were all the other things that followed in a long procession, though they were very strange, and some of them I shouldn't have known how to eat if Mr. Parker, whose place was next to mine, hadn't told me.

We had bouillon partly frozen instead of soup, and then came the most extraordinary little fried animals which quite startled me, they were so like exaggerated brown spiders, done in egg and breadcrumbs. "Soft shell crabs, dear child," said Mrs. Ess Kay, "and you eat every bit, down to the tippiest end of his claw."

I should never have managed the green corn, which grows like lots of pearls set close together in rows on a fat stick, if Mr. Parker hadn't scraped all the pearls off for me with a fork and put butter and salt on them. I liked him a little better after that, for he did the thing with great skill. When I had got so far nothing could surprise me, and I didn't turn a hair when I found that I was expected to eat pears cut up with salad oil. But they were alligator pears, and when you tasted them it appeared that they had nothing whatever to do with the fruit kingdom. Best of all I liked the watermelon which came at the end, cut in little balls, looking like strawberry water ice and soaked in champagne. I hope that all the things to eat in America won't be so nice or I may grow stout before I go back, and Vic says it is better for a girl to hang herself.

It was very trying, too, to find that I was keeping every course waiting. I've never been accused of greediness at home, though I've often been made to feel guilty of most other sins in the calendar, but I did feel queer when I began to realize that everybody else had finished what was on their plates, when I'd just about discovered what the thing was. It made me so uncomfortable to see them all leaning back waiting for me, after their plates had been whisked away, that I took to bolting the rest of my food, and by the time we'd got rid of nine courses in about half an hour I felt qualified to write the autobiography of an anaconda.

As for the iced water, I had intended to refuse it at any cost, because Vic and mother both solemnly warned me that it made all the difference between a complexion and mere skin. But the minute I landed I began thinking hard about iced water, and I soon discovered that when you are in America a comparatively small consideration like a complexion would never keep you from drinking it. In fact, nothing would. You feel as if you must drink iced water, pints of iced water, in rapid succession, if not only your complexion, but your whole face were to be swept away in the deluge. Once you have got the taste nothing can quench it but iced water, more iced water and still more iced water!

After dinner, while we were having heavenly Turkish coffee in the fountain court, who should come but Mr. Doremus. It seemed to me a funny time to call, but apparently the others didn't think it out of the way. He wanted us to go to some theater on a roof, and I should have loved it, especially when Mrs. Ess Kay said you didn't get smudges on your nose as you would if you sat on a roof in London, a thing which I never heard of anybody except cats doing. But she was tired, and I suppose it would have been ladylike for me to be, only I was much too excited. So Mr. Doremus stayed, and he and Mr. Parker talked more slang in an hour than I think I ever heard in my whole life, though I have always considered Stan talented in that way.

But Stan's slang and Vic's are quite different from American slang. In America you build up your whole conversation out of it, and it's wonderful. I longed for a notebook while those two men were talking to put everything down, and I felt if people were often going to be as funny as that I should need to go home soon to rest my features.

When I go home I shall probably have collected so much slang in my pores that I shall talk about putting on my "glad rags" when I'm going to dress for dinner; my life will be my "natural;" I shall call Stan's motor car the blue assassin or the homicide wagon; I shall say my best frocks are "mighty conducive;" I shall get bored by poor Mr. Duckworth, our newest curate, and tell him he's "the limit;" I may even take to abbreviating my affirmatives and negatives by saying "yep" and "nope" when I'm in a hurry, but if I do fall into these ways, I tremble to think what may be the effect on mother.

New Clubhouse Houghs Neck Associates

A special meeting of the Houghs Neck Associates (incorporated) was held Monday evening, at the club house, Pandora hall.

The meeting was called for the purpose of adopting house rules and raising money to put the entire building in shape for the cold winter nights. President Henry W. French was chairman, and Herbert W. Robbins acted as secretary, in place of William P. Taylor the regular secretory who was absent.

The building will be lighted by seven large gas arc lamps and heated by coal stoves and gas heaters.

An assessment of one dollar was covery are very good, unless blood sum was collected last month. The work of putting the building into shape will be started immediately and rushed through.

The Associates have a club-house that they should be proud of. On the first floor there are two bowling alleys, three pool tables and a large card room. The second floor to taken up by a large hall, where the regular meetings and socials will be held.

The young men of the beach have not been forgotten, and the house rules allow them to enjoy themselves with but few restrictions. This movement will have a tendency to keep the youngster from the streets.

Alleged to Have Set Building on Fire

Charles Faxon of Houghs Neck was brought into court this morning on a warrant charging him with setting fire to a building at Houghs Neck.

He was given a hearing before Judge Pratt. A large number of witnesses were heard so that the hearing was a prolonged one. At 1 o'clock the end was not in sight, and the court took a recess until 2 o'clock.

After the Faxon case is heard a juvenile case for the same offense will be in order.

The building alleged toh ave been set on fire is located on Sea street nearly opposite the home of Faxon. The building was partly destroyed by fire some time ago. Since that time there have been several unsuccessful attempts to complete the job.

BABY CHRISTENED.

At the home of Mr. and Mrs. MacArthur at Quincy Point, Sunday evening, October 11, there assembled a large number of friends to witness the christening of their baby boy, Harold Francis. Miss Nellie McPhee stood as godmother to the child and Mr. M. A. Flannigan as godfather. Refreshments were served and everyone present spent a most enjoyable evening.

SPONSOR SELECTED

Miss Mary Bent Of City of Fargo Will Christen North Dakota

A dispatch received by the Fore River Ship Building Co. on Monday announced that Gov. John Burke of North Dakota had named Miss Mary Bent of Fargo, N. D., as sponsor for the battleship North Dakota, building at Quincy. This will be the first of the so-called dreadnought battleships to be launched and it will be quite an honor to Miss Bent.

It is of course a little early yet to say who will compose the official party that will accompany Miss Bent, but it is safe enough to predict that Gov. Burke will be among the number. Others possible in the party are: Lieut. Gov. R. S. Lewis, Secretary of State Alfred Blaisdell, Treasurer A. Peterson, Auditor H. L. Holmes, Attorney General T. F. McCue, Supt. of Education W. L. Stickwell, Adjutant General Thomas Poole, Commissioner of Agriculture W. C. Gilbraith, Commissioner of Insurance F. C. Cooper, and Commissioner of Public Lands O. I. Hegge.

It is also more than probable that one or more of the congressmen from North Dakota may be present. The present congressmen are Thomas F. Marshall and A. J. Gionna.

As noted above, the North Dakota is the first of the new naval vessels to be launched and considerable interest is being taken in the event. It was rumored at one time that President Roosevelt would be present but this is extremely doubtful. That high naval officials will be numbered among those to see the North Dakota take her maiden dip there can be no doubt. Possibly other western governors will be present.

Quincy's list of sponsors of naval vessels is growing fast and they will soon predominate among the members of that exclusive Society of Naval Sponsors. Up to the present time seven different states have been represented in the list of sponsors and Miss Bent will be the eighth.

The sponsors of Quincy-built battleships were:

Rhode Island, May 17, 1904—Mrs. F. C. Dumaine of Concord, Mass.

New Jersey, Nov. 10, 1904—Mrs. William B. Kinney of Elberan, N. J.

Vermont, Aug. 31, 1905—Miss Jennie Bell of East Hardwick, Vt.

A distinguished man appeared in Dedham court, Monday morning, Albion F. Bemis, of BROOKLINE a member of the Governor's council being captured in the automobile trap in Dedham on Sunday. His chauffeur answered the charge and a fine of $15 was imposed.

The Holy Name society of CANTON held a dress parade Sunday afternoon in preparation for the great parade of the society to be held in Boston in November. About 400 were in line and headed by Fr. Farrell, pastor of St. John's church, they marched about the town for three quarters of an hour.

Fire destroyed a small workshop owned by M. Jacobson of Nantasket road, NANTASKET POINT, Monday morning, about 4 o'clock. The total loss is about $500 and it is said that there was no insurance. Jacobson was a building mover.

While driving from Canton in a buggy, Saturday night, Matthew Skelton of NORWOOD, was thrown to the ground, his horse becoming frightened by an automobile. He received severe scalp wounds and was taken to the Massachusetts general hospital, where the doctors say his chances for remade on every member and a large poisoning sets in. Mr. Skelton is 68 years of age.

The public library of WRENTHAM has received a generous gift from George E. Blake of that town, who presented a number of volumes.

William W. Sanborn of 38 Broad street, WEYMOUTH, passed away at his home on Sunday, at the age of 76. Mr. Sanborn was a civil war vetrean, being a member of post 58, G. A. R. He leaves a wife and two daughters.

James Doyle of WELLESLEY on Sunday made the unique record of being arrested twice in one day on charges of creating a disturbance. The first arrest came in the morning and Doyle was released on bail. Shortly afterward he was taken again and locked up.

AVON has lost one of its oldest and most respected citizens, Bernard Dolan passing away Monday morning at his home on East Main street, after a short illness. Mr. Dolan was the father of the chairman of the selectmen and was a prominent Democrat, representing the Avon district in the legislature several years ago. He has followed the shoe business for years and was 70 years old.

The body of William Tierney of HOLBROOK, son of ex-Selectman and Mrs. Jane Tierney, was taken to Randolph on Saturday, where it was buried in the family lot in St. Mary's cemetery.

Eugene Smith of STOUGHTON, who drives a grocery team, was driving across the Canton street railroad crossing when a train appeared on the curve close by. Smith was warned by the gateman, but in trying to cross before the gates closed, was struck by the train. The gate and wagon top were demolished and the driver severely bruised. The horse escaped uninjured. The gateman says he is not to blame.

Memorial service for Joseph Sampson Beal, late of MILTON, were held Monday at King's chapel, Boston and largely attended. Mr. Beal was drowned in Buzzards bay July 11, when the launch Dolphin exploded, and his body was never recovered. Rev. Roderick Stebbins conducted the service.

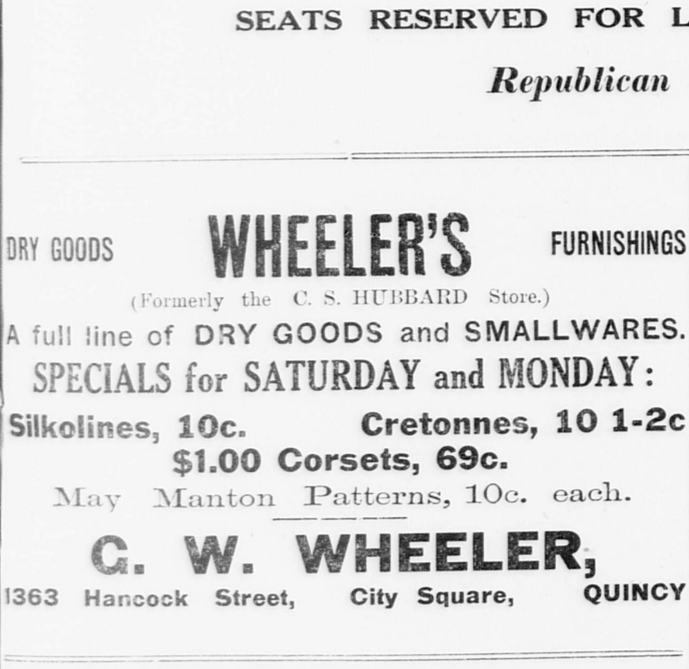
A Recipe For Sunshine.



Beautiful, bountiful sunshine of Spring,
Shedding its glory on everything!
Sun of Prosperity always rises
Over the merchant who ADVERTISES.

Our Motto: "Don't Let Us Alone!"

That National Prosperity Association wants everybody to quit "agitating." Its motto is "Let Us Alone." Well, that may be all right for the immense commercial concerns of the country—the manufacturers, etc.—but it is all wrong for the ordinary business house.

You don't want people to let you alone. You want them to come around and buy goods, don't you?

But they will let you alone unless you "agitate."

And the way to agitate is to ADVERTISE.

Our columns are open, and the space price is just right.

ADVERTISE REAL ESTATE

IN DAILY LEDGER.

NO VOTES TO SPARE

On Passage Of Loan Orders By the Council For Improvements

the Woodward Fund and Property be requested to furnish the City Council, at its next meeting, with a detailed schedule of all outstanding loans, stating the names of the parties to whom the loans were made; the amount of same; whether secured by mortgage of real estate by collateral or by endorsement, and if so a brief description of the real estate and its present assessed valuation, a brief description of the collateral and the names of the endorsers, and upon what loans if any the interest is more than six months in arrears, and if so how much in arrears."

Councilman Moir asked if the Councilman intended to have the matter read.

Councilman Abele. It depends on what the report is.

Councilman Freeman thought this matter should not be made public. The books were open for inspection.

Councilman Whiton said if the mortgages were proper it was nothing to be ashamed of. He had known of some weak loans.

The roll call was asked on the order.

By roll call the order was rejected by a vote of six in favor and eleven against as follows:

YES—Abele, Bishop, Curtis, Falconer, Gelotte and Whiton—6.

NO—Beal, Bean, Broughton, Carey, Cherrington, Ferguson, Freeman, Gilson, Moir, Oakes and Walsh—11.

ABSENT—Bryant, Cantflll, Hogan, McGilvray and Teasdale.

NOT VOTING.—President Hobbs.

Councilman Abele moved a reconsideration. He said he had heard much about the management of this fund. It was a common saying it had been used for excessive loans. That if money can not be obtained from the banks it can be from this fund. The safety of the funds is at stake. The matter should be looked into carefully. The best protection was in publicity. He had that morning been refused permission to look at the books.

Councilman Broughton said he had placed loans with the fund for parties and was willing that his mortgages should be gone into. He would vote that the Councilman from Ward One be a committee to investigate.

Councilman Abele said he had been secured by mortgage, collateral or ensecured by mortgage, collateral endorsement.

Vote to reconsider lost. Vote doubted.

On a rising vote it was voted to reconsider, 9 voting yes, and 7 no.

The resolve was then adopted on a rising vote, 8 voting yes and 7 no.

WHITNEY ROAD.

Councilman Whiton offered an order for $600 for resurfacing Whitney road. Referred to Committee on Streets.

LOAN ORDERS.

At this point the calendar was reached and Councilman Broughton and Moir made a hasty exit with City Messenger Tirrell after them to get them to return. They did not re-return however.

The loan order for $8,400 took its second reading. The rules were suspended and the order passed.

The loan order for $22,200 took its second reading. The rules were suspended and the order passed.

Lodge's Plea For Larger Navy

The address of Senator Lodge at the Tremont Temple ratification meeting last night was particularly interesting to Quincy voters, as he advocated a large navy, and protection to the merchant marine. He said in part:

"Now we have had a great deal of discussion of late, both in the newspapers and in congress, about additions to the navy. It has been depicted by some person as ridiculously small, and some writers who seek sensation rather than truth have depicted it as hopelessly weak as it now stands. Others have pictured the navy as an enormous, overwhelming force.

SENATOR HENRY CABOT LODGE.

"There is nothing to be gained by misrepresentation in either way, and now I will state what the navy is and just what it needs, and I want the Republican party retained in power many other reasons, but among the chief reasons because it is the policy of that party to keep the navy of the United States where it ought to be kept. (Applause.)

"I have here an official publication of the sea strength of the various navies of the world up to Nov. 1, 1908, and will read a few of the figures. The sea strength is not the number of vessels; I will afterward give you the warship tonnage.

"England has 52 battleships; she has the two-power standard. That is, she believes (I think rightly) that she should always have a navy which is more than any other two navies of the world combined. The United States comes next in battleships, having 25, France 18, Germany 22, Japan 11.

"That shows a proper proportion of battleships in the United States and ranks us second in sea strength. But if you will look at some of the other classes you find that where England has 35 armored cruisers and France 21, the United States has only 12 and Japan 11.

"In cruisers England has 86, France 26, United States 39, Germany 37 and Japan 19.

"In destroyers England has 144, France 44, Germany 64, Japan 55 and we have only 16.

"The warship tonnage of Great Britain at this moment is 1,669,000 tons; the United States comes second with 685,000 tons, France has 628,000, Germany 524,000, Japan 371,000.

"In personnel, men and officers, we have the number of men (marines) we ought to have in proportion to our navy. We are curiously weak in officers.

"For instance, England has 96 flag officers. France 45, Germany 33, Japan 53, with a much smaller navy, and we have 18. Of captains and commanders England has 610, France 355, Germany 258, Japan 259, and we have 182. All other line officers and engineers, England 3,268, France 1,862, Germany 1,719, Japan 1,798 and we have 795, and yet the democrats are fond of talking about the way the republican party favors gold lace in the navy.

"We have fewer officers than have much smaller navies. Now, as I state these facts to you, it appears that the United States is today the second naval power in the world in warship tonnage and in sea strength, even after making all due allowance for our shortcomings in the way of torpedo boat destroyers.

"But there has been a great change within a short time in the type of ship. The larger new ship is larger than any now afloat and is called the Dreadnought. Of these England has seven built or building and three armored cruisers of equivalent tonnage; Germany has seven built or building—contract awarded on three or four building, and has three others ordered for next year, and four armored cruisers which are little else than vast battleships also. Japan has two building and two authorized and two armored cruisers of similar size making in all six built or building. Brazil has three, but it is not necessary to go into that.

"Now, you observe ,those other naval powers which at present rank below us have got six and more of these great new ships built or building. We have only two building and two authorized, and unless we follow in this type of ship in five years the United States will drop to the fifth place in the navies of the world. That is not the place we ought to occupy.

"We have none too large a navy now, I want you to maintain it at just the point it now is and we cannot do it unless we build great ships of the modern type and build them often enough. For that reason let us support the republican party, for remember it was Lord Nelson who said that his 74-gun ships were the best diplomatic negotiators in Europe. (Applause.)

THE BRYAN PARROT.

The Same Feathered Nuisance That Screeched In 1896.

In 1908, as in 1900 and 1896, the dominant voice in the Bryan campaign is the voice of the parrot. It is just as shrill, just as insistent and just as meaningleses as it was twelve years ago and is bound to become quite as wearisome to the public.

In 1896 the sleek, green parrot of Bryanism teetered to and fro upon his comfortable swing and screeched "Free silver! Free silver!" That was the only phrase the bird could utter, and its dismal iteration so exasperated the people that they grabbed the noisy parrot from his perch and cast him into the garbage heap.

But the plumed nuisance survived and appeared in the campaign of 1900 with a brand new scream. This time it was "Imperialism! Imperialism!" To the unthinking that alarmist outcry was momentarily terrifying, suggesting thrones and tyrants bent on oppressing the people. But it never scared the sane people themselves even for a moment. They knew it was the same old parrot singing the same old tune with merely a change of words. To every challenge to a discussion of real political issues the parrot made but one reply—"Imperialism!"—and again the feathered pest was torn from his perch and tossed into the junk pile by the public whose patience he had exhausted.

With his inability either to charm or frighten, so rudely demonstrated in two successive trials, an ordinary parrot would have dedicated himself to a future of silent meditation on the follies of talking too much. But the Bryan parrot is an extraordinary parrot, not an ordinary one, and the campaign of 1908 finds him perched aloft again with another screed wherewith to affright the timid and amuse the thoughtful. His cry this year—and its accents show that it has been rehearsed with rare patience—is, "Shall the people rule?" It fits the parrot's voice to perfection, and, though it is as empty as his own head, he accompanies it with an uprolling of his eyes that might scare people if they could forget for a moment that it is only a parrot screech, after all.

The voice of the Bryan parrot is unchanged. It is as rasping, monotonous and as lacking in the note of sincerity as it was twelve years ago. The senseless shriek of "Free silver!" could not mislead the people in 1896. The alarmist scream of "Imperialism!" never disturbed their composure for a single moment in 1900. And the shrill, insulting screech, "Shall the people rule?" can have no other result than to provoke their angry contempt in 1908.

Parrot politics will not do this year. Serious questions are before the people for discussion and settlement. Public attention cannot be drawn away from them either by the witless chatter of parrots or the theatrical tricks of demagogues. This is no more a parrot year than was 1900 or 1896.

REACHING THE SPOT.

It Can Be Done, So Scores of Quincy Citizens Say.

To cure an aching back,
The pains of rheumatism,
The tired-out feelings,
You must reach the spot—get at the cause.
In most cases 'tis the kidneys.
Doan's Kidney Pills are for the kidneys.

James C. Dunn, living at 508 Washinton street, Quincy, Mass., says: "For some time I was afflicted with lumbago. My back ached constantly and I could hardly get about the house. The constant aching gave me so much trouble that my nervous system became all unstrung and I had about dispaired of ever getting anything that would cure me when Doan's Kidney Pills were brought to my attention. I procured a supply at the Cox Drub Store, began their use and after a short time, I received more belief than from all the other remedies combined. I can say my trouble has vanished and I gladly recommend Doan's Kidney Pills."

CONFERENCE OF WIDE SCOPE

Will Consider Questions Other Than "Accomplished Facts"

BRITAIN'S CHANGE OF FRONT

Foreign Office Concurs In Views of Russian Diplomat and Powers Will Enlarge Scope In Discussing Events In Connection With the Balkan Situation--Servian Affairs Placed In Hands of Cabinet

London, Oct. 13.—M. Iswolsky, the Russian foreign minister, has succeeded in impressing upon Sir Edward Grey, the British secretary for foreign affairs, the necessity that not only should a conference of the powers be held to settle the crisis in the Near East, but this conference should take under advisement other questions besides those involved in the annexation by Austria of Bosnia and Herzegovina and the declaration of Bulgarian independence.

This change of front on the part of Great Britain, which has caused great surprise, was announced by the foreign office at the conclusion of a long conference between Grey and Iswolsky, after a meeting of the cabinet, at which Grey set forth the position he had taken and explained the views of the Russian foreign minister. Grey's secretary, in making the announcement, said:

"It may be affirmed with certainty that both ministers concur in the necessity for a conference and that the pour parlers at the foreign office, following as they do upon the Franco-Russian negotiations on the same subject, have smoothed away some of the difficulties which were in the way. It is now regarded as probable that the latest events in the Near East also necessitate the enlarging of the scope of the questions to be discussed at the conference."

Further than this nothing could be ascertained officially as to the questions Iswolsky desires to include. In fact, it is doubtful if it has been decided what shall be taken up in addition to the two actions which brought about the crisis, for it was intimated that the pour parlers at the British foreign office have not yet been concluded and may continue for several days. Iswolsky intended to leave for Paris on Wednesday, but he says that his departure will not be possible until Thursday, and that he may remain here even longer.

It is doubtful whether Russia is anxious to reopen the Dardanelles at present, for if this is done it must be for all nations, and Russia is not likely to desire that while her fleet is so weak. Besides, other treaties besides the treaty of Berlin would be involved.

The only point in her previous stand Great Britain is continuing to insist upon apparently is that no modification of a treaty can be permitted without the consent of all parties to that treaty, and at her proposal the powers have instructed their ambassadors at Constantinople to reaffirm this principle.

What end can be served by this is not stated by the foreign office, but it can hardly be expected that either Bulgaria or Austria-Hungary will consent to restore the legal status in Bulgaria and Bosnia and Herzegovina before the questions of independence and annexation are considered, inasmuch as the powers have not decided what must be done with respect to the Island of Crete.

Servia, it now seems likely, will fall in with the other states directly interested in finding a peaceful solution of the situation. The resolution of the Servian national assembly passed yesterday, which amounts practically to a vote of confidence in the government, has taken the matter of Servia's attitude towards Austria-Hungary out of the hands of that easily swayed body and placed it with the cabinet. The members of the cabinet are aware of the actual state of affairs and doubtless will heed the warning of the powers and take no rash step. The powers can, therefore, continue their negotiations in the matter of an international conference with less fear of interruption by an outbreak in any of the Balkan states.

Crown Prince Thirsts For Gore

Vienna, Oct. 13.—The inflammatory speeches of Crown Prince George of Servia, who is inciting the people to war while his father, King Peter, has observed an attitude of caution, causes considerable uneasiness in official circles in Belgrade, according to dispatches received here. There is less fear of a war than of a dynastic crisis and an attempt to place the crown prince on the throne.

The Servian premier has tried vainly to suppress the crown prince, for it is feared that he may lead bands of volunteers against Bosnia, or do something equally rash.

Sofia Welcomes New Czar

Sofia, Oct. 13.—The "Czar of Bulgaria" made his triumphal entry into the capital yesterday afternoon and was given a demonstrative reception by all classes of the population. Prince Ferdinand entered the city on horseback, accompanied by a brilliant staff, amid salutes from artillery. He was welcomed by the municipal authorities at a triumphal arch. The entire city is profusely bedecked and decorated in honor of the visit and it is crowded with people. None of the members of the diplomatic corps was present at any of the functions.

BACK IN OLD QUARTERS

Thaw Is Recommitted to Matteawan Hospital by Justice Mills

Newburgh, N. Y., Oct. 13.—Harry K. Thaw arrived from White Plains last night in charge of Dr. Baker, first assistant superintendent of the Matteawan state hospital for the criminal insane, and Edward Conroy, an attendant. A carriage from the hospital met them at the station. When Thaw and his custodian arrived at the hospital supper had been served and a special meal was prepared for Thaw. He had nothing to say regarding the order recommitting him to Matteawan made by Judge Mills.

Thaw was brought into court at White Plains yesterday and his mother and several relatives were present. The prisoner's counsel again moved for a jury trial, and when this was denied asked that Thaw be discharged from custody on the ground that the jury in the last trial for murder did not find Thaw insane. This, also, was denied. Thaw's counsel then declared that they had appealed to the New York state court of appeals from the decision refusing a jury trial, and that until the higher court had given a decision they would submit no evidence on the question of Thaw's sanity.

Justice Mills said there was no other alternative than for Thaw to be returned to Matteawan asylum, and he was ordered to be returned to that institution until the court of appeals shall decide as to whether Thaw is entitled to a hearing before a jury to determine whether he is insane.

MANUFACTURERS SIGN AGREEMENT

It Is Expected to Hasten End of Lynn Lasters' Strike

Lynn, Mass., Oct. 13.—The strike situation in this city has assumed a more hopeful aspect. A long reach towards the settlement of the difficulty was made when an agreement was drawn up at a conference of manufacturers, which, after being signed by twelve of the manufacturers, was presented by a special committee to a number of other manufacturers of the city, fourteen of whom signed and several others promised to do so.

The agreement declares the willingness of the manufacturers to deal fairly with the lasters, and agreeing to continue satisfactory arrangements with them if the strikers return to work. Among the firms who signed the agreement are some of the largest manufacturers in the city and two members of the Manufacturers' association, against whom the sympathetic strike has been waged.

Should this agreement be presented to and adopted by the strikers at today's mass meeting it would mean the returning to work of the employes of at least twenty-six out of the sixty-seven factories affected. The manufacturers who have so far signed the agreement employ about 950 lasters and 350 machine operators, making a total of 1200 out of the 1800 lasters who are now on strike.

Independence or War

Paris, Oct. 13.—The Sofia correspondent of The Temps says that the enthusiasm of the people is very great, and that Prince Ferdinand has had tremendous ovations wherever he has appeared. The cabinet would prefer to go to war to having Bulgaria's independence questioned. There are today 110,000 men under arms. The minister of war is confident that a Bulgarian army could reach Constantinople before British ships could pass the Bosphorus or before Russia could block the way at Burgas.

Three Trains In Smashup

Buffalo, Oct. 13.—Three trains were wrecked in the New York Central yards near the Black Rock station last night. A yard engine with a string of cars attached, a freight train coming into the city and a passenger train were in the accident. John W. Kinney, engineer of the switch engine, was caught between the tender and boiler and probably fatally injured. None of the passengers was hurt.

Middies Fail In Exams

Washington, Oct. 13.—As a result of the September examinations at the United States naval academy, twenty-four midshipmen will be dropped from the rolls. At the regular examination in May last forty-two midshipmen were found deficient and were informed that they would be re-examined in September to give them an opportunity to complete their studies. All but the twenty-four passed.

What DO YOU DO for Quincy?

A Little Wad of Common Sense.

A New Aid Fable.

This is not a George Ade fable, though it may sling some slang. It is a Home Aid fable.

Once there was a Geezer, who sat around and cut Kindling too small for Cook Stove purposes. He Whittled against Time and Flabbergasted against his Town. The town was No Good, he said—strictly on the Blink. Yes, it was N. G. Why, hadn't he lived Here since '84 and found that the Place was Punky? Sure, Mike!

Look at that town over in the next County. Grown like Jonah's Gourd. Must be a Jonah here. We've grown some, but I don't see that we're knocking any particularly Big Persimmons. That's the way this Gazaboo knocked his town.

One day a Sarcastic Stranger floated into the Town that was Knocked from the burg that had Blossomed like Jonah's Gourd. He Heard some of the Flabbergasting and Dropped to the situation.

"Look here, you," he remarked to the citizen who was Handing Out the Knocks. "What do you do for this town? Are you doing your part to put this Burg on the Upgrade? What's that hefty Bunch of literature sticking out of your Clothes?"

"That's a Mail Order Catalogue from Chicago—a town that is a town," replied the Geezer.

"So I thought," said the Impertinent Arrival. "Now let me hand you out a nice little Wad of common sense. For the past ten years you have been sending your money to the Chicago Mail Order houses instead of spending it among your home merchants. What would have happened to Chicago fifty years ago if all the First Settlers had shipped their Loose Coin to New York on catalogue inducements? Why, you'd have to use a sand dredger now to find the Original Site of Chicago. Now, in the Burg from which I have just Blown in we got over all this Bum Business years ago. We passed Resolutions that we would trade at home and help our own town to Spread out so that you could Sight it on the map without using Opera Glasses. But you and a Bunch of other folks in this town have wasted your Substance in Riotous Expenditures in Chicago by mail and let the sheriff hang out the 'Nothing Doing' sign in front of some of your own town's mercantile Emporiums. Look at our Town and then look at yours. What makes the Difference?"

Whereupon the Whittling Gazaboo threw a few well chosen Thoughts into his mental makeup and went down to the village store to Annex a linen collar in place of the Paper Circles which he had bought from Chicago at Two Bits a Box.

MORAL: If you want your town to grow, patronize home enterprises.

LODGE SOUNDS WARNING NOTE

Our Navy Alone Blocked "Insulting Demands" of Japan

IT NEEDS TO BE ENLARGED

America Will Rapidly Fall Behind Unless We Build More Ships of New Dreadnought Class--No War Will Come Unless We Lay Ourselves Open and Remain Defenseless--What the Republicans Want

Boston, Oct. 13.—Declaring that Japan was ready to make insulting demands of the United States, did she dare, and that the only way to guard against such was to increase our navy, Senator Lodge launched into a stirring and vigorous plea for a bigger and better navy in Tremont Temple last night before 3000 people gathered at the Republican ratification meeting under the auspices of the Republican Club of Massachusetts.

Senator Lodge scored the Democrats for raising the cry of imperialism, and declared the only imperialism would come from arraying class against class. There was also talk of militarism, he said, but no people are so fond of shaking their fists in the faces of foreign nations and saying they can lick the whole of creation, but are not willing to provide for the people's protection.

It was his opinion that the United States had a large enough army, but he emphasized the fact that it should be properly equipped and kept up. What we want to look out for is our navy, insisted the speaker. We should protect both the Atlantic and Pacific coasts and it is the policy of the Republican party to do this.

Senator Lodge read figures showing that the United States was second in tonnage and sea strength, but in many details was far below other countries. There are sufficient men and marines, he said, but we are sadly lacking in officers.

While England has seven ships of the new Dreadnought class, built or building, this country has but two, and unless this country follows these up with others we shall rapidly fall in rank, as we have none too large a navy now.

"Notice how the talk of war dies away with the voyage of the fleet around the globe," continued Lodge. "A navy is the best possible insurance for peace. I want a strong navy because it means peace. Without a navy war is always possible."

It does not do to be a great opulent people, declared Lodge, and to remain unarmed. No war will come unless we lay ourselves open and remain defenseless. We ought not to economize on the defense of our country. Politics ought not to stop at the water's edge.

"Bryan ought to be beaten for his opposition to a navy, if for no other reason," said Lodge, "and the others are as plenty as blackberries." He closed with an appeal for our much neglected merchant marine, and said the Democrats opposed this, as "they seemed to hate water, even when it is salt."

Eben S. Draper, candidate for governor; Louis A. Frothingham, candidate for lieutenant governor, and Secretary of the Interior Garfield also made addresses.

The Gould Separation Suit

New York, Oct. 13.—Justice Giegerich, in the supreme court, denied a motion made in behalf of Howard Gould to strike out part of an affidavit submitted to the court by Katherine C. Gould in her application for $125,000 alimony and counsel fees. Gould, whose wife is suing for a separation, had contended that certain parts of the affidavit in question were "irrelevant and scandalous."

Herring Aeroplane Ready

Washington, Oct. 13.—A. M. Herring of New York arrived at Fort Myer, bringing in a trunk and two suit cases the aeroplane which he has built for the United States army. Official delivery of the aeroplane must be made today and it will be inspected by the signal corps aeronautical board. He will have thirty days in which to make his official flights, which must be made at Fort Myer.

A Mississippi Lynching Bee

Clarksdale, Miss., Oct. 13.—The citizens of Lulu would not allow the bodies of two negroes, Jim and Frank Davis, who were lynched Sunday, to be cut down until the train bearing Booker T. Washington arrived from Helena. The negroes were returning from Helena, where they heard Washington's speech, when they became involved in the trouble that resulted in the lynching.

Served In Civil War

Burlington, Vt., Oct. 13.—Colonel J. M. Davies, prominent as a commander in the Civil war, died at his home here, aged 80. Davies was at one time in command of all the cavalry of the Union army outside of Washington. He was born at West Point, where his father held the chair of mathematics in the military academy.

Bid Considered Too High

Washington, Oct. 13.—Only one bid reached the navy department from a wrecking company to salvage the cruiser Yankee, ashore at the entrance to Buzzards bay. This was considered too high and no action has been taken on it.

CANDIDATES TAKE THE TRAIL

Taft Defends His Labor Record Before Ohio Audiences

DID NOT INVENT INJUNCTIONS

Claims to Be One of the Greatest Benefactors Labor Has Had--Bryan Says Hughes Is Not a Reformer In the Eyes of Western Republicans --Lacks Sympathy With General Public In the Matter of Trusts

Akron, O., Oct. 13.—Seventeen Ohio towns heard and saw William H. Taft yesterday. He spoke through a portion of the state conceded to have been a Foraker stronghold, with a portion of it Democratic. While there was not the same vim to the enthusiasm which the candidate got in some portions of the west, he was listened to by large crowds.

In his Zanesville speech Taft attacked both Mr. Bryan and Mr. Gompers. "Mr. Bryan goes around the country saying I am the father of injunctions," declared Taft. "It is not true. I did not invent injunctions or injunctions in labor disputes." Taft put great emphasis on what he regarded as the effect of the decisions he rendered on the bench.

"I laid down the law and I laid down the principles," he said, "upon which the labor organizations in this country have since built up their prosperity and their usefulness, and instead of saying that I am an enemy they recognize that I am one of the greatest benefactors labor has had. I decided a case against the Brotherhood of Engineers and the brotherhood condemned me. In four years they got into court in St. Louis and they had to cite my case there to induce the court to withdraw the injunction there because I had laid down the principles upon which they could organize, could have their officers, could raise their funds, could go on and conduct strikes under the advice of their officers, and in that case they induced, on the authority of my decisions, the judge to withdraw his injunction and they went ahead and won the strike. That same thing occurred in a court in Cincinnati and in a decision rendered in Chicago. If you will examine the cases you will find that instead of being an oppressor of labor, I am its benefactor.

"I have been something besides a judge. I had 30,000 laborers under me on the Panama canal. We had the question of wages and I decided against the laborers. What did they do? I gave them the reasons for deciding the way I did. They elected me a member of their union because I am fair to labor.

"Under that annunciation the trades unions have doubled in this country—they never were in such a prosperous state. The American Federation of Labor has increased 100 percent. Mr. Gompers' salary has been increased 50 percent, and I am glad of it. The labor organizations have never reached the point of usefulness before that they have now. Although you would think from reading what Mr. Gompers has to say that they were in a condition of abject slavery, they have never exercised the useful influence or the power in protecting their own interest before as they have under the law as I laid it down some ten or fifteen years ago."

BRYAN TALKS TO STUDENTS

Says Hughes Is Not In Sympathy With Western Reforms

Lincoln, Neb., Oct. 13.—In an address at the state university William J. Bryan attacked the arguments of Governor Hughes of New York in defense of the Republican platform, dwelling on the difference between the two platforms relating to publicity of campaign contributions and the propriety of President Roosevelt's supporting Mr. Taft.

Delivered forcibly and in Bryan's best style, his speech was repeatedly cheered by the students. The principal part of the speech was an answer to the arguments of Hughes, who addressed the university students a short time ago. Bryan said in part:

"Governor Hughes of New York has been put forward as the champion of the Republican party to attack the Democratic remedy for trusts, and the president seems to prefer the argument advanced by Mr. Hughes rather than the argument advanced by Mr. Taft. He has been sent through the west to strengthen the Republican lines. Mr. Hughes' friends joined with the friends of Mr. Cannon, Mr. Knox and Mr. Fairbanks in the effort to prevent the nomination of Mr. Taft. It is only fair to assume, therefore, that Mr. Hughes is not a reformer in the sense in which that term is used by the Republicans of the west.

"As an evidence that Mr. Hughes is not in sympathy with western reforms, you will recall that he vetoed a 2-cent passenger rate bill and he did this in spite of the fact that a Republican legislature of New York passed the bill. The governors in the western states signed this bill and we are now enjoying the benefits of the 2-cent fare. I will not say that he did this because of the contributions made to his campaign fund by Morgan, Depew, the Vanderbilts and one of the Goulds.

"It is not strange that he should oppose the Democratic remedy on the trust question, for he has never shown any interest in the correction of the evils that the trusts have brought upon the country. I will not say that this partiality for the trusts is due to the contributions made to his campaign fund by Carnegie, Schwab, Gates, Havemeyer, Duke and others. It may be his natural disposition to take the side of the trusts as against the people. His speech presents all the evidence to convict him of lack of sympathy with the general public.

"Does he manifest any concern about the wrong done to the people by the trusts? Not the least. Has he any remedy? None whatever. With him it is a subject of amusement; it is really too funny for anything to think that anybody should try to do anything.

"He takes the case of a patent and says our plan would interfere with patents. Our anti-trust plank has nothing to do with patents. The patent is intended to be a monopoly and our reference to patents in another part of the platform is sufficient proof that the convention had no intention of including the patent in the operation of an anti-trust law. A patent grants a monopoly for a limited time as a reward for an invention. The trusts that we are opposed to have not invented anything and they acknowledge no limit as to time. The trust attempts to corner the market, and this not only is against the statute law, but it is an offense against the common law and an offense against morals and Mr. Hughes cannot be so obtuse as not to understand the distinction between the trust that we are fighting and a business that is protected by a patent.

"But let us take the 50 percent limit, which he regards as unscientific. The plan which we propose will apply first to corporations which have not yet reached the 50 percent limit and to corporations which have already reached that limit. Corporations which have not yet reached that limit would simply stop expanding when the limit is reached and that would entail no hardship upon them, and it would not be difficult to apply it to corporations which have already passed the 50 percent limit.

"If the limit which we fix of 50 percent is too low, Mr. Hughes ought to suggest a higher limit, but when he suggests no limit whatever we must assume that he does not regard the proportion controlled as at all material. If Mr. Hughes agrees with the trust magnates that a trust is a blessing I need not discuss remedies with him at all, because a blessing does not require a remedy. If he will admit that a private monopoly is bad and present a remedy, I shall be glad to consider his remedy and compare it with ours."

Prohibition President In 1912

Logansport, Ind., Oct. 13.—Eugene W. Chafin, Prohibition candidate for president, delivered an address here last night. He said: "The party that is defeated at the coming election will go to smash and drop out of existence. The only real issue in the campaign is prohibition. There is no power on earth that can prevent the Prohibition party from electing a president in 1912. If we had twenty-five speakers and $10,000 we could carry Georgia at this election."

Clark Will Stump For Bryan

Chicago, Oct. 13.—Asserting that the business interests of the country would be benefited by the election of W. J. Bryan, ex-Senator Clark of Montana said that he would take the stump and aid in every way possible the canvass of the Democratic candidate. Clark called at Democratic headquarters and conferred with National Chairman Mack.

Fairbanks and Sherman Together

Newark, N. J., Oct. 13.—Issues of the campaign were discussed from the same stage here by Vice President Fairbanks and the Republican nominee for that office, James S. Sherman. In their addresses both contended that the dominant issue of the present campaign is the tariff.

Preacher Held as a Firebug

Houlton, Me., Oct. 13.—T. V. Hunter, who, until recently, was in charge of a church in Monticello, is now confined in the county jail, charged with incendiarism on Sept. 28, when a house and barn were burned. Hunter was brought before Justice Donham at Island Falls yesterday. Probable cause was found and he was bound over to the April term of the supreme court at Houlton.

Strikebreakers Imported

Turners Falls, Mass., Oct. 13.—For the purpose of breaking the strike which caused the Montague factory of the International Paper company here to be closed for the past two months, thirty-five papermakers from Wilder, Vt., arrived here last night. They are non-union men. The Montague mill employs normally about 150 hands.

Blackmailers Sent to Prison

Clinton, Ia., Oct. 13.—Alfred Paul, 22 years old, said to be a resident of New Hampshire, was convicted of attempted extortion by threats and sentenced to the penitentiary for an indeterminate term. The conviction followed Paul's attempt to extort $500 from a Clinton banker by writing a "Black Hand" letter.

Fantastic Relationship

Warsaw, Ind., Oct. 13.—Albert E. Tucker yesterday was married to his daughter-in-law, Mrs. Lulu E. Tucker, divorced wife of John Tucker, a son of the bridegroom. Albert E. Tucker obtained a divorce one hour before the marriage ceremony was performed by Justice Eller.

TAFT AND COLOR LINE

None In Philippines While He Was Governor.

TREATED NATIVES AS EQUALS

Filipinos Welcomed to His Table and to Other Social Functions—Rich and Poor Alike Were the Objects of His Solicitude.

After Mr. Taft assumed charge of the Philippines there was no color line so far as he was concerned. There had been one for centuries. The Spaniards introduced it. The Spaniard would not permit even a suggestion of social equality between him and the Filipinos, although in intelligence, breeding, education and attributes which constitute manliness the upper class Filipino is fully on a par with the Spaniard or American.

Mr. Taft's first care in the prosecution of his "policy of attraction" in the Philippines was to demolish the color line. Leading Filipinos were bidden to dinner and to other social affairs at his home, and their wives and daughters were asked to stand on the receiving line with Mrs. Taft. At dinners Mr. Taft invariably took in the leading Filipino woman. He did not martyr himself in so doing, either, for the Filipino women are bright, vivacious and possessed of a keen sense of humor, which last quality alone would insure their getting on well with Mr. Taft. So far as he could Mr. Taft became one of the people. A man who accompanied him on his first tour of the islands tells of having seen Mr. Taft in close conference with a young Filipino lawyer, who, when he quit Mr. Taft's side, left with him a piece of paper covered with diagrams. The secret came out the next night at the ball, which invariably formed a conspicuous part of the ceremonious entertainments. The ball was opened with the rigadon, or Spanish quadrille. It is a more complicated dance than our quadrille, and the figures are not called out. Mr. Taft, to the surprise of his companions, stepped off with the wife of the presidente and led her through the quadrille without a mistake. He kept his eyes fairly closely glued to a bit of paper. It was the same that the lawyer had left him and upon which he had drawn a diagram of the figures of the rigadon for the instruction of the governor.

In his office and at all times Mr. Taft received the poorest as well as the richest and most influential Filipino. An American contractor tells of having waited in Mr. Taft's anteroom for an hour while he explained to an old Filipino woman what measures she should take to obtain a balance of $1 which, she asserted, the government owed her on an unsettled claim. Had he not met the Filipinos on such grounds of equality Mr. Taft could never have so successfully striven with the problem in the Philippines. He had to have the help of the Filipinos, and he obtained it by making friends of them.

RESTORING CONFIDENCE.

Country Impressed With Utterances of Judge Taft.

Judge Taft has steadily grown on the country since his nomination. His judicial poise, his sobriety of utterance and his attitude of deep responsibility have all impressed the country. They are what is wanted to give confidence in a period of doubt and depression.

S. M. Felton, president of the Mexican Central railroad, who was one of Mr. Taft's visitors last week, said in an interview: "In my judgment the election of Mr. Taft is of the utmost importance to railroad men as a class, because it means the restoration of confidence, which is necessary before we can hope for a permanent revival of business. The great trouble with the railroads has been their inability to raise the necessary money with which to carry on extensions and improvements. To get this money there must be confidence on the part of the investing public, and this confidence will certainly be secured by the election of Judge Taft."

The campaign has reached the point where it is wise to make the personality of Mr. Taft known and familiar over the country. The campaign is marked by its sober discussion and the manifest movement of the great current of public opinion toward a conservative desire to see the great issues now opening handled with care, consideration and a judicial scrutiny.

Judge Taft is a man of action, combative and aggressive. He appeals to the precise conditions of the campaign. He has the qualities which draw men to him in times like these. The speechmaking campaign on which he recently entered will not only win votes by arousing public interest, but it will add to the strength of the Republican party in every doubtful state he visits by showing the people a man they can trust.

Prosperity dwells with the American people, who are not going to turn it out at the door to make way for Bryanism.

HOW SHE GOT A START.

[Copyright, 1908, by American Press Association.]

"So you're from Pistonrod, stranger. Well, I want t' know. I was born and brought up there, but I hain't seen the place in twenty year. Is ole Younker livin' yit?"

"No, but his darter is, and a mighty fine woman to. She's got the biggest and best stocked farm in the county and plenty o' money in the bank."

"Want t' know. Is she married?"

"No; she hain't no use fer a man except to make money out of him. Can't any of 'em git the better of her in a trade."

"Want t' know. How did she git her start? When I lived in Pistonrod ole Younker's farm wasn't more'n seventy acres, fifty cleared, and the stock was one spavined horse and a cow."

"That seventy acres he's growed to a thousand now, all cleared, two big barns full o' grain and stock. Sairey Younkers turned out to be a heap good manager."

"Dew tell? How'd she do it?"

"Waal, she got her start when she was 'bout twenty years old and purty as a bran' new mowin' machine. 'Bout that time most o' the young men in the neighborhood wanted to marry her. Far back as I kin remember I hearn all the wimmin folks and most o' the men talkin' 'bout two young fellers that was both bound to git her. They said Sairey hed agreed to take the best man o' the two. As the way they was to find out which was the best man Sairey set 'em a job. The ole man hed just died, the ole woman wasn't no good, and there wasn't no one to do anything except Sarey, and she didn't hev nothin' to do it with except her good looks, and good looks in a gal don't count except to git a husband that's worth suthin'. But there wasn't no sich in Boulder county, so it was a cold time for Sairey.

"Howsomedever, she said that since her ole pop had died and left her and her mother in a bad way she'd got to hev a man as could build up the farm. Ef she got a lazy galoot to set roun' and whittle it 'ud be mighty hard on her. It happened to be plowin' time. She tole Zeb Mower and Jake Marks that whichever could plow ten acres fust she'd marry. Jist as you said, there wa'n't but fifty acres cleared, and twenty o' this needed plowin'. She divided 'em into two equal parts, one for Zeb and t'other fer Jake. Both on 'em was awful bent on gittin' her, and their pride was teched. Besides, neither was willin' to refuse on account o' t'other. Sairey had to borrow two horses fer 'em and one plow. She started 'em one fine April mornin'. I was there, with a lot o' neighbors, to see 'em start, and all the time they was plowin' people was comin' and goin' watchin' 'em, while Sairey was a-smilin' on both of 'em and bringin' 'em out things to eat and drink.

"Waal, when they come to the end o' the match it was a tie. Both got through at the same time, and both fell down exhausted. Sairey give 'em both a drink and tole 'em they was the finest fellers she ever seen. She seemed awful sorry, though, that one on 'em hadn't come out ahead, for she said it put her in a fix. She couldn't marry neither of 'em nohow. So they asked her to let 'em try ag'in. She said she'd give 'em an easy job next time. She give each on 'em twenty-five acres to plant. They was glad enough to git off so easy, but when they was gittin' to the end o' the job Sairey tuk sick with neurology and wasn't there to see the finish. Both of 'em claimed that they got through fust, and there they was ag'in.

"Sairey was put out with bein' pestered by 'em and wouldn't hev nothin' more to do with neither of 'em. But 'long 'bout harvest time she relented and agreed to give 'em another trial. She said whichever got half the crop into the barn fust was the man she wanted, and she kinder hinted that there was one on 'em she did want mighty bad, but it wouldn't be fair for her to tell which. So they went to work on a third trial. This time just as they was gittin' to the end o' the job they both tuk sick, and Sairey had to finish it herself. Nobody knowed how they come to sicken both at once, and some was mean enough to hint that Sairey had given 'em some rum with pizen in it. They wa'n't sick long, but when they got well the job was finished without 'em. So she didn't take neither of 'em nohow.

"That's the way Sairey got her start. She growed a fine crop as didn't cost her nothin' and put the money all into the farm. They say she got the balance of her land cleared in some sich fashion, but I don't know nothin' 'bout that. Leastaways she not only put her farm in payin' condition, but begun to buy jinin' land. She's forty year old now and good lookin' yit. All the widerers and old bachelors thereabouts wants to marry her, and I believe she could git up a plowin' or a mowin' match among 'em today if she wanted to; but, laws, she hain't got no use for 'em. I axed her onct why she didn't take a husband. She looked at me surprised-like and answered: 'What would I do with him? He'd only be in my way.'"

"But, say, neighbor, what makes you look so sorrowful?"

"You was tellin' 'bout Zeb Mower and Jake Marks, wasn't you?"

"I was."

"They was both at the soft age 'bout gals, wasn't they?"

"'Bout twenty-three or four."

"I guess they'd both of 'em ought to been planted in the town buryin' groun'."

"What makes you think that?"

"Cos I was one on 'em."

Quincy Locals Briefly Told

A beautiful day.

Republican rally Friday night.

Only three weeks to the Presidential election.

Some special features today on the inside pages.

Registration for the Presidental election closes tomorrow night.

The postmaster of the New England Association will have a banquet in Boston tomorrow.

The City Clerk did quite a business Monday in marriage licenses. Nine were issued that day, breaking the record.

Mr. Edward Taillen of Hudson, Mass., is a guest at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Duncan Grassick, Calidonian avenue, South Quincy.

Several from Quincy attended the Republican ratification meeting at Tremont Temple Monday evening which fill the hall to overflowing.

The big collier Everett, sister ship of the Malden and Melrose built at Quincy, is docked at the shipyard for repairs. She was pretty well used up in her last trip from Baltimore, struggling in the clutches of a veritable hurricane all the way. The Creole and the Everett made quite a display at the yard.

Russell Sullivan of the cashier's department of the Old Colony street railway office is having his vacation. "Russ" is a baseball fan, and figured on seeing the world's series if New York won, but he says it is a long walk back from Detroit or Chicago.

At the 23d annual convention of the Massachusetts state branch, A. F. of L., Charles W. Hanscom of the Quincy C. L. U. was elected to the finance committee, and also appointed on the executive council committee. H. Marr, of the Shipwrights union 68, of Quincy, was appointed on the legislation committee.

The second annual smoker of the hull, engine and submarine draftsmen of the Fore River company has been arranged to take place Oct. 22, in Colonial hall. President Thomas Boles is expected to occupy the chair. There will be a banquet followed by speaking, and a musicial entertainment which is being prepared by James McBride for this occasion.

The anxiety of the Democrats of the 2d councillor, 12th Congressional, Norfolk county and 2d Norfolk senatorial districts will be relieved when it is learned that the conventions will be held, even if at the last moment. There has been much doubt about these conventions, but all four will be held. The Norfolk county and councillor in Dedham, and the other two in Boston.

Football, Bowling And Other Sports

A highly interesting and excellently illustrated article on that soul stirring sport, football, written by Frederick R. Toombs, will be found on the inside pages of today's issue. Many good points can be gained by a careful reading of this article. Quincy High school football players take notice.

Somerville vs. Quincy today. Good-luck boys, and play hard to win.

A football game between two local amateur clubs ought to furnish some good exciting sport. The Quincy Point Social club intends to put a team in the field and would like to arrange a game for Thanksgiving day with the Iroquois club. If these two clubs get together there will be something doing from start to finish.

Now that the beach and baseball season is over, bowling ought to appeal to the young men of Quincy. This is a good clean healthy sport, and should be pushed in Quincy more than it is. In many of the surrounding towns there are leagues among the stores and fraternal orders, and much friendly rivalry exists. Why cannot the same thing interest Quincy?

Miss Mary B. Adams of the Wollaston golf club qualified as one of the first eight in the women's invitation golf tourney at Philadelphia on Monday.

National Day At Food Fair

Monday was National Magazine day at the New England food fair, and the Massachusetts editors and many of the advertisers and readers of that popular magazine were guests of Joe Mitchell Chapple, the publisher. All were pleased with the cordiality of the welcome, and publishers in particular were delighted to inspect a part of the up-to-date printing plant of the National, the monotype machine and the Michle presses.

A bountiful collation was served including roast suckling pig, baked kidney beans, escalloped oysters, cold boiled Arlington ham, head cheese, chicken, salad, olives, etc.

Then came a program in Paul Revere hall including music by the Mexican National band and a ladies orchestra, an original song to the National, sung to the air of "Harrigan" recitations from "Heart Throbs," and many unique features which aroused considerable enthusiasm. Joe Chapple and his brother both spoke and Mrs. Chapple assisted in receiving.

—Miss Sarah P. Morrison has just entered the University of Indiana at the age of 75. She was a member of the class of 1869 and returns to take a post-graduate course in Greek and other studies.

DEAFNESS CANNOT BE CURED.
by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

Ralston SHOES for THE MAN FROM MISSOURI

The man from Missouri is always welcome in our store. We claim much for RALSTON SHOES, but nothing which we cannot substantiate and it pleases us to hear a man say "show me."
We've been in the shoe business for a long time, but Ralston Shoes are the only shoes we know which are stylish enough to please the eyes of the most fastidious dresser without making his feet pay the penalty. There's a reason. Will you say "show me!"

New System at Johnson Bros.

The way that our trade has taken to our

New Cash and Discount System

demonstrates to our satisfaction that we are giving them just what was needed in Quincy, and we have decided to extend our liberal offer, and will say, that to all our customers who find it impossible to carry their purchases home with them, if they bring or send their order to our store, and PAY CASH for it, we will deliver the same and allow 2% DISCOUNT from amount of purchase.

Now we think that this plan will give everyone a good Square Deal, and every intelligent buyer must see that we are more than doing our share to give them what every cash buyer deserves today, first class goods at a low price.

Now, don't forget our other proposition, that all who purchase goods of us, pay cash and carry their purchase home—we will give a Discount of 5% off the amount of purchase, besides selling our goods at the very lowest mark.

We will make a feature of having some special article each day marked at Genuine Bargain Price.

Now read this over carefully and we feel confident that you can see it just the way that we do—something that is surely needed in Quincy—a high grade of goods sold at a very low price.

Batting Session In Sixth Turned Tide In Their Favor

Chicago, Oct. 13.—Detroit's big batting four turned the tide in the sixth inning in the third battle of the world's series. Pfeister was kept on the mound too long by Chicago, Manager Chance allowing the twirler's pleadings to be left in the box to influence his judgment. The attendance was about 15,000, while $22,767 came in at the gate. Today's game, the fourth of the series, will be played in Detroit.

Score by innings:
Chicago ..... 0 0 0 3 0 0 0 0 0—3
Base hits—Detroit, 13; Chicago, 7. Errors—Detroit, 3; Chicago, 0. Batteries—Mullin and Thomas; Pfeister, Reulbach and Kling.

MURDEROUS DEEDS OF NIGHT RIDERS

Kentucky's Governor Asks Citizens to Take Action

Frankfort, Ky., Oct. 13.—In offering $500 reward for the apprehension and conviction of the gang of "night riders" who attacked a negro, A. Walker, in his home in Hickman county and killed him, his wife and two children, Governor Willson made an extreme appeal to the people of the state to "arise in their might" and put down such lawlessness. The governor says:

"If two or three men had gone to this poor cabin and murdered this family the crime would have shocked humanity with its revelation of incredible wickedness, brutality and dastardly cowardice. That a large number—some fifty men—joined in such a crime, multiplies its cowardliness and wickedness fifty fold, and makes every member of the band guilty of murder in the first degree, the basest, wickedest and most cowardly in human murder conceivable in mortal mind.

"This crime and the stain on Kentucky of the murder of four helpless prisoners at Russellville, both by bands of "night riders," is an outgrowth and the logical result of the toleration of "night rider" crimes in the state. It is only one removed from civil war, and the very safety of our institutions and what we have of civilization is involved."

The governor calls upon the people to assemble in their respective neighborhoods in the counties to organize, "and to take stern, prompt and effective measures to punish every cowardly scoundrel who rides the roads to threaten his neighbors, to put an immediate end to lynching, murder and arson."

Dinner In Honor of Bryce

Boston, Oct. 13.—Boston men of British birth and ancestry joined last night in honoring James Bryce, British ambassador to the United States, in a dinner at the Hotel Somerset. The signs of "no trespass," the ambassador declared, were up on most of the questions which he would like to talk of and which would perhaps be of the most interest, but, referring to the troubles in southeastern Europe, he declared he would predict that they would receive a pacific solution. All receive with sympathy the efforts of Turkey toward reform in her internal development, he added, and but a little while will see the troubles peacefully settled.

Great Work In Mission Field

New Orleans, Oct. 13.—Summing up the foreign missionary work of 100 years by all churches of Christianity, Finis Idleman of Des Moines, speaking before the International Missionary convention of the churches of Christ, said: We crown a hundred years with 1,250,000 converts in heathen soil and with 5,000,000 adherents. There are 4000 missionary stations, with 10,000 organized churches. There are 8000 Bible schools and 1,500,000 pupils; 50,000 native ordained preachers tell their story in the language wherein they were born."

Opening of Peace Congress

Greensboro, N. C., Oct. 13.—With fluttering flags and gorgeous decorations, the Greensboro centennial was formally opened. In the educational procession there were 8000 children representing the star schools and colleges of the country. National troops and cavalrymen gave drills and parade exercises in the Auditorium. The opening session session of the peace congress was held in Smith' Memorial hall. Senator McCreary of Kentucky delivered the principal address of the first session.

Decision In Belmont's Favor

New York, Oct. 13.—It took the jury only half an hour to decide in favor of August Belmont in the suit for $100,000 damages brought against him by John H. Freit, the jockey. Freit claimed he was libelled by Belmont when he posted him in the Racing Calendar as having left his employ without authority, saying that Freit had been discharged because he failed on one occasion to take off his hat in saluting Belmont.

Three Arrests In Murder Case

Pittsfield, Mass., Oct. 13.—Three Italians were arrested by the Pittsfield police last night in connection with the killing of William Rockenstuyre, aged 19, at Albany Sunday morning. The men under arrest are Salvator Mazzeo Antonio Pascoli and Frank Antera. Rockenstuyre was stabbed to death while watching a fight between three Italians and three other men.

GIVEN A BANQUET

Col. Anderson Congratulated By People of Quincy Point

The Ladies' Aid Society of the Washington street Congregational church tendered a banquet Tuesday evening to the Rev. Edward Anderson in honor of the fiftieth anniversary of his ordination into the Christian ministry.

About seventy-five of the prominent members of the church, old and new friends of Col. Anderson, gathered to honor him who had seen fifty long years in the service of the church. There was an informal reception from 6.15 to 6.45.

At the latter hour, Mrs. Percy Holman president of the L. A. S. and presiding officer, announced that the dinner was ready, and introduced Mrs. Edith C. Page, who by her enjoyable solos helped the guests to get up an appetite. Mrs. Page has a very pleasing soprano voice and her two songs brought much applause. Col. Anderson offered grace and the festivities began in earnest.

After the banquet was over, Mrs. Holman arose, and in behalf of the L. A. S., extended her best wishes, congratulations and love to Col. Anderson.

The first speaker of the evening was Eugene R. Stone, who spoke on "The church as it is today." Mr. Stone told how he had first met the colonel, and of the changes he had noticed in the ten years he had been connected with the church. He said that at present the church was in excellent financial condition, and that both socially and spiritually it was a great help to the people of the Point, inasmuch as it was the only church in the district.

Thomas B. Pollard, a deacon of the church followed Mr. Stone, and gave a brief resume of Col. Anderson's career at the Point church, telling of the things that the Colonel tried most to impress on the minds of his people, namely that religion was something more than mere outside show, and that to love God and one's neighbor as one's self, was the only true religion. He ended by offering in the name of the church, hearty greetings and wishes for many years of future happiness to Col. Anderson.

The pastor, Rev. A. R. Atwood, was the next speaker, and he said a few words on the future of the church, which he said was exceedingly bright, due in great part to the excellent work of Col. Anderson among those who were children at the time of his pastorate, but who were now earnest workers for the success of the church.

Dr. William Gallagher, head-master of Thayer Academy, and an old time friend of Col. Anderson, had been invited to be present, but was unable. However he sent a letter of regret at not being able to come and of congratulations for the colonel on his fiftieth anniversary, and Miss E. M. Freeman read the letter.

Rev. Dr. Hardy, pastor of the Bethany church, congratulated Col. Anderson in behalf of the Bethany church. Dr. Hardy remarked that although he had spoken on all sorts of occasions, this was his first experience of making an address of congratulation to one who had been 50 years in the ministry.

The last speaker, and the one most awaited, was the man of the hour, Col. Anderson himself. He did not attempt to make a flowery speech, but merely gave a little talk on his past experiences, telling how he fought against his vocation to be a minister, how he studied medicine, then law, and then went west, finally joining the army, as a chaplain, after he had given up the struggle against his vocation. Col. Anderson said in the account of his varied experiences, that he was for a time, the Editor of a daily paper in Jamestown, N. Y. He ended by giving his blessing and best wishes to all the people and the societies of the Church.

This finished the list of regular speakers, but Mr. Atwood arose and told of a former member of the church who this week was entering the ministry in the West, George W. Carter, of Quincy Point. On a motion of Mr. Atwood, it was unanimously voted, that the church clerk send a letter of congratulation to Mr. and Mrs. Carter, on the occasion of Mr. Carter's entering the ministry.

The guests then broke up into little groups and a social hour was enjoyed.

The Ladies' Aid Socity are to be commended for the efficient manner in which the whole affair was carried out. Everyone was made to feel, as Dr. Hardy said, as if he was at a little home gathering.

The Daily Ledger joins with the people of the Point, in congratulating Col. Anderson on the completion of his fiftieth year as a clergyman.

Good Times Ahead For the Elks

The meeting of Quincy lodge of Elks Tuesday evening was an important one. Several applications for membership were acted upon, and half a dozen were given a ride on the goat which proved to be rather frisky.

Following the initiatory work entertainments for the coming winter were discussed.

A house committee were appointed who are also to constitute the entertainment committee. They will get to work immediately, and it is planned that no week shall go by the coming without an entertainment of some sort at the club house for the members.

It is also probable that a public entertainment will be given in the near future.

The committee appointed by Exalted Ruler W. R. Thomas are all hustlers ,and the members are assured of some good times.

Quincy lodge has grown very rapidly since its institution ,and now has a membership of nearly four hundred representing all walks of life.

Faxon Discharged In Quincy Court

It was late Tuesday afternoon before the hearing in the case of Chas. Faxon for setting fires was concluded. It was alleged that Faxon had set fire to a partly burned building on Sea street, Houghs Neck. The hearing was held before Judge Pratt.

An unusual number of witnesses were heard many of whom were minors. At the conclusion of the hearing the court found want of probable cause to believe him guilty and ordered his discharge.

Among The WOMEN'S CLUBS of Quincy and Vicinity.

[A Wednesday Feature.]

QUINCY WOMEN'S CLUB.

Sociability reigned at the club house of the Quincy Women's club on Tuesday afternoon at the opening of the club season.

Most of the officers were in line in the reception room and greeted members and guests; the hospitality committee, Mrs. E. W. Sheppard chairman making the introductions. New members were made welcome. During the reception the Mace-Gay orchestra of Brockton played the popular airs which were much enjoyed and helped to increase pleasant social chat and friendly club feeling.

Following the reception Mrs. George W. Morton, president said a few words of greeting and presided during the business meeting.

It was voted to fine members failing to show their membership ticket at each meeting, ten cents.

Also voted that members purchase guests tickets for the use of their guests previous to the meeting instead of paying at the door.

Voted that members remove their hats at all meetings.

Joining the General Federation which was fully discussed last spring and tabled was again brought up and it was voted not to take from the table.

It was voted that all meetings begin at half past two and the program for the afternoon promptly at three o'clock.

Announcement was made that the next meeting of the club would be on Wednesday, Oct. 28, at half past two, instead of on the regular date. It would be in charge of the Civic Committee and the lecturer would be Prof. Edward Howard Griggs. The Civic committee announced a lecture on Sunny Italy, by Miss Edith Randall at the club house on Tuesday afternoon, Oct. 20th, for the benefit of the Tuberculosis exhibit. Also that the exhibit would be in the Council Chamber, City hall, under the auspices of the Mayor and the club and that considerable interest was being shown and grand results were hoped for.

Following the business a social hour was enjoyed with music by the orchestra, and a cup of tea, served from tables presided over by Mrs. Edwin N. Hardy, Mrs. H. Everett Crane and Mrs. W. H. Doble.

THE ALLIANCE.

Bouquets of dahlias and salvia gave an autumnal brightness to First church parlor on Monday afternoon when over fifty ladies assembled for the first meeting of the Quincy Alliance for the season of 1908-09. Mrs. George W. Morton, president, welcomed the members.

The regular service was opened by prayer by Rev. E. C. Butler and was followed by a short business session with reports by the secretary and treasurer.

An interesting program had been arranged opening with the singing of "Allah" by Chadwich, which was charmingly sung by Mrs. Henry W. Tirrell, accompanied at the piano by Mrs. Paul R. Blackmur.

Mrs. Morton gave an entertaining sketch of the life of the writer and the story of the hymn "Rock of Ages" which Mrs. Tirrell also sang. Other musical numbers by Mrs. Tirrell were: "My Lovely Celia, by Munroe and "Times Roses," by Barry, all of which were much enjoyed.

A brief address by Rev. E. C. Butler; a reading "The Palace of the King," by Mrs. Isabelle Davis, and a paper "My Ideal Alliance" by Mrs. George G. Saville, rounded out a full and interesting program, after which a social half hour was enjoyed over cups of chocolate hospitably dispensed by Mrs. J. Henry Emery and Mrs. T. L. Sturtevant.

The new assistnat pastor, Rev. Charles Bulkley Ames, who has just returned from Germany was present and cordially received by Alliance members.

THE LOCAL CLUBS.

Junior Alliance of First church met in the church parlor on Saturday evening. As it was the first meeting since summer the program was of a miscellaneous characted. An informal talk by Miss Lizzie Rogers on her recent trip abroad was most entertaining. Miss Elsie E. Turner will be in charge of the Oct. 24th meeting with Damascus as the subject.

After the long summer vacation the Junior Friday club resumes meetings on Monday of next week meting at the home of Mrs. Walter E. Burke, Adams street. The club will continue the study of Italy and on Monday will take a bird's eye view with Miss Randall as leader, the topics being: Historic, 1060-1800, picturesque, topography, industries and peoples.

Rev. Charles F. Dole of Jamaica Plain is to speak on "The Gospel of Good Will," at the next meeting of the Wollaston Alliance on Wednesday afternoon, Oct. 21st.

NEIGHBORING.

By invitation of the Ousamequin club the Massachusetts State Federation will hold its autumn meeting at Bridgewater on Tuesday, Nov. 3. The meetings will be held in the Congregational church. The morning session will begin at 10.15 o'clock, and the speaker will be Mrs. Margaret J. Blair, of St. Paul, Minnesota, head of the Domestic Art department of the Minnesota State Agricultural school. Her subject will be "Home-making as an Art." A discussion will follow. The speaker for the afternoon will be Mr. Melvil Dewey, president of the Lake Placid club. His subject will be "The Future of Home Economics." The blue Federation tickets will be necessary for admission to the sessions, and may be obtained from club secretaries. Two white tickets have been sent each club for this meeting, for the use of the appointed delegates entitling them to reserved seats.

President Eliot of Harvard university spoke on "The General Principles of Municipal Government" on Oct. 9th at the meeting of the Chelsea Woman's club. William E. McClintoch, chairman of the Chelsea board of control introduced the speaker.

The Old Colony club of Weymouth held the first meeting of the season on Oct. 8th with a large number of guests and members present who

REPUDIATION OF GOMPERS

Keefe's Action Said to Have Been Instigated by Roosevelt

MADE A PROMISE OF OFFICE

Deal Said to Have Been Made at Washington by Which Labor Leader Was to Be Made Commissioner General of Immigration as Reward For Turning From Bryan to Taft --Roosevelt's Offer Accepted

New York, Oct. 14.—The Democratic national committee, through John J. Gordon, assistant and acting chief of the press bureau at headquarters, last night made public the following statement:

"It was stated at the national Democratic committee headquarters tonight that President Roosevelt, by promise of office, has succeeded in having one of the big men of the American Federation of Labor desert President Gompers in his advocacy of the election of Mr. Bryan for the presidency.

"The labor leader in question is Daniel J. Keefe of Detroit, president of the International Association of Longshoremen, and one of the vice presidents of the Federation of Labor.

"The Democratic committee alleges that Keefe and the president were closeted for several hours in Washington on Saturday, Oct. 3, and the offer of being named commissioner general of immigration, made vacant by the death of Commissioner Sargeant, was made in consideration of Keefe repudiating Mr. Gompers and the executive council of the Federation. Keefe, on Saturday last, issued a statement in which he said, 'I am going to vote for William H. Taft.'

"It is pointed out that on Sept. 26 last the executive council of the American Federation of Labor issued a circular calling on all organizations of labor to work for the defeat of Mr. Taft and Republican congressmen seeking re-election, and Mr. Keefe authorized his signature to be attached to it.

"The source of the Democratic committee's information was not divulged tonight, but the information was offered that if Mr. Keefe or President Roosevelt deny the charge another big labor leader, now in New York, will come forward with facts to prove that the offer was made and Mr. Keefe accepted it, and has commenced to make good his part of the deal."

Keefe Enters a Denial

Detroit, Oct. 14.—President Keefe of the International Longshoremen, Marine and Transport Workers' association, when informed of the statement made at national Democratic headquarters in New York that he had been promised the position of commissioner general of immigration in return for his advocacy of the presidential candidacy of William H. Taft, entered a vigorous denial. After having the statement read to him Keefe said:

"I was not closeted with President Roosevelt. I did see him on Oct. 3, but it was only a four or five minutes' audience, at which several others were present. These included P. H. Morrissey, head of the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen, and I think one of the others was General Powell Clayton. There were others that I did not know. I am of the opinion that every word that was said to me at that time was overheard.

"The president did not offer me the position of commissioner general of immigration, directly or indirectly, then or at any other time.

"The executive council of the American Federation of Labor did not to my knowledge send out any such circular as is referred to in the dispatch from New York; consequently I could not have endorsed it. On Aug. 15, more than six weeks before I saw President Roosevelt, I made identically the same statement which I made a few days ago in regard to W. H. Taft's candidacy. My statement appears in the Detroit Free Press of Aug. 16.

Will Receive Consideration

Washington, Oct. 14.—Secretary Loeb, upon being shown the statement issued from Democratic headquarters in New York, said that the charge probably would receive attention today. Daniel J. Keefe was one of the president's callers on Oct. 3. Patrick H. Morrissey, head of the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen, also saw the president the same day.

May Have to Abandon Schedule

New York, Oct. 14.—On tottering legs, but with a vigor in his voice that made his auditors forget that he was sick, Eugene V. Debs spoke last night at two mass meetings on the East Side, and also joureyed to Brooklyn to address a meeting of the faithful there. So weak was the candidate, as the result of an illness which attacked him while he was touring the New England states in his "Red Special," that he had to be supported by two men as he spoke.

Mr. Debs began the day by speaking in Newark. He was very sick then, having had a temperature of 103 degrees only a few hours before. The first meeting last night was at Hamilton Fish park. When Debs stood supported before the audience numbering several thousand persons, his face pale and lines of suffering about the eyes, there was only subdued cheering. When Debs smiled, raised his hands to command silence and began to speak, the little outburst of cheering broke into an uproar which lasted for five minutes. A still larger crowd awaited Debs at Rutgers square, where he made his next speech.

Mr. Debs retired to the "Red Special" in the railroad yards last night and his physicians took him in hand. While there is no immediate cause for alarm over his condition, still his physician says that unless he rests he will not be able to continue the schedule made out for the "Red Special" tour, which has now lasted forty-one days and was planned to continue until the day before election.

Bryan Makes Twenty-One Speeches

Wahoo, Neb., Oct. 14.—William J. Bryan yesterday campaigned in his own state and last night in this place completed the first of his three days' tour of Nebraska. Big crowds greeted him at every point and when his day's work was over he had delivered twenty-one speeches. His arguments were confined mostly to the stands of Mr. Taft and Governor Hughes, who recently visited Nebraska.

Mr. Bryan accused Mr. Taft of not making the speech in Nebraska that he had been making in other parts of the country. "He did not discuss the guarantee of bank deposits," he said, "doubtless because he was informed that the people of Nebraska are in favor of the guaranteeing of deposits. His appeal was to the farmers and it was based on the fact that the farmers have had good crops and fair prices. All who think that the Republican party is responsible for good crops should thank the Republican party. Those who believe as we do that the good crops are due to the fertility of the soil, to seasonable rains and to the warmth of the sunshine, should thank the Almighty." Speaking of the empty dinner pail, he said it was void because the bottom had dropped out of it.

Taft Has a Busy Day

East Liverpool, O., Oct. 14.—In the midst of the steel and iron district of Cleveland William H. Taft commanded the close attention of an immense audience proverbially regarded as the hardest place in the state of Ohio for a political speaker to obtain a respectful hearing. He showed from his viewpoint why it was that the American workman needed the protection of the tariff and what had been the result when he had not had that protection. He followed this with a detailed account of his own personal experience with the labor world, following the lines of his previous speeches.

The front trucks of the candidate's car and the rear trucks of the Pullman preceding it went off the track just as the train was coming to a halt on a siding at Sterling. No other damage than the track being torn up was done. Fourteen audiences were addressed by the candidate yesterday.

Lodge Repeats Boston Speech

Worcester, Mass., Oct. 14.—A largely attended Republican rally was held here last night. Secretary of the Interior Garfield spoke on national issues and characterized Bryan's guarantee of bank deposits plan as "dishonest." Senator Lodge repeated the speech made in Boston for a larger navy, and Lieutenant Governor Draper spoke on national issues, stating that he considered those more important than the matter of his election to the gubernatorial chair.

Bennet Heads Speakers' Bureau

New York, Oct. 14.—Chairman Hitchcock of the Republican national committee announced last night that Representative W. S. Bennet of New York city had been selected as chairman of the speakers' bureau in place of Mr. Dupont, who recently resigned.

Against Reduction of Wages

Boston, Oct. 14.—The employes of the Boston and Northern Street railway held all-night meetings in their respective cities and towns to consider the report of the committee of the union on the proposed change in the wage schedule of the existing agreement. The company asks that a reduction of 1 cent an hour in the wages of the men be accepted, while the men demand an increase in the present sliding scale rates of from 1 to 3 cents an hour. It is believed that the vote of the men was that they would not submit to any reduction from the present wage scale.

A Meteorological Phenomenon

St. Thomas, D. W. I., Oct. 14.—Very hazy weather has prevailed here since last Friday. The cause has not been explained. It is very like the dust-falls that occurred at the time of the eruption of Mount Pelee, but no volcanic outbreak in the islands has been reported and there is no trace of ashes. Similar weather is reported from others of the West Indian islands. There is an unverified report here that fine sand fell over the village of Sainte Rose, Guadeloupe.

Instant Death In Auto Wreck

New Britain, Conn., Oct. 14.—As the result of an automobile accident here Miss Hazel J. Pratt, 20 years old, was instantly killed. The car was driven by Herman Dudeck, who, with Ernest W. and Harry Keeney, and a woman whose name could not be learned, were thrown out, but not seriously injured. The accident was caused by the automobie running into a telegraph pole.

No More Foolish Stunts

Lincoln, Neb., Oct. 14.—In a signed statement, Chancellor Andrews of the state university has forbidden class fights, kidnappings and night gown parades under pain of expulsion.

Did You EVER Think of That?

IT WILL HELP QUINCY!
IT WILL HELP YOU!

Don't You Like This Town?

You live here. Your business interests are here. Your home is here.

You are reading a Mail Order Catalogue. That indicates that you are not spending your money in this town. You are spending it with strangers in a big city. That city has no use for this town except to get your money.

This town has use for your money. If spent here, your money will help to build up the town. It will help to build up your own business.

In the long run more of your money will come back to you if you spend it at home than if you send it to Chicago or some other large city. You spend a dollar with Smith, up the street. Smith spends it with Brown, around the corner. Brown is just as likely to spend it with you as with anybody else. Did you ever think of that?

All of us have to spend money. There is an art in spending it where it will do the most good. If spent so that it will circulate around this town and community, it will help this town and community. You belong to this town and community. Therefore it will help you. Isn't that good logic?

Suppose you think it over next time you pick up the Mail Order Catalogue.

AN ADVENTURE OF A MISSIONARY.

[Copyright, 1908, by American Press Association.]

After spending ten years in India as a missionary I returned to America to recuperate from the effects of the Indian climate. Arriving in June, I went on the 1st of July to a region of high altitude in order to get the benefit of a bracing air. I found the change very beneficial. Instead of the hot Indian air I breathed an invigorating atmosphere. From the date of my arrival I gained strength.

At N., not far distant, there was a church, and some of the congregation, hearing that a woman missionary was at our hotel, sent me word that if I would give them some account of my work the next Sunday afternoon they would take up a collection for my mission. I accepted and Sunday morning set out to walk to N. Those who had invited me offered to send for me, but I preferred to walk.

I had made half the distance when I overtook a woman walking in the same direction. I am one of those who take every opportunity to save a soul, so I accosted her. She was fairly well dressed and respectable looking, and after a few remarks about the freshness of the country and the deep blue of the sky I entered on the subject in which I was and am absorbed. To arrest her attention I began by telling her about my life as a missionary. She seemed much interested—indeed, so interested that whenever I attempted to lead her to the subject of her own spiritual condition she would not permit, holding me to what to her was the more attractive subject. Thinking it a good opportunity to rehearse what I intended to say in the afternoon, I did so. When I had finished the woman asked me a number of personal questions, such as my name and whether I had met any of those I was about to address. I told her my name and said I had never seen a single person of the congregation or indeed any one at N. She remarked that she should think I would be embarrassed at speaking to strangers, and I replied that I was a trifle timid in doing so.

As we walked on the woman at a place where the path was narrow fell behind me. Suddenly I felt both my wrists clasped in a firm grip, and before I realized it they were bound together at my back with a handkerchief. My companion, who had done this, then forced me on my back on the ground, both arms being under me, and, tearing my underskirt, she made cords of it and bound my ankles. Having done this, she put me on her shoulder and carried me into a wood so far from the road that I would not be seen, put a gag in my mouth, sat me on a log and, making cords of other parts of my clothing, bound me to a tree growing against it. Then she left me, telling me not to worry, for she would come back to me before sunset the same evening.

There was nothing for me to do but wait. If the woman did not come back I would starve. If I was compelled to stay even one night in the position she had placed me I would surely be a wreck before morning. I wondered what could be her object. Suddenly it occurred to me that I had heard of a large insane asylum in the neighborhood. Might she not be an escaped lunatic? I did not doubt that she was and that she would probably forget all about me. The thought was maddening.

For a time I was not a bodily sufferer, but after awhile sitting in the same position without being able to change became very painful. My watch was in my belt, but I could not see it. I wished that I might in order to know how fast or rather how slowly the time was passing. That the woman had not taken it convinced me that she was not a thief, but insane. There was some comfort in this, for if she was not responsible for her acts her immortal soul was not in peril.

True to her promise, just before sunset she returned to me and asked whether if she unbound me I would go back from whence I came without attempting to injure her. I was glad enough to promise, and, loosening the cords, she helped me on to my feet, gave me her arm and conducted me to the road. We had gone but a short distance when, hearing wheels behind us, she said she would secure me a ride on my again promising not to divulge what she had done. I promised, and she seemed to feel assured that I would keep my word. A farmer in a buggy drove by, and the woman asked him if he would give me a lift. He consented, drove me to within a short distance of my hotel, and I walked the rest of the way, reaching it after all had gone to bed.

The next day I was not in a condition to leave my room. Some ladies in the house were very kind to me, though I needed to be left alone. I was too wrought upon to tell any one of the experience I had passed through and had no desire to punish the woman for what she had done, especially as I considered her demented.

After resting twenty-four hours I awoke refreshed and able to look over my mail, which arrived after breakfast. Among my letters was one from the vestry of the church at N. saying that they had met and passed a vote of thanks for my admirable address on the preceding Sunday.

I was paralyzed with astonishment.

As soon as I was able I was driven to N., where I learned that the woman who had bound me had appeared in my stead at the church, delivered my address, taken the largest offering collected in many months and insisted in setting out to walk alone back to my hotel. She was never heard from.

A COLOSSAL GRAFT SCHEME

Exposed by Former Devotee of Sun Worshippers' Cult

SOME STARTLING TESTIMONY

One Class of Mazdaznans Went About the House Practically Naked and Was Taught That There Was No Such Thing as Shame--Purification by Dew Baths--Alleged High Priestess a Hypnotist

Cambridge, Mass., Oct. 14.—Sensational testimony concerning the practices, aims and methods of the cult known as the Mazdaznans, or Sun Worshippers, marked the hearing in the Middlesex probate court before Judge McIntyre over the petition of Mrs. Mabelle M. Dutton, that a conservator be appointed to prevent her aunt, Mrs. Ellen M. Shaw of Lowell, from giving her property to the Mazdaznans.

The hearing concluded with a dramatic scene, in which Attorney Kittredge, for Mrs. Dutton, rose and accused Mrs. Mary Elizabeth R. Hilton, wife of a patent medicine man and alleged high priestess of the Lowell Mazdaznan temple, with attempting to hypnotize the witness on the stand, Mrs. Elsie S. Dittman, and to prevent her from continuing in her testimony.

The court ordered a recess and at its conclusion Mrs. Dittman explained how Mrs. Hilton had been gazing fixedly with her left eye in line with the left eye of the witness, following one of the laws of the Mazdaznans to get one mind under the control of the other. The witness declared she had been able to withstand the test up to that time, but was very uncomfortable. Mrs. Hilton took a seat farther back in the courtroom, and soon after the hearing concluded for the day.

Wilbur S. Dutton, husband of the petitioner, was the first witness of the day. He declared he had seen Mrs. Shaw taking "dew baths" in the nude on the lawn near her home in Lowell in the early morning hours. He also testified she had told him that she left her late husband's smoking room as it had always been, as her dead husband and her dead son frequently came back and smoked in the room.

The most startling testimony of the day came from Mrs. Elsie S. Dittman.

Mrs. Dittman gave evidence to show that she first knew Hannish, who claims to be the Christ of the cult, as a typesetter on the Desseret News in Salt Lake City ten years ago. He claimed to be a native of the Far East and a new Christ, greater than Jesus of Nazareth. With Hannish she went to Chicago, where two temples of the Sun Worshippers were opened. She characterized the teachings at that time as "profane and obscene;" said oil, charcoal and bric-a-brac purchased from 10-cent stores was bought and the oil was put up as "oil from Assyria" and the other articles packed in small packages and all sold at high prices as articles from the east. Some of these articles, she testified, were sent to Mrs. Hilton in Lowell and disposed of there.

Later Mrs. Dittman came to Lowell with Hannish and assisted in the preparation of "Specific No. 3," a medicine.

There were three classes in the cult, explained Mrs. Dittman. The first was a "very innocent affair." The second treated of "dietetics," while the third, or inner grade, included men and women, boys and girls, who practiced "oiling, kneading, etc., and went about the house partially naked and were taught there was no such thing as shame."

She characterized the cult as nothing but a colossal graft scheme by a man who had never seen Assyria or the east, and that she had witnessed many scenes of vulgarity when associated with Hannish as a member of the cult.

Alice M. Wells, a Lowell newspaper woman, testified to an interview she had had with Mrs. Shaw in which the latter had told her she intended to convert her property into cash and go with the leader wherever "the little master" might direct. The witness testified that Mrs. Shaw told her of a vision that her husband after his death leaped on her son, Maxfield, and strangled him so that both could be together. She testified also to having seen Hannish, during the ceremonials, embrace and kiss the high priestess, Mrs. Hilton.

Mrs. Dutton, on being called to the stand, said Mrs. Shaw had told her she was the "Queen of Sheba" and would regain that place when she was reincarnated, while her husband only belonged to the "ape" family. Mrs. Shaw had told her a new disciple was to be born to the most holy and that she was persisting in her "dew baths" until she should be sufficiently purified. Mrs. Shaw had also informed her, the witness said, that Ruth Hilton, daughter of the so-called "high priestess," was to be a vestal virgin. At one time when her aunt was walking lame she had asked her what the trouble was. Mrs. Shaw had replied she had tacks in her shoes to "scourge herself."

When Mrs. Dutton testified she expected no money as a result of her petition she was shown a letter, which she identified as her own, addressed to Mrs. William D. Thurber of Lempster, N. H., and which stated: "If I win it will mean $3000 apiece for each of you three children." Mrs. Dutton declared she did not know why she wrote the letter.

The hearing is unfinished.

A HOMEMADE BASKET.

Directions as to the Various Details of the Undertaking.

An extremely decorative yet inexpensive scrap basket may be made from stiff cardboard and small odds and ends of wall paper. The cardboard should be rather heavy weight and should be cut in five pieces—four sides and a bottom.

The basket should measure about fourteen inches from the base to the highest point, about ten inches across the greatest width and seven inches at the base. It will be found advantageous to paste the paper on the cardboard before cutting the shape; then use a pair of very sharp scissors to preserve a neat, clean edge.

A good smooth paste (not mucilage) should be used to prevent "blisters" and an uneven surface. The inside of the basket should be lined with a plain color to match the general color scheme of the room for which it is intended, then flowered or striped wall paper in either colonial or art nouveau designs should be applied smoothly to the outside.

Ribbons in plain or fancy design are slipped through small holes in the sides of the cardboard, and you have a receptacle for waste paper rivaling the expensive cretonne article now on the market. Because of the almost unlimited variety in wall papers one can always match a room in color and be sure of a unique and tasteful touch.

A DRESSMAKING HINT.

How to Make a Circular Skirt Hang Well.

If you make your own clothes, don't you have trouble in getting circular skirts to hang well? Most people do, and the secret of a well hung skirt is something the professional dressmaker does not often see fit to impart to the novice in the art. But here it is nevertheless:

If you will always remember to sag or have sagged your circular skirts before the lower edge is finished, your troubles will be over, and the skirt will be an even length all round. To do this work of sagging, first finish your skirt and sew it on to the belt, of course leaving it unhemmed at the bottom. Now put it over a skirt hanger and hang in some place out of the way. Now you must weigh both sides of the skirt, or, in other words, you want to stretch the fullness out of the circular part. Let these weights stay fastened to the skirt for twenty-four hours or longer if you have the time to spare. When the weights are removed, cut the skirt the desired length and finish the bottom.

What does one use for weights?

The ingenious woman has no certain things. She utilizes what is handiest. Small iron rods are the best things to use, but a row of heavy glass bottles also produces the result wanted. So use what is nearest your hand, but be sure to have weights sufficient for the thickness of your material and give it time to sag.

A skirt thus treated will rarely, if ever, cause the wearer any further trouble.

Their Business In Life.

Does a young wife know her power? Does a young husband remember that he represents everything to her and that her eyes ever turn toward him? And do both realize that in choosing each other they have voluntarily shut out forever any chance of happiness from any other quarter? They must not let things slide; they must make each other happy. It is the business of their life. The responsibility of it is enormous, the privileges of it incalculable.

A Useful Kitchen Apron.

An apron of white marble oilcloth worn while washing clothes or dishes saves the wear of dresses a great deal. The water cannot get through, and it does not need any scrubbing. Just a quick wipe with a cloth, and it is clean and ready for the next time it is required.

HEALTH AND BEAUTY.

A half hour well spent upon the complexion at night is worth two in the morning.

A good cure for brittle nails is to soak them daily in sweet oil warmed to blood heat.

A tablespoonful of olive oil taken each day will aid the digestion and ease liver trouble.

The hair should be brushed thoroughly for about fifteen minutes every night before retiring.

Honey is very nutritious and should be on the bill of fare of every person who wants to gain flesh.

Witch hazel is excellent for the eyes, but one should be sure the liquid is absolutely pure before using.

Cold water closes the pores of the skin and makes it firm. A little vinegar or cologne added to the water also assists in hardening.

If you have dark hair and it seems to be coming out, cut off a slice of lemon and rub it into your scalp. It will stop that trouble promptly.

OF QUINCY, MASS.
(Legal Title—Incorporated 1892.)
The Directors of the YOUNG MEN'S CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION of Quincy, with a firm faith in the great value of the work which is being done for the young men and boys of our city, make their appeal for donations and bequests toward paying the mortgage indebtedness on the new Association Building. When the building is free from debt it will serve as an Endowment, as there is a goodly income from the dormitories.
Should the Donor prefer, such sum as might be given could be used as an Endowment for an educational class or classes, the Boys Department, or as a special fund in other ways, and could be designated with the name of the Donor.
The Treasurer, WILLIAM F. CUMMINGS, 7 Clive Street, Quincy, or the General Secretary, ERNEST G. GAY, will be happy to answer inquiries.

OUR HOSPITAL
(Legal Title: City Hospital of Quincy)
INCORPORATED 1889
The Trustees of the City Hospital of Quincy earnestly appeal for donations and bequests for the Endowment fund. This now amounts to over $60,000 but a fund of at least $100,000 is urgently needed.
Five Thousand Dollars ($5,000) will endow a Free Bed to which such name may be given as the Donor may desire, but any sum for this noble institution which stands ready to serve us all in the hour of need will be most gratefully received.
The Secretary, TIMOTHY REED, Adams St Quincy, or the Treasurer, RICHARD D. CHASE, Savings Bank Building, Quincy, will be very glad to confer with any one or to answer any inquiries.

WORLD CORN EXHIBIT

Great Opportunity For Farmers at Omaha Exposition.

NUMEROUS PRIZES OFFERED.

Best Ten Ears of Corn Will Win $3,000 In Awards—Large Floor Space Devoted to Women's Department. Wheat to Be Given Milling Tests.

More than 100,000 ears of prize corn will be exhibited in Omaha, Neb., at the corn exposition next December for the world's prizes.

The highest prize which will be won on corn will be $1,000 in cash for the best ten ears of corn in the world, and with this will go the champion premier trophy offered by the Mexican government for the world's best ten ears of corn. This trophy is a reproduction of a famous statue of an Aztec chief and worth $1,500.

This will give some farmer—who will doubtless be an American—$250 per ear for ten ears of corn, and as the corn will win, as it earns its admission into the sweepstakes competition, numerous prizes offered by manufacturers of farm machinery the winner will really get about $3,000, or $300 per ear for his corn.

The corn will then be sold at auction for seed and, from past corn show auctions, will bring from $50 to $150 per ear.

Floor space aggregating 16,000 square feet is to be devoted to the women's department, which will embrace model kitchens and domestic science rooms, where prize bread will bring $50 per loaf, corn muffins $110 per dozen and an ordinary kitchen apron $40.

But in all the plans for King Corn the exposition management is not overlooking the importance of small grains and grasses.

Wheats are to be given the milling test, and before prizes are awarded the wheat will have to make good bread—the best bread, in fact. In this work the grain exchanges and boards of trade of the five leading primary grain markets are co-operating, and their chief inspectors will be among the judges of grains.

MISSOURI MULES TO INDIA.

English Captain Says Kansas City Is the World's Best Mule Market.

The Missouri mule is at the front again. Forty animals are to be shipped in a few weeks to Liverpool, England, and then to Calcutta, India, to become the nucleus of a herd of India artillery mules.

E. C. Loch of London, a captain in the Indian cavalry, is in Kansas City purchasing the animals, which will be shipped from Kansas City by a mule company. The mules are of the smaller type, not more than twelve and a half hands high and weighing 750 pounds each.

"We consider Kansas City the best mule market in the world," Captain Loch said the other day. "The mules, such as will be shipped from Kansas City, are aptly suited for use as artillery animals. They are used in the mountains to carry the screw guns, which are taken apart and loaded upon the mules' backs."

Champion Girl Pitcher at College.

Alta Weiss of Rogersville, O., known as the champion girl baseball pitcher, entered Wooster university the other afternoon as a member of the junior preparatory class. Miss Weiss referred with pride to the fact that she had earned the money to pay her way through college by pitching.

The Tuberculosis Congress.

An army, strong, determined and heroic, too,
Its ranks filled with the lovers of their race
And officered by men who've given years
Out of their lives, resigned life's ease and joys—
Aye, risked e'en life itself to gain the skill
That's made them leaders in this noble work—
Has met to send its challenge to the foe
And snatch the "white plague's" victim from its jaws.
Long has the race in helpless sad despair
Given up the awful tribute to its maw,
Omnivorous in its terrible demands,
The old, with feeble strength an easy prey,
With little left to live for, glad to die;
The young, with life and pleasure still to feel,
Love's radiance showing them an Eden new,
The clinging to existence keen and strong,
The dread of loss the hardest pang of all—
Both still alike to this great scourge of man.
Alike the poor, the rich, the humble and the great,
The sinner, stricken in his vice's prime;
The saint, struck down in charity and prayer;
The useless, worthless cumberer of the earth;
The man whose every day aids all the race—
All fall alike; the scourge sees none to spare.
But now has risen new and glorious hope.
The enemy is forced from his triumphant pose
To stern defense against assault hard pushed.
The friends of man have armed themselves with steel
That finds the flaws in the armor of the foe.
Once deemed invincible. Blow follows crushing blow
Until the enemy in sore surprise
Finds first his advance checked, then has hard work
To keep his ground; next, driven from his stand,
Is in retreat with prospect of defeat,
And soon to come. Another decade yet
He will be harmless, and the human race
Released from thraldom of its deadliest foe.

AGAINST CORPORATIONS.

Judge Taft's Decision In the Narramore Personal Injury Case.

If men who labor come to know Mr. Taft and study what he has done for their interests they will wonder how there could be any sincerity in the attempt by the Democratic party to prejudice labor against him.

Take the Narramore personal injury case in Ohio, which when considered should forever set at rest all this manufactured talk for political effect charging Mr. Taft with being the "father of government by injunction." Judge Taft's decision in the Narramore case when he was on the bench has been of tremendous benefit to employee as against employer in Ohio in personal injury cases.

The facts of the Narramore case are these: Early in 1899 Narramore was a brakeman on the Big Four road. One day while at work his foot caught in an unlocked frog. A train came along, and he was maimed for life. The railroad refused to do anything for him and his wife and children dependent upon him for support. Narramore sought the aid of the courts.

Ohio law held that the frog should not have been left open and courts generally held that an employee, knowing that his employer was in the habit of disobeying a law intended for the employee's protection, by continuing at work assumed the risks of the employment. The judge before whom the case was tried promptly dismissed the complaint.

On appeal the case reached the United States court of appeals and came before Judge Taft. Judson Harmon argued very masterfully for the railroad, but the Republican candidate for president went squarely against Ohio court precedents and of courts in many other parts of the country in rendering a decision in favor of Narramore. In his decision Judge Taft said:

"The intention of the Ohio legislature was to protect the employees of railways from injury from a frequent source of danger by compelling the railway company to adopt a well known safety device. And, although an employee impliedly waives a compliance with the statute and agrees to assume the risk from unblocked frogs and switches by continuing in the service without complaint, this court will not recognize or enforce such agreement. The imposition of a penalty for the violation of a statute does not exclude other means of enforcement, and to permit the company to avail itself of such an assumption of risk by its employees is in effect to enable it to nullify a penal statute and is against public policy."

Judge Taft's decision still stands as the law in federal courts. When the common pleas court in Cleveland took an opposite stand in 1903 the Ohio legislature in the spring of 1904 passed a law which made Judge Taft's decision one of the laws of Ohio. Who shall estimate the service that Judge Taft performed for all who labor in dangerous employment by his decision in the Narramore case, by which he made the law on the side of those who work?

The decision in the Narramore case was against gigantic corporate interests and in the face of Ohio supreme court decisions, but Judge Taft found a way to justice through the meshes of the law skillfully drawn to do incalculable service for all time to those who labor. His record on the bench is not one requiring explanation, but understanding, to see its convincing justness and fairness. In all this talk for the purpose of creating misguided prejudice there is not a Democrat in the land who has said that any of his decisions were wrong.

In all his career Judge Taft by deeds has shown the broadest sympathy for all who labor. No man will go further than he in efforts in their behalf, but he is not indulging in cheap talk of the Democratic type of hoodwinking by mere promises and misrepresentations to catch a vote.

WORLD BLAMES BRYAN.

Says He Must Have Been Familiar With Haskell's Record.

[From the New York World, Sept. 27.]

The main fault to be found with Governor Haskell's resignation as treasurer of the Democratic national committee is that it came a week too late.

Haskell should have been forced out at once, and Mr. Bryan should never have challenged Mr. Roosevelt to prove the Hearst charges or any other charges against the Oklahoma governor. Mr. Bryan must have known Haskell's record when he assumed personal responsibility for the man. If he did not it was because he had chosen to be "a fugitive from information." It was inevitable that the moment Mr. Roosevelt succeeded in making an issue of Haskell's record the Democratic organization would be compelled to drop him. The attempt to defend him was a sorry political blunder.

President Gompers and the Democratic Party.

President Samuel Gompers has allied himself with Bryan and the Democratic party.

Has he acted wisely?

The majority of the Democrats in the national house of representatives come from the south.

The south is an enemy of union labor and believes in child labor.

Some southern states have no laws regulating the hours of labor for women and children, and some have regulations that are not enforced.

What does Gompers expect from a party dominated by the south?

What benefit can the rank and file of labor receive by following President Gompers politically?—Wage Earner.

Union Degree Work By Odd Fellows

The new degree team of Mt. Wollaston, John Hancock and Neponset lodges will begin their work of the season this evening at Wollaston when the first degree will be put on by John Hancock lodge. Judson L. Smith is the noble grand and George C. Ela the degree master. The following week, Oct. 20, the second degree will be worked by Mt. Wollaston lodge at Quincy with Frank W. Flowers as noble grand and Charles S. Jones as degree master. The third degree follows on Oct. 26 by Neponset lodge at Neponset with Arthur W. Priest as noble grand and degree master. Staff visitations will begin in November when the degree team of John Hancock lodge will visit Neponset lodge on the 16th.

W C T U and the L T L.

The Woman's Christian Temperance Union are pleased to announce to the public their success the past year. Having organized the L. T. L. consisting of some of the best boys and girls of Quincy numbering nearly fifty and progressing very rapidly under the efficient leader, Mrs. Isabelle Davis, who with her ability with most assuredly succeed in educating the children to a higher standard of this good work. Through her efforts they will become noble men and women. The next regular meeting of both organizations will be held Thursday, the Union at 3 P. M., and the L. T. L. at 4 P. M. after school in Johnson Building. It is hoped all will be present to extend a hearty welcome to the president and leader, Mrs. Davis, assuring her of faithful work by increasing membership, for a good report at the close of season.

At the last meeting the union voted to make Mrs. Charles Spear a life member, as she has been a most devoted and efficient worker in the temperance cause. They also gave a vote of thanks to Mr. Remick, who so kindly favored them with the hall.

NOT TO BE FOOLED.

John English, a driver for John T. Moses of the Pandora hotel, Houghs Neck received a leter recently dated Madrid, Spain. The writer claims h is a Russian banker and that he is held in a Spanish prison on the charge of manslaughter. He asks Mr. English to help him recover a fortune estimated to be $480,000 which he said he hid before his arrest. English was to receive $160,000 for his kindness. English says that he never heard of the man and thinks that it is a swindle.

THANKSGIVING DAY CHANGE.

A Plea To Have It Celebrated on a Monday.

The first presidential Thanksgiving day proclamation was issued by Washington in 1789. The day designated by him was Thursday, Nov. 26. Six years later, when he again invited the people to return thanks for blessings received, the day selected was Thursday, Feb. 19. When in 1863 President Lincoln announced a national day of Thanksgiving he chose the one first selected by Washington—the last Thursday in November. That has been the practice during the last forty-five years.

Now some innovators who have no respect for precedent and are ready to challenge any custom, no matter how venerable, are asking why there should not be a change, says the Chicago Tribune. They do not take exception to the mouth, but they do to the day of the week. They say that if the annual thanks were to be given on Monday instead of Thursday nobody would be put out in any particular, while there would be a distinct gain for many. A Thursday holiday cuts the week in two. A Monday holiday would only clip off a day at the beginning of it. The schoolteachers and the children would be delighted with three consecutive days of freedom. Business men and their employees, it is alleged, would be better satisfied if Monday were selected. People who wished to celebrate away from home would have to sacrifice one business day less to do it.

This reasoning has force. It may have convinced the Canadian government, which recently announced that the Dominion Thanksgiving day was to be on Monday hereafter. Everybody is pleased when Christmas or the Fourth of July comes on a Monday, for it means two consecutive days of no work. Labor day comes on Monday and is none the less welcome. People can give thanks and eat turkey on Monday as well as on Thursday.

The president can in theory designate any day of any month he pleases, but he is fettered by custom. He would not like to break its chains unless reasonably certain that there would be no popular cry that he was robbing the people of their venerable Thanksgiving day. If the champions of Monday wish to carry their point they must agitate more energetically. They must open the eyes of the community to the superiority of Monday. After they shall have done that whoever may be president at the time will do the rest.

EXPLOIT IN BUILDING.

Cottage Erected In Illinois Town In Less Than Twelve Hours.

The building of a five room cottage in East St. Louis, Ill., with a basement, the dwelling painted, plastered and ready for occupancy in less than twelve hours, is the accomplishment of an East St. Louis contractor. He boasted it was an easy matter to build a modern cottage in one day, and he finished thirty minutes ahead of his schedule.

At 7 o'clock the other morning the site of the house was a vacant lot of the common weed grown, tin can strewn variety, with no hint of the change to be made in evidence. In an hour and a half the foundations were complete; stone and brick, the latter for chimneys, were unloaded quickly, while a basement excavation was being shoveled out.

Meanwhile the carpenters were getting their floor timbers and joists up. The flooring took up an hour, and three hours' work brought the house to the ground floor level. The masons during this time ran up the chimneys, and the interior wall studding went merrily up. By noon the roof was well under way, the framework for wall and ceilings completed and ready for lathers, plasterers, plumbers, gas fitters and electricians.

Women in the neighborhood served luncheon for the workers, who quit for the regular noon hour.

The cottage has in addition to its five rooms a modern bathroom. The house cost $2,000.

A Noah Webster Celebration.

Yale university and New Haven will soon celebrate the one hundred and fiftieth anniversary of the birth of Noah Webster, author of the spelling book and the dictionary. The Webster homestead is still standing at New Haven, and the window where Noah Webster sat for upward of forty years while he compiled and rewrote his dictionary overlooks part of Yale college. Diagonally across the street from the window is the old Grove street cemetery, where he was buried. He was born Oct. 16, 1758.

Trouble In the Balkans.

When the Bulgars are a-bulging, and the Balkans are a-balking,
And the walloping Wallachians are brandishing their dirks,
And the merry Montenegrins are grandiloquently talking,
And the Servians are serving prussic acid to the Turks,

And the Russians are a-rushing to the theater of action,
And the rollicking Roumanians are romping o'er the lea,
While the Austrians are smiling with a deal of satisfaction
At the Bosni-Herzegovinians who've happened in to tea,

How I love to watch the war cloud as it gets an extra head on!
How I love to hear the "trouble, trouble, trouble," of the drums
And the wailings of the prophets for the day of Armageddon!
It's so thrilling and romantic—and the trouble never comes!

Though the powers are powwowing and the kaisers are contriving,
Yet we know one party dassen't and the other one's afraid.
There'll be scores of ultimatums and a bit of bargain driving,
And then all will be as peaceful as a temperance parade.

—Arthur Guiterman in New York Times.

Odd Fellows Have a Roll Call

Nearly 25 years ago Mount Wollaston lodge of Odd Fellows was instituted, and at the roll call on Tuesday evening five of the 22 charter members were present and several of the 100 men who became members March 10-15, 1884. The lodge now has over 250 members and as the roll was called alphabetically, each was expected to respond or send a letter, and those present were expected to say something more than "Here." It was a very enjoyable reunion as it brought out many members who do not often attend the lodge meetings.

The present noble-grand is Thomas J. Smith, who presided on this occasion.

District Deputy Prouty came unexpectedly with his suite to pay the lodge an official visit.

It was interesting to the new members to learn of the days of the organization from the old members, and the old members felt that the odge the old members felt that the lodge enthusiasm manifested by those active in affairs. The lodge now has about 40 living past grands.

Eighty-nine of the members responded personally at roll call, 14 sent letters, and reports were received from others.

Remarks were also made by District Deputy Prouty, and members of his suite, one of whom has been an Odd Fellow 35 years.

Refreshments were served at the close of the meeting in the banquet hall.

The lodge proposes to celebrate its 25th anniversary next March.

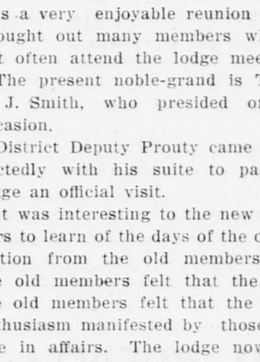
Your Attention Mr. Prospective Heating Customer!



Did you ever pause to consider the difference in various make boilers? Does it not appeal to your better judgment that a boiler the construction of which is such that it places a series of thin layers of water directly or indirectly over the fire surface and travel of hot gases, before they escape into the smoke flue, is sure to be economical in the consumption of fuel?

Another advantage that should be considered in a boiler of this description the parts of necessity must be small, therefore, in the event of breakage they may be easily and cheaply replaced. Of course there are cheaper boilers that are made in one piece from base to dome. These boilers contain surface on which the fire does not shine, or over which the hot gases do not pass, therefore, they are useless. These boilers without doubt can be made and sold cheaper than the boiler made of several units. But you Mr. Consumer, must pay the difference in consuming of coal in the long run.

were welcomed cordially by the president. The program consisted of an organ selection from "Tannhauser" by Mrs. L. Weston Attwood, and an adaptation of Rostand's "L'Aiglon" by Miss Marie Van Laughton. Miss Laughton first gave a slight sketch of the chief events in the short life of the son of Napoleon, and then proceeded to create a most vivid impression of the scenes, events, and characters of the play. Tea, with Mrs. Louis A. Cook hostess, and a social hour were enjoyed at the close.

The opening meeting of the Monday club of Weymouth for the season of 1908-1909 was held October 4. The newly-elected president, Mrs. Jennie B. Worster, presided, and the usual routine business was transacted. The executive committee were very fortunate in securing as the speaker of the afternoon, Dr. Bradley of Randolph to take the place of the people who had engaged to speak, but who found at the last moment that they were unable to do so. Dr. Bradley is an ex-president of Illinois university and has been superintendent of schools in Minneapolis. He has lately returned from a year's travel in Europe and he gave a very delightful account of his impressions of many interesting places he had visited. He described very vividly what he had seen of the excavation at Pompeii, showing how the life and customs of the people who dwelt in that community nearly two thousand years ago are revealed in these relics which are found in such a complete state of preservation. At the close of the program, Mrs. C. Will Bailey, chairman of the hospitality committee, and her corps of assistants served refreshments, and a social hour was enjoyed.

Mrs. Andrew Bates of Roslindale, first vice-president, presided at the first business meeting of the season of the New England Woman's Press Association at the Vendome Oct. 7th. The treasurer, Mrs. Elizabeth Mer- Mrs. Elizabeth Merritt Gosse of the visiting committee reported the continued improvement of the president. Mrs. Sallie Joy White, who has been very ill during the summer. Delegaes appointed to the state federation meeting to be held in Bridgewater, Nov. 3, are Mrs. Mary J. Lincoln, Mrs. Ella C. Richards; alternates, Miss Marion Hosmer, Mrs. Sara T. S. Leighton.

Mrs. George W. Pfeiffer president, presided at the opening of the 14th season of the Hyde Park Woman's club on Oct. 7th.

The Pepperell Woman's club began their regular meetings for the winter on Oct. 6, 1908, with a talk by Miss Fannie Sanderson of Littleton on "From the Peaks of Switzerland to the Plains of Holland.

Mrs. Emily Baxter Hurd formerly of East Milton but since her marriage about two years ago, a resident of Swampscott, is first vice president of the woman's club of that town and active in club life. She has charge of one of the club entertainments later in the winter and has secured Miss Edith Randall of Quincy who will give a talk on "Florence."

The Philergians of Braintree are to have a Civic and Forestry meeting on Tuesday afternoon Oct. 20 when Mr. Ray DeWitt Mallory will be the speaker. An event looked forward to early in November is a theatrical afternoon in charge of Mrs. George O. Wales.

The Dorchester Woman's club held its opening meeting Tuesday afternoon at 2.30 in the club house. The speaker of the afternoon was Miss Caroline Ticknor, and the musical program was furnished by the Westland quartette, composed of Miss Dadmun, Mrs. Moore, Miss Coe and Mrs. Miller. The program was followed by an informal reception and social tea.

THE WAY TO FUMIGATE.

Some People Think Duty Done if Sulphur Is Burned.

If you live in the country or where there is no board of health to fumigate for you after a contagious disease, it is well to know how to do it for yourself.

Some persons think their duty done if a few sticks of sulphur are burned in a room even after such diseases as scarlet fever or diphtheria. Unless properly used sulphur is quite ineffective.

The room must be air tight. This does not mean doors and windows closed, but practically hermetically sealed.

If possible, shut the windows so that they can be opened from the outside. It makes it easier on the one who must open the room after fumigation.

Have on hand plenty of cotton batting cut into strips three or four inches wide. This should be stuffed into all cracks around the doors and windows and in the keyholes.

Cover a register or fireplace with unbleached muslin tacked or pasted tight over the opening to prevent the fumes from escaping. An old fashioned blower can be used in the fireplace if the edges are stuffed tight.

Open bureau drawers and closets and open and hang up bedding and any underclothing that may have been in the room.

Toilet articles of silver or brass furnishings should not be used in a sickroom, as sulphur will ruin them. If they have been used, wash them off carefully with carbolic acid solution or some other disinfectant and remove them before fumigating.

Buy rolled sulphur and break it into small pieces. Every 500 cubic feet of air space will take about a pound and three-quarters of sulphur. Three pounds to a room ten feet square will answer.

Remember that the effect of the fumes is heightened by moisture, so have vessels of water standing in the room and hang up wet sheets. The iron pot in which sulphur is burned can also be stood in a pan of water.

A small preserving kettle should be stood in a deep dishpan and both raised from the floor by inverted flowerpots or bricks.

If the sulphur is saturated with alcohol, it will burn better. It is well to investigate at the end of a half hour, for the sulphur may not have ignited. Do not open the room for twenty-four hours.

If you cannot get at the windows from the outside, cover the mouth and nose with a damp cloth until the window is reached and have a strong draft blowing from the hall.

Let the room air for a day before using again and wash off the woodwork and floor with a solution of carbolic acid and water in the proportion of a tablespoonful of the acid to a gallon of hot water.

For scarlet fever or diphtheria bedding should be burned or sent to be recovered. All toys that cannot be washed should be burned, and books as well. Scarlet fever has been taken from books after twenty years. Fresh paper should be put on the walls.

Book For Menus.

The various menus served at luncheons and dinners are so soon forgotten by the hostess that she is often apt to repeat the menu for some of the same guests. To prevent this the woman who entertains might buy a blank book and into it write a list of the guests entertained and the menu served, together with a word or two about the decorations. In this way she has but to look over the list to see what she served when certain guests were entertained. After a few months or so the book would prove valuable for suggestions.

NEEDLEWORK NOTES.

The extremely large buttons used on coats and skirts have brought a new way of cutting the buttonholes, for now, instead of being just a straight slit, vertical or horizontal, they slant upward, and the button is sewed so that the lower end of the buttonhole just reaches. This is quite an improvement, for buttons cannot easily slip out of these holes.

In replacing an old skirt braid or sewing on a new one after the skirt has been finished try the following method: Rip a place in the hem wide enough to insert a calling card and by slipping the card along between the outer and inner parts of the hem it will prevent the stitches from showing through on the outer side. This is of special benefit when sewing on thin material.

There seems a great desire upon the part of all persons to again revive the pleasing art of hand embroidery as a proper and befitting trimming for waists. One waist of taupe satin, the new shade of gray, was made with a very plain front, showing festoons of brick red flowers. The pattern was somewhat scattered, not the least compact, and showed well upon the dull background. The sleeves were treated in similar manner.

Here is an idea for the inventive girl. It comes from London and proves that the hatpin can be something besides a relic of the inquisition. She who likes an odd touch of color and of originality in her own handiwork can now mold "sealing wax" hatpins. Lovely new colors are now found in sealing wax—sticks of exquisite hertensia pink, emerald green, lizard green, gemlike purples—which are captivating. These, softened and cunningly modeled by the wearer's own fingers, produce beautiful results and, too, are puzzling to the looker on, who wonders of what substance the hatpin heads are produced.

Concert at Parish House

The concert entitled "Gems from light opera," given last evening in the parish house of Christ church for the "Organ Repair Fund," was one of the best musical events that Quincy people have had the pleasure of attending for many months. The hall was well filled, nearly every seat being taken.

A goodly number of the selections were taken from the grand old opera of "Robin Hood" and were most artistically rendered by the different soloists, assisted by the men and boys from the church choir. Miss Hazel F. Jennings, the reader, was highly entertaining in her two selections.

The stage represented a woodland scene, being a mass of autumn foliage, which, together with the electrical effects by George Holden, completed a stage picture that was charming.

The soloists were: Mrs. J. H. Slade, soprano; Mrs. Emma S. Moore, soprano; Miss Sara Thomas, soprano; Miss Bertha Carlson, mezzo-soprano; Master Verner Birnie, soprano soloist from the church choir; Mr. Arthur C. Peverley, tenor; Mr. Carleton Beal, baritone; and Mr. George Davey, basso.

The "Tinker's Song" by the choir boys was splendidly done, the youngsters showing marked ability as tinkers, as well as knowing how to use their voices. Master Birnie was very pleasing in his trio with Miss Thomas and Mr. Peverley "When my dreams come true." He has a remarkably clear boy-soprano voice and handles the same with great ease.

There were twelve numbers on the program, and to say the least, it would be well worth repeating.

TRAFFIC HELD UP BY WOMEN

British Parliament Holds Session In State of Siege

ONE WOMAN GAINS ENTRANCE

Gets to Front of Speaker's Chair, but Is Hustled Out--London Police and Military Almost Paralyzed by Hordes of Suffragettes--Unemployed and Their Sympathizers Aid In the Great Demonstration

London, Oct. 14.—The climax of the suffragette campaign was reached last night, when an enormous mob hemmed in parliament and stopped the traffic in all streets leading to Westminster. For more than three hours the crowds scuffled good naturedly with the police, interfered with theatregoers, broke windows and disorganized things generally in the centre of London.

The heroine of the day was Mrs. Travers Symons, formerly secretary to James K. Hardie, the socialist and independent member of parliament, who reached the door of the house of commons by strategy. The house was solemnly debating a bill to prohibit children from smoking cigarets, when the woman dashed past the doorkeeper to a position in front of the speaker's chair and shouted shrilly: "Leave off discussing children and talk about the women."

Three officials seized Mrs. Symons and carried her out bodily. She was then led to the outer door and dismissed. As a result of the coup an order was issued that hereafter women should not be admitted to the building on any pretext whatever, and in the future the historic grille will not screen feminine spectators.

The appeal issued by the suffragettes a few days ago for 50,000 persons to help them "rush" parliament at 7:30 last evening was the most successful stroke yet. Not less than twice that number responded to the call and nine-tenths of these were young people who came to see the fun. There were also a few hundred of the unemployed and their sympathizers.

Parliament was in a state of siege. A close triple line of police was drawn around the three sides of the square in front of the building. The yard within the gates swarmed with police and 200 guarded the terrace in the rear against assault by water, which the women twice attempted. A small fleet of police boats also patrolled the Thames approaches.

All the mounted police in London and suburbs had been mobilized at this center and loads of hay were unstacked in the streets for the horses. The whole police force, together with cavalry, infantry and marines, numbering more than 5000, was kept busy in restraining the pushing, struggling masses. The crowds cheered, sang songs and hooted, giving voice to all the sarcastic remarks that a London crowd is capable of. These were aimed in a semi-good-natured manner at the suffragettes, who, distinguished by their orange sashes, swarmed everywhere, distributing tracts.

A delegation of thirteen suffragettes, which approached the police cordon and was formally refused admission to parliament, attempted a football rush, but the police chivalrously repulsed the women with the least possible roughness. Two bodies of the unemployed, however, which approached the line were driven off, with little saving grace. The police were pelted with vegetables and some stones in a few minor skirmishes that occurred, but nobody was seriously hurt. Twenty-four suffragettes and twelve of the unemployed were placed under arrest. Many persons fainted in the crush; a few were trampled upon and taken to the hospitals.

The suffragettes and unemployed have kept practically the whole police force on duty continuously for forty-eight hours.

Manslaughter Is Charged

Chelsea, Mass., Oct. 14.—Morris Gordon and Morris Seegal, the builders and contractors, who were putting up a building here when the wall fell, killing eight men, were held in $4000 each for the Suffolk grand jury on eight charges of manslaughter. They furnished bonds. The wall was one left standing after the big fire and was being used as part of a new building that was being erected.

Herring Has Remarkable Motor

Washington, Oct. 14.—A. M. Herring, who has a contract to deliver an aeroplane to the signal corps of the army, exhibited parts of his machine to the board of officers having in charge the aeronautical tests of the signal corps. His motor will be the most remarkable motor ever constructed, if it does all that Herring claims for it.

Labor Against Prohibition

Lowell, Mass., Oct. 14.—The state branch of the American Federation of Labor unanimously adopted resolutions opposing the prohibition of liquor selling and denouncing the government of cities by commission. The convention also nominated officers.

Lockjaw Followed Dental Job

Belvidere, N. J., Oct. 14.—Mrs. Arthur Walters, 25 years old, died here last evening of lockjaw. Last Saturday she had fourteen teeth drawn and yesterday tetanus developed.

CARE OF PLANTS.

The Proper Way to Water Flowers Kept Indoors.

There are three ways to water plants, two wrong ways and one right one. Many people adhere to the plan of frequent application of small amounts of water. Thus the soil about the top of the pot is constantly moist, but the lower two-thirds of the soil is entirely dry. By this method the upper roots are nourished, while the lower roots, which demand water, soon die and the plant is continually in an unhealthy condition.

Directly opposite to this is the plan of overwatering which many persons thoughtlessly follow. They water their plants thoroughly today. Tomorrow they apply the same amount, and so they go from one day to another. The result is that the soil is kept saturated with moisture. It is in the condition of mud all the time, a condition that suits only aquatic plants and one in which the ordinary plant will soon become diseased.

The stagnant water will sour the soil, and the roots will begin to decay. By and by the plant dies. Either of the above mentioned methods are equally destructive to healthy plants.

There is only one right way. When you water a plant do it thoroughly—in fact, be sure every particle of soil is wet. Then do not apply any more until the surface of the soil is really dry. As long as the surface of the soil looks damp you may rest assured that the rest of it contains sufficient moisture. Enough should be given, as stated above, to completely saturate all the soil in the pot. If proper drainage is given all surplus water—that is, all water that the soil cannot take up and hold—will run off at the bottom of the pot through the hole provided for this purpose. By proper drainage we mean that something must be placed in each pot to keep the soil from washing down and stopping up the hole.

There should be at least one inch of drainage placed in all four or five inch pots, and from one to three inches used in larger pots. The best material to use for drainage is old bits of broken flower pots or broken bricks. Use small pieces, not much larger than a marble. Many people are careless about this drainage or ignorant as to its value, but no one can grow plants successfully without it.

Some reader may ask: "How can I tell when I have given enough water to permeate all portions of the soil?" Well, in answer let me say there is only one sure way, and that is to notice the drainage hole in the bottom of the pot. When we see the water trickling through that we know it is time to stop.

Some plants have roots that enable them to make use of much more water than others. Then, again, some soils part with moisture much more rapidly than others. Some rooms are kept so warm that evaporation takes place rapidly. When all these things are considered it will be seen that there can be no regular time for watering plants.

Water must be given when the appearance of the soil shows need of it; not until then.

Use ordinary hydrant water. Use it just the temperature you draw it from the hydrant. Neither chill it nor heat it. By following the above directions you should be very successful with the average plant.

FOR THE TEA TABLE.

Dainty Sweet Sandwiches Latest Fad of Up to Date Hostesses.

An ideal spot for the tea table when one expects three or four friends is the drawing room. The dining room is reserved for large afternoon teas or when ten or more guests are expected. All the paraphernalia for boiling the water and making the tea should be on the table so that the brew may be perfectly fresh and with water of the necessary temperature.

It is always a charming scene, even to other women, to watch a dainty hostess prepare tea, from the lighting of the alcohol lamp to the final bit of lemon or pouring of cream.

To a man it suggests the delightful side of domesticity, and a clever girl wishing to marry should never lose a chance to let a desirable party behold her making tea—provided she does it gracefully. Sandwiches of all sorts are the best possible accompaniment to tea. Crispy toast and little cakes come second.

Toast is often the most agreeable to the taste, but it is so seldom truly hot and is so greasy with butter that it is by no means an ideal thing to handle while making a call.

Sweet sandwiches are new and may be made from thin slices of stale or rather tough cake, having a layer of ground or pounded nuts or nuts pounded fine in a mortar and held to the cake by the thinnest possible layer of jam, marmalade or jelly.

A bit of preserved ginger placed at intervals on the slices before they are laid together is delicious. Maraschino cherries cut in quarters may also be used.

Alcohol a Remedy For Hay Fever.

If a girl has a hay cold or hay fever, her cheeks, nose and lips are in a congested state. She must cool them a little and take out their redness. The most soothing thing is alcohol, which bleaches the redness out of the skin. The girl with an inflamed skin can experiment with various remedies. The same will not do for all, but many women find that they can daub the face daily with spirits of cologne with fine results. The skin is bleached and cooled and the pimples dry out of the skin quickly under this treatment.

AN ELECTION PRIMER

Pertinent Points About Our Election Machinery For New Voters and Old

THE ELECTORAL COLLEGE.

What is the electoral college?

That is the popular but unofficial designation of the body of men who elect the president and vice president of the United States.

What! Don't the people elect the president?

Well, only indirectly. The people elect the presidential electors, who compose what is known as the electoral college. The constitution of the United States provides that each state shall choose as many electors as there are senators and representatives in congress from the state. Each political party in each state nominates the state's proper quota of candidates for electors. These candidates are placed on the general state ticket, and the set that receives a majority or a plurality of the state vote is elected.

What then?

The presidential electors in each state meet at a designated point in the state on the second Monday in January following the general election and cast their ballots for president and vice president. Three lists are made out, one of which is deposited with the federal judge of the district. The other two are sent to the president of the United States senate, one by mail, one by messenger.

And the next step?

The next and final step takes place in the hall of the house of representatives at Washington on the second Wednesday in February. Both houses assemble, and the presiding officer of the senate opens and counts the state returns and announces the result.

WHICH IS THE BETTER ENDOWED?

Any Thoughtful Citizen Can Easily Make His Choice

In a recent editorial article, the Boston Herald, having alluded to the various irrelevant utterances and accusations thus far developed in the campaign, said: "It is high time to ring the curtain down and to return to the issue of the campaign—is Mr. Bryan or Mr. Taft better fitted to perform the duties of President of the United States during the next four years?" Precisely the same issue is involved as to the governorship of Massachusetts. Is Mr. Vahey or Mr. Draper better fitted to perform the duties of governor of Massachusetts during the coming year? This is the issue, so far as the administration of the state's affairs is concerned. What do the voters of Massachusetts think should be the answer? Without raising the question of party, is Mr. Vahey or Mr. Draper better endowed and better fitted by reason of natural endowment, temperament and experience, by his familiarity with large affairs, by the business training which in a governor must be of inestimable value to the state, when there are to be considered and adjusted problems requiring the utmost business acumen which can be found available in a chief executive? The state of Massachusetts is a mighty corporation. In common with its sister states it now has confronting it, and there will confront it to an even greater extent in the future, vast economic and administrative problems which will require for their adjustment the best and most conscientious thought and action of its legislature, and especially of its governor. Policies of international administration which will demand the discrimination which can come only by long experience with affairs will demand attention and call for the exercise of the highest wisdom. While legislatures and governors are elected by parties, the voter asks of all parties the seemingly desirable policy and the executive to carry it into effect. The one engrossing issue in the cities and towns of the commonwealth today is that of honest and economical administration and precisely the same is the demand for the state. Indeed, the proper administration of state affairs is so closely interwoven with that of the municipal that in many ways they become a matter of common concern. If the legislature be unduly extravagant the state is obliged to impose further burdens of taxation on the towns and cities. But even with a legislature which tends toward extravagance, there are generally to be found enough of its members to stand behind the restrictive veto of a businesslike and courageous governor. Mr. Draper would be both, as he has already proved. Between such a man as Mr. Vahey and one like Mr. Draper, at the present juncture of affairs, it would seem that it would not take any thoughtful citizen long to make his choice.

POLITICAL BRIEFS

There seems to be a Vahey-cancy in Democratic enthusiasm as to the state ticket.

By the way, Mr. Vahey, Governor Guild has done a little something in the way of tariff reform, too.

Granted that there is extravagance on Beacon Hill, where is there a man in the state more likely to do all in his power to stop it than Eben S. Draper? We pause for an answer.

Just think of the commonwealth being run according to the Democratic "Boston Idea!"

Fervid eulogiums of Candidate Vahey are conspicuous by their absence.

A good instance of Lieutenant Governor Draper's "grit" while acting governor was furnished during the pendency of the fifty-six-hour law. Some of the Democrats who wanted to "put the governor in a hole" and make political capital, when the bill contained a fifty-four-hour proviso, drew up a letter, addressed to the acting governor, insinuating that he was "holding up" the bill, because he was opposed to it. Mr. Draper at once arose in a dignity which reminds one of that of the late Governor Greenhalge when the state house was invaded by a "Coxey's army" and plumply told the gorilla Democratic senators that it was quite outside their province to attempt to influence the executive and that he would deal with the bill when it came before him. It is needless to say that the bushwhacking senators withdrew and pulled the hole in after them.

If Mr. Vahey should "come to Hopedale" of course all the naughty pictures of the Republican candidate would be consigned to the back yards for the time being.

If Mr. Vahey will hurry and stir things up a bit perhaps he may get mentioned in the newspapers.

Mr. Vahey will now be anxious to effect a few little "mergers" of his own.

It is said that the Democrats are to raise the "issue" of "Draperism," whatever that may be, from their standpoint. Nothing would please the Republicans better. If they will only paint Mr. Draper as he is and always has been it ought to be an inducement for Republicans to help swell the Democratic campaign fund.

As he can cut and fit things to suit the public, Mr. Draper may be said to be also a tailor.

Registration OF VOTERS.

For the purpose of preparing the annual Register of Voters and of receiving evidence of qualifications from persons claiming a right to vote at the coming State Election, the Board of Registrars of Voters will be in session at the following places, from 7.30 to 9 o'clock, on the Evenings of

FRIDAY, SEPT. 11, Council Chamber, City Hall.
FRIDAY, SEPT. 18, Council Chamber, City Hall.
FRIDAY, SEPT. 25, Hose House, Ward 5.
WEDNESDAY, SEPT. 30, Hose House, Ward 4.
FRIDAY, OCT. 2, Hose House, Ward 2.
WEDNESDAY, OCT. 7, Hose House Ward 6.
FRIDAY, OCT. 9, Police Station, Ward 3.
TUESDAY, OCT. 13, Council Chamber, City Hall.
And also on WEDNESDAY, Oct. 14, at Council Chamber, City Hall, from 12 M. to 10 P. M.

which will be the final session before the election.

Every applicant for registration must appear in person before the Board and must present either a certificate from the Assessors or a Tax Bill or Notice from the Collector of Taxes, showing that he has been assessed a poll tax as a resident of the city on the first day of May last; if a naturalized citizen he must also produce for inspection his papers of naturalization.

No person can vote at the caucuses or election unless his name has previously been placed upon the voting list of the Ward and precinct of which he was a resident on the first day of May last. The Registrars cannot, until after the next election, add any names to the registers except the names of voters examined as to their qualifications between the preceding thirtieth day of April and the close of registration, which will be at 10 o'clock, P. M.

Lady Betty Across the Water

By C. N. & A. M. WILLIAMSON

Copyright, 1906, by McClure, Phillips & Co.

SYNOPSIS.

CHAPTER I—The story is told in the first person by Lady Betty Bulkeley, the pretty young sister of the Duke of Stanforth. She is to visit America in care of Mrs. Stuyvesant-Knox (Mrs. Ess Kay,) a leader of American society, and the latter's cousin, Miss Sally Woodburn, in order that her elder sister Victoria's prospective fiance, Sir Gilbert Mantell, may not be attracted by her.

II—On board ship Betty is attracted by a young American steerage passenger, who saves a child from drowning. Mrs. Ess Kay, who is very "exclusive," objects to Betty's interest in the young man. Betty also meets Tom Doremus, cousin of Mrs. Vander Windt, of New York society.

III—Lady Betty gets her first impression of America. On the dock she is rescued from reporters by the steerage hero, who tells her he is Jim Brett, employed at the Manhattan club, New York. In Mrs. Ess Kay's splendid New York home Betty meets Lieutenant Parker brother of the hostess, who is to take them to visit West Point.

Chapter 4

"OH, Betty, you never told me you were interviewed on the dock." These were the first words Mrs. Ess Kay said to me as I walked in to breakfast, a little late because of a wrestle I had had with a different and even more exciting kind of bath.

"I wasn't," said I, on the defensive, though I couldn't be perfectly sure what connection, if any, interviewing had with the customs. "You told me not to declare anything, and I didn't."

Mr. Parker, looking as if he had been melted, poured into his clothes and then cooled off with iced water, burst out laughing.

"You're a daisy, Lady Betty," said he.

"Is it invidious to be a daisy?" I asked.

"I guess I must look in the dictionary for 'invidious,' but a daisy's a flower that has budded in the green fields of England, where there aren't any newspaper reporters or other strange bugs."

"Potter!" exclaimed Mrs. Ess Kay, "don't tease her, and when you've been in the green fields of England you'll say insects, not—er—what you did say, if you don't want ladies to faint all around you on the floor." Then she turned to me. "He means you're very innocent, because you don't know what it is to be interviewed. But you must have been it, all the same, for see here, in this dreadful Flashlight." And she handed me a newspaper, with one page folded over and huge headings dotted about at the top of paragraphs, like the lines of big print that oculists keep to make you try your eyesight. In the middle column I saw my name, but I couldn't believe it was really there, in an American paper. I began to think I wasn't awake yet, and that this must be part of the dream I was dreaming all yesterday.

"BONNY—BETTY—BULKELEY," I read out aloud. "A Duke's Daughter on the Dock. Call Her by Her Front Name, Please. What Lady Betty Thinks of Our Boys."

There was more, but when I had got so far, I simply gasped.

"How dare they?"

"There isn't much they don't dare, except to go back without a 'story,'" said Mr. Parker, laughing. But I didn't laugh. I was too angry.

"If my brother were here, he'd kill them," I said.

"Then he hasn't got a sense of humor," replied Mr. Parker. "I don't see how a duke could have and be a duke nowadays, but I guess I wouldn't mind swopping my sense of humor for a dukedom, all the same. See here, Lady Betty, you'll get to like our newspapers before you've been over here a month. They sort of grow on you. They're as interesting as novels, and almost as true to life."

"This isn't true to my life, anyway," I said, not knowing whether I wanted most to laugh or cry. "Oh, Sally, Sally Woodburn, will anybody believe I said such things as these?"

"Give the Flashlight to me and let me look," she said. And when she'd taken the paper, she began to read the stuff that came under the big headings out aloud in her pretty, soft voice:

"Yesterday was a blazer, but though it was hot enough on the docks to roast a coon when the Big Willie steamed in that beautiful young visitor to our shores, Lady Betty Bulkeley, managed to look like the duke's daughter and duke's sister she is and, so far as a mere man could tell, without the help of patent hair curlers or other artificial aids to personal pulchritude.

"A daughter of the gods, divinely tall and most divinely fair, she sat on a throne of ducal luggage looking queenly in an elegant white shirt waist built mostly of holes and eminently suited to her style of beauty as well as the weather. She also had on a picture hat, which was superfluous, as she would have been a picture without it, and below the waist she was tailor made."

"I think it's most insulting!" I broke in. "And I was made at home, all the way down."

But Sally went on: "I soon found (writes the representative of the Flashlight) that the sister of the Duke of Stanforth, one of Britain's eligibles, preferred to be addressed by her front name of Lady Betty. 'I feel more at home,' said she, with a sweet voice, but a pronounced English accent, 'when I am called Lady Betty. And I want to feel at home in America because I expect to be some time with my friend, Mrs. Stuyvesant-Knox, who will show me society over on this side. I have heard so much about Newport, don't you know. I fancy it will be too utterly deevy.'"

"What's deevy?" I demanded, with scorn.

"Oh, that's supposed to be what smart Englishwomen say for divine."

"I never heard of it," I sneered, "much less said it. I'm sure mother would consider it quite profane."

"Well, do be quiet, child, and listen to what the Flashlight says you said. 'What opinion have you formed of our society women and clubmen on board the Willie?' was the next question.

"'I think your ladies are better dressed than ours, and the gentlemen are just lovely. They don't sit around and wait while we girls amuse them; they hustle to give us a good time, and they know how to do it. I shouldn't wonder if I should hate to go home and associate with lords after being a summer girl in Newport. I don't see now why American girls go out of their own country to marry.'

"'I suppose we shall be seeing your brother, the duke, over here before long?'

"'His grace may come to fetch me back,' replied her ladyship. 'He has never been to America, but it is one of the desires of his life to come, and your American beauties had better look out, for he is a gay young bachelor, and I shouldn't be surprised if he took a fancy to carry home a duchess. Mrs. Stuyvesant-Knox will entertain him also, and maybe he will paint some of America red.'"

"That's all about you, I see," Sally finished up. "The rest is about Cousin Katherine and me. It says we've come back with a touch of the Piccadilly accent, and it criticises my nose and the way Cousin Katherine puts on her hat. It describes this house all wrong and says the Newport cottage 'knocks spots' out of Mrs. Van der Windt's cottage. It also mentions Cousin Potter, and calls him 'one of our army dudes.' But we don't mind, and you mustn't. Everybody reads the Flashlight for the sake of the shocks, but nobody believes its flashes."

"Still, you must have said something to the man," remarked Mrs. Ess Kay.

"I only said 'No, but'—or 'Yes, but'"— I insisted. "Truly and truly nothing else. And oh, there was a Bat, too, who tried to talk to me."

"Great Scott, the Evening Bat!" chortled Mr. Parker. "Look out for something rich tonight."

"Can't he be stopped?" I asked.

"Might as well try to stop Niagara with a tin can. The less you said the more the Bat will say. But it doesn't matter. Nobody'll care. Reporters are paid by the yard for imagination; information's gone out, though I do hear you use it still on your side."

I was just going to defend information (British) at the expense of imagination (American), when I remembered that the "army dude"—which sounds rather like something you might buy at the stores—had sent me up an enormous bouquet of violets as big as a breakfast plate, and that I'd forgotten to thank him. I did so at once, but it seemed that I had blundered.

"Violets?" he echoed. "Must have been some other fellow. I sent you gardenias."

"Oh, then the cards got mixed," I said. "I thought the gardenias were from Mr. Doremus. How kind of you both. I was so surprised to receive such lovely flowers."

"Our American buds are surprised when they don't get them. They would think it a cold day when they didn't have a slight morning haul of flowers—must be out of season ones or they're no use—new novels or candy. What do men over on your side of the water do to convince you girls that they think you're as beautiful as you really are?"

I thought for a minute, and then I said that perhaps we weren't as hard to convince as American girls. I don't know whether this was a proper answer or not, but, anyway, Mr. Parker laughed, and then began to plan what we should do for the day.

"Say, let's run her over to Coney Island," he said.

"Oh, my dear boy!" exclaimed Mrs. Ess Kay. "Not for anything. The duchess would have a fi—I mean, she would be horrified."

THE LOGIC OF FACTS.

Socialism Begins With "Public Utilities" and Then Throttles Private Business.

Its advocates say that municipal ownership is not socialism because it confines itself to public utilities. But that is a very elastic phrase which can easily be stretched to include any industry the profits of which appeal to public cupidity or the municipalization of which will make a taking "issue" for a political or journalistic demagogue. Everybody in Vienna drinks beer; brewing is a "public utility;" the city has invested $2,000,000 in a municipal brewery and another tidy sum in a municipal beer palace, so that the thirsty citizens may get his jag without being dependent upon private enterprise. Why not? Everybody in Vienna dies—ultimately. Another "public utility" is grasped by the growing army of city officials, and the leading undertaking establishments are bought out at a cost of $500,000. Again, why not? Although everybody in Vienna doesn't eat meat (the pay of minor city employees doesn't permit such a luxury), the retail butchers were discovered to be making a profit which might much better be in the city treasury than in private pockets. To think was to act, and Vienna became a purveyor of meat. When you mix government and business you get socialism, the degree of socialism depending only upon how much business you mix with your government, not what sort of business—"public utilities" or otherwise.

Georgians should vote for Bryan, even though they do not favor him personally, for the sake of the integrity of the Democratic party in this state.—Macon (Ga.) Telegraph. There is faint Democratic support for you!

"My views are well known!" shouts Mr. Bryan. Will the gentleman kindly give the vintage—1896, 1900 or 1908?

DUNCAN OPPOSES GOMPERS' IDEA.

James Duncan, first vice president of the American Federation of Labor and international secretary-treasurer of the Granite Cutters' International Association of America, has sent out numerous identical letters declaring the absolute independence from partisanship of the American Federation of Labor. The letter is written on the stationery of the Granite Cutters' union. Mr. Duncan is next in command of the American Federation of Labor to Mr. Gompers, and his letters are a direct repudiation of the attitude of the president of the American Federation of Labor in taking the organization into politics and exerting his influence to elect Bryan and Kern. Mr. Duncan is not advising union workingmen to vote either for Bryan or Taft, but to rely on their own judgment and to exercise their own individual preference. The letter is as follows:

Sept. 17, 1908.

My Dear Sir—Your inquiry is similar to a number of other inquiries on the same subject and therefore needs the general answer.

The labor movement of our country, in as far as the political situation is concerned, is now, as heretofore, independent of parties. Those who have given the greatest thought to the subject within the ranks of organized labor have been busy from year to year for a long time, as part of their trade unionism, teaching or at least advising organized workers to not be bound to any particular party, but to vote for the principles they believed were for the greatest good to the greatest number of all the people, and that if any person aspired to public office to deal with the aspirant upon his merits and not because of his belonging or not belonging to any particular party. The intensity of recent events has caused more activity among the organized workers, in as far as political affairs are concerned, than in the past, and we may expect as men become educated to the public needs and study the science of government they will become still more active politically.

The labor movement advises study of the different subjects and principles of the great political parties and admonishes each organized worker who is a citizen and a voter—and all should qualify as fully as possible in both ways—to cast his vote on election day in strict accordance with his conscience as to what would be the best for the whole people.

The hue and cry sent out by a portion of the public press that the labor vote was being bartered is but one of the forms of political buncombe which is used for exaggeration and to befog the public mind. The views, beliefs and inclinations of candidates for public office should in each instance be carefully scrutinized by all good citizens, and which includes all voting organized workers, instead of simply voting for a man because he may hold certain party affiliations, and the election this year and the campaign leading up to it, as far as organized labor is concerned, will be no exception to that rule. Very truly yours,

JAMES DUNCAN.

FIRE IN ORPHAN HOME

Forty Little Ones Are Safely Carried From Danger Zone

Boston, Oct. 14.—Policemen, firemen and citizens, groping about the smoke-filled rooms of the Church Home for Orphans and Destitute Children late last night, rescued forty little ones whose lives were endangered by a fire which quickly filled the entire four-story structure with dense smoke. The home is conducted by the Episcopal diocese of Massachusetts.

The fire started in the basement from some cause unknown. About half the children, whose ages range from 4 to 16 years, were able to make their way in safety from the building at the outset.

The younger ones, who were on the second floor, were too frightened to help themselves, however. The first citizens to reach the fire immediately sought the little ones and one by one they were carried in their nightclothes down the smoke-filled corridors and stairways to the street. The police and firemen joined in the task and soon all were outside. The Church of the Redeemer, nearby, was thrown open and the children sheltered there until they could be taken to more suitable quarters.

The fire was confined to the basement and caused a loss of $1000. None of the children was injured and they will be able to be taken back to the home today.

BULGARIA HAS BECOME RESTIVE

Turkey Advised to Accept the Claim of Independence

London, Oct. 14.—Bulgaria's determination to force Turkey to recognize her independence is the present danger point in the Balkan situation. She is prepared to fight and her military experts think she could make her way into Constantinople in a short time. Foreign experts are of the same opinion.

The statement in a Paris dispatch that Great Britain would land "troops" to protect Constantinople in event of Bulgaria taking up arms is rather foolish. Bulgaria would be in the sultan's palace or driven back to her own frontier before England could get "troops" anywhere near the scene.

Great Britain's about-face on the limitation of the subjects to be discussed at the coming European conference has reopened the flood gates of negotiation. England is trying to confine the scope to as narrow limits as possible. She has advised Turkey to accept the independence of Bulgaria and annexation of Bosnia and Herzegovina as "accomplished facts." Neither Bulgaria nor Austria will consent to restore the status quo existing previous to Oct. 5.

Shoe Firms Sign Agreement

Lynn, Mass., Oct. 14.—Indications point to an early settlement of the lasters' strike. Forty-two of the sixty-seven manufacturers in this city have signed the agreement which is, in effect, an agreement to accede to the demands of the strikers. This is eight more than the 50 percent of signatures demanded by the Lasters' union before the question of returning to work would be given any consideration. The proposition of these manufacturers will be presented by the lasters' executive board to the mass meeting today, and it is thought that the men will vote to return to work.

Pothier Will Head Ticket

Providence, Oct. 14.—Plans for the Republican state convention were perfected at a meeting of the executive committee of the Republican state central committee held at Republican headquarters here. The Republican state ticket this year will be headed by Aram J. Pothier of Woonsocket, candidate for governor, and Arthur W. Dennis of Providence, candidate for lieutenant governor.

Minister Had Poor Memory

Nevada, Mo., Oct. 14.—Rev. W. H. Forse, aged 74, formerly pastor of a church here, pleaded guilty to bigamy and was sentenced to three years in the penitentiary. He admitted the charge when confronted by two of his four wives. His excuse was that his memory was bad and that he could not always remember whether he was married.

A Farmer's Murderous Deed

Goldsberry, Mo., Oct. 14.—D. O. Seaman, a farmer, went to the district school, called out his two sons, aged 10 and 12 years, shot one of them dead, mortally wounded the other and then shot and killed himself. The cause of the tragedy is not known.

NEWS IN BRIEF

Mrs. William F. Weld, a member of one of the oldest and wealthiest Boston families, is dead. She was born in 1810.

A loss of nearly $45,000 was caused by the burning of the Goodwin block, situated in the heart of the business section of Wolfboro, N. H. The fire is thought to have started from a defective chimney.

The death of Dr. Daniel C. Gilman, formerly president of Johns Hopkins university, occurred suddenly at Norwich, Conn. Gilman was born at Norwich in 1831.

Dr. Charles F. Rand, the first volunteer to enlist in the Union army after President Lincoln's call for troops and the first soldier to receive from congress a medal of honor for bravery on the field, died at Washington, aged 70. He was born at Batavia, N. Y.

OLYMPIC GAMES

Described by Expert Sportsman Who Accompanied The Americans

The Wollaston Unitarian Club, which is Unitarian only in name, began the season of 1908-1909 on Tuesday evening with F. W. Plummer the principal of the Woodward Institute, as president. As usual the attendance was large, being limited only by the capacity of the vestry of the Wollaston Unitarian church. The membership reaches out to all parts of the city, including most of the masters of the Quincy schools, and several of the professional men, as well as business men of Quincy and Boston.

At 6.30 an excellent hot roast beef dinner, home cooked, was served, the meat being carved on the table.

The speaker of the evening was Hon. Joseph B. McCabe of the East Boston Argus who was one of the party that accompanied the American team to the Olympic games at London the past summer.

The unsportsman-like treatment accorded the Americans at the games has been spread broadcast by the public press. Here however the club members heard the incidents related in a graphic and thrilling manner by an eye witness.

Throughout the whole event, said Mr. McCabe, the Americans conducted themselves in a gentlemanly manner, even though they were made the butt of much of what Mr. McCabe called gaff. It was tough at times, and there was a time when it was thought the American team would withdraw. Had we been women we probably would have cried. The Americans entered many protests but it was of little avail.

Mr. McCabe described in detail three of the great events, the 1500 meter, the 400 meter, and the great Marathon races.

He then described in detail the characteristics of the Americans who were entered in these events. How the drawings were unfair, as it placed America's best men in the same heat. Of the angle line on which the runners were started, and of the cold bloodedness of the starter.

He also described in detail the 400 meter race and the unfairness by which Carpenter was disqualified, and forever prohibited from entering English games. Carpenter was not guilty of what he was accused, but was disqualified as a falsehood told by the Englishmen whom he had beaten fairly an dsquarely.

The last event described by Mr. McCabe was the great Marathon race, in which there were 58 starters, of whom seven were Americans. The course was over 26 miles, the air hot and the roads dusty. At the end of the 5 and 10 mile marks England was leading. At the 15 mile mark, DoDrando, the Italian led, with Hayes the American third, about a mile behind. The description of the finish of that great race was very thrilling, as in detail the speaker told of Dorando falling and being given drugs by a physician in violation of all rules. How at the finish he was a mental and physical wreck, and was assisted over the line.

Mr. McCabe spoke interestingly for two hours and at the conclusion of his talk was given a rising vote of thanks.

The Elaborate, Permanent Decorations which have just been put up are most attractive, and add much to the appearance of the Hall.

The Electric Light Festoon over the entrance way, flashing first red, then white, is a unique feature of much value.

The Moonlight Effect obtained by having the electric light come through Japanese lanterns is a pleasing innovation.

The Floor is of selected maple laid with the greatest care, and is kept in perfect condition, being covered with canvas when not used for dancing.

The Ventilation—a most important consideration—is such as to keep the air pure with even a crowded Hall.

The Hall is Lighted by electricity, brilliantly and pleasantly, and with a switchboard arranged so that all desired effects can be obtained in the Hall proper or on the stage. Gas is used as an auxiliary light.

The Heating is direct—indirect, ample, and giving the most healthful results.

The Stage has been designed with care, and is furnished with a particularly generous supply of attractive and appropriate scenery.

For Advertising, the Music Hall Billboards are valuable.

To Darken the Hall, there are special window fittings so that at noonday the Hall can be made as dark as at midnight.

In case of fire there are pails of water and chemical fire extinguishers throughout the Hall. There is an asbestos fire curtain by which the Stage can be instantly cut off from the Hall proper. There are ten (10) doors opening from the Hall and six (6) separate exits.

As a whole, Quincy Music Hall has been carefully planned to meet the requirements of those who wish a large and really first class Hall.

Foot Ball And Other Sports

Owing to a mistake in the schedule it was reported that Quincy High was to play Somerville on Tuesday. These two teams meet today at Broadway field, Somerville, and a fast game is looked for by both teams. Somerville under the coaching of Leo Hafford, developed rapidly, and Quincy will be lucky to hold them to a low score. Their ends are the fastest and heaviest pair of any school about Boston.

Lakin will play tackle today for the Quincy team, and a change will be made at centre. This will help to strengthen the line, and with Nash and Marsh on the ends the boys should work fast today.

Quincy High is fortunate in having two good quarterbacks. This is a position that is often weak, and a team with a good quarter is lucky. Both Gore and Hendry show excellent judgment in running the team and also play a hard game on the defensive.

The Houghs Neck Associates have two bowling alleys in their club house at Pandora hall and a bowling league is in process of formation. Two games a week will be played, and a cup, appropriately inscribed, will be given to the winning team. There ought to be some exciting matches at the beach the coming winter.

In the Huntington Valley Country club's invitation golf tournament in Philadelphia on Tuesday, Miss Adams of the Wollaston golf club cause much disappointment to Philadelphia people, by defeating Miss Griscom , a home player. Their play was very close, Miss Adams winning on the very last put.

Many local runners will be sorry to learn that Hugh McGrath for seven years superintendent of the Charlesbank "gym," has resigned to study law. "Hughie" has developed many a good runner in this section, and has seen them all training at the Charlesbank.

The two Carlson brothers ought to make a good showing today. They are both husky and strong and know the game from A to Z. When the Somerville backs strike this pair they are liable to stop with a bang.

Of course Quincy will be outweighed today and must depend on her speed at all times. The best plan, then, is to keep the ball away from Somerville as much as possible, because if Quincy has the ball Somerville can't rush it, that is evident.

Brockton learned this lesson in their game against Everett, when they continually kicked to the Everett boys. As a result Brockton was snowed under 38 to 0, because they couldn't stop the onward rush of their opponents.

The next home game is with Wellesley and this ought to be a win for Quincy on the relative showings of both teams so far.

Brookline High defeated a scrub team from Watertown on Tuesday 21-6. Owing to injuries the regular Watertown team cancelled its game.

Rindge and Hyde Park met at Hyde Park on Tuesday, and the Training school boys ran away with the game 33-0.

AN ERRORLESS GAME

Chicago Creeps Closer to the World's Baseball Championship

Detroit, Oct. 14.—By winning yesterday's game from Detroit Chicago has now won three of the four games of the championship series. Should victory again come to Captain Chance's team today, the world's championship for 1908 will come with it. Yesterday's game was an errorless one and the Detroit enthusiasts ascribed their defeat very largely to the luck of the game.

Two of Chicago's runs, which would have been enough to win, came in the third inning on two bases on balls, a steal of second and two hits. Chicago added another one in the ninth when Evers singled to right and stole second and came home on Chance's hit. In only one inning, the fourth, did Detroit threaten. With men on first and second, Cobb forced O'Leary at third and Crawford was caught napping off second.

In the last four innings Brown was invincible and the Detroit side was retired each time in one, two, three order.

Score by innings:
Detroit ..... 0 0 0 0 0 0 0 0 0—0

Base hits—Chicago, 11; Detroit, 4. Batteries—Brown and Kling; Summers, Winter and Schmidt.

AMERICAN BALLOON COMES TO GRIEF

Aeronauts Lost Bearings and Dropped Into North Sea

Berlin, Oct. 14.—The second of the three American balloons that started in the race for the international trophy on Sunday from Schmargendorf has met disaster in the North sea. The Sainte Louis, manned by N. H. Arnold of North Adams, Mass., and Harry J. Hewitt, was carried overland by treacherous air currents and later in the haze the aeronauts lost their bearings, until suddenly they saw the guard lights of an unknown coast.

This meant that they must descend or risk the danger of being driven far out of the track of vessels. They chose the former course and for an hour they were buffeted by the waves, almost giving up in despair. Eventually they were rescued by a lifeboat, and the first intimation that an accident had occurred to the Sainte Louis was conveyed in a wireless message from Arnold, saying: "Lost everything in the North sea last night."

Following so closely on the dramatic experience of A. H. Forbes and Augustus Post, the navigators of the Conqueror, which burst at an altitude of 4000 feet soon after the start of the race, the disaster to the Sainte Louis was the subject of great interest in Berlin.

Courts May Be Closed

New York, Oct. 14.—After a vigorous, but ineffectual, effort to persuade the board of aldermen to pass a bill appropriating $20,000 for use in the administration of his office, District Attorney Darrin of Queens county declared that he would close every court in his county at once, the funds at his disposal having all been expended and no more being forthcoming. Asked what effect the failure of the board to provide him with funds would have on the Hains brothers' trial, Darrin replied that it would halt its prosecution.

Daring Work of a Robber

New York, Oct. 14.—Representing himself to be a real estate agent, a young man gained access to the home of Summerfield McLean, a Brooklyn publisher, and while Miss Beatrice Masten, a younger sister of Mrs. McLean, was showing him over the premises, he suddenly overpowered her, bound her with picture wire, tied a gag over her mouth and then leisurely searched the house for valuables. The robber got away with property worth $1000.

In Memory of Cleveland

New York, Oct. 14.—The Cleveland memorial committee organized at a meeting here and fixed on March 18 next as the date for a public meeting in honor of the dead ex-president. That day will mark the 72nd anniversary of his birth. No action was taken regarding the nature of the permanent memorial of Cleveland, for which purpose the committee primarily was named by Mayor McClellan.

Met Death at Favorite Sport

New York, Oct. 14.—Harry Walsh, who had been for several years among the most daring and persistent of the winter swimming coterie at Bath beach, often breaking the ice in order to indulge his fondness for the sport, was drowned last night in the presence of many other members of the "club," after a gallant effort had been made to save him. When 200 feet out he was seized with cramps.

Engagement Reported Broken

Rome, Oct. 14.—From trustworthy sources it is learned here that the royal Italian family received a telegram from the Duke of the Abruzzi, now at Turin, announcing the breaking of his engagement to Miss Katherine Elkins. It is admitted here that the engagement was terminated by the American heiress.

BREAKS RECORD

Nearly 6000 Voters Enrolled For the Election Of November 3

The Registrars of Voters were in session Wednesday from 12 o'clock noon until 10 P. M. During that time they added 153 names to the voting list, swelling the total registration for the Presidential election to 5,693. Of the names added Wednesday, 57 were from Ward One, 24 from Ward Two; 15 from Ward Three; 8 from Ward Four; 32 from Ward Five, and 17 from Ward Six.

Ward Five has now 1005 registered voters and under the law this ward must now be divided into precincts.

The number of names added since the published list in September was 705. During this same period seven names have been dropped by reason of death.

The following table gives the number of names on the lists by precincts at the present time in comparison with number on the lists for the State election in 1907 and the municipal election in 1907.

	1908 Nov.	1907 Nov.	1907 Dec.
Ward One, pre. 1	507	469	490
Wrad One, pre. 2	638	534	566
Ward Two, pre. 1	348	302	324
Ward Two, pre. 2	471	441	465
Ward Three, pre. 1	551	521	544
Ward Three, pre. 2	452	422	436
Ward Four, pre. 1	452	427	467
Ward Four, pre. 2	487	473	500
Ward Five	1005	926	947
Ward Six, pre. 1	404	378	388
Ward Six, pre. 2	378	329	332
	5693	5220	5459

This table shows that all precincts have made a gain over the municipal election of 1907 with exception of the two precincts in Ward Four. Precinct One has 15 less voters now than in December, 1907, and precinct two 14 less or a total loss for the ward of 29.

The largest gain since the December election was made by Ward One, with a total of 89, of which precinct one, furnished 17 and precinct two, 72. Ward Six makes the second largest gain with a total of 62, of which precinct one has 16 and precinct two 46. Ward Five is third with a total gain of 58. Ward Two, precinct one, gained 24 and precinct two 6, a total of 30, while Ward Three precinct one, gained 7, and precinct two 16, a total of 23.

CITY CHARTER

Two Drafts Report at Meeting of Citizens' Asso.

The annual meeting of the Citizen's Association was held Wednesday evening. President Brown presided.

The first business was the election of officers, Messrs. Fred B. Rice, Henry G. Fay and D. F. L. Chase were appointed to receive and count ballots.

Mr. Brown declined to be a candidate for reelection the coming year.

N. G. Nickerson favored the consolidation of the offices of secretary and treasurer.

ANNUAL REPORTS.

While the voting was in progress the president read his annual report, which outlined what had been accomplished during the year. Several public meetings had been held for discussion of the City Charter. As a result of the agitation by the association some capitalists had been induced to erect houses for workmen. The association covered a broad field and warranted its existence.

The treasurer's report showed the receipts to have been $860 and the expenditure $576.

These reports with that of the secretary were accepted.

CITY CHARTER.

Brooks Adams for the special committee on City Charter stated that two sub committees had prepared reports. They were schemes drawn up from suggestions. These were in print. These were not the opinions of the committee and he could not say the committee fully approved of the schemes.

These reports are printed in full in another column of the Daily Ledger and are marked Plan No. 1 and Plan No. 2.

J. W. McAnarney explained the first plan briefly. This plan he wanted it understood, however, was not presented as his own opinion. Personally he was not in favor of some of its features.

Henry C. Fay was called upon to explain the second plan. He said this was the Des Moines plan changed somewhat by suggestions received. His own views were that some changes in the charter were desirable. When the city charter was adopted it was considered a great advance. Has not the time come for further advance?

The reports of the committee were then accepted but not adopted.

OFFICERS ELECTED.

Between the reading of the result of the ballot for officers was announced. The whole number of ballots cast was 19, and the following were declared elected:

President—Paul R. Blackmur.

Vice President—Walter S. Pinkham.

Secretary—Emery L. Crane.

Treasurer—Nathan G. Nickerson.

Directors at large—Russell A. Sears, Edward H. Angier and Herman F. McIntyre.

Directors from Ward One—Dr. John F. Welch and H. Gerrish Smith.

Directors from Ward Two—J. W. McAnarney and J. A. Sedgwick.

Directors from Ward Three—J. H. Miller and J. Q. A. Field.

Directors from Ward Four—William T. Shea and James F. Burke.

Directors from Ward Five—Henry G. Fay and H. T. Whitman.

Directors from Ward Six—Herbert S. Barker and Harry W. Read.

Mr. Blackmur, in taking the chair, thanked the members for the honor and promised to do his best for the association.

CHARTER REPORTS.

The City Charter reports were then taken up.

Mr. McAnarney stated that as both reports suggested the abandoning of party designations at municipal caucuses he would move that the sense of the association be that they be abolished.

The motion prevailed with one negative vote.

John Q. A. Field said he was the man who voted no. He did so as he thought time should be taken to discuss subject. We should get rid of the idea of making the charter more troublesome than it now is. These reports must be considered more seriously. It will take a long time to determine what should be done. There was too much log rolling. He did not think the committee had figured out the results of the two plans.

Upon motion of George H. Brown it was voted that the subject be put on the calendar for discussion at the next meeting, and that copies of the report be sent to every member of the association.

Henry G. Fay asked for an expression of the sense of the meeting whether the charter should be changed.

The sense of the meeting then taken showed those present to be in favor of some change.

OTHER BUSINESS.

Henry L. Kincaide asked if something could not be done to do away with the dust nuisance at the Quincy depot.

President Blackmur stated that he understood the reason nothing had been done was because of the grade crossing problem.

Mr. Kincaide believed something should be done in the mean time, and he moved that the president interview the officials to see if something could not be done to abate the dust nuisance at the Quincy depot.

Mr. Field amended by adding that toilet rooms be kept open.

The motion was voted.

The meeting then adjourned.

JUNIORS ACTIVE.

For the first time this fall, a meeting of John Adams Chapter, Junior Sons and Daughters of the Revolution was held at the Adams birthplace on Saturday, Oct. 10. Mrs. Charles H. Belcher of Randolph was unanimously elected as director of the chapter, and other officers for the year are as follows: President, Florence L. Burnham; first vice president, Albert Prescott; second vice president, Doris Cummings; secretary, Helen Lincoln, treasurer Helen Mitchell; historian, Ralph Merritt.

The outlook committee is made up of Carl Prescott, Marion Mitchell, Marjorie Penniman, Grace Burnham, Gladys Hannum, Miss Harding and Henry Prescott, and on the press committee are Carl Prescott and Ralph Merritt. It was voted to make a contribution toward the purchase of a piece of furniture for the Paul Revere room in the former home of Revere at the old North End. The next meeting will take the form of a reception to the new director, Mrs. Belcher.

LYNN STRIKERS CLAIM VICTORY

Fifteen Thousand Shoe Operatives Are to Return to Work

THE CAUNT COMPANY RECEDES

Agreement to Discontinue the Employment of Girls, While Wage Scale Trouble Will Be Settled by Arbitration--Sixty-Seven Factories Affected by Strike, the Ending Of Which Causes Much Rejoicing

Lynn, Mass., Oct. 15.—The union lasters of Lynn, who have been on strike since Oct. 2 as a protest against the discharge of fifteen men by the Joseph Caunt company and the employment of girls in their places, in alleged violation of a contract, have voted to return to work, the Caunt firm having agreed to reinstate the old employes. The strike threw out of employment thousands of operatives in the city, the largest shoe centre in the world.

The wildest and most enthusiastic demonstration ever seen in Lynn occurred when the vote of the mass meeting of the lasters became known. Fully 1100 men were in the hall, all members in good standing of the Lasters' and Lasting Machine Operators' Independent unions, and the remainder of the 1500 strikers were outside anxiously awaiting the outcome.

When the result of the vote was announced pandemonium reigned supreme both inside and outside of the hall, the overjoyed men throwing their coats and hats in the air to the accompaniment of yells and cheers in several different languages.

Sixty-seven factories have been affected by the strike, and although the number of lasters who went out was only about 1800, the shutting down of their departments necessitated the suspension of work in so many other departments that about 15,000 operatives were forced into idleness. The strikers have held firm throughout, but there has been no disorder.

The principal cause of the original strike at the Caunt factory was the employment by the company of girls in the lasting department. There was also some dissatisfaction with the wage scale there. The lasters in the other factories were convinced that the workers at the Caunt shop were defending a principle which vitally affected all lasters and a sympathetic strike was called, and one after another of the factories found itself without any lasters until sixty-seven shops were involved.

The strikers were enthusiastic and held frequent parades, all of which were carried on without any necessity of police interference. Soup kitchens were established by the local unions and the strikers were furnished with two meals a day. Pledges of support were received from other shoe manufacturing centres.

Early this week a tentative agreement was drawn up by which the manufacturers pledged themselves to take back all the men who had struck and to give due consideration to all differences which might arise over conditions in their shops. This document was submitted to the manufacturers individually, and by noon yesterday forty-six of them had signed it.

The strikers reconvened yesterday afternoon, and when they were told that Joseph Caunt had receded from his previous position there was great delight and enthusiasm. Agents Tracey and Whidden of the unions explained to the men that Caunt had definitely agreed to discharge the girls employed at the Caunt factory, to take back all the lasters who had struck and to submit the adjustment of the differences over wages to a local board of arbitration, to be selected by himself and the unions. The executive board of the unions recommended that Caunt's proposition be accepted and that the strike be called off both in the Caunt factory and in all the other shops. By a vote which was almost unanimous this recommendation was adopted.

Billard Controls Boston and Maine

Lawrence, Mass., Oct. 15.—Nine new men, a majority of the board, will have seats at the directors' table of the Boston and Maine railroad as the result of the annual meeting of the stockholders in this city. Of these newcomers, four were placed on the board at the request of John L. Billard, who recently acquired nearly 110,000 shares of stock from the New York, New Haven and Hartford railroad, and the other five were nominated after consultation with Billard.

Murder Trial Abruptly Ends

Bridgeport, Conn., Oct. 15.—The trial of Mikala Mikita, charged with the murder of Frank Olinsky at Shelton, was ended in the superior court by the entering of a nolle, and Mikita walked from the courtroom a free man. State Attorney Judson told the court that the state could not conscientiously ask the jury to bring in a verdict of murder in the first degree. It is understood that Mikita was able to present a good alibi.

Irish Petition Not Granted

New Haven, Oct. 15.—The national board of directors of the Knights of Columbus, in session here, definitely decided not to grant a petition received from Ireland to extend the order to that country. The directors, it is said, felt that under present conditions in that country the order would not develop as much as might be desired.

The Electric Light Festoon over the entrance way, flashing first red, then white, is a unique feature of much value.

The Moonlight Effect obtained by having the electric light come through Japanese lanterns is a pleasing innovation.

The Floor is of selected maple laid with the greatest care, and is kept in perfect condition, being covered with canvas when not used for dancing.

The Ventilation—a most important consideration—is such as to keep the air pure with even a crowded Hall.

The Hall is Lighted by electricity, brilliantly and pleasantly, and with a switchboard arranged so that all desired effects can be obtained in the Hall proper or on the stage. Gas is used as an auxiliary light.

The Heating is direct—indirect, ample, and giving the most healthful results.

The Stage has been designed with care, and is furnished with a particularly generous supply of attractive and appropriate scenery.

For Advertising, the Music Hall Billboards are valuable.

To Darken the Hall, there are special window fittings so that at noonday the Hall can be made as dark as at midnight.

In case of fire there are pails of water and chemical fire extinguishers thr ough-out the Hall. There is an asbestos fire curtain by which the Stage can be instantly cut off from the Hall proper. There are ten (10) doors opening from the Hall and six (6) separate exits.

As a whole, Quincy Music Hall has been carefully planned to meet the re quirements of those who wish a large and really first class Hall.

AN ELECTION PRIMER

Pertinent Points About Our Election Machinery For New Voters and Old

THE DEMOCRATIC PARTY.

When did the Democratic party first appear in national politics?

Under its present name the party first appeared in 1828, when Andrew Jackson was elected president as the party candidate. The Democratic party, however, so far as its chief principles go, dates from the beginning of the republic.

Who is regarded as the party's founder?

Thomas Jefferson. When the constitution of the United States was under discussion in convention the opposing theories of Thomas Jefferson and Alexander Hamilton constituted the principal difference of opinion. Jefferson and his adherents leaned far toward local self government, while Hamilton and his faction stood for a strong centralized government. In after years the Jeffersonian theories became crystallized into what was called at first the Republican party, later the Republican-Democratic party and finally the Democratic party.

The present Republican party, then, is entirely distinct from the one of Jefferson's time?

Entirely so. It is descended, through the Whig party, from the Hamiltonian or Federalist party, which took the opposite view to that of Jefferson.

What presidents has the Democracy elected?

Thomas Jefferson twice, James Madison twice, James Monroe twice, John Quincy Adams, Andrew Jackson twice, Martin Van Buren, James K. Polk, Franklin Pierce, James Buchanan, Grover Cleveland twice.

What is the Democratic party's position as to tariff?

It stands for a low tariff or a tariff for revenue only.

What the Republican Party Has Done For American Labor.

The Republican party confidently appeals to American labor for support in the coming elections, backing that appeal not with promises only, but with the record of what Republicans have done for labor in the past, as best and strongest evidence of what the party may be expected to do in the future.

The Republican party has controlled the national administration for some forty out of forty-eight years. During that period the Republican party has liberated the slave, placed all citizens on an equal footing before the law, excluded Asiatic immigration, prohibited imported contract labor, restricted immigration, as far as practicable, to the law abiding and self supporting, enacted a homestead law giving every American an opportunity to be a landowner, passed and put into force a federal eight hour law, enacted an employers' liability law and a model child labor law, abolished the contract system of labor for United States convicts, established the life saving service and otherwise provided for the safety of American seamen and provided for the inspection of steam vessels, provided for the inspection of coal mines in the territories and required safety appliances on interstate railways, passed the pure food and drug law and meat inspection law, thus stamping out abuses from which the poor man's family has always been the chief sufferer; established a currency equal to gold, thus assuring the payment of the workingman's wages in a dollar worth a dollar; established the system of protection for the American worker from competition with the poorly paid labor of Europe, paid out nearly four thousand millions of dollars in pensions to veterans of the civil war and their dependents, nearly all of which has been paid to poor men and poor widows and children and has gone directly into circulation in every part of the United States; provided for compensation to federal employees injured in the service, increased the pay of United States soldiers and sailors, created a department of labor, giving its head a seat in the cabinet, and recognized union labor by providing for the incorporation of national trades unions.

Such is in part the labor record of the Republican party in national legislation. Many other laws beneficial to labor, directly and indirectly, have been enacted.

But, say the Democrats, the Republicans have been in power at Washington all these years and we Democrats have not.

True, although it may be worthy of passing notice that the Democrats were in power in Washington for more than half a century before Lincoln and did nothing for labor except to keep it on the level of slavery and peonage.

There is, however, a chance for fair comparison between the Republican party and the Democracy outside of the national administration. The states have very large and direct authority over all that affects labor within their respective bounds, and the Democratic party has been in almost continuous control of a number of states since reconstruction, nearly forty years ago.

At present the Republican party, represented by the Republican legislatures, which, of course, enact the laws, is in power in the following states: California, Colorado, Connecticut, Delaware, Idaho, Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Kansas, Maine, Massachusetts, Michigan, Minnesota, Montana, Nebraska, New Hampshire, New Jersey, New York, North Dakota, Ohio, Oregon, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island, South Dakota, Utah, Vermont, Washington, West Virginia, Wisconsin and Wyoming.

The Democracy is in power in the following sixteen states: Alabama, Arkansas, Florida, Georgia, Kentucky, Louisiana, Maryland, Mississippi, Missouri, Nevada, North Calolina, Oklahoma, South Carolina, Tennessee, Texas and Virginia.

Twenty-six of the thirty Republican states and seven of the sixteen Democratic states have enacted labor bureaus.

Twenty-three of the thirty Republican states and six of the sixteen Democratic states have established factory inspection.

Thirteen of the thirty Republican states and two of the sixteen Democratic states have free employment bureaus.

Eighteen of the thirty Republican states and four of the sixteen Democratic states have boards of arbitration.

Sixteen of the thirty Republican states and two of the sixteen Democratic states have prohibited labor on government works or public contracts for more than eight hours a day. Four Republican states and one Democratic state have declared eight hours to be a legal working day.

Twenty-three of the thirty Republican states and four of the sixteen Democratic states prohibit children under fourteen years of age from working in factories. Twenty-six Republican states and nine Democratic states restrict the employment of children of school age or illiterate children. Twelve Republican states and three Democratic states forbid the employment of children in operating dangerous machinery or cleaning machinery in motion.

Fifteen of the thirty Republican states and six of the sixteen Democratic states limit the hours of labor by women. It should be noted that twelve of the Republican states which limit women's work have factory inspectors to see that the law is obeyed, while only three of the six Democratic states have factory inspectors.

Twenty-three of the thirty Republican states and ten of the sixteen Democratic states require employers to provide seats for females employed in their workshops or stores.

Ten of the thirty Republican states and two of the sixteen Democratic states have laws intended to prevent the evils of the sweatshop system.

Seventeen of the thirty Republican states and five of the sixteen Democratic states require payment of wages weekly or fortnightly or prohibit a longer interval than one month between pay days.

Fifteen of the thirty Republican states and one of the sixteen Democratic states prohibit employers from discharging persons on account of membership in labor organizations.

Twenty-eight of the thirty Republican states and twelve of the sixteen Democraic states have passed laws allowing trades unionists to adopt labels or trademarks to be used to designate the products of their labor and prohibiting the counterfeiting or the use of such trademarks by unauthorized persons.

Here labor has the record of the Republican party and of the Democratic party in nation and state. It is a record on which the Republican party stands and can well afford to stand. It shows the party ever faithful to the cause of labor, ever seeking alike in the capitol at Washington and in the halls of state legislation to promote the comfort, safety and dignity of the American worker. The Republican party does not claim that the party has done more than its duty, but the Republican party does claim that it has done its full duty and that the record thus made is an assurance and a guaranee to American labor that its interests will be safe in the future, as they have been in the past, in the hands of the party which has nominated William H. Taft and James S. Sherman for president and vice president of the United States.

Bryan wants to know why the Republican party spends so much more public money than the Democrats. Give the Democrats a chance at the national treasury and this query would disappear with the facility of a Bryan abandoned issue.

The discussion as to whether Mr. Taft shall be called "judge," "ex-secretary," "Bill" or other convenient title may be closed in favor of Mr. Cleveland's designation of him as "entirely dependable."

Bourke Cockran is to tour the west speaking for the Democratic candidates. Cockran should hold a joint debate with himself and see if he can answer the arguments he made against Bryan in 1896.

The Chicago and Alton railroad has ordered 1,000 new steel cars, and Mr. Bryan denounces it as "a desperate political trick." Prosperity never finds any "Welcome!" mat on the Bryan doorstep.

Mr. Bryan refused to speak at the New York state fair because an admission was charged. Mr. Bryan is particular about who gets the admission fees when he speaks.

A second rate athlete won a race in the Olympic contests by the use of oxygen. Mr. Bryan's case is too hopeless to respond to even the oxygen treatment.

The records of the candidates figure prominently in the present fight. Mr. Taft is running on his record, and Mr. Bryan is trying to run away from his.

Mr. Bryan declares that he is the heir to the Roosevelt policies. His claim will be rejected by the court of the people on Nov. 3.

David Bennett Hill says he is too ill to make speeches for Bryan. It always makes Mr. Hill sick to be asked to support Bryan.

Democrats are frightfully disappointed that Mr. Taft and Senator Foraker have been shaking hands instead of shaking fists.

The New York World may change its political opinions, but it cannot mar the accuracy of its "Map of Bryanism."

Senator Tillman in a Paris interview says Bryan cannot help winning. Still Bryan has prevented it twice.

"The country is warming up to Bryan," says a southern paper. Yes, the country is hot after him.

Lady Betty Across the Water

By C. N. & A. M. WILLIAMSON

Copyright, 1906, by McClure, Phillips & Co.

SYNOPSIS.

CHAPTER I—The story is told in the first person by Lady Betty Bulkeley, the pretty young sister of the Duke of Stanforth. She is to visit America in care of Mrs. Stuyvesant-Knox (Mrs. Ess Kay,) a leader of American society, and the latter's cousin, Miss Sally Woodburn, in order that her elder sister Victoria's prospective fiance, Sir Gilbert Mantell, may not be attracted by her.

II—On board ship Betty is attracted by a young American steerage passenger, who saves a child from drowning. Mrs. Ess Kay, who is very "exclusive," objects to Betty's interest in the young man. Betty also meets Tom Doremus, cousin of Mrs. Vander Windt, of New York society.

III—Lady Betty gets her first impression of America. On the dock she is rescued from reporters by the steerage hero, who tells her he is Jim Brett, employed at the Manhattan club, New York. In Mrs. Ess Kay's splendid New York home Betty meets Lieutenant Parker brother of the hostess, who is to take them to visit West Point.

But when I heard that Coney Island was like a kind of glorified Margate (which I've never been to, but only heard about), with switchbacks and all sorts of shows, I said that mother would consider it a chapter in the liberal education of a respectable British tourist, and it was decided that we should dine there. Mrs. Ess Kay had to do a lot of things before she could go on to Newport, so we were to shop all the morning, lunch at Sherry's, rest in the afternoon and spend the evening at Coney Island. Next day we were to go to West Point, where Mr. Parker is stationed, and stay there all night for a cadet ball.

Just as we had got this programme settled, and were making up our minds to go out early, "while it was cool" (we should all have been lying about with wet handkerchiefs on our foreheads at home, and there would have been special prayers in church if it had ever been what New Yorkers seem to think cool), the butler came in leading by a leash a perfect angel of a dog, a little French bull, with skin satiny as a ripe chestnut, and eyes like rosettes of brown velvet, with diamonds shining through them. He had on a spiky silver collar, fringed on each edge with white horsehair, and he came trotting into the room with a high action of his paws, dainty and proud, like a horse that knows he's on show, and his tiny head was cocked on one side as if he were asking us to please admire him and be his friends.

In another instant he was in my lap.

I supposed that the little fellow belonged to Mrs. Ess Kay, and that he was being brought in to bid his mistress good morning, but she said quite sharply, "What dog is that?"

"He's a parcel, ma'am," said the butler, "addressed to Lady Betty Bulkeley. He was left at the door by a messenger boy, and the label's on his collar."

In another instant that little live, warm bundle of brindled satin sewed on to steel wires was in my lap, and it did seem as if he knew that he was mine. The queerest thing was that he had no note with him. On the label—just a luggage label tied to his collar—was my name, in a strange but very interesting looking hand, and these words besides: "The dog is now found. His name is Vivace."

"Who has sent it to you, Betty?" asked Mrs. Ess Kay, and I could see by her eyes that she was very curious.

I had just answered, "I don't know from Adam," when some words of my own jumped into my head. I could hear myself saying, "I must first find the dog," and then I knew that the giver of Vivace wasn't Adam. But luckily I hadn't thought before I spoke, so it was no harm to let it rest at that, and I just sat and played with my new toy while Mrs. Ess Kay and her brother jabbered about him excitedly.

"It must be Tom Doremus," said she. "He's the only man I let you know well enough on board to take such a liberty."

I thought of another man she hadn't wanted to let me know, but I rubbed my chin on Vivace's ear, which felt like a wall flower, and kept quiet.

"Cheek of Doremus," remarked Mr. Parker. "He's a josher from way back. How does he know Lady Betty likes dogs? I should send the little brute off to the dogs' home."

"If Mrs. Stuyvesant-Knox makes me do that, I shall have to go with him—and stop with him, too," said I. And I almost hated Mr. Parker for a minute in spite of the walking stick roses and the snowstorm of gardenias upstairs.

"Of course, you shall keep the dog, if you want to," said Mrs. Ess Kay, "unless we find out that he's been sent by some one undesirable, and then of course the duchess would expect me to see that you gave him back."

"I feel somehow that we shall never find out," I said, and I hugged Vivace so hard, without meaning to, that he gave a tiny grunt. But he didn't mind a bit and licked my hand with a tongue that was like a sweet little sample of pink plush.

I was suddenly so happy with my surprise present that I forgave America for having imaginative reporters and wasn't homesick for the pony or for Berengaria and her puppies or anything.

Vivace went out with us in the electric carriage, and even Mrs. Ess Kay had to admire him as he sat straight up in my lap, like a bronze statue of a dog. "He's a thoroughbred, anyhow," she remarked. "He can't have cost a penny less than $500, so whoever the anonymous giver is, he must be a rich man."

I'm rather hazy about dollars, still, but when I heard that, I felt myself go red. I knew well enough that the giver—who wasn't Adam—was very far from being a rich man, and I couldn't bear to think that he had perhaps squandered some hard earned savings on buying such an extravagant present for me. But the more I thought of it—which I did all the way down to the shops—the more I thought it impossible that a man who had been obliged to cross the Atlantic in the steerage would even have a hundred pounds in the world. Somebody had perhaps given him the dog from a good kennel, when it was a wee puppy, I said to myself, but this, though it eased my mind in one way, made the gift seem all the more pathetic—that that poor, handsome Jim Brett should part with something he must have loved (for who could have Vivace and not love him?) to please me. I should have liked to write a note to the Manhattan club, where he had told me he was employed, to thank him. But he had sent the present anonymously and I felt somehow as if he hadn't meant or wished me to acknowledge it.

While I was wondering what I should do, the brougham stopped before a shop even larger than Harrod's or the Army and Navy stores. There were lovely things in the windows, things that looked like American women and not like English or even French ones, though I couldn't define the difference if I were ordered to with a revolver at my head.

The petticoats and stockings and belts and lace things and parasols and especially blouses, were so perfectly thrilling that my heart began to beat quite fast at sight of them. I felt as if I must have some immediately, and when Mrs. Ess Kay said that this was "quite a cheap store," I said to myself that I would do something more interesting than watch her shopping.

She had to buy handkerchiefs to begin with, for most of hers had disappeared in the wash at foreign hotels; and Sally wanted veiling. Those were not interesting to me, because they are necessary, and necessaries, like your daily bread and such things, are so dull. I said that I would just wander about a little, as they thought they would be some time, and we made an appointment to meet in half an hour at what they called the notion counter. I hadn't an idea what it was, and didn't like to ask because I had asked so many questions already, but I knew that I could get some one to take me there when the half hour was up.

When you want everything you see, but aren't sure which things you want enough to buy and how many you can afford, it's less confusing to prowl alone. Besides, there was an exciting feeling of independence in strolling about unchaperoned in a shop as big as a village in a strange foreign city.

I really did need a sunshade to go with a blue dress of mine, because my only light one (if I don't count rather a common white thing) is pink. I saw some beauties, and I wanted to ask the price, but the attendants—who were girls with lovely figures and their hair done in exactly the same flop over their foreheads—were so interested in talking about a young man they all knew that it seemed cruel to interrupt them, especially as I mightn't buy the sunshade in the end. However, I did venture to speak, in quite a humble voice, by and by, but the girl couldn't understand a word until I'd repeated everything twice. "A sunshade? Oh, you mean one of these parasawls," she said then. "Excuse me, it's your English accent I didn't quite catch at first. That one's ten dollars and forty-nine cents, and this is eight dollars eighty-nine."

CORRUPTION THE DANGER.

English Expert Warns Against Too Many City Employees.

The real danger of municipal ownership is the danger of corruption. Men in all industries must frequently agitate for increase of pay. It is natural. You cannot blame them for doing so. But if men are constantly agitating for increase of pay it follows that their employers must constantly have thrown upon them the disagreeable task of refusing. Who in the council will refuse those demands? The conscientious man will be foremost in resisting unreasonable demands, and the inevitable result of his conduct will be that he will be remembered at the next election. The result will be that you will get a lowering in the tone of the body elected to the council, and you will have a lowering in the tone of the electors.

The men look for an increase of pay as a demand for justice. Everybody considers himself insufficiently paid. [Laughter.] They will come to regard their vote more and more as a private property and not as a public duty to be exercised in the interests of the whole of the state. And the more and more they cease to consider their vote in a public duty the more and more they will go down the hill on the path that leads in the end to direct and open corruption.—From Address Delivered by Major Leonard Darwin Before Canadian Club, Montreal.

Unresponsive.

"My dear, I think we must have been married in a former incarnation."

"Does it seem that long?" replied the brute.

THE BALKAN SITUATION

Grey and Iswolsky Agree on Program For Conference of Powers

London, Oct. 15.—According to what apparently is an inspired statement with regard to Russia's position, which appears in The Times this morning, a practical agreement has been reached by M. Iswolsky and Sir Edward Grey, under which the conference of the powers will discuss the question of compensation to Turkey, Servia and Montenegro, but the Dardanelles question will be left for separate negotiations later, between Russia and Turkey.

Russia agrees with the western powers that the compensation given to Servia and Montenegro should not be at Turkey's expense, and holds that it is to Europe's interest to facilitate in every possible way Turkey's heavy task in completing the constitutional reforms.

According to the statement, Russia desires a revision of the agreements concerning the Dardanelles, but does not wish to make the revision a part of the conference program or to force it upon Turkey.

ABLE TO MANAGE HER OWN AFFAIRS

Relatives of Mrs. Shaw Think Her Mind Is Sound

Cambridge, Mass., Oct. 15.—The hearing in the Shaw case, in which the petitioner, Mrs. Mabelle M. Dutton, seeks to have a conservator appointed for the care of the property of her aunt, Mrs. Ellen M. Shaw of Lowell, who, it is claimed, is about to give away her estate to the Mazdaznans, was continued before Judge McIntyre in the Middlesex probate court yesterday.

The defense began to put on witnesses. A. M. Maxfield of Goshen, N. H., a brother of Mrs. Shaw, testified that he knew his sister was interested in the teachings of the Mazdaznans, but that he felt that it was none of his business and believed his sister was fully capable of managing her own affairs.

Mrs. Elizabeth A. George of Worcester, whose husband is a half-brother of Mrs. Dutton, testified that for three years before her marriage she lived in Mrs. Shaw's household; that she saw no failure, bodily or mentally, in Mrs. Shaw in recent years, and that she never saw an altar in Mrs. Shaw's house.

Frank S. George, half-brother of Mrs. Dutton, said that Mrs. Shaw seemed to him to be perfectly normal. He was at Mrs. Shaw's home Labor day and had been told by Mrs. Dutton that Mrs. Shaw had converted all her property into cash and that she expected to give it to the Mazdaznans. The witness declared that he did not consider a gift for such a purpose an indication of a failing mind.

Suffragettes Are Unsubdued

London, Oct. 15.—A great crowd surrounded the Bow street police court when the women suffragettes and the men without work who were arrested during the disorders in front of the houses of parliament were arraigned. Mrs. Drummond, Mrs. Pankhurst and Miss Christabel Pankhurst demanded a trial by jury. Their cases were postponed until Oct. 21. Most of the other prisoners were ordered to give bonds for their good behavior, with the alternative of imprisonment. The women, as usual, elected to go to jail.

Heavy Cash Bail Required

St. Petersburg, Oct. 15.—After having been confined in the Fortress of St. Peter and St. Paul for ten months, Nicholas Tschaikovsky, a member of the Russian revolutionist organization, is to be released by order of the Russian government. He will be obliged to furnish $25,000 cash bail, pending his trial, the date for which has not yet been fixed. Tschaikovsky's daughter is making an endeavor to raise the sum.

Boys' Stories of Shooting Differ

Lynn, Mass., Oct. 15.—Elwin S. Emory, 13 years old, is dying as the result of being shot in the side by a companion, Horace Wiley, aged 14. The two boys, accompanied by several others, had been hunting. It is not known for a certainty just how Emory was shot, as the stories of Wiley and that of the other boys differ.

Jumped In Front of Engine

Hartford, Oct. 15.—Three section hands were probably fatally injured near Vernon when they jumped from a work train directly in front of an engine which was backing down the track. One man had both legs cut off. The men were brought to this city and sent to a hospital.

Rainbow Fair At Wollaston

A rainbow fair was held by the Whatsoever circle of King's Daughters in the vestry of the Wollaston Baptist church on Wednesday afternoon and evening.

The decorations, the work of Mrs. M. A. Stevens, who had the affair in charge, consisted of large rainbows of crepe paper at the tables and other parts of the vestry.

A large corps of ladies, headed by Mrs. J. I. Litchfield and Miss Helen Foster, were in attendance at the supper tables.

Mr. Litchfield proved himself an adept in the art of silhouette making, and scores of children went in to have their pictures taken.

The grabs in charge of Mrs. A. E. Sayward and Mrs. W. H. Bense, were a novel feature consisting of various articles wrapped in crepe paper representing oranges which were hung on a tree in the centre of the vestry.

At intervals during the evening selections were rendered by Esty's orchestra.

The tables were presided over as follows:

Linen Table—Mrs. E. E. Jameson, Mrs. A. P. Loud, Mrs. W. H. Whitney, Mrs. J. H. Hamilton, Mrs. Fleming.

Housekeeper's Table—Mrs. Edmund S. Taylor, Mrs. A. P. Leavitt, Mrs. C. S. Adams, Mrs. David Whiton, Mrs. E. F. Bowles, Miss Ida Packard, Mrs. Walter Baker, Mrs. Herman Weiting.

Candy Table—Mrs. W. H. Hull, Mrs. M. O. Thompson, Miss Marjorie Rideout, Mrs. G. H. Badger, Mrs. E. R. Frost, Mrs. Paul Baker, Mrs. W. W. Whittam.

Children's Table—Mrs. L. A. Beese, Mrs. A. P. Saxe, Mrs. G. H. Thompson, Mrs. F. E. Cleveland, Mrs. H. G. Kirkwood, Mrs. E. A. Bowker, Mrs. G. H. Greene.

STUDENTS' NIGHT.

CURTIS SPRAGUE

Daughter of Ex-Senator Sprague Becomes Bride of Paul R. Curtis

On Wednesday evening the home of Hon. Eugene Hale Sprague, at 8 Park street, Wollaston, was the scene of a home wedding attended by only the immediate family and a few intimate friends. The bride was the popular and charming eldest daughter of the house, Helen Marilla Sprague, and the groom Mr. Paul Revere Curtis of Roxbury.

The setting for the ceremony was very pretty with bright autumnal foliage, hydrangias and chrysanthemums. Miss Clarissa Potter of Providence, R. I., played Lohengrin's march for the entrance of the wedding party at eight o'clock. Rev. Ellery Channing Butler, pastor First church, Quincy, solemnized the marriage, the bride being given in marriage by her father. John L. Preuss of New York city was best man, and the bride was attended by Miss Alma Darling Dunstan of Providence, R. I., as maid of honor and Misses Hildegarde Dearing of Braintree, Dora Dearing of Braintree, Gerna Saville of Quincy, Caroline Wellington of Milton and Caroline Sprague of Wollaston as bridesmaids. Miss Dorothy Sprague, sister of the bride, was flower girl.

The ushers were: Rathburn Sprague of Wollaston, Harold C. Faxon of Randolph, Reginald H. Sprague of Wollaston, C. Eaton Pierce of Wollaston and Edward Cole of Winchester.

The bride is a blonde of rich coloring and was particularly attractive in her bridal robe of white satin crepe de chene and duchess lace. She carried a shower bouquet of lilies of teh valley. The maid of honor wore a gown of rose colored messaline with lace trimmings and carried white roses. The bridesmaids were in white messaline and carried pink roses. The color effect of the gowns of the bride and her attendants was delicate and harmoniously pleasing.

Following the ceremony a reception was held, the bride and groom receiving alone. A wedding supper was served and there was a display of most beautiful wedding gifts, attesting to the popularity of the young people.

Amid confetti and good wishes, Mr. and Mrs. Curtis left for a wedding trip. On their return they will reside at 64 Crawford street, Roxbury, receiving their friends after December first.

Miss Alice Crane Bride of S. P. Brown

At half-past two this afternoon at Christ church was solemnized a small but pretty wedding, the bride being MiMss Alice Crane, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Nathan J. Crane of Quincy avenue, East Braintree, and the groom, Mr. Seneca Porter Brown of Plymouth. Rev. A. E. Clattenburg of St. Chrysostom's church, Wollaston, assisted by Rev. John P. Briggs of Pennsylvania, solemnized the marriage.

Miss Grace B. Crane, sister of the bride, was bridesmaid ,and the groomsman was Dr. J. Holbrook Shaw of Plymouth.

A reception from half-past three until half-past five followed the ceremony at the home of the bride, attended, as was the ceremony by only the immediate family and a few friends.

After a short trip Mr. and Mrs. Brown will make their home at 470 Quincy avenue, East Braintree.

MITCHELL—DAVIDSON.

Edward Lewis Mitchell, Jr., one of the clerks at the Quincy postoffice, and Miss Margaret Isabelle Davidson ,daughter of Mrs. Isabelle Taylor Davidson of Hancock street, were quietly married Wednesday evening at St. James church, Cambridge. The ceremony was performed by Rev. William E. Gardner, formerly of Christ church, Quincy. After a brief wedding trip Mr. and Mrs. Mitchell will reside at 131 Glendale road, where they will be at home after January 1.

REACHING THE SPOT.

It Can Be Done, So Scores of Quincy Citizens Say.

To cure an aching back,
The pains of rheumatism,
The tired-out feelings,
You must reach the spot—get at the cause.
In most cases 'tis the kidneys.
Doan's Kidney Pills are for the kidneys.

James C. Dunn, living at 508 Washington street, Quincy, Mass., says: "For some time I was afflicted with lumbago. My back ached constantly and I could hardly get about the house. The constant aching gave me so much trouble that my nervous system became all unstrung and I had about dispaired of ever getting anything that would cure me when Doan's Kidney Pills were brought to my attention. I procured a supply at the Cox Drub Store, began their use and after a short time, I received more belief than from all the other remedies combined. I can say my trouble has vanished and I gladly recommend Doan's Kidney Pills."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co. Buffalo. New York, sole agents for the United States.

Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

Proposed City Charter.

Plan No. 2 Reported to the Citizens Association Last Evening.

I—MAYOR.

The Mayor shall hold office for the term of three years, and receive a salary of twenty-five hundred dollars.

All governmental function shall be vested in the Mayor, save as hereinafter provided.

The Mayor shall appoint all heads of departments, who shall be responsible to him alone.

The Mayor shall appoint the Chairman of the School Board.

The Mayor shall grant all franchises, and make all contracts on behalf of the city, but franchises may only be granted after a public notice and hearing. On petition of three hundred voters any franchise objected to must be submitted to the people at the next regular city election, or it may be submitted to the voters at a special election called by the Mayor.

The Mayor shall have no power to bind the city by contract for a longer period than until the next regular city election, unless said contract has been advertised and no petition against the same has been filed signed by at least one hundred voters within thirty days after said advertisement has appeared.

In case of such a petition against any contract shall have been filed as above provided, the contract shall be submitted to the voters at the next regular city election or may be submitted at a special election called by the Mayor.

II—CITY COUNCIL.

The City Council shall be composed of twenty-three members and shall be chosen annually. The duty of the Council shall be confined to passing on the Mayor's annual budget and any additional budget that may be submitted to it as hereinafter provided. The Council may also make such temporary loans prior to the passage of the annual budget that may be approved by the Mayor.

The Mayor shall submit to the Council, on or before the first day of April, an itemized and detailed estimate of all moneys required by the several departments during the ensuing financial year, and this estimate shall be known as the annual budget. No gross appropriation of money, and no item thereof in excess of the recommendation of the Mayor, shall be passed by the Council except by vote of at least a majority of all the members of the Council.

The Council after action on the annual budget shall adjourn and shall not again convene during the term of office of its members, unless a meeting thereof is called by the Mayor as hereinafter provided.

The Mayor may, after the passage of the annual budget, in September of each year, submit to the City Council a supplemental budget which shall contain an itemized statement of any additional appropriations and the reason therefor as he may desire the Council to authorize.

The Council may at its meeting in September authorize such transfers of appropriations as it may deem advisable.

Special meetings of the Council may be called by the Mayor at any time during the year to act upon such matters as he may desire to submit to it.

If the City Council does not pass any item in the Mayor's budget, or his supplemental budget, as presented to it by him, he may submit the matter to the decision of the voters at a special meeting called for that purpose.

III—SCHOOL COMMITTEE.

The School Committee shall consist of five members. The Chairman of the School Board shall be appointed by the Mayor. The members shall hold office for a term of three years.

The City shall be divided into three districts

Wards 1 and 2, District 1.
Wards 3 and 4, District 2.
Wards 5 and 6, District 3.

Each District shall elect one member of the School Board, and one member shall be elected at large by the voters of the whole city.

The School Committee shall submit an itemized estimate to the Mayor of such money as may be required by it during the ensuing financial year, not later than the first day of March, and the same shall, by the Mayor, be included in the annual budget.

IV—ELECTIONS.

At all caucuses and municipal elections no party designation shall be used.

Preserve the present ward representation in the City Council.

Preserve the present division of administrative officers.

PROPOSED CHARTER

Plan No. 1 For City Charter Reported to Citizens' Asso.

Six Directors shall be nominated and elected at large; no party designation to be used. They shall hold office for 3 years, two to be elected each year; in case of vacancy remaining members to fill vacancy until next annual election.

City to be governed by 6 Directors, they to elect one member each year to be Mayor, majority vote to be necessary to pass ordinances and other measures.

Provide the powers and duties of the Directors, and create 5 departments to administer city affairs. Directors to have and possess and exercise all executive and legislative powers and duties now had, possessed and exercised by Mayor, City Council and other executive and administrative officers, except the School Committee. The executive and administrative powers, authority and duties to be distributed into and among 5 departments as follows:

(1) Public Affairs.
(2) Finance.
(3) Public Safety.
(4) Parks and Public Property.
(5) Public Improvement.

The Council shall determine the powers and duties to be performed by, and assign them to the appropriate department; prescribe powers and duties of employes; assign particular officers and employes to one or more departments, make other rules and regulations as may be necessary or proper for the efficient and economical conduct of the business of the city.

Provide that each member of Board of Directors be appointed by the Mayor head of a department and for election and removal of other city officers, create or discontinue offices and employments; prescribe, limit or change compensation of officers and employes.

Directors to be paid adequate salary.

Provides that every ordinance, resolution appropriating money, franchises and contracts be open to public inspection 7 days before final passage and not to go into force for 10 days thereafter.

Provide that if any city official or employe attempts to influence any other city official politically or to control or influence appointments, directly or indirectly, be subject to fine and imprisonment.

Provide for complete publicity of city affairs, monthly statements of receipts and expenditures, also annual examination of all books and accounts.

Provide for the right of recall of a dishonest or incompetent Mayor or Director by vote of people.

Provides for the initiative.

Provides for protest and referendum.

RELATING TO SCHOOL HOUSES.

Add to Section 20 the words:

All plans for the erection of school houses and additions to established school buildings shall originate with the School Committee.

Add to Section 24, 17th line:

Except the care and repair of all school buildings shall remain under the control of the School Committee.

RHODE ISLAND REPUBLICANS

Their Convention Plans Carried Out Without a Hitch

POTHIER HEADS THE TICKET

Declaration In Favor of Revision of Tariff by "Friends of Protection"--Candidacy of Taft and Sherman Endorsed--All Electors of State Invited to Join In Plan For Building and Maintaining Highways

Providence, Oct. 15.—With perfect unanimity and with nothing to mar the harmony of the occasion or to impede the well lubricated machinery, the Rhode Island Republicans at their state convention nominated a party ticket, headed by Aram J. Pothier of Woonsocket, selected four presidential electors and adopted a platform of party principles. Everything was carried through in strict accordance with the plans formulated by the Republican state central committee.

For governor, Aram J. Pothier of Woonsocket; lieutenant governor, A. W. Dennis of Providence; secretary of state, C. P. Bennett of Providence; attorney general, W. B. Greenough of Providence; general treasurer, W. A. Read of Gloucester.

All the nominations were by acclamation. The presidential electors named by the convention were J. E. Fletcher of Bristol, H. M. Brown of Providence, R. W. Goelet of Newport and E. E. Arnold of Coventry.

The platform declares in favor of a revision of the tariff by "the friends of protection;" endorses the candidacy of Taft and Sherman; commends the administration of President Roosevelt, and the services of the Rhode Island Republican members of congress; reviews the work of the last Republican state legislature, and advocates a law similar to that in New York state relative to the compensation of receivers and the cost of winding up financial institutions. It also says:

We pledge to the people of Rhode Island our earnest support of the proposition to be voted upon at the November election, providing for a bond issue of $600,000, the proceeds of which are to be used for the building and maintaining of state highways. We invite all electors of Rhode Island to join with the Republican party in this progressive measure."

Mr. Pothier made a brief address and Mr. Dennis, Mr. Bennett, Mr. Greenough and Mr. Read followed Pothier with speeches, thanking the convention for its support, and stating that they would, if elected, perform the duties of their respective offices to the utmost satisfaction of the people of Rhode Island. Greenough said that in order to elect Taft in Rhode Island the Republican party has got to work hard against a big labor vote.

The First congressional district convention began immediately. William P. Sheffield, Jr., of Newport was nominated for congressman. The Second district convention chose Congressman Adin B. Capron of Stillwater for re-election. A speech by Capron closed the day's proceedings.

THE "PROMISE" TO KEEFE

Informant Healy Does Not Throw Much Light on the Subject

New York, Oct. 15.—The Democratic national committee last night issued a statement quoting Timothy Healy, president of the International Brotherhood of Stationary Firemen, as authority for the allegation that Daniel J. Keefe had been promised by the president the appointment as commissioner general of immigration, in return for the Detroit labor leader's support of Mr. Taft. The national committee had promised to make known its informant if the charge was denied, as it has been both by Keefe and at the White House.

The national committee quotes Healy, in part, as follows: "I was in Washington Wednesday of last week on a matter dealing with our organization which brought me in contact with an official of high standing in the government service. He said to me:

"'Dan Keefe has been selected for commissioner general of immigration.'

"'Is that so?' I said.

"'Yes, the job is his,' he replied.

"I asked him how he knew and he told me that his informant was a member of the president's cabinet and knew what he was talking about. This information was not given to me in a confidential manner, but I will not give my informant's name, for it is plain to see what would happen to him if his name came out.

"There is not any doubt in my mind but that the statement that the president offered Keefe the position and that Keefe agreed to accept it is true. Perhaps the offer was not made at the conference on Oct. 3 last, but I believe it has been made."

Bryan Has Large Audiences

Hebron, Neb., Oct. 15.—The second day's tour of Nebraska by William J. Bryan closed here last night. Twenty-two speeches were made during the day by the Democratic candidate, varying in duration from ten minutes to one hour. With the conclusion of the work Bryan expressed himself as greatly pleased with his reception in his home state, saying that his audiences were larger than during the other campaigns. Three congressional districts were traversed, and in each one Bryan made an appeal for the Democratic congressional nominee. "I should feel mighty lonesome in Washington if both the senate and the house were against me," he said, "but if you will give me the house, I am sure we shall make the senate feel lonesome."

Satisfied With Ohio Situation

Wheeling, Oct. 15.—W. H. Taft yesterday concluded his three-day campaign in Ohio. He gave it as his opinion that "the attitude of labor toward the Republican party has been misrepresented quite as freely as that of the party and the candidate toward labor, and I find no reason for the belief that labor will divide other than on the lines that have heretofore divided it. In my opinion the normal Republican labor vote will be cast as heretofore.

"In the Ohio agricultural regions," he said, "it is quite apparent that the farmers are opposed to a change that will imperil their present prosperity. The situation in Ohio is entirely satisfactory and no one has any reasonable doubt that the Republican majority will be a substantial one. I certainly have no doubt on the subject myself."

Again yesterday the Taft special was delayed by the derailing of an engine. No one was hurt.

Steubenville and Wheeling furnished the big audiences of the day, although at each of the nine stops there were crowds and enthusiasm. It was just dusk when Judge Taft left his home state and pulled across the Ohio river to West Virginia.

Haskell Fails to Make a Hit

Ottawa, O., Oct. 15.—Governor Haskell of Oklahoma spoke to his former townsmen of Ottawa last night before a big crowd. In his address he criticised President Roosevelt very severely and defended his past record, denying many of the accusations against him. The reception tendered him was none too cordial and frequent questions interrupted his address. Congressman Clark of Missouri was the other speaker.

Parade of Church Workers

Providence, Oct. 15.—One of the largest parades of church workers in the history of New England took place in Providence last evening, when 1200 men Sunday school workers marched through the streets of the city. The event was the closing feature of a five days' session of the twenty-eighth annual state Sunday school convention. The procession was headed by a band. Christian Conquest banners and the Stars and Stripes were seen at frequent intervals in the line.

Bond of $150,000 Demanded

Pittsburg, Oct. 15.—In the United States district court, Judge Young refused to reduce the bail of William Montgomery, former cashier of the Allegheny National bank, now in jail and accused of peculations which wrecked the bank. The bond demanded is $150,000. United States District Attorney Dunkle opposed any reduction and informed the court that the bank had been looted of at least $1,250,000. Montgomery admitting being responsible for a shortage of $469,000.

Federation of Labor Officers

Lowell, Mass., Oct. 15.—The state branch of the Federation of Labor elected the following officers for the ensuing term: Philip F. Sweet of Boston, president; T. J. Durgin, Holyoke, first vice president; James Wall, Worcester, second vice president; W. H. Smith, North Adams, third vice president; M. D. Collins, Cambridge, fourth vice president, and F. M. Bumps, Brockton, fifth vice president. Dennis D. Driscoll was the unanimous choice for secretary-treasurer.

Lodge Denounces Socialism

Boston, Oct. 15.—In a scathing arraignment of socialism, which, he declared, would bring imperialism upon this country, if it ever came at all, the arraying of class against class and lining up voters on other than party lines, Senator Lodge last night delivered an address at a banquet which closed the seventh annual convention of the Postmasters' Association of New England.

Boycott In Full Swing

Vienna, Oct. 15.—The boycott of the Austrian Lloyd Steamship company is spreading throughout Turkish ports. It affects not only goods carried under the Austrian flag, but Austrian goods shipped in other vessels. The Austrian Chambers of Commerce fear they may lose the markets to Germany.

Time For Moose Hunting

Bangor, Me., Oct. 15.—Open time on moose in Maine began at midnight last night. Fewer hunters than usual are in the woods. Hunting conditions are now favorable, enough rain having come to relieve the drouth, while most of the leaves have fallen. The season is from Oct. 15 to Dec. 1.

Engine Smashed In Collision

Worcester, Mass., Oct. 15.—A passenger train and a special figured in a head-on collision at Brooks station. One of the locomotives was badly smashed. Nobody on either train was severely injured, although two men on the passenger train were severely shaken up when the trains met.

Imprisonment and Fine For Lorraine

Atlanta, Oct. 15.—J. W. Lorraine, charged with stealing pay checks from the public health department in Washington last August, pleaded guilty in the federal court here and was sentenced to five years' imprisonment and to pay a fine of $1000.

The Weather Forecast

Almanac, Friday, Oct. 16.

What DO YOU DO for Quincy?

A Little Wad of Common Sense.

A New Aid Fable.

This is not a George Ade fable, though it may sling some slang. It is a Home Aid fable.

Once there was a Geezer, who sat around and cut Kindling too small for Cook Stove purposes. He Whittled against Time and Flabbergasted against his Town. The town was No Good, he said—strictly on the Blink. Yes, it was N. G. Why, hadn't he lived Here since '84 and found that the Place was Punky? Sure, Mike!

Look at that town over in the next County. Grown like Jonah's Gourd. Must be a Jonah here. We've grown some, but I don't see that we're knocking any particularly Big Persimmons. That's the way this Gazaboo knocked his town.

One day a Sarcastic Stranger floated into the Town that was Knocked from the burg that had Blossomed like Jonah's Gourd. He Heard some of the Flabbergasting and Dropped to the situation.

"Look here, you," he remarked to the citizen who was Handing Out the Knocks. "What do you do for this town? Are you doing your part to put this Burg on the Upgrade? What's that hefty Bunch of literature sticking out of your Clothes?"

"That's a Mail Order Catalogue from Chicago—a town that is a town," replied the Geezer.

"So I thought," said the Impertinent Arrival. "Now let me hand you out a nice little Wad of common sense. For the past ten years you have been sending your money to the Chicago Mail Order houses instead of spending it among your home merchants. What would have happened to Chicago fifty years ago if all the First Settlers had shipped their Loose Coin to New York on catalogue inducements? Why, you'd have to use a sand dredger now to find the Original Site of Chicago. Now, in the Burg from which I have just Blown in we got over all this Bum Business years ago. We passed Resolutions that we would trade at home and help our own town to Spread out so that you could Sight it on the map without using Opera Glasses. But you and a Bunch of other folks in this town have wasted your Substance in Riotous Expenditures in Chicago by mail and let the sheriff hang out the 'Nothing Doing' sign in front of some of your own town's mercantile Emporiums. Look at our Town and then look at yours. What makes the Difference?"

Whereupon the Whittling Gazaboo threw a few well chosen Thoughts into his mental makeup and went down to the village store to Annex a linen collar in place of the Paper Circles which he had bought from Chicago at Two Bits a Box.

MORAL: If you want your town to grow, patronize home enterprises.

Now that YOU KNOW the Difference

"What I want in a wife is amiability. I don't care how many other good traits she has. If she hasn't that I don't want her."

"How are you going to find out about a woman's disposition before marriage?"

"Take her unawares and test her."

"That reminds me of a story," rejoined the other, and, lighting a cigar, he told it:

"One morning a gentleman was sitting in a railway car when three well dressed young ladies got in and began to look about them for seats together. There was one entirely vacant seat, the next in front of the gentleman mentioned. One of the girls, who seemed to be taking the lead, stopped before these seats, turned over the back of the forward one and looked hard at the gentleman sitting in the other, plainly saying by her manner: 'We three girls can have a nice little party of our own in these seats if you will take one with some one else. Haven't you the politeness to do so?'

"But the gentleman sat still in his seat. Evidently there was no politeness in him. The leader of the trio took the seat next the window, facing the impolite man; one of her party sat beside her, while the third dropped into the seat beside the man. They were evidently chums and kept up a clatter with their tongues. The man sat among them like a black crow among white doves, paying no attention to them nor they to him. He was young and bore the stamp of a gentleman. Surely it was surprising that he should not have given them the whole of the two seats and chosen another for himself. Instead he sat stolidly looking in front of him, not even glancing out of the window or reading a newspaper. The leader of the party began to fire up. Sitting facing the man, she was subject to his constant gaze. It was, to say the least, annoying.

"'This is intolerable,' she said, fanning herself angrily. 'Did any one ever see such rudeness!'

"'Gently, Alice,' said the girl beside the starer in a cautioning tone.

"'If you think you can stand it, Bet, you change seats with me.'

"'I'm willing,' Bet replied softly.

"'You shall do no such thing. You haven't the spunk of a kitten. I shall stay right here, and if he doesn't stop it I'll try to find a way to make him.'

"The man paid no more attention to the words than if they had not been spoken. If he had occasionally turned his eyes upon the other girl facing him or glanced at the one beside him his action would not have been so noticeable. But, no; he had fixed his gaze on Alice and ignored the others.

"'I can't endure it any longer, Mame,' she said. 'I must keep my eyes fixed on you or I shall do something terrible.'

"'Why not apply to the conductor?' suggested Mame.

"'I will just as soon as he comes along.'

"But the conductor did not come along, and Alice's position was not comfortable. She turned again toward the man. He was still staring at her. She resolved to try the effect of returning his insolence in kind. Fixing her eyes upon him, she stared at him for a full minute. Making no impression whatever, her temper broke away completely. Closing her fan tightly in her fist, she drew it back and landed it vigorously on the man's cheek.

"'There!' she exclaimed. 'Perhaps it will teach you not to stare a lady to death.'

"The man brought his hand to the hurt, half rose and in a gentle voice full of sorrow said:

"'There is some mistake. You do not understand. I am blind.'

"'Oh, Alice!' moaned Bet. 'What have you done?'

"'Why didn't you tell me?' said Alice to the man.

"'You have said nothing to make me understand that I was offending you, though now some of your remarks are intelligible to me.'

"'People in such condition,' said Mame coldly, 'shouldn't travel alone.'

"'Girls,' exclaimed Bet, 'neither of you seems to appreciate that it is you and not this poor man who is to blame.'

"'No one is to blame, ladies,' said the man. 'It is simply my misfortune.'

"The train slowed up for a station. The man arose and, feeling his way with a walking stick, started to leave the train. The girl called Bet took his arm and saw him to the platform."

"I see the pith of your yarn," remarked the listener. "Your man and Bet became lovers, were married, and she ministered all her life to a blind man. Very touching, but somewhat hackneyed."

"Nothing of the sort. The fellow wasn't blind at all. It was a put up job on his part. He wanted a wife, just as you do, who was amiable. He found her in the girl who befriended him, but instead of hunting her up and marrying her what do you suppose he did? Why, he hunted up the girl who struck him and married her."

"For heaven's sake! What did he do that for?"

"Who knows? She was homely, while Bet was pretty. She had no money and was not remarkably interesting. In such affairs no one knows what either sex will do."

"And how did the marriage turn out?"

"She got him under and kept him there."

"I reckon," said the other thoughtfully—"I reckon I won't marry."

ADVERTISE REAL ESTATE IN DAILY LEDGER.

They Want What They Want When They Want It.

People in the great cities fill many pages of the big newspapers with WANT ADS. When they want what they want when they want it, they patronize the WANT AD. columns.

The same thing can be done in this town and this paper—the introduction of the wanter to the wantee.

If you have anything for sale, for rent, for exchange; if you want to buy or rent anything, if you want to get a position or if you want to hire somebody—

A little WANT will bring you what you want.

The cost is insignificant compared to the satisfactory result.

WHAT DO YOU WANT?

FROM BOSTON TO PORTLAND

First Message Is Transmitted by Telepost Company

NEW SERVICE IN OPERATION

Distinguished Gathering Witnesses Inauguratino of Scheme Which Far Outclasses Any Other Telegraph System Now Doing Business--Speed and Economy Are Features --Extensions to Be Rapidly Made

Boston, Oct. 15.—The Telepost company inaugurated here today its system of receiving and sending messages. The Delany method, controlled by the company, the newest and most rapid method of transmitting intelligence electrically, in connection with the postoffice delivery system, is now an actual fact in American life.

With the transmission of the first Telepost message from Boston to Portland, Me., handed to the Telepost operator here by Mayor Hibbard of this city, the Telepost was put into operation between the two cities, the line including the following way stations: Lowell, Mass.; Lawrence, Mass.; Haverhill, Mass.; Exeter, N. H.; Portsmouth, N. H.; Dover, N. H.; Biddeford, Me.; Saco, Me., and Old Orchard, Me. In each of these cities there is now a Telepost office prepared to receive and transmit messages.

The Telepost transmits and receives messages at the rate of a thousand words a minute, from twenty to forty times as many as any other telegraph system now in operation. The Telepost utilizes the full carrying capacity of the wire, while others get only 10 percent.

The Telepost company gathers messages and sends them on its own lines. It delivers the messages itself by its own special delivery service, the messages then being called by the familiar name "telegram," or it relies for delivery upon the well organized postoffice department run by Uncle Sam. In the latter case the message is known as a "Telepost." The company also receives messages through the postoffice department, for transmission to near or distant points—that is, a man living in one of the cities named or within mailing distance of it may write out his telegram or his "Telepost," drop it, addressed to his correspondent near or far, in care of the Telepost company. The latter will attend to its prompt and speedy transmission. The telephone may also be utilized by the Telepost patrons.

In addition to telegrams of the new style and Teleposts, the innovation in the wire world includes the "telecard," which is to the telegram and the Telepost what the postal card is to the letter. In other words, it is a shorter telegram transmitted at a lower rate.

Rates Are Uniform

The rates charged by the Telepost company are uniform, whether the distance traversed by the message is ten miles or a thousand—twenty-five words for 25 cents delivered by the Telepost messengers or fifty words for 25 cents brought to your door by one of Uncle Sam's gray coated men. The charge for the telecard is 10 cents for ten words sent to any place reached by the Telepost company's lines.

A special envelope of odd size and attractive design makes it easier for the mail distributers to recognize and handle Teleposts. The telecard is also of special design in order to facilitate postoffice handling.

While the service inaugurated today includes only the cities named above, the Telepost company has already closed contracts to make rapid extensions from Boston in other directions.

The scene in the Telepost offices at the opening of the new service was a most interesting one. The audience included, besides Mayor Hibbard, a large number of men prominent in the business and professional life of this city. The newspaper men who were present not only looked upon the putting to practical use of the invention of Patrick B. Delany as an interesting item of news, but as one that is expected to affect vitally their own business of news gathering and publishing. The Telepost company intends to establish at its offices in the various cities a bulletin service, giving the most important news items of the day in skeleton form, referring the readers to the newspapers for details.

The first message transmitted over the Telepost lines was that of Mayor Hibbard to the mayor of Portland, Me., congratulating the latter upon the inauguration of the new system. The first Telepost message will be preserved as an interesting memento of the occasion. Among those present were Patrick B. Delany, the inventor of the system; H. Lee Sellers, the president of the company; R. H. Sellers, its secretary and treasurer, and J. W. Larish, its electrical engineer. The various operations of the Telepost, such as the perfecting type; the transmission of messages, handling the receiving tape, etc., were fully explained and aroused the highest interest.

The Telepost system has won the highest commendations from expert authorities in electricity. Thomas A. Edison, with whom Mr. Delany worked years ago, said of it: "The system in its entirety is so simple that it is perfectly 'fool proof.'"

BRYAN HIMSELF AGAIN.

Preaches Economic Adsurdities In Same Old Way.

Mr. Bryan, who started out very conservatively at the opening of the campaign, resolving evidently to get the confidence of certain editors and business men who could not stand his aforetime radicalism, has broken through the traces and given up trying to be good. His speech on the trusts at Indianapolis puts him back in his old position of advocating the destruction of anything that does not meet his views without regard to method or consequences.

As usual, he is not specific as to what means should be employed to carry out his designs. He simply in a general way wants to destroy the so called trusts, both large and small, regardless of the consequences to others engaged in similar business or of the consuming public. He tells us one day that the American people should be allowed to purchase where they can buy the cheapest, and another day he tells us that the money from the pockets of the people is flowing into the coffers of the trusts. If the latter be true it must be because the people are buying where they buy the cheapest, and if the trust made goods are the cheapest then they serve the consumer rather than injure him.

Mr. Bryan simply does not know what a trust is. Mr. Bryan does not know how to handle financial problems, industrial problems or even political problems. We have on our statute books today laws providing for the machinery to punish any illegitimate business and to remedy any inequalities or injustice. Mr. Bryan has not put forth any views showing how to improve present methods.

BRYAN AT TREASURY HELM.

How Would Business Men Regard Secretary Chosen by Him?

How would the financial community like to face a panic under a Bryan secretary of the treasury? This question goes to the heart of the degree of confidence which could be placed in a Bryan administration. Even if we had a new Bryan, sobered by the responsibility of his office, would business men feel the assurance of prompt, energetic and intelligent action to protect the public faith and save the money market from disturbance which would be looked for under a secretary of the treasury named by Mr. Taft? Business men are likely to ponder this seriously between now and November.

It is not necessary to assume that Mr. Bryan still favors opening the mints to the free coinage of silver to raise a grave doubt as to his attitude on all questions affecting the maintenance of the financial fabric of the country. Up to the convention of 1904 he would not even agree to an expression of opinion that the silver question had been sidetracked by the great output of gold, and his present associations and surroundings are such that it is doubtful if he could make any sincere declaration which would go far to establish confidence in his financial sanity.—Boston Transcript.

Colonel Henry Watterson in 1896 somewhat sneeringly described Mr. Bryan as "a boy orator." Mr. Bryan, it is fair to explain, is still an orator whose oratory retains all its boyish quality both as to extreme freshness and lack of meaning.

The supply of spellbinders may not exceed the demand this year, but it appears that spellbinding must be largely its own reward, and Bryan will get his.

Some of the Democratic prophets seem to be fairly aching to be without honor in their own country.

It is really touching to see the tender solicitude for the Massachusetts Democrats manifested by their party organs outside the state. Of course they will all send wreaths for the funeral.

Why do the Democratic papers shun the state campaign? Do they think it is loaded?

If you think money is being wasted on Beacon Hill vote for Mr. Draper, who is sure to watch for leaks and plug them up.

Mr. Vahey is on record as having done considerable "filibustering" in the house. Filibustering may sometimes suit partisan purposes, but it uses up quantities of good, valuable time and legislative time costs the citizens and taxpayers of the state good, hard money.

If extravagant appropriations are mooted in the legislature, Mr. Draper, as governor, will not stop to inquire whether the originators are of his own party. He will hit the extravagance first and then ask questions.

Imagine the enthusiasm of a certain class of Boston "statesmen" for Candidate Vahey!

Mr. Vahey probably wishes that his prospects were as gilded as is the big dome.

Oh, no! Mr. Vahey isn't making a "whirlwind" campaign. He is only "sowing to the wind;" he will reap the "whirlwind" in November.

It has been reported that Mr. Draper would be satisfied with 50,000 plurality. Why not make it 75,000 or 100,000 and surprise him?

The unemployed man wants a job. He will not vote for Bryan, because that would be to vote against the quickening of activity in manufacture, trade and transportation.

Mr. Kern says it is no joke to be a vice president. In Mr. Kern's case the joke is in being a candidate for vice president.

Woman's World

A SUFFRAGETTE HERE.

Mrs. Philip Snowden, Wife of a Distinguished Member of Parliament.

Mrs. Philip Snowden, who recently arrived in this country from England, is not only the wife of a distinguished member of parliament, but is famous on her own account as a suffragette and a lecturer. During her stay in America she will talk on the subject nearest her heart, woman's rights, at a number of colleges and women's clubs.

Mrs. Snowden is young and passing fair, of the dainty pink and white type of English beauty. She is not of the most militant variety of the suffragettes. She has never been in jail or smashed a window or chained herself to a park railing so the police couldn't make her move along, but she marched at the head of the first monster procession in London last June between Lady Frances Balfour, sister-in-law of King Edward's sister, on one side and Mrs. Henry Fawcett, widow of Victoria's cabinet minister, on the other.

"We have hundreds of titled persons who are members and contributors to the movement," said Mrs. Snowden when interviewed the other day. "At one meeting alone, attended mainly by the aristocracy, we took up a collection of $35,000. I don't know what part the Duchess of Marlborough is going to take, because she joined just before I came away. I think she was influenced by the Hon. Mrs. Bertland Russell, sister-in-law of Countess Russell, who is also a suffragette. Mrs. Russell, who was formerly a Philadelphia girl, is a great friend of the duchess.

"Annie Kenney has brought more fashionable women into the movement than anybody. Annie Kenney is the little factory girl whom W. T. Stead has called the Joan of Arc of the movement. She started the whole thing with a question to John Burns at Albert hall one night soon after the Liberal government came in. Before an audience of 11,000 he was outlining what the Liberal party proposed to do for the various classes of men. Annie Kenney leaned out of a box and said, 'What are you going to do for the women?' The audience would have torn her in pieces if it could have got at her. At the same time Cristabel Pankhurst was doing the same thing at a meeting in Manchester, and she was put out of the hall with her clothes torn half off her. The things that have been done to the suffragettes by the stewards of political meetings in which they asked questions would not be believed in America."

Her Searchlight the Best Yet.

Women have not achieved much in the field of invention, but for the improvement of the searchlight Mrs. Bertha Ayrton is being honored by scientific bodies in England. She is the only woman who holds membership in the British Institute of Electrical Engineers and the only woman who has received a medal from the Royal society of London for original, unaided research in electricity. She succeeded with the searchlight where men the world over failed. After experiments carried over several years had failed to increase range and illumination the British admiralty called in Professor Ayrton in the hope of making the searchlight more effective. Ayrton was puzzled, as other experts had been. His wife watched his work, and she finally expressed confidence in her ability to make an improvement. Ayrton gave her a free hand, engaging himself in other work. A couple of weeks ago the admiralty heads grew enthusiastic about the improved searchlight he exhibited before them. When hey crowded around to congratulate him the professor said: "Congratulate ny wife. She's the inventor; not I."

Do You Comb Your Hair Properly?

"My hair is coming out by the handful," complained a woman to her hairdresser recently.

"How do you comb it?" was the reply. "Half of my patients who complain of falling hair really are pulling it out by their own barbarous use of the comb.

"Never pull or tug at long hair; use a long, sweeping stroke if there are no tangles. If there are, work at each one lightly and separately till it is removed.

"Always begin at the ends of the hair, working up gradually. If the tangles are very bad, it is much better to thread them with the fingers before touching with the comb.

"Easily tangled hair should always be combed in small strands, which are kept separate till the entire head has been gone over.

"In the case of an invalid whose hair has not been combed for several days it is well to rub a little oil or vaseline on the hair, which helps to take out the tangles more easily. Even for a short illness the hair should be parted down the middle from the forehead to the nape of the neck and two plaits made. Never endeavor to make the brush do the work of the comb.

"The brush is for smoothing, for giving that fine gloss so justly admired, not to be driven fiercely through a mass of tangles.

"Treat your hair gently, as a precious possession. Remember, it is 'woman's crowning glory!'"

Gay Bedroom Slippers.

Not all the bedroom slippers that are shown as novelties are copyable, but the gay effects in colored canvas, lined with quilted satin, can easily be made up from a good slipper pattern and sewed to a pair of soles.

The best way to manage is to rip up a pair of old bedroom slippers that fit well, cut out the shape in red, green, pink or any desired color of canvas such as is used for fancy work and cut similar pieces of quilted satin, either in the same or a contrasting tone.

Baste the canvas and satin together wrong side to wrong side, turn in the edges, overcast them neatly together and sew to the soles.

Finish on the toe with a pompon the same color or with a rosette made of many knotted loops of inch wide ribbon, either velvet or satin.

How to Sew on Buttons.

The following is an excellent way of sewing buttons on children's coats, etc.: Make a good sized knot in your thread, which should be fairly coarse, then place a small pearl button on the inside of the coat. Put the needle first through the material, starting from the right side of the garment, then through the small button, then back again through the material and right through the big button.

Continue to stitch through and through until the button feels quite firm, then give the thread a twist or two round the base of the top button and finish off securely. There will then be no fear of the buttons coming off or tearing away the cloth.

Mice Don't Like Camphor.

Country people long ago discovered that lumps of camphor scattered through their pantries and cellars would drive off the pest of tiny red ants that sometimes and without apparent cause infest places where food is placed. It is now known that mice and rats also have an aversion to camphor and will not go where it is. A lump of it placed at the mouth of rat and mice holes while waiting for the carpenter is a sufficient deterrent. If one is in the habit of placing tablecloths in hampers to wait for washing day, a lump of camphor in a cheesecloth bag tied to the hamper will keep mice away and always be in its place.

Various Things to Remember.

When selecting the goods for your business or street shirt waist, remember that it is the color note that is the novelty. The colored stripe, both in linen and lawn, is extremely fashionable, especially when the stripe is of brown, porcelain or navy blue and lavender. Remember when planning your waists that simple styles are the smartest. Even the lingerie waist that reached the height of elaborateness is now seen in the plain tailored style. The one side frill is a favorite form of trimming and is made so that it can be buttoned into the waist.

The First Safety Pin.

A little boy, the son of an English blacksmith, used to act as nursemaid to his baby brother. The baby often cried, and its tears were generally caused by pin pricks. Noticing this, the boy tried to bend pins in such a way that they would do their work without puncturing the baby.

He failed, but his father, seeing the utility of the idea the lad had been at work on, set to work on his own account and eventually turned out the safety pin, which is now used all over the world.

Alum Cures Fever Blisters.

Not the least unpleasant by any means of the ills attendant upon a cold is the uncomfortable, unbecoming cold sore or fever blister. If taken in time its further development can often be stopped by the application of a bit of alum. Moisten this and rub gently, but thoroughly, over the spot.

To Remove Carpet Stains.

Stains on carpet can often be removed by making a thick paste of fuller's earth to which a little ammonia has been added. Put on the paste thickly, let it stand twenty-four hours and brush off. Sometimes a second application is necessary.

Smilage.

Quincy Locals Briefly Told

H. Walter Gray, the former city treasurer, left today for California in company with Mrs. Frank D. Pratt and her son Harry Pratt. They go first to San Francisco and then to Pomona Mr. Gray expects to be away several months.

The U. S. scout cruiser Chester, sister ship of the Salem and Birmingham built at Quincy, left Charlestown on Tuesday. She goes to Provincetown first and thence to Newport, where she is due on Saturday. She carries 350 blue jackets.

The members of Memorial Congregational church are using every effort to enstall a permanent pastor before the winter season. There seems to be a large attendance every Sunday and the congregation has received the several ministers who alternate in filling the pulpit with appreciative welcome.

Y. M. C. A. Evening Schools Opened

The enrollment for the Y. M. C. A. evening school is progressing finely. The mechanical drawing classes opened Tuesday evening, and the classes in monunmental and freeband drawing practical ship construction, architectual drawing and joinery and practical mathematics. The granite workers classes bid fair to be the largest this year.

Anyone who is interested in industrial education would be interested in visiting the association on a Monday, Tuesday, Thursday or Friday evenings during the next few months. The school is open to visitors at all times.

DEAFNESS CANNOT BE CURED.

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

COULD NOT SCORE

Quincy High Shut Out At Football By Somerville High

It was a case of a heavy fast team, well drilled under efficient coaches, against a team lacking these advantages, in the game between the Somerville and Quincy High school teams at Broadway field, Somerville, on Wednesday. Although the Quincy team is comparatively fast, still against an eleven of Somerville's calibre, something more than average speed is necessary. A light speedy aggregation will beat a heavy slow combination nine times out of ten, but a light fast team against a team with both weight and speed is sure to be defeated.

This accounts in a way for Quincy's crushing defeat on Wednesday, the local team being unable to stop the Somerville boys, who piled up a total of 34 points in two 15 minute periods, while Quincy was never dangerous at any point of the game.

Quincy was played out after the first half, for nearly twice as much scoring was done in the second half. Only 12 points were scored in the first fifteen minute session, but in the last half, the weight against them started to tell on Quincy. Cousens, the big colored fullback, was sent in by Coach Hafford in the second and he was a whole team in himself, going through any time he wanted to, for big gains.

The forward pass was again much in evidence, and in working this play, Somerville was clearly superior. Both Donahue and Cousens made long runs from forward passes, the former intercepting one of Quincy's heaves, and tearing off 60 yards for a touchdown.

Somerville used two men in nearly every position while with the exception of left half and left end Quincy worked the same team throughout the whole game.

For Somerville, Cousens, Donahue, the ends, Forg and Garland, played well, and Nolan, one of the few who played the whole game did excellent work, breaking through time after time, and opening up big holes. Gore, the fast little quarterback of Quincy, played the star game for the local team, and Nash and Marsh showed up well. The whole team was evidently stage struck at bein aggainst a team which has the reputation that all Somerville teams have.

New System at Johnson Bros.

The way that our trade has taken to our

New Cash and Discount System

demonstrates to our satisfaction that we are giving them just what was needed in Quincy, and we have decided to extend our liberal offer, and will say, that to all our customers who find it impossible to carry their purchases home with them, if they bring or send their order to our store, and PAY CASH for it, we will deliver the same and allow 2% DISCOUNT from amount of purchase.

Now we think that this plan will give everyone a good Square Deal, and every intelligent buyer must see that we are more than doing our share to give them what every cash buyer deserves today, first class goods at a low price.

Now, don't forget our other proposition, that all who purchase goods of us, pay cash and carry their purchase home—we will give a Discount of 5% off the amount of purchase, besides selling our goods at the very lowest mark.

We will make a feature of having some special article each day marked at Genuine Bargain Price.

Now read this over carefully and we feel confident that you can see it just the way that we do—something that is surely needed in Quincy—a high grade of goods sold at a very low price.

Foot Ball And Other Sports

In the Huntington Valley Country club tournament at Philadelphia on Wednesday Miss Adams of the Wollaston Golf club defeated Mrs. R. H. Barlow, three up and two to play. This brings Miss Adams to the finals, and today she plays Miss M. Curtis for first place.

Basket ball at Brookline High will be a thing of the past the coming winter, if present plans carry. The athletic committee has decided to drop this popular indoor game, because many parents have complained that the boys think more of sport than of study. It is said the students interested in the game will petition to form a team, as there is much good material in the school this year.

It is no wonder that Everett has a crack foot ball team. They are under a strict training system, according to which they must retire and arise at appointed hours, eat certain food and do regular exercises outside the daily foot ball practice. A scout keeps after the boys at all times to see that the rules are followed. The team certainly shows the good results that accrue from careful training.

The High school boys at Scituate lan play basket ball in the Town hall the coming winter, but the privilege came only after a contest with the selectmen. The latter had refused them the use of the hall, but the boys got up a petition and asked for another hearing. About 250 of the most prominent citizens signed the petition and the request was granted. Now the board has given in to the boys and the original request for the hall is granted.

Phenomenal Score At Whist Tournament

Nine tables participated in the whist tournament at the Granite City club Wednesday evening. While no one succeeded in obtaining as large a per cent as did President Tilden a week ago, some good scores were made. The two highest were by J. Warren Nightingale and C. E. Haskins, the former 69 plus, and the latter 68 plus.

There is hardly a gathering at which some phenomenal score is not made. So it proved at this meeting. This score was a win of 7 points and a loss of 52 points giving the holder a fraction over 11 per cent. It was one of the lowest scores ever recorded. It does not matter who made it.

A lunch was served after the play. Commencing next Wednesday evening the luncheon will be served by Henry P. Furnald, who promises something tempting.

CHICAGO STILL CHAMPION

Her Team Clincnes the Greatest of All Baseball Trophies

Detroit, Oct 15.—By defeating Detroit, 2 to 0, the Chicago team of the National League retained its title as the champion baseball team of the world. The present series differed but little from that of last year. In the previous series Detroit managed to get one tie game and then went down to four straight defeats. In the present series Detroit snatched one victory out of the five games played.

The Chicago team showed superiority in every department of the game in the series as a whole. The games were singularly free from squabbling, and on only two or three occasions were the decisions of the umpires questioned.

The series, however, created less interest in the two cities most affected than that of last year, if the attendance may be taken as a guide. The paid admissions were only 62,232 for the five games and the receipts totalled but $94,976, as compared with $101,000 last year. Of the money taken in the players of Chicago get $27,669 and the Detroit players $18,446. The club owners get $19,681 apiece and the national commission $9497.

Final score by innings:

Base hits—Chicago, 10; Detroit, 3. Batteries—Overall and Kling; Donovan and Schmidt.

LI SUM LING'S CONCLUSIONS

One of Them Is That Japan Wants to Fight United States

Boston, Oct. 15.—Li Sum Ling, editor of The Chinese Mail of Hong Kong, arrived in Boston late last night, having come here to interview Boston business men and lend his efforts toward securing a commercial alliance between China and the United States.

LI SUM LING.

The Chinese editor speaks English fluently. Among other things he stated:

"There has been a genuine awakening among all classes of our people in the past four or five years. The people are clamoring for your scientific ideas and methods. We are producing more than we need and you Americans are slow in securing our trade. The Germans at present control the trade there.

"Japan has not much money now, but if she had it she would fight you and fight you hard. Japan is against an alliance between the United States and China, as she realizes that China is so located as to prove a power to the United States in a spot where she is weakest."

Worcester Has a Big Fire

Worcester, Mass., Oct. 15.—The Church of Notre Dame suffered serious damage by fire late last night and two other buildings occupied by a number of small business firms were destroyed. The total loss is estimated at $75,000, of which $30,000 falls on the church. The fire started in a fruit and wall paper establishment kept by Samuel Stewart. The cause of the fire is not known, but the police are inclined to believe that it was of incendiary origin.

Prefers Mexico to Washington

Mexico City, Oct. 15.—Enrique C. Creel has resigned as ambassador to the United States. Creel for some time past has held the double post of governor of the state of Chihuahua and ambassador and he now desires to devote all his attention to the former office. His successor to the post at Washington has not yet been decided upon.

Intruder In Cudahy Home

Omaha, Oct. 15.—A stranger was found in the home of Edward A. Cudahy, millionaire packer, last night. He escaped out of an open window on the second floor when a servant detected him. He was well dressed and wore a silk hat. He was in the room of Edward Cudahy, Jr., who was kidnapped seven years ago.

Nail Pierced His Head

North Brookfield, Mass., Oct. 15.—Austin Stevens, an old soldier, aged 76, living alone, was found dead on the floor of his barn, having fallen from a hay mow and striking his head on a nail that stuck up from the floor. It is believed that he was instantly killed and that he had been dead for twenty-four hours when found.

The way that our trade has taken to our

demonstrates to our satisfaction that we are giving them just what was needed in Quincy, and we have decided to extend our liberal offer, and will say, that to all our customers who find it impossible to carry their purchases home with them, if they bring or send their order to our store, and PAY CASH for it, we will deliver the same and allow 2% DISCOUNT from amount of purchase.

Now we think that this plan will give everyone a good Square Deal, and every intelligent buyer must see that we are more than doing our share to give them what every cash buyer deserves today, first class goods at a low price.

Now, don't forget our other proposition, that all who purchase goods of us, pay cash and carry their purchase home—we will give a Discount of 5% off the amount of purchase, besides selling our goods at the very lowest mark.

We will make a feature of having some special article each day marked at Genuine Bargain Price.

Now read this over carefully and we feel confident that you can see it just the way that we do—something that is surely needed in Quincy—a high grade of goods sold at a very low price.

DEMOCRATS ARE OUT

Have No Candidate For Councillor Or For the County Offices

(Special to the Daily Ledger)

Dedham, Oct. 15, 1908.

Once more have the Democrats made a fluke of it, all because the State committee or whoever is responsible for the calling of the contions, did not wake up until too late and the Democrats will have no candidates for the Governor's council in in the second district, or for county commissioner or register of probate in Norfolk county. This is due to the fact that these two conventions were called for Wednesday, just 24 hours too late, for the time for holding them had expired Tuesday afternoon at 5 o'clock. Consequently, Councillor Albion F. Bemis of Brookline will have no opponent and neither will John F. Merrill of Quincy for county commissioner, nor John D. Cobb of Dedham for register of probate. The seat as an advisor for the governor is a political one and the Democrats have always had a candidate of their own The county convention would have merely meant an endorsement for Mr. Merrill and Mr. Cobb, two officials who have ably fulfilled their positions of trust.

The annual report of the district court at Dedham ending Sept. 30, shows that 1,644 criminal cases came before the court during that time and some disposition made of them. Drunkenness had the largest call, with 525 cases. For disturbing the peace, 196 were before the court, and on assault and battery charges there were 120 cases. Automobile cases summed up 253. There was one murder case, that of Dr. Walter R. Amesbury of Hyde Park, who is being held for trial in the upper court in the first degree for killing his wife on Christmas day of last year. Walking the railroad track was pretty well up with 93 cases. Unusual cases were allowing fowl to trespass, and an illegal use of transfer ticket. The crusade against carrying dangerous weapons was the means of bringing in 22 defendants on that charge.

The candidates for the house from the First Norfolk district comprising Dedham and Needham have been chosen. William G. Moseley of Needham being the Republican and Edmond H. Bowler of Dedham the Democratic nominee.

The Dedham Business Men's association and Board of Trade will hold its first meeting of the season next Wednesday at Greenleaf hall, when the work of the season will be taken up. If there is any sort of an organization that ought to be encouraged and supported it is those of citizens organized for study and action for the public good, and none more so than this one, composed as it is of the most public spirited citizens of the town.

Martin J. Barrett turnkey at the county jail, has been enjoying a two weeks' vacation passed in short trips here and there in the immediate vicinity.

There is no more popular member of the newspaper craft than Fred E. Rollins of Hyde Park, who covers a number of the towns in the county and the county courts, and has rounded out 33 years of service with the Boston Herald. Quiet and modest, genial in disposition he makes friends everywhere and to know him is to like him. Even at that, probably but few of his friends realize he is one of the crack shots in the Press Gun club, and has been one for years, for he is loath to talk of his triumphs at the range. At the recent shoot of the club he won second place, and in all the contests of the day made a record seldom equalled, for out of 64 shots he made 31 bullseyes and put the remaining 33 bullets within the inner circle next to the bullseye.

All sorts of excuses are given in court for violations of the law, and especially so in automobile cases. They had their eyes right on the cyclometer all the time and just knew they were going slow, they were hurrying to a sick friend, the machine had got beyond their control, or some excuse of the sort, but Monday there was the best yet, one that will take the prize. Carleton Stanley of Newton is the one who sprung it, and it was to the effect that just previous to his reaching the trap when he was going slow, O so slow, a swarm of real naughty bees happened along at that particular moment and ruthlessly disturbed the calm serenity of their ride by swarming viciously around them. What could the poor things in the machine do, but speed away from them, even if it did violate the law. Those horrid bees were so dreadful that the speed necessary to get away from them sent the automobile right through the trap at such a rate that the automobile officers stopped them and summoned then into court. There were no bees around the machine then, nor were there any in the excuses given the officers. This was all reserved for the hearing in court Monday morning when it constituted a surprise hinted about. It was a surprise too, and the story went, for the driver was discharged. It is the consensus opinion that the ones who got stung were the officers.

Norfolk county figured in two appointments by Governor Guild this week, for Emery B. Gibbs of Brookline was appointed a public administrator, filling the quota of five for the county, and Philip R. Allen of Walpole as a trustee of the Foxboro state hospital.

"The town won't get my fine anyway" were the vehement words of an automobilist who had been captured in the Dedham trap last week. It was the expression of an unsportmanlike feeling of spite against the town whose officers had taken him for a violation of the law, done as a means of protection to the general public. It was unfair in spirit and not creditable to the maker. He would accomplish his purpose by appealing to the higher court when the fine would go to the county.

Truth is often unconsciously spoken of which there was an example in the district court the other day when a defendant with a somewhat limited knowledge of the English language was charged with disturbing the peace on an electric car. He had a hard time even with the assistance of an interpreter understanding what was being testified to, but there was one thing he had learned, as evidenced by the only statement he could be made to give in regard to the case and that was "My wife will do the talking." The reason for this statement was shown later when his better half was given the floor, for she could and did do the talking. It was evident that he had learned his lesson at his own fireside.

SCHOOL CENSUS

Show a Gain Of Over 100 And a Total Of Over 7300

Charles H. Johnson has just completed the annual school census of the city which is now taken in September, and finds a grand total of 7362 children who are over five years of age and under fifteen years, the comparison with other years being as follows by wards:

	1908	1907	1906	1900
Ward One,	1091	1032	880	633
Ward Two,	1052	1029	954	586
Ward Three,	1730	1680	1734	1183
Ward Four,	1630	1687	1633	1457
Ward Five,	867	835	817	770
Ward Six,	992	977	884	470
Total,	7362	7258	6902	5099

The increase by wards for one year and eight years were as follows, Ward Three making the biggest gain in eight years:

	One Year,	Eight Years.
Ward One,	59	458
Ward Two,	23	466
Ward Three,	50	547
Ward Four,	*57	173
Ward Five,	14	79
Ward Six,	15	522
	104	2261

*Loss

The total of 7,362 is 104 more than a year ago. The principal gain was in Wards One and Three. Wards Two, Five and Six made slight gains, while Ward Four lost 57.

Ward Three is now just 100 ahead of Ward Four. Wards One and Two are having a close race for third place, while Ward Six is now over 100 ahead of Ward Five which is last and has about one-half as many children as Ward Three.

The number at each age, from 5 to 14, is surprisingly even, ranging from 642 at 13 years to 817 at 8 years. All the other ages have between 700 and 800.

Ward One, Two, Three and Six have more children of 8 years of age than any other age, while Ward Four has more of 14 years of age, and Ward Five more of 12 years of age.

The New Census of 1908.

The figures by wards and ages are given below.

Farewell to Pastor and Wife

Rev. Edmund D. Webber, who recently resigned his pastorate at the Wollaston Baptist church, and Mrs. Webber, were given a farewell reception Thursday evening at the church. The reception was not confined alone to members of this church but included many who attended worship at other churches. The attendance at the reception was very large and must have left no doubt in the mind of Mr. and Mrs. Webber of the high regard in which they are held.

Rev. and Mrs. Webber were assisted in receiving by Deacon and Mrs. George E. Thomas, Deacon and Mrs. H. B. Bailey, Deacon and Mrs. G. A. Brown and Deacon and Mrs. C. E. Goodspeed. The ushers were C. B. Hall, C. D. Young, Eben Hardy and J. Arthur Sparrow.

Music during the reception was furnished by the Wollaston orchestra. During the evening refreshments were served by Mrs. E. L. Gannett, Miss Edith Barker, Miss Marion Barker and Miss Edith Berry.

Rev. and Mrs. Webber leave Quincy in a few days for Wolfville, N. S., where Mr. Webber has accepted a call.

Miss Tinkham Wife of A. W. Hayes

The apartments of Mrs. William A. Field at 1355 Hancock street were bright with light and floral decorations of palms, ferns and cut flowers on Thursday evening for the wedding of her granddaughter, Miss Lydia Corrinne Tinkham of Mobile, Alabama, and Mr. Arthur William Hayes of Hanson, Mass., 1st class sergeant Hospital Corps, U. S. A.

Rev. Mr. Evans of the Congregational church of Holbrook officiated, performing the ceremony at eight o'clock in the presence of the immediate family. Dr. Clayton R. Marstin was the best man and the maid of honor was Miss Grace Ham of Dorchester.

The bride wore her travelling dress of blue broadcloth, and carried white roses and the maid of honor was also in blue broadcloth.

An informal reception followed the ceremony during which a wedding supper was served. Music was by a quartet from Portland, Maine.

Guests were present from Hanson, Brockton, Boston, Portland and also Mobile, Ala.

The bride's mother will be remembered as Miss Ida Field, formerly residing on Adams street at the corner of Alleyne street.

PROMISES TO BE UNEXCELLED

Long Program of Festivities For Americans In Japan

OUR FLAG WAVES EVERYW ERE

Turning of New Page In History of Relations Between the Two Countries--Entertainment Provided For Bluejackets Every Minute of Day and Night--Free Theatres, Free Car Rides and Other Courtesies

Tokio, Oct. 16.—Some time between dawn and noon tomorrow the American fleet of sixteen battleships, escorted by a squadron of Japanese war vessels, will swing around Hachiogiyama into the beautiful harbor of Yokohama. Sixteen welcoming men-of-war will salute and 336 harmless guns will voice the sentiment of the whole people of Japan.

The first scene of the first act of the week's engagement of the American fleet in Japan will doubtless be the most impressive, but every number on the long program, carefully prepared and as carefully rehearsed, will be new evidence that the welcome found in Japan has been unexcelled, unequalled perhaps, by any of the hearty welcomes extended to it since it left the Atlantic seaboard.

Sixteen Japanese war vessels are awaiting the battleships at their buoys, and throughout the visit each battleship will have officers and men representing the entertaining emperor and people at its beck and call.

A high Japanese admiral, speaking of Oct. 17, said: "When the first gun of welcome sounds American week will have begun and a new page will be turned in the history of the relations between the two countries."

Immediately the vessels come to anchorage Captain Dougherty, the naval attache of the American embassy, will board Admiral Sperry's flagship and the exchange of visits between the admirals and officers from ship to ship will commence. Two special landing places have been arranged in the centre of a broad avenue facing the sea. They are for the exclusive use of the fleet's boats. By official orders the American flag will everywhere be displayed with the Japanese flag, and at night every house in Yokohama and Tokio, as well as in the villages between the two places, will put out lighted lanterns having the American and Japanese flags on them.

As soon as the officers of the two fleets have exchanged official visits the mayor of Yokohama will go off on his launch to visit Sperry. He will be followed by the governor of Kamakawa After this the first detachment of officers will go ashore to return these official visits.

Ambassador O'Brien will not meet Sperry in Yokohama, the admiral having to make the first call. The first meeting, therefore, between Sperry and the ambassador will be in Tokio on Oct. 19. Saturday and Sunday are entirely given up to Yokohama. Officially Tokio does not participate. About 3500 American bluejackets will be given shore leave each day, and the Japanese program provides for their entertainment every minute of the day and evening.

Receptions will be held at Yokohama park, where every form of entertainment is provided free. The Japanese theatres of Yokohama will entertain 600 sailors daily. The government has provided guides for the visitors, and instructions have been issued to the men of the Japanese fleet, as well as to the people generally, that every assistance should be given to the American sailors. The merchants have been warned that exorbitant charges will not be countenanced.

The first large affair ashore will be the dinner given by Admiral Ijuin, commanding the Japanese welcoming fleet, to the officers on Saturday night. This will be followed by a reception. On Sunday the mayor gives a dinner and the men will be provided with a regular program of entertainment.

On Monday morning Admiral Sperry and his flag officers will come to Tokio. They will be driven to the Shiba detached palace, one of the imperial residences situated on Tokio bay, in four imperial carriages, which will remain at the disposal of the party during their entire stay in Tokio.

With Tuesday begins the Japanese entertainment in Tokio. Luncheons, garden parties and dinners will be given, with receptions everywhere. Aside from the official entertainment there will be dozens of private dinners and other entertainments going on all over the city. The Great Theatre will give one special performance to about 2000, and the minor theatres are open free to the Americans daily. On one afternoon 3000 bluejackets will come up to Tokio for a reception in the Hibiya park. Here the most elaborate preparations have been made.

While all this is going on the trains will be running almost continuously between Tokio and Yokohama, a distance of eighteen miles, with free tickets for Americans. There will also be excursions to many points of interest near Yokohama. The street cars are also entirely free to Americans, an invaluable boon in Tokio with its hundred square miles of actual city. Every man and every officer of the fleet will receive a medal of silver or gold.

CASH COMPENSATION

Plan For Settling For Dismemberment of the Turkish Empire

London, Oct. 16.—Providing that cash compensations shall be made to Turkey for the dismemberment of her empire, the program to be submitted to the proposed European congress has been completed by Great Britain, Russia and France.

No place has yet been fixed for the meeting of the congress, which will have under consideration the revision of the Berlin treaty of 1878 to meet recent changes in the Balkans. Eight articles have been agreed upon.

Disturbed by the news of Bulgaria's military activity, the porte has instructed the Turkish representatives abroad to call this matter to the attention of the powers, and to state also that Turkey will decline to take the responsibility should Bulgaria's persistence in her present attitude result in hostilities.

THAW'S FRIENDS SCORE A POINT

Thaw to Give Bankruptcy Testimony at Pittsburg

New York, Oct. 16.—It was announced here that Harry K. Thaw may possibly go to Pittsburg next Sunday morning, or soon after, to testify in the bankruptcy proceedings now pending against him in that city. This information was given out after a conference between Dr. Baker, assistant superintendent of the Matteawan hospital for the criminal insane, where Thaw is confined, and Special Deputy Attorney General Gardiner, appointed to take charge of the Thaw case for the state.

A writ issued by the United States court in Pennsylvania, commanding Dr. Lamb, superintendent of the Matteawan hospital, to produce Thaw in Pittsburg was served on Lamb yesterday and Baker hastened to New York from Fishkill Landing, where the hospital is situated, to consult Gardiner about obeying the writ.

Meantime, Albert H. Myer, Thaw's Pittsburg attorney, and Roger O'Mara, a friend and business agent of the Thaw family, had seen Gardiner and explained to him the purport of the new writ. Gardiner says that the representatives of Thaw have promised not to put any obstacle in the way of having Thaw returned to New York should he appear in Pittsburg, and therefore he (Gardiner) does not see how he can successfully oppose the new writ.

"I have made all arrangements to go to Pittsburg to argue the case," said Gardiner, "but I cannot tell yet whether Thaw will go there or not. I wish to discuss the case with Attorney General Jackson before taking any definite action. In Pittsburg I will argue against Thaw being taken to that city, but if I fail to have the writ dismissed Thaw will be telegraphed for."

British Methods Not Endorsed

Buffalo, Oct. 16.—The fortieth annual convention of the National American Women Suffrage association was called to order by President Shaw. She called attention to the progress made by the workers for woman suffrage and predicted even more rapid advancement of the cause in the future. "American suffragists do not countenance the methods in vogue in England." This opinion, voiced by one of the prominent delegates, reflects the general feeling among the suffragists here.

Russian Students In Battle

St. Petersburg, Oct. 16.—The students of the University of St. Petersburg held a meeting to discuss the continuation of the strike they have embarked on because of alleged imposition by the ministry of education, but the gathering broke up in a free fight between the opposing factions. Clubs and canes were used freely and many heads were broken. Further trouble is expected.

Richford Fire Still Burning

Richford, Vt., Oct. 16.—Workmen late yesterday recovered all that remained of the body of William C. Barney, one of the victims of the grain elevator catastrophe, which caused the death of fifteen persons on Oct. 7. This makes seven bodies found so far. The fire in the grain is still burning and it will probably be several days before it finally burns itself out.

Negro Lynched by Negroes

Hernando, Miss., Oct. 16.—W. J. Jackson, a negro, was lynched near here by members of his own race. Jackson, it is stated, was arrested while attempting to remove a bale of cotton, the property of another negro, from a gin. While being taken to jail he was taken from the officers and hanged by a mob of negroes.

Sensational Reports Denied

Washington, Oct. 16.—Sensational reports that the submarine flotilla, on its recent trip from New York to Philadelphia, was in extreme danger, that the vessels were flooded and that the men suffered from the effect of poisonous gases, are officially denied in a report of the run made public at the navy department.

Minister Ugarte to Leave Us

Washington, Oct. 16.—The recall of Angel Ugarte, the minister from Honduras to the United States, was announced when the minister called on Secretary Root and said he had been relieved and would go to Mexico to represent his country there. Lazo Arriga will succeed him.

What DO YOU DO for Quincy?

A Little Wad of Common Sense.

A New Aid Fable.

This is not a George Ade fable, though it may sling some slang. It is a Home Aid fable.

Once there was a Geezer, who sat around and cut Kindling too small for Cook Stove purposes. He Whittled against Time and Flabbergasted against his Town. The town was No Good, he said—strictly on the Blink. Yes, it was N. G. Why, hadn't he lived Here since '84 and found that the Place was Punky? Sure, Mike!

Look at that town over in the next County. Grown like Jonah's Gourd. Must be a Jonah here. We've grown some, but I don't see that we're knocking any particularly Big Persimmons. That's the way this Gazaboo knocked his town.

One day a Sarcastic Stranger floated into the Town that was Knocked from the burg that had Blossomed like Jonah's Gourd. He Heard some of the Flabbergasting and Dropped to the situation.

"Look here, you," he remarked to the citizen who was Handing Out the Knocks. "What do you do for this town? Are you doing your part to put this Burg on the Upgrade? What's that hefty Bunch of literature sticking out of your Clothes?"

"That's a Mail Order Catalogue from Chicago—a town that is a town," replied the Geezer.

"So I thought," said the Impertinent Arrival. "Now let me hand you out a nice little Wad of common sense. For the past ten years you have been sending your money to the Chicago Mail Order houses instead of spending it among your home merchants. What would have happened to Chicago fifty years ago if all the First Settlers had shipped their Loose Coin to New York on catalogue inducements? Why, you'd have to use a sand dredger now to find the Original Site of Chicago. Now, in the Burg from which I have just Blown in we got over all this Bum Business years ago. We passed Resolutions that we would trade at home and help our own town to Spread out so that you could Sight it on the map without using Opera Glasses. But you and a Bunch of other folks in this town have wasted your Substance in Riotous Expenditures in Chicago by mail and let the sheriff hang out the 'Nothing Doing' sign in front of some of your own town's mercantile Emporiums. Look at our Town and then look at yours. What makes the Difference?"

Whereupon the Whittling Gazaboo threw a few well chosen Thoughts into his mental makeup and went down to the village store to Annex a linen collar in place of the Paper Circles which he had bought from Chicago at Two Bits a Box.

MORAL: If you want your town to grow, patronize home enterprises.

WAR CLOUD IN KOREA

Troops of China and Japan In Collision on Disputed Territory

Seoul, Oct. 16.—Serious complications affecting the peace of China and Japan threaten as the result of an engagement between Chinese and Japanese troops in Kantao, Northern Korea. Several were killed or wounded.

Chinese soldiers are reported to have opened hostilities by firing upon a police station occupied by the Japanese troops who were sent into Kantao as a guard for the Korean residents there. The fighting that ensued lasted several hours.

The commander of the Japanese garrison immediately called on China for permission to cross the frontier into Chinese territory and pursue the assailants, who appear to have been worsted in the engagement. The request was refused by the war office.

The Japanese foreign office has made representations to the government at Pekin and the situation is beginning to assume a serious aspect.

It is intimated that unless China takes prompt action satisfactory to the Japanese government the latter may take the initiative and cross the frontier in order to afford protection to the Koreans.

The Kantao country now in dispute is a tract of land about 200 miles long by 60 miles wide and is the outgrowth and development of differences between China and Korea, which was the old home of the Manchu dynasty and for many years held sacred.

MRS. SHAW TOOK DEW BATH IN ROBE

Denies Having Communicated With Spirit World

Cambridge, Mass., Oct. 16.—The trial of the Shaw case will be continued in Lowell next week, and on Tuesday the court and counsel for both sides will visit the Mazdaznan temple in that city.

With the exception of two witnesses for the rebuttal, Mrs. Ellen M. Shaw, the defendant, was on the stand yesterday. Mrs. Hilton was not in court, but remained in the registry of deeds building across the street.

Mrs. Shaw denied that she ever had had communication with the spirit world. She said that she had been a student of theosophy and had looked into Christian Science. She used no incense in her home, but did employ, as a disinfectant, an Egyptian preparation which had no religious significance.

Continuing her testimony, Mrs. Shaw said that she had never received financial advice from Hanish and that he had not told her that he controlled the King of England. He did say, she admitted that he had picked flowers with Queen Victoria in the latter's garden.

Mrs. Shaw admitted that she wore a sort of robe, but as a morning gown. The robe was produced in court and Mrs. Shaw put it on. It was apparently made of sheer lawn. She admitted that she wore it when taking a walk on the lawn and said that she might have sat on the grass in it. She finally admitted that she took a dew bath in it.

The witness said that she gave the Mazdaznans in Lowell $500 in gold to help build the temple there. She admitted that she had lent $500 to Dr. Hilton which had not been paid and that she had made loans of $100 each to four members of the Mazdaznan community in Lowell.

Concluding her testimony, the witness said that her purpose in selling her property was to convert it into something substantial. Asked if she knew where Hanish came from, she said she did not know or care; it was not what he was yesterday that counted, but what he was today.

Racehorse Sold For $50,000

Lexington, Ky., Oct. 16.—Just after making a show of his field in the three heats of the West stake, Allen Winter, winner of many good races in the Grand Circuit, was purchased by I. Schlesinger of Vienna, Austria, for $50,000. Allen Winter will be raced in Austria next season.

Fate of a Mischievous Boy

Detroit, Oct. 16.—Emmet Murphy, 13 years old, was electrocuted at the top of a 150-foot electric light tower which he had climbed with a playmate in a spirit of mischief. He touched a live wire with his hand and received 2500 volts.

Real Winter In Labrador

North Sydney, N. S., Oct. 16.—Stormy weather prevails along the northern coast of Labrador, according to advices just received. A recent heavy gale was followed by extreme cold and over three feet of snow fell in some sections.

NEWS IN BRIEF

Henry N. Smith, aged 46, was struck and instantly killed by an electric car at Brookfield, Mass. He leaves a widow and four children.

Forest fires have broken out again in northern Michigan with renewed fury.

A passenger train jumped the tracks near Allandale, Ont. Three coaches turned over in the ditch. Nine persons were injured, four seriously.

Dr. T. H. Dearing, for many years professor of surgery and dermatology, died at Braintree, Mass., aged 83 years. He was born at Kittery, Me.

The American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions decided to hold its annual convention next year in Minneapolis and to celebrate in Boston in 1910 the centennial anniversary of its foundation.

ADVERTISE REAL ESTATE IN DAILY LEDGER.

Holed Out and Pulled the Hole In After Them.

Up to about 1869 the Mammoth Cave of Kentucky was widely advertised by its owner. But the owner died that year and left the cave to thirteen heirs scattered over the country. The lucky thirteen devoted themselves to dreams of spending the big income which the cave had been earning for many years because it had been advertised. But they forgot to keep up the advertising.

Now the cave is visited by comparatively few persons instead of by many thousands annually, as in the days when it was advertised.

But the great cave conveys a lesson to every business man. If you quit advertising, your place will be ignored by the public even more than Mammoth Cave is ignored, because you are not even a natural curiosity.

DEMOCRATIC CAMPAIGN FUND.

Chipped In $248,581 Up to Oct. 9 to Help Elect Bryan

DISBURSEMENT OF $225,962

National Committee Expresses Confidence That People Whom They Are Taking Into Their Confidence Will Supply Additional Sum of $100,000 Necessary to Successfully Carry on Campaign

New York, Oct. 16.—The Democratic national committee, through Treasurer Herman Ridder, gave out an extended statement of the contributions to the Democratic national campaign fund up to and including Oct. 9, showing sums of and over $1000. The statement also shows receipts and disbursements as follows:

Received from contributors of $100 and over	$90,712.33
Received from contributors under $100	115,355.22
Amount left over from Denver convention fund	42,500.00
Total	$248,587.55
Amount disbursed	225,962.88
Balance on hand	$22,694.67

The statement, which is signed by National Chairman Mack and Treasurer Ridder, says that 343 subscribers gave $100 or more, and that the smaller sums were from 25 cents up. It adds:

"The number of contributors to the national committee fund is estimated at about 50,000 people and about $100,000 of the whole amount contributed came from the Democratic newspapers throughout the United States. It will be noticed from the foregoing statement that the cash balance is about $22,000.

"Supplies contracted for and undelivered, circulation of literature, the expense of headquarters in Chicago, New York and Denver, and the traveling and other expense incident to our speaking campaign, now under way, will make necessary an additional $100,000 to carry our campaign to a successful issue. We are confident that the people whom we are thus taking into our confidence will supply us with this additional sum, and we earnestly urge a prompt and generous response to this appeal. Subscriptions received of $100 or more will be published daily, beginning Oct. 16."

The list covering the New England states is as follows:

Maine—Darius H. Ingraham, $100.

New Hampshire—James E. Shepard, $125; H. W. Felker, $100; Eugene E. Reed, $100.

Vermont—H. O. Cummings, $100.

Massachusetts—Carl S. Vrooman, $500; Richard Olney, $500; Charles S. Hamlin, $100; Fred L. McLaughlin, $100; Mrs. F. L. McLaughlin, $100; D. F. Dougherty, $100; Humphrey O'Sullivan, $100; J. W. Coughlin, $100.

Rhode Island—P. J. Murphy, $100.

Connecticut—Melbert D. Cary, $1000; Archibald McNeill, $1000.

The largest individual contribution reported by Ridder was one of $5000 from Charles J. Hughes of Colorado. William J. Bryan was the second largest individual contributor, he having turned into the national treasurer $4016 from the profits of his newspaper, The Commoner. Nathan Straus, the New York merchant, and the National Democratic club with contributions of $2500 each, former Senator W. A. Clark of Montana $2000 and National Chairman Mack $1000, D. G. Bromley of Pennsylvania with a gift of $1500 and M. C. Wetmore of St. Louis, who gave $1100 to the fund, compose a complete list of all contributions of more than $1000. There were a comparatively large number of $1000 contributions, among them one from former National Chairman Thomas Taggart. Among the other contributors of $1000 were Melbert D. Cary and Archibald McNeill of Connecticut.

The contributions from Cary and McNeill are the only recorded contributions from Connecticut, no other of $100 or more having been received from that state. From Kentucky, Iowa and Kansas came no gifts of over $100. From Maine and Maryland there came only a single contribution of $100 each. With the exception of Bryan's large contribution, Nebraska shows only one gift in excess of $100. Georgia is represented on the list by a single contribution, that of Governor Smith, of $200. The name of former Treasurer Haskell of the national committee does not appear in the long list of contributions from Oklahoma.

Five Days' Subscriptions

Chicago, Oct. 16.—National Chairman Mack last night made public the sums of $100 and over which were received on Oct. 10, 11, 12, 13 and 14, which amount to $12,566, from seventy contributors to the Democratic national campaign fund. These contributions were received by the committee after the first list, which was announced in New York, was closed on Oct. 9.

Republicans Not Disturbed

New York, Oct. 16.—The publication of the names of the contributors to the Democratic campaign fund created no perceptible commotion at Republican headquarters. Chairman Hitchcock said that for the past two days he had been very much interested in the finances of his own committee, so that he had had little time to devote to the financial affairs of any other committee.

Confident of Carrying Nebraska

Plattsmouth, Neb., Oct. 16.—William J. Bryan closed his three days' speaking tour of his home state with a large meeting in this city and said that he felt that Nebraska could be safely counted in the Democratic column this year by a larger mapority than he received in 1896.

A large portion of the day was spent in his old congressional district, and the enthusiasm which has prevailed in his tour of the state was intensified by the fact that the people in this district gave him his first political distinction.

Speaking began early in the morning and continued throughout the day. More than twenty stops were made, and at each place Bryan talked longer than he had been scheduled to speak.

His addresses were more aggressive than they have been during the week. At Tecumseh he was vehement in his denunciation, among other things, saying of Mr. Cannon:

"It used to said of a noted criminal lawyer that a burglar never entered a house to commit burglary without first making inquiry as to the health of this lawyer, and no man in congress who plans a raid against the American people does so without first getting a promise of recognition from Mr. Cannon, the speaker of the house. He is backed by every predatory corporation in this country."

Something New For Kentuckey

Louisville, Oct. 16.—Acting on his declaration "that the south is a part of the Union, and as such is entitled to be considered in the presidential campaign," William H. Taft spent a day speaking in the towns and cities of Kentucky.

He is the first Republican presidential candidate to campaign in the Blue Grass state, and he will be the first Republican presidential candidate to carry his campaign into Tennessee, North Carolina and Virginia, which he proposes to visit. His reception has proved one of proverbial southern hospitality. The crowds which greeted him at the dozen places in which he spoke were large and evinced ever a phase of political enthusiasm. The attention he received while expounding Republican doctrines was such as to indicate more than passing interest. Evidently impressed by his cordial reception, the canddate made many references to it during the day.

For the second time since his work on the stump began, Taft made reference to the government guaranty of bank deposits, which Mr. Bryan is engaged in urging in the west.

Big Rally In Tammany Hall

New York, Oct. 16.—An old-fashioned Democratic rally and ratification meeting was held in Tammany Hall last night, with John W. Kern, nominee for vice president, and Lewis S. Chanler, nominee for governor, as the principal speakers. Fourteenth street was blocked throughout the evening with hundreds who were unable to gain admission to the hall and four overflow meetings were held. Both Kern and Chanler were given a real Tammany welcome and throughout their brief addresses were constantly interrupted by applause and cheering.

The name of Governor Hughes was greeted with groans and hisses. Criticism of the administration of President Roosevelt and charges that he dictated both the nomination of Taft and Hughes were caught up by the crowd and cheered to the echo. Eulogies of Bryan, delivered by all the speakers of the evening, also called out prolonged demonstrations.

Sentiment of Negro Editors

Pittsburg, Oct. 16.—The Eastern and Interstate Negro Press convention, being held here this week, has brought to this city over 100 leading negro editors and writers of the eastern, middle and southern states. In a declaration of principles and a set of resolutions adopted yesterday, Senator Foraker and Governor Deneen of Illinois are lauded, while the administration of President Roosevelt and the attitude of William H. Taft are censured.

Students Poisoned by Food

Lancaster, Mass., Oct. 16.—With physicians from both Lancaster and Clinton working over them, some fifteen students at the South Lancaster academy, conducted by the Adventists, hovered all night twixt life and death from the effects of ptomaine poisoning. Canned corn used in the preparation of soup which was served in the dining room connected with the academy was the cause of the trouble which laid many low.

Novel Request In Will

Boston, Oct. 16.—That the executors of his will shall burn all the pictures of his late wife, in accordance with her expressed desire during life that such should be burned on the death of her husband, is the novel request which appears in the will of Richard Sullivan, filed in the Suffolk probate court. The estate left amounts to $120,000 and is left in annuities to relatives.

Probably Mistaken For a Deer

Bethel, Me., Oct. 16.—Herbert W. Cummings of this town, who was on a hunting trip, was found dead in the woods half a mile from his camp near Lake Parmachene by a man named Hart, who was on his way home from a shooting trip. Cummings had been shot through the body, and it is supposed that he was mistaken for a deer by a hunter.

La France
SHOE for WOMEN

You naturally want a shoe that is not only a source of the highest admiration when you see it in the store and try it on, but one that you can wear a long time and still be proud of.

La France shoes fulfill this requirement as no other shoes can. They fit comfortably and look well because they are glove-like in construction—that is to say, the inside of the shoes is so made as to present no rough edges or ridges to hurt the feet and make the outside of the shoes irregular and unattractive.

This is a very important point and one which, combined with the beautiful materials and dainty, shapely lines found in this shoe, produce a result of which any woman in the land may be proud. ¶Won't you come in and see for yourself the first time you have a chance?

If the very top notch of comfort is any object to you, ask to see the La France Flexible Welt shoe—a shoe with a leather sole so elastic that it yields instantly to pressure, giving a really remarkable degree of elasticity and comfort to the foot.

AMUSEMENTS.

Keith's Theatre.

The week of October 19th will be memorable by the first vaudeville appearance of Annette Kellerman, the woman championship swimmer of the world, who promises to be a sbig a feature in this new line of work as she has ever been with her remarkable swimming exhibitions. Miss Kellerman is nothing ,if not versatile, and at Keith's theatre she will not only give exhibitions or swimming in an enormous tank, but also dancing and diabolo, in the latter of which she holds the championship, which she won in Paris last winter. It will be the principal feature of another one of those remarkable bills that are attracting so much attention to Keith's of late. It will include also a dramatic sketch by Margaret Wycherly and Company, called "The Open Door," and it is said to be one of the most intensely dramatic pieces that has been offered in years. Miss Wycherly is well known as one of the best leading women in the country, and was a co-star with Arnold Daly in eNw York the greater part of last season. The Czarina's Guards is also another new act, put on by a large company amid the most picturesque stage settings. Also on the bill will be San Curtis and Company in one of his characteristic comedy sketches, Fred Watson and the Morrissey Sisters ,the Bessie Valdare Troupe, Ed Morton and the special show of pictures, singers, etc.

Boston Theatre.

Many changes have taken place in the Boston theatre, both in the house and on the stage, and that they are attracting widespread attention and the approval of the amusement going public, is evidenced by the large attendance both afternoon and evening. Such attractions as "If I Were King, and "Salomy Jane," have been presented in a manner that would leave no doubt as to the intentions of Mr. Keith in regard to the present season. Next week, another production, entirely in keeping with his plans, will be Robert Marshall's play, "A Royal Family." This is one of the most recent successes, and in it Miss Annie Russell had a most prosperous season. The present production will be given with all the original stage settings, and the piece is one in which all the members of the Boston Theatre Stock Company will be seen to great advantage. Wilson Melroes, Eleanor Gordon and Dudley Hawley have been added to the company. These three with all the favorites of last season are making the stock company one of the recognized institutions of Boston.

Colonial Theatre.

Adeline Genee, the famous dancer from the Empire theatre, London, who has created sensations whereever she has appeared, is to be seen in Boston for the first time at the Colonial theatre, commencing Monday, October 19, in F. Ziegfeld, Jr's. musical entertainment "The Soul Kiss." The piece which is in two acts and ten scenes enjoyed a phenominal run of twenty weeks in New York last winter. It is the work of Harry B. Smith and Maurice Levi, and unlike most musical comedy offerings carries a very interesting plot, which deals with the efforts of a French sculptor to find a kiss that shall be different from all others and shall come from the soul. He is assisted in his search for the maid who possesses this rare kiss by J. Lucifer Nephisto, a thoroughly up-to-date devil who has wagered a million dollars on the outcome. Mlle. Genee, is conspicuous throughout the entire performance, during which she will present four of the most popular divertissements of her repertoire which will include "The Hunt dance," "Sir Roger de Coverly" "The Soul Kiss" dance and "The Money Ballet." Genee, who through her beauty, charm and incomparable talent, has captured both world's, made her American debut in New York last winter and instantly duplicated the success she earned on the other side of the Atlantic. Genee's engagement in Boston will be of four week's duration only, and she will not be seen in any other New England city this season.

Orpheum Theatre.

There are at least five star acts in the Orpheum bill for the week beginning October 19, and the number of novelties is very large even for a vaudeville house. First on the list are the Four Mortons in their only vaudeville appearance this season. They bring their great farce "Breaking Into Society." Alex Carr and his company, for the first time in vaudeville present what has been termed the greatest sketch on the stage, "Toblitzky" or "The End of the World." This sketch was played by him all last season in New York City. The last but not the least of the Lloyds ,those extraordinary popular English Girls, comes to Boston in the person of Daisy Lloyd, the dainty singer of dainty songs. She can give her other sisters a long handicap in the race for popularity, and beat them by three lengths at the finish. The Australian foresters with an act that is very much out of the ordinary remain for a second week. It is also the last week of McMahon's Watermelon Girls, a very attractive musical number. The famous French fun-maker, Torcat and Mlle. Alisa are also on the bill with a novelty number.

Park Theatre.

"The Thief" at the Park. There are several things at the Boston theatres these autum nights that are well worth seeing, but whatever else you miss don't miss "The Thief." Now don't go away with the idea that "The Thief" is risque whatever that may mean, but I know it's the right thing to say when you are talking about a French play. But this isn't that kind of a French play. There isn't anything suggestive about it. Any young girl can take her mother to see it and ought to. And every wife ought to take her husband to see it, too. Arthur Brisbane said it was a play specially meant for husbands and wives, with a lesson for both.

EDITORIAL.

The Point church did nobly in the observance of Col. Anderson's anniversary of 50 years in the Gospel ministry. The service of Sunday at which he preached, and the reunion of his former parishoners on Tuesday evening, brightened the ever happy disposition of the colonel, and added ten years to his yet youthful life. The incident was spoken of by many of the Boston and neighboring papers.

Although it was the night of the annual meeting and members had been notified that reports on changes of the City Charter were to come up, but twenty members of the Citizens' Association, out of a total membership of 150, were present this week. This would seem to indicate that there is no wide-spread feeling that the charter should be changed.

In all the arguments made up to the present time, no one has told why the charter should be changed. The only thing they say is that it should be changed.

Taken as a whole the charter is all right. The trouble, if any, is with the people.

What is needed is business men in the City Council. If these same business men who devote so much time and energy to advocating a new charter would accept the office of councilman, and exercise the same methods there as they do in their own private business, the charter would be found to be all right.

A year ago the Citizens' Association had much to say about the personnel of the City Council, and even went so far as to have a committee confer with the two leading parties in their effects to have good men named for the Council. Yet when these same men were told that they should become candidates, they said NO.

Just so long as business men of standing refuse to take a hand in administering the affairs of the city just so long will there be complaint of the make up of the City Council, and effort on the part of certain people to cry down the city charter and criticise the doings of the City Council.

Boys' Campaign And Election

Every fellow in Quincy between thirteen and eighteen years of age may take part in this great campaign at the Y. M. C. A. Prominent men have been secured to speak. The object of the campaign and election is to instruct the boys in the great subject of civil government. The campaign will consist of three rallies, two registration days and an election day. The rallies will be held on Oct. 22, Oct. 27, and Oct. 29. The registration days will be Oct. 29 and 30. Election day will be Oct. 31.

A boy must attend two of the three rallies in order to become a voter. Register on registration day and then vote for president, Vice President, Governor and Lieutenant Governor.

At the first rally Oct. 22, Mayor W. T. Shea will preside. Leslie L. Cleveland principal of Quincy High school will speak. Further particulars will be given at first rally. Some entertainment will be provided each night. Every fellow in Quincy is invited. Come one, come all.

SCHOOL QUESTION

Discussed by Supt. Parlin At Meeting Of Mothers

The attendance at the mothers' meeting held at the High school hall Thursday afternoon, was very small, but those who came heard a very interesting and instructive talk by Frank E. Parlin, superintendent of schools.

Promptly at 2.30, Supt. Parlin stepped to the platform and said he would speak to those who were present, although he very sorry to see so few in the hall. In his talk on general education, the first point that Mr. Parlin took up, was the new savings bank system that has recently been organized in the schools, a system which is proving to be very successful. There have been two collections thus far, with 1800 depositors, and from these 1800, $800 has been collected. This shows the interest children and parents are taking in the plan. Mr. Parlin thanked the Woman's Club for their interest and said they were instrumental in bringing the plan about.

Supt. Parlin then branched onto education itself and proceeded to give a thorough and scientific explanation of education, which he said was a science, just like medicine. Physical development of the child is the basis of education, and until the muscles of the child are developed, the intellect cannot be developed. Mr. Parlin believes with Donaldson, the great educator, that "Education is the modification of the central nervous system." He then explained and illustrated by concrete examples, the development and workings of the nervous system, brain and muscles of a child and the order of their development.

The next point in his talk was the new plan started in the schools, of a systematic course of play under an efficient instructor. This plan Mr. Parlin believes to be the only thing to properly develop the muscles of the child and prepare him for future intellectual development. He said that in a short time there would be in the schools a course of play as carefully graded, developed and supervised as music. Then he said "we will have children growing up to be men and women who can do things, who are a credit to themselves and their parents." Prof. Tyler, the noted and recognized authority in biology, says in regard to this plan of play, "now we take care of the book work in the schools, and leave the muscular development to be taken care of at home. I would advise the opposite and recommend one hour a day of solid, concentrated work in school, and the rest in good wholesome play."

Half-time in the schools was also a subject for discussion, and reasons were given to show why this is the only correct way of sending small children to school. Mr. Parlin is heart and soul in this plan, which though new to Quincy, is in reality an old system. In Germany it is in vogue all over the country and every school has a playground and gymnasium connected.

The superintendent then pleaded for the co-operation of the parents and all the citizens, whether they had children in the schools or not, and announced that he would probably give five or six lectures on this same subject, hoping thus to get a goodly number interested.

JUNIOR C. E.

The Junior C. E. society connected with the Point church, meets every Friday afternoon in the vestry of the church at 3.45. About seventy members are now enrolled in this Junior organization with the following officers: Superintendent of Instruction, Helen Sherburne: Assistant, Annie Carter; President, Charles Momn; 1st Vice President, Mabel Gardner; 2d Vice President, Muriel Sewell; Treasurer, Frederick Roache; Assistant Treasurer, Frances Ward; Secretary, Jennie Gibb; Assistant Secretary, Effie Waddell.

SUPERIOR COURT.

At the sueprior court in Dedham on Thursday, a verdict for the defendant was returned in the case of Charles Avitable against the Old Colony street railway for $5,000 damage for personal injuries by his team being run down in Quincy in 1903.

The case of John E. Keniley against Mary Harkins, to recover the price of plumber's bill of $169.04 is on trial.

Birthday Party For Business Man

Thomas G. Smith, sometimes known as "Slide," had a birthday party this week. It was on Thursday evening. Forty three was the number of years the family Bible said he had been on earth. Surrounded by his wife and family he was quietly spending the evening at his new home on Washington street. About 8.30 there came a loud knock at the door, which on being opened disclosed a large party of his friends from the Granite City club, who had called to see that he celebrated the event in a fitting manner.

Half an hour later, there came another knock at the door. This time it was to admit Goodman's orchestra. Still later, a third knock, admitted the Mayor and a body guard of newspaper men.

From then on there was something doing. President Tilden repeated that often told story of the squash that grew and grew. William R. Thomas, who expects to be doing business next winter under the gilded dome of the State House, was just as noisy as usual, using some of the talk left over from the campaign.

There were others who talked in an interesting way, but as they all wanted to talk at the same time the points they wished to make were lost in the smoky air.

Then there was a little singing; Sandy, the boy wonder, sang "Smarty," and Rideout sang, "When I was a footman." While all this was in progress Henry P. Furnald was busy in the kitchen getting the supper ready. This included potato and chicken salads, escalloped oysters, cold ham, rolls, coffee, cake and ice cream.

After this came much more talk and music, all serving to make the hour of midnight come all too soon. Then the parting came.

Tom was a very much surprised man when he opened the door and saw what was before him, and said half an hour later they would have found him in bed.

The gifts were numerous. One gave him a handful of confetti, another a box of cigarettes, and still a third a tag by which he could be shipped home when he remained at the club too late. Everybody said they had a good time, and there is no doubt but what they did.

Senator Lodge In Quincy Tonight

If half of the speakers advertised for the grand Republican rally tonight at Music hall appear, it will be a rousing and enthusiastic meeting. The city committee have been extremely fortunate in getting some of the best speakers in the State,, and a rare opportunity is afforded Quincy people to hear them.

Such men as Senator Henry Cabot Lodge, J. Mitchell Galvin, the candidate for congressman from the Tenth district, and Congressman John W. Weeks are thoroughly informed on the paramount issues of the day, and will present them in a way that will make them thoroughly understood.

In addition to these it is possible that Eben S. Draper and Louis Frothingham, Republican candidates for Governor and Lieutenant Governor may be present and address the audience.

Ladies are especially invited and seats will be reserved for them. Music by City Band. Brooks Adams Esq., will preside.

MILTON

The registrars of Voters met Wednesday evening and added 23 names to the voting lists.

The Milton post office has had one carrier added to its force of clerks, and a new delivery of mail in the village section has been added.

The Thursday Evening club held an enjoyable whist party Thursday evening.

The ladies of the guild of the Mission of Our Saviour church are arranging for a Halloween party to be held at Ellsworth hall, Oct. 30.

Some needed repairs are being made to the East Milton depot and it is receiving a fresh coat of paint. The time is drawing near when that freight car which is doing duty as a freight house, is to be moved to a site nearer the Quincy line.

W. H. Rand and niece, Miss E. F. Frye, have returned from Cottage City where they have been passing the summer.

Warren Bros. have commenced building the granolithic walk on Adams street between Squantum street and the railroad crossing at East Milton.

Brief Locals Of a Busy City

Charles Treadway and family moved into their new house on Tyler street Thursday.

H. G. Fay evidently does not believe in a change, for he is wearing his straw hat today.

Faxon road is under the cleaning process and has already assumed a neat and well kept appearance.

Several Atlantic young women are to enter the millinery class opened in connection with the Quincy Woman's club.

The new modern front of the building of Mrs. Wheeler's store in City Square is a great improvement to the building and to City Square.

Gen. Hazard Stevens of Dorchester filed nomination papers Thursday containing 784 names. His designation is "Free trader candidate for Congressman in the tenth district."

Some unusual large catches of smelts are being made in Quincy waters. Thursday morning Dr. Jones and party hooked 68 dozen very large and handsome smelts off Adams shore.

The many friends of Rev. W. B. Barr, formerly pastor of the United Presbyterian church, now located at Central Falls, R. I., will be glad to lear nthat his children who have been ill with scarlet fever are improving.

A well known Quincy young man, rather small for his age, applied for a marriage license Thursday, and was very much surprised when told he should get a certificate from his parents that he was big enough to get married. Just then his brother, the Commissioner, appeared and said it would be all right.

George Carter, formerly of Quincy Point arrived in Iowa this week. He has been studying for th e ministry and with his wife, has gone West to their first pastorate. The wishes of their many friends, will go with them and hope for a long and successful career in their high and honored calling.

The three beautiful setter dogs owned by Mrs. Talbot of Edwin street have taken countless blue ribbons. This year at the dog show, they captured first prizes. Mrs. Talbot's mother, Mrs. Foretier, and her sisters, the Misses Jane and Elsie Foretier, who have been living on Edwin street, are soon to move to Brookline.

The first dancing party ever held in the QUINCY WOMAN'S CLUB-HOUSE, for children of members and their friends, will take place Saturday afternoon, Oct. 17, under the auspices of the Hospitality committee, Mrs. Eben W. Shephard chairman. A good time is assured. Tickets may be obtained from any member of the committee or at the door.

The erection of flats on Sagamore street will make that section less deserted for those arriving home after dark. This particular locality has been the object of much fright owing to its extreme loneliness between Sagamore block and Patrick Barry's house. However, the influx of real estate has brightened the prospect of future traverse.

The boys' gymnasium conducted on Wednesday evenings in the vestry of the Point church, is a welcomed blessing to the young men and boys of Wards One and Two. It is under the general management of the Fresh Air Camp Association and the instructor comes from the Y. M. C. A. The Ledger correspondent recently heard the Point pastor, Mr. Atwood say, "the curing of spinal curvature is a part of the creating of christian character" and this gymnasium is to do both. The gymnasium is free and any one may join, "regardless of creed or color."

CHORAL SOCIETY.

All persons in Quincy and neighboring centres interested to associate themselves as members of a choral organization conducted by Arthur S. Monson, are cordially invited to attend a meeting at Colonial hall, Quincy, Tuesday evening, October 20, at eight o'clock.

The committee interested are as follows: Hon. and Mrs. Albert E. Avery, Mrs. F. W. Austin, Miss Nellie C. Bolles, Mr. E. E. Bullock, Miss Bertha J. Carlson, Mr. and Mrs. T. H. Emerson, Mr. Joseph Barraja Frauenfelder, Mr. Fjelbeck, Mrs. A. L. Goodrich, Mr. Charles L. Greene, Mr. Albert L. Hayden, Mr. Roland Hughes, Dr. E. R. Johnson, Mr. Wendall H. Luce, Mrs. E. S. Moore, Miss Florence G. Olney, Mrs. E. C. Page, Mr. T. B. Pollard, Dr. D. B. Reardon, Dr. and Mrs. George H. Ryder, Miss C. Follett Spear, Mr. and Mrs. Henry W. Tirrell Mrs. C. P. Whittle.

Home Furnishings At Lowest Prices.

It pays to be posted on furniture prices. It pays to look around. Much money is saved by furniture buyers when they make comparison of prices. It costs money to operate a high priced city store and big money too. Now who pays for all these high priced rents, high cost advertisements and enormous operating expenses. Why, it's the dear buying public. You help to keep these high priced plants in operation when you Pay their Prices. It's a fact that prices on furniture are lower in Quincy than they are in Boston. There's nothing strange about it. It costs less to do business, and when you trade here you get the benefit. Whatever you need this fall we urge you to get our Prices before you buy.

Dr. T. H. Dearing Passes Away

Dr. T. Haven Dearing passed away Thursday afternoon, Oct. 15, at his home 469 Washington street, Braintree. Had he lived until the twenty-fifth of this month he would have been eighty-three years old. Through his illness of the past two months he was tenderly cared for. He was born in Kittery, Maine, son of Capt. Roger Dearing and his wife, Lucinda (Boston,) both of Maine. His father was of English descent, and for many years a sea captain, afterwards carrying on commercial pursuits at Kittery and at Portsmouth.

Dr. Dearing received his early education in the common schools of Kittery, in different New England academies, and continued it under special tutors and in special college courses. He began the study of medicine and subsequently studied at the best colleges of New York, Philadelphia and Boston, and visited the principal hospitals of Europe, was assistant surgeon of Boston regiment, A. S., U. S. A., in the Civil war.

He first settled in Boston, was professor of surgery and dermatology in the College of Physicians and Surgeons and for nearly six years was dean of the college.

Since May, 1863, Dr. Dearing has been a resident physician of Braintree, controlled a large local practice, with a firmly established reputation as physician and surgeon. He was president of the South Norfolk Medical Society, a member of the Massachusetts Medical Society, the American Medical Association, ex-vice president of the Massachusetts Medical Society, and member of the Harvard Medical Alumni Association.

While a resident of Boston he was placed upon the school board of that city, has since been for many years a member of the Braintree board and for five years its chairman. In 1889 he was elected representative to the House. He has always been associated with the republican party and was a member of the Norfolk Republican Club of Boston.

He married Mary J. Jenkins, daughter of the late Deacon Solon Jenkins, of Boston, by whom he had four children: Mary J., wife of C. A. Belcher, H. Flora, deceased; Frank H., and Dr. Henry L., Dearing. His pres- (second) wife, Helen A., is the daughter of J. W. Nevers, engineer, of Charlestown, Mass.

Dr. Dearing was a member of the First Congregational church. He was well known in musical circles, being a member of the Union Musical Choral Society of Braintree and its president for three years, also identified with the Stoughton Musical Cociety, the oldest musical society in the county and one of the largest, of which he has been president. He was for many years the chorister of the Congregational church, identified with the Masonic order and with the Knights of Honor, a member of the Boston and Braintree Pine Tree Clubs, and president of the latter organization.

He has always been a strong advocate of temperance and upon appropriate occasions has delivered lectures on this subject, thus gaining added reputation in the vicinity.

The funeral service will be held in the First Congregational church, Sunday afternoon at two o'clock.

EDWARD S. BELL.

The friends of Edward S. Bell will be shocked and grieved to learn of his death in California, after a heroic fight against the dread disease consumption. Mr. Bell was for several month in the employ of L. A. Chapin as book keeper, during which time he roomed at the Y. M. C. A., entering into its varied activities with much enthusiasm and ability. When he left Quincy two years ago, on account of his health he bore the well wishes of many friends.

—The sale of the Milford pink granite quarrie company to Alexander M. White was confined Thursday by Judge Lowell of the United States circuit court. The price paid was $200,000.

Norfolk County And Vicinity

The Ladies' Library association of RANDOLPH met Tuesday with Mrs. Fred M. French of North Main street. The association journal was the topic under discussion.

A passenger train locomotive from Pemberton was derailed at Windmill Point, HULL, on Thursday night. No one was injured, but much inconvenience and delay was caused, as many people were forced to take carriages to their homes.

NORWOOD'S chief of police, Fred S. Sackett, is being sued by Theodore C. Foster of Providence, who claims he was unjustly held up and detained against his will by the chief. Mr. Foster has entered a suit for $10,000. On a similar charge, Officer Walter Readel is being sued for $5,000 by Walworth Pierce of Boston.

The funeral of Bernard Dolan of AVON was held Wednesday morning from his late home and was largely attended. Mr. Dolan was father of the Chairman of the board of selectmen, and was a former representative in the State legislature. Mr. Dolan's nephews and grandsons were the pall bearers.

The Ladies' sewing circle connected with the First Baptist church of RANDOLPH held its meeting Wednesday afternoon. At 6 o'clock supper was served and an entertainment followed.

A meeting of the Republican club of STOUGHTON was held Wednesday evening in Monk's block. Arrangements were perfected for a rally to be held in the Town Hall on Saturday evening.

An inquest will be held in the Brookline municipal court on Monday morning concerning the vote in the last Republican caucus, Sept. 22, when it is claimed, 23 Democrats voted. The district attorney will probably conduct the case and if the judge finds sufficient cause, he will refer the case to the grand jury at Dedham.

Tonight in Odd Fellows' hall, STOUGHTON, Perseverance lodge, I. O. O. F., will give an informal reception to their deputy, eGrtrude Reidel and suite, of Hyde Park.

Deaths in two families in AVON caused the postponement of the whist party to have held Tuesday evening under the auspices of the Ladies' Sanctuary society of St. Michael's church.

The annual garden party of the Methodist church, HOLBROOK, was held in the Town hall Wednesday evening, and the attendance filled the hall. hTe hall was decorated with red, white and blue streamers, and booths were arranged about the hall, with all kinds of articles for sale. The centre of the hall was cleared about 5.30 and a very pleasing tntertainment was given.

BALLOT BOXES WERE SMASHED

Biotous Italians Interrupt Settlement of Lynn Strike

CIRCULATION OF FALSE STORIES

Books of Recording Secretaries of Unions Produced to Disprove Charge of "Stuffed" Ballots--Anarchistic Element Opposition Creates Comment--English Speaking Lasters Alone Appear Satisfied

Lynn, Mass., Oct. 16.—Under the protection of the entire police force of this city, the union lasters voted last night to declare off the strike which for nearly two weeks has practically paralyzed the shoe manufacturing industry in this city, the largest shoe centre in the world. The result of the vote was 846 in favor of calling off the strike, 483 against, with nine blank ballots.

The balloting was attended by the most tumultuous scenes that have ever been witnessed at any labor meeting in the history of the city. Early in the day a group of Italian malcontents rushed the room in which the voting was being done and smashed several of the ballot boxes. The men were subdued by the police, but continued riotous disturbances outside of the hall throughout the day and evening. Andrews street, in the vicinity of Lasters' hall, was packed with shoe workers and their friends, and the entire police force of the city was kept busy quelling the small disturbances.

It was past 9 o'clock last night when the balloting was finished. On the committee in charge of the balloting were eight of the dissenting element, who made yesterday's voting necessary, they being appointed on the committee to assure their followers that the procedure would be conducted in a legitimate manner. When the vote was announced last night, showing 1338 votes cast, these men refused to believe that there were that many members of the Lasters' and Lasting Machine Operators' unions, but they were finally convinced when shown the recording secretaries' books, showing an enrollment of 1797 members, with from 300 to 400 members recently admitted to the unions who had not as yet been recorded. This announcement was a surprise to all, as it was not believed by any that that there were that number of lasters in Lynn.

The large discrepancy between the total number of votes cast and the number of members is accounted for by the fact that a great number of the men were under the impression that the strike had been formally declared off by the executive boards of the unions yesterday afternoon, that statement having been published by a local newspaper, which afterwards, discovering its error, called in all the papers it could and got out another edition with a contradictory statement.

The strength of the opposing forces created considerable comment here, as it was not believed they would be able to make such a showing. The anarchistic element, however, was busy from the time the balloting began until the last vote was cast, circulating stories tending to give the men the impression that the executive boards of the unions had "sold out" to the manufacturers, or that the manufacturers would not take the men back after they had voted the strike off.

The announcement that the strike was formally declared off, and that the men were to return to work in the factories which they left on Oct. 2, was made from the windows of the hall to the multitude on the street. It was first given in Italian, and was met by a storm of hisses and cat-calls. Then the Poles were notified, bringing out mingled cheers and hisses. The English-speaking lasters were next given the result, and a rousing cheer went up. The six other nationalities represented were all told the result of the vote in their own languages, and all seemed to be in sympathy with the outcome.

The understanding is now that, so far as possible, the strikers will all be taken back to work as soon as the manufacturers can make ready for them. Work is not expected to be very brisk for awhile, as it will take those manufacturers who have been completely closed down since the inauguration of the strike some time to get their plants in running order. Then again, the strike has been the cause of a wholesale cancellation of orders, and many manufacturers who had expected to have a large quantity of orders at this season find themselves with hardly enough orders ahead to keep all departments running, and with a lot of half completed goods on their hands which have been cancelled.

Perjury Charge Against Orton

Hartford, Oct. 16.—John J. Orton was arrested here on a charge of perjury, on complaint of the Plainfield, N. J., police. Orton, it is said, after a twelve years' pursuit, recently had Albert U. Martin arrested in Plainfield on a charge of embezzling twelve shares of Western Union stock.

Boston, Oct. 16.—The Christian Science Sentinel, in this week's number, announces the establishment by the Christian Science Publishing society of a new daily paper, to be known as the Christian Science Monitor.

QUINCY MUSIC HALL.

The Location is the best of any hall in the city. The street cars pass the door

The Elaborate, Permanent Decorations which have just been put up are most attractive, and add much to the appearance of the Hall.

The Electric Light Festoon over the entrance way, flashing first red, then white, is a unique feature of much value.

The Moonlight Effect obtained by having the electric light come through Japanese lanterns is a pleasing innovation.

The Floor is of selected maple laid with the greatest care, and is kept in perfect condition, being covered with canvas when not used for dancing.

The Ventilation—a most important consideration—is such as to keep the air pure with even a crowded Hall,

The Hall is Lighted by electricity, brilliantly and pleasantly, and with a switchboard arranged so that all desired effects can be obtained in the Hall proper or on the stage. Gas is used as an auxiliary light.

The Heating is direct—indirect, ample, and giving the most healthful results.

The Stage has been designed with care, and is furnished with a particularly generous supply of attractive and appropriate scenery.

For Advertising, the Music Hall Billboards are valuable.

To Darken the Hall, there are special window fittings so that at noonday the Hall can be made as dark as at midnight.

In case of fire there are pails of water and chemical fire extinguishers throughout the Hall. There is an asbestos fire curtain by which the Stage can be instantly cut off from the Hall proper. There are ten (10) doors opening from the Hall and six (6) separate exits.

As a whole, Quincy Music Hall has been carefully planned to meet the requirements of those who wish a large and really first class Hall.

Pertinent Points About Our Election Machinery For New Voters and Old

THE SOCIALISTIC PARTIES.

Are persons holding Socialistic views represented by a national political party?

They are represented by two parties, the Socialist and the Socialist Labor.

For what does the Socialist party stand?

In its platform for 1904 the party said: "Socialism means that all those things upon which the people in common depend shall by the people in common be owned and administered. It means that the tools of employment shall belong to their creators and users; that all production shall be for the direct use of the producers; that the making of goods for profit shall come to an end; that we shall all be workers together, and that all opportunities shall be open and equal to all men." The Socialist party stands for shorter working hours, higher wages, graduated income and inheritance tax, public ownership of public utilities, complete education of children and their freedom from toil, "and for every gain or advantage for the workers that may be wrested from the capitalist system and that may relieve the suffering and strengthen the hands of labor."

Who was the first Socialist candidate for president?

Eugene V. Debs of Indiana, who in 1904 received 402,283 votes. In 1900 Mr. Debs ran on what was called the Social Democratic ticket, receiving 87,814 votes.

When did the Socialist Labor party first appear in national politics?

In 1892, when Simon Wing was nominated for president, receiving 21,164 votes. The Socialist Labor party has not grown appreciably. In 1899 a large majority of its members seceded, uniting with the Social Democracy founded by Debs and thus forming the straight-out Socialist party.

Words to the Wise

By GERTRUDE LEWIS.

Copyrighted, 1908, by Associated Literary Press.

To begin with, Mrs. Mook was not even Ben Melville's mother-in-law. She was his stepmother-in-law, and Letty disliked her as much as her husband did.

They had welcomed the change in Ben's business affairs which required his removal to California, and as they boarded the train that was to take them on the first stage of their journey Letty breathed a little sigh of relief.

"I suppose it's wicked," she said softly, "but I wish we were going to China or Japan."

"What's the use?" asked Ben, with a laugh. "She would follow us out there. The last thing she said was that if you grew homesick to wire a ticket and she would come out at once."

Letty sat up very straight in her seat.

"Ben Melville," she warned impressively, "if you ever dare send such a message I'll never speak to you again."

"I won't," he promised teasingly, "unless you need punishment."

Thereafter impending quarrels were checked when Ben irrelevantly inquired if there was a telegraph blank handy. The threatened trouble always ended in a laugh.

The first six months of California life seemed like a dream, so different was everything from what it had been in the east. A flower garden that bloomed the year round was new to the little New England girl, and Wah Ling, once his oriental makeup was mastered, was like a gift of the gods. After a quick succession of raw immigrants of all nationalities the Chinaman was a revelation.

Silent footed, competent and scrupulously neat, Wah Ling was a great relief to the little housekeeper, and Melville declared his home to be a paradise with a thirty dollar a month angel in charge.

Then the blow fell. Letty met her husband at the door of their little home with an expression on her face that filled him with alarm.

"What's wrong, little woman?" he asked anxiously. "Is is bad, dear?"

"It couldn't be worse," she sobbed as he gathered her into his arms. "Mrs. Mook's coming."

"Wire her not to," he said sharply. "I know that she's your stepmother, darling, but that doesn't entitle her to come out here and make life miserable. I should not think that she would want to. You don't even call her mother."

"She doesn't mind a little thing like that," sobbed Letty. "She writes that the doctor says that her lungs are weak and that six months in the mild California air is just what she needs. She's coming to stay with us because dad can't afford to send her out here and pay her board too."

"Wire her not to come," repeated Ben sternly. But Letty shook her head.

"We can't," she wailed. "She started the day after she mailed this, and she'll be here tomorrow."

"Then we'll have to make the best of it," said Ben, with the peculiar tightening of the lips that marked his displeasure. "Perhaps we may find some way of housing her elsewhere. Let's have dinner. The situation will look better after we have had something to eat."

But even Wah Ling's perfect cooking did not bring the customary sense of contentment, though he had done his best, because he had seen that his mistress was worried.

He moved about the dining room in his spotless white costume like some accomplished ghost and took a dislike to the new guest before he had seen her because she had made the mistress cry.

But his dislike became personal when he entered the dining room the following afternoon. Mrs. Mook had arrived only a half hour before, and she had not been apprised of the employment of a Chinese "boy."

"The person's in his night clothes!" she cried, eying Wah Ling's snowy garments with disfavor. "My dear Letty, your father wears those things to sleep in."

"It is the native costume," explained Letty. "It is very cool and comfortable."

"It's indecent," commented Mrs. Mook, and Wah Ling scowled.

A melancholy trio sat on the piazza that evening in the soft dusk, heavy with the scent of flowers. Mrs. Mook found fault with everything and announced that on the morrow she would readjust the household affairs.

Letty sought to make reply, but a warning pressure on her arm caused her to remain silent, and not until Mrs. Mook announced herself ready for bed was the riddle explained.

Immediately after breakfast Mrs. Mook announced that the process of reform would start in the kitchen. Mrs. Melville drew back.

"You mustn't go in there!" she cried. "Tell Wah Ling what you want done, and he will do it perfectly, but the Chinese boys will not stand for any supervision."

"That's all nonsense," declared Mrs. Mook militantly. "He can ride rough shod over you, but he'll find he has some one else to deal with now."

With majestic mien she strode into the immaculate kitchen. Wah Ling looked up inquiringly from the chicken he was disjointing with a hatchet Mrs. Mook gave a cry of disapproval.

"You mustn't do it that way," she commanded.

"Was malla?" asked Wah.

"Get a knife," commanded Mrs. Mook. "That is the proper way."

"Velly good way," commented Wah serenely as he severed a wing from the body.

"Do as I tell you, you impertinent heathen!" cried the exasperated Mrs. Mook. "I am going to take charge of this kitchen, and things must be done as a Christian does them. Mrs. Melville has been too easy with you. You will find that I am not so easily imposed upon. Get a knife and cut the chicken with that."

Wah dropped the chicken, and with a docility that brought a smile of triumph to Mrs. Mook's face he trotted over to the cupboard and procured a knife with an eighteen inch blade.

"You get out here," he commanded as he brandished knife and hatchet. "You velly bad. You buttin."

With a whoop he started for her, and Mrs. Mook fled to the front porch, where Letty waited developments.

"Get a policeman! Call for help!" she panted. "That Chinaman has gone crazy."

"It's just his way," said Letty placidly. "All Chinamen are like that. They make splendid servants, but they will not stand interference in their work. You can tell them what you want done and how you wish it done, and you can count on its being done, but when you interfere— Wah nearly scared me to death the only time he chased me out of the kitchen. He had a knife and the fire shovel."

"He must be dismissed," said Mrs. Mook firmly.

"What's the use?" said Letty. "If he goes he will leave his mark somewhere. Then we never can get a boy at any price. Mrs. Morgan tried that. She let her boy go, and they had eleven in two days. They all knew where to look for the sign, and when they saw it they went."

"Either that heathen goes or I shall," said Mrs. Mook sternly.

"We can't let Wah Ling go," declared Letty with equal firmness. "I simply will not be without a servant."

Mrs. Mook paused to give her stepdaughter a chance to reconsider. As she stood there she caught sight of Wah Ling's face contorted with rage peering through the dining room door. He still held the carving knife, and, with a scornful sniff, Mrs. Mook turned and marched upstairs to pack her trunk.

Wah Ling departed cheerfully for the livery to order the carriage to take her to the resort down the road, and her last glimpse of the little redwood cottage showed Wah Ling performing a solemn dance on the porch, with a knife in one hand and a club in the other.

The best dinner Wah had ever cooked was spread on the table that evening when Ben came home from his work, and from the kitchen came the shrill notes of what Wah Ling was pleased to consider a song. Ben laughed as he took his place at the head of the table.

"I always said that Wah Ling was a jewel," he declared. "He is a pearl without price."

"I am a little afraid myself," confessed Letty. "He never was so violent when we had our trouble."

"No be flaid," counseled Wah, who had noiselessly entered. "Hear chinchin yess'day. 'Word to wise man plenty 'nough.' Savvy?"

"And you did it on purpose?" cried Letty reproachfully.

"You no like?" asked Wah in simulated surprise.

"It was very wrong," declared Ben as he drew a bill from his pocket and passed it to Wah. "But if she comes again we will speak more words for the wise."

"Me savvy," agreed Wah as he pocketed the bill.

To Polish Mahogany.

"If others are troubled as I have been," says a writer in Harper's Bazar, "with a blue gray appearance on the surface of any of their highly polished furniture they may feel perfectly safe in using the following:

"To about a quart of clear water add a tablespoonful of good strong vinegar. In the solution saturate a soft cheesecloth and wring out as dry as possible. With this rub lightly the surface to be cleaned and dry—always rubbing lightly—with a dry piece of cheesecloth.

"If afraid of this at first, you might experiment on a section of the furniture that does not show. The inside of the top lid of the piano might do if that is the article to be cleaned. In case of the first application not entirely removing the cloudy look repeat the operation in about a week and you will have the satisfaction of seeing your furniture look as fine as it did the day it left the factory."

A Phillips Brooks Story.

The spirit of love and kindliness to all which pervaded every word and deed of Bishop Phillips Brooks did not hinder his keen appreciation of others' failings and shortcomings or his own.

"Why in the world doesn't Brown write his autobiography and have it published?" said one of the bishop's friends, referring to an incessant talker and most egotistical man who had been wasting an hour of the bishop's most precious time by a rehearsal of some unimportant happenings.

"Why, he'd rather tell it, of course," said the bishop, and then like a flash came regret for the quickly spoken truth, and he turned on his friend with a half humorous, half distressed face. "What do you mean by asking me such a question as that when I'd off my guard?" he demanded reproachfully.

Lady Betty Across the Water

By C. N. & A. M. WILLIAMSON

Copyright, 1906, by McClure, Phillips & Co.

SYNOPSIS.

CHAPTER I—The story is told in the first person by Lady Betty Bulkeley, the pretty young sister of the Duke of Stanforth. She is to visit America in care of Mrs. Stuyvesant-Knox (Mrs. Ess Kay,) a leader of American society, and the latter's cousin, Miss Sally Woodburn, in order that her elder sister Victoria's prospective fiance, Sir Gilbert Mantell, may not be attracted by her.

II—On board ship Betty is attracted by a young American steerage passenger, who saves a child from drowning. Mrs. Ess Kay, who is very "exclusive," objects to Betty's interest in the young man. Betty also meets Tom Doremus, cousin of Mrs. Vander Windt, of New York society.

III—Lady Betty gets her first impression of America. On the dock she is rescued from reporters by the steerage hero, who tells her he is Jim Brett, employed at the Manhattan club, New York. In Mrs. Ess Kay's splendid New York home Betty meets Lieutenant Parker brother of the hostess, who is to take them to visit West Point.

While we were busy doing the dollars into pounds and shillings we got quite friendly, for she was a very obliging girl and didn't bear me any grudge for interrupting, though her friends were going on with their conversation and telling such exciting things about the young man that she must have been dying to listen.

However, my girl hardly paid any attention to them at all, except just to get mixed up in her answers to me once or twice. She said it was very difficult to understand English people on account of their not opening their mouths much when they spoke, and their accent being so strong. I found this odd, because we always feel as if, the English language having been started by us, it is Americans who have an accent, but it seems that a great many people in the States dislike the way we talk very much and consider it extremely affected.

After all the trouble she had taken, I felt dreadfully not to buy anything of her, but the sunshades were too expensive, though she said they were marked down. I took a Japanese fan instead, which pops out at you like a Jack-in-the-box from a fat red stick, and even that was $1.25 when I thought it would be sixpence. On the way to meet Mrs. Ess Kay and Sally at the notion counter, I inquired the price of a good many other superlatively beautiful things, but they were all superlatively high as well, and by the time a very dashing young man, who said he was a "floorwalker," had steered me to the notions, I felt as if I were the only cheap thing in the whole shop. To be sure, there were some embroidered collars and American flag headed hatpins and flowered muslin wrappers which I could have had without ruining myself if I had wanted them. But I didn't, and what I should like to know is, what does a girl do, if she's poor and has to live in New York? Mrs. Ess Kay had said the shop was a cheap shop, so there must be others where even the flowered wrappers and collars and hatpins are more. And, besides, a girl couldn't go through life dressed entirely in such things. However, judging from the girls I have seen so far, they are all very rich, except the lower classes, and of course it's much simpler to do without things if you can just be poor and give up to it comfortably without thinking of appearances, like us.

As soon as I saw the notion counter I knew why they had named it that, only it would be still more expressive if it were called the imagination counter. It was lovely, and looked like thousands of little Christmas presents spread out for every one.

There were a great many pretty people buying things at it, and in most of the other departments where I went with Mrs. Ess Kay and Sally, but when I admired them, and the sweet blouses they wore and the way they carried their shoulders and hips, Mrs. Ess Kay sniffed and said there was nobody in New York now—nobody at all who was worth looking at and wouldn't be till October, except those who were just in the city for a day or two of shopping, like us. When I suggested that these charming beings in white muslins and summer silks might be here in that way, she did not think it at all probable.

"How can you tell?" I asked. "They look just as nice as we do."

Indeed, I thought some of them looked nicer, but I've been much too well brought up to make such remarks as that.

"I can tell, because I don't know their faces," said Mrs. Ess Kay decidedly, in a tone that gave a capital letter to her last word, and yet intimated that the poor, unknown (by her) things couldn't possibly be worth a glance.

Now, mother and Aunt Sophy are rather like that. It's almost terrible when they say "Who is she?" But I shouldn't have expected it to be the same in America, if Sally hadn't warned me. I suppose it's quite easy to remember just 400 faces, as you're sure there will never be any more, even if they have children, because they're being cut down instead of going up in number.

When we had been for about an hour and a half in the big shop, we'd finished all we had to do there and must motor to another farther up, before meeting Mr. Parker, who was to give us lunch at a place called Sherry's, at 1 o'clock. On the way, Sally suddenly exclaimed, "Oh, Cousin Katherine, we must initiate this dear child into the mysteries of ice cream soda water, and I'm just yearning for some myself, anyhow."

Mrs. Ess Kay gave the direction to her mechanician, a very young man with eyes that looked positively ill with intelligence and a way of snapping out "all right" when she spoke to him that would make Stan sit up with surprise if his chauffeur did it.

Sally said that the nicest oasis in the desert of London was an American place where you can get ice cream soda water, but I had never had any, and in the burning heat of the New York morning, which flung itself into the shop like a great wave in spite of fierce electric fans, I could have purred in pure delight over the piled up ice cold froth in that tall glass. It tasted like frozen velvet flavored with strawberries, and I should have loved to be an ostrich or an anaconda, so that the sensation might have lasted longer.

There were no men in the shop, only women, and so pretty that you wondered if there were a notice posted up over the door forbidding plain ladies to enter. Two or three had yellow hair, yellower than mine, and Mrs. Ess Kay said they were actresses, who always came back to New York in summer to wait for things to turn up, just as chickens come home to roost, and that they were supposed to be resting.

I had always thought that a banana made you feel more as if you had eaten a large, elaborate dinner than any other one thing possibly could, but I found that an ice cream soda is even more so, and it was lucky for us that we had another hour's shopping to do (Mrs. Ess Kay made it an hour and a half because Potter is only her brother) before luncheon.

The next shop was even more wonderful than the first and would have been a great deal more solemn and dignified and even conventional if the same kind of wooden balls hadn't gone tearing round like mad squirrels in wire cages over the counters with people's money shut up inside them. There were very young youths sitting in tall pulpit things, who caught the balls on the fly in a sporting way and did something to them, but I never could see what, and afterward sent them back with the greenback bills inside turned miraculously into silver and pretty miniature pennies.

When we got to Sherry's, Potter was waiting for us and looking cross. I think persons with turned up noses show crossness more easily than the other kind, and Potter had the expression in his eyes that Vic has when her shoes are tight and mother is in a trying mood at the same time. I shouldn't be surprised if he has a horrid temper, although he thinks of so many funny things. And though he is so nice to me, he can't help saying things sometimes which show that he has a prejudice against England. That seems extraordinary, and shows one how conceited we English really are, for one is quite accustomed to the idea that there may be people who don't care for Americans, but it is odd that Americans may not like us. I suppose it's on a par with the sentiments in our national anthem, which when one comes to analyze them don't exactly suggest a sense of give and take—or, for that matter, a sense of humor.

"Confound their politics, frustrate their knavish tricks," but naturally bless everything in which we are concerned, as we are certain to be above reproach. I'm afraid that's quite of a piece with the calm confidence we have in our own superiority, although I dare say I should never have realized it if it weren't for Mr. Potter Parker and his perky nose.

It began to be less perky when we were all settled at a table in a perfectly charming restaurant, the most restful place to eat in that I ever saw. I can't imagine even a fiend being ill tempered in it for long, and it was deliciously cool, as if we had come into a shadowy green wood after the blazing, brassy glare of the streets.

The big room really was rather like a wood, so the simile isn't farfetched—an open space in a wood, ringed around with tall trees bending their branches low over a still pool. The soothing brown of the wainscoted walls gave the tree trunk effect; the great hanging baskets of ferns and moss that swung from the ceiling were the tree branches, and the many round, snow white tables with green velvet chairs grouped closely around them on the polished floor were the water lilies with green pads floating on the surface of the pond.

Nearly everything we had for lunch was in a more or less advanced state of frozenness, from the bouillon, ever so far along to the ices in the shape of different colored fruits, toward the end. Nevertheless, all of us, except Potter, drank iced water instead of wine whenever we stopped eating for an instant or couldn't think of anything particular to say, and the more we had the more we seemed to want. There was a kind of iced water curse upon us.

It has never occurred to Vic or me to lie down in the afternoon, though she tries to sleep a little sometimes if she's going to a ball. But when we got home, Mrs. Ess Kay and Sally took it quite as a matter of course that we would lie down before going to Coney Island to dine and see fireworks and other things. They were surprised when I didn't want to, but Mrs. Ess Kay said in that case Potter would entertain me while they rested. I told her it wasn't necessary, but Potter wanted me to bet my sweet life that it was just the one proposition on earth for him, so he and Vivace and I sat in the fountain court while Mrs. Ess Kay and Sally went upstairs.

Potter was suddenly a changed man, as soon as he and I were alone together, becoming exactly what he had been yesterday when I first ran downstairs and he introduced himself.

He didn't chaff me about my country and make fun of our government or hint that American men were the only men living who knew how to treat women, as he seemed to delight in doing when his sister and cousin were with us. He began by offering to teach me some of his best slang, but as the lesson went on, it turned out to be rather more like a lesson in flirtation.

I would have been even more startled than I was, if I hadn't already had a little experience on board ship with Mr. Doremus. At home I've often thought it must be very pleasant to be out and able to flirt, but I never had a chance, because, as Vic said, it was her turn first, and the only young man, not a relation, that I ever talked with alone was the curate, who would as soon have tried to flirt with a bishopess as with one of mother's daughters.

But I like Mr. Doremus' kind of flirtation almost better than Mr. Parker's. Mr. Doremus makes you feel as if you were a beautiful young heroine in a play, and you are almost sorry there is no audience to applaud the witty things he says and the smart answers he inspires you to think of, just as if he were giving you a cue.

Potter is different, and instead of an audience you want a kind of perpetual chaperon, not a Briareus creature with lots of hands to applaud.

It is silly, I know, to blush and simper, but I couldn't think of anything else to do, Potter was so alarming, and I wouldn't allow him to tell my fortune by my hand, for it was much too hot. Even if it hadn't been I shouldn't have wanted my hand held, for I do hate being touched by any one I'm not fond of. When I told him that he said it was very simple. What I had to do was to get fond of him, and then it would be all right.

"I shan't have time," I said "There'll be too much for me to think about, and then I shall be going home."

"How long does it take an English girl to get fond of a man?" said he.

I told him I didn't know anything about that, as I wasn't out, but I supposed it depended on the kind of girl.

"I guess it depends more on the man in your climate, doesn't it?" asked Potter. "But over here it's sometimes a question of hours for both sides. Why, a chum of mine went out to San Francisco on business which was going to keep him just one day. He met a girl at dinner, fell in love with her while she was eating her soup and told her so before dessert came along. She vacillated over the ice cream, but said yes with the peaches and pears. Next day they got married, and he brought her back east for a wedding trip."

"What did they do about the banns?"

"Oh, Americans have done away with banns since the Revolution, I guess. When we fellows fall in love we're in a hurry."

"Marry in haste, repent at leisure," I quoted primly.

"We don't repent. We just get a divorce. It saves worry. Incompatibility of the affections or fatty degeneration of the temper or something like that—but I don't need to talk of such things to you. Nobody who got a prize package like Lady Betty Bulkeley would part with it while he had a button left on his coat."

"I don't see what buttons would have to do with it," I said, but as I had always been sent out of the room at home directly any one began even to mention divorce, I thought I had better go upstairs and dress for dinner at Coney Island. Mr. Parker begged me not, but I would, and Vivace barked as if he were under the impression that he was a watchdog, so thanks to him I got away without trouble.

Found a Spider In His Copy of the Paper.

When Mark Twain was editing the Virginia City Enterprise he received from a superstitious subscriber a letter stating that the writer had found a spider in his copy of the paper and wanted to know whether that was good or bad luck. Mark replied in his "Answers to Correspondents" column:

> Old Subscriber—The finding of a spider in your copy of the Enterprise was neither good luck nor bad. The spider was merely looking over our pages to find out what merchant was not advertising, so that it could spin its web across his door and lead a free and undisturbed existence forever and ever.

And Mark hit the mark. Does it hit you?

Foot Ball And Other Sports

Quincy High mets Wellesley at home on Saturday, Merrymount Park as usual being the scene of the battle. Quincy has shown up better than Wellesley this season and should give a good account of herself. The players are all in good condition even though they were up against it in Somerville. That defeat of Wednesday will help the team a whole lot, because weak points were brought out by Somerville's playing, which would not be noticed against an inferior team.

Local soccer football fans will be without a game in Quincy on Saturday, as the Fore River team goes to Pawtucket to try conclusions with the Howard & Bullough team. These teams played in Quincy last Saturday and the home team came out a victor 1-0, in a fast game. Both teams will fight hard to win, and as the local team is tied with the Fall River Rovers for league leadership, the Pawtucket team will have to work hard to win.

On the eve of the battle between Dorchester and English High, both teams have been crippled by having stars reclared ineligible. Ray Cavanaugh of the Dorchester school, the star punter and tackle will weaken the team considerable. Clyde Nutter, perhaps the best fullback around Boston, will make a big hole in the English team.

A big Y. M. C. A. relay race, similar to that run off between New York and Chicago, has been arranged by the Massachusetts and Rhode Island associations. There will be about 100 rumers covering a half mile each, the course arranged being between Providence and Bostion. The runners will pass through Quincy. The date set for the race is Nov. 7.

Whist Party And Dance

There was a whist party and dance on Thursday evening at the home of D. J. Seward McCurdy, Hill street in aid of the Catholic Charitable bazaar. There were about twenty tables in play until 10 o'clock. The scores were high and close, and when they were counted, the first ladies' prize was awarded to Miss Annie Harkins, and the first gentlemen's to Edwin C. Donovan. The second ladies' and gentlemen's prizes were won by Miss Mary Thompson and Joseph Avery respectively.

After the whist refreshments were served, during which time there were solos by Miss Helen Galvin of Braintree, Miss Annie Walsh of Quincy, and selections by the Quincy Point Social Club quartet. Dancing was then in order till 12.

Mayor William T. Shea had been invited and expected to attend, but he sent a letter of regret stating that a previous engagement would make it impossible for him to be present.

The arrangements were under the efficient direction of Mrs. D. J. Seward McCurdy, and Miss Mary McConarty, organist of St. John's church.

DEAFNESS CANNOT BE CURED.
by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.
We give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

The man from Missouri is always welcome in our store. We claim much for RALSTON SHOES, but nothing which we cannot substantiate and it pleases us to hear a man say "show me."

We've been in the shoe business for a long time, but Ralston Shoes are the only shoes we know which are stylish enough to please the eyes of the most fastidious dresser without making his feet pay the penalty. There's a reason. Will you say "show me?"

CAMPAIGN IN TENTH

Opened in Quincy With Rousing Rally For Election of J. Mitchell Galvin

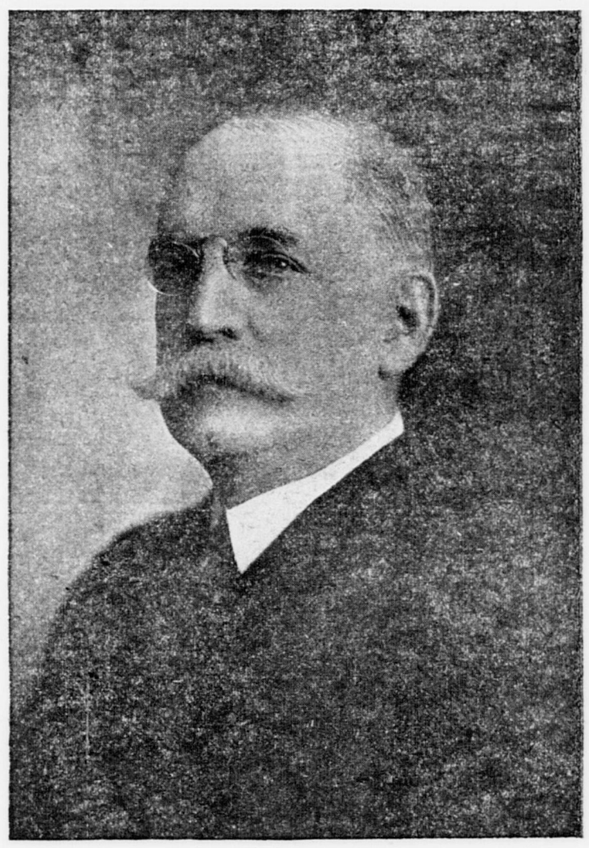
The campaign of J. Mitchell Galvin for Congress in this district was very auspiciously opened in Quincy last night at Music hall. It was the largest and best rally held in the city for many years, abounding in enthusiasm for Republican candidates and Republican principles.

The speakers and guests were met at the depot by the Republican City Committee with the City Band and several automobiles. The band escorted the autos from the depot to the hall and colored lights were burned along the route.

Arriving at the hall a full house greeted the speakers and there was applause when they were escorted to the platform. Many had to stand throughout the evening, as all seats in the hall and the balcony were filled. The hall was elaborately decorated with flags and large pictures of the candidates.

After music by the band President W. M. Chase opened the rally and spoke briefly but confidently.

Brooks Adams, Esq., was introduced as the presiding officer. He referred briefly to why he left the Democratic party, and said he saw his duty clear. The fundamental principle of success of party was equality before the law.



J. MITCHELL GALVIN.

going to do about it?" It was time to act. One day Theodore Roosevelt When certain interests stood above the law, and queried "What are you (Applause) was elected President, and he proceeded to enforce the law. He made that fight for you and me. It required courage, devotion and ability. I am going to stand by that man. I will stand by Taft (Applause) and everyone pledged to Roosevelt and Taft. (Applause.)

SENATOR LODGE.

Hon. Henry Cabot Lodge was introduced as the most eloquent statesman in the country, and an intimate friend for many years of Roosevelt, long before the latter was in office. The senator was enthusiastically received.

Senator Lodge at the outset said it was a pleasure to come into this district and work for the election of his friend J. Mitchell Galvin to Congress. He is a good American citizen, and has an excellent chance to win. He left the Democrats some years ago, and will support Taft and Republican principles. I want him elected as a friend and a Republican. I want to beat his opponent.

Mr. Lodge then told the reason why Mr. O'Connell should be defeated, principally because of his methods

FOREST FLAMES CLAIM LIVES

Relief Train Leaves Track In Midst of Burning Forest

RAILS SPREAD BY THE HEAT

Eleven Victims Were Women and Children Who Perished In Gondola Car--Total of Nineteen Deaths From Fire--Refugees From the Doomed Village Delayed In Gathering Their Belongings

Alpena, Mich., Oct. 17.—Fifteen people lost their lives in the burning of the Detroit and Mickinaw railway relief train which was carrying the inhabitants of the little village of Metz, twenty-three miles north of here, to safety from the forest fires, which were sweeping away their homes.

The ill-fated train was ditched by spreading rails at Nowicki siding, a few miles south of Metz, and the terrified refugees were forced to abandon the cars and rush for safety either down the track with burning forests on either side, or into the ploughed fields near the siding.

Eleven of the victims were women and children, who were unable to escape quickly enough from the gondola car which they were occupying. Their charred bodies were found when rescuers reached the scene. Two of the men victims were members of the train crew.

Four additional fatalities occurred in the neighborhood of the wreck. Mr. and Mrs. Fred Wagner died from heat and exhaustion on their farm near the scene of the wreck, and Mr. and Mrs. Fred Nowicki, Jr., lost their lives in their burning house, near the siding where the wreck occurred.

When the forest fires closed in about Metz a special train of three empty box cars and two coal gondolas was rushed to Metz in charge of John E. Kinville, conductor; William Foster, engineer; Arthur Lee, fireman, and William Barrett, brakeman.

As rapidly as possible the people and their goods were loaded into the cars. Some refused to abandon their goods, or the train might have left earlier and have reached Alpena in safety. When the train finally started there were about 100 frightened people aboard. The flames were already sweeping through the village when Engineer Foster started his train for Alpena.

Nearing Nowicki crossing, Foster saw blazing piles of cedar ties on both sides of the track. Opening wide the throttle, he tried to dash through at full speed, but the heat had loosened the rails and they had spread and the train left the track. Blazing piles of ties surrounded it and in an instant the cars caught fire. The terror-stricken people, overtaken by the peril from which they were fleeing, jumped from the cars and rushed down the tracks. Three mothers and their little ones were not quick enough and they were cremated in the gondola car.

Barrett sprang into the water tank behind the engine only to be literally boiled to death as the flames swept over it. Foster and Kinville fled down the track through the fire and smoke and were the first to reach Posen and report the wreck and ask for assistance from here. Behind them straggled a burned and wounded procession of refugees from the wrecked train. It was a fearful trip over the hot ties, with the flames from the burning woods on either side of the track roaring and snapping in their faces.

Many more of the refugees are suffering from serious burns. The survivors of the frightful experience seemed dazed by their peril and suffering. They seemed to realize nothing except the necessity for running—running—running, to escape the intense heat and menacing flames. It was difficult to get any coherent statements from them as to loss of life in the wreck or as to whether there had been any people left behind in Metz.

Seventy-Five Miles of Fire

Cheboygan, Mich., Oct. 17.—With all of the country between here and Alpena, a distance of about seventy-five miles, a mass of flames, the fire loss in Cheboygan county alone is estimated at $100,000 and the flames are still raging fiercely everywhere, fanned by a high wind. The long drought has dried all vegetation, so that the flames are sweeping through the country like prairie fires. Lakeside Resort, six miles northwest of here, was wiped out last night, together with an immense quantity of forest products. Several farmers have been burned out, as well as the resorts along Black lake.

Examiner Closes a Bank

Washington, Oct. 17.—Bank Examiner Cunningham has closed the Union National bank of Summerville, Pa. The bank has a capital of $50,000 and is said to have accumulated a considerable quantity of paper of doubtful value which necessitated its suspension. Cunningham has been appointed temporary receiver.

Tug Rams River Steamer

New York, Oct. 17.—Seventy-five persons were thrown into a panic when the Hudson river steamer New York was rammed by tug William H. Flannery in the North river. James Charles, foreman of the tugboat, was knocked overboard in the collision and drowned.

Who Had the Best Show?

During a session of the Pennsylvania legislature a well known member was made head of a state department. As there were a large number of lucrative positions in his department he was besieged by congressmen on behalf of their friends who wanted good, fat jobs.

Messrs. Jones, Smith and Brown were all applicants for the same position, and their claims were equally pushed. Finally two representatives who were for Brown went to the new executive and asked how the contestants stood.

"It's this way," was the reply. "Jones is a good man, and the corporations and the judiciary are with him; Smith is a fine fellow and is backed by the newspapers and the people generally, and your friend Brown is an excellent young man, who is being pushed by the politicians and the members of the legislature."

"Well, but who has the best show?" asked one of the friends.

"If you won't repeat it," was the answer, "I will tell you."

Both promised.

"Barnum & Bailey."—Ladies' Home Journal.

FRIEND DEATH.

"Friend Death," quoth he, "a moment stay
Till I have finished my score with life,
Who has fooled and cheated me all the way
With a witless strife.

"Friend Death," quoth he, "a moment stay.
I have a duty yet to do.
There is the devil still to pay—
A good, stiff reckoning too.

"Friend Death," quoth he, "a moment stay.
What of my wife and little one?
I must warn them well while yet it is day
Of the setting sun.

"Friend Death," quoth he, "a moment stay,
A drink and a kiss for luck at the last.
I was ever one for a daring play,
Staked all on a cast.

"Friend Death," quoth he, "a moment stay.
I must have time to think on God.
Surely you give one time to pray—
So soon a clod.

"Friend Death," quoth he, "a moment stay.
It will all be over so soon, so soon.
I hear the pipes of my boyhood play
An old, old tune.

"Friend Death," quoth he, "Oh, friendly Death,
The music is calling and I am fain—
Fain for the home where I first drew breath
And my mother again."
—R. W. Gilbert in "Goldenrod and Lilies."

He Was Dipped.

Charles Lamb had been told by his physician to take a course of sea bathing. As he descended the steps of the bathing machine in the shallow water the cold increased his natural stammer, and it took him a long while to inform two stout attendants that he was to be "di-di-di-di-dipped"—

Impatiently they ducked him, and, coming up spluttering in their embrace, he began, "Once more I tell you I am to be di-di-di"— and down he went again. The third time he stormed: "Is it mum-um-murder you me-me-mean? I tell you I'm to be di-di"—

And then, after the third ducking: "Oh, limbs of Satan! It's now too late! I tell you that I am—no, that I was—to be di-di-di-dipped only once!"

Voluntarily.

"Did I understand you to say that this boy voluntarily confessed to running away?" asked a truant officer, addressing the determined looking female parent of a small and dirty boy.

"Yes, sir, he did," the woman responded. "I just had to persuade him a little, and then he told me the whole thing voluntarily."

"How did you persuade him?" queried his worship.

"Well, first I gave him a good licking," said the firm parent, "and then I put him to bed without supper, and I took his clothes away and told him he'd stay in bed till he confessed what he'd done, if 'twas the rest of his days, and I should lick him again in the morning. And in less than half an hour he told me the whole story voluntarily!"

Respectability.

Respectability is a very good thing in its way, but it does not rise superior to all considerations. I would not for a moment venture to hint that it was a matter of taste. But I think I will go as far as this—that if a position is admittedly unkind, uncomfortable, unnecessary and superfluously useless, although it were as respectable as the Church of England, the sooner a man is out of it the better for himself and all concerned.—Robert Louis Stevenson.

Saving the Landlord.

Joseph Jefferson was playing a one night engagement in a small town, appearing in the part Rip Van Winkle, which he had so often and ably impersonated. At the hotel where he stayed there was an Irishman who acted as general assistant. Judged by the great interest he manifested in the hotel, he might have been taken to be the proprietor. At about a quarter to 6 in the morning Mr. Jefferson was startled, not to say alarmed, by a violent thumping on his door. When he recollected that he had left no orders to be called so early, he was naturally indignant. His sleep was banished for that morning, however, so he arose and soon made his appearance before the clerk.

"Look here, I say," he demanded of this functionary, "why was I called at this unearthly hour?"

"I don't know, sir," replied the clerk, "but I'll ask Pat. Pat was summoned. Said the clerk: "Pat, there was no call for this gentleman. Why did you waken him?"

Pat led the clerk to one side and said in a mysterious whisper: "He wor snorin' loike a horse, sor, an' Ofd heerd the bhoys sayin' somethin' about how he wor wanst afther shlapin' for twinty years, so Oi says to mesilf, 'It's a-comin' unto 'im ag'in, an' it's yer juty to git the craythur out o' yer house at wanst.'"

A Legal Opinion.

Roscoe Conkling came into Charles O'Conor's office one day in a nervous state.

"You seem to be very much excited, Mr. Conkling," said Mr. O'Conor as Roscoe walked up and down the room.

"Yes, I'm provoked—I am provoked," said Mr. Conkling. "I never had a client dissatisfied about my fee before."

"Well, what's the matter?"

"Why, I defended Gibbons for arson, you know. He was convicted, but I did hard work for him. I took him to the superior court, and he was convicted; then to the supreme court, and the supreme court confirmed the judgment and gave him ten years. I charged him $600, and Gibbons is grumbling about it; says it is too much. Now, Mr. O'Conor, I ask you was that too much?"

"Well," said O'Conor very deliberately, "of course you did a great deal of work, and $600 is not a big fee; but, to be frank with you, Mr. Conkling, my deliberate opinion is that he might have been convicted for less money."

Equal to the Occasion.

In 1840 a great convention was held in Baltimore by the young men of what was then known as the Whig party for the purpose of ratifying the nomination of General William Henry Harrison for the presidency. There was no hall in the city large enough to hold the crowd of delegates who attended. The convention accordingly met on the Canton race track, and when the great Whig orator of Maryland, who was chairman of the young men's national committee, arose to call the meeting to order he was so impressed by the vastness of the assemblage before him that instead of the usual formula he exclaimed, "The nation will please come to order!"

Her Age at Monte Carlo.

A fashionable French lady who had lost heavily at Monte Carlo entered the gaming saloon while a former friend of hers was winning in a sweeping style that seemed destined to break the bank.

"I am so glad to see you here, prince, and in such luck, too!" she exclaimed. "Do tell me a lucky number. It is sure to win, for you are now in the vein."

The prince generously placed a pile of gold louis before the vivacious lady, whose beauty had successfully defied the effects of thirty-six winters, and said:

"Put it all on the number of your years and reap a golden harvest."

The lady reflected, hesitated and then placed the pile on twenty-seven.

An instant later the croupier sang out:

"Thirty-six red wins!"

"Heavens!" muttered the lady as she fainted. "Thirty-six is exactly my age!"

Fixity of Purpose.

The man who succeeds above his fellow is the one who early in life clearly discerns his object and toward that object habitually directs his powers. Even genius itself is but fine observation strengthened by fixity of purpose. Every man who observes vigilantly and resolves steadfastly grows unconsciously into genius.—Bulwer-Lytton.

An Effective Role.

A farmer was anxious that his son should become a minister, and for this laudable end he sent him to college for four years, but to his great disappointment the youth balked at the ministry and set himself up as a horse trader. The old farmer told his grief to a neighbor, who, however, took a more optimistic view of the matter.

"Oh, I wouldn't feel so badly about that," he said. "As a hoss trader Bill will probably lead more men to repentance than he ever would have done as a preacher."

No Sentiment.

One day in Geneva Ira D. Sankey entered a music box shop and asked to see some music boxes. The salesman graciously showed him a number, but none was what he wanted.

"Have you none that play sacred music?" he asked.

"Why," answered the salesman, "we have some that play a kind of half-way sacred music."

"What?" inquired Mr. Sankey.

"Oh, these Moody and Sankey hymns. I can't imagine what the people see in them, but we sell thousands of the boxes that play them. We have enormous orders for these boxes," continued the salesman, "from every part of Europe," and then he added apologetically, "it's a matter of business, you know, with us."

Compliments.

Judge Story and Edward Everett were once the guests of honor at a banquet. The former as a voluntary toast gave the following:

"Fame follows merit where Everett goes!"

The gentleman thus delicately complimented at once arose and replied with equally felicitous impromptu:

"To whatever height judicial learning may attain in this country there will always be one Story higher."

GAVE ICE STOCK AS SECURITY

Boy Clerk Borrowed Hundreds of Thousands of Dollars

FRENZIED FINANCE REVEALED

Brokers Who Employed Youngster Sent Him to National Bank of North America to Sign Notes, the Money Obtained by Him Being Credited to Account of Morse, Financial Man and Promoter

New York, Oct. 17.—A tow-headed youth of 19, until recently a $12-a-week clerk in a broker's office, was the chief witness yesterday at the trial, in the criminal branch of the United States court, of Charles W. Morse, financial man and promoter, who, with Alfred H. Curtis, former president of the National Bank of North America, is charged with having violated the national banking laws.

In the testimony of Edward P. Moxey, a government bank examiner, it had been revealed that a person by the name of Leslie E. Whiting was one of the heaviest borrowers from the National Bank of North America, at one time owing the institution as much as $310,000. Hardly a week went by in the year 1907, the testimony showed, that Whiting did not borrow $100,000 or more, giving ice stock principally as security. It always appeared on the records as presented, however, that the big sums of money borrowed by Whiting were credited to the account of Morse.

On the conclusion of Moxey's testimony, Whiting was called to the stand, and those in the courtroom, who had expected to see a dignified, shrewd-looking business man step forward, were astonished to see a smooth-cheeked boy walk nervously to the witness chair. A smile swept the room and Judge Hough rapped shortly for order.

After Whiting had been made to describe how he came to sign the notes which made him indebted to the bank for such large amounts he was asked: "Could you have paid this note I hold here for $82,000?"

"What, me?" answered the startled boy. "No—no, I couldn't."

"Could you have paid a $1000 note?" pressed the attorney for the prosecution.

"No, sir," responded the boy, a trifle more assured.

For half an hour longer the youth was kept on the stand while a bunch of letters bearing the signature "Leslie E. Whiting," and directed to the National Bank of North America, were read. These letters, couched in business-like terms, gave orders to the bank about transferring collateral, charges and renewals of notes. A sentence in one letter read: "Enclosed find my check for $200,000, which apply to my account."

The witness explained in answer to questions that he was sent to the bank by his employers to sign the notes. He said he knew he was incurring an obligation, but felt sure his employers would protect the notes. He testified that he never talked with Morse or Curtis concerning the signing of notes or the putting up of collateral. He also said that he did not think his employer knew that he was not of age.

Davison Brown, another broker's clerk, also testified to having signed notes for loans for more than $100,000. Brown had a bad memory and his testimony was of little value.

The afternoon session was almost entirely devoted to tracing the loans made in the name of Whiting. Moxey started with loans made in June last year, and showed how the loans were repeatedly renewed. It was brought out that at one time the bank made a profit of $132,000 on the loans, but the profit was on paper only, Moxey said.

Roosevelt's Plans For 1910

London, Oct. 17.—The Times is informed that President Roosevelt will visit England after his African trip early in 1910. He will deliver the Romanes lecture at Oxford, and, on the occasion of the university commemoration, will receive the honorary degree of D. C. L., which Oxford has already bestowed on Emperor William. President Roosevelt also will visit Paris and deliver an address at the Sorbonne. The times further states that, according to the present plans, Mrs. Roosevelt will join the president at Khartoum on the journey northward.

Old Actresses' Days Ended

Cambridge, Mass., Oct. 17.—Mrs. George C. Howard, well known at one time as an actress and the original "Topsy" in the dramatized form of "Uncle Tom's Cabin," died at her home here. Mrs. Howard's maiden name was Caroline E. Fox, and she was born in Boston in 1829. She first appeared on the stage in children's parts. She married George C. Howard in 1844. He was an actor and manager.

Why They Were Generous

By M. MONROE JAMES.

Copyright, 1908, by American Press Association.

In 19— I was invited to make a Memorial day address in my native town of Eastport. When the exercises were over I wandered among the tombs, watching the friends who were bestowing fragrant tokens of remembrance over the ashes of their dead.

I was standing beside a grave which was literally covered with choice flowers when my friend C. joined me.

"Those people are generous," I said, pointing to the flower strewn grave and indicating a gentleman and lady who had just left it.

"They have reason to be," he answered.

That evening he told me the story:

For a time it was difficult to guess which of the rivals for the hand of Cora Dixon would carry off the prize, for she seemed equally gracious to Fred Nevius and Geoffrey Burns.

There was one intensely interested spectator, who, had the question been left for her decision, would have settled it easily. To Cora's mother money was the key to all things desirable, and as Burns had an abundance of the commodity, while Nevius was but indifferently provided, she wondered at her daughter's indecision.

But Cora was unlike her mother, and when the supreme test came to her she did not let the superior financial advantages of one lover outweigh the fact that her heart had gone into the keeping of the other.

Scarcely had the story of Fred's good fortune become known when the town was startled by strange news. The lover had forged his employer's name and had fled.

While the matter was being discussed elsewhere Cora was reading with tear wet eyes and agony of soul a letter from her accused lover:

Dear Cora—When you get this I shall be far away, where I do not know. Fate is against me; but, as there is a God in heaven, I did not do the thing they charge against me. I shall love you always, but of course you are free from any promise to me. Unless I can clear my name I shall never return. I trust you will believe me, though I suspect the world will not. God bless you. Goodby! Your unhappy FRED.

The story was this: A check presumably drawn by Samuel Blake, his uncle and employer, was presented by the young man at the bank and cashed. Mr. Blake declared the check a forgery. Fred said it was received in a letter which stated it was a gift. Unfortunately the letter could not be produced. With an indignant denial he paid back the money and demanded to know if his uncle intended to prosecute. Receiving a negative reply, he left the store and, packing his belongings, left town without notifying any one of his destination.

As Cora faced the situation she saw that, as he had said, his explanation would not be accepted. She was worldly wise enough to know that, notwithstanding the maxim of the law to the contrary, public opinion is apt to adjudge an accused man guilty unless he can show his innocence. Her cheeks tingled as she thought of the covert sneers about that gift. Oh, if he had only kept that letter!

But what did it all matter? She knew he was innocent. Whatever the world might say, that was her verdict.

This verdict she announced with quiet emphasis whenever the matter came to her attention, but she sadly saw that few stood with her; hence it did her a world of good to receive a note from Geoffrey Burns announcing his faith in her friend.

As time wore on Cora, bearing the double burden of her own desolation and her lover's shame, saw, with an added pang, how quickly the world forgets. Fred Nevius had been the idol of the social circle in which they had moved. Now he was as one who had never been.

So went a year. Then came an event which broke somewhat the dreary tenor of her life. David Nelson, a fellow employee, on his dying bed made a statement which wiped the blot from Fred's name. He said he sent the letter and check as an April fool jest, expecting to tell Fred of it before he could present it at the bank. When he saw it was likely to get him into trouble he became alarmed and held his peace.

Shortly after this disclosure Burns called on Cora and congratulated her on the clearing of her lover's name.

"I cannot thank you enough for your loyalty to Fred," she said gratefully.

"He was my friend, too," he answered.

Then he told her of having sent Nelson's confession to the papers of the large cities with the hope that the innocent man might see it.

Somehow after this it seemed the most natural thing for Burns to call now and then. So went another year.

Meanwhile a report came to Eastport that Nevius was dead. When Burns next called Cora questioned him about it.

"Yes, I have heard it," he answered evasively.

"Do you know what foundation it has?"

"There does not seem to be much that can be called foundation."

"Then you don't think it is true?"

He hesitated, dreading to give her the direct answer, which must come now.

"You don't think it is true?" she asked again.

"I fear it is," he said at last. Then he told her of a railroad wreck in a western state in which a young man answering Fred's description had been killed. On his linen they found the word Nevius. He told her also that he and Mr. Blake had put personals in the city papers all over the country, making inquiry for the missing man, but months had gone by and they had heard nothing.

"My heart says no," she replied only when he had finished.

Love cannot remain hidden. When Cora chose Fred Nevius, Burns had put his love away. But now, believing his rival dead, it had come back in greater volume. And so, though she ever put him aside, he sued persistently for her hand.

One day she told him if he would put like inquiries for Nevius in the papers again and in six months no tidings came she would give him an answer.

When the time was past and he falteringly reminded her of it she said: "Mr. Burns, you have been a true friend to me when such were very few. I respect you, honor you, but the love which you deserve is not mine to give. Living or dead, Fred Nevius still has my heart."

"I will be content if you will but say yes," he urged.

And thus the compact was made.

Now that it was settled Burns begged for an early marriage, and, being abetted by Mrs. Dixon, Cora consented. Listlessly she did it as if it mattered not to her, as indeed it did not.

So in the days after Burns noted the same apathetic agreement with every suggestion from her mother or himself. It cut him to the heart, for, though counting it earth's choicest blessing to have her by his side on any terms, he could not escape the conviction that he was requiring too great a sacrifice of her.

One day when she was more than usually distrait he offered to release her. She told him that, while she could not give him what his truth and devotion deserved, she would be true to him if such was his desire.

"It is my heart's dearest wish," he answered fervently. "And love like mine must have its reward by and by. I will be patient."

Deeply touched, even more by his tone than the words, she answered gently, "Geoffrey, I wish I might do more, but all that I can give shall be yours."

After this for his sake she strove to bring back some of her old time cheerfulness. And when she succeeded, as in part she sometimes did, his happy face paid her for the struggle. But when alone in her room, where she could be herself, her sore heart cried out against the fate which forced this hollow life upon her.

On the evening of the day before that set for her wedding she was sitting in a rustic chair on the lawn. Wrapped in the contemplation of her strange position, she did not know that a man was approaching her until he had called her name. As she turned the face of Fred Nevius, full of a hungry longing, met hers.

With a little cry of gladness she sprang up, and the next moment his arms were about her. How long they remained thus they could not have told, when they saw the grave eyes of Geoffrey Burns, not in anger, but full of unutterable sadness, resting on them.

Tearing herself from Nevius' clasp, Cora went to Burns and put her hand upon his arm.

"Forgive me, Geoffrey," she said humbly. "Forgive me. I forgot." Then, turning to Fred, she added, "Tomorrow night I am to be his wife."

Nevius recoiled as if she had struck him and, like one dazed, stood, with a dumb misery on his ashen face, looking from one to the other. At last he broke the painful silence.

"Great God," he cried passionately, "did ever a man have such bitter fate? On a scrap of paper a few days ago I saw an account of the cruel jest which ruined my life. I hurried home, hoping to find what evil fortune had snatched from me. I thought I had, but, oh, my God"— His words ended with a wail of despair, and, turning, he staggered away like one who had lost all hope.

Burns, watching them, saw that while Cora still kept her hand upon his arm her eyes followed the retreating form, and all her heart went with them.

* * * * * * *

Impatiently the guests, sitting in Mrs. Dixon's parlor, waited the coming of the bridal party. The groom had been with Cora fully half an hour, and the clock had announced the hour for the ceremony more than that long ago.

Presently it was whispered they were coming. The organist made ready, touching the initial chords. The clergyman took his place. All eyes turned on the door saw Geoffrey Burns come in alone.

The astonishment of the assembled company found expression in one smothered murmur. Then all grew silent as the chamber of death as they saw Burns was about to speak.

With a mighty effort to be calm, he began: "Friends, there will be no wedding tonight. I had thought that this hour would crown my life with the fulfillment of its fondest hope, but God wills otherwise. My love for Cora Dixon has not abated one jot, and she stands ready to make good her promise to be my wife. But he whom God hath joined to her is now returned, and, though it leaves my life a barren waste, I have released her from her vow."

Shortly after Fred and Cora were quietly married. And the first news they had of the noble man whose sacrifice had made their union possible was that he had been killed in Cuba, and in his will he had left his property to Cora.

Cannell and Rev. C. J. Tuthill. Rev. Mr. Craig is well known in Quincy, having recently been the assistant of Dr. Hardy at Bethany church.

Campaign In Tenth

and because he held up the Boston immigrant station appropriation of $250,000.

In discussing the other issues Senator Lodge said there were two great principles, the tariff and labor. With either party there would be a revision of the tariff next March, but as Massachusetts was a greater industrial state than the whole South it was important that the revision should be along protection lines. The economic principle of government may have a great effect on Quincy, and he proceeded to argue for the protective tariff.

In conclusion he spoke enthusiastically for Taft, who, he said, was high-minded, well trained, fearless, and courageous, and a man worthy to succeed Roosevelt and all his great predecessors.

J. MITCHELL GALVIN.

Candidate Galvin was then introduced and warmly welcomed. He spoke enthusiastically and made a good impression.

He said no man could sit and hear our great senior Senator utter the words he had in connection with him without feeling deeply moved. He looked upon him as the leading statesman of America. He receives the commendation of the most humble, member of the party as he stands on the fireing line and drives holes in the armor of the Democrats large enough to drive through a four-horse team. He also could not fail to say a good word for another citizen of Quincy under whom he was for four years. He looked upon him as one of the most intellectual men. He referred to Josiah Quincy.

He also had a good word to say for Congressman Weeks of the Twelfth district.

Speaking of himself, he said he stood before them knowing some of the audiance might question his right of being a candidate because he had been in the Republican party for so short a time. From tonight out the Tenth district is to be the fighting ground of this campaign. From this night out he would stand and battle for the principles of the Republican party. I stand for the Massachusetts of which Senator Lodge spoke of as a greater industrial state than the whole South.

The statutes which the Legislature of Massachusetts has put on her books are a standard for other commonwealths to emulate. No commonwealth in this country has done so much for the interest of the people as has the old Bay State. Our own Governor will retire to private life with the love and esteem of all people. Let us hope as Curtis Guild, Jr., retires to private life he will soon recuperate and his voice again be heard expounding the principles of the Republican party. While ill his duties fell upon the shoulders of Eben S. Draper, a gentleman by training well qualified to fulfill these duties.

He wanted to see the campaign in the Tenth district started here. If elected, and he believed he would be, he would try to hold the standard of the exalted office so high you will say the congressman from the Tenth has rendered a good account of his stewardship.

CANDIDATE HULTMAN.

In introducing the next speaker, Eugene C. Hultman, candidate for Senator, Mr. Adams said he was an honest and able man a hard worker and a citizen of Quincy. What more can you ask?

Mr. Hultman said, after three years in the Legislature, he came not as an accomplished orator but as one who has tried to serve his district. Who had spent his time looking after the district.

Two very important matters were coming before congress next March. One was the tariff revision. The question is whether it shall be done by those who believe in a protective tariff or free trade. Another great issue was the ship subsidy bill, which meant so much for Quincy. It was of the utmost importance to elect a Republican congressman. One who has ability and believes in the ship subsidy bill.

Mr. Hultman then gave an account of his stewardship in the Legislature during the past three years. During the three years he had been in the legislature all labor legislation had been passed by Republicans as they were in the majority. He enumerated some of the important measures that had been enacted. Among these was the free employment bureau act. A free employment bureau for teachers, the child labor law strengthened so that a truant officer could take a child from the factory without a warrant, changes in the assignment of wages, the bank commissioners have been reorganized to protect depositors in savings banks, etc.

Other important bills were the corrupt practice act, bucket shop bill, the jury reform bill, the assignment of wages bill, reducing hours of labor for women and children from 58 to 56 hours. All of which were done by the Republican party.

CONGRESSMAN WEEKS.

Congressman John W. Weeks said he came from a district that contained practically all of Norfolk County. Mr. Galvin was his friend. He had known him for years. He is fitted by temperment and character to represent the district and he will vote with the Republican party.

Continuing, Congressman Weeks said years ago we had a merchant marine of which we were proud. Since the Civil war we have been going from bad to worse, until today we see almost all of our commerce transported by foreign vessels. The speaker quoted statistics showing how this government had fallen off in imports and exports by American vessels, and how foreign vessels had gained.

We have tried to remedy this by a ship subsidy, which would build up a merchant marine so that we could transport and import by our own vessels. Other countries advance money to build great ships that can be used in time of war. Quincy is vitally interested in this question, as 60 or 70 ships would be required immediately.

We had to employ foreign ships to transport coal to supply our war ships, and Japan about whom we hear so much about war with furnished vessels recently to transport amunition to the Philippines.

We want four lines of steamships to South American ports. This will require forty steamships.

With two exception every Democrat in congress voted against such a bill.

He then spoke of the bill that came up last May and how Mr. O'Connell, who was the assistant Democratic whip, voted. On the conference report he did not vote at all, and on the final passage of the bill which provided for subsidy he did not vote.

We ought to have representatives who will vote for a merchant marine. If he does not, he is voting against your interest. If that bill had passed it meant labor in Quincy for more than 1000 skilled men for two years.

J. Mitchell Galvin will vote for that protection and give you that business.

Congressman Weeks spoke briefly on the revision of the tariff. It should be done, but can not be without a Republican President and House, as the Senate would be Republican at least four years.

We might as well stop, if we are to have a Democratic President and House, as they will never pass a monitary bill. You can not get any helpful legislation from the Democrats.

EVIDENCE WANTED.

Editor Daily Ledger:

In a Boston paper of Thursday, under the caption, "A Gold Democrat Speaks," Dr. William Everett of this city seeks to make it known that he is not supporting Bryan for the presidency, and he gives the following reason, among others:

"We saw him (Bryan) making war on the business and trade of the country."

When, I ask, was Bryan in office or in any position from which he could make war on the business and trade of the country? Can Dr. Everett or any one else (including William Hearst and Broughton Brandenburgh) quote a single sentence from the lips or pen of Mr. Bryan or point to a single act of his from which it can be fairly inferred that he is hostile to legitimate business or trade in any form?

If there be any such evidence in existence, let us hear it. Thus far we have heard nothing but declamation from the old indictment of 1896.

Brief Locals Of a Busy City

Dr. E. N. Hardy was the speaker at the Norwood Christian Endeavor rally last Sunday evening.

Rev. Charles B. Ames, assistant pastor at First church is to organize on Sunday a study class for young men.

The ladies of First church are preparing for a fair and supper to be held in the chapel on Wednesday, Nov. 11th.

Some of the trees in the rear of Bethany Congregational church have been cut down, and others have been trimmed.

M. J. O'Brien of Quincy has been nominated for the revising committee by the Lynn branch of the Granite Cutters' Union.

Rev. Charles Bulkley Ames, assistant pastor of First church will occupy the pulpit on Sunday morning. It will be his first sermon since entering upon his duties in Quincy.

Improvements continue at the Thomas Crane Public Library. The walks on the Spear street side have been relaid in large metropolitan bricks and also the sidewalks the whole length of the library grounds on Spear street.

The regular Friday evening socials at Electa hall began last night and will continue throughout the coming winter. These socials are of rather a private nature, for they are held by a few young people, who graduated from one of E. W. Baker's dancing classes.

The big reservoir at Quincy Point, which is to supply the shipyard with water, is beginning to assume shape. The 30-foot channel which is to run down the middle of the basin has been started. This runs the whole length of the reservoir and is two feet below the general surface.

German Kola, the new drink put on the market by the German Seltzer Co., has met with immediate popularity. It is prepared from the well known German Seltzer and absolutely pure. Its nature is that of a tonic and it is delightfully refreshing drink. Just the thing for dancing parties.

Probably no one in Quincy has made a more intelligent study of city governments than has H. G. Fay, who has had the experience of an assessor, a tax collector and a city treasurer. At the meeting of the Citizens' Association this week he argued for a change in our City Charter. The Daily Ledger of Monday will print his address.

During the storm encountered by the American fleet off Luzon of the Philippine Islands, William Fuller, a gunner's mate of the Rhode Island, built at Quincy, was washed overboard and drowned. Seaman Gladden of the Minnesota was also washed over, but was skilfully rescued by the crew of the Vermont, also built at Quincy.

SURPRISE PARTY.

John Mathieson of 447 Washington street was very agreeably surprised by a number of his friends on Wednesday evening when he was presented a meerschaum pipe. Mr. Mathieson is employed at the Fore River Works, and is a member of University lodge, N. E. O. P., of Cambridge. Although taken entirely by surprise Mr. Mathieson responded in a fitting manner. There was singing and dancing after which the company sat down to a fine collation prepared by Mrs. Mathieson.

—Mr. and Mrs. William H. Watson of Bath, Maine observed their golden wedding anniversary yesterday.

THE
Young Men's Christian Association
OF QUINCY, MASS.
(Legal Title—Incorporated 1892.)

The Directors of the YOUNG MEN'S CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION of Quincy, with a firm faith in the great value of the work which is being done for the young men and boys of our city, make their appeal for donations and bequests toward paying the mortgage indebtedness on the new Association Building. When the building is free from debt it will serve as an Endowment, as there is a goodly income from the dormitories.

Should the Donor prefer, such sum as might be given could be used as an Endowment for an educational class or classes, the Boys Department, or as a special fund in other ways, and could be designated with the name of the Donor.

The Treasurer, WILLIAM F. CUMMINGS, 7 Clive Street, Quincy, or the General Secretary, ERNEST G. GAY, will be happy to answer inquiries.

OUR HOSPITAL
(Legal Title: City Hospital of Quincy)
INCORPORATED 1889

The Trustees of the City Hospital of Quincy earnestly appeal for donations and bequests for the Endowment fund. This now amounts to over $60,000 but a fund of at least $100,000 is urgently needed.

Five Thousand Dollars ($5,000) will endow a Free bed to which such name may be given as the Donor may desire, but any sum for this noble institution which stands ready to serve us all in the hour of need will be most gratefully received.

The Secretary, TIMOTHY REED, Adams St. Quincy, or the Treasurer, RICHARD D. CHASE, Savings Bank Building, Quincy, will be very glad to confer with any one or to answer any inquiries.

DEATH BY GAS

Houghs Neck Man Who Lived Alone Found Dead

John H. McCorrison aged about 50 years was found dead this morning in a small shanty at 1272 Sea street his death being due to asphyxiation by illuminating gas.

The shanty is a small affair about 7 by 9 feet and was used by McCorrison as a lunch room. He also lived there, setting up a cot bed when he retired.

His place was open as late as one o'clock this morning and it is reported that there was a crowd there during the night, and there was more or less drinking.

This morning about 10 o'clock, H. R. Benn who resides in a cottage in the rear of the shanty, detected a strong odor of gas, which was traced to the McCorrison's place.

George Peterson, who owns the building, was notified and the door forced open. McCorrison was found lying on the couch dead. The place was filled with gas, and an open cock in a gas range told the story.

The building is full of cracks and a window was wide open, and under these circumstances it is somewhat remarkable that the man should have died.

Medical Examiner Jones, who viewed the body, said that the couch being near the floor and below the window, and the fact that the gas settled, was probably the reason it had overcome him.

Medical Examiner Jones gave the cause of death as accidental inhalation of gas. He said that McCorrison in setting up his couch probably opened accidentally a cock in the stove.

Among the man's effects was $17.45 in money, and a bank book on the Eliot National bank of Boston. There were also papers showing that he had at one time been a member of Asylum lodge, No. 70, I. O. O. F., of Augusta, Me., and was also a member of Calanthe lodge, No. 52, K. of P., of Augusta, Me.

McCorrison has been at Houghs Neck since last May, coming from Brockton. Letters were also found bearing the Augusta, Me., post mark, where it is thought he has relatives.

The man was formerly a carpenter but injured his right leg some years ago and the limb was amputated above the knee.

He was a man who never talked of his family affairs, but there were rumors that he had a divorced wife in Brockton.

Monatiquot lodge, K. of P., of Braintree was notified ,and the Augusta K. of P. lodge will probably be communicated with. The body was removed to Hall's undertaking rooms.

The first information received was that there had been a murder at Houghs Neck. A few minutes later Inspector Goodhue and a bunch of reporters in the automobile of Medical Examiner Jones were making a flying trip to the beach. The auto bounded over the street at a lively gait covering the distance in less than eight minutes.

An awstricken crowd was found outside the shanty, which Mr. Peterson had closed after turning off the gas.

The body lay stretched on its back on the little low couch, the mouth open, and eyes staring wildly as though he had partly recovered consciousness ,and realized he was inhaling the deadly gas, but was unable to help himself.

Medical Examiner Jones said that while the man had perhaps been drinking, he evidently knew what he was doing, as he had removed his clothing and hung it on a nail. The body was still warm and the man had evidently not been dead long.

"Jack' Starr, keeper of the City bathhouse, took advantage of the warm weather yesterday and went in for a swim at the bathhouse.

BETTER THAN SPANKING.

Spanking does not cure children of bed-wetting. There is a constitutional cause for this trouble. Mrs. M. Summers, Box W, Notre Dame, Ind., will send free to any mother her successful home treatment, with full instructions. Send no money, but write her today if your children trouble you in this way. Don't blame the child, the chances are it can't help it. This treatment also cures adults and aged people troubled with urine difficulties by day or night.

BURGLAR ALARM

Prevented Break At Jewelry Store Of T. L. Williams About Midnight

The ringing of a gong in an adjoining building, shortly after midnight gave warning that some one was trying to enter the jewelry store of T. L. Williams, at 1473 Hancock street.

The police station was notified and Patrick Maloney rushed into the street. He saw a man evidently on watch standing near the alleyway leading to the rear of the building, and another man standing at the side window of Mr. Williams' store.

Upon seeing him the two men ran up Hancock street. A few minutes later the patrol wagon with Officers Holloran and Cahill arrived, but there was no one then about. Maloney accompanied the officers to City Square and pointed out the two men who stood on the corner of Saville street near Kittredges store. Seeing the wagon the men attempted to escape and one of them did.

A man who gave his name as Fred Gagnon was arrested, however. He claimed his home to be in Ogdensburg, N. Y. He said that he met his compaion a month ago in Boston ,and that they came to Quincy. He acknowledged that he was in the vicinity of Williams' store, but stood on the street and made no attempt to break in.

On examining the store it was found that the side window had been pried open, but the man did not have time to enter.

Gagnon was in court and was held in $1,000 until Monday. In the meantime the police will look up his record and they hope to land the second man.

Unity Club Opens Season

As though decorated for a Hallowe'en party was the interior of the vestry of the Wollaston Unitarian church on Friday evening, for the opening meeting of the Unity club. Wreaths of laurel, autumn leaves and bright berries were everywhere.

After a delightfully informal reception of the fifty or more guests, the second part of the program, the "Kommers" was in order, which is German for a good time, for German students gathered about the festive board for eating and social entertainment, where all participate. Long tables were spread, covered with green and decorated with candles stuck into apples and baskets of red berries. There were steins and mugs of all kinds and pretzels, biscuits, bowls of punch and grape fruit, making a most tempting array.

After the guests were seated, Mrs. Robert Park, president, welcomed all in a clever little speech, followed by another by Mr. John Arnold, vice president. Mrs. Park was master of ceremonies, throughout the evening introducing much bright and original matter. She said, "Americans pay more to be amused than any other people whereas the people of other countries amused themselves and each other and that was what the Unity club was to do this evening." The poem of Carcasonne was given and members were called upon to respond in the same vein in verse and prose. There were many original poems, clever stories told, special stunts done, in fact the members covered themselves with glory, the whole evening being one of the brightest and best ever given at Wollaston.

For music there was singing, Mrs. F. A. Page, singing "Love's old sweet song"; Mrs. Lacey, "When the Swallows Homeward Fly"; and Miss Litchfield, "Old Folks at Home," which she followed with a tropical song about the doings of the Unity club. Every one joined in the choruses to the songs and the very rafters echoed with ringing notes.

A great success said every member and such a good time. The winter's program is looked forward to with pleasant anticipation.

MUCH BRYAN TALK IS HEARD

Drift of Political Sentiment In Nebraskan's Direction

GREAT ROOSEVELT PLURALITIES

Question as to Whether It Will Be Overcome by Democratic Tide—The Nation, so Far as Presidential Campaign Is Concerned, May Be Considered as Made Up of Just Five States In the Final Grapple

Washington, Oct. 17.—In spite of its being much decried as a place for knowing what is going on in politics because it is merely a government reservation, Washington is not without its feelers and runners extending to every part of the country. Its population is more representative of the country as a whole than any other city. So is its stream of visitors with their comments industriously gathered in the local press.

Every report from Ohio that comes here suggests that it is much in doubt, with the very large probabilities, whatever happens to the presidential ticket, that a Democratic legislature will send a Democrat to succeed Joseph B. Foraker.

Even the president, who takes an optimistic view of the campaign as a whole, is by no means enthusiastic in regard to Ohio, although he believes that Taft will carry it. Martin W. Hissey, one of Hanna's great lieutenants and long a Republican leader in the state, is here, and has given out for publication an interview to the effect that conditions in the state are deplorable beyond exaggeration. The Taft-Foraker feud is a pretty serious matter.

The Roosevelt majorities of 1904 were so extreme as to make it very difficult to estimate the amount of defection from Republicanism which may now be safely borne. Everybody agrees that the drift is towards Bryan; that more men who voted for Roosevelt four years ago will support Bryan this time than there are Parker men of 1904 that are coming out for Taft. The movement is overwhelmingly in one direction. Whether it will be sufficient to overcome the enormous Roosevelt pluralities is the only question at issue.

If comparison could be made with 1900, when Bryan and McKinley were the contestants, it would come nearer being serviceable. But that is too long ago; too many new voters have come in; custom is against it; The Associated Press will tell its story on election night on the basis of 1904.

Roosevelt's plurality of 255,000 in Ohio will go to pieces. If Taft carries the state by 30,000, according to all reports received here, he will do well, and he would have to carry it by at least that number in order to ensure a Republican legislature because—the reverse of conditions in New York and Massachusetts—the Democrats find it easier to carry the legislature than the general ticket. The present Ohio legislature has only one Republican majority on joint ballot.

Comparisons will be the same in the other doubtful states, like Wisconsin and Indiana; in none can anything like the Roosevelt majorities be this time expected. Bryan is making the greatest of his three campaigns. The popular desire for change, the accumulation of discontent, the inclination to turn out the man that is in, elements never absent from American politics, are contributing this time toward Bryan's success.

From this time the nation, for the purposes of this presidential campaign, may be considered as made up of just five states, Ohio, Indiana, Illinois and Wisconsin in the valley, and New York in the east. Other states are doubtful, but the period of watching little details and obscure corners is past. The politicians and the newspaper correspondents who come into Washington from these four states of the Mississippi valley invariably acknowledge a notable recession in the Republican tide, but the most of them conclude by saying that even if this recession does its worst the outcome will still depend on New York; they cannot believe that Bryan will carry enough in the west to make it possible for him to get along without the Empire state.

It is an extreme scaremonger who thinks Bryan can be elected without it, although such observers are occasionally found. If he should carry Ohio and Indiana and Illinois and Wisconsin he could be elected without New York, even though these states have but seventy-eight of the eighty-four electoral votes which he would need in addition to the solid south. But he could not carry these four without a lot of driftwood floating with the tide, such as Maryland or Nebraska, or Colorado and Montana. In fact, if Bryan should carry Illinois, Indiana and Ohio, without New York, the chances would be very large of his picking up the necessary votes elsewhere.

The men in the watch towers here are giving attention only to these five states. Plenty of accounts of prospects elsewhere come in, and they were interesting earlier in the campaign, but not now in the final grapple.

Taft on Interests of the South

Bristol, Tenn., Oct. 17.—William H. Taft's keynote for Tennessee and the south was struck by the candidate at Chattanooga. Throughout the day, which was spent in traversing the state, he followed the same line of argument and met with the same hearty response. With verbal amplification Taft emphasized this argument:

"With the material interests of the south dependent upon the continuance of the Republican policies, with nothing but historic tradition demanding its people to vote the Democratic ticket—praying meanwhile for the success of Republicanism—with southern Democracy nothing but a tail to northern Democracy's kite, then why not now take the first political cold plunge, go politically where the material interests of the country demand and vote the Republican ticket."

Great Crowds Greet Bryan

Denver, Oct. 17.—William J. Bryan was the guest of Denver for several hours last night. Despite a threatening storm, accentuated by a fitful rainfall, great crowds lined the streets through which the candidate rode to the Auditorium, where he delivered the principal speech of a program of speechmaking. All along the line of march he was received with enthusiastic acclaim. More than forty marching clubs from all parts of Colorado followed the candidate through the streets, and as he proceeded, the glow of pyrotechnics added to the brilliancy of the electrical effects especially arranged for the occasion.

Mr. Bryan halted the parade thrice to address crowds stationed at points along the line of march. These talks were arranged so that he might briefly speak to overflow meetings. It required three-quarters of an hour to reach the Auditorium, in which was assembled a great multitude. As many more were compelled to content themselves outside with a glimpse of the candidate as he passed through the entrance.

A feature of the parade was an effigy of an elephant representing the Republican party, lying dead from the shafts of Democratic assaults. Each spear was labelled with some Democratic argument such as "anti-publicity," "Ananias club," "tariff revision" and other similar inscriptions.

Debs on "Undesirable Citizens"

Baltimore, Oct. 17.—"Have the moral courage to be branded as an 'undesirable citizen.' Everyone of this country's most illustrious patriots were 'undesirable citizens' in the eyes of those whose power they opposed. You are teaching your children to revere their names, while the desirable citizens of their times lie in unhonored and unknown graves." This was one of the things Eugene V. Debs said last night to an audience that filled Richmond Market hall. He was given a really remarkable reception.

Fairbanks In New York

New York, Oct. 17.—I a round of Republican rallies held in widely separated sections of the city last night, Vice President Fairbanks addressed enthusiastic audiences and ran the gamut of Republican achievement during the period when the policies at issue in this campaign were in process of formulation and execution. Beginning with a speech on the lower East Side, the vice president talked on the tariff, the currency, the trusts and the records of the Republican candidates in the national campaign.

Taft and Labor

Chicago, Oct. 17.—T. J. Dolan, general secretary-treasurer of the International Brotherhood of Steam Shovel and Dredgemen, made public a letter from President Roosevelt. It was in answer to one sent by Dolan in which Dolan declared that his organization was proud of Mr. Taft's honorary membership in the brotherhood.

President Roosevelt's letter declares that Taft's election will be of great benefit to workingmen and says that Taft has made the Panama canal regime a model employer of labor.

Athlete Carpenter is Suspended

New York, Oct. 17.—President Sullivan of the Amateur Athletic Union of the United States has received official notification of the permanent suspension of J. C. Carpenter of Cornell university by the Amateur Athletic Association of Great Britain. Carpenter was the member of the American Olympic team who won the 400-metre race, but he was disqualified for alleged "boring" and interference with Lieutenant Halswelle, who was eventually awarded the race on a "walkover," the Americans refusing to compete in a rerunning of the event ordered by the judges.

Charges Against Goethals

Washington, Oct. 17.—Unfair methods, improper influence, and the offering of a 10 percent commission to a government officer by a prospective contractor, are some of the charges that figured in a hearing at the war department in the complaint against Lieutenant Goethals by President Brothers of the Balanced Crane Cable company of New York. Brothers alleged unfair methods in the award of a contract for cranes for use on the isthmian canal.

Good Volume of Business

New York, Oct. 17.—R. G. Dun & Co.'s Weekly Review of Trade says that moderate improvement is indicated in reports of current trade from most sections of the country, with pronounced confidence regarding the future. On the whole a good volume of business is recorded, and supplementary orders to jobbers and wholesalers again testify to the limited stocks on hand when the season opened.

QUINCY MUSIC HALL.

The Location is the best of any hall in the city. The street cars pass the door

The Elaborate, Permanent Decorations which have just been put up are most attractive, and add much to the appearance of the Hall.

The Electric Light Festoon over the entrance way, flashing first red, then white, is a unique feature of much value.

The Moonlight Effect obtained by having the electric light come through Japanese lanterns is a pleasing innovation.

The Floor is of selected maple laid with the greatest care, and is kept in perfect condition, being covered with canvas when not used for dancing.

The Ventilation—a most important consideration—is such as to keep the air pure with even a crowded Hall.

The Hall is Lighted by electricity, brilliantly and pleasantly, and with a switchboard arranged so that all desired effects can be obtained in the Hall proper or on the stage. Gas is used as an auxiliary light.

The Heating is direct—indirect, ample, and giving the most healthful results.

The Stage has been designed with care, and is furnished with a particularly generous supply of attractive and appropriate scenery.

For Advertising, the Music Hall Billboards are valuable.

To Darken the Hall, there are special window fittings so that at noonday the Hall can be made as dark as at midnight.

In case of fire there are pails of water and chemical fire extinguishers throughout the Hall. There is an asbestos fire curtain by which the Stage can be instantly cut off from the Hall proper. There are ten (10) doors opening from the Hall and six (6) separate exits.

As a whole, Quincy Music Hall has been carefully planned to meet the requirements of those who wish a large and really first class Hall.

OUR WAR VESSELS DELAYED

Japan Has a Great Object Lesson In Store

Tokio, Oct. 17.—The delay of the American battleship fleet in arriving at Yokohama was due to a tremendous storm off the north coast of the Island of Luzon. The storm began on the morning of Oct. 12 and continued until the afternoon of Oct. 13. One man was drowned and some slight damage resulted to the fleet. These details were communicated to The Associated Press at Tokio by wireless telegraph from the battleship Connecticut. The fleet will arrive at Yokohama tomorrow morning.

It is announced that as a delicate compliment to the people of America and for the purpose of doing fitting honor to the American fleet a Japanese fleet of equal size will be sent out to act as an escort to Admiral Sperry's fleet.

Thus when the armada steams up to Yokohama and is revealed to the sight of the Japanese there will be beside each American battleship a Japanese battleship of equal or greater tonnage. Beside the white hulls of the American line will loom the giants of the Japanese navy in fighting trim.

A comparison between the Connecticut, the flagship and the most powerful fighting machine of the visiting fleet, and the new Aki, Japan's most formidable battleship, will illustrate the strategy of the Japanese in presenting this object lesson. The Connecticut displaces 16,000 tons, the Aki 18,800; the Connecticut can make 18 knots, the Aki 20; the Connecticut's horse-power is 16,500, the Aki's 27,000; the Connecticut's battery consists of four 12-inch, eight 8-inch and twelve 7-inch guns; the Aki's four 12-inch, twelve 10-inch, twelve 4-inch guns and five torpedo tubes.

POLICE CAPTAIN IS SUSPENDED

Action After Detective Is Pointed Out as a Grafter

New York, Oct. 17.—The investigation into the affairs of the city license bureau, which has resulted in a number of arrests on "graft" charges, has produced another sensation. Francis Edwards and his wife, who have a moving picture show at Jamaica, had been called to testify before Commissioner of Accounts Mitchel regarding the manner in which they procured a license for their place. During their examination they pointed out and identified City Detective Tillman as a man who collected $25 a month from them as "protective money." Tillman emphatically denied the accusation. The detective is attached to the staff of Police Inspector Sweeney.

Tillman was subsequently placed under arrest on a charge of perjury and it was shortly afterward announced that Sweeney would be summoned to appear as a witness before Mitchel on Monday. After a conference with Mitchel and Tillman Deputy Police Commissioner Hanson last night ordered the suspension from duty of Police Captain Tracy, in command of the precinct at Jamaica.

The nature of the revelations made to the deputy police commissioner are unknown. Hanson would only say that he suspended the captain on information furnished him by Tillman.

Jesuit Consecrated as Bishop

Washington, Oct. 17.—With solemn ceremony, Rt. Rev. Laurenus Veres of the province of Mexico was consecrated a bishop. The service was conducted at Trinity church, West Washington. Papal Delegate Falconio acted as consecrator. The ceremony was held in this city owing to the wish of President Diaz of Mexico that the consecration be by the papal delegate to the United States. It furnished one of the few instances of a Jesuit being made bishop in a Catholic church. Bishop Veres will return shortly to Mexico.

Bishopric Declined by Mann

Washington, Oct. 17.—Giving as a controlling reason that his work in Boston is still unfinished, Rev. Dr. Alexander Mann, rector of Trinity (Episcopal) church of that city, has declined the position of bishop of Washington to succeed the late Rt. Rev. Henry Y. Satterlee. Another convention will be called to fill the vacancy. Mann's declination is the third since the death of Satterlee about six months ago. Rt. Rev. Charles H. Brent, bishop of the Philippines, twice refused the bishopric.

Fighting to Recover Fortune

Charlottesville, Va., Oct. 17.—John A. Chanler gave a narration yesterday of his life, which occupied the entire day in the hearing of the suit to establish his sanity and to recover his fortune, which, he alleges, has been confiscated by the courts of New York. He was still on the stand when court adjourned for the day. His testimony centered about family differences and litigation growing out of his father's will and the efforts to have him restrained of his liberty.

NEWS IN BRIEF

Four firemen were overcome by smoke while fighting a fire in the residence of R. M. Fullerton at Brockton, Mass. The condition of the men is not serious. The damage to the house was slight.

John C. Goodwin, a member of the G. A. R., dropped dead of heart disease at Haverhill, Mass., a few minutes after he had delivered an address before Burnside council, Union Veterans' union. He was 72 years old.

Lady Betty Across the Water

By C. N. & A. M. WILLIAMSON

Copyright, 1906, by McClure, Phillips & Co.

SYNOPSIS.

CHAPTER I—The story is told in the first person by Lady Betty Bulkeley, the pretty young sister of the Duke of Stanforth. She is to visit America in care of Mrs. Stuyvesant-Knox (Mrs. Ess Kay,) a leader of American society, and the latter's cousin, Miss Sally Woodburn, in order that her elder sister Victoria's prospective fiance, Sir Gilbert Mantell, may not be attracted by her.

II—On board ship Betty is attracted by a young American steerage passenger, who saves a child from drowning. Mrs. Ess Kay, who is very "exclusive," objects to Betty's interest in the young man. Betty also meets Tom Doremus, cousin of Mrs. Vander Windt, of New York society.

III—Lady Betty gets her first impression of America. On the dock she is rescued from reporters by the steerage hero, who tells her he is Jim Brett, employed at the Manhattan club, New York. In Mrs. Ess Kay's splendid New York home Betty meets Lieutenant Parker brother of the hostess, who is to take them to visit West Point.

IV—Vivace, a beautiful and expensive dog, is sent to Betty. Mrs. Ess Kay does not know who the donor is, and Betty does not tell her that it is Brett. Lieutenant Parker, whom Betty does not like, makes love to her.

Chapter 5

I COULD hardly have supposed that there were as many people in the whole world put together as at Coney Island, and most of them were in pairs, like the animals on their way to the ark. They all seemed to be engaged to each other and delighted with each other's society, or else married and dreadfully tired of it. Or else they had dyspepsia. Or else they had brought too many of their children, for they had droves of very small ones, who bellowed louder than any English children I ever saw and tyrannized over their parents in the most unbridled way.

But Coney Island was fun, and I felt more than ever that I was dreaming—a long, long dream of sands and huge hotels and queer little booths.

For dinner we ate nothing but fish, of so many different kinds and some of them so strange, that I almost feared the dream might turn into a nightmare afterward. I found the clams rather like olives. You hate the first, but when you have had three you feel you would like three dozen, and they are not at all easy to forget.

We went down under the sea and were introduced to horrific monsters, sailed up and down on switchbacks, which made Mrs. Ess Kay ill, but she nobly refused to desert me in such surroundings—a state of mind which made her chin look incredibly square. Eventually, after many adventures by the way, we arrived at the moon, and not only got into the middle of it, but made acquaintance with the inhabitants, none of whom appeared to be over two feet high or to have anything to speak of between their chins and their toes. After that experience, minstrel shows and concerts and persons who told your fortunes with snakes, or ate glass, were rather an anticlimax; still, I enjoyed them all so much that I was incapable of extreme annoyance when we discovered that the Evening Bat had an "impressionist sketch" of me which made me look like an elderly murderess.

We got back to New York almost indecently late, but in the meaner parts through which we had to pass on the way to our gorgeousness the streets swarmed with poor creatures, pallid with heat, evidently preparing to camp out of doors till morning. It was a strange and interesting sight, but made me feel guilty when I recalled it afterward in my great cool bedroom, with my five different kinds of baths.

Next morning I was waked early to find more presents of flowers in huge stacks and to get ready for West Point. I was a little tired from yesterday, and the dry heat gave me rather the sensation of being a scientist's field mouse in a vacuum, so that I should have dreaded even a short journey if we hadn't been making it by water.

It was even better than if we had been ordinary tourists on one of the big Hudson river boats I had heard about, for we were to travel luxuriously in a little steam yacht of Potter's, which he calls the Poached Egg because it can't be beaten. It is not a vulgar yacht, as one might have thought from the name, but a dainty thing that ought to have been the Butterfly, Ye White Ladye or something of that sort. When I said so, Mr. Parker insisted that he would at once rechristen her Lady Betty, which would have a prettier meaning than anything else, and then I was sorry I'd spoken.

I had expected to be disappointed in the river, because nearly everybody I met on board ship tried to impress upon me that we had nothing half so good in England, while as for the Rhine, it wasn't a patch on the Hudson. I even wanted to be disappointed, out of patriotism or spite, which are much the same thing sometimes, but I couldn't. I found the Hudson too grand for petty jealousy. It seemed to me like a great, noble poem, rolling on and on in splendid cadences, and I have heard some music of Wagner's that it reminded me of somehow.

The hills or mountains—I'm not sure which to call them—even the Palisades which have been so dinned into my ears, were not high enough to satisfy me at a first glance, but soon I saw that it was their grouping and their perfect proportion in relation to each other which made them so exquisite. As we steamed on along the green and golden flood between banks that appeared to fall back in admiration I began to love the Hudson so much that I could have shrieked with rage at the great staring advertisements on hoardings. What can the scenery have done to Americans that they should do their best to spoil it? No wonder most of them come over to see ours, which we have the sense to let alone even if it crumbles.

Sally and Mr. Parker laughed at my fury, but I didn't see how they could take it so calmly. "It isn't my scenery, so I don't trouble myself," said Potter when I asked why he didn't get up a secret night expedition to burn or chop down all the hoardings. But I'm sure English people aren't careless like that. Each person thinks the good of the whole country is his business—at least one would suppose so by the way everybody who comes to Battlemead talks politics and affairs of public interest morning, noon and night. It seems, though, in America only policemen and people who live in Washington care about politics really except to get benefits for themselves, and it isn't good form to be too much interested in such things.

Victoria would like this rule, for she has confessed to me that political questions bore her, and she would much rather be talked to about love or motoring or even bridge, but she always reads the newspapers hard for fifteen minutes while Thompson does her hair, if she's going out to a big lunch or dinner, so that she will be up in everything and able to talk brilliantly to members of parliament or stuffy old things in the house of lords.

I calmed down somewhat after I'd recovered from the first shock. There was so much to admire that it seemed a shame to fret. Besides, it was soothing to sit on the yacht's deck under a pale green awning, drinking what I call a lemon squash and Potter and Sally obstinately believe to be lemonade. While Mrs. Ess Kay angrily read nasty paragraphs about herself and hilariously about her friends in a regular highwayman of a paper, Smart Sayings, Sally Woodburn told me charming legends of the Hudson, dear old Dutch things, most of them, which had been made into plays and poems, and I was sorry when we came to West Point at last.

But I wasn't sorry for long. The minute we got on shore at a quaint little landing shoved incongruously in among beautiful wooded hills, the most exquisite scents of ferns and trees and sweet, moist earth came hurrying down to welcome us. Eton is not more beautiful than West Point, and as we drove up the hill under an arbor of trees I saw that the buildings cleverly contrived to look old and gray and picturesque, like ours. The elms in a big green square past the top of the hill had a venerable air, too, so they must have been precocious about growing, for it doesn't stand to reason that West Point can be as ancient as Oxford or Eton. But anyway the elms were there, making an effect that England couldn't improve on, and there were some gray stone barracks and a long line of officers' quarters built of wood and brick. I was glad that we were to stop with Potter, instead of going to a hotel, for I did want to see thoroughly what garrison life is like. Potter has only half a house, though I suppose he's rich enough to buy up all West Point if it were for sale, but he had got a chum of his who lives in the other half to clear out of his part and give it to us for the day and night.

PAPER STRIKE SPREADING

Supply For Newspapers Reported to Be Rapidly Diminishing

New York, Oct. 17.—Through the ordering out of men employed in the independent paper mills, it is indicated that efforts are being made to make the paper strike general. Several independent concerns were compelled to close down yesterday because the men were ordered to go on strike by President Carey of the Papermakers' union.

Heretofore the strike has been practically confined to the plants of the Great Northern and International Paper companies, the two largest concerns in the country. These two concerns turn out about 50 percent of the entire output of paper. Efforts to treat with the strikers, say the officials of the companies, were unsuccessful, and now both union and non-union men are being employed.

Publishers fear that if a general strike is brought about there will be a paper famine, which, on the eve of election, would greatly injure their interests, they say. The Great Northern and the International Paper companies cannot begin to supply the demand for paper, say publishers, even if their mills are running to full capacity.

An official of one of the large paper manufacturing concerns says that the entire reserve supply of paper in this country and Canada is not sufficient to meet the demands of the newspaper presses of the country for more than two weeks at the most. The export trade has been stopped, he says, and the drought, which has shut off the water supply for many mills, increases the difficulty of the situation.

LONDON PROPOSAL WILL BE REJECTED

Turkey Will Get No Money For Bulgarian Independence

Sofia, Oct. 17.—The members of the Bulgarian cabinet who accompanied Czar Ferdinand to his hunting lodge in the Rilo mountains returned here and announced the result of their deliberations under the presidency of Ferdinand.

FERDINAND OF BULGARIA.

The cabinet has decided to reject the proposal emanating from London for the payment of indemnity to Turkey as a condition of recognizing Bulgaria's independence. A note to that effect will be sent by the Bulgarian administration to the powers.

The only question the government is willing to negotiate is the purchase rights of the Oriental Railroad company.

Alleged Passers of Bad Checks

Boston, Oct. 17.—Osceola W. Laselle was brought back here from Troy, N. Y., by Boston inspectors and locked up, charged with uttering forged checks. The police allege that the woman, together with J. B. Fraser, who was also arrested at Troy and was taken to Manchester, N. H., have been implicated in the passing of many forged or fraudulent checks in a number of New England cities.

Locomotive Fireman Killed

Athol, Mass., Oct. 17.—Nicholas O'Connell, aged 34, a locomotive fireman, was instantly killed by being struck by an overhead bridge. O'Connell had been repairing the bell cord of the locomotive and was crawling over the top of the cab when the locomotive shot under the bridge. His spinal column was fractured at the base of the brain.

Two Men Killed by Train

Leominster, Mass., Oct. 17.—Elbert Lamoureaux, 24 years of age, and James White, 23, were walking on the railroad tracks and stepped in front of a passenger train in an effort to avoid a freight train approaching from the other direction. Both men were killed. They were employed in local comb factories and both were married.

No Designs Upon Honduras

Washington, Oct. 17.—Both Salvador and Guatemala have given positive assurances that they have no ulterior designs upon Honduras, where rumor has been rife for some days of a threatened invasion. Honduras became alarmed over these reports, as she has just emerged from a revolutionary movement.

The way that our trade has taken to our

New Cash and Discount System

demonstrates to our satisfaction that we are giving them just what was needed in Quincy, and we have decided to extend our liberal offer, and will say, that to all our customers who find it impossible to carry their purchases home with them, if they bring or send their order to our store, and PAY CASH for it, we will deliver the same and allow 2% DISCOUNT from amount of purchase.

Now we think that this plan will give everyone a good Square Deal, and every intelligent buyer must see that we are more than doing our share to give them what every cash buyer deserves today, first class goods at a low price.

Now, don't forget our other proposition, that all who purchase goods of us, pay cash and carry their purchase home—we will give a Discount of 5% off the amount of purchase, besides selling our goods at the very lowest mark.

We will make a feature of having some special article each day marked at Genuine Bargain Price.

Now read this over carefully and we feel confident that you can see it just the way that we do—something that is surely needed in Quincy—a high grade of goods sold at a very low price.

Quincy Locals Briefly Told

The residence of Mr. Sangster Troup, on Plymouth street, looks splendid, having received a fresh coat of paint last week.

Miss Alice M. Kyle, field secretary of the Woman's Board of Missions will speak Sunday evening, Oct. 18, at the Point church.

Unity circle, Kings Daughters, are to hold an all-day sewing meeting at Bethany chapel next Wednesday, 10 to 4. Basket lunch.

The Republican City Committee appeared out last night in elaborate badges, and all were on duty to make the rally a success.

The Young People's Religious union of First church will hold its opening meeting at seven o'clock Sunday night in the church parlor.

Mr. Maurice Powers of Bigelow street, who has been at the hospital for appendicitis, has so far convalesced as to be able to return home this week.

The old house which used to stand at the corner of Atlantic and Hancock streets has been removed and remodeled by the present owner, Mr. George S. Blaisdell of Neponset, and a family have moved in.

The Fragment society of First church meets every Wednesday for an all day sewing bee, preparatory to the fair to be held Nov. 11th. Members take box lunches and the meetings are a social success as well as accomplishing much sewing.

At the concert in the Parish house of Christ church on Tuesday evening Mrs. Frank J. Moore sang from manuscript the "Song of the South," music by Wendell H. Luce, the occasion being its first rendering. It was received with appreciative encores.

The Mayor announces that Messrs. Shurtleff and Baxter of the Metropolitan Improvement Commission will be at City Hall Wednesday evening, Oct. 21, and all citizens are invited to be present. They will explain the plan of improvements of docks, streets and other matters and receive suggestions as to the needs of Quincy.

The new flag pole of the Coddington school is now in place and being 104 feet, looms up in great style. The pole was cut and erected under the personal direction of Walter H. Andrews of Quincy, and is the tallest in the city. Mr. Andrews also had charge of the erection of the flag poles at the High, the Washington and Quincy schools.

DEAFNESS CANNOT BE CURED.

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

Castle Square Theatre.

The past few weeks since the opening of the Castle Square theatre under the management of Messrs. Gulesian and Craig have revealed the fulfillment of their promises to make that house the leading theatre in Boston. Not only have the plays been of the highest class and the greatest popularity, as has been shown by the large audiences that have assembled day after day, but the members of the John Craig Stock Company have demonstated an all round ability that is exceptional. It is without exaggeration that the company in each play produced many be called an "all-Star cast" and it is especially interesting to note that not only are all the old-time Castle Square patrons gathering in full force every week, but large numbers of others who have never been inside its doors are awakening to the fact that the very best plays and the very best acting may be seen there. For the coming week one of the most famous of Henry Arthur Jones's celebrated dramas will be offered. T he play is "Judah" which the distinguished English actor Edward S. Willard included in his repertory for many seasons, and it is safe to say that the Castle Square production will not be excelled by any previous presentation of the play in Boston. It is a drama of intense and obsorbing interest, it holds the audience alert at every moment through the suspense of its plot and the power of its characters, and in its title role Mr. Craig will give an impersonation that will be remarkable for its restrained emotional force. The run of "Judah" will be positively limited to one week.

TIME SHORT

In Which to Make Nominations For the City Caucuses

The earliest date for filing nominations for the municipal caucuses, both Republican and Democratic, is Tuesday, Oct. 27, and the time expires Thursday, Oct. 29. There are therefore less than two weeks to select city candidates for the December election.

It looks now as though Mayor Shea would have no apposition for renomination as the Democratic candidate for Mayor, and the Republicans may be equally unanimous for ex-Councilman Eugene R. Stone of Ward Two. Whether those who voted for Mr. Shea last year, to secure a change, will stick to him this year, is the problem of the hour, as Quincy is still a Republican City.

C. E. CONVENTION.

The twentieth convention of the Massachusetts Christian Endeavor Union will be held at Lynn, Thursday, October 22, to Sunday, October 25, inclusive. The State Union embraces almost nine hundred Young People's and over four hundred Junior and Intermediate Societies.

The program committee's announcement, which has just been issued, states that the First Methodist, First Congregational, First Baptist, Washington Street Baptist, First Presbyterian, Central Congregational churches are to be used for various sessions, as well as Odd Fellows hall.

The Lynn committee are also providing for several social functions, which will be a helpful feature of the convention. Among these is a reception on Thursday evening, after the services, for the delegates and State officers; and on Friday afternoon, after the business meeting, a banquet for the officers of the State, District and Local unions with the junior superintendents.

Norfolk County And Vicinity

The program committee of the Norfolk County Sunday school association have secured eight able speakers for their annual gathering Nov. 11, afternoon and evening, at the SOUTH BRAINTREE Congregational church. Two of these speakers are: Dr. Alexander of Boston, who will speak at the afternoon session; and Rev. A. M. Hyde, D. D., of Brockton, who will speak at the evening session.

The home of Arthur S. Tucker of WELLESLEY was broken into by boys Thursday afternoon and a varied loot was taken, but recovered later by Patrolman Wright. The boys broke a window in the rear of the house and thus gained entrance. By the goods taken it was thought to be work of boys, and this proved to be true. The loot was found hidden in some underbrush nearby.

A miniature forest fire in RANDOLPH this week caused quite a struggle for the men who worked to put it out. The fire burned over about 15 acres before it was extinguished, and for a time threatened some nearby dwellings. Gunners who were prowling about, caused the fire.

A grand re-dedication ball will be held on next Wednesday evening in Chenery hall, MEDFIELD. This hall has been thoroughly renovated and is now ready for the inspection of the most critical. Col. E. V. Mitchell is chairman of the committee of arrangements, and a good time is assured.

The STOUGHTON court, M. C. O. F., last night entertained St. Catherine's court of Norwood, in Forester's hall. There were about 225 present and addresses were made by different officers and by the chaplains of the two courts. There was also a short entertainment.

The funeral of Mrs. Mary E. Porter of AVON was held on Thursday from her late home Spring street, and was largely attended, by relatives and friends. The nephews of Mrs. Porter were the bearers.

The Canton glee club held its annual ball in Memorial hall, Canton, last night, and the attendance crowded the hall to its utmost capacity. Edward E. McDermont was in charge of the floor.

The bridge over Weir river, HULL, which was burned this week, has been sufficietnly repaired to allow trains to use one track.

Miss Mabel Easton of HOLBROOK, and Timothy E. Kelliher were married Thursday evening, the ceremony being performed at the parochial residence of St. Joseph's church, by Rev. T. F. Brannan, the pastor. After the ceremony there was a reception at the home of the bride on Weston street.

Mrs. T. A. Nichols of WRENTHAM, matron of the Pond Home for the aged, has resigned, Mrs. Dean, formerly of the Cambridge Baptist Home, has been appointed by the trustees.

Selectman Thompson of DOVER, who fell from an apple tree a few days ago, is pretty well used up. No bones were broken, but he was bruised considerably, and is confined to his home as a result of the fall.

A town meeting will be held Monday evening in the town hall, NEEDHAM, for the purpose of discussing the extension of the street light system and the appropriation of money for school purposes. Several minor matters will also come up at this meeting.

The Westland quartette, composed of Miss May Belle Dadmun of Roxbury, Mrs. Emma Moore and Mrs. Dorothy Miller, and Miss Alice Gertrude Coe of Atlantic, sang at the Dorchester Woman's club Tuesday afternoon. The quartette, which is perfected in all details of singing, was greatly appreciated and roundly applauded.

Foot Ball And Other Sports

About forty boys of the Quincy Y. M. C. A. are rooters today for the Springfield Training School team which lines up against the Harvard foot ball team at Cambridge.

Yesterday Milton High was defeated at football by Medford High 23 to 0, and Revere downed Hyde Park 11 to 0.

Miss Mollie B. Adams of the Wollaston Golf club is entered in the Women's amateur golf championship tournament which opens at Chevy Chase, Md., on Monday ,and is paired with Mrs. J. M. Stoddard of Columbia club.

Wellesley High vs. Quincy High at Merrymount park today.

Well Known in Athletic Field

Joseph H. McDonald, son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas McDonald, and one of Quincy's most popular young men, passed away yesterday at his home 12 Deldorf street. He had been sick all summer but not seriously enough to keep him from work. About two weeks ago, however, he was forced to take to his bed, and passed peacefully away. It was that dread disease consumption which "Joe" has been fighting against in vain, and all summer he has slept out of doors to try and shake it off.

Mr. McDonald was 21 years old and a graduate from Quincy High school in 1906, since then he has been in the employ of the wholesale firm of Farley, Harvey & Co. of Boston.

"Joe" was well known in the athletic world of Quincy, playing on the base ball team while at High school. He also played first base and captained the Bigelow team of Quincy Point, and under his direction the Bigelows had their most successful season. At the Y. M. C. A. Joe was a familiar figure and although light, was considered one of the best basket ball players at the "gym." But with all this strenuous athletic life, he was not able to build himself up, and last spring had to drop out of athletics altogether.

Mr. McDonald is survived by a father and mother, three brothers and three sisters. The funeral will be held Sunday from his late home at 1.15, and services will be held in St. John's church at 2. Burial will be in Weymouth.

JOLLY COMRADES.

The opening dance of the season was held last night in A. O. H. hall, under the auspices of the "Jolly Comrades." This is a club made up of five hustling and popular young men of West Quincy and their popularity was shown when nearly two hundred couples attended their first dance. The floor was in charge of George Hastings, assisted by the other four as aids, Harry McIntosh, William Smith, Luther Bradbury and Robert Smith. Wilson's orchestra furnished the music. During the intermission refreshments were served and a short entertainment was given.

Narrow Escape For Teamster

Ceeley Burke, driver of one of Baker's Weymouth express teams, had a narrow escape from serious injury Saturday afternoon when he was buried beneath his capsized team on Quincy avenue.

The team heavily loaded with a miscellaneous assortment of goods, and drawn by a pair of horses had reached a point about midway between Scammell street and Newcomb Square. Burke stopped his team and got off for some reason. Then it was that the horses began to move about, so that the wheels were on the edge of the embankment on the northerly side of the street. Burke rushed to that side of the wagon and shouting to his horses tried to hold the team from slipping over. He was not strong enough, however, and over went the team burying Burke and the two horses beneath the wagon.

For a few minutes it looked as though Burke must have been killed. The police were notified and they in turn sent out a call for physicians. City Physician Hallowell and Dr. Garey responded. When they arrived, however, the team had been jacked up, and Burke taken out. The physicians made a hasty examination, and found that he was not seriously injured. He was taken to the police station in the patrol wagon.

Meantime people attracted to the scene had unloaded the wagon and succeeded in jacking up the wagon so that the horses could be taken out. Chief Burrell also sent an officer to guard the goods until the owner could come after them, as Burke with his own load and his bruises was unable to care for himself. Before the police arrived several of the bystanders had their fill of beer of which there was several cases.

FREE TRADE OR PROTECTION.

An interesting debate is scheduled for Friday night in Quincy Music Hall, when Gen. Hazard Stevens, free trader and candidate for Congress wil lspeak against Col. Albert Clarke, protectionist and secretary of the Home Market club. The question will be on tariff. Mr. Stevens holding all tariff should be removed from raw materials, food and other stuffs made here and sold abroad cheaper than our people can buy. Mayor William T. Shea of Quincy will probably preside at the debate.

The Holy Name club of St. John's church had about 300 at Merrymount on Sunday afternoon, drilling for the big parade to be held Nov. 1, in Boston. This parade will be the closing feature of a week's celebration in honor of the centennial of the founding of the Boston diocese. It is expected that 35,000 Holy Name members will be in line on that day.

Former Chums As Pall Bearers

The funeral of Joseph H. McDonald was held Sunday from his late home, 12 Deldorf street, and was largely attended. The funeral left the house at 1.30, the bearers, former chums of the deceased, walking beside the hearse to St. Johns church, where services were held at 2 oclock, Rev. John J. Casey officiating.

The church was well filled with relatives and friends, many of the High school and Y. M. C. A. boys being among those present. While at school and at the Y. M. C. A., "Joe" was popularly identified with the social and atheletic activities, particularly the latter, being considered one of the fastest basket ball players at the Y. M. C. A.

The members of the Bigelow baseball club also attended the services of their former captain and first baseman.

The flowers were beautiful, and their abundance completely surounded the casket in the house, and covered the grave. Pieces were sent by relatives and friends, by the Y. M. C. A. boys, and four of his chums from the Point sent a beautiful piece.

The bearers were, Ray Brown, Timothy DeCoste, Thomas Larkin, Russell Sullivan, Harry J. Histen and Peter M. Sulivan. The burial was at St. Francis Xavier cemetery, South Weymouth.

Y. M. C. A. NOTES.

One of the most spectacular athletic events ever held in this part of the country is scheduled for Nov. 7. It is to be a relay race, carrying a message from Providence to Boston. About one hundred young men will compose the team. These will be selected from the best runners from the Providence, Taunton, Brockton, Quincy and Boston Y. M. C. A's. Each man to run a half mile relay.

The best local runners have already entered their names and begun training. The race is open to all Y. M. C. A. members.

All the regular gymnasium classes have been running for two weeks with a fairly good attendance, even tho the weather man was so kind. New members are even more numerous than old ones on the floor.

Several good basket ball players and athletics have joined and will do much to strengthen these teams.

Athletic meets and basket ball games are being arranged and an active season in both lines is assured.

The following is the class schedule: Business men, Mondays and Thursdays 5.15 to 6 P. M. Seniors, Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays 8 to 9.30 P. M. Students, Mondays, Wednesdays and Saurddays 3.30 to 5 P. M. Employed Boys, Mondays, Wednesdays, Tuesdays 4 to 5.30, Saturdays 10 to 11.30 A. M.

A class for older business men will be held from 2.30 to 3.30 if fifteen members agree to attend.

New Hours at The Shipyard

Beginning today the hours of labor in the ship and engine works at the Fore River will be as follows: 7.00 A. M. to 12.00 noon; 12.30 P. M. to 4.30 P. M., Monday to Saturday inclusive. The hours of clerks and others in the main office will be as follows: 8.15 A. M. to 12.00 noon; 12.30 P. M. to 4.45 P. M., Monday to Saturday inclusive. The hours for drafting rooms and forge will remain as at present.

Commencing Monday, October 19, workingmen's tickets will be accepted on trains leaving Quincy for Boston at 5.13, 5.29 and 6.16 P. M., Monday to Saturday inclusive.

The company has constructed a bicycle shed near the main gate. All employees entering the yard through the main gate will be required to keep their bicycles in this shed. Each man riding a wheel must provide himself with a padlock which can be obtained at the main storehouse and which will be numbered. The padlock must be presented to the chief timekeeper for registration when a stall in the rack will then be assigned to him. Wheels should be kept locked when in the racks and when a man discontinues riding a wheel he should turn in his lock to the timekeeper's office and receive credit for it. Each man must adhere to his own number and the bicycles will be stored in this shed just as soon as each man riding one can obtain a padlock and register it. If employees desire to have their machines cared for and watched over during the day, the company will be glad to arrange for this at a weekly rate of ten cents, providing not less than 125 employees desire to make this arrangement.

UNCLAIMED LETTERS.

The following letters remain in the Quincy Post office unclaimed for week ending Oct. 17:

Mrs. Leda Blonin, Miss Marguerite Cahill, George F. Davis, Mrs. Erminia Esther, Alice Foss, Mrs. E. A. Glover, Mrs. A. E. Gore, Michele Gramazio, R. Halliday, Capt. Fred W. Hartt, Mollie Havangen, Miss Mina Jansan, Mrs. Grace C. Macomber, Mr. McDevitt, A. McKinnon, Duncan McVicar, A. Newman, Miss Hilga Nilson, Lallie Ring, John Robertson, Mary Ryan, Oskar Salminers, Malcolm C. Stewart, Mrs. Lucy Sutherland, Alex Thomson, Mrs. My Thomson, Lela M. Twombley, 36 Intervale Street.

An extra meeting is to be held Tuesday afternoon at the club house of the Quincy Women's club for the benefit of the Tuberculosis exhibit to be given the last of the month at City hall under the auspices of the club and the city. Miss Edith Randall volunteered her services for the cause and will give a talk on "Sunny Italy." There have been many subscribers and a large attendance is anticipated.

Norfolk County And Vicinity

A pair of large whales off SCITUATE, have caused much excitement among the fishermen of that section the past few days. Many are afraid to go outside the harbor for fear of being capsized. Large schools of pollock are said to be the cause of the whales' visit and they may stay several days longer.

A veteran firemen's association has been formed in Milton, I. Manning being president and Charles Peters, foreman. The engine is a six-inch Hunneman, and is known as the Hydraulion.

Niels Christensen, Jr., has been returned to the State Senate of South Carolina. He received his education largely in the schools of Brookline. Mr. Christensen was only 29 years old when first elected to the senate, and is known in every part of the state he represents.

Louis Arvidson of AVON fractured his arm while playing football on Friday and went to the Brockton Relief Hospital for treatment.

A. St. John Chambre Post G. A. R., of STOUGHTON, will be inspected Tuesday night in G. A. R. hall, by Assistant Inspector Commander R. L. Weston of Canton.

The senior class of Stetson High school of RANDOLPH gave an entertainment and dance at Stetson hall, Friday evening. The class colors and banners were in evidence all about the hall. A large attendance was present.

The first social and dance of the season was held Friday night in town hall, HOLBROOK, under the auspices of Thomas Aquinas Court M. C. O. F. About 100 couples were on the floor.

AT PRESIDENT'S HOUSE.

A very much interested party from the Quincy Mansion school, visited John Adams birthplace on Saturday, and under the guidance of Mr. King, who has charge of the house, went all over the birthplace of the second president of the United States.

There were twenty in all, and two by two, the young ladies approached the house and inquired if they might come in. Mr. King, always courteous and obliging to everyone, escorted them in and showed them everything of interest, telling the history of each article in his enthusiastic and pleasing manner. The girls gave him a royal send-off when they left and promised to come again with a bigger delegation.

The attractiveness of Quincy could be enhanced if the City ash collectors were to arrive on time and not leave a line of barrel on the streets as on Sunday on Summer and Gay streets.

Annual Collection For City Hospital

The annual collection for the City Hospital of Quincy "Our Hospital," will begin next week. Annually about this time a collection of funds is made for the benefit of the Hospital. It is the one solicitation of funds made directly by the trustees of the Hospital and is solely for the purpose of defraying the current expenses of the institution.

Those unfamiliar with the conduct of the Hospital may ask "why is the Hospital not self supporting?" It is because the fees collected from paying patients in the open wards are not equal to the expenses of their care, and many patients are unable to pay anything. No one eligible to enter the hospital is refused admittance because of inability to pay the full cost of their care. Every year there has been a deficit of several thousand dollars. This year it is somewhat larger than usual. The construction of a much needed heating plant has added a debt which must be met by public contributions.

The yearly call for funds has been met by the citizens most generously, amount varying from $2,500 to $5,000 being raised by this means. It has seemed to many that in a city as large as Quincy where the citizens happily are generally prosperous a sum greater than the above would be forthcoming if every resident was given a full knowledge of the needs of the institution and an opportunity to contribute.

A slightly different method of collecting funds has been adopted this year. each ward being assigned to one or two collectors who will canvass every individual in their section till all have been given an opportunity to contribute. Next week they will begin the canvass. each collector will be given a letter of authorization, signed by Mr. Richard D. Chase, treasurer of the Board of Trustees, which will be shown by the collector on request. As the collector's duties will be ardous at the best it is hoped those inclined to help this most worthy charity will lighten their collector's labor by giving in their first visit and thus oviate the necessity of a second call.

The alarm from Box 75 at 6.32 Sunday night was for a slight fire in a house at 152 Main street owned by Abram Ginsburg and ocupied by Joseph Hadad. The fire was caused by a candle coming in contact with a curtain. The damage will not exceed $25.

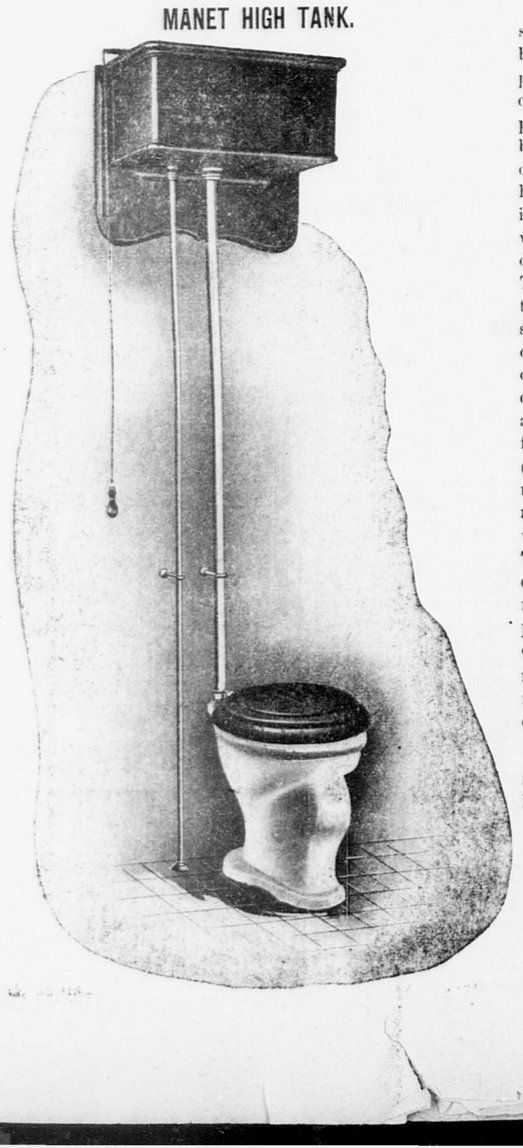
BATH ROOM EQUIPMENT.

MANET HIGH TANK.



We have made a study of selecting Bath Room Fixtures, both high and low priced, in presenting the views of these two closets, we show two moderate priced fixtures, the Manet Combination in either a high or low down tank combination. We have no hesitancy in recommending either one to you. The wood work is of well seasoned quartered oak, with piano polished finish. The tanks are lined with 12 oz. tinned copper, with lap folded seams, soldered strongly on the outside, (this prevents the deterioration of the solder, as the water cannot act directly on it.) They are equipped with high pressure float valves on the supply pipe, (having removable seats which may be easily replaced in making repairs,) and heavy brass syphon valves for the flushing device. The bowls are of heavy viterous crockery, highly glazed, (warranted not to craze or check) and produce a syphonic action in operation. This action quickly removes the contents of bowl when it is flushed from the tank. The seats are of neat design with heavy Nickle Plated brass bar hinges, which attach direct to the closet bowl, and when raised offers an opportunity for thorough cleaning.

Manet Low Down Closet Combination.

We can Heat as well as Plumb your Home, and we would be pleased to submit figures for your approval. Our heating figures are generally based on a Gurney Heater, but we can supply a heater of any other reliable make.

Brief Locals Of a Busy City

Councilman and Mrs. Robert J. Teasdale have returned from a pleasant trip to Washington.

The watering car was out Sunday, otherwise it would have been very dusty on some of the streets.

The frosts of last week ruined all the dahlias which retained their beauty longer than usual this fall.

The representative of the Quincy Congregational Union will meet tonight in the Bethany chapel.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank F. Prescott are in New Hampshire to attend the funeral of an uncle of Mrs. Prescotts.

Mayor Shea will formally open the annual festival of Division 5, A. O. H. There will also be addresses by prominent members of the order.

Tonight will be public hearing night at the City Council on petitions for the acceptance of six new streets. The first hearing is at 7.45 and the others at intervals of fifteen minutes.

A large number of arrests were made by the police Saturday night for drunkenness. The late trains brought out an unusually tough crowd, who smashed practically all the glass in the smoking car.

Commissioner Bainbridge has a large gang of men at work rebuilding that part of Sea street near "The Willows." The work is being done under a recent special order passed by the City Council.

The new voting lists show that Ward One heads the list with the largest number of voters, a total of 1145. Ward Five is second with 1005 and Ward Three third with 1003. Ward Four has 939, Ward Two 819 and Ward Six 782.

Returns from the two granite shipping terminals for the month of September show the total amount of granite forwarded to have been 12,168,185 pounds. Of this amount West Quincy forwarded 6,539,490 pounds and Quincy Adams 5,628,695 pounds.

The annual fall meeting of the Cape Catboat association will be held Friday evening in the office of the president in Quincy. The purpose of the meeting is to cause the big cats to reduce their sail areas and thus give smaller boats a chance to win once in a while.

The squash that has been on exhibition at the rooms of the Granite City club was opened Saturday night and the seeds counted. Nearly 900 guesses had been recorded, ranging from 1 to 3613. Of this number 145 was under 100 and 166 between 100 and 200. The squash, however, had 514 seeds. This number was guessed by H. F. Lalley.

Sferruzza—Crosta.

One of the prettiest weddings that has been solemnized in the Italian colony for sometime was that of Miss Rosie Crosta of 81 Columbia street, South Quincy and Mr. Andrew Sferruzza a well known resident of East Weymouth, which took place at 11 o'clock Saturday morning, at the bride's home. The ceremony which was performed by William M. Marden, Esq., was witnessed by the immediate family connections and friends. Mr. Guiseppe Guarallo of East Weymouth was best man and the bride was attended by Miss Jennie Solari of this city.

OUR CITY CHARTER

Does It Provide For Ecomomy And Intelligent Supervision

At the meeting of the Citizens Association last week H. G. Fay, the former City Treasurer, made the following argument in favor of a change in our City Charter:

The question we wish to solve is, whether our present charter is as near perfect in operation as any that can be adopted, whether with some changes it would be sufficient or whether a decided reform would result in benefit to our citizens.

Our present form of municipal government is based on the federal constitution. The business that the federal Congress or the state Legislature have to deal with is entirely different from that dealt with in the government of a city. In the former and especially in Congress, great questions of public policy are considered, which require time for full discussion and this plan of government seems to be well adapted for the purpose.

But in a municipal government no such questions are considered, but chiefly those that relate to the expenditure of the moneys raised by taxation to carry on the various departments.

When our present charter was adopted it was considered a great advance. Has not time shown that there is need for still further advancement?

To quote from a late public report: "The application of machinery to manufactures a century or more ago instantly caused not only a wonderful increase in output but also great economies in productive processes, but the industrial world was a long time in finding out that wastefulness and inefficiency in administration also constitute a most expensive violation of economic law; once the tremendous importance of this discovery was appreciated, the rapidity with which methods were devised for the elimination of administrative waste has been nothing short of marvelous.

"But that inefficiency in the domain of government, wherever it exists, is also and no less a species of economic waste which in the last analysis is a heavy burden upon every individual citizen, is only now beginning to be widely felt; and when the people are thoroughly aroused to this fact it is inevitable that sooner or later they will find the remedy and scientifically apply it as that democracy cannot fail.

"While the necessity of comprehensive thorough reform must appeal to all intelligent citizens, the impracticability of forcing speedy changes in method upon the prejudices and inertia of local officials, many of whom have no wider outlook upon the world than that of their own personality, is apparent."

Carroll D. Wright says: "Our cities grow so rapidly, and they are so poorly governed, that it is a matter of vital national importance that great reforms should be inaugurated."

Here are a few questions we should ask ourselves: "How does Quincy compare with other cities of the State?" Has the generally long tenure of office in other cities been beneficial? Have the frequent changes in Quincy been economical and wise? Has a large and practically inexperienced legislature body been a success?

Can we draw any conclusion from the following? In a city which has a population of over 76,000 and the lowest tax rate of any city in the Commonwealth, it is the practice not to accept a street until it is brought to a sub-grade with permanent sidewalks and surface drainage when necessary. Also to have no water mains laid in new territory, a guarantee to make good deficits in receipts.

In Quincy I have listened for hours while the legislative body discussed the granting of a victualler's license, but I recall no discussion of the practicability of requiring a street to be much more than a cart path before a large appropriation was made to put it in fit shape for traffic.

In the 33 cities of the state comparing the percentage of net debt with valuation ,the former city stands 32 while Quincy is 6.

The city of Everett adjoins Boston on the north;; Quincy on the south; both in the Metropolitan district, Everett with a population of 30,477, Quincy 28,944; assessed real estate valuation in Everett, $20,010,050; Quincy, $21,438,050; Everett has a square area of 3.75 miles, Quincy 16.64 miles; Everett has a net debt per capita of $39.11; Quincy $61.68; Everett with 36 miles of accepted streets spent $66,674 on highways and bridges; Quincy with 78 miles $82,187; for education Everett spent $170,672; Quincy $125,409; for the protection of life and property, Everett spent $61,246; Quincy $63,163.

These figures are taken from the report of the Chief of Bureau of Statistics of Labor for the year 1906, and are the latest issued from that source.

Everett became a city in 1893; almost its entire list of important administrative officials have been in office since the city was organized. You all know how it has been in Quincy. Has the long tenure of office in the one city, compared with the frequent changes in the other, any bearing upon the figures just given. Can you question whether stability and experience in officials who are under direct and immediate control of the people will be beneficial?

Our needs are many and pressing, our income small and restricted, requiring strict economy and intelligent supervision. Are we getting these two things, economy and intelligent supervision under our present form of charter? Will we get them under a similar form? Or will a new plan bring forth results that we all hope for and should all strive for?

Shall we continue to stumble on in the darkness of the past or shall we come out into the light of the twentieth century and have a safe, sane and superior form of government under direct control of the people?

Mr. Fay then read the following letter received from the Mayor of Des Moines, Iowa:

Des Moines, Iowa, Sept. 17, 1908.

Dear Sir: I regret to inform you that our supply of copies of the Des Moines Plan is exhausted. During October a new supply will leave the press. At that time we shall supply you.

There are countless evidences of the merit of our new system of government. We have been under its provisions for six months. The people are pleased; we are pleased; the press (which is alert and quite frank) is pleased; and as far as I know there is ample reason for general satisfaction and no reason for dissatisfaction. We are glad to know that President Eliot facorably criticised it.

The changes which may be made in the "Des Moines Plan" by the next legislature will pertain only to details. None of the main features of the law will be modified. We may ask for alterations which will improve our civil service provisions. That part of the law governing small expenditures may be altered slightly. Otherwise there will be no suggestions for change, unless improvements suggest themselves before the Assembly convenes.

It may interest you to know that bills are now being framed in Utah, Tennessee, Oklahoma, Washington, South Dakota and a dozen other states, all complying in important particulars to the Des Moines Plan.

We hope that Quincy and Massachusetts will get in line.

Yours truly,
A. J. MATHIS,
Mayor of Des Moines.

DEAFNESS CANNOT BE CURED.
by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.
We give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

EVANS IS SENTENCED

Court Martial Found Naval Lieutenant Guilty of Two Offenses

Yokohama, Oct. 19.—Lieutenant Frank T. Evans of the battleship Louisiana, who recently was court martialed on a charge of absenting himself from his post while officer of the deck, disrespect to his superior officer and intoxication, has been found guilty of the two former charges. Rear Admiral Sperry received the papers while the battleships were at Manila, and has just announced his verdict.

LIEUTENANT EVANS.

The sentence pronounced provides that Evans shall lose 150 numbers and shall be publicly reprimanded. The commander-in-chief adds that in his opinion the sentence is inadequate, but has approved it in order that Evans shall not entirely escape punishment.

Lieutenant Evans is a son of Rear Admiral Robley D. Evans.

HUMAN SKELETON MAY SOLVE MYSTERY

Athol Police to Seek Light on Burns' Disappearance

Athol, Mass., Oct. 19.—The finding of the remains of a human skeleton in the woods off the Petersham road by Charles Mathews will clear up, it is believed, the mysterious disappearance four years ago of Frank J. Burns, a jewelry salesman, who was robbed and, it was believed, murdered.

Mathews was hunting for some trace of William P. Stowers, who has been missing from Athol for a week, and stumbled across a pile of human bones, including the skull. He at once reported his find to the Athol police.

Burns came to Athol late in 1904 and had with him his sample case, containing gems valued at about $800. While visiting in Athol he disappeared, and no trace of him could be found.

The jewel case was found, however, and Walter C. Smith was arrested, charged with larceny of the gems from Burns, and sentenced to fifteen years in prison. The body of Burns could not be found and there was no certainty that he had been murdered.

The woods where the body was found had been searched, but they are so extensive that there was little chance of finding any clues. Mathews is unfamiliar with the woods where the remains were found, but believes he can take the police to the spot, and officers will visit the locality and take charge of the bones. An investigation will be made to learn, if possible, the cause of death and to determine if the remains are those of Burns.

Crushed by Carwheels

Boston, Oct. 19.—James J. O'Conner, aged 59, who conducted a grocery store and real estate office in Woburn and was one of the heaviest taxpayers of that city, was instantly killed by falling from a train at the North station. O'Conner was passing through the train to enter a forward car, carrying an armful of bundles. He slipped between two cars and fell under the wheels.

Italians In Fatal Affray

Boston, Oct. 19.—One man is dead and three others are suffering from wounds as a result of a shooting affray in the Italian quarter of the North End of Boston. The dead man is Alfred Cassetta, aged 30 years. The wounded are Lewis Cassetta, Bremianno and Rocco Myrabello. The two men injured and Mariano Phillippo are under arrest. The cause of the shooting and the details of the fight have not been unravelled.

Battleship Maine at Portsmouth

Portsmouth, N. H., Oct. 19.—Battleship Maine of the special squadron arrived at the navy yard here this morning. The Maine, with the Alabama, started with the Atlantic fleet on the world voyage from Hampton Roads. The two ships were detached from the fleet at San Francisco, however, and as a special service squadron returned to Suez canal. The Alabama is on the way to New York.

Barre Loses an Old Citizen

Barre, Mass., Oct. 19.—Pliny H. Babbitt, aged 90, who had been very prominent in town affairs, died of pneumonia. He had been town moderator for forty years, was town constable for fifty years, and followed his calling of auctioneer for sixty-four years. Babbitt was a lieutenant in the Massachusetts Volunteers.

Lady Betty Across the Water

By C. N. & A. M. WILLIAMSON

Copyright, 1906, by McClure, Phillips & Co.

SYNOPSIS.

CHAPTER I—The story is told in the first person by Lady Betty Bulkeley, the pretty young sister of the Duke of Stanforth. She is to visit America in care of Mrs. Stuyvesant-Knox (Mrs. Ess Kay,) a leader of American society, and the latter's cousin, Miss Sally Woodburn, in order that her elder sister Victoria's prospective fiance, Sir Gilbert Mantell, may not be attracted by her.

II—On board ship Betty is attracted by a young American steerage passenger, who saves a child from drowning. Mrs. Ess Kay, who is very "exclusive," objects to Betty's interest in the young man. Betty also meets Tom Doremus, cousin of Mrs. Vander Windt, of New York society.

III—Lady Betty gets her first impression of America. On the dock she is rescued from reporters by the steerage hero, who tells her he is Jim Brett, employed at the Manhattan club, New York. In Mrs. Ess Kay's splendid New York home Betty meets Lieutenant Parker brother of the hostess, who is to take them to visit West Point.

IV—Vivace, a beautiful and expensive dog, is sent to Betty. Mrs. Ess Kay does not know who the donor is, and Betty does not tell her that it is Brett. Lieutenant Parker, whom Betty does not like, makes love to her.

Vic has been to Aldershot, and even to Malta and Gib. But I never have, and I never saw any officers' quarters at home, so I don't know how they compare with American ones. Potter's and his friend's are exactly like a doll's house turned into a museum. The rooms are tiny and most of the furniture is made to fold up, but Stan would be green with envy if he could

It was even better than if we had been ordinary tourists.

see their Persian rugs and their silver things and their dozens of meerschaums and their curiosities from all over the world.

I asked Potter what he would do when he was ordered away.

"That depends on where I'm ordered," said he. "If I don't like the place, I'll resign and be a mere cit. It would be easy to get back again into the army if there were any fun going."

"What kind of fun?" I wanted to know.

"A war with somebody, of course," said he. Men have the most extraordinary ideas of fun. But they seem to be alike about that in England and America. They are never so happy as when they are killing something or in danger of being killed themselves. I can't imagine how it would feel to be like that, but I know if they were different we should hate them. And Potter looked so nice in his soldier clothes (which he got into while we were making ourselves pretty for lunch) that I couldn't help thinking it would be a pity for him to leave the army.

His friend was invited to lunch with us, to make up for sacrificing his house. He is nicer than Potter or even Mr. Doremus, but not half so handsome or brave looking, or with such a charming voice as poor Jim Brett, who is not, I suppose, a gentleman except by nature; otherwise he couldn't have been in the steerage.

I thought it was silly to have wire nettings in all the doors and windows, just to keep away a few innocent midges, until we sat out after lunch. There is a pleasant balcony with an upstairs and a downstairs, which Potter and Captain Collingwood call the "piazza," and it would have been delightful sitting there while the men smoked if appalling little animals with a ridiculous number of thin, stick out legs hadn't come buzzing around us. They were saucy looking things, got up in loud suits of black and gray stripes, not in the least like our quiet, respectable midges at home, and they weren't even honorable enough to wait until sunset before attacking you. They pricked horribly, like pins your maid has stuck in the wrong places, and they had a horrid penchant for your ankles. I was sorry I had on clocked stockings! And I apologized heartily to Potter for poking fun at his wire nettings.

Though it was so hot, the air was delicious. It smelt of new mown grass and lilies, with a sharp little spicy tang of the thick Virginia creepers, which made a shadowy green room of the "piazza." Birds were simply roaring with joy in the trees that overhung the house, and Potter and I almost quarreled because he would insist that some huge creatures hopping about on the grass were robins. They would have made three of ours and were much more like quails that had split strawberry juice on their breasts.

By and by Captain Collingwood asked if "Lady Betty didn't want to go and see things."

"She's booked to me for Flirtation Walk," said Potter, before I could answer. "Three's a crowd there, old chap." On which I regret to state Captain Collingwood suggested that Potter should teach his own grandmother something about nourishing herself with an egg diet.

"Anyhow, I suppose you don't object to a rearguard for inspection of camp and other features of public interest," he went on, and after some hesitation Potter decided that this would be admissible.

Mrs. Ess Kay and Sally both wanted to lie down (it's strange the fondness American women have for putting themselves in a horizontal position in the daytime!), so Mrs. Ess Kay said that she would commission her brother as chaperon; I needn't be anxious, she assured me, it was quite comme il faut. As if I would have worried about a thing like that!

I was delighted to go, because the most interesting groups had been passing the house, and it was difficult to see all you wanted to through the veil of creepers, without continually craning your neck. Tall, brown faced boys, got up much like glorified Buttons, were sauntering about, holding sunshades over the heads of girls so young that they would have been in short frocks with their hair down their backs, in England. The girls were in white muslin or pale colors, with charming, floppy Leghorn hats trimmed with flowers, and they looked like the daintiest, prettiest of French dolls. But I was a great deal more interested in the youths, who were the cadets—first classmen, Potter said, and would be second lieutenants next year.

I never could take much interest in Eton boys, the few I have seen, for they look such children that one would be positively ashamed to bother with them, but the West Point cadets (though one couldn't exactly take them seriously like regularly grownup men, perhaps) fascinated me from the very first glance through Potter's Virginia creeper. They looked as if they thought a lot of themselves, and the girls they were with had the air of encouraging them to think it. I wondered what kind of things they said to girls and secretly longed to find out.

It seems that in summer the cadets leave their barracks and go into camp, which is a time of year that the girls who visit West Point and those whose fathers are stationed there like very much. We had a glimpse of the tents from the long street of the officers' quarters, and after we had visited a few technical things in which I was too polite to show that I was hardly interested we strolled over to where we could see the little white pyramids gleaming under the stars and stripes.

I had been afraid that all the cadets would have gone away to Flirtation Walk with girls, but to my joy there were plenty left in camp. On chairs under the trees near by two or three ladies were sitting with some white butterfly girls, and a crowd of cadets were talking to them.

"There's a great pal of mine, Mrs. Laurence," said Captain Collingwood. "She would love to know you, Lady Betty. Do you mind if I introduce you to each other?"

"See here, that means we shall be hitched up with all that lot of cadets," Potter objected quite crossly. "What's the good of wasting time?"

I hurried to say that I shouldn't consider it a waste of time, that I should be delighted to meet Mrs. Laurence and also a few sample cadets, if any could be provided for the consumption of an inquiring British tourist.

Captain Collingwood thought that one or two might be found who would not object to the sacrifice, and five minutes later I was having more fun than I had ever had before in my life.

Mrs. Laurence was sweet and so tactful. She scarcely talked to me at all, except to ask me how I liked America and a few of the things people are obliged to get off their minds when they meet a foreigner, and then she introduced five cadets.

I was terrified for a minute, because until I left home my whole (youthful) male experience consisted of one brother, three cousins and two curates, dealt with separately and with long, sleepy intervals between. I began to wonder how I could possibly manage five tall youths at once and to rack my brains for the right kind of conversation. But before I should have had time to say "knife" to a curate I found myself chatting away with those cadets as if I had grown up with them. I never once stopped to think what I should say next, and neither did they.

Some girls were introduced to me, too, but luckily they didn't seem to expect me to talk to them much, so I didn't. More and more cadets kept coming over from camp and joining our group and being introduced in agreeable droves until I gave up even trying to remember their names.

There was one, though, in the first batch of five whose name was easy to get hold of and keep in mind because it was Smith. Besides, he was the best looking of all, which made classifying him a real pleasure.

The girls who spoke to Mr. Smith called him "captain," perhaps jokingly, and I asked how he could be a captain and yet a cadet unless it meant cricket. Then he explained that the cadets had all the different grades of officers, from adjutant and captain down to sergeant, and wanted to know if there were any other questions I would care to ask. I said that there were lots, but I wasn't sure if I might.

"I give you a permit," said he in a military way.

So I began with the buttons. "I should like to know why you have so many—all those rows on your jacket. And it's only the middle row you seem to use for anything."

"We use the others to give away to girls to remember us by," answered my cadet. "It's forbidden, but that's a detail. Or rather it's why the girls like to have them."

I stared. "None of yours are missing."

"Most of 'em are pinned on at present. It's that way with all of us. Our plebs sew 'em on for us at night and use the door for a thimble."

"Oh, what are plebs, if you please? Are you allowed valets?"

"I guess they call 'em fags in your country. There are a lot of them lying around. Shall I have some caught and dragged here? They might squirm a bit, as they aren't used to ladies' society, but"—

I hastily protested against such a cruel exhibition and went on with my questions. I asked what they did in winter and how long they had to be cadets and whether they were in a hurry to be officers.

"Not as long as the girls can put up with us as we are," said my cadet. "Some of them even pretend they like us better."

"I can quite understand that!" I exclaimed. And then they all laughed, and some of them applauded.

EDITORIAL.

Not for years has there been so much kicking over the tax bills. Not only is rate per thousand high but the valuation has been jumped so that the paying of the tax is a real burden and comes hard on those least able to pay. The valuation seems to be without system for in many cases those on back streets are asked to pay more per foot on land, than those on the main streets.

EASY FOR QUINCYS

Shut Out Wellesley High And Scored Thirty Six Points

Merrymount Park was the scene of an interesting but one-sided football game on Saturday, Quincy High and Wellesley High clashing in their annual contest. With the crushing defeat by Somerville still rankling in their hearts, the local boys went into the field determined to pile up a big score against Wellesley. Six touchdowns and goals were their total for the afternoon, making 36 points in all. There was nothing to it but Quincy, and they simply outclassed their opponents in every department of the game, playing them off their feet from the moment the whistle blew till time was called.

Webster kicked off for Wellesley, and Quincy after trying to buck the line twice, punted. Wellesley immediately tried the forward pass, but Clapp was in the way, grabbing the ball and going down the field 60 yards before he was nailed.

Quincy then started in, and Clapp and "Russ' Bates tore through for big gains, the latter going over for a touchdown, from which Clapp kicked a goal. At this point Bates wrenched his shoulder and was forced to leave the game, his brother "Stan" taking his place.

Quincy then kicked to Wellesley and Webster took the ball, but was downed in his tracks by Howe. On an onside kick the ball went to Quincy, and then the home team started for another score. It was a chase of "rip 'em up" for Quincy, and they went through the Wellesley line as if it was paper, "Venus" Carlson opening up holes big enough for a horse and wagon to go through. Baker went over for a touchdown, and Clapp again kicked the goal.

Again Wellesley chose to receive the kick, and this time Webster ran it back 15 yards. He was forced to kick however, for his team couldn't do anything against the Quincy line. The ball was fumbled and Wellesley recovered it. They started to do things then but the whistle stopped them, the ball being on Quincy's 40 yard line. Score 12-0.

The second half started with a rush, Quincy kicking off. On a forward pass, the visitors lost the ball, and on Gore's advice to "hit 'em with a bang," Lakin and S. Bates plugged through at will. Bates crossed the line for the third touchdown, and Clapp sent the ball spinning between the posts for his third goal.

Wellesley evidently desired to keep the ball away from the local backs as much as possible for they took the kick again. Not for long, however, did they have it, for they were held for downs, and the ball went to Quincy. Howe, Bates and Clapp carried the ball in turn, and steadily they advanced toward the coveted line, Bates being jammed across once more. Clapp couldn't seem to miss a goal, and the score was now 24-0.

Here a bunch of second and third string men were sent in, and the result was the same. There was nothing to it, for in less time than it takes to write it, the ball was over the line again, Clapp having the honor of kicking the goal from his touchdown. Score 30-0.

Quincy took the kick on the next kick off and Hendry, who had replaced Gore, came back prettily for 10 yards. But Wellesley held and the local team not being able to gain their distance, the ball went to the visitors. It did no harm, however, Nash butted in and snatched a forward pass right out of a Wellesley man's hands and got 20 yards on it. If he could have run faster he would have got a touchdown but the score was destined to come on a spectacular play anyway, for on an onside kick this same robber, Nash, grabbed the ball, and crossed the line after a 15 yard sprint. It was a pretty piece of "following the ball," and showed that Nash was in the game and on the job. "Venus" Carlson kicked the goal and then retired in favored of Edwards.

This practically ended the game, for the ball had just been kicked off when the referee's whistle sounded and the game was over. Score 36-0.

The Bates brothers, Clapp, Baker and Nash played a slashing game for Quincy and Webster and Rankin excelled for Wellesley. Outside of Lansing of Everett, Webster is the best quarterback seen here this season. He plays hard all the time, runs with great speed and force ,making it a difficut thing to tackle him.

The home team was without the services of Capt. Marden, who is out of the game on account of parental objections. Gore led the team, and proved to be an excellent field general.

Capt. Moody and "Bob" Comins, the star tackles of the crack '06 eleven, that wasn't scored on the whole season were officials, the former refereeing the contest, and the latter being field judge.

Howard & Bullough vs. Fore River.

The Howard & Bullough team of Pawtucket took the Fore Rivers into camp Saturday at the Rhode Island city, by a score of 3-1. A week ago these teams met at Quincy and the home team took a fast game 1-0. By losing Saturday's game Fore River drops out of the tie with the Fall River Rovers for the league leadership for while Fore River was losing a game and thereby 2 points, the Rovers were holding J. & P. Coates to a tie, thus gaining one point.

Next Saturday the Rovers and Fore River clash at Fall River, and it will be the hottest game on record, because if the Fore River team wins, they will jump into the lead, and if the Rovers win, the local team will go farther into the hole.

If the game was at home the Fore River team would have a better chance, because a trip to Fall River is liable to tire them so that they can't play their best game. It will be fast, however, and the team that wins is the better team.

Our Battleships Had a Strenuous Voyage to Japan

GIVEN A SINCERE WELCOME

Formal Exchange of Courtesies the Moment the Fleet Drops Anchor--Illuminations, Lantern Parade, Dinners and Grand Ball In Honor of Americans--Sperry Says That Object of Cruise Is Peaceful

Yokohama, Oct. 19.—Storm-battered, but magnificent, the American battleship fleet lies in the harbor, the entire assemblage making a display unprecedented in the history of Yokohama. Shortly after the ships came to anchor, the mist which had shut out their coming cleared and a light breeze carried away the smoke from the saluting guns, revealing from the shore front the lines of white American ships of war, backed by the gray of the Japanese. Two thousand school children sang the American national anthem, the sound of the singing reaching far over the waters.

The ships show the effect of the tremendous battering by the waves, which is described by old officers as the worst they have ever encountered. The Kearsarge, which got separated from the fleet, only picked up the others early Sunday morning and is still undergoing repairs. Rear Admiral Sperry said that he was glad to arrive at Japan, and that he greatly appreciated the evidences of a sincere welcome.

The moment the fleet dropped anchor the admirals, in formal dress, hastened from the flagships of the various divisions to the flagship of the fleet, the Connecticut, which also was boarded by Japanese subordinate officers who came to arrange details. Shortly afterward the admirals, accompanied by their staffs, proceeded to the flagship Mikasa of the Japanese fleet to pay an official call upon Vice Admiral Ijuin. The Japanese admirals immediately returned the call. After a brief visit the Japanese officers departed and as they went down the side the Japanese flag was broken out at the mainmast and the guns belched forth a salute.

The mayor and governor also called on the admiral and later the reception committee boarded the Connecticut and bade the admiral and his men welcome in behalf of the entire nation.

In the afternoon the garden party given by the mayor of Yokohama was attended by many officers and great crowds of civilians, but the weather was unfavorable and somewhat interfered with the success of the function. Everywhere about the streets the American officers and men are treated with the greatest courtesy.

At nightfall magnificent illuminations lit up the entire city. Electric lights and lanterns were swinging everywhere, and at a prominent point a huge design, in which the word "welcome" was spelled with brilliant lights, was surrounded by hundreds of American and Japanese flags. The lantern parade, in which there were many flower floats, made an inspiring spectacle, as thousands upon thousands of the little Japanese in quaint costumes and bright colors took part.

All of the Japanese warships were outlined in electric lights and each carried an American flag at its mainmast.

Several dinners were given last evening in honor of the American officers. These were followed by a grand ball given by Governor Sufu of Kanagawa, at which 1500 people were present. During the course of his speech at the dinner Admiral Sperry said that the object of the cruise was the development of the fleet for peaceful purposes. He believed that nothing was ever likely to occur to break the traditional friendship of America and Japan.

American Officers In Tokio

Tokio, Oct. 19.—Rear Admiral Sperry, accompanied by the squadron commanders and the captains of the various ships, arrived in Tokio at 10 o'clock this morning, coming by special train from Yokohama. The party was received with unbounded enthusiasm by great crowds that gathered about the station when the train arrived.

Business Drifting Back to Normal

New York, Oct. 19.—The National Association of Manufacturers announces that every branch of industry is showing marked increases of business and that during the past three months trade conditions have taken on new activity. In an exhaustive canvass among the 3000 members of the association the returns bear out the prediction that practically every manufacturing business will be upon a normal basis of production during 1909.

Spaniards Interested In Elections

Havana, Oct. 19.—There are indications that the Spanish element will play an important part in the approaching elections, the Conservatives having made an active and apparently successful campaign to enlist Spanish support. Of 36,000 Spaniards eligible for the franchise, 23,000 have already registered.

Oleg Not Seriously Damaged

Libau, Oct. 19.—The Russian protected cruiser Oleg, which ran on a reef a short distance from this port a few days ago, arrived here under her own steam. She is not seriously damaged.

MAYOR SENDS A VETO

Woodward Fund Order Several Hearings

There was a large attendance of citizens at Monday night's meeting of the City Council due to six public hearings on the acceptance of streets. Quite a few addressed the council in favor of accepting the streets in question.

A VETO.

One of the important matters of the evening was a communication from the Mayor returning without his approval the resolve requesting certain information as to the Woodward Fund and with it a communication from the Managers of the fund in relation to the same. The communication was as follows:

Quincy, Oct. 19th, 1908.

To the Honorable City Council:

Gentlemen:—I return herewith Resolution No. 259 without my approval for the reasons set forth in the communication to me of even date from the Board of Managers of the Woodward Fund and Property and attached hereto; and for the further reason that, apart for the wisdom of complying with such resolution, I seriously doubt the legal right of the Council to require the managers to comply thereto.

My approval of this resolution and the compliance with the same by the Managers would, in my opinion, establish a precedent that might at some future time be used to support a movement hostile to the interest of the fund.

If in the judgment of the City Council it is deemed advisable to cause an examination to be made into the conditions of the fund and the nature of its loans, I shall be very glad to approve and assist in any businesslike method the Council may adopt to that end.

I desire at this time to advise the City Council that any committee chosen from its own body or committee of citizens will be afforded ample opportunity to fully examine into the condition of the fund.

In this connection permit me to remind the Council that in the year 1900 the then City Council deeming it advisable to cause an examination to be made into the affairs of the fund had a committee of citizens make such an examination.

The report of such a committee would disclose whether there is any occasion for publishing a list of the loans made in behalf of the fund.

I think it proper to advise the Council that during the present year but two loans have been made from the fund and each of these is amply secured by mortgage of real estate in Quincy.

Yours respectfully,
William T. Shea,
Mayor.

Quincy, Mass. Oct. 19, 1908.

Hon. William T. Shea, Mayor,

Sir:—With reference to an order recently passed by the City Council, requesting the Managers of the Woodward Fund to furnish a list of all the people who have secured loans from the Fund, the undersigned members of the Board of Managers beg leave to give you reasons why such request should not be granted.

We do not believe it is good policy to make public the names of persons who have borrowed money from the Fund, and more particularly we believe that it would not be for the intrest of the Fund itself. As one instance showing that it is not for the interest of the Fund, we call to your notice the fact that since this order was passed, one of our best loans has been paid, the borrower giving as his reason that he objected to having his business affairs made public to satisfy anyone's idle curiosity.

Besides, people wishing to borrow money would decline to apply to the Fund if they knew at any moment their names were liable to be paraded in the newspapers as people who were in need of money, or who were at any time delinquent in the payment of their interest.

If the City Council desires to investigate the management of the Fund the Managers would be glad to have a Committee appointed composed of members of the Council or of other citizens, and any information in regard to the affairs of the Board would be freely communicated. While willing to have their affairs looked into in a proper and business-like fashion they deplore the fact that a Councilman has taken advantage of his position, and where there was no opportunity for reply, to state, on the floor of the Council, that the Fund was "in danger" and that people could go to the Woodward Fund and borrow money when they could not get it anywhere else. Such a statement is ridiculous on its face.

All the affairs of the Fund are in good order and will bear investigation. In fact only two loans have been made during the present year. Both of these were on real estate, one of One thousand dollars ($1,000.-00) on property valued at Two thousand dollars ($2,000.00) and one of Two thousand dollars ($2,000.00) on property assessed at Four thousand one hundred dollars ($4,100.00.)

Respectfully,
John Curtis
Harrison A. Keith
Henry O. Fairbanks
Geo. A. Sidelinger

Upon motion of Councilman Abele the communications were laid on the table.

The Mayor sent a communication appointing John Harriman a public weigher. Confirmed.

PUBLIC LANDING.

A petition was received asking that a public landing be established at the head of Bent's creek on Howard street. Referred to Committee on Streets.

A petition was received from Jacob Luff for a license to collect junk.

Councilman Falconer moved the rules be suspended that the petition might be acted on. The council by a rising vote of 7 in favor and 11 against refused to act on the petition.

A petition was received asking that O'Connell street be accepted as a public way. Referred to the Committee on Streets.

The Democratic City Committee sent notice that its caucuses would be held Oct. 10. Placed on file.

PUBLIC HEARINGS.

A public hearing was held at 7.45 on the acceptance of Everett street, Mr. Calson, Mr. Hilderbrand and Mr. Maxwell appeared in favor and no one against. Hearing closed and order recommitted.

A public hearing was held at 8 o'clock on the acceptance of Broadway. Mr. Castler, Mr. Brown, Mr. Parlin and Mr. Packard favored. No one appeared against. Hearing closed and order recommitted.

A public hearing wes held at 8.15 on the acceptance of Franklin street. Messrs. Langelier, Whitmore, McFadden, Ingraham, Keith, Jenks and Burns appeared in favor. No one appeared in opposition. Hearing closed and order recommitted.

A public hearing was held at 8.30 on the acceptance of Murdock street. Messrs. Mahoney, Cronin and Mundie appeared in favor and no one against. Hearing closed and order recommitted.

A public hearing was held at 8.45 on the acceptance of Marlboro street. No one appeared for or against. Hearing closed and order recommitted.

A public hearing was held at 9 o'clock on the acceptance of Quarry street extension. Herbert T. Whitman, Peter T. Fallon, James F. Burke, Mr. Gilrane, Mr. Halligan, Mr. Ryan and Mr. Gardini appeared in favor. No one appeared in apposition and the hearing was closed and the order was recommitted.

WOODWARD FUND.

Councilman Abele offered a resolve for a special committee of three to examine the management of the Woodward Fund and Property and make such recommendations as deemed expedient and to advise with the manager of the fund.

Councilman Abele said had he received a report on the resolution passed last week he intended it to be referred to a committee. Under the will of Dr. Woodward the fund is left to the city. The board of managers depends on the ordinance. The resolution for a committee was identical with that adopted in 1900.

Councilman Bryant. The Council has a right to appoint a committee to confer with the trustees but the investment of the fund is vested to certain persons. He would favor an order not quite so broad.

Councilman Whiton knew of a number of weak loans. If they were read in the council it could be protected. When loans were made up to the assessed value it was time it was stopped and time for investigation.

Councilman Abele said he was not attacking any one but a system. He thought the system at fault.

The resolution was then adopted.

The President appointed as the committee, Councilmen Abele, Teasdale and Falconer.

ELECTIONS.

Councilman Teasdale offered an order designating polling places for the municipal caucuses of Nov. 10. Adopted.

Councilman Teasdale offered an order designating polling places for the municipal election Dec. 1. Adopted.

Councilman Teasdale offered an order calling the election of Nov. 3. Adopted.

Councilman Broughton offered an order appropriating $50 for a fire alarm box on the corner of Grand View and South Central avenues. Referred to Committee on Fire Department.

Councilman Broughton offered an order for an incandescent light on South Central avenue between Grand View and Newport avenues. Referred to Executive.

Councilman Ferguson offered an order for a committee of three to act with the Mayor and City Solicitor to confer with the officials of the New Haven railroad relative to a reduction of the price of twelve ride books between West Quincy and Boston. Adopted. The President appointed Councilman Ferguson, Teasdale and Freeman.

Councilman Ferguson offered an order authorizing the City Treasurer to transfere receipts of the highway department amounting to $2,781.95 to the appropriation for miscellaneous Highway. Referred to Finance Committee.

Councilman Carey offered an order appropriating $5000 for resurfacing and draining South street. Referred to Committee on Streets.

CALENDAR.

The orders granting the Electric Light Co. and Telephone Co. a location for poles took their second reading and were passed under suspension of the rules.

Adjourned at 10.09 until Nov. 2.

Councilmen absent were Curtis, Gilson and Hogan.

Mayor Shea Opens Bazaar

The annual bazaar of Division 5, A. O. H. of this city Monday opened night in their new A. O. H. hall on Franklin street. The week's festivities were commenced with a parade from the hall through the main streets to Quincy square and return. About 300 members were in line, and led by a band, made quite a showing.

On their return to the hall, M. J. Barrett, president of Division 5, made the opening address, welcoming all those present and thanking the people for their support. He also gave a little history of the A. O. H. in Quincy, telling how they had struggled and worked, and finally succeeded in erecting a hall of their own, something that no other fraternal organization in this city has done.

Mr. Barrett then introduced Mayor William T. Shea, who is a member of Div. 4, of West Quincy. Mr. Shea congratulated his brothers on their enthusiastic and energetic work in the past, and hoped that greater successes would come to them in the future. Selections by the Granite City quartet followed and received great applause.

Matthew Cummings, the National president of the A. O. H. was scheduled as the next speaker, but sent a letter of regret. A little music by Wilson's orchestra and the City band served to liven up things for a while, and then Hon. Joseph F. O'Connell, congressman from the tenth district, was introduced. He was enthusiastically received when he stepped upon the stage, and spoke briefly about the great success of the Hibernians all over the country, saying he was glad to see that in Quincy they were not behind the rest.

The hall was decorated with the national colors also the flags and emblems of Ireland and the A. O. H. Four large booths were arranged about the hall, besides refreshment tables, wheels of fortune and other features to attract everyone.

The general committee of arrangements consisted of President, M. J. Barrett, Treasurer, P. J. Ferguson, Secretary William T. Warner of Div. 5, assisted by a corps of aids.

JEWETT PIANOS

(Famous for Forty-Eight Years)

The New Models should be seen

By every piano buyer this fall.

The progress of the Jewett piano has made notable changes in the piano situation. More Jewett pianos are probably sold in New England each year than of any other make of equal grade.

The growth of popularity of the Jewett can be nothing short of amazing to people who are not thoroughly familiar with this well-known piano. The reason for this fact can be found only in their wonderfully sweet, clear tone, beautiful styles and finish and their great durability.

The new models are handsomer than any we have shown before. We recommend them as the best high grade pianos ever offered at these prices.

Uprights $350 to $450. Grands $650

To Hold A Rally

The Democratic City committee held a meeting on Monday evening at the Hancock house, and a large and enthusiastic representation was present. Charles J. McGilvray, chairman of the City committee was the presiding officer. After briefly outlining the plans of the committee for the campaign, he introduced Joseph F. O'Connell, candidate for re-election to Congress from the tenth district.

Mr. O'Connell spoke of his plans for the future and urged the Democrats to work hard for the success of the Democratic party in general. He also made some remarks in answer to things said by the Hon. Henry Cabot Lodge, in his speech in Music hall last week.

Other speakers were Edward J. Parker and Rednor P. Coombs, candidates for representatives from the fifth and sixth Norfolk districts respectively.

It was voted to have another meeting this week, the date to be left to the decision of the chairman. There will also be a ratification meeting in Music hall some time next week, the date to be fixed to suit Congressman O'Connell. The meeting adjourned at 10 o'clock.

La France Shoe for Women

There is a La France shoe at this store that will fit your foot — perfect. Fit means something in La France shoes that the wearers of other shoes do not clearly comprehend. It means more than a shoe that fits fairly comfortably and looks well. It means a glove-like adaptability to the shape, lines and curves of the foot — a fit that is close without being uncomfortable.

The picture at the bottom illustrates one particular kind of La France shoe that may interest you. It is the remarkable Flexible Welt, the most elastic and comfortable shoe model ever offered by this or any other shoe store. This flexibility does not detract from the wearing qualities of the shoe, but it does make it the most easy of all shoes, particularly when the wearer is standing or walking.

Brief Locals Of a Busy City

The dances at the Squantum Yacht club have closed for the season.

E. R. Arnold of Berlin street spent the week end with friends in North Brookfield.

William Johnson of Faxon road has returned from a trip to Albany, N. Y., and down the Hudson river.

The old Jerusha Hardwick house, corner Foster and Washington streets, is being fixed up and will soon be ready for occupancy.

Miss Maud Gray of Botolph street has been visiting her aunt in Concord, Mass. Many pleasing entertainments were given in her honor.

Customers of the F. D. Fellows Co., read advertisements and get wise for they are having a run on "Stronghose" the satisfaction and comfort bringing hose.

The Squantum car, which has been newly painted and upholstered, is by far the best looking car on the Quincy and Neponset line. The patronage on this route is steadily increasing and half hour service is looked forward to next year.

Miss Catherine Gay of Webster street had a most enjoyable trip to New York last week with her two aunts. While in the great metropolis. Miss Gay took advantage of all the latest shows and numbered among her experiences an automobile trip through Chinatown.

" Education and Character " was the subject of Mr. Frank E. Parlin at his talk at the Park and Downs Congregational church Sunday evening. Mr. Parlin told in a very clear and interesting manner of the development of the child's brain and of the way in which habits are formed.

WANT PARENTS' MEETING.

Editors of the Ledger:

Kindly allow me space in your valuable paper to say a word in relation to this so called school question. Being interested in the education of our children and feeling that it should be a question of great importance to everyone, I am sorry to read that very few mothers were present to hear our Superintendent give his lecture on this subject, but think if the lecture could be given in the evening under the heading of parents' meeting, giving either parent an opportunity to attend that a large number would be present.

Your report of this lecture is very interesting to me as it gives some idea of the object of same, but why our children go to school half time you say," that reasons were given to show why this is the only correct way of sending small children to school," so I take it for granted that it is not a question of room but the welfare of the children. I hope that when our superintendent gives another lecture that we may have his reasons for the half time schooling more in full so that some of these mothers, now unable to be present, but as mad as wet hens, may regret the blessing that they give to our superintendent, School Board or anyone else who is unfortunate enough to start on the school question.

You may think it strange that a father should be interested in the schooling of his children but the fact of it is that I went through the Quincy schools and graduated from the dear old forsaken high school when we did not have to take a course of play and music that was carefully graded, developed and supervised "that we might grow up to be men and women who could do things and be a credit to themselves and their parents." Hoping to hear from other parents , I remain. Most respectfully,

A Father.

JOINT TARIFF DEBATE.

The first meeting for the tariff debate between General Hazard Stevens, free trader, and Colonel Albert Clarke extreme protectionist, will be held in Music hall, Quincy, next Friday evening. It is expected that Hon. William T. Shea, the mayor, will preside. Each debater will speak forty minutes, and fifteen minutes more in reply.

General Stevens will speak first, maintaining the proposition upon which he is running for Congress, that the true interests of the country demand the revision of the tariff on the principle of free trade by the total and immediate abolition of all duties on the food of the people, on raw materials—the food of the factories— on goods the like of which are made in this country and sold abroad cheaper than at home, and the reduction by one-half, at least, of all other duties except those of luxuries, liquors and tobacco, which may be retained for revenue.

From his writings in the Protectionist, the organ of the Home Market club, Colonel Clarke appears to take the position that if anything is imported, raise the duty on it and shut it out.

TIME TO ACT.

Don't Wait for the Fatal Stages of Kidney Illness. Profit by Quincy People's Experiences.

Occasional attacks of backache, irregular urination, headaches, and dizzy spells are common early symptoms of kidney disorders. It's an error to neglect these ills. The attacks may pass off for a time but return with greater intensity. If there are symptoms of dropsy—puffy swellings below the eyes, bloating of limbs and ankles, or any part of the body, don't delay a minute. Begin taking DoDan's Kidney Pills, and keep up the treatment until the kidneys are well, when your old time health and vigor will return. Cures in Quincy prove the effectiveness of the great kidney remedy.

H. A. Vinton, living at 558 Washington street, Quincy, Mass., says: "Doan's Kidney Pills completely cured me of kidney trouble which had been in my system for at least ten years. Before using this remedy I had severe pains in my back and loins, and they seemed to be of a rheumatic nature, I consulted a doctor and tried many remedies but received only temporary relief. Being advised to try Doan's Kidney Pills I procured a box at the Cox Drug Store, and began their use. They quickly banished the pains in my back and my health is better today than for a long time."

WOODS ABLAZE AT MANY POINTS

Western Massachusetts and Southern Vermont Suffer

SUN IS OBSCURED BY SMOKE

Fires In Berkshire Mountain Region and Foothills of Green Mountains Assuming Dangerous Proportions --Six Hundred Milesof Thick Forest Growth In Dauger of Being Destroyed--Much Damage at Chester

Boston, Oct. 20.—Yesterday, as "the day of the big smoke," will go down in New England history side by side with the famous "yellow day" of many years ago. For the first time in many lives it was possible to watch the sun's surface with the naked eye. Even at noon many office buildings had to use artificial light, so dense were the smoke clouds over the city.

Forest fires all over New England were responsible for the smoke clouds that shut out the sun. Off the coast, where steamers and sailing vessels were looking for an opening to get into the harbor, the smoke from the fires, hanging low over the water, made navigation at times perilous.

The Berkshire mountain region in western Massachusetts and the foothills of the Green mountain range in southern Vermont are covered with a thick smoke pall from fires which have burned over hundreds of acres of timberland. In the mass of fallen leaves and dry undergrowth in the woods fires have started at many points in the last few days, and some of them are assuming dangerous proportions.

Hoosac mountain, through which runs the long terminal of the Fitchburg division of the Boston and Maine railroad, is a mass of flames near its top, presenting a beautiful spectacle visible for many miles. Many acres on the side of the mountain have been burned over, but as the fire is well above the tunnel entrance no interference with the operation of trains is feared. Florida mountain, in Buckland, has also been partly burned over.

The most serious forest fire is reported east of Bennington, Vt., where hundreds of square miles of practically unbroken woodland seems threatened by a blaze which started on the east side of Bald mountain in the township of Woodford.

The region threatened by the fire is a part of the biggest forest area in Vermont, and covers about 600 square miles, most of which is practically unbroken wilderness.

The brush along the tracks of the Boston and Albany railroad at Cheshire Harbor has been so dry that a spark started a conflagration that burned over forty acres.

At Chester over twelve miles of woodland were burned over, and despite the fact that the entire population of the town was out fighting flames it spread so that the middle section of the fire showed a front two miles long. Another fire on the top of Round's hall had a frontage of three miles and was gradually drifting down near the Chester station of the Boston and Albany railroad.

At the Holden reservoir in Worcester over 100 acres of heavily wooded pine land were burned over, and the loss will be heavy. Over seventy-five men participated in the work of attempting to stamp out the fire.

Richford Fire Not Extinguished

Richford, Vt., Oct. 20.—Beneath a pile of debris from the freight cars which were burned when the grain elevator was destroyed by fire here on Oct. 7 another body of the fifteen victims was recovered yesterday. Although the remains are burned beyond recognition, they are believed to be those of Thomas Jacques. This is the eighth body found thus far, as the grain in the elevator is still burning so briskly as to prevent an extensive search of the ruins to be made.

Mulai Hafid's Claim Recognized

Washington, Oct. 20.—Conditionally, all the European nations signatory to the Algeciras convention appear to have consented to the recognition of Mulai Hafid as the Sultan of Morocco, subject to his carrying out various international obligations provided for by treaties and the Algeciras convention. This also is the attitude of the United States.

Making Our Own Torpedoes

Newport, R. I., Oct. 20.—The manufacture of Whitehead torpedoes was begun at the torpedo station yesterday, this being the first time they have been made in America. The government will pay a royalty to the British company which has heretofore supplied them. The plant here at present has a capacity of fifty torpedoes a year.

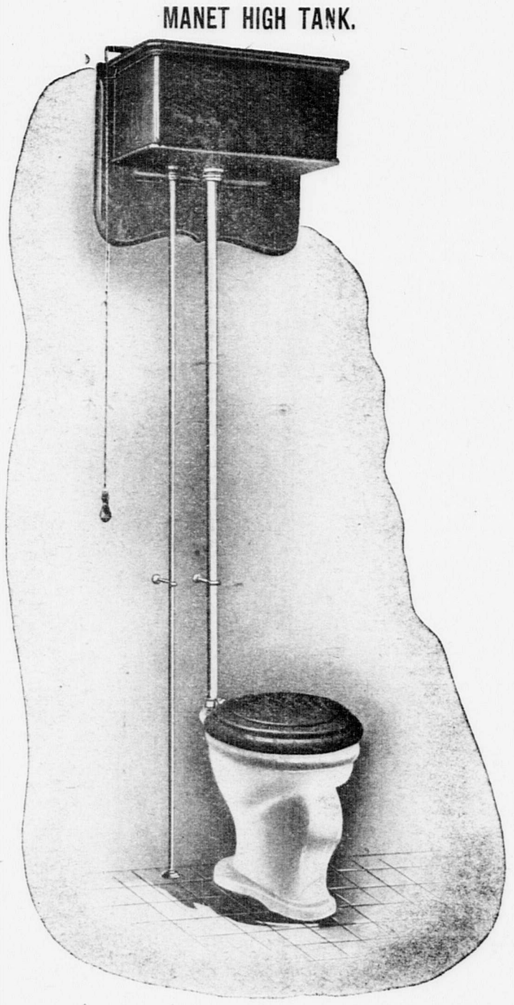
MANET HIGH TANK.



Manet Low Down Closet Combination.

We have made a study of selecting Bath Room Fixtures, both high and low priced, in presenting the views of these two closets, we show two moderate priced fixtures, the Manet Combination in either a high or low down tank combination. We have no hesitancy in recommending either one to you. The wood work is of well seasoned quartered oak, with piano polished finish. The tanks are lined with 12 oz. tinned copper, with lap folded seams, soldered strongly on the outside, (this prevents the deterioration of the solder, as the water cannot act directly on it.) They are equipped with high pressure float valves on the supply pipe, (having removable seats which may be easily replaced in making repairs,) and heavy brass syphon valves for the flushing device. The bowls are of heavy viterous crockery, highly glazed, (warranted not to craze or check) and produce a syphonic action in operation. This action quickly removes the contents of bowl when it is flushed from the tank. The seats are of neat design with heavy Nickle Plated brass bar hinges, which attach direct to the closet bowl, and when raised offers an opportunity for thorough cleaning.

We can Heat as well as Plumb your Home, and we would be pleased to submit figures for your approval. Our heating figures are generally based on a Gurney Heater, but we can supply a heater of any other reliable make.

Lady Betty Across the Water

By C. N. & A. M. WILLIAMSON

Copyright, 1906, by McClure, Phillips & Co.

SYNOPSIS.

CHAPTER I—The story is told in the first person by Lady Betty Bulkeley, the pretty young sister of the Duke of Stanforth. She is to visit America in care of Mrs. Stuyvesant-Knox (Mrs. Ess Kay,) a leader of American society, and the latter's cousin, Miss Sally Woodburn, in order that her elder sister Victoria's prospective fiance, Sir Gilbert Mantell, may not be attracted by her.

II—On board ship Betty is attracted by a young American steerage passenger, who saves a child from drowning. Mrs. Ess Kay, who is very "exclusive," objects to Betty's interest in the young man. Betty also meets Tom Doremus, cousin of Mrs. Vander Windt, of New York society.

III—Lady Betty gets her first impression of America. On the dock she is rescued from reporters by the steerage hero, who tells her he is Jim Brett, employed at the Manhattan club, New York. In Mrs. Ess Kay's splendid New York home Betty meets Lieutenant Parker brother of the hostess, who is to take them to visit West Point.

IV—Vivace, a beautiful and expensive dog, is sent to Betty. Mrs. Ess Kay does not know who the donor is, and Betty does not tell her that it is Brett. Lieutenant Parker, whom Betty does not like, makes love to her.

"The really important question is," said Captain or Mr. Smith, "whether you are going to be an officers' or a cadets' lady."

I hadn't an idea what he meant, but I remembered Vic's saying that in the lower middle classes they sometimes call a man's wife his "lady." Perhaps, I thought, the expression had been brought over to the nicest people in America in the Mayflower, which they all talk so much about, for certainly some of the people in her must have been cooks or in the steerage; there are too many descendants for the first class passengers alone. After considering for a minute I said in rather an embarrassed way that I wasn't "quite sure yet whether I would be either."

"You must be one or the other, you know, or you'll be like the bat in the fable who was neither bird nor beast, and so was out of all the fun on both sides. I may be prejudiced, but I advise you to be a cadets' lady. And you'd better decide now on account of tonight."

"Tonight?" I repeated, puzzled.

"Yes, on account of making out your card. Say, Lady Betty, if you are going in with us, can I make out your card?"

Then arose a clamor. It appeared that they all wanted to make out the card—whatever it was. I asked if I couldn't have one from each, but it appeared that you couldn't do that. My cadet had spoken first, so he said that he would do it, but the others could give me bell buttons and chevrons and decorate fans for me instead.

"Do you like hops, Lady Betty?" inquired a perfect pet of a cadet, who looked like a cherub in uniform.

"Hops?" I wondered why he should ask me such an irrelevant question, but I answered as intelligently as I could. "I don't know much about them. I think they're graceful, but I don't like the smell."

He looked petrified. "The smell?"

"Yes. It makes one sleepy."

"I guess we won't give you much chance to be sleepy tonight," said he, "at our hop."

Then I understood. But what a funny thing to call a ball—a "hop!"

They explained, too, when they saw how stupid I was, that you were an "officers' lady" if you danced with them and walked with them and flirted with them and didn't bother with cadets, or vice versa. Then I decided at once that I would be a cadets' lady, though I was sorry I had only one night to be it in. They were sorry, too, and showed their sorrow in so many nice ways that I enjoyed myself immensely and quite saw how nice it must feel to be out if you are a success. They wanted to draw lots for which cadet should take me to Flirtation Walk, but I said I had to go with Mr. Parker.

He must have been listening from a distance, though he ought to have been talking with a pretty girl who had no hat, for he came up to me at once and announced that it was time to go now. He rather put on airs of having a right to tell me what I must do, and I didn't like it much, especially before those dear cadets, but it would have been childish to make a fuss. Besides, I was his guest.

I went like a disagreeable lamb sulking on its way to the slaughter; but, thank goodness, I was engaged already for nearly all the dances, and most of them had to be split in two, there were so many cadets for them. (I think, by the by, I shall try to get Stan to take me to Sandhurst some day to see if it is at all like West Point and whether they have hops.)

Potter made fun of the cadets and called them "white meat" and "little things that got in the way." But when I asked a straight question he had to confess that he had been one himself only six years ago. "I was twenty-two when I graduated," he said. "One of the youngest men in my class." Which was the same as telling me that he is twenty-eight now. Ten years older than I am! It makes him seem quite old.

Somehow, although he is so nice to me in most ways, he stirs me up to feel antagonistic, as though I wanted to contradict him and not like things that he likes, and I believe it is the same with him about me, for I make his eyes look angry very often. I felt he was disappointed because I admired the cadets so much and had promised so many dances, and I was in a mood to tease him. But I fancy he isn't the kind who would take teasing well, and the scenery he was showing me was so beautiful that presently I resolved to be good.

We saw Kosciusko's monument, and I would insist upon his telling me things about Kosciusko himself, though Potter didn't seem to think him important. And then we began winding our way along a most exquisite path overhanging the river, always shadowed by trees. Sometimes it was cut through a green arbor, with a light like liquid emeralds. Sometimes it ran high on the rocks. Sometimes it dipped down close to the water, but invariably there was just enough room for two, and no more, to walk side by side.

We met several couples—cadets and girls, young officers and girls—sauntering or sitting down close together in out of the way places. But by and by we seemed to have passed beyond the inhabited zone. Then Potter asked me if I were not tired from so much walking and if I wouldn't like to rest. I said no, and he promptly pretended to be done up, which I thought very silly. But of course I had to sit down by him on a rock with a green, moss velvet cushion.

"This is what I've been longing for all day," said he.

I hadn't, and I was thinking about the cadets. But I agreed that it was beautiful.

"Yes, it is," he answered, looking at me. "I never saw anything so pretty. Say, Lady Betty, you're an awful flirt."

I did open my eyes at that. "A flirt!" I exclaimed. "I never had a chance to try being it."

"I guess you are born knowing. I've been miserable all the afternoon. Couldn't you see my agony?"

"I didn't notice," said I.

"Ah, that's the trouble. You weren't thinking of me. Of course, I oughtn't to have cared for those little boys" (some of them were inches taller than he), "but I couldn't help it. I kept saying inside, 'This is a foretaste of what I've got to suffer when she's staying with Katherine at the Moorings.' I don't know when I've been so unpopular with myself. I don't see how I'm going to get along unless you'll be nice to me, right now."

"I am nice to you," I said. "As nice as I know how to be."

"I could teach you to be a lot nicer. Say, Lady Betty, let me, won't you?"

His eyes, though they are such a pale blue, had that silly, melting look in them that my cousin Loveland's have when he talks to me. "Let you do what?" I asked almost snappishly for a person sitting in such a lovely place.

"Teach you to like me. I fell all over myself in love with you the first minute I saw you."

"Day before yesterday!" I exclaimed. "What nonsense. You're poking fun at me. I don't believe in love at first sight—at least I don't think I do. Anyhow, nobody could fall in love with me in that way."

"Couldn't they, though? That's all you know about it, then. All Americans will fall in love with you like that, and it's just what I want to guard against. I want you to be engaged to me before you go to Newport. Then I shall feel kind of safe."

"Dear me, are you really proposing, and it isn't in joke?" I asked. "I do wish you wouldn't."

"Would I propose to Lady Betty Bulkeley in joke?" he reproached me.

"The idea of proposing to any girl when you've only seen her three times!"

"What did I tell you about my friend in San Francisco? I was working slowly up to this, even then."

"Slowly!"

"Yes, very slowly. I think I've shown a great deal of patience. American girls—the beauties, I mean—are quite hurt if a fellow doesn't propose somewhere along in the first day or two. They think he can't appreciate their real worth and that he deserves what he gets if some other chap walks away with them. Now, I'm not going to sit still on my perch and see anything else walking off with you."

I couldn't help laughing. "I'll call for help if I think there's no danger," said I. "but I can't promise more than that. I didn't come over to America to pick up a husband."

He looked at me rather queerly when I said that, almost as if he thought I had come for that express purpose and was trying to conceal it. But of course he couldn't be so horrid as to suppose such a thing really, and I must have imagined the strange expression. If he only knew I came away so that another girl might be sure to get a husband, and I'm not allowed to go back until he has been got!

"They're just growing around on blackberry bushes and in strawberry patches for you to pick and choose," said Potter, "and that's what worries me. I'm a wildly jealous fellow. I've got two months' leave so as to be with you at Newport, and I tell you I shall see a bright, beautiful crimson if too many dudes come fooling around the shanty. Say, won't you just play we're engaged anyhow and see how you like it?"

But now I was really cross and wouldn't hear a word more of such nonsense, so I jumped up, and he had to scramble up too.

"If you've really proposed—which I doubt," said I, "you must please understand that you've been formally refused. But I forgive you because I believe you must have been chaffing and because it's my first proposal, so at all events I can't die without having had at least one. Now, do be sensible and take me back or I shall have to find my way alone or else ask a strange cadet to pilot me."

That threat found a vulnerable spot, and he was not half bad on the way home—perhaps no worse than the name of the walk allowed.

I was a good deal excited about the ball, as it was my very first. Sally Woodburn had looked at my things and told me what to bring. Not that it was a hard choice, for I have only four frocks with me in which I could go to a dance. The one Sally wanted me to wear at West Point is a little white thing of embroidered India muslin. Thompson made it after one of Vic's, and it is a rag compared to Sally's and Mrs. Ess Kay's gorgeous things. But when Sally had done my hair in a new way (they had left Louise behind, as there was no room for her) and fastened around my throat a lovely string of pearls she brought on purpose I loooked quite nice.

The "hop" was in a great big room which the cadets use for something or other, I forget what, and it was decorated with quantities of American flags. There were lots of girls—the youngest things! Hardly any of them could have been out, but there were even more men; counting officers and cadets, at least two for each girl.

The card which my particular cadet had talked about making for me was a programme, with all the dances and the men's names and illuminations which he had put on himself. It was beautiful, and I told him that I would always keep it. I danced every dance, with two partners for each, and there was a cotillon afterward with favors to remind the girls who got them of West Point; little flags and buttons and bits of gold lace, but I was very lucky, for some of the friends I had made in camp had smuggled me special things, and I shall have quite a collection of sergeant's stripes and corporal's chevrons, belt buckles and beautiful bright bell buttons with initials scratched on them.

"Are you going to be an officers' or a cadets' lady?"

I don't believe Vic had half so much fun at her first ball as I had at mine, although hers is so many seasons ago now that I can't remember what she said about it. I was only a little girl then, and she wasn't in the habit of telling me things as she is now.

Although I didn't get to bed till after 2, I was up early next morning, because I had promised my best cadets that I would be at morning parade, or whatever they call it, to say goodby. Sally went with me, and it was quite an affecting parting. I shall never forget those dear boys if I live to be a hundred, though I can't remember any of their names, as after all I lost the card I meant to keep always.

INVESTIGATE and ECONOMIZE
New System at Johnson Bros.
The way that our trade has taken to our
New Cash and Discount System
demonstrates to our satisfaction that we are giving them just what was needed in Quincy, and we have decided to extend our liberal offer, and will say, that to all our customers who find it impossible to carry their purchases home with them, if they bring or send their order to our store, and PAY CASH for it, we will deliver the same and allow 2% DISCOUNT from amount of purchase.
Now we think that this plan will give everyone a good Square Deal, and every intelligent buyer must see that we are more than doing our share to give them what every cash buyer deserves today, first class goods at a low price.
Now, don't forget our other proposition, that all who purchase goods of us, pay cash and carry their purchase home—we will give a Discount of 5% off the amount of purchase, besides selling our goods at the very lowest mark.
We will make a feature of having some special article each day marked at Genuine Bargain Price.
Now read this over carefully and we feel confident that you can see it just the way that we do—something that is surely needed in Quincy—a high grade of goods sold at a very low price.

EDITORIAL.

An article in a Sunday paper relative to the contests in Quincy for representatives in the fifth and sixth districts is very misleading and the writer is evidently not well informed of the situation. The article would make it appear that the Republicans in both districts were at war with each other and that there was a split in the party. On the contrary, the party was never more united and harmonious than it is at the present time. There is no ill feeling in the fifth district between Mr. Piper and his friends and Mr. Thomas who received the nomination. Both gentlemen entered the contest for the nomination and the latter gentleman won out, simply because he got the most votes. Both Mr. Piper and Mr. Thomas are the best of friends and it is news to both that Mr. Piper's friends are to knife Mr. Thomas.

The same is also true in the sixth district. Mr. Langelier won the nomination squarely and Mr. Sandberg is too good a republican not to abide by the majority of the party. That Mr. Sandberg is doing all he can to further the election of Mr. Langelier is evinced by the fact that he has presided at several rallies held in the interest of the candidate. The general impression is that some good democrat had been stuffing the author of the article in question.

Quincy Locals Briefly Told

Mr. Alden A. Sherwin of West Townsend, was a guest last Sunday, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. S. Troupe, Plymouth street.

In the superior court at Dedham Monday a verdict of $169.04 with interest for the plaintiff was returned in the case of J. E. Keniley & Co. vs. Mary Harkins.

The alarm from Box 38 at 10.53 this morning was for a slight fire on the roof of an out building caused by sparks from the meadow of the Meadow Brook Ice company which was being burned over. The loss will not exceed $5.

David Cramomnd a well known resident of South Quincy died at his home on Intervale street, early this morning, aged 48 years. He leaves a widow, two sons and two daughters. He was a member of Clan McGregor Order of Scotish Clans.

The Point church has arranged for some mid-winter lectures to be given by interesting speakers from abroad. The first is to come early in November and will be of interest to the people who care for that which is intellectual and inspirational in the lives of people from other lands.

The boys have shown so much interest in the gymnasium at Quincy Point that a division of the class is necessary. Mr. Clee of the Y. M. C. A. will meet the older boys, aged 12 to 20 years, in the vestry of the Point church Wednesday evening at quarter past eight to arrange for a senior department. Other members meet as usual in the vestry at half past seven.

Rev. F. H. Woodsum, pastor of the Baptist Institutional church on Harvard street, Boston, and Rev. N. M. Mafoul, a Syrian minister, were in Quincy Monday. In company with Rev. A. R. Atwood of the Point, they visited the several Syrian boarding houses and held services during the afternoon and evening. About 150 Syrians have recently left to work in Fall River, Norwood and Lowell, but there are abont 165 still left, who live on East Howard, Main and South streets.

IMPORTANT MEETING

Metropolitan Improvement Commission In Quincy

The public meeting to be held at City Hall Wednesday evening by the Metropolitan Improvement Commission is of great importance to the citizens of Quincy.

The commission was created by the legislature of 1907 and its scope is fully set forth in the act part of which reads as follows:

" Said commission shall investigate and report as to the advisability of any public works in the metropolitan district which in its opinion will tend to the convenience of the people, the development of local business, the beautifying of the district, or the improvement of the same as a place of residence. It shall consider the establishment of a systematic method of internal communication by highways, the control of direction of traffic and transportation, and the location of such docks and terminals as the interests of the district may demand. It shall recommend the method of executing and paying for such improvements as it may suggest, and shall make such maps, plans and estimates of cost as may be needed for its investigation, or for the proper presentation of its conclusions."

Public meetings are being held in various cities at which the general public is invited to attend and present ideas for improvements to the railroads, streets, docks, waterways etc.

At the meeting Wednesday evening the commission will be represented by its secretary, Sylvester Baxter and by two of its experts, namely Arthur A. Shurtleff, the expert on roads, and George R. Wadsworth, expert on railroads.

The experts will bring several stereopticon slides which will be thrown upon a screen.

This commission can do much for the improvement of Quincy and it is hoped that there will be a large attendance of citizens.

—The young men who are working their way through Yale and who earned altogether $214,449 last year, according to a report made to the Self Help bureau, will undoubtedly appreciate the value of an education says the Somerville Journal vastly better than the students whose fathers pay the bills.

—The indicated corn crop of the country is two billion, five hundred and ninety five million bushels. America feeds the world.

DEAFNESS CANNOT BE CURED.

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

McLoughlin—Sugrue.

On Thursday evening Oct. 15th, at St. John's church, Father John J. Coan united in marriage Miss Mary Alice Sugrue and Mr. John Kelman McLoughlin. A reception was held at the home of the bride, after the wedding, supper being served at ten o'clock, by Caterer La Croix. Seventy-five friends of the couple passed a most enjoyable evening. Music was furnished by four well-known Quincy musicians and the younger set enjoyed dancing.

The bride wore a suit of steel gray voile with a white picture hat. The bridesmaid, Miss Josephine Dasha, of Dorchester, wore a satin princess and a blue picture hat.

The friends of the couple gathered from Quincy, Milton, Dorchester, Boston and New York. Mr. and Mrs. McLoughlin will reside at 25 Penn street, Quincy.

Fined for Gaming.

The next time Thomas Clark and George Casat desire to match pennies they will select some other place than the fountain in City Square. Monday afternoon the two men sat on the fountain steps for half an hour matching pennies. A short distance away Chief Burrell and Officer Matthews stood watching them. After watching the pair for fifteen minutes the chief placed them under arrest for gaming. This morning in court they were fined $5 each which was considerably more than the total amount of pennies at stake.

The Observations In the Daily Walk

Burn the fallen leaves.

Friends of Eugene R. Stone realize he is a strong candidate for Mayor this year.

A wire netting is being placed along the front of City Hall to keep the pigeons away.

Miss Maud Read of Squantum street, is visiting her sister, Mrs. Fred Thompson of Cambridge.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Cook of Somerville were in Atlantic on Monday as guests of Mr. and Mrs. George Hill of Walker street.

Nov. 11th will be a red letter day for all Sunday school teachers in the county will be at South Braintree at the annual convention.

Mr. and Mrs. Horatio Tower and son, Horatio Jr. of Cohasset were guests of Mr. and Mrs. E. G. Hall of Newbury avenue the early part of the week.

Miss Ethel Vogler of Botolph street has become very popular among the Newton teachers and has already won the affection of her new little scholars.

Mrs. Edith B. Wolfe president of Woman's Relief Corps No. 103 of Quincy will inspect the work of Milton Corps No. 147 tomorrow at 2.30 P. M.

Many social functions have been given in Atlantic in compliment of the coming nuptials of Miss Bertha Miles of Squantum street and Mathew Sheriden of Boston.

Mrs. Clarissa J. Smith entertained a party of lady friends at her room on Whitney road Monday evening. The room was beautifully decorated with palms and a very pleasing entertainment was enjoyed. A light collation was served.

The cold weather does not deter Edward J. Parker, candidate for representative from the fifth Norfolk district, from taking his daily swim. As usual this morning he wended his way to the bathhouse for his dip in the briny. Ed evidently believes in good healthy outdoor medicine.

Quincy High school has been doing good work of late at foot ball. They have won several good games; and it is no disgrace to be honestly defeated by a larger and older school. Let us see more of the athletic life in our High and Grammar schools.

Ceeley Burke, the driver of Baker's express team that was capsized on Quincy avenue Saturday afternoon, takes exception to the statement that he had a load on. He further says that he was not under the influence of liquor.

In the death of Dr. T. Haven Dearing of Braintree another "good old man" has passed into his heavenly home. He will be missed by all, especially by congregationalists, for Dr. Dearing was a familiar and ever welcome attendant and speaker at the Congregational conferences of Norfolk county and the state.

The New York Synod of the United Presbyterian church is now in session at Lisbon, N. Y. It is made up of the nine presbyteries of the East and it has elected by acclamation, the Rev. William B. Barr of the Presbyterian church of Pawtucket, as its moderator. This is a most unusual honor. Rev. Mr. Barr has been engaged to lecture at Quincy Point this winter in the lecture course conducted by that parish.

The people of the Point, North and East Weymouth, desire better street car service. The cars moring and night are not run frequently enough to comfortably accommodate the public. At present these cars are often crowded to the aisles and platforms. The corporation has received a valuable franchise from the city and ought to appreciate it enough to supply the demand so all can ride comfortably.

A dinner party was held Monday evening at the home of Charles C. Hearn, the well-known druggist of Quincy square. On Sunday, Mr. Hearn passed the 46th milestone of his life, and in honor of the event, a few intimate friends were invited to celebrate. Among those present were: Mr. and Mrs. Dexter E. Wadsworth, Mr. and Mrs. Mark L. Read, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Curtis and Hon. and Mrs. John F. Merrill. Mr. Hearn was presented with a purse of $46 in gold which he promptly gave back to Mrs. Hearn.

QUINCY VS. DEDHAM HIGH.

Quincy High is scheduled to meet Dedham today at Quincy. This is a better day for football than Saturday was, and if the local team can only increase their speed with the improvement in weather Dedham is doomed to go back home badly defeated. In the games so far the Dedham boys have not made a very startling record this year, and Quincy's 36-0 defeat of Wellesley, ought to spur the local boys on to a decisive victory.

One of the features of the Wellesley Y. M. C. A. for the coming winter will be a gym class for girls, under the direction of a competent instructor, Miss Rose L. Doonan, a graduate of Wellesley college. This innovation in Y. M. C. A. work should prove very popular and successful.

GENERAL HAZARD STEVENS,

Jeffersonian Democrat and Free Trader, Independent Candidate for Congress, advocates the repeal of all duties on food, raw materials and goods the like of which are made in this country and sold abroad cheaper than at home, and the reduction of other duties by one-half except those on liquors, tobacco and luxuries which are to be retained for revenue.

In Music Hall, next FRIDAY EVENING at 8 o'clock, General Stevens will maintain his platform in debate with Colonel Albert Clarke, Secretary of the Home Market Club, the champion of protection.

Norfolk County And Vicinity

A Republican flag raising was held in STOUGHTON on Saturday evening, preceded by a torch-light parade at 7.30, with a band and red fire. A rally followed in the Town hall, at which Lieut. Gov. Draper, Robert Luce and Henry E. Holbrook spoke on the issues of the campaign.

Electrician Garland of the Holbrook and Randolph electric light company, went to HOLBROOK square on a wild goose chase Saturday evening. Someone telephoned the office that a line was down and that men chould be sent to fix it. Garland drove to the scene and finding everything all right, went back, confident that some joker was at work.

An automobile while passing through RANDOLPH on its way to New Bedford on Saturday evening, smashed into Russell Willard's milk team on Main street. The wagon was slightly damaged, but Mr. Willard and his brother, who were in the wagon, escaped unharmed.

A "talent" social will be held tonight by the Ladies' Aid society of the AVON Baptist church in the church vestry. The ladies will tell how they made their first dollar. They will run a rummage sale in the vacant stores under Forrest hall on Oct. 28 and 29.

A fire, believed to be the work of incendiaries, last night destroyed seven empty freight cars of the N. Y., N. H. & H. R. R. at DEDHAM. There were a large number of cars in the railroad yard at the time, but they were moved to a place of safety.

For the third time the house of Robert Krug of HYDE PARK was stoned last night and the Hyde Park and Dedham police were called to the scene. They couldn't find the stone-throwers. It is thought that men threw the stones, as they came from a distance of 300 feet, which is farther than a boy can throw. If the throwing occurs again a cordon of police will surround the house and attempt to capture the guilty ones.

The hearing on the charges preferred by Officer W. C. Breen against Chief of Police Fred F. Sacket of NORWOOD was postponed last night, and will come up Wednesday morning at 10 o'clock. The large crowd in the selectmen's office made it impossible to go on with the proceedings.

One of the prominent landmarks on the coast, at Scituate, was destroyed by fire late Sunday night, the famous old Fourth Cliff house being burned to the ground. The building was unoccupied and was rapidly going to ruin, which condition caused the fire to light up the ocean for miles around. The cause of the fire is unknown.

A special town meeting was held in NEEDHAM last night to make appropriations for several different things. It was also voted to extend the street lighting system on Greendale avenue from High to Cheney streets.

Y M C A Notes

Every boy in Quincy between thirteen and eighteen invited to attend the great rally Thursday at 8 P. M. Mayor W. T. Shea will preside and Mr. Leslie L. Cleveland, principal of Quincy High school, will speak. Mr. Clarence G. Dow will entertain. This is for every boy in Quincy and a large number of fellows are expected.

The Y. M. C. A. is making elaborate arrangments for the receiving of election returns on the night of November third. A special wire, sterepticon, music, refreshments and socialibity will be the order. Members and their men friends are asked to take notice. The Y. M. C. A. Garden concert is now only one week off, Wednesday night October 28.

Among The WOMEN'S CLUBS of Quincy and Vicinity.

[A Wednesday Feature.]

On Monday afternoon the Junior Friday club opened the season at the home of Mrs. Walter E. Burke, Adams street, with nearly a full attendance of members and several guests. Miss Alice Keith Prescott, the new president was in the chair conducting the short business meeting. The club continues the study of Italy and on Monday took a bird's eye view of Italy: historic 1600 to 1800 and picturesque, which under the leadership of Miss Randall proved most interesting. A dainty lunch was served by the hostess after the program of the afternoon had been carried out and music and social chat were enjoyed.

The Friday club opened its season last week at the home of Mrs. Wilson Marsh with a "play" afternoon and this week starts in on the regular routine program meeting with Mrs. Ernest Cockayne of Hancock street. Venice will be studied this winter with "Building the State—The Crusades to 1205, as the opening subjects, under the leadership of Mrs. Otho A. Hayward.

Mrs. Mary L. Wade of Atlantic lectured last week Thursday before the Melrose Woman's club, giving one of her usual practical talks so helpful to the homemaker.

Mrs. Lucia Ames Mead the well known peace advocate is to speak at the meeting of the Quincy Alliance on Monday afternoon in the chapel of First church, taking for her subject "National Dangers and National Defense."

Committees of the Quincy Catholic club are planning a number of social events for the coming winter season the first of which will be a dancing party to be held in the near future. Regular meeting of the club are held the first and third Tuesdays of each month. The club looks carefully after the poor of St. John's church parish.

The regular meeting of the Hospital Aid association will be held Thursday afternoon, Oct. 29th at two o'clock at the home of Mrs. Thomas Fenno, 538 Hancock street.

St. Chrysostom's Branch of the Girls' Friendly society is attending the Members' Conference Thursday afternoon at 3.30 in the Y. M. C. A. hall, Boston. At 8 o'clock there will be a service in Trinity church. The Rev. Edward Melville Parker, D. D. Bishop Coadjutor of New Hampshire will preach the sermon.

QUINCY WOMEN'S CLUB.

Club members are much pleased at the fine array of talent and good meetings arranged for this season by the Program committee. From the opening reception of last week to the annual meeting in May there is variety enough to suit every taste. Among the lecturers are Edward H. Griggs, Rev. Allen A. Stockdale, Mrs. Mary L. Wade, Dr. Richard Burton, Rev. Ed. Cummings, Mabel Loomis Todd and Anna Seaton Schmidt. Then there is to be an author's reading by Nixon Waterman a musicale by the Music committee, President's afternoon, a dramatic afternoon and also a mystery afternoon which is suggestive of something especially entertaining, the year closing with the election of new officers which is always exciting and interesting.

The club house is in frequent use for special meetings of the club committees. Last Saturday a dancing party for children was held by the Hospitality committee. The Arts and Crafts committee are again holding millinery classes. Tuesday afternoon there was a large gathering of club members and friends for the talk on "Sunny Italy" by Miss Edith Randall, being an extra meeting to raise funds to help defray expenses of the Tuberculosis exhibit at City Hall, Oct. 29-30-31 and Nov. 1, in which the club and city are mutually interested.

Mrs. George W. Morton, president presided, introducing the soloist of the afternoon, Mrs. Frank J. Moore, who sang a group of songs in her usual effective and pleasing way. Miss Randall's talk was entertaining being full of facts, and anecdotes of the Italian people and her experiences in frequent trips among them; recalling many an incident or mental picture to those familiar with the country.

It is always a pleasure to listen to Miss Randall and the afternoon was thoroughly delightful. The large attendance assured a goodly sum for the object for which the talk was given.

A lecturer more popular than Prof. Edward Howard Griggs will not appear before the club or in Quincy this winter and it is anticipated that at the next meeting the club house will be taxed to its limit by those desirous of hearing Prof. Griggs. Club members should note that the meeting will be held on Wednesday Oct. 28 at half past two instead of on the regular club afternoon. Those anticipating taking guests should secure guest tickets of Mrs. N. S. Hunting treasurer or Miss Annie L. Prescott auditor before the date of meeting. Guest tickets are required at all meetings this season also members must show their membership ticket at each meeting or be fined ten cents. Hunt up your tickets.

QUINCY DAY NURSERY ASSO.

The annual meeting of the Quincy Day Nursery association was held Tuesday Oct. 6th in the Woman's club house. The president presided and a good number were present. After the usual business the annual election of officers took place and the reading of the annual reports as follows:

SECRETARY'S REPORT.

The fifth year of the Quincy Day Nursery Association has just come to a close. During the year there have been 10 regular meetings and four special meetings.

Most of these have been held in the Women's club house with an average attendance of about 13. With the new year came the necessity of finding a Matron for the nursery. The association was fortunate in securing Mrs. Mabel Jones to fill this position and the work of the nursery went on without interruption.

During the year much to the regret of the association three of its valued officers have felt it necessary to resign. Miss Alice K. Prescott as Secretary also her successor Mrs. Rachel Barstow and Mrs. Henry M. Faxon as treasurer. Mrs. R. W. Allen was elected for the unexpired term as treasurer.

The Nursery has been generously remembered by its friends both as individuals and societies, with gifts of money, food and clothing. In February two successful dancing parties were given for the benefit of the Nursery adding $176.55 to the treasury. On June 6, breakfasts were given simultaneously in Quincy and Wollaston which netted $157.00. The results of Tag Day, Sept. 25 were so far satisfactory that it is planned to repeat the day next year.

The attendance of children at the Nursery has been markedly larger throughout the year with the exception of the months May, June and July when it fell below that of last year. The total number for year 1906-1907 being 1866 and for 1907-1908 being 2018.

With the removal of the nursery in September to larger and more convenient quarters and the continued interest and support of kind friends a prosperous future is confidently expected.

NEIGHBORING.

By invitation of the Ousamequin club, the Massachusetts State federation will hold its autumn meeting at Bridgewater on Tuesday, November 3. The meetings will be held in the Congregational church. The morning session will begin at 10.15 o'clock, and the speaker will be Mrs. Margaret J. Blair, of St. Paul, Minnesota, head of the domestic art department of the Minnesota State Agricultural school. Her subject will be "Homemaking as an Art." A discussion will follow.

The speaker for the afternoon will be Melvil Dewey, president of the Lake Placid club. His subject will be "The Future of Home Economics." Luncheon tickets at fifty cents each may be obtained from Mrs. Henry G. Prophett, Bridgewater, by sending an order with money enclosed and addressed and stamped envelope for the return of the ticket. All orders must be sent before Thursday, October 29. No tickets will be sold on the day of the meeting.

Trains leave Boston, South station, at 8.43 A. M., 10.43 A. M., and 12.43 P. M., arriving at 9.50 A. M., 11.50 A. M., and 1.50 P. M. Return 4.07 and 6.06 P. M. Special cars on 8.43 A. M., 12.43 P. M., and 4.07 P. M. trains, for which tickets at a reduced price will be sold. The blue federation tickets will be necessary for admission to the sessions, and may be obtained of club secretaries.

The Whitman Woman's club began the season Oct. 14th with a membership of 400 and sixty names on the waiting list, a grand record for a small town and what an amount of good those nearly 500 women can accomplish in the uplifting of their town.

Mrs. Katherine A. Flagg of Brockton, treasures of the State Federation has recently returned from Panama where she has been in the interests of the Federation of Women's clubs.

Besides the speakers for the regular meetings of the Heptorean club of Somerville there will be a study course in literature extending through the year under the leadership of Prof. de Sumichrast of Harvard the general subject being "Life in the Literature of Today," with illustrations drawn from the writings of forty prominent writers of the day.

Miss Sarah Arnold of Simmons college spoke before the Brighthelmstone club of Brighton on Monday afternoon on "The Ideal Home for the Child."

The Waterton Woman's club opened the season Monday afternoon by a reception with music. The present officers of the club were assisted in receiving by past presidents, and the special guests were those ladies whose names are on the waiting list of the club.

Annual Meeting Cape Cat Asso.

The annual meeting of the Cape Cat association was held Tuesday night in the office of the president, F. F. Crane. The president was in the chair and the first order of business was the election of officers for the ensuing year. Frank F. Crane was re-elected president. Other officers elected were vice president, George G. Saville; secretary and treasurer, Dr. F. E. Dawes; measurer, Ralph E. Winslow; executive committee, Ira M. Whittemore, Herbert W. Robbins, Frederick H. Smith, Walter J. Coombs.

After the election of officers several matters concerning next year's races were brought up and discussed. It was voted to allow small boats to race next season, provided they assume the 22 foot racing length. It was further decided to confine all championship races to waters between Hull and Marblehead. However it was deemed allowable for any yacht to take part in races outside these limits if it so desired.

Practically the most important action taken during the evening, was the vote to race the boats with mainsails only, and on the same handicap basis as in former years. Cape Cats are designed without jibs, but in the past, all kinds of extra sail has been put on, which has made the boats anything but cats.

Myron B. Turner was elected to membership in the association, and as there was no further business, the meeting broke up into a little "smoker."

Norfolk County And Vicinity

David W. Murray and William A. Foley have withdrawn in the HYDE PARK district as candidates for the legislature, and W. J. Cusick has resigned in the Brookline district.

The BELLINGHAM Methodist church is now so far completed that services can be held in it.

A Republican rally was held in HOLBROOK Town hall on Monday evening, and the crowd filled the hall. The speakers were met by the committee at the Holbrook station and escorted to the hall in automobiles. Eugene C. Hultman of Quincy, candidate for senator, was among the speakers.

Miss Lillian May Hunt daughter of Mrs. Edward S. Hunt of BROOKLINE, was married last night to Charles P. Bennett of Saugus. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Dr. Hamilton of Everett, in the Brookline Congregational church. A reception followed in the chapel.

A pall of smoke hung over RANDOLPH on Monday and many thought a forest fire was near at hand. It was found, however, to be a peat bog smoldering in Littlefield meadows in the southern part of the town.

A surprise party was tendered Miss Helen White of AVON at her home on Spring street on Monday evening, friends being present from the surrounding towns.

The Pecunit Tribe of Red Men of STOUGHTON held a well attended meeting Monday evening in their wigwam. At the next meeting, Nov. 2, the adoption degree will be worked on five candidates.

HOUSE BURGLARIZED.

The house of Arthur Stanley at 92 Elm avenue was entered by burglars early Tuesday evening and silver to the value of $25 taken. The family was away during the first part of the evening. They returned home at 9 o'clock and discovered that the front door had been forced open and the house ransacked. There is no clew to the burglars.

Choral Society Assured

That much interest is being taken in the formation of a choral society in Quincy, was evidenced by the large number that gathered at Colonial hall on Tuesday evening to consider the advisability of the proposition. There were about 75 present including most of Quincy's well known singers. Thomas B. Pollard was elected temporary chairman, with Mrs. H. W. Tirrell secretary.

An interesting discussion followed on the aims and objects of such a society. Miss Carrie F. Spear, Edward D. Bullock, Albert L. Hayden, Dr. Daniel B. Reardon and Dr. George Ryder discussed the question, giving arguments pro and con, which showed much serious thought. It was decided advisable to form a society and a committee was appointed to formulate plans, consisting of T. B. Pollard, Mrs. Jennie Hocking Hunt, Wendall Luce and Mrs. H. W. Tirrell.

The chorus was then given a trial and the 75 voices had great volume and harmony. Solos were rendered by Mrs. Edith C. Page and Mrs. Ida C. Poore.

The meeting then adjourned to meet again in one week, at the same time and place. At the next meeting a permanent organization will be formed and regular officers elected.

CURTIS—CROCKER.

A very pretty wedding was solemnized at the Union Congregational church, East Braintree, Tuesday evening when Miss Edith O. Crocker daughter of Mr. and Mrs. L. O. Crocker of East Braintree became the bride of Mr. Herbert E. Curtis of North Weymouth, who is connected with the Mt. Wollaston National bank in Quincy.

The ceremony was performed by Rev. R. H. Cochrane pastor of the church in the presence of a large gathering of friends.

Dr. Claton R. Marstin was the best man and the bride was attended by Miss Grace E. Gordon of Holbrook as maid of honor.

The ushers were Ralph Oldham, Fred Crocker, Ernest Arnold and Alfred Clark.

The bride's gown was of white duchess satin with lace trimmings. She wore a tulle veil caught up with lilies of the valley and carried a bouquet of the same flowers.

The maid of honor wore a pink satin.

The ceremony was followed by a reception in the chapel of the church, Mr. and Mrs. Curtis being assisted in receiving by Mr. and Mrs. L. O. Crocker parents of the bride.

SURPRISE PARTY.

About 300 young people gathered in Electa hall on Tuesday evening, at a surprise party tendered to Miss Vera Burke of South Walnut street. Miss Burke was taken completely by surprise, never having thought of any such thing as a surprise party. However she took the matter calmly and when Miss Abbie Griffin presented a signet ring as a token of the esteem and regard in which she was held by her friends, Miss Burke responded gracefully.

During the evening exhibitions in buck and wing dancing were given by George Wiley of South Boston, John Coffey and Patrick Dolan. J. Fred Lally and J. Herbert Baker obliged with solos and were encored generously.

Refreshments were served during the evening and dancing was enjoyed till 12, Helen Connors officiating at the piano.

Brief Locals Of a Busy City

Miss Alice Shunk and Miss Elsie Miner have been visiting Mrs. Walter Poch of Dedham.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles G. Sheppard of Marion street have moved across the street into John Morgans house.

John Q. Newcomb of the Post Office force, moves into his new house on Bigelow street next week.

Mrs. Wyman H. Streeter and daughter have returned from a visit with friends in Atlantic City, N. J. and Germantown, Penn.

Vice Commodore Ira M. Whittemore and family have come up from Houghs Neck, and are occupying their new home on Bigelow street.

Linde Fowler of Phillips street, golf editor Boston Transcript, is in Washington, D. C., this week to attend the Women's National Golf championship.

Membership or guest tickets will be necessary at lecture by Prof. Edward Howard Griggs at the club house of the Quincy Women's club next Wednesday afternoon.

Mrs. Horace G. Crocker of Park lane entertained the Neighborhood Whist club on Tuesday afternoon. Some good scores were made and a delightful afternoon passed.

At the annual meeting a generous gift of $25 from Mr. J. L. Whiton was presented to the Quincy Day Nursery. It is only by such generosity of its friends that the Nursery is able to continue its good work.

The annual subscribers to the Museum of Fine Arts in Boston have received invitations to the opening of a loan exhibition of sculptures by George Grey Barnard, in the textile gallery on Thursday afternoon from two until five.

The children as well as the matron and officiers of the Day Nursery are enjoying their cheerful comfortable new home especially do they appreciate the large sunny airy kitchen and dining room combined and the large grassy yard for play. In the near future it is planned to have a house warming when the friends of the Nursery may enjoy it together. The present home is only a few steps from the old one on Garfield street.

WAR DANGER NOT DISPELLED

French Government Is Nervous Over Situation In Balkans

BULGARIA IS HOLDING BACK

Ferdinand's Advocacy of Peaceful Settlement Rejected by Cabinet, Which Prefers War to Paying Indemnity--A Montenegrin Government Official Detained by Austria While on Special Mission

Paris, Oct. 21.—The feeling in French government circles is distinctly nervous, both with regard to the situation in the Balkans and the proposed international congress. Official advices from Turkey indicate that the Turkish government is manifesting some impatience because Bulgaria has failed to present any official communication since Turkey received the French assurances made in the name of Emperor Ferdinand, while from Sofia comes the information that the Malinoff cabinet still refuses to accept the advice of Ferdinand, who advocates a peaceful settlement, and insists that it would be preferable to go to war than to pay an indemnity.

Until the Bulgarian ministry yields definitely, it is considered by the officials of the French government that the danger of war has not been dispelled.

Reports current in Paris that Baron Von Bieberstein, the German ambassador at Constantinople, has been counselling war at that city, while not confirmed, caused disquietude, especially as Germany's attitude grows more and more enigmatical. It is not unnatural that such reports should find easy credence here, where the belief is now general that Germany and Austria-Hungary are joining hands in an effort to persuade Turkey to settle the issues with regard to the annexation of Bosnia and Herzegovina and the declaration of Bulgaria's independence directly with Austria and Bulgaria respectively, thus avoiding the necessity of an international congress.

Montenegrin Official Siezed

Belgrade, Servia, Oct. 21.—General Vukotics, an official of the Montenegrin government, who left Cettinje three days ago for this city on a special mission to the Servian government, arrived here yesterday after an extraordinary experience at Agram, where he was arrested by Austro-Hungarian officials and detained for several hours.

In an interview the general said: "On my arrival at Agram gendarmes entered my car, dragged me out, and took me to the prefecture of police. I was searched and my purse, papers, in fact, everything I had, was taken from me. My baggage also was completely ransacked. I gave the gendarmerie officers my name and explained my status as a special envoy of King Peter. I showed also the passport and safe conduct given me at the Austro-Hungarian legation at Cettinje, but all to no avail.

"Ultimately I was permitted to send a telegram to Baron Von Aehrenthal, the Austro-Hungarian minister of foreign affairs, complaining of the treatment accorded me, which was a violation of international usage. After considerable delay an order arrived from Vienna instructing the police to release me, and this was done.

"I was detained at the police station for seven hours, and as I lost my train connection my journey was delayed altogether for fourteen hours."

This occurrence has aroused again a bitter feeling toward Austria-Hungary on the part of the Servians, and the people are greatly excited.

The general is the hero of the moment in Belgrade. A great crowd of students and others gathered in front of his hotel yesterday afternoon, and when the general entered his carriage to drive to the palace the students unharnessed the horses and dragged the vehicle through the streets themselves.

In the meanwhile the mob shouted its approval of King Peter and Prince Nicholas and cursed Austria.

Four Men Scalded to Death

Kenosha, Wis., Oct. 21.—Chief Engineer John Petersen and three assistants were scalded to death on board the steam barge Maggie Marshall in midlake, when a steam pipe in the engine room burst. Escaping steam killed the men at their posts. Soon after the accident three sailors volunteered to attempt to reach shore in a small boat. When within a mile of shore their boat capsized and the men were compelled to swim the rest of the distance.

Richford Fire Not Quenched

Richford, Vt., Oct. 21.—Portions of another body were found yesterday in the ruins of the elevator fire. There are various surmises as to the identity of the victim. The remains were taken to an undertaker's to await further investigation and possible identification. The fire is still burning and the ruins are continually watched by a gang of railroad employes.

Cholera Aboard the Buford

Nagasaki, Oct. 21.—The United States army transport Buford, which sailed from Manila on Oct. 15 for San Francisco, has been detained here on account of the death by cholera of a sailor on board. Another case has been developed, but the patient is recovering.

AMERICANS KEPT BUSY

Plenty of Entertainment Provided For Them by Japanese

Tokio, Oct. 21.—The third day of the American occupation of Japan brought about every description of entertainment for the officers and men of the Atlantic fleet and the visiting business men from he Pacific coast, from an audience and luncheon with royalty to a baseball game between nines of the fleet and Keio university.

Luncheons, garden parties, Japanese dinners commencing early, European dinners beginning later, and theatre parties kept the American guests of the Japanese nation busy.

For the present Tokio is the center of attraction, many officers and about 600 Americans visiting this city daily, but Yokohama is filled with bluejackets, to whom is offered every form of entertainment, while large numbers of others are visiting nearby points of interest by means of special trains.

Up to the present time perfect order has prevailed among the sailors on shore liberty, despite their long tour of sea duty. In every case where there has been a possibility of trouble the Japanese have met the situation with the utmost courtesy, avoiding any friction.

There is no diminution in the popular enthusiasm with which the Americans are received in the streets, and wherever the carriages bearing the American officers appear the streets are lined with cheering masses of Japanese. It is "banzai" everywhere for the officers and men of the fleet, and the most popular cry among the children of Japan is "Three cheers for America."

The baseball game resulted in a victory for the Japanese team after fifteen innings had been played. The decision of the Japanese umpire was questioned, but good humoredly accepted by the boys of the fleet.

BARELY ESCAPED AN AWFUL FATE

"Dead" Woman Revived as Coffin Was About to Be Sealed

Ellis, Kan., Oct. 21.—The timely intervention of a physician who was not satisfied with the appearance of the body prevented the burial alive of Mrs. Thomas Chapman, 60 years old, who was supposed to have died suddenly of heart disease on Saturday. The body was prepared for burial, but was not embalmed.

The funeral was to have taken place at 2:30 o'clock yesterday afternoon. A few minutes before the coffin was to have been sealed a physician requested permission to see the body. After confirming his suspicions that the woman's body was made rigid by suspended animation, the woman was removed from the coffin, placed in bed and revived. While her heart is weak, it is believed that Mrs. Chapman will recover.

From Opulence to Vagrancy

Washington, Oct. 21.—Once the possessor of a goodly fortune and social position, Mrs. Rebecca E. Mitchell, who was found under pitiful circumstances in an alley in Brightwood, a suburb of Washington, was arraigned in the police court on the charge of vagrancy. She is the widow of a former business man of this city who failed and left many thousands of dollars in debts, to clear which she promptly devoted her own fortune. The court dismissed the case on a plea that she be permitted to again seek employment, her pride not permitting her to enter a charity institution.

Justifiable Homicide

Salem, Mass., Oct. 21.—A verdict of not guilty was returned by a jury in the superior court here in the case of Joseph Martino of Haverhill, charged with manslaughter in shooting Joseph Di Cicco at Haverhill. Di Cicco, who had made threats against the life of Martino, presented himself at the latter's door armed with a revolver and a knife, and, believing he had come to carry out his threat, Martino shot and killed him. Martino claimed the act was done in self-defense.

Manila Is Shaken

Manila, Oct. 21.—Commencing at 10:40 o'clock yesterday morning, a series of slight earthquakes were felt in Manila at irregular intervals until 5:30 in the afternoon. Only four of the shocks were pronounced, the others numbering about a dozen. Two shocks were especially sharp, but no damage has been reported. Many persons fled from buildings during the more severe shocks, but the populace generally was calm.

Three Charged With Murder

Danbury, Conn., Oct. 21.—Frederick A. Lee, Joseph Zeigler and Frederick J. Zeigler were arrested here on charges of murder as the result of the death of John F. Smith, a bartender, which occurred yesterday. Smith died, it is alleged, as the result of a beating that he received and the three prisoners are accused of having had part in the assault.

Fire Destroys River Steamer

Newburgh, N. Y., Oct. 21.—Steamer New York of the Hudson River day line, docked for repairs at the Thomas S. Marvel shipyards here, caught fire this morning and was burned practically to the water's edge. The fire spread so quickly that there was no chance to pull the vessel out into the stream. The fire endangered nearby shipping.

Associates A Year Old

Less than a year old, the Houghs Neck Associates are today one of the largest improvement associations in New England. Starting a year ago next month with not quite thirty members, today the membership is nearly two hundred.

The Mayor is responsible for the organizing of the association. A rally was held last year in the interest of Mr. Shea, at Garbarino's pool room on Sea street. After a short talk Mr. Shea suggested to th thirty odd men present that it would be a fine scheme if the men of the beach would organize as the chances of getting improvements would be better.

The men quickly caught the idea and right there appoinetd a committee to arrange for another meeting for the purpose of organizing. The committee worked hard and faithfully and nearly sixty winter residents of the beach were present at the first meeting held at LaBrecque's cafe on Sea street.

The following officers were elected to serve one year, Henry M. French, chairman; John S. Ross, treasurer; and member from each section of the beach was elected to form an advisory board.

It was decided to name the new organization the Houghs Neck Associates, and to have the first annual supper New Year's eve, at Pandora hotel. The supper was one long to be remembered by the residents of the beach. Mayor Shea and the representatives of the Boston newspapers and the Quincy Daily Ledger were present.

Meetings were held monthly, when committees were appointed to take care of the different wants of the Neck. Many improvements have been obtained by the association, conspicuous among them are the installing of gas, special police protection, street light, better car service and street watering.

The Associates incorporated last August, and elected the following officers, Henry W. French, president, Oliver G. Fosdick, first vice-president, and William P. Taylor, clerk, in place of Alfred LaBrecque, who resigned. A committee was appointed to find suitable winter quarters. The entire Pandora hall building was leased and a special meeting was called for the purpose of electing a house committee and adopting house rules.

The Associates have taken possession of the building and money was raised to put the place in shape for the cold winter months. The building is two stories high. On the second floor there is a large hall about forty by seventy-five feet. It was formerly used for a dance hall and will be used by the Associates for meetings dances, and other social affairs during the winter. On the first floor there are two regulation size bowling alleys, two first class pool tables and a large ante room that will be used for a card room. The building will be heated by five large old fashioned stoves and gas heaters. Large gas arcs will furnish plenty of light.

A bowling league will be organized and pool tournaments and whist parties will be given.

The Associates are not selfish by any means. Ladies have full privileges and the youngsters of the beach will be admitted when they get writtn permission from their parents or guardians. Allowing the boys to come into the club house will keep them off the streets and also keep them out of a lot of mischief.

The club house will be open from seven to eleven every night but Saturdays and holidays when the hours will be from one P. M. to midnight.

DEAFNESS CANNOT BE CURED.

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

Lady Betty Across the Water

By C. N. & A. M. WILLIAMSON

Copyright, 1906, by McClure, Phillips & Co.

SYNOPSIS.

CHAPTER I—The story is told in the first person by Lady Betty Bulkeley, the pretty young sister of the Duke of Stanforth. She is to visit America in care of Mrs. Stuyvesant-Knox (Mrs. Ess Kay,) a leader of American society, and the latter's cousin, Miss Sally Woodburn, in order that her elder sister Victoria's prospective fiance, Sir Gilbert Mantell, may not be attracted by her.

II—On board ship Betty is attracted by a young American steerage passenger, who saves a child from drowning. Mrs. Ess Kay, who is very "exclusive," objects to Betty's interest in the young man. Betty also meets Tom Doremus, cousin of Mrs. Vander Windt, of New York society.

III—Lady Betty gets her first impression of America. On the dock she is rescued from reporters by the steerage hero, who tells her he is Jim Brett, employed at the Manhattan club, New York. In Mrs. Ess Kay's splendid New York home Betty meets Lieutenant Parker brother of the hostess, who is to take them to visit West Point.

IV—Vivace, a beautiful and expensive dog, is sent to Betty. Mrs. Ess Kay does not know who the donor is, and Betty does not tell her that it is Brett. Lieutenant Parker, whom Betty does not like, makes love to her.

V—Lady Betty has a good time at West Point despite Parker's proposal, which she rejects.

Chapter 6

ALL the preparations that Mrs. Ess Kay had to make for Newport kept us two more days in New York, and it was terribly hot, but I was not sorry to stay, because we did so many amusing things.

Mr. Doremus was detained, too—by his tailor, he said—so we saw a good deal of him, as Mrs. Van der Windt had left for her Newport cottage. We did go to a roof garden entertainment after all, and it was most fascinating, but quite without the feeling that you might fall off, which I had expected to have. I saw the moon coming up and gilding thousands of roofs, and I couldn't help wondering which was the roof of that club where poor, handsome Jim Brett was employed, though of course it was impossible to speak of him to any one except Vivace.

We lunched one day at an enormous and very fashionable red brick hotel called the Waldorf-Astoria and went into a Turkish room and had delicious things to eat in a beautiful restaurant which had not at all an out of season air, though Mrs. Ess Kay said that most of the well groomed looking people whom I suspected of being leaders of the Four Hundred were only "trippers." I do wonder, by the way, why one always has an innate sense of contempt for trippers and longs to be sniffy and show one's own superiority? We must all be trippers somewhere and sometimes, or we would never see anything of the world—indeed, I suppose I am by way of being a tripper now. But one never seems to regard oneself in such a light or imagine that anybody else could be so undiscerning.

I hadn't known that a hotel could be as big as the Waldorf-Astoria, though Mrs. Ess Kay says there are several just about as large in New York, and she has heard there are one or two in Chicago, but she thanks heaven she doesn't know anything personally about that. When she made this remark I remembered what Sally had told me in confidence about Mrs. Ess Kay's life before she began to qualify for the Four Hundred. But of course I did not make any allusion to the subject for fear it was a skeleton in her closet. And Sally says that well regulated Chicago people think New York a one horse place compared to their town, which is really wonderful and most interesting, as I shall find out if I see it. I wish I could, but I suppose I shan't, as I came over to visit Mrs. Ess Kay, not to do sightseeing.

The second day after we came back from West Point, as I went downstairs the first thing in the morning, I heard Mrs. Ess Kay at the telephone, which is in a little room along a corridor off the fountain court.

She was having a long conversation with some one, laughing and chatting just as if she were talking to a visitor, and presently my name came in. "Yes, Lady Betty Bu—; no, not pronounced that way, my child. As if it were spelled B-U-C-K—yes, that's right. Such a pretty girl, a perfect dear. I expect the men will be wild about her at Newport. Potter raves over her. Ha, ha, ha! Do you think so? Well, perhaps. I've known stranger things to happen. No, it's not her father, but her brother, who's the duke. Awfully good looking. I wish he could have come too. But you see Sally wouldn't. You know what Sally is. No, she's never got over that old affair. Southern women are so romantic. Yes, I'll bring dear little Betty with me if it won't tire you. She"—

Then I began to think I ought to let her know I was there, for one hates to eavesdrop. So I yelled at the top of my lungs that I was in the hall waiting to go to breakfast and couldn't help hearing every word she said. However, she didn't mind a bit and called to me to come into the telephone room.

"I'm talking to a friend of mine who has just been moved back to her own apartment after getting over appendicitis," she explained. "Poor thing, she's such an indefatigable society woman, and she does so hate being stuck in the city at this season. I've just been promising to run in and see her this afternoon, and I'd like to take you if you'll go. She'd love to see you. I'll introduce you now by phone."

With that she began to chat into the thing again in a chummy sort of way which seemed quite uncanny, as I have always looked upon a telephone as an official kind of machine which you prepared for with fasting and prayer and only had recourse to when strictly necessary for important business. "Here's Lady Betty," said Mrs. Ess Kay. "I'm going to introduce you. Now, Betty, take hold of the"—

"Oh, I can't. I don't know how. I never did," I objected, feeling as if she were going to force me into taking gas against my will.

She would have me try, so I did, as it's very difficult to oppose Mrs. Ess Kay even in the smallest thing. But I couldn't hear a word; only a horrid buzzing, so she had to let me off and just tell me that the lady we were to call on was Mrs. Harvey Richmount Taylour.

"If you're going to stay long in America you'll have to get used to the phone," said she. "We do half our shopping and some of our calling and make about all our appointments that way. If we didn't there'd be more cases of nervous prostration than there are, and goodness knows there are enough now even since blue rays have come in. Many love affairs are carried on practically entirely by phone, and I've heard that in case of necessity marriage ceremonies can be performed by it."

"How about divorces?" I asked. And I was quite serious, but Mrs. Ess Kay didn't seem to think the question worth an answer. So she switched off her friend and rang up two or three tradespeople of whom she ordered scent and chocolates and some new books and told a manicure to call. Then we went in to breakfast.

It appears that the manicure person is a great catch, and you are lucky to get him without making an appointment long beforehand. He does things to your feet, too, though I dared not ask what, and Mrs. Ess Kay intended to stop in for him all the morning.

While she was talking about this Sally was glancing over letters, and there was one in which she seemed particularly interested. She looked up from it suddenly when Mrs. Ess Kay said she was not going out and exclaimed: "Oh, then I may have Betty. How nice! I do so want to show her the park."

"I'll go with you," Potter broke in quickly, but Sally shook her head.

"No, I want her to myself, thank you—just for this once."

Potter looked cross, but said no more, and it was arranged that Sally and I should start in about an hour. Mrs. Ess Kay thought we ought to get off at once, as it would be cooler. But for some reason Sally did not like that idea. Meanwhile she ran out herself on an errand, but did not offer to take me.

Even people who have absolutely nothing to do except to amuse themselves appear to like waking up and having breakfast much earlier than we do. This morning, as usual, we had finished breakfast by half past 9, and by a quarter past 10 Sally had come back to fetch Vivace and me for our walk.

I hadn't yet been shown Central park. Mrs. Ess Kay said it was horrid out of season. But Sally didn't agree with her. And I thought it lovely, more like the Bois de Boulogne than our park, and yet with an extraordinary individuality of its own. There were only a few people of our sort, riding or driving, but lots of children were playing about, and it was wonderful that the trees and grass and flowers could have kept so fresh through such tremendous heat. I'm sure if we had weather like that in England the whole vegetable kingdom would go on strike.

Whether it was the beauty of the park or whether it was something in herself I don't know, but Sally Woodburn was in a sentimental mood. She is generally full of fun, in her soft, quiet little way, but this morning she was all poetry and romance. She quoted Tennyson and several modern American poets whose names I was ashamed to say I didn't even know, as their verses seemed charming, and when she had found a certain narrow, shady path which she had been looking for suddenly she said: "Let's talk about love. What do you think about love, Betty?"

"I don't know anything about it yet except from books," said I. "Mother doesn't like my reading modern novels much, and we haven't many in the library, for Vic reads French ones and hides them. But there are other books besides novels that tell about love—some heavenly ones."

I couldn't hear a word; only a horrid buzzing.

"I should think there were," said Sally. "But I didn't ask you what you knew; I asked what you thought. Have you ever thought about what it would be like to be in love?"

"Yes," I had to admit shamefacedly, for, as she is not a man, luckily it wasn't necessary to tell a fib. "Have you?"

"I know, once for all," said Sally in a changed voice. "That is why I wanted to talk about it to you before you really begin life over here. Perhaps—it depends on your opinions of love—I'll tell you my little story. I don't tell it to people. But maybe I will to you this morning. We shall see."

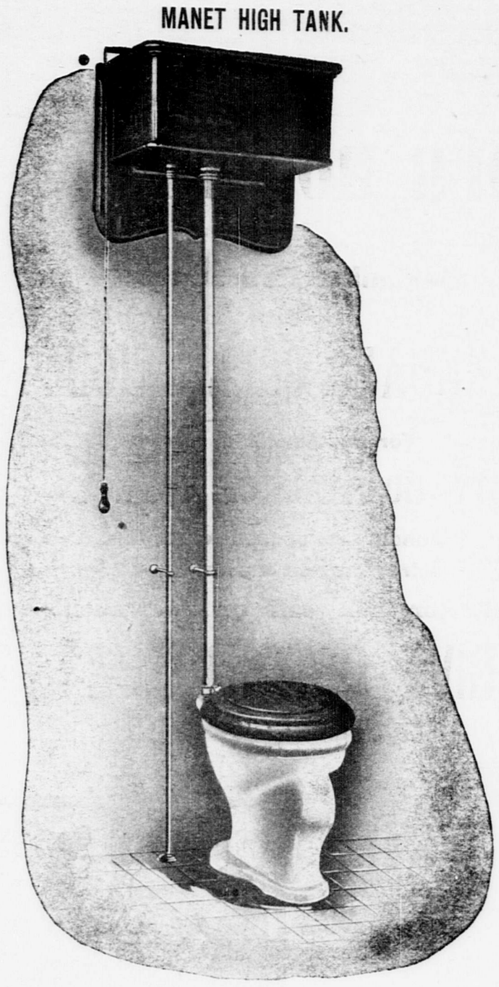
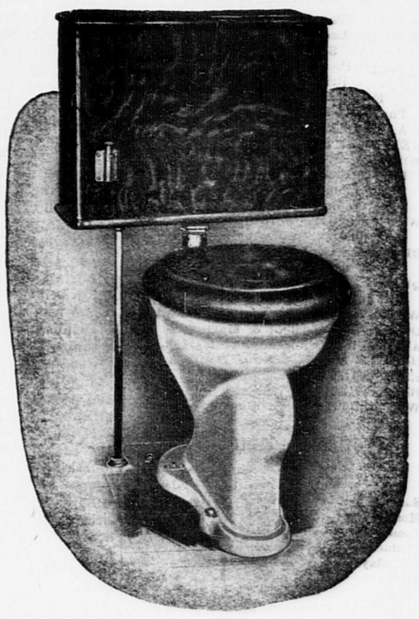
BATH ROOM EQUIPMENT.

MANET HIGH TANK.



Manet Low Down Closet Combination.



We have made a study of selecting Bath Room Fixtures, both high and low priced, in presenting the views of these two closets, we show two moderate priced fixtures, the Manet Combination in either a high or low down tank combination. We have no hesitancy in recommending either one to you. The wood work is of well seasoned quartered oak, with piano polished finish. The tanks are lined with 12 oz. tinned copper, with lap folded seams, soldered strongly on the outside, (this prevents the deterioration of the solder, as the water cannot act directly on it.) They are equipped with high pressure float valves on the supply pipe, (having removable seats which may be easily replaced in making repairs,) and heavy brass syphon valves for the flushing device. The bowls are of heavy viterous crockery, highly glazed, (warranted not to craze or check) and produce a syphonic action in operation. This action quickly removes the contents of bowl when it is flushed from the tank. The seats are of neat design with heavy Nickle Plated brass bar hinges, which attach direct to the closet bowl, and when raised offers an opportunity for thorough cleaning.

THE
Young Men's Christian Association
OF QUINCY, MASS.
(Legal Title—Incorporated 1892.)
The Directors of the YOUNG MEN'S CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION of Quincy, with a firm faith in the great value of the work which is being done for the young men and boys of our city, make their appeal for donations and bequests toward paying the mortgage indebtedness on the new Association Building. When the building is free from debt it will serve as an Endowment, as there is a goodly income from the dormitories.
Should the Donor prefer, such sum as might be given could be used as an Endowment for an educational class or classes, the Boys Department, or as a special fund in other ways, and could be designated with the name of the Donor.
The Treasurer, WILLIAM F. CUMMINGS, 7 Clive Street, Quincy, or the General Secretary, ERNEST G. GAY, will be happy to answer inquiries.

OUR HOSPITAL
(Legal Title: City Hospital of Quincy)
INCORPORATED 1889
The Trustees of the City Hospital of Quincy earnestly appeal for donations and bequests for the Endowment fund. This now amounts to over $60,000. But a fund of at least $100,000 is urgently needed.
Five Thousand Dollars ($5,000) will endow a Free Bed to which such name may be given as the Donor may desire, but any sum for this noble institution, which stands ready to serve us all in the hour of need will be most gratefully received.
The Secretary, TIMOTHY REED, Adams St Quincy, or the Treasurer, RICHARD D. CHASE vings Bank Building, Quincy, will be very glad confer with any one or so answer any inquiries.

Quincy Locals Briefly Told

H. G. Fay of Marlboro street is in Springfield on a business trip of ten days.

Today is the 100th anniversary of the birth of Dr. S. F. Smith the author of "America."

The local ice men report that their supply of ice is about exhausted and there is danger of an ice famine.

Herbert A. Snow of Portland, Maine, visited his mother, Mrs. E. A. Snow of West Elm avenue this week.

Mrs. Herbert A. Polk and daughter Mary of Beach street have returned from a week's visit in Rhode Island.

Weekly whist tournament at the Granite City club tonight. Henry P. Furnald will furnish a lunch of escalloped oysters.

Work was commenced this morning under the recent special order passed by the City Council regrading and draining Grove street.

Two osteopathic physicians well up in the profession have recently located in Quincy as will be noticed by their card in another column.

The appeal of Theodore Thomas et al, and Louise Thomas from the land court decision in favor of the Old Colony street railway has been dismissed.

Charles H. Johnson, whose name was mentioned as a candidate for County Probation officer, desires the Daily Ledger to state that he is not a candidate.

At the debate between Gen. Hazard Stevens and Col. Albert Clarke to be held in Quincy Music hall on Friday evening, Hon. Charles H. Porter will preside, instead of Mayor William T. Shea.

Miss Mollie G. Brown of Willow street and Miss Marjorie Fay of Marlboro street spent Friday and Saturday in Cambridge. They attended the first "Idler" at Radcliffe and renewed many old acquaintances.

Now that the police box in City Square has been located across the street from City Hall, it will be an easy matter some day for the patrol wagon to drive up and scoop in the gang that roosts on the chains.

Miss Simonds and Mr. James Mulligan of Ogdensburg, N. Y., were the guests of Mrs. Charles Gutterson of West Elm avenue over the week end. They accompanied their mother, Mrs. Simonds, who has been visiting her daughter for the month, to her home in New York.

The Wollaston Unity club opened its sixteenth season most brilliantly last week Friday evening in the vestry of the Unitarian church. The next meeting will be held on Oct. 30th, when a special edition of the Unity Club Meteor will be issued with Mrs. Frederick H. Bishop as editor.

The Democratic City Committee give notice today that nomination papers for candidates to be voted for at the Municipal caucus Nov. 10 may be obtained of the secretary at room 4, Adams building. The last day for filing nomination papers is Oct. 29 at 7.30 P. M.

West Virginians Hear Taft

Parkersburg, W. Va., Oct. 21.—Taft day in West Virginia has been the Republican political event of the present campaign in this state. Mr. Taft traversed its entire length and wherever he stopped he was the feature of a demonstration. Special trains were run to many of the towns in which the candidate spoke, thus making his presence available to residents from many parts of the state not visited.

Western Maryland also had its share of the candidate, who stopped in a number of smaller towns along the Baltimore and Ohio railroad and was given a rousing welcome in Cumberland, where he made the most extended effort of the day. He discussed practically all of the issues of the campaign and was given marked attention and demonstrative approval.

The Parkersburg meeting last night furnished all of the spectacular features belonging to a political rally. There was a parade, with many marching clubs in line, representing political organizations from a number of nearby towns, including those on the Ohio side of the river. The streets were thronged and political enthusiasm was at a high pitch.

Notwithstanding his strenuous day in the east Monday, Taft exhibited remarkable vigor. His speeches were snappy and he showed the same inclination to criticise Mr. Bryan's political doctrines as in previous addresses. The continuous work of the day began to tell on him, however, and was noticeable last night in the lack of carrying quality in his voice, and an apparent struggle against weariness.

Rather Late In the Field

Chicago, Oct. 21.—Sydney C. Tapp, presidential candidate of the Liberal party, whose platform among other things demands woman's suffrage, was formally notified of his nomination at a meeting here last night. Tapp, whose nomination was made at a convention held at Chattanooga, in accepting the honor bestowed upon him by members of the new party, admitted that the campaign had begun too late by them to admit of successful organization this year in a number of states.

A pretty affair of the week was an informal reception given on Tuesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Horace G. Crocker, Park lane in honor of Mrs. John F. Merrill, a recent bride. It was a gathering of neighbors and a few friends. There were readings by Mrs. George H. Brown, songs by Mrs. Tappenden and piano solos by Mrs. Merrill .

The Weymouth, Abington and Milford boards of trade were this week elected to membership in the State board.

—The presidents of fourteen colleges are to have a convention at the rooms of Boston University, 668 Boylston street, Oct. 29 and 30, for the discussion of important questions in the social, educational and athletic sides of college life.

THE "MORSE ICE POOL"

Evidence That Brokers Handling It Earned Fat Commissions

New York, Oct. 21.—Evidence was introduced at the joint trial of Charles W. Morse, financier, and Alfred H. Curtis, former president of the defunct National Bank of North America, who are charged with conspiracy and violation of the national banking laws, which made it appear that in the eighteen months between June, 1905, and November, 1907, the "Morse ice pool"—so known in financial circles—bought and sold stock of the American Ice company through fifty-nine brokers and operated 111 accounts, slightly differentiated as to named, and that the pool brokers earned commissions during that period of upwards of $1,000,000.

Out of a maze of intricate figures prepared by National Bank Examiner Moxley, who has devoted considerable time to studying the alleged records of the ice pool, the lawyers for the prosecution succeeded in drawing this information. The transactions of the pool as described by Moxley also showed that thousands upon thousands of shares of ice stock were dealt in each month, but that the selling and buying also, the witness said, was almost entirely done by the pool's own brokers. One hundred shares of stock, the witness said, would be sold to one broker by another, and then sold to another broker, and so on, so that the Stock Exchange records would indicate that American Ice company stock was in great demand. The price would naturally go up.

Mr. Moxley endeavored to trace the various transactions so as to show, the witness asserted, that "matched sales" were made. It was shown by Moxley's list that the firm of John W. Gates & Co. had about a dozen accounts with the syndicate operating the pool, and that other brokerage houses operated several accounts.

FLED TO SAFETY WITHOUT PANIC

Young People Groped Way From a Burning Building

Manchester, N. H., Oct. 21.—The remarkable escape of 250 people, mostly girls, attending a reception given by dancing teachers in a hall on the third floor of the Odd Fellows' block on Hanover street, was the feature of a fire that damaged that structure last night to the extent of $60,000.

The fire had started on the ground floor in a cleansing establishment, worked up the rear of the building and had suddenly filled the hall with smoke before it was discovered. Despite the interruption to the dance of the young people there was no panic. Everyone moved quickly, but in an orderly manner, for the elevators and stairways. Before the first of them could leave the building there was an explosion and the lights of the block went out. Even then there was no panic, and down through the smoke-filled, darkened stairways, the young folks filed out to safety.

Two firemen, F. A. Marston and G. H. Hammond, were badly hurt by jumping from the roof of the Odd Fellows' block, just as it was falling beneath them, to the roof of an adjoining building, thirty-five feet below. Their condition, however, is not serious. The Odd Fellows' building was damaged extensively in the rear, and the upper story was badly gutted. It was a five-story brick structure and was remodelled two years ago.

Dishonest Revenue Collector

Havana, Oct. 21.—Miguel de Latorre, collector of internal revenue for the province of Havana, was arrested, charged with embezzlement of $195,000 of the funds of his department. Delatorre served twenty-five years as treasurer of the fiscal zone of Havana. He has made a partial confession, but refuses to divulge what he did with the money.

Still Harping on Dreyfus

Paris, Oct. 21.—By a vote of 438 to 47, the chamber of deputies condemned the campaign which the anti-Dreyfusards are conducting against the decision in the case of Major Dreyfus, handed down by the court of cassation in 1906. Pierre Bietry led in the assault and caused a violent scene. He was temporarily suspended.

Honduras Fears Invasion

Washington, Oct. 21.—Events in Central America are being closely watched by the administration in view of the reported threatened invasion of Honduras, which, although scheduled to eventuate almost a week ago, has not yet occurred. Such advices as have been received are pacific in character.

NEWS IN BRIEF

Foot Ball And Other Sports

Miss Mary B. Adams of the Wollaston Golf club survived the first round for the Women's Golf championship of the United States and today plays Miss Katherine C. Harley of Fall River.

The Quincy High school football was forced to cancel its game for Tuesday with Dedham, because several of the local players were suspended. Some of the best men on the team are down in their studies, and as a result they must plug at books and not at goal lines, till they get the required percent.

This is one thing that must be looked out for in High school athletics. The boys are young and full of life. Enthusiastic for athletics , but they shouldn't let themselves be so far carried away with games as to let their studies go to the four winds. The fellows should consider this point when they are working for a successful team. There is plenty of time for study and sports, if the boys wish to give the time. If both cannot be done, then one must be dropped.

Now the one that would necessarily have to be dropped would be athletics and hence the failure of the teams to win. The boys should consider this question, and then arrange some individual plan or schedule of work, so much for study, so much for play, etc. This may sound foolish, but try it and see how it works. If this plan was carried out by every athlete in the schools today, there would be no one disqualified on account of studies.

BODY CLAIMED.

The body of John H. McCorrison, who was accidently killed Saturday morning by escaping gas at his lunch room at Houghs Neck, was claimed this morning by a sister from New Jersey. She arraigned for the funeral which was held at 1 o'clock today at Mt. Wollaston cemetery. The services were conducted by Rev. A. A. Ellsworth.

O. I. Club Social.

The O. I. club, which is composed of the operators at the Quincy telephone exchange held its first social of the season Tuesday evening. The affair was held in one of the rooms at the exchange building on Merrymount road. Autumn leaves were used for decorations which with the other decorations made the room very cosy and attractive.

Whist was in order during the first part of the evening, prizes for the best scores being awarded Miss Genevive Magee and John Mohan, while consolation prizes were awarded Miss Elizabeth Connell and W. C. Crane.

At the conclusion of the whist, salads and ices were served.

Today's Court.

John C. Keefe was fined $10 for exceeding the automobile speed limit at Milton.

George W. Burnham was arraigned for non-support of his family at Quincy. He was ordered to pay $5 a week for their support.

Resolved, that our merchant marine should be fostered by a ship subsidy law," will be the subject of the debate tonight at the meeting of the meeting of the Men Club of Christ church.

New York, Oct. 21.—The final whirl of the Republican national campaign will occur in Indiana, Ohio and New York. From now until the day of the vote every available speaker of national reputation will be heard in the three states, which both parties regard as pivotal.

Body Buried In Leaves

Ashfield, Mass., Oct. 21.—The body of an unknown man, partially covered by leaves, was found by two men while hunting on the Magee farm. The body was decomposed and near it was an overcoat. No one in this vicinity has been reported missing.

The Weather Forecast

Almanac, Thursday, Oct 22
Sun rises—6:06; sets—4:52.
Moon rises—3:10 a. m.
High water—9:15 a. m.; 9:45 p. m.

A falling barometer indicates that a well-defined storm will appear in the southern Rocky mountain region today and will move northeastward, reaching the Atlantic states Friday or Saturday. The rains promise to be sufficiently heavy to extinguish the fires in the Allegheny and Adirondack mountains. Preceding the advance of the storm area the temperature will rise.

The way that our trade has taken to our

New Cash and Discount System

demonstrates to our satisfaction that we are giving them just what was needed in Quincy, and we have decided to extend our liberal offer, and will say, that to all our customers who find it impossible to carry their purchases home with them, if they bring or send their order to our store, and PAY CASH for it, we will deliver the same and allow 2% DISCOUNT from amount of purchase.

Now we think that this plan will give everyone a good Square Deal, and every intelligent buyer must see that we are more than doing our share to give them what every cash buyer deserves today, first class goods at a low price.

Now, don't forget our other proposition, that all who purchase goods of us, pay cash and carry their purchase home—we will give a Discount of 5% off the amount of purchase, besides selling our goods at the very lowest mark.

We will make a feature of having some special article each day marked at Genuine Bargain Price.

Now read this over carefully and we feel confident that you can see it just the way that we do—something that is surely needed in Quincy—a high grade of goods sold at a very low price.

SHERIDAN—MILES WEDDING.

The season of fall weddings in Atlantic opened Wednesday evening, when Miss Bertha Miles daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry H. Miles of Squantum street was married to Mr. Matthew Sheridan son of Mr. and Mrs. Matthew H. Sheridan of New York city. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Edwin Clattenburg, rector of St. Chrysostom's Episcopal church, where the wedding took place.

The couple entered the church shortly before 8 o'clock and on the hour the bridal march sounded its call, and the bride was led to the altar by her father, preceded by Ralph Wood of South Framingham and Hayward Parker of Dorchester as ushers, and Miss Edith W. Wood of South Framingham as maid of honor. They were met by the groom and his best man, Mr. Edward Ripley of Dorchester.

Miss Miles wore a gown of white silk batiste over taffeta silk. She wore a veil of Brussels net caught up with orange blossoms and carried a shower bouquet of white roses. The maid of honor also wore a white, picture hat and her bouquet was of white flowers.

The church was well filled and the high Episcopal service used throughout the service. Miss Whiting of Dorchester played the wedding march.

A reception followed at the home of the bride's father which was prettily decorated for the occasion with carnations, autumn leaves, and vines. Mr. and Mrs. Sheridan were assisted in receiving by Mrs. Miles, Miss Wood, Miss Sheridan and Mr Mr. Ripley.

After a western trip Mr. and Mrs Sheridan will be at home after December 1st, in Dorchester.

The trustees of the State school at Wrentham have asked for bids for electric wiring engines, dynamos, etc.

Men's Club Favors Ship Subsidy Law

The second meeting of the Men's club of Christ church was held Wednesday evening, and the feature was a debate. In the absence of the president, Merton A. Turner, vice president Byron C. Miller presided, and after the minutes of the last meeting were read, he announced the question for debate, which read: "Resolved: that our merchant marine should be fostered by a ship subsidy law."

There were to be two speakers on each side of the question, and each one was allowed to speak ten minutes, with five minutes for rebuttal.

George A. Thornton was the first debator of the evening, and spoke strongly for the affirmative saying that ship subsidy would increase work in the shipyards. He also brought out the fact, that under subsidy, we would have ships to carry troops in case a war broke out, which is decidedly not the case today. For under ship subsidy vessels are built with guns and other protections, which makes it possible to turn them into cruisers at short notice.

Alexander Fryer was the first negative speaker, and he said that since England was an island of small area, she needed many ships to defend her seaboard on all sides. Not having the necessary revenue to build all battleships, she subsidizes the merchant marines and makes the provision that they shall be used in case of war. Hence he pointed out that ship subsidy was absolutely necessary in England. Not so in the United States.

Harry Ford was Mr. Thornton's colleague on the affirmative. Mr. Ford argued that ship subsidy would cause the building of more ships, and hence foster many industries directly connected with ship-building. Large transportation companies would also be developed, such as the United Fruit and the like, but with wider scope.

Mr. McLeod was the last regular speaker and he supported Mr. Fryer. He remarked that the United States had let shipping go for the reason that she had something better at home. Railroads and the industries in the West must be developed, and the produce can be carried by some one else.

Each man spoke five minutes in rebuttal, and the opinion of the house seemed to be in favor of ship subsidy.

A voluntary debate followed in which the following took part: Arthur Thomas, John McGregor, George W. Holden, Harry Matthews and Charles M. Chase. An entertainment and refreshments followed the closing of the meeting.

Quincy Hearing Under Auspices of Metropolitan Commission

Although the matter under discussion was an important one, the meeting under the auspices of the Metropolitan Improvement Commission at City Hall Wednesday evening was not very largely attended.

Mayor Shea presided, and in opening said he thought it desirable to call the citizens together to discuss these important questions. Quincy was included in the district in which the commission was studying conditions. The Mayor then asked Paul R. Blackmur to read the act creating the commission, after which Sylvester Baxter, secretary of the commission, was introduced.

Mr. Baxter said the time in which the commission was to report had been extended to March 15. He then went into the history of the movement which led up to the passage of the act. The commission was making a study of the highways, transportation and docks of the district. A great community is growing up about Boston and it needs to be treated as a unit in the matter of transportations and highways. The communities must join together for a comprehensive plan for these highways and at the same time retain their individuality. There was need of great highways from centre to centre. The parkways in certain ways are laid out along these lines.

Arthur A. Shurtleff, the road expert of the commission, said Mr. Baxter has been making a study of highways in the district as to the needs of the future. The intention was not to promote any extravagant schemes, but to save money by indicating an economical line of development.

Another element was the traffic on steam railroads, which are called primaries, and the electric lines, which are called secondary lines. The problem is for a uniform system of transportation, whereby rapid transit can be obtained. We are aiming to take advantage of lines already built and vulcanizing them into a comprehensive system, so that one may go from centre to centre without delays. Development of docks and terminals was another object, by pointing out the best places for industrial centers.

Mr. Shurtleff explained the line of work he was doing. He was going through all the streets in cities. He found the system of roads in one city did not fit those of an adjoining city. He would ask the citizens to do what other places had done, by pointing out what improvements were needed in the way of new streets or existing streets that needed widening.

By the aid of the stereopticon, pictures of the street systems of Boston, Chelsea, Lynn and Melrose were thrown upon the screen. Mr. Shurtleff pointed how important thoroughfares in these cities came to dead ends.

He had spent eight hours in Quincy on Tuesday. He found some extremely wide and good streets here. There are some other streets laid out to go somewhere but do not go anywhere.

Ernest W. Branch, C. E., was not prepared to speak. He knew the needs of Quincy in a general way. There are some places where the main thoroughfares need widening.

Paul A. Blackmur asked if the commission intended to make any recommendation as to the future layout of the parkways. Quincy was included in this system yet was the last to receive any benefits from it. We have parkways laid out but not finished. We have 80 miles of streets and many main thoroughfares used by people travelling through Quincy.

The matter of expense and how it should be proportioned is an important question. Our main streets have been maintained at great expense largely for other communities. Mr. Blackmur also cited the Fore River bridge, for which Quincy was taxed a large amount. If great improvements are to be made in the district there should be some method of payment outside the city. He also spoke of the sewer which emptied at Moon Island and which ruined our shore front.

Mr. Shurtleff asked that Mr. Blackmur submit these things in a letter to the commission.

Brooks Adams asked if any comprehensive plan of policing and administering the ways had been considered. If we are to open great ways with no uniform system of policing or effective centre of administration it would be suicidal.

Mr. Baxter replied that this matter was being considered. The idea of the commission was to point out what expenditures can be made economically. The automobile travel has brought up many new questions. Seventy-five percent of this tax now goes to the Highway Commission and 25 per cent to the Metropolitan Park commission. Some additional tax should also be placed to reimburse municipalities.

Mr. Blackmur also called attention to the need of public landings. It was now difficult to find landings on the water front the public could use.

F. F. Crane asked if the commission was considering water ways.

Mr. Shurtleff replied that there was an expert making a study of this problem, and it was hoped to have him present this evening.

Mr. Crane then spoke the importance of Quincy's water front and of its excellent channel.

Mr. Baxter said the commission would be glad of any information in this connection. Quincy has a great asset in its water front. The commissioners would gladly devote a day to a hearing on this feature alone.

Ex-Mayor John O. Hall spoke of expense. Quincy has been taxed heavily for parks, etc., and has received small benefits. The boulevard can not be used as it is inaccessible.

Mayor Shea suggested that the Board of Trade and Citizens Association get together and discuss needs and then present them to the commission.

Dr. J. F. Welch could not see any great benefit to be derived from a meeting of the citizens. Some means should be devised to place us before the commission with uniformity of plan that will merit consideration. Something for practical every day use should be suggested. He could not think of any better way than to get together and look the ground over, and see if we cannot unite on something that will appeal to the commission as practical.

After some further informal discussions the meeting adjourned.

It is understood that some plan for docks in Quincy will be formulated, when another hearing will be asked.

Big rally tonight at Y. M. C. A. for every boy in Quincy between 13 and 18 years of age. Mayor W. T. Shea will preside and Leslie L. Cleveland will speak. Clarence G. Dow will entertain with an exhibition of sleight of hand.

Who Owns The Horse?

A perplexing horse case was heard in the district court before Judge Avery this morning which prompted his honor to ask, "Who owns the horse now?"

Jacob Asnes was the defendant and he was charged with the larceny of a horse from Moses Sorgman.

From what could be gathered from the evidence, Asnes sold Sorgman a horse for $30. He paid $10 down and was to pay $10 a week until all was paid.

A few days after the first payment Asnes appeared with a lease for Sorgman to sign which the latter refused to do as he could not read it.

Then Sam Silverman appears on the scene and loans Sorgman $12 to settle the balance due.

In the meantime it is alleged that Asnes had taken the horse away and when the final payment was made he made a demand of $2 for the horse's board, which was refused.

Then Asnes was brought into court for larceny.

The court suggested placing the case on file on payment of costs, but Asnes' counsel objected and a fine of $10 was then imposed, from which an appeal was taken.

ARRESTED IN CAMBRIDGE.

Word has been received by the police of the arrest at Cambridge of Reddy McGilvray for the larceny of money at Quincy.

The alleged larceny took place in August, 1907, when $200 was taken from the Vermont House at Quincy Point, the greater part of which belonged to Peter Lamont.

Two parties were alleged to have been concerned in the robbery, Philip Holden and McGilvray. Both men skipped but Holden was arrested a month later. When the case came up in court Lamont had gone to the old country and could not be reached and Holden was discharged.

McGilvray returned to Cambridge recently and was arrested Wednesday night. Inspector Goodhue has gone to Cambridge and will bring him to Quincy.

GEORGE H. PENFIELD.

The funeral of George H. Penfield of 491 Hancock street was held Wednesday afternoon from St. Chrysostom's church. The rector, Rev. A. Edwin Clattenburg, conducted the services, and by his permission the members of Merry Mount lodge. No. 127, A. O. U. W., were allowed to recite their ritual in the church. The body was taken to Mt. Wollaston and placed in the receiving vault. Mr. Penfield's health had been failing for some time, although he had not been confined to his home until recently, his death being due to a complication of diseases. He had been employed at the Tubular Rivet and Stud Co., sixteen years.

Friends of the family from Hanson, Cambridge, Winthrop and Connecticut, and many of his associates at the Tubular Rivet and Stud factory were present. Several beautiful floral pieces were sent, including pieces from the factory and the lodge of which he was a member.

Mr. Penfield was sixty-four years of age and was born in Portland, Conn. He is survived by a widow and two daughters, Mrs. Arthur Wills and Mrs. James McTear.

JEWETT PIANOS

(Famous for Forty-Eight Years)

The New Models should be seen

By every piano buyer this fall.

The progress of the Jewett piano has made notable changes in the piano situation. More Jewett pianos are probably sold in New England each year than of any other make of equal grade.

The growth of popularity of the Jewett can be nothing short of amazing to people who are not thoroughly familiar with this well-known piano. The reason for this fact can be found only in their wonderfully sweet, clear tone, beautiful styles and finish and their great durability.

The new models are handsomer than any we have shown before. We recommend them as the best high grade pianos ever offered at these prices.

Uprights $350 to $450. Grands $650

DECLARED TO BE ALLIES

President Makes Sharp Attack on Bryan and Gompers

DENUNCIATION OF THE COURTS

The Democratic Candidate Is Asked Whether He Repudiates or Shares Labor Leader's Views--Assertion That They Would Legalize the Boycott and Blacklist and Prevent the Courts From Interfering In Riots

Washington, Oct. 22.—Bounding again into the centre of the political campaign, President Roosevelt last night made public a letter in which he tears away the veil which he believes has been put before the eyes of labor.

It is one of the most sensational statements which has marked the campaign. In it Roosevelt charges that Bryan and Gompers are allies, and challenges the Democratic candidate to make his position plain.

The Republican party would uplift labor, says Roosevelt, but the remedies proposed by the Democrats are but an empty sham. He asserts that Taft's position toward labor is clearly defined, and demands to know where Bryan stands.

The president holds that Gompers would have all legal restraint withdrawn from the boycott, and would favor enactments legalizing secondary boycotts, blacklists, exempting unions from the consequences of such radical action, yet denying damages to firms whose business is destroyed.

Gompers' schemes are ridiculed as policies which will do labor more harm than good. A score of questions are addressed to Bryan. One striking demand is that Bryan state whether he shares in Gompers' denunciation of the courts or repudiates it.

Some of the characteristic points in the president's letter follow:

It has been my constant object to do everything in my power, both by administrative action and by endeavoring to secure legislative action, to advance the cause of labor.

I will do everything in my power for the wage workers of the country except to do what is wrong.

I denounce as wicked the proposition to secure a law which, according to the explicit statement of Mr. Gompers, is to prevent the courts from effectively interfering with riotous violence.

Special privilege is the bane of the workingman.

Labor representatives should concentrate and use their influence for the enactment of general measures calculated to protect and not to destroy the remedy of injunction.

Does Mr. Bryan believe with Mr. Gompers that he and that part of the labor movement that agrees with him has the right morally and should be given the right legally to paralyze or to destroy with impunity the business of an innocent third person?

The letter is 4000 words in length and addressed to Senator Knox, who, when at the White House last week, reported to the president that labor was without doubt wandering from the Republican standard, but suggested that it might rally to the leadership of Theodore Roosevelt.

It states that it is addressed to Senator Knox because as a member of Roosevelt's cabinet he was first to institute an action by which a widow of an engineer obtained recompense for negligence resulting in his death. Its dictation shows that the administration understands the present sensitive condition of labor in general and railroad employes in particular.

Militant Campaign If Necessary

Buffalo, Oct. 22.—The fortieth annual convention of the National Woman Suffrage association has ended. In closing the final business session, President Shaw said: "We never have had a more instructive, comprehensive convention than this has been. We will go home with greater enthusiasm and a greater determination to continue the struggle and, if need be, enter upon a militant campaign for our birthright. We are on the battle line. Victory is in sight."

Will Stick to Poitics

Portsmouth, N. H., Oct. 22.—Given the option by the navy department at Washington, to which complaint had been made, of resigning his civil service job at the Portsmouth navy yard or of abandoning his political aspirations, Captain Josiah N. Jones resigned his position at the yard. Jones was recently nominated for representative to the general court.

Delinquent Children's Need

Rochester, Oct. 22.—What he described as the "crying need for medical supervision of delinquent children" was the burden of an address by Dr. John M. Plant of Syracuse, at the conference of the staate probation committee here. Plant said that defective teeth and breathing apparatus formed a dangerous ally to criminal tendencies.

Lady Betty Across the Water

By C. N. & A. M. WILLIAMSON

Copyright, 1906, by McClure, Phillips & Co.

"Is it a sad story, dear?" I asked.

"Yes. It's sad."

"Perhaps it may end well yet, though," I tried to comfort her.

Sally shook her head. "It can't in this world. And the saddest part of all is that it was my own fault. But I didn't understand the relative value of things when I lost the one thing in the world that can make real happiness for a woman. I should like you to understand them while you still have time."

"And I should love to hear your story if it won't make you too sad thinking of it," I said.

"Oh, I am always thinking of it. It's never really out of my mind for a minute. It's there, you know, like an undertone, just as when you live near the sea there's always the sound of the waves underlying every other sound, though you mayn't be listening for it."

"Then tell me," I said.

"Not yet. I haven't asked you the questions yet which will show me when you answer them whether you need to hear the story or not. Could you imagine yourself marrying without first being in love?"

"No-o," I said thoughtfully. "Not when it really came to it. But Vic says that's all nonsense; that no woman, no matter how much she thinks herself in love, ever stops in love with her husband. The thing is to marry a man who will let you do as you like, and, of course, he must be rich."

Sally sighed. "Well, dear, she's your sister, and I'm just nothing to you at all, but I'd like to tell you to forget about her advice and not care whether a man is rich or poor, or even well born, if only he's made himself a gentleman, body and heart and soul, and is strong and clever enough to take care of you."

Lots of children were playing about.

The minute she said that the image of Jim Brett rose up before my eyes. I think, though he is poor and perhaps of humble birth, that the girl he marries will be happy and well taken care of.

"You'll hear a lot of talk about money at Newport," she went on, "too much. Among some of the people you'll be with, money's of more importance than anything else. Two or three rich young men are certain to ask you to marry them—very nice fellows they may be, and they will show you heaps of attention—all those that Cousin Katherine will let come near you—and as you're so young and inexperienced you may lose your head a little bit. But do remember that losing your head and being flattered and amused isn't falling in love. A man must be able to make you love him for himself, and that self must be worth loving, for nothing else is any good in the end. And now I'll tell you my story—just in a few words—because it will give you something to think about.

"I'm thirty-two now. When I was nineteen, a year older than you, I cared for a man and he for me. We cared for each other—terribly. But he was poor, and, not only that, he came from people whom mine looked down upon. We loved each other so much, though, that I would have married him in spite of all, but my relations thought it would ruin my life, and they advised and persuaded and implored and insisted, until I was weak enough to give the man up. They took me to Europe, and because I had some money an Italian prince we met in Rome wanted to marry me. They almost argued me into consenting, and though they didn't quite the news went home to Kentucky that I was engaged. The man I really loved—loved dearly all the time, though I was trying to forget him—believed it. Why shouldn't he, since I'd given him up for the reasons I had? He was Catholic, and he went into a monastery we have in Kentucky and became a monk. No one ever wrote to me about it. All my friends thought the less I heard of him the better. And two years later, when I went back home—not engaged, and thinking in my heart that there was and always would be only one man for me in the world—it was to learn that that man had taken the final vows which would separate him from earthly love forever.

"Oh, Betty, you don't know what I suffered. I'd been saying to myself that when I saw him again—as I meant to—I would know by his eyes at the first glance whether he still cared as much as ever, and if he did I would ask him to marry me. But I never saw him again, except with the eyes of my heart, and I always see him so. Not an hour passes that I don't see him so."

"You poor darling!" I exclaimed. And there was a note in her voice that made my eyelids sting. "How little I guessed. And you seem so cheerful and even merry."

"One isn't in the world to be a wet blanket," said Sally. "Besides, one isn't actively miserable every minute for years because one has thrown away one's chance of real happiness. One gets along contentedly enough except in the bad hours, when instead of being a mild gray the world is ink black. But I haven't told you this to get sympathy, dear. It hasn't been quite easy telling, for I don't talk much about the deep down things in myself. I've told you in the hope that you'll remember me and my wasted years if your chance comes to be happy, even if it should be a chance which you think, in a worldly way, wouldn't be prudent or what your people would like. People have no right to try and order our lives, no matter how near they may be to us. It's we who have to live our lives, not they."

For a minute we were both silent, and then Sally said quietly, as if she were glad to speak: "Here comes someone we've seen before. Do you recognize him? And shall you bow?"

Vivace gave such a leap that his leash, which I'd been holding carelessly, was jerked out of my hand. It was my brown man who was coming—Jim Brett.

My face did feel red! Vivace was making such a fuss over him that Sally could hardly help guessing whose the dog had been before he was mine. But I made the best of it. "Of course I recognize him, and of course I shall bow," said I. "He was very kind to me on the dock when I was at letter B."

Sally didn't make any remark about Vivace's capers, though by this time he was wagging all over with joy at his master's feet and jumping up to his knees. I was grateful to her.

In another moment we three had met in the shady path far away from everybody else, and Vivace began running back and forth between his master and me, as if he wanted to make us good friends and not hurt either of our feelings.

"How do you do?" said I, holding out my hand. "What a coincidence meeting you here. And my dear little dog that somebody sent me does seem to take an extraordinary fancy to you, doesn't he?"

Mr. Jim Brett laughed and kept his hat off, which made him look very nice with the dappling green and gold light waving over his thick, short black hair and his forehead, which is whiter than the rest of his face.

He had on better clothes than he had worn on shipboard, but they were blue serge, with the air of having been bought ready made at a cheap shop. In spite of them, however, he looked very handsome, and every inch of him a gentleman. I don't think many men, even in Stan's set, could wear those badly cut things and look as he did in them, though he does have to travel in the steerage.

I asked Sally if I might introduce Mr. Brett to her, and she said yes and smiled up so sweetly that I was delighted, because for all her talk about nature's noblemen I felt I didn't know her well enough to be quite sure how she would take it. But she talked to him charmingly and complimented him upon his bravery on shipboard. "Every one of us admired you for it," she said, "and I'm very glad to meet you this morning."

DEAFNESS CANNOT BE CURED.

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tubes. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

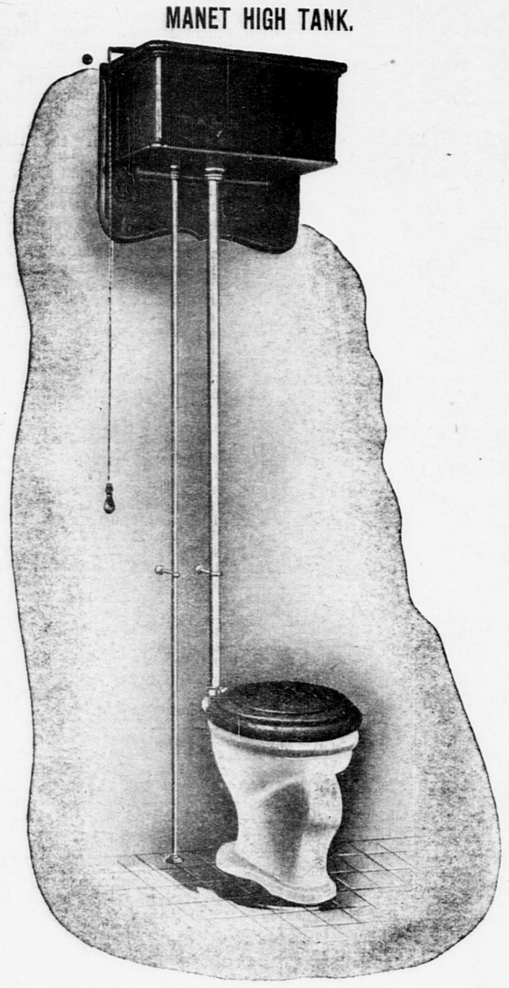
BATH ROOM EQUIPMENT.

MANET HIGH TANK.



We have made a study of selecting Bath Room Fixtures, both high and low priced, in presenting the views of these two closets, we show two moderate priced fixtures, the Manet Combination in either a high or low down tank combination. We have no hesitancy in recommending either one to you. The wood work is of well seasoned quartered oak, with piano polished finish. The tanks are lined with 12 oz. tinned copper, with lap folded seams, soldered strongly on the outside, (this prevents the deterioration of the solder, as the water cannot act directly on it.) They are equipped with high pressure float valves on the supply pipe, (having removable seats which may be easily replaced in making repairs,) and heavy brass syphon valves for the flushing device. The bowls are of heavy viterous crockery, highly glazed, (warranted not to craze or check) and produce a syphonic action in operation. This action quickly removes the contents of bowl when it is flushed from the tank. The seats are of neat design with heavy Nickle Plated brass bar hinges, which attach direct to the closet bowl, and when raised offers an opportunity for thorough cleaning.

Manet Low Down Closet Combination.

LAVISH ENTERTAINMENT

Japanese Sparing No Pains to Make American Visitors Happy

Tokio, Oct. 22.—A dinner and a ball given last evening in honor of the visit of the American fleet of battleships by Premier Katsura brought together about 1500 preminent persons. The guests at the dinner, however, were confined to those holding official positions. There were no set speeches. The ball was the most brilliant of the functions of the week and brought Americans and Japanese into the closest touch. American officers danced with wives and daughters of Japanese, the majority of whom were dressed in European costumes.

Four thousand sailors from the fleet came to Tokio today to attend a garden party at Habyia park, given by the mayor of Tokio. At the same time the officers were entertained at luncheons given by the mayor and by Prince Shimadazu, later attending a garden party at the British embassy.

Throughout the week of the reception there has not been a discordant note among the American bluejackets ashore in Yokohama. The men have been entertained lavishly on every side.

With the celebration half elapsed, it is marvelous to note how the enthusiasm of the populace is sustained. Everywhere there are vast crowds that cheer the American admirals and their attending officers as they are hurried from one function to another, and always at the vantage points en route there are groups of schoolchildren, led by their teachers, singing "Hail Columbia," or cheering the Americans in the English fashion.

BANK EXAMINER'S DISCOVERIES

Moxie Tells How Morse's Endless Chain Came to Grief

New York, Oct. 22.—Into the testimony at the trial of Charles W. Morse and his co-defendant, Alfred H. Curtis, who are charged with conspiracy and violation of the national banking laws, was introduced the name of Miss Kate A. Wilson, secretary to Morse, and the prosecution produced witnesses who told of large loans made by the National Bank of North America, a Morse institution, to Miss Wilson. Edwin Moxey, a government bank examiner, was the principal witness to tell of the big loans made to the financier's faithful secretary. Summed up, his testimony was as follows:

"On her bare and unsupported note Morse would loan Miss Wilson a sum of money. Miss Wilson's note would be cashed by the National Bank of North America, and with the proceeds stock of the American Ice company would be purchased. Then the ice stock would be used to secure another loan from the bank. With the money thus secured bank stock would be purchased, and the bank stock aided in supporting the ice stock pools in which Morse and other financiers were interested. The failure to raise the price of ice stock above par was what caused the break in the endless chain."

The lawyers for the defense objected repeatedly to the line of questions asked the witness by the government lawyers, but Judge Hough sustained the prosecution, and the above description of the Wilson loans was put upon the records, piece by piece, until the chain was complete.

Duke Is Seeking Sympathy

Turin, Oct. 22.—The Duke of the Abruzzi, whose mysterious disappearance a few days ago led to the report that he had left Turin with the intention of proceeding to the United States, has been visiting Princess Clotilde, the aunt of King Victor Emmanuel, at Moncalleri for the purpose of interesting her in his cause. The duke's plans with regard to his reported engagement to Miss Katherine Elkins are being kept a profound secret. He has even dispensed with his aide and valet in order to be completely free.

Successful Dash For Liberty

Tiptonville, Tenn., Oct. 22.—Unharmed, save numerous scratches received in a thirty-hour trip through unfamiliar woods and the fatigue incident to the trip without food and the mental strain, Judge R. Z. Taylor reached here yesterday after a miraculous escape from night riders at Reelfoot lake, who murdered his partner, Captain Quentin Rankin, Tuesday night. Taylor's escape is due to a daring dash for liberty while the night riders were disputing among themselves the best way to kill him.

Monopoly in Powder Trade

New York, Oct. 22.—That a 90 percent monopoly of the powder trade in the United States had been obtained by methods such as the cutting of prices to about $1 in certain states, while maintained at $6.75 elsewhere, was the substance of testimony given against the so-called powder trust at a continued hearing of the case here. The litigation is a federal suit against the combine for alleged violation of the Sherman anti-trust law.

Record Output of Money

Washington, Oct. 22.—A total of $1,297,263,420 in new money was printed and circulated by the bureau of engraving and printing during the last fiscal year, according to the annual report of Director Ralph, who says that the output was larger than in any previous year in the bureau's history. The bureau also prepared and delivered 75,066,333 sheets of postage stamps.

Quincy Locals Briefly Told

Only one week in which to file nominations for the city caucus.

Alfred N. LaBrecque of Hough Neck is circulating papers for nomination as Councilman from Ward One.

The Mt. Wollaston club will hold a whist party tonight at Odd Fellows' hall.

Mrs. Herbert Otis has been entertaining her mother, Mrs. H. Walter Beals of Avon.

Emhert F. Oliver and Burton Butts of Avon have been visiting friends in Quincy the past few days.

Joseph M. Ion of South Quincy passed away on Wednesday at the residence of his sister on Bradford street.

The daughters of John Adams celebrate their fourteenth anniversary by a concert and apron and necktie party at Electa hall.

City Clerk gives notice today of the polling places designated for the election of Nov. 3. The polls will be open from 6 A M. to 4 P. M.

Several Quincy Masons attended the visitation at Campello Wednesday evening. The visitation to Rural lodge is next week Thursday, and to Wollaston lodge Nov. 17.

George Lambert of Beacon street, a worker in the shipyard, and a member of the Salvation Army, is to lead the meetin gat the Quincy Point church, this evening.

The new dormatory at the Sailors' Snug Harbor, Germantown, is progressing. The roof is on and the lathers have finished. It is to be a very attractive addition and appreciated by the thirty-seven occupants.

The Creole, built at Quincy, for the Morgan line, which has been docked at the shipyard for several weeks for repairs, will leave next Wednesday to standardize her screws on the Provincetown course. She will then go to New York to be scraped and painted.

Officer William Lyons, who, for the past month has been confined to his home by injuries received in an encounter with an intoxicated man whom he was arresting has returned to his beat at Quincy Point. "Bill" looks fine in his new winter uniform.

Every child likes a dog, and performing dogs especially. They will therefore flock to the Scenic theatre this week and where Fritz's wonderful performing dogs are one of the leading attractions. At the Saturday matinee there will be a reception for ladies and children, at which time they may get a closer view of the beautiful dogs who are almost human in their intelligence.

Chester, the four-year-old son of Peter Curney, formerly of Quincy, now residing in Allston, was burned to death Tuesday. The mother went out and left her two children alone. While she was gone, little Chester got hold of some matches and started to light them. He set his clothes on fire and when his mother returned he was nearly dead. The boy was hurried to the hospital, but died on the way there. It is thought that he swallowed some of the fire, and thus hastened death.

POLITICS RED HOT.

While in Charlestown, W. Va., this week, Councilman A. H. Gilson was pointed out as Louis Bennet, the Democratic candidate for governor of the state. In a letter to a friend, he says he was in rather an embarrassing position for awhile. He says politics are red hot there and are engrossing the attention of everybody. The doctor is daily exhibiting pictures of Candidate Taft, Congressman Gaines and others while touring the State with Republican campaign speakers. On Tuesday he went into a coal mine.

CARD OF THANKS.

Mrs. George H. Penfield and daughters wish to thank their friends and neighbors for their kindness and sympathy in their hour of bereavement. Wollaston, Oct, 22, 1908.

TIME TO ACT.

Don't Wait for the Fatal Stages of Kidney Illness. Profit by Quincy People's Experiences.

Occasional attacks of backache, irregular urination, headaches, and dizzy spells are common early symptoms of kidney disorders. It's an error to neglect these ills. The attacks may pass off for a time but return with greater intensity. If there are symptoms of dropsy—puffy swellings below the eyes, bloating of limbs and ankles, or any part of the body, don't delay a minute. Begin taking DoDan's Kidney Pills, and keep up the treatment until the kidneys are well, when your old time health and vigor will return. Cures in Quincy prove the effectiveness of the great kidney remedy.

H. A. Vinton, living at 558 Washington street, Quincy, Mass., says: "Doan's Kidney Pills completely cured me of kidney trouble which had been in my system for at least ten years. Before using this remedy I had severe pains in my back and loins, and they seemed to be of a rheumatic nature, I consulted a doctor and tried many remedies but received only temporary relief. Being advised to try Doan's Kidney Pills I procured a box at the Cox Drug Store, and gegan their use. They quickly banished the pains in my back and my health is better today than for a long time."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

Harmon, Trustee dated October first, 1907 and recorded in the Registry of Deeds for the County of Norfolk Book 1071, page 509, will be sold at public auction for breach of the conditions of said mortgage, on the premises hereinafter described, on MONDAY the 16th day of November, 1908, at two o'clock in the afternoon, all and singular, the premises conveyed by said mortgage deed, and herein described subsantially as follows, viz:—

A certain lot of land with the buildings thereon situated in that part of Quincy, Massachusetts known as "Norfolk Downs" being lot No. 9, on plan of Charles D. Elliot, dated April 1892, and recorded with Norfolk Deeds, Book of Plans No. 14, plan No. 640, and bounded as follows, viz:—North-westerly by Billings Road, fifty (50) feet; Northeasterly by lot No. 10, on said plan, one hundred ten and 42-100 (110.42) feet; Southeasterly by lot No. 8, on said plan, fifty (50) feet; Southwesterly by Holmes Street, one hundred ten and 42-100 (110.42) feet. Containing according to said plan, fifty-five hundred (5500) square feet of land.

Said premises will be sold subject to the restrictions set forth in the title deeds and to any and all unpaid taxes and assessments.

For further particulars inquire at the office of Fred W. Wood, 15 School Street, Room 44, Boston.

One Thousand (1000) dollars will be required to be paid in cash by the purchaser at the time and place of sale, balance in ten days from day of sale at twelve o'clock noon, at said office, upon delivery of deed.

FRED W. WOOD, Assignee, and present holder of said mortgage.

Foot Ball And Other Sports

The management of the Quincy High school football team wishes it to be known that they did not cancel the game that was scheduled with Dedham High for Tuesday. On the other hand Dedham called the game off, sending word to the local team that they had disbanded. The day following the receipt of the letter from Dedham cancelling the game, the Dedham team played a game. Immediately the local manager sent a communication to the Dedham team but never received an answer. Think- that the team really was disbanded, the Quincy team telephoned to Milton High on Monday morning to arrange a game, not wishing to dissappoint the supporters of the team. It was then learned from Milton that the latter was to play Dedham on Tuesday, and so Quincy was without a game.

The Dedham crowd evidently got cold feet when the home team swamped Wellesley, and did not wish to play. But Quincy did not cancel the game.

The team goes to Maiden on Saturday, the hardest game of the season being scheduled for the Malden athletic field. Malden is light, but fast as lightning, and they know football right from the start. The local team is heavier and comparatively fast and should make a good showing.

The next home game is with Melrose on next Tuesday. In the past Melrose has had crack athletic teams, but this year's football team is below the standard. Quincy ought to beat Melrose and should run up a good score. But you never can tell. Football is getting to be nearly as uncertain as baseball.

In the national championship golf tournament at Chevy Chase, Ind., on Wednesday, Mollie B. Adams of the Wollaston club, was defeated by Miss K. C. Harley. Miss Adams was in the running for championship honors, till she was beaten by Miss Harley.

New Books at Public Library.

Among the forthcoming new books at the Public Library—a list of which is to be published in Saturday's Ledger and the Patriot of this week may be noted the following:

The Shell Book, by Julia Ellen Rogers, of value to the student as well as the interested general reader, with eight beautiful colored plates and ninety-six half-tone reproductions of photographs.

Gerhard's Modern Baths and Bath Houses, an excellent book on different forms of baths; house, public, factory, school, gymnasium, river and sea, air and sun, medical and electric light, etc. The author is a sanitary engineer of large practical experience and extensive travel in Europe, Africa, and this country. The book is profusely illustrated with charts, plans, and photographs.

Clive Holland's Old and New Japan with fifty good illustrations in color, is, the Outlook says, "just the book and these just the illustrations to make one who has not seen Japan long to see it, and to make the one who has sojourned in Japan, long to return."

There is a new translation of Virgil's Aeneid by Harlan Hoge Ballard, the librarian of the Berkshire Athenaeum, Pittsfield, Mass.

For the children's room there are Tudor Jenk's Photography for Young People; David Starr Jordan's book of Knight and Barbara; Insect Stories by Kellogg; the Children's Longfellow, and others. This room is increasing in popularity, last Monday showing the largest daily circulation, when 130 books were given out, of which 68 were fiction, and 62 non-fiction, most gratifying proportions, by the way.

The Marine Review, a weekly publication of interest to the young men learning their trade at the Fore River Shipbuilding Co., is being sent on trial this fall and if used in the the reading room or borrowed enough to justify its continuance, will be placed on the subscription list.

REPUBLICANS UNITED.

W. R. Thomas, the candidate for the Legislature, has no anxiety over the result of the election since meeting on Wednesday evening with the Ward Three Republican committee. All members were present and assured him that he would poll the full Republican strength. Others to speak were County Commissioner Merrill and ex-Mayor Thompson.

—He was a well dressed young fellow, but an air of enui hung about him like a blanket. He leaned against the brick wall of the Greenleaf building and languidly puffed a cigarette. An acquaintance came along and stopped to pass the time of day. "I'm sick of this town," observed Mr. Cigarette Smoker. "It's dead slow; nothing doing. Where would you advise me to go?" "Well, frankly, replied his friend, "I'd hate to name the place."

Norfolk County And Vicinity

One of MILTON'S most conspicuous and eccentric residents, Thomas Craig, is dead at his home on Pleasant street. Mr. Craig's lawn is a landmark in Milton, the motto "Jesus Only" made in big letters on its steep slope, attracting much attention. Mr. Craig became interested in every new religion, and started a Salvation Army Corp and a Holy Ghost and Us sect in Milton.

The case of Officer Brien against Chief Sackett of NORWOOD came up Wednesday night at a public meeting in Village hall. Nearly everyone in the town was present. Officers and citizens testified against the chief, and the meeting lasted till midnight. The selectmen reserved their decision.

The firemen of RANDOLPH had a four hour fight with a forest fire Tuesday and with the aid of chemicals and dirt finally succeeded in checking it. The fire was at the West Corners, near the Randolph and Quincy line.

The annual banquet and entertainment of the STOUGHTON High school association will be held in the Town Hall next Monday evening. George G. Hammond will entertain with a description of the recent eruption of Mt. Vesuvius. Mr. Hammond comes from Everett, and was an eye-witness of the eruption.

The shoe industry in HOLBROOK at the present time is pretty quiet. None of the shops are running on full time, on account of stock taking. A new run is expected about the first of November, however, and then business will be good.

The voting list in AVON has been increased by 16 names, during the session of the board of registrars. The last chance to register in towns before the State election is Saturday, Oct. 21.

Patrick D. Norriss, 19, was held in $3500 for the grand jury, when a charge of breaking and entering was brought against him yesterday in the BROOKLINE municipal court. He is charged with breaking and entering five places.

The Mendon conference of Congregational churches held its annual fall meeting at MEDFIELD on Wednesday. The address of welcome was made by Rev. Leroy M. Pierce. Morning and afternoon sessions were in order. It was voted to hold the next session in Foxboro.

WANT SQUARE DEAL.

Editors Ledger:

I would like to use a little space in your paper to write about the way the people in one portion of West Quincy are treated every evening. A great many of them having no place to go, generally collect in the vicinity of St. Mary's hall. They are driven away as if they were outlaws, and in doing this the police sometimes make people who are waiting for cars leave the corner of Bates avenue. This is the only corner where the police are so strict, as people are allowed to collect at most every other corner in West Quincy but at this particular one.

I would like to suggest that the police give the young men a fair deal and use a little discretion in this matter.

Respectfully Yours,
Willard Raymond.

BOYS' RALLY

Mayor Shea Gives Sound Advice to Coming Voters

The first political rally of the boys' department of the Y. M. C. A. was held Thursday evening and was attended by upwards of 75 boys.

President Brown called the meeting to order and introduced Mr. Clee the boys work director who stated that this would be the only rally held. The two registration days would be Oct. 29 and 30 and Oct. 31 the election would be held. The object of the rally and election was to interest the boys in civic government.

President Brown then introduced Mayor Shea as the presiding officer.

Mayor Shea said the object of this meeting was a good one as it tended to elevate the standard of the citizens of Quincy. The Mayor's address while directed to boys was full of good advice that would apply to citizens and voters as well as to boys.

Party politics was omitted so that it could not be called a campaign address.

The Mayor's address in full was as follows:

My fellow citizens of the future:—I have been asked to come here tonight as mayor of this city and speak to you briefly in this somewhat unique campaign which you have just begun. I am not here to expound to you any particular political faith, nor to encourage you along party lines, but just to say a few words that may be of value because their import has been realized, by us older citizens, in the school of experience. The first duty that I would charge you with is not to be Republicans, not to be Democrats, Prohibitionists, Socialists or any of the many other party designations which one finds in the public life of our country but, first of all, to be American citizens.

But, you may say, are we not American citizens already, especially those of us who have been born in this country? True, you may be American citizens in name but the American citizen who does not take a lively and a healthy interest in the management of the affairs of his government, is a pretty poor specimen of manhood to be invested with the sacred right of citizenship in a free country, especially when that right was purchased by the untold suffering and by the death of a brave and patriotic people.

So, my young friends, my first charge to you is this:—That you interest yourself in the government of your country, be it national, state, or municipal, just so far as you may be able to exert your influence, your whole influence, for the betterment of your country, your state and your city. Four years ago in this city, at the Presidential election, 384 men went to the polls and failed to cast a vote for President. These men took the trouble to go to the polling places and, after receiving the ballot, failed to register their vote for that all-important office of the Presidency of their country. Last year in this city there were 92 blanks registered in the vote for Governor and 44 voters were silent on the question of who should be mayor at our last city election.

These figures represent the number of men who actually went to polling booths and failed to register their votes. But, in addition to these, there were hundreds of other citizens who did not take the trouble to go near the polling places at all. In our last city election, on the all-important question of electing members of our local school board, there were over 1000 blanks registered on the election of a school committeeman-at-large.

I said in the beginning that you should, first of all, be American citizens. And I say to you secondly, and with as much emphasis as before, that you should not be blank citizens. If your vote is worth anything at all, it is worth making count. As well send an army into battle equipped with blank cartridges and expect it to win a victory as to expect to secure good government by casting blank ballots. Don't make the oft-repeated mistake of casting half a ballot or, worse, a blank one. If the ballot is worth anything at all it is worth everything in its entirety. And, in connection with this second admonition, I would charge you always to go to the polls on election day. It is the most sacred privilege you have intrusted to you and yet how much is it abused. I do not know but it would be a good plan to disfranchise the citizens who habitually neglects his duties of citizenship on election day. Therefore, I beg of you young men to make up your minds now that when the time comes for you to enjoy the full blessings of citizenship that you will never allow an election day go by without casting your ballot. Having made up your minds to that extent let me ask you to go just one step further and determine not to cast a blank ballot, nor a half a ballot, but that you will exercise your solemn privilege to pass judgment upon each and every candidate whose name is on the ballot. In this way, and this way only can we hope for a full and complete expression of the popular will.

As each citizen has a right to vote, so each citizen has the right to be a candidate for public office. The reason why we have so many failures in the popular government of our country is due, in a large measure, to the unwillingness or reputable citizens to be candidates for public office, a refusal that is quickly seen and taken advantage of by the professional politicians. So, in connection with the foregoing advice I would supplement my first two charges with this final one: That you lend your name for public office when your fellow citizens ask you. It is a great boon and privilege for a citizen to be able to administer the affairs of government under which he lives. It is a privilege which, in some countries, is allowed only to those of royal blood. It is said that President John Adams accepted an election to the school committee or some minor office after he had been President of these United States and said, when nominated, that no citizen should refuse a nomination to any office, be it great or small, when his fellow citizens had asked him to represent them. That should be the true American spirit.

In our own city today, prominent citizens and business-men will continually criticise this act or that act of our legislative bodies and these same men will refuse to be a candidate for offices where they could, by reason of their business ability and training, be of immeasurable aid to the city government. Much is heard nowadays of raising the standard of public life. There is only one way to raise it—vote for men worthy of your confidence and accept a nomination to public office if your fellow citizens make the request of you. If you are negligent in your duty on election day and refuse to accept a nomination when tendered you, what right have you to criticise the public actions of those in power when a different course pursued by you might have made a difference in results?

There is a class of people in this country today who are said to be afraid of popular government. Popular government is to be feared only when the populace fail to take interest in it. Our system of popular government has been tried out for nearly a century and a quarter. It was begun in this very town by such men as John Adams and John Hancock who were born here. It was dearly won and the priceless heritage has come down to us to be safe-guarded as no other material advantage should be guarded.

You young men are to be the voters of the future. Yours will be the duty of maintaining the government in the next generation. The responsibility that now rests on shoulders older than yours will be your burden before a great while. It is well for you, therefore, to ponder seriously over the responsibilities of citizenship in all that this responsibility implies and that you have been given this chance to assemble and learn the practical workings of our great political system is a credit and an honor to the Association under whose auspices you are gathered here tonight.

Every once in awhile you read in the papers of a reform movement in governmental affairs. What does it mean? It simply means that the reputable citizens who should be wide awake all the time have been aroused from their political slumbers and have made their efforts count in politics. Too often they relax their grasp after they have secured control but not so with the working, professional politicans. They never sleep. They are always on guard. Look to it, therefore, that you keep ever alert, that you never allow election day to come around without voting, that you ever be willing to be a candidate yourself and so by giving a healthful example to others and following it yourself you will make of this country what the fathers intended—"a government of the people, by the people and for the people."

The other speaker of the evening was Leslie L. Cleveland, head master at the High school. Mr. Cleveland explained to the boys, in a simple way how a President was elected.

The President is elected once in four years. You do not vote for the President direct but for electors.

Each state has as many electors as it has senators and congressmen. The men elected as electors meet the second Monday in January and vote for President and Vice President.

This vote is sent to Washington and on the second Wednesday in February these votes are counted. We know before who will be elected because these electors we pledged to vote for certain men.

It was the duty of every citizen to vote, as the Mayor had said. It was a disgrace not to value the privilege given you by voting. You should get acquainted with our form of government and should also get acquainted with our city government. Great questions are coming up upon which you want to be informed so that when you go to vote you will know something about these questions. There is no excuse for you if you do not know.

At the conclusion of the speaking there was some chorus singing by the boys after which they were entertained with a sleight of hand performance.

ANNUAL SMOKER

Pres. Bowles Presides at Fore River Gathering

The second annual smoker of the Fore River Shipbuilding company draftsmen was held in Colonial hall on Thursday evening. About 125 were present, and the committee of arrangements received compliments on every hand for the efficient and business-like manner in which everything was carried out, and for the excellent banquet and entertainment that had been arranged.

The company gathered early and a social was held for a half an hour, present employees greeting former employees at the Shipyard. Exactly at 8 o'clock, the Fore River orchestra struck up a lively march, and the men walked to their places at the tables, with President Francis T. Bowles at the head, accompanied by Manager H. G. Smith.

The program began with a few words of welcome by the toastmaster, President Bowles, and then the company sang "America," accompanied by the orchestra.

Mr. Bowles then arose to his toast "The President of the United States." He drifted into the subject of ship subsidy and merchant marines, giving quite a lengthy talk on the subject. Mr. Bowles has studied this question for years, and his remarks were very interesting and extremely instructive to one who was not acquainted with the subject. From his long experience in naval matters, he sees points that an ordinary man wouldn't notice, and furthermore he has the ability to bring out his points clearly. He said: "It is for the interest of shipbuilding, from which we gain our livelihood, that the ship-subsidy bill be passed."

He read parts of Secretary Root's report on his return from South America, which brought out the fact, that although Mr. Root had stopped at all the large ports of South America, he saw only one ship flying the American flag. Mr. Bowles thought this was disgraceful to a country like ours.

He asked the orchestra to play the "Stein Song," and the company joined in with a will. This song is perhaps the best written for a gathering of good fellows.

J. J. Crain head of the electrical department and president of the "Data club," was down for the next toast, "The Army and Navy," and he was answered by Naval Constructor H. G. Gillmore U. S. N., who said the United States had in her navy, the Fore River built boats and a few others. His remarks were very humorous, causing much laughter and applause.

While the company was singing "Columbia the Gem of the Ocean," the banquet was put on the tables and then every one started to do justice to the excellent menu. During the supper L. F. Fjellbeck played a violin solo and was generously applauded.

F. O. Wellington was the next speaker, but sent word that he couldn't come, so Mr. Brown responded to his toast, "The Merchant Marine." He didn't speak on the subject at all, but told a few stories, and ended with a "roast" on "Men and events at the Fore River."

A little music followed, a quartet composed of Messrs. Grieshaber, Fjellback, Curtiss and Gunn rendering several pleasing selections. Mr. Harry Hudson followed with a vocal solo, and Clarence Fouche, the well known pianist, played several pleasing pieces.

The rest of the evening was filled in with various musical selections, and toasts by Commander Emil Theiss, U. S. N., on "The F. R. S. Co., to which Manager H. G. Smith replied; President Bowles on "The Electric Boat Co.," replied to by G. C. Davidson. S. T. McQuarrie arose to the toast "The P. B. O. D.," and he was answered by Messrs. Erisman, Griffin and Curtiss. The last toast was to "Our Guests," by A. E. Sargent, and Ass't. Naval Constructor W. B. Ferguson, U. S. N., made a speech in reply.

Mayor Shea arrived about 10 o'clock, and received a royal reception. President Bowles introduced him "as the only Democrat worth knowing," and Mr. Shea made a few brief remarks.

The affair was a brilliant success, and the committee, J. Carruthers, J. C. Wilson, A. R. Kennedy, A. E. Sargent, G. M. Lagergren, A. Conti, C. B. Webber and Jas. McBride, deserve great praise. The "smoker" ended with all standing up to sing the ever popular song of parting, "Auld Lang Syne."

Representative Louis E. Flye of HOLBROOK, has been drafted by the Republican State committee as a campaign speaker. He will open his tour at a Scituate rally and will also make several speeches in the western part of the state.

The Ladies' sewing society connect-RANDOLPH met this week for their annual meeting. Only an afternoon session was held, the evening session being omitted because of the serious illness of the pastor's daughter.

The annual meeting of the temporary home for discharged female prisoners was held Thursday at the house on Washington street, DEDHAM. Although the reports show that the home has done good worn the past year, there is a deficiency of $1,000.

ARRAIGNED FOR LARCENY.

Daniel V. McGilvray, who was arrested in Cambridge Wednesday night for the Quincy police by whom he was wanted for the larceny of money from the Vermont house at Quincy Point last year, was arraigned in court this morning. There were three complaints against McGilvray.

One for larceny of more than $100 from Peter Lamont, the others were for larceny of less than $100 from Cumming Stevens and from James Gibson.

All cases were continued until Nov. 2, in bonds aggregating $900.

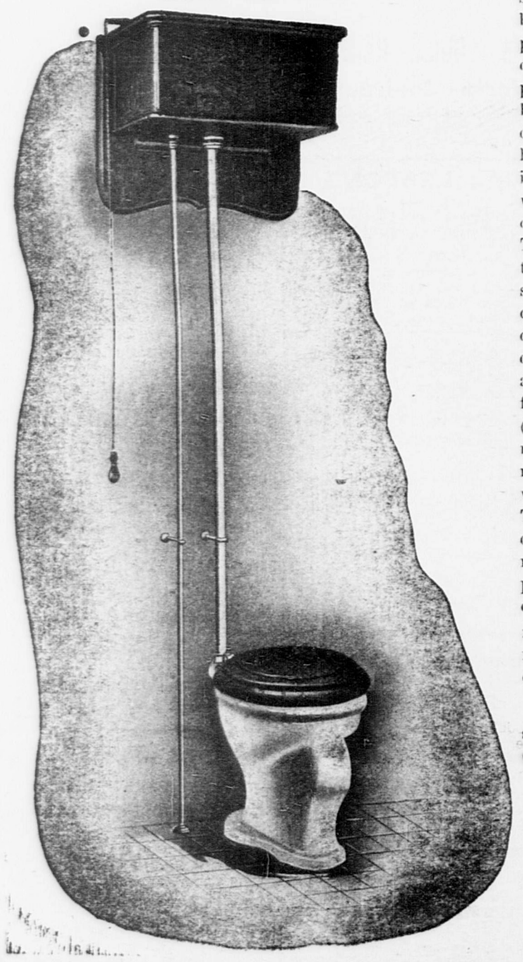
BATH ROOM EQUIPMENT.

MANET HIGH TANK.



We have made a study of selecting Bath Room Fixtures, both high and low priced, in presenting the views of these two closets, we show two moderate priced fixtures, the Manet Combination in either a high or low down tank combination. We have no hesitancy in recommending either one to you. The wood work is of well seasoned quartered oak, with piano polished finish. The tanks are lined with 12 oz. tinned copper, with lap folded seams, soldered strongly on the outside, (this prevents the deterioration of the solder, as the water cannot act directly on it.) They are equipped with high pressure float valves on the supply pipe, (having removable seats which may be easily replaced in making repairs,) and heavy brass syphon valves for the flushing device. The bowls are of heavy viterous crockery, highly glazed, (warranted not to craze or check) and produce a syphonic action in operation. This action quickly removes the contents of bowl when it is flushed from the tank. The seats are of neat design with heavy Nickle Plated brass bar hinges, which attach direct to the closet bowl, and when raised offers an opportunity for thorough cleaning.

Manet Low Down Closet Combination.

Brief Locals Of a Busy City

Rev. F. W. Bishop of the Appleton M. E. church, Neponset, will preach Sunday morning at the Atlantic M. E. church.

The adult C. E. Society of the Washington Street church, composed of young people of Wards One and Two, are planning for a social in the near future.

Capt. Howes of the Sailors' Home, Germantown, has recovered from his recent illness. He is a genial gentleman and we are glad to see him about our city again.

The people of Quincy Neck are considerably interested in the establishment of a public landing at the head of Bents creek on Howard street. This will not only be of use now, but will be especially advantageous in the years to come, which are sure to bring growth to the neighborhood in that section.

The Episcopalians in Quincy are most fortunate in having their church pulpit filled during the waiting for a settled rector, by the Rev. Mr. Fosbrooke of Nashotah University, Wisconsin. He leads the service with sincerity and feeling and is a most eloquent sermonizer. He preached last Sunday from the text "Visit the fatherless and the widow in their affliction, and keep thyself unspotted from the world." He also called attention most earnestly to the Hospital week collection and the Tuberculosis Conference as appealing so powerfully to the public in themselves to scarce need explanation. Mr. Fosbrooke is to occupy the pulpit next Sunday and during his stay in Cambridge where he is spending a few weeks lecturing as a professor of Hebrew.

—Since 1793 there have been approximately 100,000 deaths from yellow fever in the United States. The official figures show 160,000 deaths annually from tuberculosis, but as many persons who die from this disease are recorded as dying from pneumonia, heart disease, etc., there must at least be 300,000 die from consumption annually in the United States. The disease has carried off in this country during the last four years as many as were killed and died from wounds received in battle during the civil war.

DEAFNESS CANNOT BE CURED.

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

FORGERY AND GRAND LARCENY

Charge Upon Which Broughton Brandenburg Is Held

ARRESTED BY DAYTON POLICE

Man Who Sold Political Letter Purporting to Have Been Written by Grover Cleveland Asserts That He Had Proper Authority For So Doing--Thinks He Is "Captain Dreyfus of the 1908 Campaign"

Dayton, O., Oct. 23.—As he was boarding a train for New York city here, Broughton Bandenburg was arrested by local detectives on the charge of forgery and grand larceny. A telegram from the New York city police department advised the local department to hold Brandenburg. He is alleged to have sold the New York Times a letter which he represented to have been written by Grover Cleveland, in which the statesman predicted the election of Taft, and which letter is now declared to have been a forgery. Brandenburg was locked up in the police station, as the amount of his bail was not fixed.

Through his attorney, Brandenburg issued the following statement:

"It appears that I am to be the Captain Dreyfus of the campaign of 1908. I have been alone in my fight and, though ready to welcome the great body of support which the facts warrant me, if it does not come I shall go on alone.

"Is it reasonable that, for the sake of the $120 that would have been my profit after weeks of work, any sane man in my position would have falsified the utterances of an ex-president of the United States? Is it reasonable that when persons had seen the handwritten manuscript in my possession in March, that when I presented the scheme for the three articles for sale in March and when I sought the proper authority from Mrs. Cleveland and the co-executor, Mr. Hastings, before I sold the single article, that there could have been anything but fair dealing in my methods?

"Why was the alleged evidence that the document was fraudulent not produced when the document was challenged, and why has it never been produced save in the secrets of the grand jury room, when the American people are entitled to know the evidence in the matter at once? Why have my witnesses been intimidated? Why is an indictment been found, if one has been found, before my case is in?

"Yesterday I wired District Attorney Jerome that I had new evidence to present on Friday and as I stepped aboard the train for New York to fulfill my agreement, I am arrested as a fugitive from justice, though my attorney, Joseph Williams, and I myself informed the district attorney of my purpose and destination on this journey.

"This allows those who are interested in offsetting the influence of Mr. Cleveland's utterance to secure a dramatic climax just before election. The entire matter is all fitting in nicely with Colonel Watterson's plan announced before the article was published—it must be discredited by any means. It remains to be seen if the American public is to be bulldozed on one hand, while I am victimized on the other."

Habeas corpus proceedings are now being brought.

Christian Endeavor Convention

Lynn, Mass., Oct. 23.—With simultaneous meetings in two large church auditoriums, each of which was filled to its seating capacity, the twentieth annual convention of the Christian Endeavorers of Massachusetts was formally opened last night. More than 600 delegates have signed their names to the roll.

Blue Laws In Nebraska

Lincoln, Neb., Oct. 23.—The supreme court has sustained the legality of the Nebraska laws forbidding almost all Sunday business transactions. The court upheld the refusal of the district court of Douglas county to grant a writ of habeas corpus for an Omaha cigar dealer and an Omaha barber, who were arrested under a state statute. The prohibition of the court thus becomes state-wide.

Was Messenger For Royalty

London, Oct. 23.—Lieutenant Arthur J. M. Jephson, who had been the king's messenger since 1901, and prior to that the queen's messenger since 1895, is dead. Jephson commanded a detachment in the Emin Pasha relief expedition under Henry M. Stanley in 1887-90. In 1904 he married Miss Anna Head of San Francisco, who was said to have had a fortune in her own right of nearly $1,000,000.

King Held For Murder

Clinton, Mass., Oct. 23.—Arthur King was indicted by the grand jury at Worcester on the charge of murder in the second degree of Aide G. Abeen, a Syrian pedler, in this city at the home of Mrs. Margaret Clements. Mrs. Clements, whose honor King said he was defending, was held in $500 as a witness, as was Thomas Ryan, who is believed to be a witness of the murder.

Worried Herself to Suicide

Fall River, Mass., Oct. 23.—Mrs. Mary J. Rainville, 45 years old, committed suicide by asphyxiation. The cause of the suicide is attributed to worry over the fact that her daughter is confined in jail on a criminal charge.

KILLED GIRL HE LOVED

Slayer Declares That He Is Willing to Take the Consequences

Holyoke, Mass., Oct. 23.—Enraged because Casselda Beaudry, the young woman to whom he was engaged, refused to say whether she would keep her promise to marry him, Arthur Boudreau, Jr., shot and killed the girl at her home, 159 Main street. When arrested a short time later by the police Boudreau is said to have declared that he had had his revenge and he was willing to take the consequences.

Miss Beaudry was 20 years of age and lived with her mother and several younger sisters. It was said that her marriage with Boudreau had been set for Nov. 12, but that lately a disagreement had arisen between the pair. Last night he called at the house and met the girl in the kitchen, the shooting taking place almost immediately after his entrance.

Miss Beaudry lived only a few minutes after the shooting and neighbors who rushed to the scene from the other apartments of the tenement block found her lying on the floor of the kitchen. Boudreau made no attempt to escape. He has been employed at an electric powerhouse in Springfield. His father is an overseer in a mill here.

THE MORSE-CURTIS TRIAL DELAYED

Juror Said to Be Relative of One of Prosecuting Counsel

New York, Oct. 23.—A juror's illness which may entail a legal question stopped the trial of Charles W. Morse, the capitalist, and A. H. Curtis, former president of the National Bank of North America, who are charged with violation of the federal banking laws. The juror is Gordon Wendell. He was taken sick late Wednesday night, but is reported as much better. A report is current that Wendell is a cousin of United States Assistant District Attorney Dorr of counsel prosecuting Morse and Curtis, and it is said that this rumored relationship may have an important bearing on the future of the case.

Meantime the other jurors are quartered at the Hotel Astor, under guard, by direction of Judge Hough. An interesting fact has developed regarding this guard. It had been thought that they were deputies under orders from United States Marshal Henkel, but it appears now that his supervision is only nominal, and that the men are really United States secret service men, who were brought here from various parts of the country and sworn in as deputies by Commissioner Shields only to meet a federal statute which places a jury under the supervision of a deputy marshal.

Used Poison and Pistol

New York, Oct. 23.—Rather than face trial for manslaughter in the first degree, growing out of a case of alleged criminal malpractice, Dr. Irving J. Cook of this city coolly drank a dose of a powerful poison and shot himself at the Waldorf-Astoria hotel. Cook was arrested last Tuesday and held in $10,000 bail. He subsequently furnished bail and was released. He was to have been prosecuted for the death of a young woman at Summit, N. J.

San Francisco Free From Plague

Washington, Oct. 23.—In view of the improved conditions in San Francisco, Surgeon General Wyman has instructed his officers to discontinue the disinfection of outgoing vessels. There has been no death from the plague in San Francisco in eight months. Although 5000 rats have been trapped or killed and examined each week, no infected rat has been found since June 13, except one in July and one in August.

Vermont's Election of Judges

Montpelier, Vt., Oct. 23.—At the biennial election of judges of the supreme and superior courts of Vermont by the legislature in joint assembly, Seneca Haselton, chief judge of the superior court, was elevated to the supreme bench to take the place made vacant by the resignation of James M. Tyler, and Zeb S. Stanton was added to the superior court bench. The other judges were all re-elected.

Water Famine Closes Collieries

Pottsville, Pa., Oct. 23.—The Girard Water company has shut off the supply of water to nine anthracite colleries between Girardville andd Shenandoah, compelling them to close down completely for an indefinite period in order that the present supply may be kept for domestic purposes in a half dozen towns in that region. About 3500 men and boys are thus thrown out of work.

Generous to Its Employes

Shelton, Conn., Oct. 23.—President Russ of the Robert N. Bassett Manufacturing company, employing nearly 700 hands, announces that in future the company will pay all doctors' bills of its employes. This, it is explained, will include not only bills for treatment growing out of accidents, but also for illnesses. Most of the hands employed are girls and women.

Shipwrecked Men Saved

Norfolk, Oct. 23.—Captain Carlson and crew of three men of the barge Dessoug, coal laden, which foundered at sea, were landed here by the revenue cutter Onondaga. The rescue of Carlson and his men was accomplished with great difficulty. Oil had to be poured on the water in order to lower a surfboat. The Dessoug was worth about $50,000.

Lady Betty Across the Water

By C. N. & A. M. WILLIAMSON

Copyright, 1906, by McClure, Phillips & Co.

Mr. Brett thanked her and, of course, said how pleased he was too. "I am taking a holiday," he added, looking at me. I was glad to hear that, because seeing him out at this time the thought had occurred to me that he might have lost his employment at the club. But I only answered that it was a lovely day for a holiday and that I didn't believe he could find a better place to spend part of it than in Central park.

"Have you fed the squirrels yet?" he asked.

"Oh, no. Can one do that?" I exclaimed. "I should love it."

"May I go and get some peanuts?" he said to Sally.

"Do," she said in her pleasant, friendly way, which was just as nice for him as it had been for Stan or nicer. "We will go on to the wistaria arbor and wait for you. There are always lots of squirrels there."

Vivace broke away from me again and followed him, but still Sally seemed to take no notice. "That's certainly a very handsome fellow," she said, "and we can be sure that he's worthy to be trusted, because the wrong sort of men don't jump overboard at sea to save the lives of children they don't know. That is why I feel perfectly safe in being nice to him and letting you be nice. I reckon he is a southern man."

"How can you tell?" I asked.

"Oh, a little by that good looking brown face of his, perhaps, but more by his way of speaking. You English people lump up all together for our 'American accent,' but we can tell whether a person is from Massachusetts or New York or Illinois or Kentucky and so on just as you know Devonshire from Lancashire."

The wistaria arbor, which we soon reached, was like a fairy bower hung with thousands of amethyst lamps, burning perfume instead of oil, and the moment we sat down a troop of the fairy residents, cleverly disguised as gray squirrels, with adorable little faces, began excitedly to talk us over. With heads on one side, they criticised our feathers, our dresses, our hats and finally approved of them so far as to decide that we were creatures they might know. They stole nearer, by twos, by fours, then raced away again, gray and soft as undyed ostrich feathers, blown by the sweet smelling breeze, when they saw my brown man coming back with Vivace.

I was afraid that Vivace would make a dash and frighten them, but he evidently knows how to treat squirrels as equals, not as edibles, for he behaved himself like the little brindled gentleman that he is. Gravely he looked on as Mr. Brett produced six small, brown paper bags, crammed full of the most extraordinary objects. They looked something like wood carvings of unripe bean pods, but it appeared that they were peanuts. They smelt good, rather like freshly roasted coffee, and when you shelled them out of their woody pods they were large, fat beads, covered with a thin brown skin. I couldn't help feeling as if I had known Mr. Brett for a long time, as he sat by us on the bench under the wistaria, helping Sally and me feed the squirrels and shelling peanuts for us to eat too. I do believe there must be something special about peanuts, which gives you a homey sort of feeling if you share them with people. They form a sort of bond of good fellowship, and I can't fancy ever being prim with a man after you had eaten peanuts with him.

Mr. Brett didn't tell us much about himself, but from the few things he did tell I gathered the impression that he has led an open air, adventurous sort of life. He showed that he knows a great deal about horses, and I rather hope he has been a cowboy like "The Virginian," in a delightful book I have found in Mrs. Ess Kay's library. Indeed, I imagine the hero of the story must have looked like Jim Brett. It is a splendid type.

Sally and he talked about books. He spoke about some college in the west where he had been, and I was glad that he was a university man, though why I should care I don't know. Anyway, Stan would be at sea and floundering in the subjects which my brown man of the steerage and Sally Woodburn discussed while the squirrels frisked about their shoulders. But then Stan doesn't care to talk too long about anything except hunting or shooting or polo or motoring—not even bridge, at which Vic says he loses a great deal of money.

We stopped in the wistaria arbor for more than an hour, as I knew by my bracelet watch, when Sally said suddenly we must go—though I hadn't dreamed till then that we had been half so long. I shook hands with Mr. Brett for goodby and so did Sally, but nobody spoke about our meeting again, as perhaps we should if he were in Mrs. Ess Kay's set. It seemed very sad and irrevocable, somehow, and I had a heavy sort of feeling that life can be full of hard things.

His eyes looked wistful and I said what I couldn't have said to a man of my own rank. "I've kept those roses you sent to me by that dear, funny little black boy all this time in water and they are fresh still, though a lot of others I have had since are faded," I told him, and in that mood I didn't care whether Sally heard or not.

The brown man's face flushed up and the wistful look in his eyes brightened into something which I felt was gratitude for my rather silly speech. "I think those roses will hate to die," he said.

"Perhaps I shall press them in a book," I answered, "to remind me of my first hours in America."

Then we parted, and there was a fuss with Vivace, who had to be taken up in my arms or he would have choked himself with his collar in his desperate struggles to get free. He whimpered even then for a few minutes, but soon he was comforted and visibly made an effort to content himself with the fact that he was my dog.

I set him down on the ground, and Sally and I walked on together without speaking. But at last she said, "Penny for your thoughts, deah?"

"I was wondering about—class distinctions in America," I answered. "I think—oh, I do think it's very silly of you to have any at all. I always supposed till I knew you and Mrs. Stuyvesant-Knox that one person was considered just as good as another in America. And it ought to be like that in a new country, where you haven't an aristocracy."

I do believe there must be something special about peanuts.

"We have two aristocracies," said she. "We go one better than you, for you have only one. We have our old families (maybe they wouldn't seem very old to you) and we have wealth. They both think as much of themselves as your aristocracy does—and mighty little of each other."

"I could understand an aristocracy of brains in a land like America," I went on, quite fiercely, "but it's no good breaking off from the old country at all if you're to hamper yourselves with anything else. Now, if I hadn't heard Mrs. Stuyvesant-Knox and Mrs. Van der Windt talking I should have supposed that in America a man like Mr. Brett, for instance, could be received anywhere. As it is, I suppose—no, nobody could despise him. For myself, I'm proud to know such a brave man. But—but of course we're not likely to meet him again, are we?"

"In society?" laughed Sally. "Poor fellow, it doesn't look much like it now, does it? Though I believe he's a man in a thousand and worth six of any of those that Cousin Katherine will let you know, counting Potter, though he is my relative."

"It seems a pity," I said, with a sigh for the mistakes of the whole world—or something.

"What's a pity?"

"Oh, I hardly know. Everything. Isn't it?"

"Yes. And I'm sure that's what our poor, handsome friend is thinking."

"Do you suppose he—minds?"

"I reckon he would like to go on being acquainted with you, Betty, and have the chances of other men. You're not an unattractive girl, you know—or maybe you don't know. And he's human. I have a sort of idea he'll try to make some change in his way of life, so that it may be possible to meet you again."

When Sally said this I had the oddest sensation, like a prickling in all my veins. I longed to ask her if she were joking, or if she really did think that Jim Brett was enough interested in me to take so much trouble. But the words came only as far as the tip of my tongue, and stuck to it as if they had been glued there.

La France Shoe FOR WOMEN

$3.00 to $4.00

If women all over the civilized world knew La France Shoes as we know them it would be next to impossible to supply the demand—for the woman who wears them once can never be thoroughly happy in other shoes.

They are the latest in fashion — modelled precisely on the lines of the latest approved styles of the great fashion centres of the world — right up-to-date in every detail.

They provide a perfect fit because they are made to fit. Because they fit well they always look well — that is something you should bear carefully in mind. Good looks in a shoe demand not only the finest and most carefully selected materials such as are always used in La France shoes, but require the most careful and scientific attention to fitting qualities.

We are anxious to have an opportunity to show you La France shoes and let you try them on and find out for yourself just how desirable they are.

New System at Johnson Bros.

The way that our trade has taken to our

New Cash and Discount System

demonstrates to our satisfaction that we are giving them just what was needed in Quincy, and we have decided to extend our liberal offer, and will say, that to all our customers who find it impossible to carry their purchases home with them, if they bring or send their order to our store, and PAY CASH for it, we will deliver the same and allow 2% DISCOUNT from amount of purchase.

Now we think that this plan will give everyone a good Square Deal, and every intelligent buyer must see that we are more than doing our share to give then what every cash buyer deserves today, first class goods at a low price.

Now, don't forget our other proposition, that all who purchase goods of us, pay cash and carry their purchase home—we will give a Discount of 5% off the amount of purchase, besides selling our goods at the very lowest mark.

We will make a feature of having some special article each day marked at Genuine Bargain Price.

Now read this over carefully and we feel confident that you can see it just the way that we do—something that is surely needed in Quincy—a high grade of goods sold at a very low price.

Robber Shoots New York Jeweler After Stealing Valuable Diamonds

New York, Oct. 23.—Maurice Tannenholse, a Lexington avenue jeweler, was shot and probably fatally wounded by an unknown man who had posed as "a friend" of Constant A. Andrews, president of the United States Savings bank of this city, and stolen two valuable earrings.

Last night a man entered Tannenholse's shop and handed him a typewritten letter purporting to be from Andrews. It introduced the bearer as "George H. Leopold," an "old school friend," who had $2000 to invest in diamonds. Tannenholse showed Leopold a tray of diamonds and the stranger, after selecting the earrings, suddenly ran from the store, knocking down Mrs. Tannenholse, the jeweler's mother, who tried to stop him.

Tannenholse and two clerks pursued him so hotly that the robber drew a revolver, fired at Tannenholse and sprang into a taxicab which was standing near the store. The chauffeur of the machine, undoubtedly a confederate, sent it flying down the street and disappeared long before a policeman could reach the scene.

FLAMES SWEEPING VALUABLE TIMBER

Fires of Serious Proportions In Vermont and Maine

Bennington, Vt., Oct. 23.—A report has come of the burning of a large area of timberland in the towns of Glastonbury and Shaftsbury, north of Bennington. A gang of fifty men fought the fire, but it is still burning fiercely. About a square mile of timber has been burned over thus far.

There is thought to be little prospect that any of the fires in this section will be subdued before a heavy rain comes. Each night, however, the heavy dew and frost serves to quench the fires to some extent, but each afternoon, when the sun has dried up the moisture, they start up again.

Hardwick, Vt., Oct. 23.—A forest fire which has been smouldering since the heavy rain of several days ago at a point where the four towns of Hardwick, Wolcott, Greensboro and Shaftsbury converge, broke out afresh yesterday and has developed such serious proportions that all the available men of the four towns have been sent to the scene to fight the flames. The threatened region is covered with heavy timber. Farm buildings are greatly endangered by the fire.

Lowelltown, Me., Oct. 23.—The fire situation in this section of Maine has again become serious. The slight rain which came two weeks ago checked the flames for a time, but they have broken out again and are raging disastrously. More than 1500 acres of very valuable timber east of Lowelltown has been burned. The timber on both sides of the Canadian-Pacific railroad track between Skinners and Holeb, a distance of nine miles, has been laid low by the flames.

Street Railway Franchise Beaten

Cleveland, Oct. 23.—The franchise under which the Municipal Traction company is operating the local street railway lines under a 3-cent fare basis was defeated by a majority of 879 in the referendum vote here. The total vote cast was upwards of 75,000. The defeat of the franchise may mean that the railway property will revert to its original owners and that the old rate of fare strife, which lasted seven years, will be renewed.

Charged With Killing Children

Plymouth, Mass., Oct. 23.—Judge Hardy, in the superior court, yesterday gave notice that two indictments charging murder had been returned against Mrs. Mary R. C. Bell of Brockton, who was believed to have killed her two children last winter during a fit of insanity. Hardy ordered the woman committed to the Taunton insane hospital, where she has been confined since she led her children away from home.

Kaiser's Fourth Son Marries

Berlin, Oct. 23.—Duchess Alexandra Victoria of Schleswig-Holstein, daughter of Prince Frederick, Duke of Schleswig-Holstein, was married in the chapel of the imperial palace to Prince August William of Prussia, fourth son of Emperor William. The ceremony was witnessed by the members of the imperial family and some fifty princes and princesses of the minor German royal houses.

One Way to Stop Boy's Talking

Kansas City, Oct. 23.—The case against Miss Edith Wirt, the school teacher charged with cruelty because she stuck a pupil's lips together with court plaster, was dismissed by Prosecuting Attorney Taggart. Harvey Galloway, 9 years old, whose conversational propensities caused the teacher to punish him, has been taken out of the school by his parents.

Consolidation Of Men's Club

The Men's club connected with the Wollaston Methodist church met on Thursday evening, it being the first meeting of the fall season. There were about 50 men present and a roast beef supper was served. Rev. Dr. George F. Butters of Newtonville gave a brilliant and interesting address on "The Men Outside the Church." The remarks did not hit anybody present because they applied to those outside, those who were not there.

Music was by a male quartet composed of F. A. Sutermeister, F. N. Belcher, Herbert Cassidy and Chester Cleveland. A graphophone also put forth some entertaining music.

A committee was appointed to investigate the advisability and possibility of consolidating all the Men's clubs of the Wollaston churches into one.

MILTON.

A barn near Houghtons Pond was destroyed by fire Wednesday noon. One horse was also burned. The cause of the fire is unknown.

The East Milton fire department was called out on a still alarm Thursday for a woods fire off Squantum street.

Charles Davis and daughters, Miss Susette and Miss Pauline Davis, of East Milton are at Hot Springs, Va.

A hallowe'en party will be held at Ellsworth hall next Thursday evening.

Mrs. Hanlan will hold a class for dancing early in November.

The eleventh annniversary of the Mission of Our Saviors church will be celebrated by a special service Sunday evening. On Monday evening a birthday party will be held by the church people with an entertainment and service. On Tuesday evening the annual parish meeting will take place.

PRISON SUNDAY.

Warren F. Spalding, secretary of the Massachusetts Prison Association has written to the clergymen of the state, and asked them to observe Oct. 25 as "Prison Sunday," using the day to enlighten public opinion concerning the prevention and treatment of crime." Bishop Lawrence urging clergymen to observe Prison Sunday says: "If the gospel will not touch some men's hearts, the warning of heavier taxation will touch their pockets; and the neglect of the prisoner means the increase of taxation."

Investigation to Build Up Character

The necessity of investigation and the continued treatment of cases was the subject of Jeffrey R. Brackett, member of the Massachusetts State Board of Charity, formerly for several years president of the Department of Public Charities of Baltimore at the Massachusetts State Conference of Charities at Fall River on Wednesday morning. He said in part:

"In every community, some one agency or person should be responsible for seeing that the needs of each particular applicant for relief are dealt with thoroughly. Thorough treatment includes a painstaking investigation at the beginning and continued treatment through to the close,—until a plan for improvement is accomplished, or all reasonable efforts for it have been made. Thus each needy person is to be some person's or agency's particular care, although some of the work may be left to a co-operating agency.

Such a conception of the absolute need of thoroughness is fundamental, if our work is to be truly charitable and social service. Surely, public aid officials should try to do the best possible constructive work with such needy persons as they undertake to deal with, and their aim should be to make the needy person either independent or, if that be not possible, to procure for him the care which will keep him least harmful and most helpful to himself and the community.

"We should seek to make investigation a means to that large end—restoration to independence or necessary care and protection. The approach to the needy must be right, must be such as to rouse within him and in his kin a helpful response to our efforts. Response may not be in material things, but may often be in knowledge, advice, effort. Every act of charity should be educational, from the giving of coal to the training of workers.

"Investigation is not to save money for the charitable or the taxpayer; it is to save and build up human character. It is not only to bring out needs, but to bring out resources. We should try to teach the community its real value and dignity. Thus will there be less of misunderstanding, less of petty talk about red tape.

"A difficulty may be raised that the persons with whom overseers of the poor have chiefly to deal are a class or type which cannot be dealt with in these ways. We are learning to break up masses and classes into small groups and individuals, capable of one or another form of treatment. A good example of this is the way in which we are taking or keeping the blind out of alms-houses ,and helping them to fill useful niches, however small, without.

"But ,if there be needy persons, especially touched by overseers of the poor, who really seem hopeless and helpless, then our plea is only the stronger for more thorough treatment of those very persons, based on better investigation of them and the conditions about them.

"For instance, there are dissolute husbands, whose families are being helped; and persons weak in mind or will who are dangreous to be at large. Let us all work for provision of custodial care which shall protect all such perosns and prevent the spread of their poison.

"There is nothing in law to prevent overseers now from adopting the following custom touching persons with whom they deal directly:

"First to make thorough investigation looking to constructive effort.

"Second to contribute to that effort themselves in so far as they can.

Third to get co-operating sources of relief—agencies, institutions, churches, individuals,—to do whatever else can be suggested; and all as parts of plans aiming either for restoration to independence or necessary custodial care."

News From the Shire Town.

(Special to Daily Ledger.)
Dedham, Oct. 22, 1908

Registration in the old shire town has been rather brisk, considering the condition of affairs for already in the five meetings of the boards of registrars of voters there has been 75 names put on the list. The final meeting will be held Saturday evening and probably enough more names will be put on to bring the total up to at least 100.

The first meeting of the Dedham Business Men's association and Board of Trade Wednesday evening was one of the pleasantest affairs in the history of the organization. There was an interesting discussion on current topics on the part of a number of the members.

The democratic town committee has not yet held a meeting while the republican committee with pleasant headquarters are faithfully working in the interests of their candidates.

Wednesday was a day for public bequests in wills allowed by the Norfolk probate court, the tidy little sum of $14,500 being left to various institutions by three public spirited women of the county.

The will of Mary F. Porter, late of Randolph, allowed by the probate court Wednesday is one of the longest ever allowed by the court, there being 59 articles. The deceased was a charitable woman for she left $9,000 to various institutions.

John F. Kennard, administrator of the estate of the late Joseph Allen of Dedham had considerable work in the distribution of the property, there being 19 beneficiaries who shared in the balance of $7,641.00.

Abbie A. Shaw, late of Weymouth, who died Sept. 8, was certainly blessed with relatives for accompanying her will which was allowed this week by the probate court, there is a list of 41 cousins as next of kin.

SMOKE AND FOG.

A fire in the pine woods between Atlantic and Milton has been burning for the past two days and has caused a thick smoke to envelop the whole city. Thursday the Milton fire department was called to the fire, but finding that it was on the Quincy side, notified the Quincy department which responded on a still alarm.

The fire burned all night and this morning a thick pall of smoke hung over the city. This, with a heavy fog, made it impossible to see objects a few feet away.

About nine o'clock, however, the sun was high enough to get the best of the fog, but the smoke still prevailed.

One of the humorous incidents of the fog and smoke was experienced by George Moorehead, driver of a milk wagon. Mr. Moorehead was delivering milk on Greenleaf street. When he came from a house his horse had moved and he was unable to find any trace of him, and after searching for a time gave it up as a bad job.

He reported his loss to the police and then went back to look for the team again. By this time the fog had lifted somewhat and he found the missing team a short distance from where he left it.

MALONEY—GILL.

Very quietly at seven o'clock Monday evening at St. John's parochial residence was solemnized the marriage of Mr. Vincent Maloney of Lowell and Miss Alice Frances Gill, a daughter of Mrs. Winifred Gill of Liberty street.

Rev. John J. Coan performed the ceremony. Mr. Daniel Maloney of Lowell, brother of the groom, was best man. The bride was attended by her sister, Miss Margaret Gill, who was gowned in light blue silk. The bride wore her travelling gown of old goblin blue broadcloth.

After a wedding trip to New York, Mr. and Mrs. Maloney will make their home at 79 Sharon street, West Medford, where they will receive their friends after January first.

Foot Ball And Other Sports

The basket ball season opened in Foxboro on Thursday night, when Foxboro High defeated Mansfield 18-9. From now to the end of November a few basket ball games will be played, but just at present, football has the call. About December 1, however, the indoor game will be in full swing, and till the first of March, the sports will see plenty of fun. Will Quincy have a team this year? Get busy, boys.

In the qualifying round of the B. A. A. golf championship tournament at Wollaston on Thursday, R. E. Sproule won the prize for best gross score, his score being 80.

The Odd Fellows club held an enjoyable whist party Thursday evening. A large number of tables were in play and some good scores were made. The prize winners were: William Spargo, Mrs. George Fisher, James Nicols, Miss Harriet Spooner, Calvin Fletcher, Mrs. B. Porterfield, Mrs. Walter Hill, Mrs. M. Thomas and Mrs. William Morrison.

FRAUDULENT REGISTRATION

Charge of Chairman of New York State Democratic Committee

ROLLS EXTENSIVELY PADDED

From Ten to Twenty Thousand Names Said to Have Been Wrongfully Listed by Republicans--Democrats Will See That Men "From Pennsylvania and Canada" Do Not Vote In the Empire State

New York, Oct. 23.—Charges are made by Chairman Conners of the Democratic state committee that the Republican organizations in up-state counties have padded the registration rolls with anywhere from 10,000 to 20,000 names, and to prevent the casting of a fraudulent vote, Conners says, the executive committee has appointed a state law committee, with Alton B. Parker as chairman. Conners says that the law committee will be composed of about 500 attorneys, and that on election day these attorneys will be assisted by special deputies in each election district to see that ballots are honestly cast and counted. The state chairman declares that for each conviction of fraudulent voting the state committee will give a reward. Conners said:

"There will be no voting of dead men by the Republicans in this election, and the state committee will see that our opponents are not permitted to run men over from Pennsylvania and Canada to vote them in this state. Already we have discovered hundreds of cases of fraudulent registration up-state and have succeeded in having the names stricken from the lists. In Allegheny county alone we found 348 cases of fraudulent registration and 148 cases in Washington county.

"There are between 10,000 and 20,000 cases of this fraudulent registration up-state and we are going to stop this illegal voting this year. We want a square deal. We are not going to buy the election, and we have not got the money to buy it with, anyway. We don't propose to have the Republicans rob us as they have done in the past."

National Chairman Mack declared last night that the change in Mr. Taft's plans by which he will speak in thirty-four cities and towns in this state, instead of speaking in only a few of the larger cities, as previously announced, indicated that the Republican managers felt the necessity of carrying this state, which was virtually acknowledging that they felt that they were losing Ohio, Indiana, Wisconsin and Kansas. Mack said that if the Republicans were certain of the middle western states they would not need New York.

Chairman Hitchcock of the Republican national committee postponed at the last moment yesterday his departure for Chicago until this afternoon. He was detained most of the day at his hotel, where he saw a number of visitors, among them being Charles P. Taft of Ohio and several leaders in nearby states.

Having discovered that the schedules prepared would bring Mr. Taft and Mr. Bryan together at Portchester, N. Y., next Monday, the Republican and the Democratic national committees, through their publicity bureaus, rearranged their dates, with the result that Bryan will speak at that place in the morning of Monday and Taft will make his address there at 3 o'clock the same afternoon.

Bryan Defends Gompers

Hinton, W. Va., Oct. 23.—Enthusiastically received everywhere, William J. Bryan carried his warfare into West Virginia. The line of travel took him through the Ohio, Kanawha and New river valleys, and he was afforded an opportunity to speak to many farmers and miners. He was out on the platform as early as 7 o'clock, telling farmers, in his opinion, why they should vote the Democratic ticket. The Republican party had no policy to offer which would bring them relief.

Passing on into the coal district, he devoted much attention to the labor question. He repeated his warning to laboring men not to be coerced by their employers into voting against their wills.

The most notable demonstration accorded him was at Charleston. He was escorted through the streets by a number of uniformed marching clubs headed by bands, while almost every building was decorated with flags and bunting. From the moment he left his special train across the river until he reached the platform on a lot across from the courthouse he was wildly cheered. His speech was devoted to a general discussion of the issues of the campaign.

In a brief speech at St. Albans, Bryan made reference to the letter of President Roosevelt in which the president criticised the position of Bryan and Gompers on the labor question. Bryan was explaining the things which he said the Republican platform did not promise to do, and, touching on the labor question, he said:

"The Republican platform does not promise a reconciliation of labor and capital. In fact, they now recognize that their antagonistic position on labor organizations has lost them the labor vote, and they recognize that so fully that they have entered upon the denunciation of the man who stands at the head of the labor organizations and are trying to show that he does not represent the men who elected him to

Sentenced For Larceny

One of the severest sentences imposed in the district court for a long time was meted out by Judge Avery this morning, when he sentenced Frank H. W. Cox to imprisonment in the house of correction for two years, for the larceny of two diamond rings from Mrs. Helen N. Holbrook of 51 Berlin street, Wollaston.

Cox, who is but 22 years of age was employed by Henry Holman as a driver of his vegetable wagon. Last week Thursday he called at the house of Mrs. Holbrook and sold her some quinces. While left alone a few minutes it is alleged that he stole two rings valued at $75 which had been left on a shelf. The rings were missed shortly after he left and the loss reported to the police.

Inspector McKay was assigned to the case and he found one of the rings in a pawnshop at Dorchester where it had been sold for $9.

From the description given of the man by the pawnbroker Inspertor McKay was able to fasten the crime on Cox.

A warrant was secured and Friday afternoon Inspector McKay arrested his man at South Boston. When asked about the second ring Cox said that he had attempted to remove the diamond from the ring and had dropped it and was unable to find it again. He said that the place where he dropped the stone was near the Tubular Rivet works at Wollaston.

But little stock was placed in the story but it was thought best to make a search for it. This was done later in the afternoon and it was but a few minutes before it was found. That it had not been picked up before is somewhat remarkable. It had laid in the dust for nearly a week where hundreds of workmen from the Tubular Rivet works passed every day. After dropping the diamond Cox said he had thrown the ring part away. A search was made for this but it was not found.

When arrainged in court this morning Cox pleaded guilty. His court record showed that he was sentenced to the truant school in 1897 and to the reformatory in 1902. Taking these into consideration the court imposed a sentence of two years.

Recollections President Adams

The last days of the presidential campaign has brought to one of Boston's "Old Schoolboys" vivid recollections of the stories he heard in younger days of the election of John Quincy Adams and the dramatic manner in which, by courier, the news from Washington disrupted a church service in Quincy.

The letter is as follows:

Whom shall we have for President the next four years? The transition from one set of rulers to another is often attended with incidents and peculiarities sometimes amusing. For the past a little more than 100 years, with only one exception, the people have chosen the electors to decide who shall be President; that exception was the case of John Quincy Adams in the year 1824, who was chosen by the House of Representatives, there being no choice by the people. Of the electoral votes, John Quincy Adams had 84, Andrew Jackson had 99, W. H. Crawford had 41, and Henry Clay 37. Mr. Adams was elected by the States' votes—twenty-five States—and Mr. Adams had more than half and was declared to be constitionally elected President of the United States. There was great rejoicing among the friends of Mr. Adams, especially among the town's people of the town of Quincy. At that early day there were no railroads, no telephones, or telegraphs. It took many days and weeks to bring news from Washington, and so anxious were the good people of Quincy to hear who was elected President that a relay of horses and riders were selected to bring the news. They started fromWashington, one set to Baltimore, another from Baltimore to Philadelphia, another to New York, and the next to Boston, and from Boston to Quincy, and when the horse and rider arrived at Quincy it happened to be Sunday, and the good people were at church, and while the church services were going on the horse's hoofs made so much noise with its clattering that it made a large number of the townspeople shout "What's the matter?"

The courier bringing the news of Mr. Adams' election had urged his horse with so much speed that the sweat and foam were rolling off the horse's back, and the courier arrived at the old church door and hurried up the steps and then down the broad aisle and shouted in stentorian tones, "John Quincy Adams is elected President of the United States." Prayer and praise were discontinued, and congratulations were offered to one another that the good town of Quincy had been honored by having another President of the United States, and among the number who heard the report of the courier and whose heart was brim full of joy, was the venerable John Adams, ex-President of the United States and father of John Quincy Adams. Mr. John Adams was 89 years old, and his heart was full of joy to think that his little son, now grown to man's estate, yes, "little Johnny," was elected President.

Among the Presidents that the country has had, for purity of life and sweetness of character he was not excelled he was great in his goodness, and good in his greatness.

It was the church home of his father and mother. If he were living he would be about 141 years old. He has been dead many years. He often repeated to me this little story of the courier walking up the broad aisle and announcing that John Quincy Adams was elected President; and told me of that large number who were in the church and saw the courier and witnessed the scenes of that historic incident. E. D. Eldridge, —in Boston Journal, Oct. 22.

PROTEST ENTERED.

Protest has been made to the interstate commerce commission by shippers of granite over the New York, New Haven & Hartford and the Pennsylvania railroad companies, against the enforcement of a rule recently promulgated by the official classification committee requiring railroads to place the consignee's name on every package delivered for transportation. The rule previously in force was to designate packages by number the name of the consignee being shown on the bill of lading.

The complainant claims that by placing the name of the consignees on packages ,his competitors are enabled to learn the names of his customers to his own disadvantage. This is the first complaint received by the commission against this particular rule.

WERE WARNED BY RIDGELY

Morse and Curtis Prodded to Remedy a Critical Situation

LOANS TO MORSE SCHEMES

Comptroller of Currency Was Aware of Their Hazardous Character--Former Cashier and Morse's Secretary Show How $200,000 Went to Finance Steamship Companies, Which Alone Borrowed $1,762,225

New York, Oct. 24.—There were three important developments yesterday in the joint trial of Charles W. Morse and Alfred H. Curtis, who are charged with conspiracy and violation of the federal banking laws in the management of the defunct National Bank of North America.

First the prosecution produced letters to show that Comptroller of the Currency Ridgely foresaw the failure of the bank and wrote a number of letters to Morse and Curtis warning them against making such large loans on what he termed unsubstantiatial collateral to the officers and directors of the bank, especially mentioning the loans made to Morse enterprises. Ridgely said in one of his letters that at one time the Morse interests owed the bank $3,510,754.10, the loans to the Morse Steamship companies alone amounting to $1,764,255.38.

Next the prosecution presented evidence to show that a large loan made by the bank to Miss Katherine W. Wilson, Morse's secretary, was paid in part by profits coming out of the financing of an undertaking of the "New Haven improvement." These profits, Edward B. Wire, former cashier of the bank, said should have gone to the bank, but Curtis and Morse so arranged, he testified, that the profits went to cover part of the "Wilson loan."

Third, the prosecution had Wire testify regarding a note for $200,000 deposited with the Knickerbocker Trust company, one of the institutions which went to the wall during the financial panic. In tracing this note it was shown by banking records that after passing through the Knickerbocker Trust company, it bobbed up in the Bank of Commerce as a credit to "E. B. Wire."

At this point government Bank Examiner Moxey was called to the stand and he endeavored to show how the $200,000 obtained on the note went to finance the Morse steamship undertakings. Moxey traced payment of interest on the $200,000 to show that the interest of 6 percent was charged against the account of the National Bank of North America. No debit against Wire's personal account could be found.

Mr. Wire recalled, he said, that Morse and Charles T. Barney, the late president of the Knickerbocker Trust company, asked him to sign the note, saying the proceeds would be used to finance a deal in steamship stock. Wire said that after making the note he turned a check for the amount over to Miss Wilson. He said that later he received stock of the New York and Cuban Steamship company (a Morse concern) from Morse to the amount of $200,000, and subsequently, when the Consolidated Steamship company was organized he was given bonds of that company for the New York and Cuban company. The account in the Knickerbocker Trust company, he said, remained there until Oct. 21—one day before the panic—when Barney called upon him for collateral for the loan and he turned over the steamship bonds. After this Wire withdrew the deposit, but he did not say what became of the money.

These three features of the day's session took up most of the time.

Just before an adjournment was taken Mr. Littlefield, personal counsel for Morse, informed Judge Hough that he wanted to lay an important matter before the court after the jury had been dismissed for the day. When the jury had filed out Littlefield showed to the court an article sent out by a local news agency, describing the alleged sale of National Bank of North America stock by Morse to clerks of the institution. Littlefield asserted that the information had been given to the news agency by Assistant United States District Attorney Frankfurter. His accusation was followed by a lively controversy between United States District Attorney Stimson, Frankfurter and Littlefield. The court took no action in the matter.

Mr. Littlefield then spoke of a report in the newspapers to the effect that the jurors in the Morse trial are being guarded by secret service agents instead of deputy United States marshals. The lawyer said this fact, if true, was a reflection on the defense. Judge Hough said rather sharply that the fact that the men guarding the jurors had been sworn in as United States deputy marshals was sufficient and he left the room.

Will Not Extradite Pouren

Washington, Oct. 24.—The case of Jan J. Pouren, the Russian refugee, the demand for whose extradition by the Russian government has attracted considerable attention in New York, has been settled for the time being by Secretary Root, who refused to issue a warrant for extradition. This, however, is done without prejudice to the right of Russia to initiate a new proceeding.

Bilious Troubles

Bile causes no end of trouble. Sick headaches, bilious attacks, jaundice, constipation and many distressing ailments arise from an excess of bile, or from obstruction of the bile duct. Inactivity, sedentary occupations and indiscretion in feeding and drinking are bile blunders that need to be guarded against. When the liver is disordered the best bile correctives are because they relieve the overworked liver, and gently stimulate it when it is sluggish. These pills control the flow of bile, restore its right consistency, and work for the immediate and lasting benefit of the stomach, bowels and blood. Whenever a furred tongue, dull, yellowish eyes, nausea, or headache indicate bilious conditions, use Beecham's Pills at once, to correct the bile and

BEECHAM'S PILLS

THE
Young Men's Christian Association
OF QUINCY, MASS.
(Legal Title—Incorporated 1892.)

The Directors of the YOUNG MEN'S CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION of Quincy, with a firm faith in the great value of the work which is being done for the young men and boys of our city, make their appeal for donations and bequests toward paying the mortgage indebtedness on the new Association Building. When the building is free from debt it will serve as an Endowment, as there is a goodly income from the dormitories.

Should the Donor prefer, such sum as might be given could be used as an Endowment for an educational class or classes, the Boys Department, or as a special fund in other ways, and could be designated with the name of the Donor.

The Treasurer, WILLIAM F. CUMMINGS, 7 Clive Street, Quincy, or the General Secretary, ERNEST G. GAY, will be happy to answer inquiries.

OUR HOSPITAL

(Legal Title: City Hospital of Quincy)
INCORPORATED 1889

The Trustees of the City Hospital of Quincy earnestly appeal for donations and bequests for the Endowment fund. This now amounts to over $60,000 but a fund of at least $100,000 is urgently needed.

Five Thousand Dollars ($5,000) will endow a Free Bed to which such name may be given as the Donor may desire, but any sum for this noble institution which stands ready to serve us all in the hour of need will be most gratefully received.

The Secretary, TIMOTHY REED, Adams St Quincy, or the Treasurer, RICHARD D. CHASE Savings Bank Building, Quincy, will be very glad to confer with any one or to answer any inquiries.

HARD TO FIX PROGRAM

Russia Hears That Proposed Conference May Be Abandoned

St. Petersburg, Oct. 24.—The fate of the Russian proposal to reknit the broken strands of the Balkan agreements by means of a conference of the powers rests, it is realized here, on the outcome of the negotiations which M Iswolsky, the Russian foreign minister, will open today in Berlin.

According to press dispatches received here, the impression is gaining ground in several of the European capitals that the proposed conference will be abandoned on account of the difficulties in the way of formulating a program; but the highest authorities of the foreign office here do not share this view and point to the obvious impossibility of settling breaches of international compacts by any other method than an international conference. Separate preliminary agreements, such as the Turko-Bulgarian and Austro-Turkish, they say, are considered highly desirable, but they do not obviate the necessity for international sanction.

Prince Ourousoff, the aged ambassador at Vienna, who is widely blamed for his failure to inform the government here promptly of Austria's intentions, will be sacrificed. According to the official explanation, he is turning over his duties temporarily to a charge d'affaires on account of illness, but there is little expectation that he will return to the post.

HUNDREDS DROWNED IN THE PHILIPPINES

Great Damage to Property as Result of Storm

Manila, Oct. 24.—The death roll of the storm in the Cagayan valley Oct. 13 grows heavily as fuller reports come in. The constabulary of Tubegar, capital of the province of Cagayan, report that 500 persons were drowned there and that all the houses were destroyed or damaged. The damage to the tobacco is estimated at several million pesos.

In the province of Abra the constabulary report heavy loss of life and great damage to property. It is known that 269 people were drowned and it is said that others were lost. Hundreds of horses and cattle drowned in the Cagayan valley. The constabulary are cremating the dead and the government has sent rice to Vigan to feed the refugees. Cholera has appeared in three towns of Abra province.

Alleged Assault on Girl

Niagara Falls, N. Y., Oct. 24.—Edward Murphy, 23 years old, a private in the United States infantry, is charged with attempting to assault Miss Belle Carpenter, 19 years old. The girl's assailant was alarmed by her screams, which brought several farmers to her rescue. The farmers pursued Murphy into Lewiston, where he was captured. A large crowd which surrounded Justice Carr's office at Lewiston became threatening and Murphy was taken out a back door and brought here for safe keeping.

Endeavorers Change Officers

Lynn, Mass., Oct. 24.—Rev. J. S. Voorhees of Adams was chosen president of the Massachusetts state union of the Young People's Society of Christian Endeavor at the biennial business session of that organization. George E. Copeland of Worcester, who has been president for four years, retired from the position. There were various other changes in the list of officers, the election amounting practically to a reorganization of the official board.

Convicted of Fomenting Revolution

El Paso, Tex., Oct. 24.—Charged with fomenting a revolution on American soil against a friendly nation, Precilliano G. Silva and Lecardio Trevino were found guilty in the federal court. Trevino and Silva will be sentenced by Judge Maxey today. The penalty prescribed is not less than one year and not more than five years' imprisonment.

Forest Fires Near an End

Washington, Oct. 24.—Willis L. Moore, chief of the weather bureau, says that it is more than likely that rain will fall in New York and New England today in sufficient quantities to extinguish forest fires. Professor Moore points out that all efforts of an artificial nature to cause rain are but "one of the worst forms of charlatanism."

Flames Surround Village

Lowelltown, Me., Oct. 24.—The village of Skinner is entirely surrounded by flames and millions of feet of lumber have been consumed. The Canadian Pacific Railroad company has a large force protecting its property and in the event of the destruction of Skinner, which is on the railroad, will remove the inhabitants.

Italian Duke's Love Troubles

Turin, Oct. 24.—It is stated officially that the Duke of the Abruzzi has not asked for any leave of absence nor decided when he will depart for the United States. As matters stand now the duke wants to wed Miss Elkins, but cannot secure the consent or even the conditional support of any member of the royal family.

Fraudulent Registration

St. Louis, Oct. 24.—William Tiernan was convicted of fradulent registration and was sentenced to three years in the penitentiary. This makes the eighth conviction for fraudulent registration since the present prosecutions began.

FAREWELL FUNCTIONS

Dinner to American Officers on Board a Japanese Ship

GREAT OVATION TO SPERRY

Fleet Commander Almost Mobbed, So Eager Were the People to Shake His Hand--American Sailor Saves Japanese Flag From Burning--Not a Case of Disorderly Conduct on the Part of Our Jackies

Yokohama, Oct. 24.—The series of brilliant functions which have characterized Japan's reception of the American battleship fleet came to a close here last night with a dinner on board the battleship Fuji, the guests at which were confined to the American ambassador, rear admirals and other officers. There was a reception on the battleship Mikasa, to which all the prominent Americans here were invited, with the accompaniments of an illumination of the fleet, fireworks and torchlight processions on shore.

Rear Admiral Sperry endeared himself to the Japanese people by personally attending the funeral of General Count Nodzu and placing a wreath on the casket. Later, a luncheon was given at the Shiba palace, and the admiral, accompanied by his aides, walked from the palace to the Shimbashi railway station. The admiral was almost mobbed by tens of thousands of enthusiastic people. Thousands sought to shake him by the hand and the ovation lasted the whole length of the principal street of Tokio. Sperry was evidently deeply impressed and at times stopped to shake hands with some individuals, who, speaking English, halted him for the benefit of theirs.

Rear Admiral Sperry was accompanied by Rear Admirals Schroeder and Wainwright, who, with their aides, were kept busy exchanging greetings. The party arrived at the Shimbashi station half an hour before the time set for their departure and took refuge from the pressure of the friendly crowd in the waiting rooms. Japanese officials invited Sperry to enter a carriage for a short drive to give the people who arrived late an opportunity for a final greeting. He consented and when he appeared bedlam broke loose. He was driven a short distance and returned to the station. Along the whole route he was given an ovation impossible to describe. The tumult was simply deafening. On arriving at the square opposite the Shimbashi station thousands of children waved flags and sang in his honor.

When the special train moved out of the station there was a constant din, the cheering of the people mingling with the blare of three brass bands. The route to Yokohama, as on the occasion of the trip of the Americans to Tokio, was lined with school children, singing and waving flags. The same scenes were continued in Yokohama along the route of the Americans to the wharf, where the launch of the flagship Connecticut awaited the rear admirals, and the cheers continued until they reached the ship.

A single incident will illustrate the spirit in which the American sailors accepted the welcome of the Japanese. Last evening a triumphal arch at the entrance of the principal street of Yokohama caught fire, the blaze reaching up toward a Japanese flag floating from a flagstaff at the top and threatening to destroy the flag. An American Jackie dashed up the framework of the arch through the blaze, broke off the staff and carried the flag safely to the ground. This act was witnessed by thousands and created a profound impression. The youth received an ovation which forced him to run for shelter.

The famous Maple club of Tokio was the scene last night of a brilliant function. The American Friends' association entertained 250 officers and a number of the most prominent ladies of Tokio. The association is composed entirely of Japanese who have visited America, a number being university men and all speaking English.

The entertainment included both Japanese and European dinners, dancing and fireworks. During the evening Baron Kaneko, in a felicitous speech, presented to Rear Admiral Emory, who represented Rear Admiral Sperry, a picture of the landing of the men of Commodore Perry's fleet at Kuihama. The picture, framed in Oregon pine and brought from America by Perry, who presented it to the Japanese government, was painted by a Japanese artist now 86 years of age, who was the first man to sight Perry's fleet. The aged artist was introduced upon the stage to Rear Admiral Emory. The scene when the big American admiral bent down to shake the hand of the withered Japanese was most impressive.

One of the most striking features of the week's stay of the Americans in Japan has been the order maintained by the sailors while on shore. Not a single case of disorderly conduct has occurred on the streets. In this respect the navy has covered itself with glory in Japan.

Holding Trumps

By W. F. BRYAN.

Copyrighted, 1908, by Associated Literary Press.

Bitter Creek cared little for the presidential race. It was too remote from the center of things to care which of the two Williams occupied the White House. It was the tail of the ticket that interested Bitter Creek, and interested it mightily.

The camp had reached a stage in its development where a local sheriff was of greater importance than a national ruler. The fight was to be made strictly on party lines, but the parties were the Colcordites and the Myliusites.

It was agreed that either man would admirably perform the onerous duties of the office, but Ben Colcord and Tom Mylius both wanted the place, and the contest would be none the less exciting because the two men were close friends.

"This sure is going to be a fight," announced Colcord when he met his chum after the nomination. "No hard feeling if I beat you, Tom?"

"If you can," confirmed Mylius, with a laugh. "I think I see myself wearing that badge already, Ben."

"Not if I can help it," denied Colcord. "I've a few ideas as to how to run a campaign myself, and I'm going to try them."

"Anything short of shooting," assented Mylius. "I hold the trump card, though. You wait and see."

Bitter Creek did not have long to wait. Colcord led from the first and took the first trick by fitting up the old Bella Union as a picture show. In between reels he made a speech to the audience, and the audience included most of the townspeople in the course of the evening.

The pictures were changed every evening, and even the barkeepers at the new Bella Union and the Yalta were permitted to take time off to see the new reel run through.

Business at the faro tables suffered, and Colcord would have become unpopular had it not been that at the conclusion of each performance he led the audience across the street for a drink, patronizing first the Bella Union and then the Yalta.

It was the general opinion that Colcord had set a pace too swift for his rival to follow, but Mylius only smiled.

This smile grew broader the following week when Mylius played and took the second trick. Bitter Creek sadly lacked the feminine element. Save for Mrs. Mulligan, who ran the Golden West hotel, the census of Bitter Creek was entered in the male column of the records.

The arrival of Edna Mylius created nothing less than a sensation, and that evening the picture show was deserted, while the voters of Bitter Creek slowly filed past the Golden West in the hope of obtaining a sight of the new arrival.

Edna Mylius was well worth the trouble. She was a slip of a girl with a coronet of silky hair the color of virgin gold. She dressed with an artful simplicity far more fetching than the latest fashion, and her smile was simply irresistible. She was just out of college, in love with the west and delighted to be one of the factors in an election contest.

Tom fitted up a store near the picture show, and waffles, with real honey, vied with the pictures as an attraction. Waffles were Edna's specialty, and with sleeves rolled above her dimpled elbows, with dainty apron and a coquetish cooking cap, her face flushed from the heat of the fire, she was a picture—and a moving one—far more effective than the product of lantern and film across the street. Bitter Creek decided that of the two Tom Mylius was better fitted to be sheriff.

Colcord racked his brains for something to counteract the effect of the waffles and brought down to the Creek half a dozen minor pugilists, who battled for the benefit of a mere handful of spectators, while the rest of the camp watched Edna make fudge.

Colcord left the fight and went over to see what success the fudge maker was having. The room was packed with men solemnly masticating the toothsome compound, while Mylius made a speech.

They listened, as in duty bound, but all eyes were upon the trim little figure hovering over the stove at the end of the hall. She had impressed Mrs. Mulligan as assistant, and the ponderous figure of the elder woman made an excellent foil for the girl.

Edna looked up, with a smile, as Colcord entered and made his way to the stove. It was by no means his first visit, and she had come to like the frank, breezy man who at once was her brother's friend and rival.

"I'm perfectly happy," she whispered as she offered Colcord a plate of the sweets. "When we made fudge in a chafing dish I used to say that I hoped some day to be able to make all I wanted to. I've got my wish sooner than I expected."

"I wish I might have mine," retorted Colcord.

"You can't," was the prompt reply. "I'm going to elect Tom as sheriff. Perhaps if you are real good I'll elect you the next time."

"It's hard to fight fudge," assented Colcord, with a laugh, "but there is still the home stretch to be run off. You wait and see."

Edna smiled as she shook her head in disapproval of the claim.

"The way to men's hearts is through their stomachs," she reminded.

"A lesson you have taught me," he admitted. "You have dealt me the trump card."

"I thought you told Tom you held it all along," she retorted.

"This is a new deal—and a new trump," he declared mysteriously. "You wait and see."

He would not explain further, and presently he made his way back to the picture theater, where the concluding bout was just over. It had been an expensive experiment, and Colcord reflected that if fudge could beat fighting in Bitter Creek he had already lost.

His trump card was a burgoo. Colcord was from Kentucky, and he had pinned his last faith on this savory stew, the weapon of the politician, the delight of voters for generations.

Two aged negroes were imported to superintend the making, and Colcord had selected a field on the outskirts of the town where the crowds would have to pass his rival's house on the way to the grounds.

The day before election was selected for the function, and all business was suspended by common consent that every one might participate.

Colcord watched Mylius sharply for a counter move, but no announcement came, and, with a chuckle, Colcord assured himself that at last he had played a trump, and played it at a moment when it would save the game.

He made an early trip to the grounds, where already the great stew was bubbling and seething in its caldron. Edna was in the yard in front of the shack her brother had taken when he had arranged for her coming, and he stopped to chat and brag a little on his success.

"I don't suppose that you'd care to come to the grounds," he said, "but you really ought to taste the burgoo. There is nothing else like it. I'll send or bring some over."

"I shall be delighted," was the demure reply, and Colcord rode on rather sorry that he had to whip Edna's brother. It might reduce his chances of winning Edna, and that was even more important now than the office on which he had once set his heart.

It had been announced that the burgoo would be served at 2 o'clock, but it was well past that time when a single rider came to explain why the crowd had not shown up.

"Mylius is giving a lawn party," explained Colcord's friend. "There's a dancing floor laid down in his yard and a band from Silver City. You can't get a man past the place, for Miss Edna is dancing with all in turn. Looks as though we were beaten, Ben."

"I'm rather glad that we are," was the unexpected reply as Colcord turned to give an order.

Some time later the guests at the lawn party were surprised to see Colcord drive up. In the wagon box were the two negroes and the caldron of burgoo.

"I promised to bring you some," explained Colcord as he approached Edna, "and as no one else seemed to want any I brought all of it. It may help out with the refreshments. It's rather a cold day for a lawn party, and the hot stew will be appreciated."

"Splendid!" cried Edna. "If you will drive round the house I'll show you where you can have it served. We only have cakes and lemonade."

She led the way to the back of the house, where the two cooks unloaded Colcord's addition to the refreshments and prepared to serve it. Colcord made the best use of his time, and when he appeared in the front yard again he approached Mylius.

"Tom," he said, "you can be sheriff, for I'm going to be your brother-in-law. I told you that I would win, but I didn't realize that my trump card would be the one you held."

A Hungry Mexican Shark.

Pursued by a nine foot shark, which when they abandoned their boat at the shore put his front fins on the edge of the boat and ate the fish therein as a pig would eat out of a trough until in its greed it swallowed a big hook thrown into the pile of fish, is the story told by several fishermen and people who saw the windup of the affair. The fishermen were returning to port with their sloop filled to the gunwales with fish when they noticed a great fish pursuing them and rapidly gaining on them, although still about 1,000 feet away. They hurried to the pier, where in terror they scrambled out of the boat. The shark, for such the fish proved to be, followed them and immediately mounted part way into the boat, where he began devouring great quantities of fish in single mouthfuls. The fishermen hurriedly secured a shark hook, which they threw in with the fish. The shark, after a mouthful or two, took the hook into his mouth along with several fish and swallowed it. A crowd of people had gathered by this time, and all lent a hand in pulling the monster in.—Mexican Herald.

The Meeting and the Parting.

They had met by chance at Atlantic City. They were strangers to each other, but he was convinced that she was a southern girl of high caste, and she in turn believed him to be a New York man of money.

"You are from New York, aren't you?" she abruptly asked when they had paused for a moment after a stroll along the beach.

"Yes," he answered, determined to reveal himself in his true station. "I live in East Sixteenth street, where I grovel among my fellow clerks on $10 a week. But you—you are a southern lady of social distinction and"—

"No," she coldly rejoined; "I live in East Sixteenth street among the clerks also."

"Anywhere near 258?" he faintly asked.

"Next door—256!"

Then they parted.—New York Times.

EDITORIAL.

Conditions are so extremely dangerous, due to present drouth and the added danger coming from the falling of leaves, that almost any carelessness on the part of anyone is likely to start forest or grass fires. There never has been a time when precautionary methods are more needed than now. Precautionary methods are our best safeguards at the present hour.

An important exhibit is to be held in Quincy the coming week, one in which every citizen should be interested—the Tuberculosis exhibit at City hall under the auspices of Mayor Shea and the Quincy Women's club. The exhibit opens Thursday afternoon and continues through Friday, Saturday and Sunday. There are also prominent speakers as will be noticed by program in another column, the meetings being presided over by local doctors. Bringing the exhibit to Quincy entails some expense which has been shared by the city and club. The efforts of Mayor Shea and the women of the city should serve to create interest among our people and help to solve in the future the care and cure of all consumptives in our midst. The children should be taken to the exhibit. At our national capital the school children were taken in classes to the recent exhibition there and good results are anticipated.

MR. ALCUZAR AT BETHANY.

The address tomorrow evening at Bethany church by Mr. Isaac Alcuzar ought to attract a very large congregation. Mr. Alcuzar is a most eloquent speaker and appears in the Rabbinical robes when he speaks. He was born in Jerusalem and is the son of the Rabbi of the leading synagogues of the city. He was trained for the priesthood and expected to succeed his distinguished father. Taken sick he was sent to a mission hospital where he first learned about The Christ. This change of faith made a sad break in the home for he was driven out to seek his own fortune. Coming to this country he has been educated in our best schools and is now just entering Harvard Medical school to prepare for the medical missionary service in his native land and city. Dr. A. Z. Conrad of Park Street church considers the address recently given in that church by Mr. Alcuzar one of the best given for years before that congregation. There will be an offering taken to aid the speaker in securing his education.

BIRTHDAY SURPRISE.

A delightful affair took place Thursday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. O. H. Sterling, 245 Newport avenue, Wollaston, the occasion being a birthday and surprise party given his wife by Mr. Sterling, a popular employee of the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad, located at the South Station.

Many friends assembled in response to the invitations, and with songs and recitations helped make the evening an enjoyable one. During the evening Mr. Sterling presented his wife with a gold watch, and cut glass and silver tokens from the other guests were also in evidence.

Refreshments were served, and the festivities continued until a late hour. Among those present were: Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Merrifield, Mr. and Mrs. James Foley, Mr. and Mrs. George Church, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Tarr, Mrs. Prudence Brown, Mrs. Dunn, Miss Winnie Church, Miss Lillian Burgess, Miss Dorothy T. Hogan, Miss Bula Church, Miss Winnie Baker, A. W. Sterling, Herbert Hewes, Fred McCarter, Richard Wall, Rufus Holmes, Earl Church, M. Brightman, L. A. Brown, Lewis Smith and Irving Church.

A SPECIALIST SAYS:

"Piles Can't be Thoroughly Cured by Outward Treatment"

Dr. J. S. Leonhardt of Lincoln, Neb., the celebrated specialist, who has studied every phase of piles, says: "Piles can't be thoroughly cured by ointments, nor any other outside treatment. The cause is internal, and needs internal treatment." Dr. Leonhardt perfected Hem-Roid, the first internal pile cure. It frees circulation in the lower bowel, and has cured 98 per cent, of cases.

Free Trade Vs. Protection

There was not a very large number present Friday evening at the joint debate at Music hall between Gen. Hazard Stevens and Capt. Albert Clark.

Col. Charles H. Porter presided and in opening said that each speaker would be allowed forty minutes for his argument and fifteen minutes each for rebuttal.

In introducing the speakers Col. Porter gave a brief outline of their record during the civil war.

Gen. Stevens argued for free trade and in opening said the question of tariff was the most important one before the country. He advocated the total abolition of duty on raw material and the necessities of life and a reduction of one half on other articles except liquors and tobacco. This would remove from the people the greatest burden and cut out monopoly and the trusts. The country, he said, had outgrown the need of protection. The Republican doctrine is for a tariff equal to the difference between the cost at home and abroad with a reasonable profit. But the time has come to take off these duties which are a burden to manufacturers and the people.

Under free trade we exchange what we make cheaper for what other countries make cheaper. The trusts today sell raw material less in foreign countries than at home. The time has come to make a change.

Capt. Albert Clark said while the Democrats talk free trade in Washington they legislate for the solid south and use the tariff to trade with in their home districts. A protectionist will stand up for the industries of this country and keep out foreign goods. It was much better to have the people employed than to get supplies cheaper than they otherwise would.

The speaker said he would admit we pay somewhat higher for some things but he was glad to because it resulted in security and employment for our people.

The only free trade country, Great Britain, raises more money by taxation than we raise under the Dingley tariff. The difference is Great Britain places a duty on articles not grown in that country but which they are obliged to import. We place a duty on articles the like of which we produce and no duty on articles which we do not produce. We seek to equalize the cost of foreign goods.

The tariff says to Great Britain, you must pay us in duty the amount you do not pay your labor before you can sell your goods here.

Why should we import sugar when we are capable of growing it in our own country.

Capt. Clark also spoke of the conditions of the so-called middle classes in free trade Great Britain, where poverty stares them in the face and compared them with the conditions in this country. Some of our articles are sold cheaper in foreign countries than at home and some foreign-made articles are sold cheaper in this country than at home. This is simply a practice of commerce.

MONDAY CLUB.

On Monday evening gentlemen's night was observed by the Monday club of Weymouth, in Masonic hall, East Weymouth. A large attendance of members and guests filled the hall.

Fine music by the orchestra, selections by the Lotus Glee Club, and readings by Eva Bartlett Macy followed the reception. The president, Mrs. Jennie B. Worster welcomed the company. Refreshments were served by the hospitality comittee, Mrs. C. Will Bailey, Mrs. Melzar Burrell, Mrs. Charles Humphrey, Mrs. George Drew, Mrs. Hattie Voorhees, Mrs. Frederick Cate, Mrs. Walter Hersey and Miss Susie Raymond. At the coffee table were: Mrs. E. E. Leonard, Mrs. H. L. Lord poured, assisted by Miss Helen Richards, Miss Ethel Raymond, Miss Louise Cain, Miss Ruth Kimball, Miss Dora Cate, Miss Inez Wheaton, Miss Eliza Hunt and Miss Emma Harris. Mrs. E. P. Hunt, doorkeeper. Dancing followed until 12 o'clock.

Concert and Necktie Party

There was a large atendance Friday evening at the concert and necktie and apron party held under the auspices of Daughters of John Adams L. L. O. L.

The affair was held at Electa hall and proved to be most enjoyable. The concert program included recitations by Miss Grace McKinna, solos by Miss Mary Collins, whistling solos by Joseph Upland and closed with a laughable farce entitled "Mr. Jopin's Latch Key"

The characters were impersonated by Joseph Upland, Harold Richards, Miss Beatrice Budd and Miss Cora Eastman.

At the conclusion of the entertainment program neck ties were distributed amoung the gentlemen whose duty it was to find the lady wearing an apron made of material that corresponded with the tie. This created no end of fun. Dancing was continued until midnight.

TIME TO ACT.

Don't Wait for the Fatal Stages of Kidney Illness. Profit by Quincy People's Experiences.

Occasional attacks of backache, irregular urination, headaches, and dizzy spells are common early symptoms of kidney disorders. It's an error to neglect these ills. The attacks may pass off for a time but return with greater intensity. If there are symptoms of dropsy—puffy swellings below the eyes, bloating of limbs and ankles, or any part of the body, don't delay a minute. Begin taking DoDan's Kidney Pills, and keep up the treatment until the kidneys are well, when your old time health and vigor will return. Cures in Quincy prove the effectiveness of the great kidney remedy.

H. A. Vinton, living at 558 Washington street, Quincy, Mass., says: "Doan's Kidney Pills completely cured me of kidney trouble which had been in my system for at least ten years. Before using this remedy I had severe pains in my back and loins, and they seemed to be of a rheumatic nature. I consulted a doctor and tried many remedies but received only temporary relief. Being advised to try Doan's Kidney Pills I procured a box at the Cox Drug Store, and began their use. They quickly banished the pains in my back and my health is better today than for a long time."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

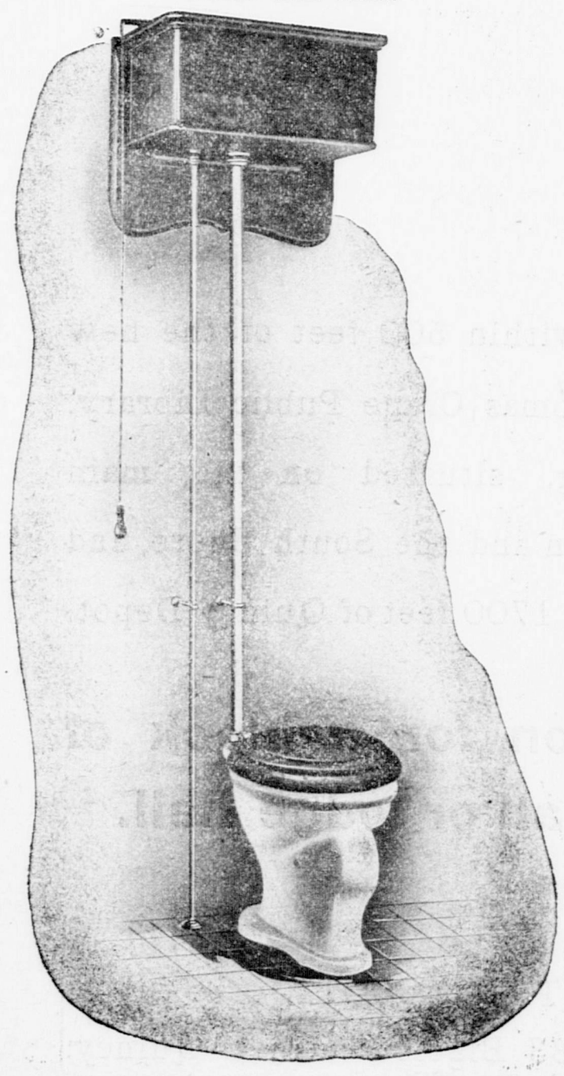
MANET HIGH TANK.



We have made a study of selecting Bath Room Fixtures, both high and low priced, in presenting the views of these two closets, we show two moderate priced fixtures, the Manet Combination in either a high or low down tank combination. We have no hesitancy in recommending either one to you. The wood work is of well seasoned quartered oak, with piano polished finish. The tanks are lined with 12 oz. tinned copper, with lap folded seams, soldered strongly on the outside, (this prevents the deterioration of the solder, as the water cannot act directly on it.) They are equipped with high pressure float valves on the supply pipe, (having removable seats which may be easily replaced in making repairs,) and heavy brass syphon valves for the flushing device. The bowls are of heavy viterous crockery, highly glazed, (warranted not to craze or check) and produce a syphonic action in operation. This action quickly removes the contents of bowl when it is flushed from the tank. The seats are of neat design with heavy Nickle Plated brass bar hinges, which attach direct to the closet bowl, and when raised offers an opportunity for thorough cleaning.

NOMINATION PAPERS.

Up to last night but few nomination papers for the municipal caucuses had been taken out, and considering that the time for filing the papers expires next Thursday it means a hustle next week for the necessary signatures.

Among the papers taken out by the Republicans are those for Eugene R. Stone for Mayor; Charles M. Bryant, Alfred H. Gilson and Otto Gelotte for Councilmen at Large; Louis J. Jobin and Charles L. Bean for Councilman from Ward Five and Alfred N. La Brecque for Councilman from Ward One.

There are probably several of the members of the present City Council who will take out papers but who have not done so as yet.

Papers have also been taken out by William H. Owens for member of the school committee from Ward Four.

Among the Democrats William J. Sullivan of Sumner street has taken out papers for Mayor but does not say who his candidate is.

William H. Flynn and William A. Carey have taken out nomination papers for Councilman from Ward Two.

Lysander S. Richards, who is well known on the South Shore as Marshfield Hill's author, served his annual grape feast to his many friends on Tuesday evening of last week. There were white, pink, red and black grapes—luscious fruit of all sizes—every one raised on the estate of Mr. Richards in the heart of the pretty village. Among the special guests at this year's feast were Mr. and Mrs. Horace Spear, Mrs. Sproul and Mr. and Mrs. Henry Wright of Quincy. To the guests who inquired how he raised such delicious grapes so successfully, Mr. Richards stated that he sprayed his vines frequently. His apple trees, he said, he sprays twice, and three or four times thins out all the imperfect apples while they are yet small. He has recently received 100 dwarf trees from the Massachusetts Agricultural college.—Old Colony Memorial.

WEYMOUTH.

Miss Harriette Harris returned from an extended absence on Saturday. She has been successful throughout New Hampshire furnishing entertainments.

Lady Betty Across the Water

By C. N. & A. M. WILLIAMSON

Copyright, 1906, by McClure, Phillips & Co.

SYNOPSIS.

CHAPTER I—The story is told in the first person by Lady Betty Bulkeley, the pretty young sister of the Duke of Stanforth. She is to visit America in care of Mrs. Stuyvesant-Knox (Mrs. Ess Kay,) a leader of American society, and the latter's cousin, Miss Sally Woodburn, in order that her elder sister Victoria's prospective fiance, Sir Gilbert Mantell, may not be attracted by her.

II—On board ship Betty is attracted by a young American steerage passenger, who saves a child from drowning. Mrs. Ess Kay, who is very "exclusive," objects to Betty's interest in the young man. Betty also meets Tom Doremus, cousin of Mrs. Vander Windt, of New York society.

III—Lady Betty gets her first impression of America. On the dock she is rescued from reporters by the steerage hero, who tells her he is Jim Brett, employed at the Manhattan club, New York. In Mrs. Ess Kay's splendid New York home Betty meets Lieutenant Parker brother of the hostess, who is to take them to visit West Point.

IV—Vivace, a beautiful and expensive dog, is sent to Betty. Mrs. Ess Kay does not know who the donor is, and Betty does not tell her that it is Brett. Lieutenant Parker, whom Betty does not like, makes love to her.

V—Lady Betty has a good time at West Point despite Parker's proposal, which she rejects.

VI—In a walk in Central park Sally tells Betty her love story (she had been seperated years before from the poor man she loved by her family, the man becoming a monk) and advises Betty to marry only when she is sure of her love. They meet Brett.

Chapter 7

IN the afternoon Mrs. Ess Kay and I, in our thinnest muslins, went out in the motor. We whizzed up Fifth avenue for several "blocks" (as she called them), turned into an expensive looking side street and stopped before one of the most enormous buildings I ever saw in my life. It seemed only half finished, for the steel columns of its skeleton were still visible around the ground floor and the street before it was still cluttered with bricks and boards and rubbish. In the hallway men were working like active animals in an immense cage. Suddenly from among them I saw emerge a beautifully dressed little girl foaming with lace frills, led by a trained nurse in a gray and white uniform. They were actually being let out of the lift, which had swooped down with appalling swiftness by a man in livery.

"Good heavens," I exclaimed, "what a queer place for a child and its nurse to be in."

"My dear girl, they live there," said Mrs. Ess Kay rather scornfully. "That is Mrs. Harvey Richmount Taylour's little Rosemary with her nurse."

"People live on top of those poles like Jack in a beanstalk!" I exclaimed. "How appalling."

As I looked through the hallway up sprang the lift once more, fierce and swift as one of the rockets which I used as a child to be afraid might strike the angels. A minute of suspense and it swooped down again with two girls in it. I felt as if it were a thing I oughtn't to be seeing somehow; it was so much like spying on the digestive apparatus of a skeleton.

"You see," explained Mrs. Ess Kay, "the Taylours and other people were frightfully anxious to get in. The rest of the building will be finished soon, and this is going to be one of the swellest apartment houses in New York."

"This an apartment house!" cried I, thinking of the dull streets in London, where almost every door has "Apartments" printed over it in gilt letters or else hanging crooked and dejected on a card. "But, oh—perhaps you mean it's flats."

"For goodness sake, don't say 'flats' to Margaret Taylour," exclaimed Mrs. Ess Kay, marshaling me into the mammoth skeleton. "Over here, only common people live in flats; our sort have 'apartments.'"

"It's just the other way round with us," I explained. "Those who have flats would be furious if you said they lived in apartments."

"You English are so quaint in some ways," remarked Mrs. Ess Kay, and though I didn't answer, I was surprised. It's all well enough for us to think Americans odd, and we are accustomed to that, for everybody says they are, but that they should think our ways comic does seem extraordinary, almost improper.

By this time we were in the lift, which shut upon us with a vicious snap and then tossed us up toward the roof of the world. I do hope one doesn't experience the same sensation in dying, though in that case it would be worse going down than up.

Before I had time to do more than gasp we were at the top, and as we waited for an instant outside Mrs. Harvey Richmount Taylour's door I should have liked to pinch my cheeks lest my fright had left me pale.

Vic has a friend who lives in a flat near the park for the season, and once I was taken there. I thought it quite beautiful, but though the friend's a countess and very rich the flat is poor compared with this topheavy nest of Mrs. Taylour's.

In a white drawing room where the only spots of color were the roses—masses of pink roses in gold bowls—a Madonna-like being was reclining in a green and white billow of a lace tea gown on a white sofa. She held out both hands to Mrs. Ess Kay and looked at me, apologizing for not getting up.

When you come to examine her, the only thing really Madonna-like about Mrs. Harvey Richmount Taylour is her way of doing her hair. It's parted in the middle and folds softly down in brown wings on either side of rather a high forehead, white enough to match her drawing room. She has gently curved eyebrows, too, but under them her dark eyes are as bright and sharp as a fox terrier's. She has pale skin, red lips and thin features, with a stick out chin, cut on the same pattern as Mrs. Ess Kay's, though it isn't as square yet, because she is years younger—perhaps not more than twenty-eight.

Mrs. Ess Kay introduced us, in a more precise way than we have at home, and Mrs. Taylour said that she was very happy to meet me, which I should have thought particularly kind if I hadn't found out that it's a sort of formula which Americans think it polite to use.

She talked to me a good deal and wanted to know how I liked America, of course. I was sure she would do that.

Then Mrs. Ess Kay explained that I was interested in her apartment being up so high and thought her plucky to live in it before the house was finished. This amused Mrs. Taylour very much.

"We are just thankful to be in it," she said. "I was tired out with housekeeping, the servant question is too awful."

"I see you've a trained nursemaid for Rosemary," said Mrs. Ess Kay. "We met them going out."

"Isn't Rosemary a pet?" Mrs. Taylour asked me as if she were speaking of somebody else's little girl.

"Sweet," I said. "Has she been ill?"

"No. Do you think she looks delicate?"

"It was the hospital nurse"— I began, but Mrs. Taylour laughed.

"Oh, I suppose that would strike you as funny. But we often have them for our children. We poor New York women have so much to do socially we have to be relieved of all feeling of responsibility if we don't want to come down with nervous prostration. I shall hang on to this same nurse for years if she'll stay; she's so good and only $10 a week. When Rosemary grows up and comes out she will be her maid, you know, Lady Betty. Do you ever have trained nursemaids in England?"

"No," I said. "Fancy!"

"Oh, it's a splendid thing for a girl—nothing like it. You see, the woman looks after her like a maid and a nurse both; makes sure her bath's the right temperature, takes care of her if she gets the grip, sits up and gives her beef tea or chocolate after balls, massages her and things like that. I used to have one myself, but a woman after she's married is different from a bud. She must have a French woman for her hair if she respects herself."

Reclining in a green and white tea gown.

I said meekly that I supposed so, and then Mrs. Taylour left me to myself for a few minutes, while she talked to Mrs. Ess Kay. They compared notes about appendicitis, which they called the fashionable complaint, and Mrs. Taylour suddenly exclaimed:

"Oh, my dear, I have had just the smartest idea. As soon as Dr. Pearson will let me go to Blue Bay I tell you I mean to wake them up there. What I'll do is to have an appendicitis lunch. It'll be rather conducive, won't it?"

"You are the most original thing!" exclaimed Mrs. Ess Kay. "How are you going to manage?"

"Oh, nobody shall be invited except those who have had it, and the great feature will be the decorations, operating instruments, you know, and hospital nurses, and—oh, I don't know what all yet, but I'm thinking it out. It was Cora Pitchley's cat lunch that put it in my head." She turned to me. "Only women are asked or a cat lunch couldn't be worked. Is it so with you, too?"

"I'm afraid our women would think it a bore if there were no men," I answered. "Anyway, there always are some, I believe. I'm not out yet. Do tell about the cat lunch."

Our method of supplying your requirements in Furs has made The Dunlap-Cooke Canadian Furs famous as the Furs of Quality. The Canadian Climate produces the finest furs known to commerce, because of the long, cold winters. The fur-bearing animals of Canada are provided by nature with a coat that is warmer, finer and more lustrous than temperate climates can produce.

The Duty on Manufactured Canadian Furs is 35%—We receive our Canadian Furs in the Raw State Duty Free. We have our own fur stores in Canadian centres; here we receive the raw furs from the trappers. We are the only Canadian Fur concern with a store in the United States. In this respect the strength of our position is unequalled. When you buy direct from us you save middlemen's profits and secure skins taken in prime season from the best sections, because we know where and when to buy the best that Canada offers.

JEWETT PIANOS

(Famous for Forty-Eight Years)

The New Models should be seen

By every piano buyer this fall.

The progress of the Jewett piano has made notable changes in the piano situation. More Jewett pianos are probably sold in New England each year than of any other make of equal grade.

The growth of popularity of the Jewett can be nothing short of amazing to people who are not thoroughly familiar with this well-known piano. The reason for this fact can be found only in their wonderfully sweet, clear tone, beautiful styles and finish and their great durability.

The new models are handsomer than any we have shown before. We recommend them as the best high grade pianos ever offered at these prices.

Uprights $350 to $450. Grands $650

NOT A PUBLIC OFFICE SEEKER

Contest of Labor Is For Justice, Declares Gompers

WHOLE CABINET WILL STUMP

President's Political Family to Go Into Doubtful States--Committeemen Predict Success of Hughes In New York and Taft In Ohio--Presidential Candidates Are Greeted by Large and Enthusiastic Audiences

New York, Oct. 24.—National Chairman Mack made public the following telegram from Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor, received by Mr. Bryan upon his arrival in Jersey City last night:

"Just saw President Roosevelt's attack. I deem it my duty to advise you that I am preparing an answer. Some newspapers are trying to embarrass you by declaring that you will appoint me a member of your cabinet if you are elected president. You may say that I have publicly, emphatically and frequently declared that under no circumstances would I accept any public office, either elective or appointive, and this declaration is irrevocable. The contest of labor is for justice and not for office."

Mr. Mack said that the Democratic committee was receiving reports that the Republicans in West Virginia were enticing Democratic workmen out of the state into Ohio on promises of work to keep them out of West Virginia until after election, after which they would be told that their employment would not begin for some time.

As a result of yesterday's cabinet meeting every member of the president's official family will go out next week to make political speeches in the states where there is doubt as to the outcome of the campaign in favor of Mr. Taft. The president earnestly considered the entire situation with six members of his cabinet, and at the end of the meeting it was learned that each of these officials next week will make several campaign speeches.

Chairman Hitchcock of the Republican national committee left for Chicago at 3:30 p. m. yesterday. He will have a final personal conference there on political conditions in the west and return here Monday. He said on his departure that upon his return he would remain here until after the election. He added that soon after his return here he would give out his forecast of the result.

Members of the local unions affiliated with the American Federation of Labor will have Mr. Taft, who is an honorary member of the International Union of Steam Shovelers, to themselves next Wednesday evening for half an hour. Since Taft has consented to speak to them in Cooper Union on that evening, they have arranged to exclude from the hall all persons who are not members of the union.

National Committeeman Ward of New York says that so far as he has proceeded with his poll of the state, which will be given out here the middle of next week, it shows that Governor Hughes is not only far ahead up the state, but that he is gaining steadily in this city.

Henry A. Williams, chairman of the Ohio Republican state executive committee, was at headquarters of the Republican state committee to consult with Hitchcock about the campaign in Ohio. Williams said:

"They are ready to vote and to vote right. I see no reason to doubt that Taft will carry Ohio by at least 75,000. The entire Republican ticket will be elected by about the same plurality."

Restoration of Confidence Needed

Indianapolis, Oct. 24.—Friday's exhibition of political enthusiasm attending William H. Taft's tour in Indiana was such as to eclipse all previous campaigns, according to the national and state leaders who have been with the Taft special. So great were the crowds everywhere that Taft talked less and "exhibited" more than heretofore in the campaign.

Wherever he spoke, his remarks were apparently appreciated, and what he said was a repetition of his recent speeches. This one note, however, dominated his thought: "Indiana is surely alive to her political responsibility, and the character of her enthusiasm means the success of the Republican party."

A drizzling rain part of the day and evening and bad railroad service, which made the train more than an hour late before the day's itinerary was half accomplished, seemed to make no impression on the demand for a sight of the candidate, and whenever his train was at a standstill there was no cessation to the cries of approval and shouts of applause.

Beginning at Brazil, with a largely attended meeting at 7 o'clock in the morning, at each place there turned out crowds teeming with enthusiasm.

One of the candidate's brief and characteristic speeches was delivered at Anderson after dark and in the rain, but to a large and enthusiastic audience. After eulogizing ex-President Harrison, he said:

"Your coming here in such numbers testifies to your interest in the election in November; testifies to the fact that Indiana is Republican, that you appreciate the importance of continuing the prosperity that we have by rejecting Mr. Bryan again and continuing the Republican party in power.

"What we need to put us on the way to the prosperity we have enjoyed for ten years is a restoration of confidence, and you will never bring that about if you put into the executive chair a man who has so many half-baked, unfounded economic theories as the leader of the Democracy. The interest of the laboring man, of the farmer and of the business man are identical, and in order to bring back good times you must not put in a man who is constantly advocating new experiments and whose experiments heretofore have always failed."

It was reserved for Indianapolis to furnish the climax of the day of crowds and noise. A tremendous parade awaited his arrival, with the accessories multiplied and enhanced. Three meetings were attended by the candidate, his greatest effort of the day being before an immense audience at the Virginia Avenue auditorium, over which Vice President Fairbanks presided. Senator Hemenway and Representative Overstreet officiated at two other meetings, which were held in the open air.

Sixteen Speeches In New Jersey

Newark, N. J., Oct. 24.—New Jersey poured out hosts to greet William J. Bryan. Refreshed by a long sleep Thursday night, following two laborious days in Ohio and West Virginia, the Democratic candidate was in excellent form and he took advantage of this to inject into his utterances a spirit which enabled him to impress his audiences everywhere.

Mr. Bryan was enabled to talk to great numbers of farmers, laboring men and others in the farming and industrial centers of the state. Evidently inspired by President Roosevelt's recent declaration on the subject of labor, in which Samuel Gompers and the Democratic nominee were severely criticised, Bryan chose for his main text the labor question. In almost all his speeches, of which there were sixteen, he made merry with the attitude of the president. He accused Roosevelt of "butting into" the campaign and deposing Gompers, and said sarcastically that he expected before long that he himself would be deposed and Nicholas Longworth, the president's son-in-law, would be placed at the head of the Democracy.

Mr. Bryan never lost an opportunity to define the difference between the platforms of the Republican and Democratic parties with respect to labor and explained in detail the pledges which the Democratic party made at Denver to obtain the remedial legislation for which he said labor was crying, but to which the Republicans had turned a deaf ear.

At Trenton he told the people that he had a united Democracy behind him and a frightened Republican party in front of him. Immense throngs greeted him at several places. On no day during the campaign were his remarks so interrupted with expressions from people in his audiences, indicating their friendliness toward him, than on this.

The climax of the eventful day came when he visited Newark last night. The whole city was aglow with red fire and his progress through the streets to the auditorium was nothing short of an ovation. A seething mass of humanity followed him to the hall, already long before packed to its capacity, while on the outside were great numbers who, unable to gain admittance, made it necessary for him to deliver an overflow address. The air was rent with cheers as he explained the Democratic policies and heaped criticism upon the Republican party for its failure, as he said, to listen to the demands of the people.

One of Old Parties Must Die

Boston, Oct. 24.—After touring southeastern Massachusetts and Rhode Island, Eugene W. Chafin, Prohibition candidate for the presidency, arrived here last night. In an interview Chafin said:

"It is the funniest campaign I've seen since 1876. I am convinced that there are enough voters in a doubtful mood at the present time to give an electoral college to either Bryan or Taft. There are enough men in Ohio, Indiana and New York to swing the electoral vote of these states to either candidate.

"There is one thing of which I am certain, however. The party that is defeated at the polls Nov. 3 will never run another candidate for president. The defeated Republican party or the defeated Democratic party, whichever it is, will go out of existence as did the old Whig party in 1852, and the parties will then line up on the prohibition issue.

"There is not the slightest doubt that the Prohibition candidate for president will be elected in 1912. The issue of the liquor traffic has been kept down this year by two forceful characters, two of the biggest men we have ever had in American history, Roosevelt and Bryan. With the elimination of one or the other, the issue of prohibition will come to the front.

Young Kern Slightly Better

Indianapolis, Oct. 24.—There is a shade of improvement in the condition of John W. Kern, Jr. His father is at his bedside. Whether Mr. Kern will continue his campaign trip next week will depend entirely upon the condition of his son.

"Joke" Proves Troublesome

Detroit, Oct. 24.—Lucian T. F. Tull, auditor of the New Amsterdam Gas company of New York, was indicted by the federal grand jury here on the charge of passing counterfeit money. Tull, it is alleged, brought with him to Detroit a number of counterfeit coins taken out of the gas company's slot machine meters in New York and gave some of them as a joke to a woman whom he met here.

ZEPPELIN'S NEW AIRSHIP

Satisfactory Evolutions During Trip Lasting Three and a Half Hours

Friedrichshafen, Oct. 24.—The reconstructed Zeppelin dirigible airship No. 1 made a triumphal reappearance and ascension with ten passengers yesterday afternoon and went through evolutions which for speed and stability were most satisfactory. The trip in the air lasted three and a half hours and passed without a hitch. The balloon made an average speed of 29.31 miles an hour at a mean altitude of 800 feet. Driven alternately by a single motor and then with both motors, the craft made easy progress, its movements being controlled with facility with either the double or the single steering gears.

Ascending from the waters of Lake Constance almost horizontally for 500 feet, it set out on a short voyage overland against a fresh breeze. It swept over the palace, from the grounds of which the King of Wurtemburg greeted it. The air vessel seemed constantly to increase its speed, sometimes far surpassing the records of the one recently destroyed. At a height of 1000 feet the craft performed most wonderful maneuvers. At an angle of 35 degrees it turned to the right and to the life and spun completely around; then, all the time steering with the wings opening and closing like window shutters, it rose at the bow and the stern at will.

Short, sharp speedy dashes followed. Finally the balloon descended to the lake and was placed in the floating hall without difficulty.

NASHUA PEOPLE ARE SURPRISED

Man and Woman Held by Police In Stark Case

Nashua, N. H., Oct. 24.—As a result of the investigation into the death of Miss Abbie E. Stark, 22, daughter of Frank B. Stark, Otis Smith, one of the best known young men of this city, and Ina Philbrick, a chum of the dead girl, are held at the police station without bail. Smith is married.

According to her father, Miss Stark was away from home during the early part of Thursday evening and shortly after her return was taken ill. She died about 2 o'clock yesterday morning. It is said that she was seized with convulsions, although the medical authorities are reticent on this point.

The police say that the investigation thus far indicates that Miss Stark had taken something as a medicine and they allege that she was advised to do this by the persons whose formal arrest is expected today.

John Dowling, to whom Miss Stark had been engaged, was prostrated when he learned of the condition of the girl. He is considered wholly innocent of the conditions leading up to the death of Miss Stark.

Otis Smith has been for some time leader of one of the best orchestras in the city and has been foremost in social affairs. It was not generally known that he was intimate with Miss Stark, and his friends were astounded on learning of the charges against him.

Governor's Life Threatened

Union City, Tenn., Oct. 24.—Because of threats against the life of Governor Patterson, who is personally directing the investigation of night-rider depredations, the detachment of troops assigned to safeguard the governor has been increased. T. C. Ward, proprietor of the hotel at Walnut Log, from which Captain Rankin and Judge Taylor were taken by a band of masked men on Monday night, and Knox Morgan and Elmer Tate, merchants, were taken into custody yesterday.

Death of General Nye

Boston, Oct. 24.—General George H. Nye, one of the best known Grand Army men of New England, died at his home here, aged 80. Nye entered the service April 20, 1861, enlisting as a private in the First Maine infantry volunteers. He participated in many battles and was wounded severely in the battle of Cedar Creek. In 1865 he was brevetted brigadier general and major general in 1866, when he was retired.

Election Affects Business World

New York, Oct. 24.—R. G. Dun & Co.'s Weekly Review of Trade says that ante-election lassitude is general in the commercial world, especially as to the placing of contracts for new undertakings, but there is a gratifying decrease in idle machinery at manufacturing plants, testifying to confidence in a good demand when the present uncertainty is over.

Reward For Arrest of Firebugs

Bennington, Vt., Oct. 24.—The authorities of Bennington have come to the conclusion that the fires on Bald mountain are being reset each day. They announce a reward of $100 for evidence which will lead to the arrest and conviction of any firebugs. The fire on Green mountain is burning more fiercely than ever.

NEWS IN BRIEF

Henry P. Perkins of Lowell, Mass., was struck and fatally injured by a train. He was for forty-three years connected with the Lowell Bleachery. He was born in Lyme, N. H., in 1832.

The New Boar's Head hotel at Hampton Beach, N. H., was burned. The hotel had been closed for the season, but was occupied by the leasee and his family, all of whom escaped uninjured. The loss is $15,000.

Quincy Locals Briefly Told

There will be no meeting of the City Council Monday evening. The next regular meeting will be held Monday, Nov. 2.

The entertainment committee of Quincy lodge of Elks are arranging for something exceptionally good in the amusement line.

The next meeting of the Whotsoever circle, King's Daughters, will be held Oct. 26, at 7.45 P. M. with Mrs. Amos Leavitt, 67 Lincoln avenue.

It required the whole day Friday and until late in the evening to get the four-ton safe in position in the clerk's office at the district court room.

The committee of the Quincy Yacht club on the one design class meet tonight to discuss the matter of forming such a class and to decide if the plan presented is in any way feasable.

John H. Wilson of Harvard college, son of Rev. Lewis G. Wilson secretary of the American Unitarian society, has been appointed superintendent of the First Parish Sunday school of Milton.

The Young People's Religious union of Wollaston will meet on Sunday evening in the vestry of the Unitarian church at seven o'clock. Edward R. Hall has charge of the meeting and the speaker will be Henry H. Saunderson.

The Westland Ladies' quartette of Boston, of which Mrs. Emma Shufeldt Moore of Quincy, and Miss Alice Gertrude Coe of Atlantic are members, will give the next concert for the "Organ Repair Fund" of Christ church, assisted by a Boston reader.

Word has been received that a Quincy young man, Nicholas A. Gallagher of 72 Spear street, who is studying medicine at Georgetown University, Washington, D. C., is meeting with great success. "Nick" has been elected president of the senior class in the Medical school and appointed Government Alienist from the Washington Asylum to the District of Columbia.

At her home on Taber street Thursday evening Miss Agnes F. Souter was tendered a surprise party by the I. E. girls and their friends. During the evening she was presented with a gold locket. Miss Souter was completely taken by surprise and after collecting her thoughts, thanked her friends for remembering her. A dainty collation was served in the dinning room which was prettily decorated with the I. E. colors, pink and green. The remainder of the evening was pleasantly spent playing games and singing.

There are cracks in Neponset bridge that are actually rotting away the foundations and widening daily so that a pedestrian can see the water through the spaces between the planks while walking over the bridge. It is waxing dangerous for whomsoever chooses to stand on the bridge at midnight for it takes careful walking to avoid the pitfalls along the way given by the daylight. Where the recent fire was extinguished by chemicals the planks are in a really dangerous condition an dliable to fall through at any time.

Today's Court.

Frank H. W. Cox was sentenced to two years in the house of correction for larceny at Quincy.

Elizabeth Fitzgerald was fined $50 for violation of the liquor law at Weymouth.

Will E. Allen was fined $20 for exceeding the automobile speed limit at Milton.

James Dean was fined $10 for drunkenness at Randolph.

CARD OF THANKS.

Mrs. David Cramond and family wish to thank their many friends and neighbors for the many acts of kindness and sympathy in the hour of their bereavement.

Foot Ball And Other Sports

Quincy High meets Malden on the gridiron this afternoon, at the Malden High athletic field. This game will be the hardest of the season, for Malden has a wonderfully fast team this year. "Charlie" Cuddy, who for many years turned out champion teams at Somerville, is coaching the team, and his success so far has been all that could be desired. Cuddy has drilled the boys to "say nothing, but play football" while on the field and the team has been nicknamed the "silent eleven" because they follow this advice. They have yet to be defeated, and in the last two games, against Brighton and Stoneham, the team has scored 150 points. Now today the local team has a big job on hand, and if Malden can be held to two or three touchdowns, everyone should be satisfied.

Quincy will be without the services of Gore and Clapp, the star quarter and half-back of the team. Gore is a great field general and runs the team like a veteran; but he has an excellent understudy in Hendry, who played quarter for Thayer academy last year. Clapp will be greatly missed on account of his line plunging ability, and also his excellent work on the defensive.

The necessity of having good, fair disinterested officials in charge of a game was seen in the contest between Dedham and Brookline yesterday at the latter's field. Dedham was leading 6-0, at the end of the first half, and there had been no trouble up to this point. But towards the end of the second half the referee got in his work. A Brookline player hurdled, which is positively against the rules.

When the Dedham coach kicked, the referee sustained the Brookline man. It was a clear case of robbery and the visitors left the field. The crowd started for the referee, but the police broke up the rush, and the game was forfeited to Brookline 1-0. This is not the first time Brookline has treated visiting teams in this way, and the sooner they cut it out, the better.

The Soccer team of the Fore River goes to Fall River today to play the Rovers of that place. The latter team is about one point ahead of the local aggregation for the league leadership and there will be a hot game today. These Rovers are travelling fast and they play a hard rough game, being the only team the Fore Rivers haven't trimmed this year. Eat 'em up today Fore River,, polish 'em off, and take first place in the league. Once you get it, you'll never be headed.

The semi-final matches in the B. A. A. golf championship at Wollaston will be played today, Dr. R. E. Sproule of Wollaston had the best gress score on Thursday and yesterday. Besides the B. A. A. Semi-finals, there will be a handicap vs. bogey competition for a cup donated by Dr. Sproule.

Malden high had a good workout yesterday as Quincy High is expected to put up a strong defence and will make the Malden aggregation travel somewhat faster than they have been forced to go in recent contests. Quincy has a number of lads who play good football and the Malden backs will have a hard time gaining. (Boston Post.)

NEW ENGLAND FOOD FAIR.

What may well be termed a "Delightful Occupation" is to sit in any of the great halls of Mechanics Building Boston, any day and watch the crowds come, be entertained and depart tired with a day's sight-seeing at the annual New England food fair, but all supremely happy. And vastly improved in mind too, for no one can listen to the exquisite music by the Mexican National band; can study, even briefly the magnificent exhibit of her resources and the indications of her progress made by the Merican government under the special direction of President Diaz; can visit the Frank C. Bostock consolidated trained wild animal arena with its hundreds of rare animale and the thrilling and fascinating performances given five times daily by the most daring, most successful animal trainers in the world; can sit in the two moving picture theatres in one of which a vivid representation of Paul Revere's famous ride, faithful pictures of the Harvard-Yale boat race and comic views are given and in the other are shown some of the glories of California, the arrival of the United States fleet of battleships on the Pacific coast, the floral parade and battle of flowers at Santa Barbara with scenes in the Yosemite valley and on the ostrich farms at Pasadena; listen to the flood of melody poured out upon every side from three orchestras and enjoy many other wonderful sights and sounds, without being; hugely entertained and instructed. The coming week is the final one of the New England food fair and the capacity of the magnificent Mechanics building will doubtless be severely taxed to accommodate the thousands who will want to take advantage of this splendid opportunity to visit this celebrated international and interstate exposition.

Mr. and Mrs. George Ellsworth of Braintree celebrated the fifteenth anniversary of their marriage by entertaining their families and a few immediate friends on Monday evening at their pleasant home. About fifty gathered to offer their congratulations and the affair although very informal was a success. Refreshments of ices and cakes were served to the guests and as they departed to their homes each left their best wishes to Mr. and Mrs. Ellsworth for many more anniversaries.

Horace Jenkins and Stanley Furgerson of Atlantic are making plans for a dancing party to be given in Poland's hall, Norfolk Downs in the near future.

Mrs. Frederick Peirce of Hancock street entertained the Atlantic whist club Tuesday evening at dinner. Following the repast which was temptingly served was an enjoyable game of cards. The next meeting will be at the home of Mrs. William Johnson, Faxon road.

* * *

Miss Nellie F. Forrest of Hancock street, Wollaston, left on Wednesday for a visit with her sister Mrs. J. J. Curtis of Jersey City Heights.

The members of the Ivaloo whist club were entertained by Mrs. Stephen Gammons of Braintree Friday afternoon.

AMUSEMENTS.

Keith's Theatre.

The attractions at Keith's theatre of late have been of such a character and have attracted such widespread attention that there has been some doubt as to the ability of any manager to keep up to the standard that has been set, but it doesn't seem to bother Mr. Keith. After having introduced Annette Kellermann to the vaudeville patrons in one of the most novel acts ever devised, and creating a sensation, he will next week not only keep Miss Kellermann on the bill, but have another attraction—Eva Tanquay, who enjoys the distinction of a run of twenty weeks in New York City, a record ,hereto believed impossible, for any artist, no matter how popular or how clever. Others on the bill will be the Artois Brothers with a bar act that is said to be simply wonderful, Leo Donnelly in a new specialty; the Picaro Brothers and a number of other attractions to be announced later, to which will be added the special Keith show which is becoming such a strong attraction at this house during the late hours of the afternoon and the early hours of the evening. This is made up of a special corps of entertainers rehearsed by the Keith management and with the best pictures that can be secured.

Boston Theatre.

Following the plan of presenting the latest successes the attraction at the Boston theatre next week, will be the "Hypocrites," by Henry Arthur Jones, a play which has met with tremendous success, and is the only one of this English author's works that received its first production in America. The action of the piece takes place in a small English village, where, with few exceptions ,there is pitiable immorality. The exception to the rule is the Reverend Edgar Linnell, who is deeply stirred by the conditions, but when he attempts reform is met with such opposition that his living is threatened and he is finally forced to acquiesce. Linnell pleads the cause with Wildmore, a man who has influence in the village, that an erring tenant should marry an erring woman, although she is not worthy. Later on in the play the same question comes up in connection with the son of Wildmore, who although engaged to marry, proved unfaithful to another woman. This instance brings the father to a realization of the responsibilities, and the play has a good ending.

Castle Square Theatre.

Further evidence of the enterprise of Messrs, Gulesian and Craig in their management of the Castle Square theatre is apparent from the announcement that "The Admiral Crichton" is to be produced there next week. It is to be their endeavor to provide the public with stock company novelties, and to that end they have secured many popular plays for their repertory that have never before been given at the Castle Square. "The Admirable Crichton is one of these. Written by the inimitable J. M. Barries, author of "The Little Minister" and "Peter Pan," it is as original and clever as both those plays put together, the novelty of its plot and its characters being striking evidence of its author's ingenuity and imagination. Its theme is merely the development of the idea that "a man's a man for A' that. The cast of this highly amusing play, will add not a little to its humor. Mr. Craig will appear as Crichton, with Miss Mary Young as Tweeny, Miss Mary Hall as Lady Mary, Mabel Colcord as Countess of Brocklehurst Theodore Friebus as Rev. John Treherne, Donald Meek as Hon. Ernest Woolley, George Hassell as The Earl of Loam and William Evarts as Tompsett.

Orpheum Theatre.

Each week seems to bring out at the Orpheum theatre a better bill than that of the previous week and the vaudeville attractions at this house are being talked of very favorably. This is the fourth week of the Orpheum's vaudeville season. The Four Mortons in another of their famous comedy acts, and Daisy Lloyd, "the daintiest of them all," remain because they are so good. The famous impersonator, Willy Zimmerman will show how Taft and Bryan would lead a band, and, as an added attraction, Charles Barnold's Dog and Monkey actors including Dan the famous intoxicated canine, will give their humorous street scene. Prince Kokin, the Japanese equilibrist and The Three Keltons in an amusing act complete the bill ,except for the Morrisscope which has some new moving pictures on display.

Liver Pills
Ask your doctor if he knows a better pill for a sluggish liver than Ayer's Pills. Then follow his advice.
It is impossible, simply impossible, for any one to enjoy the best of health if the bowels are constipated. Undigested material, waste products, poisonous substances, must be daily removed from the body or there will be trouble, and often serious trouble, too. Ayer's Pills aid nature, that is all. J. C. Ayer Co., Lowell, Mass.

DEAFNESS CANNOT BE CURED.
by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.
We give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

SIXTEEN COMPANIES

Quincy Will Have Large Representation In Boston Parade

One of the largest parades in the history of Boston will be held on Sunday, when the Holy Name Societies from five counties will be marshaled together, and with bands and banners pass in review before Cardinal Gibbons, Archbishop O'Connell, and other Catholic notables of the city and state. The parade is the closing feature of a week's celebration in honor of the 100th anniversary of the foundation of the Boston diocese.

Upwards of 35,000 men will be in line, the whole being divided into 14 divisions and each division into companies. The parade will be in charge of Chief Marshal, Major John J. Leonard, and he will be assisted by a corp of marshals, each in charge of a separate division. Each society will have a commander and each company of 26 will have a captain and color bearer.

In the ninth division with William G. Clifford as marshal, John E. Sexton as adjutant, and Major William T. Shea of Quincy as sergeant major, will be societies from Brockton, Campello, Middleboro, Bridgewater, East Bridgewater, Whitman, Quincy, West Quincy, Atlantic, Avon, Holbrook, South Braintree, Rockland, South Weymouth, East Weymouth, Weymouth, Cohasset and Hingham.

The Quincy societies are organized as follows:

St. John's Quincy; spiritual director, the Rev. Julian E. Johnstone. Commander Edward J. Lennon. Captains company 1, Wm. R. Smith; 2, Joseph E. H. Dunleavy; 3, Joseph T. Gallagher; 4, John V. Meade; 5, John W. McAnarney; 6, Daniel Dewey.

Sacred Heart, Atlantic, spiritual director, the Rev. John P. Cuffe, Commander, John A. McGowan. Captains, company 1, Frank B. Lavery; 2, Thos. McNally; 3, James Costello; 4, James McGeoghegan.

St. Mary's, West Quincy; spiritual director, the Rev. J. J. O'Donnell. Commander, Louis Gilbride. Captains, company 1, William Buckley; 2, Thomas Reardon; 3, Daniel McNally; 4, William J. Callahan.

St. Francis, South Braintree; spiritual director, the Rev. M. F. McDonnell. Commander, John M. Sullivan. Captains, company 1, Edward Shay; 2, Dr. Cornelius H. Sullivan; 3, M. J. Smith.

Music in the divisions will be furnished by Milo Burke's Band and Mace Gay's Brockton Band, the latter as escort to the Sacred Heart society of Atlantic.

On the staff of aids in this division will be: William H. Cuffe, J. B. Carney, Victor Duplin, John J. Daley, Peter J. Dorey, Cornelius M. Duggan, Alban D. Gillis, James J. Gorman, Emil Houde, William H. Hennessey, Frank T. McNiff, Michael J. Murphy, Joseph W. McDonald, Patrick H. McLaughlin, Patrick Payton, James O'Connell, M. T. Sullivan, John J. Sullivan, Thomas B. Reid and James J. Crowley.

The Quincy societies having been drilling faithfully for the past month, St. John's, St. Mary's and the Sacred Heart societies have large contingents out at all the practices. Edward J. Lennon, the old G. A. R. veteran, has been drilling the St. John's squad, and the six companies under his charge will be among the best in the parade. Every Tuesday and Thursday evening, the yard about St. John's church has been illuminated for the marches, and on Sunday afternoons Merrymount Park has been the scene of their actions. On Tuesday and Thursday evening of this week the companies will parade through the streets of Quincy with fife and drum corps, and it will be interesting and surprising to see with what skill the men go through the manoeuvers and obey the army commands.

The society at St. Mary's church has a big squad out drilling under the direction of Louis Gilbride. They too have been seen out for the past month, and the six companies are among the best drilled.

The Sacred Heart church of Atlantic has four companies out, and they have been drilling at the Ward Six playground on Thursday evenings and Sunday afternoons. John A. McGowan has charge and the society is very efficient in the moves and evolutions that will be executed.

The parade is expected to start at about 1230 and close to 100,000 people will probably watch it.

UNCLAIMED LETTERS.

Letters remain in the Quincy Post office for: Wayne Boyd, Mr. Calahan, D. Drozdjok, Benda Ermenegildo, Adolph Finnberg, M. A. Long, Mrs. Myles McCabe, Mrs. John McDonal, Charles McIsaac, Mrs. Hannah McLane, Domnick Pedroli and Mrs. Sarah Smith.

Double Launching At the Shipyard

Army tug boats Nos. 159 and 160 will be launched at the shipyard at 12.45 P. M., on Wednesday. Foremen have been directed to see that all work in their departments is as far advanced as possible at that date. It is desired that all machinery necessary to be shipped before the deck house is put on should be in place at the earliest possible date after launching in order that there may be no delay in the final completion of the boats. These will be the first two of eight boats of the same type to be launched which are under construction at the shipyard. No. 159 has been assigned the name, "General Robert Anderson," while No. 160 will be known as, "General Richard Arnold."

Storrs L. Durkee, a former employee of the Fore Shipbuilding Co., for a long time head of the employment department at the works, has just been appointed by Superintendent of Streets Emerson of Boston to the position of chief clerk of the permit office in the street department at a salary of $1,800 a year. Mr. Durkee's name was taken from the civil service list.

Charles E. Hathaway is acting-treasurer of the Fore River company during the absence of J. A. Sedgwick.

It appearing that some of the employees in the yard are desirous of instruction in such branches as arithmetic, algebra and geometry, that will help them in their various trades, the company has authorized James E. Neary to arrange for classes in the apprentice school room on the second floor of the joiner shop as noted below:—Arithmetic, from 4.30 P. M., to 5.30 P. M., twice a week, classes will be held for men who are anxious to review their arithmetic. The course will relate directly to the work in the different trades. The class is limited to 12 men so that all will be assured of individual attention. The price is 25 cents per week. All men who are interested will see Mr. Neary at apprentice school room at 4.30 P. M. on days mentioned to make arrangement for starting. Algebra and geometry, men interested in these subjects are notified that classes will be formed to meet on alternate day from the arithmetic classes. All interested will meet on days mentioned, at aforesaid place.

An order went into effect October 5, giving apprentices for satisfactory timekeeping and general good conduct the folowing premiums:—For each week worked without loss of time, one hour will be deducted from the time required for the year. For each month worked without loss of time, four hours additional, or eight hours for the month will be deducted from the time required for the year. To obtain these premiums the apprentice's conduct must be satisfactory in every way and there must be no lateness nor absence.

The marine railway at the shipyard is being extended in order that much larger vessels can be hauled out for repairing and painting.

In the saw mill of the shipwright department a large band-saw has been set up in place of the small one which has been in use there for a long time.

Greatest Year For Quincy Boys

The past week in the Boys' department of the Young Men's Christian Association has been a lively one. The gymnasium classes have been well attended and the interest in the different classes is running high. The orchestra met last week as usual and will meet again tonight. The extension clubs in South Quincy and Quincy Point are both progressing in fine shape and are doing great work for the boys of their communities.

Saturday afternoon a hare and hound chase was held for the boys and was well attended, twenty-five boys covering the four miles. This is to be made a weekly event, while the weather is open.

The Tau Sigma Kappa club meets Tuesday, Oct. 28. There will be Hallowe'en socials for several groups of boys this week, and a lively time is expected.

The membership is steadily increasing and more are looked for. Everything is on the move and this is indeed the greatest year ever for the boys of Quincy.

Systematic Playgrounds

It is probable during the next few months that there will be an agitation in Quincy for playgrounds. The city has parks and playgrounds, but has not developed them except for base ball. Playgrounds with instructors are becoming very popular in other cities. The following is from a recent issue of The Outlook:

The second annual Congress of the Playground Association of America, held in New York last week, like the first Congress in Chicago and the notable banquet of last March in honor of Mrs. Humphry Ward, has given the movement in behalf of neglected children and air-starved adult city-dwellers of America a notable forward impulse.

At the first morning conference Alderman Vaughan, of Toronto, Canada, testified to the incentive gained from last year's Congress, which has resulted already in large appropriations for playgrounds in his own and other Canadian cities. Every meeting thenceforward gave vivid evidence of the immediate response which progressive communities are giving to this altruistic and intelligent effort on the part of public-spirited citizens to supply an insistent and vital National need.

There are 907 cities in the United States that have a population of five thousand or more. Of these only ninety, or 10 per cent., conducted playgrounds prior to 1908. During this summer 177 cities have had playgrounds in use, and 118 others are planning their immediate establishment. In other words, the number of cities maintaining playgrounds has been nearly doubled, and one out of every seven of the remainder are planning to make a beginning in the near future.

The National Playground Association has made every effort to supply information and help to local organizations. Printed matter has been distributed at fifty-eight State and National conventions. Miniature models of playgrounds have been shown and exhibitions of lantern slides illustrative of playground activities and needs have been made. Personal letters to the number of 3,638 have been written, not including circulars. The report by the General Secretary, Dr. Henry S. Curtis, gave a vivid idea of the work of the Association.

In New York the Parks and Playground Association maintained during the summer seven playgrounds, eleven ball-fields, and a summer camp. The municipal playgrounds have been opened at night for the first time. One hundred and six playgrounds were conducted during the summer by the Board of Education.

Pittsburgh has adopted a playground plan calling for thirteen new recreation centers. Baltimore has formed an athletic league with the prospect of ample funds to establish recreation facilities. In Philadelphia $20,000 was raised on Tag Day to equip four new playgrounds.

In Washington the appropriation for playgrounds was lost in Congress. In spite of lack of proper funds, the attendance at existing playgrounds increased 50 per cent. this year. Cleveland, Milwaukee, Chicago, San Francisco, and many small cities have increased appropriations for fresh-air centers for children.

The movement has taken a strong hold in Canada—in Montreal, Quebec, Ottawa, Toronto, and Hamilton. Professor Hetherington and Professor Melendy have organized a movement for playgrounds in thirty-one cities of Missouri. In Massachusetts a law has been passed requiring every city of over ten thousand inhabitants to vote as to whether the city will maintain playgrounds.

Norfolk County And Vicinity

The first accident at the George E. Keith Company's shoe factory which is building at EAST WEYMOUTH, occured late Saturday afternoon. Lawrence W. French the well known pianist, was the victim, falling down hatchways three stories. He escaped luckily with only a scalp wound and a broken wrist. It is feared injury to his wrist may interfere with his piano playing.

Saturday night registration of voters closed in all towns. BROOKLINE has the largest number in the history of the town, 4750 in all. Since Sept. 1, 707 names have been added, and 120 of these were put on Saturday night.

Burglars entered the house of Warren T. Simpson at SOUTH WEYMOUTH Saturday evening while the family was out and took a gold watch, some silver spoons and a small sum of money. The burglars were evidently disturbed in their work, for a diamond ring was found on the floor, and some silver all wrapped up was left on the table.

A Prohibitionist rally was held Saturday afternoon in Fountain square, HINGHAM, about 100 listening to the speakers. Prof. Aaron S. Watkins of Ada, O., candidate for vice president and Jonathan S. Lewis, chairman of the Prohibition State committee were the chief speakers. Prof. Watkins said he thought Bryan would carry Ohio, Taft's own state.

Mr. and Mrs. Eugene H. Taylor of HYDE PARK celebrated their silver wedding anniversary Saturday evening. The couple have lived in Hyde Park only three years, coming from Lynn, but they are well known and popular. Mrs. Taylor was born in Weymouth.

The NORWOOD Board of Selectmen on Saturday exonerated Chief of Police Sackett from the charges brought against him by Officer William C. Breen. There were about 20 charges in all and it took many hours to bring them before the selectmen The chief said that his men refused to obey him, and that they worked in a combination against him.

FR. CAREY HOME.

Rev. Daniel C. Carey, C. S. P., a Quincy boy, returned home Saturday for a short visit, from Chicago, where he is stationed. Sunday was a busy day for Fr. Carey, for he celebrated the nine o'clock mass at St. John's and preached the sermon at the 10.30 mass. In the afternoon he officiated at the marriage of his brother Timothy J. Carey, the tax collector, and later baptized the son of his brother Thomas Carey, the mail carrier. Fr. Carey is one of the smartest of the younger mission fathers in the Paulist order, and a brilliant future as an orator is in store for him.

Tax Collector Takes a Bride

Timothy J. Carey, grand knight of Quincy council, Knights of Columbus, and tax collector of the city, was quietly married Sunday afternoon at St. John's parochial residence to Miss Mary McNally, a teacher in the Roger Wolcott school of Boston, and a former teacher at the Lincoln school in Quincy.

Hon. William T. Shea was the best man, and the bride was attended by Miss Mary Colligan. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Daniel C. Carey, C. S. P., a brother of the groom.

Owing to a recent death in the family of the bride, the ceremony was attended only by the immediate families.

Mr. and Mrs. Carey left immediately after the ceremony for a brief trip. Upon their return they will reside at 1564 Hancock street.

Miss White Bride Of Bryon C. Miller

At the home of Mr. and Mrs. Nelson M. Spencer, 22 Bennington street on Saturday evening was solemnized one of the prettiest weddings of the fall season, the bride being Mrs. Spencer's sister Miss Florence E. White and the groom Mr. Byron Carter Miller, son of Mr. and Mrs. John L. Miller of Franklin street, Penns hill.

The ceremony was performed at half past seven by Rev. William E. Gardner of Cambridge, former rector of Christ church, Quincy. In the bridal party were the groom and his best man Mr. Walter Field of Wollaston; the ushers Mr. Henry Miller, brother of the groom and Mr. John McGregor; the maid of honor, Miss Myra Lester, and the bride and her brother-in-law Mr. Spencer, who gave her in marriage. Miss Ruth Gardner played the wedding march from Lohengrin.

Green and white was the color scheme for decoration, potted palms and white pine boughs being used. The same colors were used in the gowns, the bride wearing a dress of white Persian lawn, hand embroidered with white satin empire sash. The veil was caught with white satin rosettes and she carried a shower bouquet of lilies-of-the-valley. The maid of honor also wore a white embroidered Persian lawn with white satin empire sash and carried a bouquet of white carnations and maidenhair ferns.

As souvenirs of the happy occasion the bride presented her maid of honor with a gold chain and locket, and the pianist a spangled fan. The groom gave gold cuff links to his best man and scarf pins to the ushers.

After an informal reception Mr. and Mrs. Miller left for a trip to New York and up the Hudson river. They will be at home to their friends after December first at 211 Franklin street.

DIBONA—SINKANEN.

There was a pretty wedding at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Luigi DiBona of 8 Hayden street, West Quincy, Saturday evening, when their son Mr. Gerardo DiBona and Miss Suoma Sinkanen, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Hustaa Sinkanen of 28 Town Hill street, were joined in wedlock by William M. Marden, Esq., in the presence of a large gathering of the family connections and friends.

The bridegroom who is a native of Italy, holds an important position in the Norwood Press at Norwood. The bride was born in Finland, and is well educated, and has been quite prominent as a temperance lecturer among her own people.

As neither of the happy couple is versed in the native language of the other, they converse in a language foreign to both, the English language.

They will make their home at 8 Hayden street.

The auspicious event was celebrated with true Italian hospitality.

BIRTHDAY PARTY.

A birthday party was given to W. H. Redding at his home 756 Washington street, Quincy Point, Friday evening, Oct. 23. Among the many games played were whist for which three prizes were given, two first and one booby prize. Miss E. Auld and Mr. Melville won the first prizes, a set of gold baby pins, and a gold scarf pin; Mr. Holbrook winning the booby prize of a large rag doll. After the games refreshments were served by Miss Redding, the centre-piece being a large birthday cake inside of which was a wedding ring, a dime and a button, the ring was found by Miss Sherburne. Mr. Holbrook and Mr. Chisholm rendered several solos.

An enjoyable evening was spent by Miss H. Lincoln, Miss E. Hayden, Miss E. Small, Miss H. Sherburne, Miss M. Means, Miss M. R. Skinner, Miss E. Auld, W. Auld, A. Thayer, T. Chisholm, W. Thayer, F. Holbrook, C. McNeil, T. Skinner, W. Mead and D. Melville.

Brief Locals Of a Busy City

Welcome rain!

Today is the first rainy day for nearly two months.

The next meeting of the City Council will be held Monday, Nov. 2, the night before the election.

Two army tug boats will be launched at the shipyard on Wednesday at 12.45 P. M.

A letter of special interest to shipyard men will appear in the Daily Ledger tomorrow.

A meeting of the Finance Committee of the City Council has been called for Thursday evening.

The tuberculosis exhibit under the auspices of the Quincy Women's club, opens at City Hall, Thursday afternoon.

The time for filing nomination papers for candidates to be voted for at the municipal caucuses closes Thursday.

A crowd of several hundred children attended the reception given by the trained dogs at the Scenic theatre Saturday afternoon.

Commissioner Bainbridge has several gangs of men at work rushing street resurfacing provided for in recent orders passed by the City Council.

Miss Florence Peck of Boston gave a dinner Wednesday evening in honor of Mrs. George Hillman Eggleton who is visiting Mrs. I. Cameron of Quincy street.

No definite action was taken Saturday night by the committee of the Quincy Yacht club on the one design class.. Plans were submitted however and discussed at length.

The rain promised for Saturday night and Sunday did not arrive. There were a few sprinkles late Saturday afternoon and it looked threatening all day Sunday. But the rain came not.

The adjourned hearing on the abolition of grade crossings in Quincy is scheduled for Saturday, Nov. 7. There have been several adjournments of these hearings, and it is hoped that they will now go on.

A gang of men are at work trimming the trees along the public streets in a systematic manner. The expense is to be paid by the Electric Light, Telephone and Street Railway companies. Several improvements are noted.

CAMPAIGN'S CLOSING WEEK

Real Whirlwind Finish Is Planned by Leading Parties

GREAT FIGHT IN NEW YORK

Taft, Bryan and Most Noted Spellbinders Assigned to Participate In Battle For Votes--Members of the President's Cabinet Have Work Laid Out For Them--How the Candidates View the Situation

New York, Oct. 26.—The political campaign is to have a real whirlwind finish. From the highest to the lowest, all the spellbinders of all the parties will be out in force during the week and wavering voters will be urged by eloquent advocates of the several causes to cast their ballots "right."

In practically every state of the Union rallies and mass meetings almost without number have been arranged, but it is in New York, with its large number of electoral votes at stake, that the real battle will be waged. There practically all the leading candidates will concentrate their efforts, assisted by a large number of the country's most forceful and resourceful campaigners.

Ohio and Indiana will also be given considerable attention. Among the speakers who will urge the voters of Ohio to support Mr. Taft will be Secretaries Root and Garfield and Postmaster General Meyer, and the Republican presidential candidate himself will deliver two formal addresses at Cleveland and Youngstown. Vice President Fairbanks will head the Republican forces in Indiana.

William J. Bryan, after four days in New York state, will close his long, hard campaign by a series of speeches in Ohio, Illinois and Indiana.

Both Taft and Bryan are in this city. All the forces the Democratic national committee can summon will be brought to bear to secure the electoral vote of New York state for Bryan. Led by the presidential candidate himself, who will speak four days in this state, an army of speakers will be sent into every county and town to spread the doctrine and appeal for votes for the ticket.

The Democratic campaign in the state, it is planned by the party managers, will receive its impetus from the meetings here tonight at Madison Square Garden and in Brooklyn Tuesday. Besides these meetings, many others at which Bryan will speak have been arranged in different parts of the city. Tammany Hall has planned to make the Madison Square meeting the greatest demonstration given the candidate in this campaign.

The Republican wind-up of the campaign in New York city calls for twenty-two mass meetings to be addressed by speakers of national reputation, a parade of the Republican clubs of Greater New York and a big parade of the Business Men's Republican association. The big Republican event of the week will be the Madison Square Garden meeting on Wednesday night, at which Taft and Governor Hughes will be the principal speakers.

Mr. Taft reached New York last night from Gary, Ind., where he closed the campaign in that state Saturday night. The eighteen-hour journey afforded the candidate complete rest from talking and he took advantage of the opportunity to the fullest extent. Upon arriving he said he felt in first-class physical condition, although somewhat hoarse.

After the election is over Taft is planning a brief rest. "I have campaigned in twenty-one states," he said. "I expect to carry all of them, with the exception of those south of Mason and Dixon's line and possibly Maryland and Missouri. The situation looks better than at any previous time, and I shall enter upon the last lap of the campaign with a great deal of interest and enthusiasm."

Mr. Taft talked freely to various callers, in all cases expressng confidence in the outcome of the campaign. Asked to particularize as to the results in various states, Ohio, for instance, Taft said he hadn't a doubt but that Ohio would be strongly for him. "If I couldn't carry my own state, I wouldn't deserve to be running for president," he said.

"If Massachusetts should go Democratic, then Ohio might," Taft added, "but I doubt it. Only such a situation as that, with Republican states reversing their vote, could make me believe Ohio is not safely in the Republican column."

Mr. Bryan declared last night that, with the exception of being very tired, he was feeling well. "I am finishing the campaign better than I ever have," said Bryan. "My voice has stood the strain well and I don't think that I have lost weight."

"Where have the Democratic gains been this year in comparison with other years?" the candidate was asked.

"This year the Democrats have gained in every state. Heretofore we have made gains in some states and have lost in other states. This year there are gains throughout the whole country and gains in every occupation. There are gains among the farmers, these gains being very marked. There are gains among business men, professional men and especially among college men. That is the interesting point in this campaign, as compared with the other campaigns that I have had anything to do with."

"What is the reason for this gain?"

"Only one," replied Bryan. "I think that it is that the Republican party, in power for twelve years, has failed to meet the responsibility."

Pleas For Prohibition Votes

Boston, Oct. 26.—Two large and enthusiastic gatherings were addressed by Eugene W. Chafin and Aaron S. Watkins in Boston yesterday. A meeting was held in People's temple and later a gathering was addressed on Boston common. The speakers at both meetings advocated the abolishment of liquor and the saloon as the only solution of the labor problem.

"There is no Republican or Democratic party at the present time," declared Chafin. "It is a Bryan and Roosevelt party. The loser in this unusually strenuous campaign will be forever down and out."

Mr. Chafin disposed of the two leading candidates in the following statement: "Mr. Bryan is an elegant gentleman and a man of great ideas, but he lacks executive ability. Mr. Taft, on the other hand, possesses that executive ability, but he absolutely has no ideas."

The speaker declared that the Prohibition party would poll a larger vote than ever before.

"Modern Abraham Lincoln"

Springfield, Ills., Oct. 26.—Standing by the sarcophagus of Abraham Lincoln, surrounded by a group of Socialist candidates for various offices, Eugene V. Debs yesterday delivered an eulogy of Lincoln. When introduced to a large audience at the courthouse yesterday afternoon, Debs was termed "The Abraham Lincoln of modern times." Debs declared: "Slave power, which loathed and despised Lincoln, was no more heartless than the power of capitalism which today holds the workingmen of the nation in bondage."

Kern Again on the Stump

Indianapolis, Oct. 26.—A marked improvement in the condition of John W. Kern, Jr., is noted and this will enable his father, Democratic nominee for vice president, to continue his speechmaking. Kern will keep in close touch with his home during his absence. Kern is scheduled to tour Indiana in a special train, leaving Indianapolis early this morning and winding up Saturday night after a week's speechmaking.

Denial From Elkin

Pittsburg, Oct. 26.—Justice John P. Elkin of the Pennsylvania supreme court, whose name was introduced by William R. Hearst in the alleged Standard Oil correspondence read by the editor at a meeting in New York, denies that he ever had received money for improper purposes from John D. Archbold or ever had attempted to influence legislation in behalf of the Standard Oil company.

Great Week For Catholics

Boston, Oct. 26.—This week will be one of intense interest to the Catholics of New England, a series of stately ceremonials having been arranged to mark the celebration of the centennary of the establishment of the Roman Catholic diocese of Boston, the formal observances terminating on Sunday next with a parade of Holy Name societies in which nearly 30,000 men are expected to participate. The celebration will begin on Wednesday with solemn pontifical mass in the Cathedral of the Holy Cross.

Liberals' Strength Decreased

Montreal, Oct. 26.—A general election is being held today throughout the Dominion of Canada to choose a new parliament. At present the Liberal party, led by Sir Wilfrid Laurier, holds control of the Canadian government, as it has done for the past twelve years. The Liberals had a majority of sixty-six members in the last parliament. Their leaders say they will be satisfied with half that number in the new one. Laurier himself says he expects to have between thirty and forty of a majority.

Accidentally Killed Brother

Andover, Mass., Oct. 26.—Gerald Robinson of Methuen, 11 years old, was accidentally shot and killed by his brother, Charles, aged 13, while in the woods here. According to Charles, they were sitting on a stone wall cracking nuts when Charles saw a bird flying toward them and picked up his rifle to fire at it. In his haste the weapon was discharged prematurely and its bullet of 22 calibre entered his brother's head, through the nose. The wounded boy lived only a few minutes.

Servian Reserves Called Out

London, Oct. 26.—A dspatch from Belgrade says that the Servian government has called out all the first reserves and has ordered khaki for the troops, 300 Maxim guns and 400 military automobiles. According to this dispatch, King Peter has informed the Turkish minister that an alliance probably has been concluded between Servia and Montenegro, but that this in no way interfered with the friendship of these countries for Turkey.

Both Shot to Kill

New Orleans, Oct. 26.—Lon Seely, a cowboy belonging to a wild west show, is alleged to have ridden into a crowd of negroes at Gulfport, beating them over the heads with a revolver. Policeman Varnado started in pursuit of Seely and the two men were lost to view in a cloud of dust. Later their bodies were found, each bearing a single bullet wound and each man's revolver containing an empty shell.

DOG COMPLETES HIS WORK

First Found Skull and Then Skeleton of a Human Body

Exeter, N. H., Oct. 26.—The keen-scented shepherd dog which last Wednesday brought home to his master, Albert McBirnie, the bleached bones of a human skull, yesterday led the way to the scene of his find and revealed the crumbling form of an aged man's skeleton in the woods off the Epping road, a mile or more from the town.

The bones of the skeleton were in order, the man having apparently died while lying on his back. The bones were bleached, as if having been exposed to the elements for several years. Tatters of coarse clothing were in evidence, parts of a leathern pocketbook and clothes and collar buttons, while a pile of hair laid where the skull had been pulled away by the dog. The body was some 100 yards from a wood road on the edge of a swamp.

While the identity of the body is not positively known, it is believed by many to be that of John O. Wiggin of Stratham, aged 75 years, who disappeared at Christmas time six or seven years ago, after having started to walk from Manchester to Greenland. He would have passed over the highway near the scene and might have wandered into the wood road on the cold winter's night and, becoming confused and overcome by the inclement weather, have fallen and died where the skeleton was found.

Wiggin taught school several years in Boston as a young man and later being proprietor of a hotel in Newfields. He has a son in Stratham, who, upon being notified of the find, declared that the description of the body fitted his father perfectly.

COUNTY FAIRS ARE DEGENERATING

Ancient Institution Is Denounced by College President

Brunswick, Me., Oct. 26.—"The most prevalent vice of the American people is to get something for nothing." Such was the introduction to a bitter arraignment of county fairs and the numerous gambling devices which they foster, made by President Hyde of Bowdoin college before the student body last night.

That the state of Maine receives thousands of dollars a year of revenue from all over the country for organizing corporations under laws that were drafted in the interests of thieves to make wholesale stealing easy was also charged by him.

While many of the sideshows were clean exhibitions, he declared, a majority of them were given over to improper exhibitions and transparent frauds, which appealed to the gambler's desire to get something for nothing.

President Hyde particularly scored the lottery machines, in a majority of which a man had a scant eight chances out of forty of winning some insignificant prize. Two persons who made a study of these devices reported that they saw a 15-year-old boy lose $1.50 in two minutes.

What he termed the greatest fake of all was the so-called "medicine man," who picked out old men, mostly farmers, for his victims. "I could not help contrasting these conditions," said Hyde, "with the cattle market in Switzerland. There there was nothing indecent, nothing dishonest, no fakirs, no frauds.

"Now the Maine farmer is far above the Swiss peasant in intelligence and character. Why, then, do they allow themselves and their families to be insulted by the presence of these low fakirs at their at their agricultural exhibitions?

"The first principle of an honest man, whether farmer, merchant, lawyer or financier, should be to have nothing to do with any enterprise which is not honestly organized and economically and efficiently administered."

Out of Work and Despondent

Worcester, Mass., Oct. 26.—The body of Thomas F. Drohan of this city was found in Lake Quinsigamond. There were two ten-pound weights in the pockets of his clothing. Drohan was 25 years old and had been employed as a bartender until the no-license regulation went into effect on May 1. Since then he had been out of work and was despondent.

Begged Policeman to Shoot Him

Fall River, Mass., Oct. 26.—Howard Dring, aged 10, who was run over by a street car Saturday night and pleaded with a policeman to shoot him to end his terrible suffering, died late yesterday as the result of his injuries.

NO DANGER OF WATER FAMINE

New England Cities and Towns Are Amply Provided For

DROUTH IS UNPRECEDENTED

Practically Unbroken Since Early Spring, Resulting In Shrunken Rivers, Dry Brooks, Low Wells and Forest Fires--Farmers the Worst Sufferers, Many Being Compelled to Haul Water Many Miles

Boston, Oct. 26.—In face of the fact that the drouth in New England has been unprecedented, according to all meteorological records in this section, all of the cities and towns that have a municipal system of water supply are in no danger of a water famine, with the single exception of St. Albans, in the extreme northwestern corner of Vermont, although in a few other places the supply is limited.

With the exception of a few days of rainfall in July, at a time when the crops sorely needed the freshening influence of a copious downpour, the drouth has been practically unbroken since the early spring. There have been a few days upon which some rain has fallen, but at no time could the downpour be considered heavy or protracted.

Under such conditions of exceeding dryness the rivers have shrunk within their banks, brooks have dried up, wells have been lowered and forest fires have raged almost unchecked. Industrial establishments dependant on rivers and streams for the power to move their machinery have been forced to close, and it was popularly supposed that all New England was on the verge of a water famine.

Investigation has shown, however, that such is not the case, and that, although many of the rivers are too low to furnish power for manufacturing purposes, there is a bountiful supply for those places which have municipal water systems.

Boston and seven other cities within a radius of a few miles receive their water from the Metropolitan water system's immense Wachusetts reservoir. It is stated that the reservoir at the present time contains 54,000,000,000 gallons of water, a supply sufficient for the entire district for nine months to come.

The cities, outside of Boston, receiving their water from this source, are Chelsea, Everett, Malden, Melrose, Medford, Somerville and Quincy. Including Boston the population of the cities served by the Metropolitan water commission is 769,412. Cambridge and Newton, although within the so-called Metropolitan district, each has its own private water supply, the former from Fresh pond, and the last named from driven wells along the Charles river. In both cities the water supply is said to be inexhaustible.

Adding the population of Cambridge and Newton to the cities served by the Metropolitan water commission gives a total of nearly 1,000,000 persons within ten miles of the state house who need not have the slightest fear of water famine.

Throughout the rest of Massachusetts conditions are about the same. Brooks may have gone dry and rivers may be low, but the lakes and ponds from which most of the water is taken still contain enough of that most necessary commodity to last for months or even years.

To the south of Massachusetts the Rhode Island cities all report that they are in no danger of famine. Pawtuxet river, which furnishes the water for Providence, has not been unusually low during the present drouth, and the supply in the reservoirs is sufficient for several months. Woonsocket can go without rain for another year before her inhabitants begin to suffer from thirst, while Pawtucket has plenty of water.

In New Hampshire no anxiety is expressed over the situation. Nashua derives its water supply from springs which have never yet failed and which show no indication of failing now. Manchester's water comes from Lake Massabesic, which now contains enough water to meet all demands for many months to come. Concord gets its water from Penacook lake, where a fair supply is reported to be on hand.

With the exception of St. Albans, the Vermont cities are all in good shape. At St. Albans, however, some of the larger industrial establishments were forced for a time to suspend operations owing to the shortage of water. Practically all have resumed, but to ensure an inexhaustible supply pipes are now being laid overland to Lake Champlain, from which it is planned to pump the city's supply.

Maine, with its thousands of lakes, ponds, rivers and streams, is safe so far as the cities and towns which have public water systems are concerned. The rural residents, however, are not so fortunate. In many country towns, where wells are depended upon, the farmers are obliged to haul their water, in some cases the haul being for many miles.

Lady Betty Across the Water

By C. N. & A. M. WILLIAMSON

Copyright, 1906, by McClure, Phillips & Co.

SYNOPSIS.

CHAPTER I—The story is told in the first person by Lady Betty Bulkeley, the pretty young sister of the Duke of Stanforth. She is to visit America in care of Mrs. Stuyvesant-Knox (Mrs. Ess Kay,) a leader of American society, and the latter's cousin, Miss Sally Woodburn, in order that her elder sister Victoria's prospective fiance, Sir Gilbert Mantell, may not be attracted by her.

II—On board ship Betty is attracted by a young American steerage passenger, who saves a child from drowning. Mrs. Ess Kay, who is very "exclusive," objects to Betty's interest in the young man. Betty also meets Tom Doremus, cousin of Mrs. Vander Windt, of New York society.

III—Lady Betty gets her first impression of America. On the dock she is rescued from reporters by the steerage hero, who tells her he is Jim Brett, employed at the Manhattan club, New York. In Mrs. Ess Kay's splendid New York home Betty meets Lieutenant Parker brother of the hostess, who is to take them to visit West Point.

IV—Vivace, a beautiful and expensive dog, is sent to Betty. Mrs. Ess Kay does not know who the donor is, and Betty does not tell her that it is Brett. Lieutenant Parker, whom Betty does not like, makes love to her.

V—Lady Betty has a good time at West Point despite Parker's proposal, which she rejects.

VI—In a walk in Central park Sally tells Betty her love story (she had been seperated years before from the poor man she loved by her family, the man becoming a monk) and advises Betty to marry only when she is sure of her love. They meet Brett.

VII—Betty is introduced to Mrs. Harvey Richmount Taylour, a typical young society woman.

"Oh, it was only a pretty smart trick of my friend, Mrs. Pitchley. She was a rich young widow from the west with millions and very pretty and lively, so some of the old cats snubbed her and tried to keep her out of New York society when I was introducing her around. But she got her foot in at last, so tight they couldn't help themselves, for the Van Tortens took her up and she was made. So what did she do but give a big lunch, inviting all the women who had been the meanest to her, and not another soul. The whole table decoration consisted of cats, vases made of cats, flower arrangements shaped like cats, and a little gold cat with emerald eyes for each woman to take away with her, so she wouldn't forget the lunch in a hurry. And would you believe it, not one of them saw the joke until Smart Sayings got hold of it and published an account of the function next week."

"What did the women do?" I asked.

"Nothing but feel cattier than before. She's richer than ever now, for she's married a man worth twenty millions, and the first thing he did was to give orders to Celeste, her dressmaker, to turn out two new dresses for his wife every week of the year without fail, not one of them to cost less than $250. It was such a strain on Celeste, thinking of new ideas, that she had to give it up after the first year, though it nearly broke her heart."

"I should have thought it would be a strain having the dresses to wear," said I. "Fancy getting passionately attached to one frock, but never being able to wear it more than once or twice on account of your duty to the new ones always coming toward you in a long, relentless procession, down the years. I should hate it."

"I wouldn't," said Mrs. Taylour. "I can't have too many new things, and I always change each scrap of furniture and decoration in my own rooms every year so that Mr. Taylour won't get tired of them. He's such a nervous man. But you'll meet Cora Pitchley at Newport. Her house is there. She's a type of an American woman, just as bright as she can be. Her second husband was a wholesale dry goods man years ago, but most people have forgotten that, now he's worth his millions, and he's got the most gorgeous place, quite like one of your old castles. The worst of it is his mother lives with them, and when she was showing the bride—Cora—over the house (which was decorated pretty weirdly for the first wife), the old lady kept explaining: 'This is the Louise Seize room; this is the Queen Anne room.' Cora just looked at the things and said, 'What makes you think so?' Smart, wasn't it? But Cora's changed everything inside the house now. She loves change. She's even changed her birthday, so as to have it in leap year; and as for her mind, she changes it entirely at least six times a day; says that's why women have nicer minds than men; they change them oftener. But I've gossiped enough about a person you don't know, Lady Betty. Let's talk about England. I run over to Paris for a month or two most years, but I've only been twice to England. I did all the sights, though; didn't miss anything. I gave four days to London alone. Candidly, I don't think your women dress nearly as well as we do, or hold themselves as well, but perhaps you're more feminine looking, taking you all in all. I don't mean anything personal of course. But I do think your men are lovely. I met a perfectly charming member of parliament, and he invited me to tea on the terrace. Such strawberries and cream! But I'm afraid I hurt his feelings. I said I couldn't help thinking 'house of commons' a most insulting name, and if we called our senate anything like that we couldn't get an American man who respected himself to go into it. But English people are so queer. They don't seem to mind admitting that there is a class above theirs."

"Betty doesn't need to know anything about that," said Mrs. Ess Kay. "She is on the highest pinnacle."

"Oh, dear, no," said I. "There are the royalties."

"Don't you think you are just as good?" asked Mrs. Taylour.

"I never thought about it in that way," I answered stupidly. For, of course, I hadn't.

"Surely you don't bob to them?"

"Indeed we do," I protested.

"Well, then; I wouldn't," said Mrs. Taylour firmly. "I'd have my head cut off first, especially before I'd curtsey to a man."

Quite a color flew into her face as she asserted her independence, and Mrs. Ess Kay must have seen that the invalid was getting excited, for she rose quickly to go.

"Come, Betty," said she, and I came.

The lift plunged us down through the inner workings of the skeleton. I had the sensation that it was dropping away from under my feet and that as I dangled above it, like a wabbly little balloon, my head had been left behind somewhere near the top. But I didn't leave my heart behind in Mrs. Taylour's flat.

Quincy Locals Briefly Told

A parish meeting will be held at Christ church on Thursday evening relative to calling a rector.

The Whatsoever Circle of King's Daughters meets this evening at 7.45 with Mrs. Amos Leavitt, 67 Lincoln avenue.

Papers are being circulated nominating ex-Councilman Herbert J. Polk of Wollaston for School Committee at large.

The date for the launching of the battleship North Dakota, the American Dreadnaught, is Tuesday, Nov. 10, at 12 noon. It should be a gala day for Quincy.

The lifeless body of a young man supposed to be Thomas S. Flint of South Braintree was found Saturday on the New York Central tracks in Amsterdam N. Y. Both legs were cut off.

The third degree will be worked on a number of candidates for Mt. Wollaston and John Hancock Odd Fellow lodges at Neponset lodge tonight with Arthur W. Priest as degree master.

On Wednesday evening Rev. Chauncey J. Hawkins, pastor of the Central church, Jamica Plain, will speak at the Park and Downs church on "The Relation of Mind to Health and Happiness."

Club women should note that the lecture by Prof. Edward Howard Griggs in the program of the Quincy Women's club is to be held at the club house on Wednesday afternoon at half past two instead of on the regular meeting day.

"The Making of Manly Boys" was the subject of Mr. A. E. Winship, editor of the Journal of Education at the Park and Downs church Sunday evening. Mr. Winship spoke at length of the successful methods which are being used at Toledo and other places for the training of boys.

Mr. Henry G. Saunderson spoke on the subject of "Our Immediate Duty" at the meeting of the Young People's Religious union at the Wollaston Unitarian vestry Sunday evening. Rev. Carl G. Horst of West Upton also said a few words. The meeting was in charge of Edward R. Hall and Mrs. F. A. Page sang.

At the meeting of the Ladies' Benevolent society of the Atlantic Memorial church last week the following officers were elected: president, Mrs. Harry W. Read; vice president, Mrs. D. Chase Pope; secretary, Mrs. Frederick J. Peirce; treasurer, Mrs. Charles E. Cherrington. The society is preparing for a sale to be held early in December.

Miss Corlew opened at Brasee hall with the largest dancing class that has been formed in Wollaston in many years, her pupils numbering 47, from 5 to 12 years of age. On Saturday afternoon it is a most pleasing sight to see the little ones, daintily dressed, dancing to the delightful music furnished by Mrs. Pearsall of Brookline. Miss Corlew is a most excellent teacher, widely known, and deserves the success she has met.

TRUE FRIENDS OF LABOR

President Roosevelt Thus Describes Himself and Taft

LETTER TO RAILROAD WORKER

Says Wageworkers Never Had a Better Friend Than Republican Candidate and That Period of Industrial Chaos and Bad Business Times Will Ensue Should He Be Defeated --About Supreme Court Justices

Washington, Oct. 26.—Another labor letter emanated from the White House yesterday. President Roosevelt issued a lengthy reply to a note of inquiry addressed to him by P. H. Grace, a member of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen.

The president again urges workingmen to vote for Mr. Taft, and his letter is largely a review of Taft's decisions upon questions of injunction, injuries to workingmen and other matters of interest to labor.

A summary is also given of the work being done by the federal government in sociological studies with a view to the amelioration of industrial conditons, especially in the larger cities. Some of President Roosevelt's advice to workingmen follows:

"I earnestly advise all workingmen, but above all as American citizens concerned in the honor and the prosperity of this great free republic, to support Mr. Taft for president."

"Throughout my whole term as president, now in its eighth year, I have devoted myself with special interest to the questions affecting labor."

"I do not believe the wageworkers of this country have ever had a better friend in the White House than Mr. Taft will prove to be."

"The president now to be chosen will probably himself choose a majority of the justices of the supreme court during the next four years. It would be a dreadful calamity to have these justives chosen by a man of less than Mr. Taft's high purpose."

"If Mr. Bryan were elected I have little doubt that the ensuing industrial chaos, necessitating great reduction of wages ,and widespread non-employment, would be beyond the reach of such action as that which averted threatened disaster last spring."

"Mr. Taft's election should be advocated by all who believe in making a far-reaching effort toward the betterment of our scheme of social and industrial life."

"If Mr. Taft is not elected, a period of industrial chaos and business bad times will ensue in which the workingmen will suffer far more than any other class."

Gompers Replies to Roosevelt

Washington, Oct. 26.—Replying to President Roosevelt's letter to Senator Knox in reference to the application of the writ of injunction in labor disputes, Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor, vigorously arraigns the president for what he terms "a change of position of at least apparent friendship to bitter indefensible antagonism."

"The fact of the matter is," Mr. Gompers declares, "that President Roosevelt, having made Injunction Judge Taft the candidate of the Republican party for president, and seeing that the 'labor vote' which so often has been corraled, diverted and perverted by the politicians, is now aroused and determined to deliver its own vote; that the toilers will not be cajoled, deceived or browbeaten, has become desperate and angry, and in his anger, by the worst exhibition of demagogism, tries to instill into the employers and business men the fear that their property and business are in danger if a 'square deal,' implied by equality before the law and human freedom, are accorded to the workers with all other citizens. It is an exhibition of impotent rage and disappointment, and an awful descent from the dignity of the high office of the President of the United States. No one but himself will be deceived as to the purpose of Mr. Roosevelt.

"The workers and liberty-loving citizens are aroused as never before since '61. The 'battle cry for freedom' is again taken up. Then it was for the Union and the abolition of black slavery; today it is for the Union, equal rights, and freedom for all."

Came In Contact With Bridge

Farnumsville, Mass., Oct. 26.—While riding on the top of a freight train, Francis Gallagher, aged 17, and Ambrose Cooney, aged 24, both of Worcester, were struck by an overhead bridge near here and were thrown from the train. Gallagher's skull was fractured and he soon died. Cooney escaped with a scalp wound.

Kramer Lowers Own Record

Newark, N. J., Oct. 26.—Frank L. Kramer, champion bicycle rider, broke his own world's record for twenty-five miles, unpaced, in competition at the Valsburg track, riding the distance in 37:26 3-5. Kramer rode against a field of experienced long-distance cyclists.

Cholera Increases

Manila, Oct. 26.—Seven new cases of cholera were reported in this city for the day ending Sunday night. The situation is not considered to be grave and the health department expresses no alarm over the increase.

Quincy Pleased Although Defeated

That Quincy High has one of the best teams around Boston, was shown Saturday, when the local eleven went to Malden and held the team of that school to 22 points. To be beaten 22-0, by a team that hasn't been defeated this year, by a team that beat Brighton High, 78-0, and Stoneham High 72-0, to be beaten by such a team is certainly no disgrace.

Without a doubt Malden has practically the best team in Greater Boston this year. The team is not exceedingly heavy but the players are fast as lightning, and once they get possession of the ball it is a task to stop them.

With Malden's great record staring them in the face, and crippled by the absence of Gore, the crack quarterback, and Clapp the speedy halfback, Quincy went to Malden, determined to make the Malden boys hustle. They gave Malden a big scare in the first half, for when the whistle blew at the end of the first fifteen minutes of play, Malden had scored but one touchdown and failed to kick the goal. At the same time, while preventing their opponents from piling up scores, Quincy threatened the Malden goal line several times, and only for a strong stand in the Malden line, would have scored.

Coach Cuddy got after his charges between the halves, and gave them a good talking to, with the result, that in the second half, Malden came back strong.

Malden evidently thought it would be an easy game, and it took them the first half to realize that it was something more than practice. The forward pass was in evidence again. That this play is a ground gainer, if worked right, was plainly shown. Two touchdowns were scored with the forward pass as the direct cause. Then another came on straight line plunging, which brought the score to 22. This was the extent of the scoring, and if Quincy had had Gore and Clapp in the game, it is more than probable that the local team would have had a few points to their credit.

Clarke, G. Miner, Letherman and Morgan played a fast game for the winners, and Nash, Bates and the Carlsons played well for Quincy.

Foot Ball And Other Sports

Quincy High school will play Melrose High at Merrymount park on Tuesday. Melrose was beaten Saturday 28-0 by Medford, a team which Quincy defeated early in the season. According to this dope, the game should go to Quincy, but Melrose is liable to take a brace and shatter all expectations.

The Old Colony Gentlemen's driving club of Weymouth held a matinee meet on Saturday at South Weymouth, and excellent racing weather, with a track in perfect condition made some good sport. Eight races were carded, but only five were started. Class C brought out the best time, Willie J. pacing the first heat in 1.10 and the quarter in 331 2s.

The handicap medal play, the 16 best qualifying for the handicap play for the directors' cup, was held at the Wollaston Golf club links on Saturday. A. H. Goodale had the best net, his score being 73.

The first weekly shoot of the season of the New England Kennel Club was held Saturday at Braintree. Dr. C. G. Weld beat Archibald Blanchard in a shoot-off which was necessary to decide a tie, and thus obtained a leg on the season cup.

—The Massachusetts Woman Suffrage association will hold its thirty-ninth annual meeting in Boston on Oct. 27 and 28. Mrs. Ethel Snowden, the wife of a member of parliament, a very charming woman, will speak on the evening of October 27 in Faneuil hall. On the afternoon of October 28 a reception will be given to Mrs. Julia Ward Howe at the association's headquarters at 6 Marlborough street. The other session will be devoted to business.

Disastrous For Shipyard Team

The Fall River Rovers showed their class on Saturday when they put it all over the Fore River soccer team, the score being 4-1.

The game was played at Fall River, and the long ride in the train undoubtedly tired the local boys to such an extent that they did not play with their usual speed and skill. However, this should not detract at all from the good work of the Rovers, for they are certainly fast and thoroughly schooled in the fine points of the game.

On the offensive the Quincy boys put up a fast exhibition, but the defence of the Rovers was so impenetratable that only once was the Fore River team able to get through. They carried the ball down the field in excellent fashion, but when they made a shot for the goal a Rover always was in the way and the ball started back up the field again.

On the other hand the shipyard defence was always in trouble, and when the Fall River kickers got the ball anywhere near the goal, the local team seemed unable to stop them from scoring.

The game was free from any unnecessary roughhouse tactics, and it is pleasing to note this in regard to the Fall River team. The Rovers as a rule play a rough game and on the occasion of their first appearance in Quincy, their dirty playing, at least that of one man in particular, was the cause of a free fight.

The game on Saturday was one of great importance to both teams, for if the Rovers won they would push Fore River farther down in the standing, while if the local team got away with the game, they would jump into the lead. But the Rovers won, and this game probably means the championship. For they are going at a fast clip now, and their present lead will be a hard one for the other teams to overcome.

Gauthier, Bagley and Greenwood excelled for Fall River, while D. McDonald and McGregor played their usual steady game for Fore River.

SUNDAY NIGHT SHOOTING.

There was considerable shooting Sunday night in the vicinity of Brackett street. Several pistol shots were fired about 10 o'clock, the bullets from some of the shots going across the canal and landing in Bent place. The police were notified and Officers Olson and Johnson responded. They found that a party of Italians had been holding a celebration but were unable to find out who had fired the shots.

It was reported to the BRAINTREE police Sunday evening that a twenty-round bout between two Quincy men had taken place that afternoon in an old shed near Five Corners. The bout which was witnessed by a crowd of sports was declared a draw at the end of the twentieth round.

The Observations In the Daily Walk

The foremen at the shopyard hold their anual smoker Thursday evening at Colonial hall.

A harvest supper is to be held at the Atlantic Memorial church on Wednesday evening.

Quincy council, Knights of Columbus, will hold a ladies' night Wednesday evening at Colonial hal.

Antonio Pohpeo, aged 22 years, residing at 41 Union street, was stabbed twice Sunday night during a mix-up at the corner of Union street and Newcomb place.

It is said that the street railway company has the material already for the curved track that is to connect its line on Quincy avenue with the tracks leading to the Fore River yards. As soon as the approval of the Railroad Commissioners is obtained it is said, work will be commenced. It will not require over three days to complete the job.

Charles Francis Adams, formerly of Quincy, addressed an audience of 3,000 in Richmond, Va., on Saturday evening, both Democrats and Republicans being present. Mr. Adams spoke more than an hour, and received great applause. He is an independent Democrat, but advocated the election of Taft as a step toward the solution of the race question. He showed how Virginia would benefit if it cast its electoral vote for Taft.

Escaped But Kept Promise

Louis M. Gay, who escaped from the lockup at South Weymouth on Sunday, appeared in court this morning as he promised he would. Gay was arrested Saturday night for drunkenness by Officer Michael Allen and locked up. On Sunday afternoon Gay became tired of his confinement and wrenching a leg from the bed in his cell dug a hole through the cell and made his escape.

After leaving the lockup he met a man in the street whom he requested to inform Officer Allen he would meet him in court Monday morning. Gay kept his promise and appeared at 9 o'clock. He pleaded guilty for drunkenness and was fined $15.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

MR. TAFT'S RELIGION.

The fact that Hon. W. H. Taft is a Unitarian in his religious belief and church membership is being made the basis of much attack. In the interest of fair play, the full facts should be stated.

It has been charged that Mr. Taft is not a christian. Without discussing the question, as to whether joining any church proves that a man is really a christian, it may be stated that the Unitarians are believers in the christian faith. In a national conference ,a common basis of belief was found in the statement that "We accept religion of Jesus, holding, in accordance with his teaching, that practical religion is summed up in love to God and love to man."

Unitarian belief has further been expressed in the five principles, adopted by practically all the churches, "We believe in the Fatherhood of God, the brotherhood of man, the leadership of Jesus, salvation by character ,the progress of mankind onward and upward forever."

There is the fullest acceptance of the principle of progresh in religion. It affirms a God of modern life, an enlarging revelation of His will and truth ,and an ever progressing faith, keeping pace with the advancement of human thought and evolution. Unitarianism simply insists upon having in relgion the same liberty that all Americans claim in all other realms of thought and action.

In being a Unitarian, Hon. William H. Taft is in excellent company. Many of the greatest men and women that this country has produced have been Unitarians.

There have already been four avowedly Unitarian presidents of this republic, Thomas Jefferson, John Adams, John Quincy Adams and Millard Fillmore. Jefferson wrote. "I trust there is not a young man now in the United States who will not die a Unitaian." Abraham Lincoln once defined his religious belief in exactly the same words as those adopted by the Unitarian national conference, while Washington's biographer declares that he was simply a deist in his religious belief.

Daniel Webster, Charles Sumner, John C. Calhoun, John A. Andrew and Senator George F. Hoar were Unitarians. It is an interesting fact that nine of the twenty-eight perosns included in the "American Statesmen Series," of Houghton, Mifflin & Co., were Unitarians.

Among Unitarian jurists of national renown were Joseph Story, Theophilus Parsons, Lemuel Shaw, Samuel F. Miller, and John Marshall. The reform of our Civil Service was largely due to Unitarian effort. Representative Jenckes ,of Rhode Island, who started it, Dr. James Freeman Clarke, Dr. Henry W. Bellows, George William Curtis, Dorman B. Eaton and Carl Schurz, who were leaders in the movement, were all Unitarians.

In literature, the poets Bryant, Longfellow, Lowell and Holmes, the historians Bancroft, Motley, Prescott, Parkman, Sparks, Palfrey and Hildreth, with many such writers as Emerson, Thoreau, Dickens, Hawthorne, Bayard Taylor, Bret Harte, Margaret Fuller and Helen Hunt Jackson were Unitarians.

Among other Unitarians might be mentioned Agassiz, Ricardo, Wedgewood, Horace Mann, and Sir Isaac Newton. Mazzini was a Unitarian theist. Louis Kossuth, of Hungary declared "The Unitarian faith is the only faith that has a future."

Among Unitarian women are to be found Susan B. Anthony, Mary A. Livermore, Frances Willard, Florence Nightingale, and Dorothy Dix. It is significant that of the forty names that have been chosen for inscription on the walls of the Temple of Fame in New York, sixteen are those of avowedly Unitarians.

Among living Unitarians are President Eliot, of Harvard, Edward Everett Hale, John D. Long, Carroll D. Wright, Julia Ward Howe and Gov. Curtis Guild.

It will therefore be seen that Mr. Taft has at least no occasion to feel ashamed of the religious fellowship of which he is a member.

FIREMEN'S WEEK AT SCENIC.

This is firemen's week at the Scenic, and many veteran and active firemen will be present every evening. Manager Donovan has secured many pictures of interest to local firemen which will be thrown upon the screen. These include pictures of the old W. M. French Hose Co. and their house that stood on Canal street. The old Niagara, the old engine house on School street with steamer, the old John W. Hall Hook and Ladder truck and steamer, the steamer and combination No. 1, and others.

In addition to these there are a number of pictures of veteran fire fighters. These include Chief Peter J. Williams, Frank C. Packard, Washington M. French, John Whitney Hall, Asa Pope, James E. Maxim, Galen Vinton Bowditch, and others.

In addition to this feature is Ira Kessner the celebrated tenor soloist, who sings "When the Fireman Fights the Foe." Complimentary tickets have been sent to all of the firemen of the city, and Friday evening will be known as firemen's night. Besides the special firemans feature there are the usual moving pictures, etc.

"THE BREAD LINE" APPEAL.

The Bowery Mission "Bread Line," at which 1,000 men who are out in the streets for the night are given a breakfast of hot coffee and rolls every morning at one o'clock, is one of the most pathetic sights in all the wide, wide world. Long before the hour of opening, these poor, starving men stand in a single line that sometimes extends for blocks in length, waiting for the coffee and rolls. The first of these Breakfasts is given on Thanksgiving morning, and the last on the following Easter morning. All together the Mission supplied, this year, over 312,000 meals and 57,072 lodgings to homeless men and boys.

It is for this grand, philanthropic work that we ask your kind and practical co-operation. The homeless, friendless, disheartened and despairing men and boys of the Bowery are not native New Yorkers, but men and boys who, until within a year, lived happily at the old homestead with father and mother, and perhaps wife. They are stranded here, and in despair appeal to the Old Bowery Mission, which, for over thirty years, has been to the unfortunate, as the rescue cities of old a haven of encouragement, rest and protection. Shall we turn them away? It rests with the good people of this country to decide this question, and may God graciously help you to decide it aright. JOHN C. EARL, Financial Secretary, 92 Bible House, New York City.

Bazaar Closes With a Dance

The inclemency of the weather last evening did not stop a large crowd from attending the closing feature of the second annual bazaar of Division 5, A. O. H., which was a dance in their hall on Franklin street. The fair opened Oct. 19, and every night last week large crowds were in attendance. All this helped to make the bazaar even a greater success than it was last year, the members being enthusiastic over the results.

Each evening a pleasing entertainment was given, including all the local star comedians and others. The bazaar closed Saturday night, but the real end of the fair came this week with a dance, Joyce's orchestra furnishing the music.

There were four tables during the week and all did excellent work. Those on the tables were:

Table 1,—Alice M. O'Brien, Mrs. William O'Brien, Margaret Noonan, Mrs. Patrick Egan and Louise Egan.

Table 2,—Mary Costello, Agnes Colligan, Annie Chisholm and walter Barry.

Table 3,—Daniel J. McGerrigle, James Doherty, David Warner, Daniel Mannix and Richard R. Gray.

Table 4,—Mrs. Edward McGinty, Mrs. Annie Dehan, Mrs. Samuel Dougherty, Mrs. Tanner, Mrs. Edward Powers, Mrs. Baxter, Mrs. Twoomey.

The general committee in charge of the bazaar consisted of M. J. Barrett, president; P. J. Ferguson, vice president; William T. Warner, secretary; and the following assistants: Michael Mahar, John J. Byron, D. M. Warner, James Doherty, Daniel Mannix, Michael Hartrey, Daniel Shea, Walter Barry, James Lynch, P. J. Falvey and Patrick Crimmins.

The bazaar was held to raise funds to clear the debt on the new hall built a little over a year ago. The affair was a grand success, and will be an annual thing until the hall is free from debt and on a firm basis.

Ralph W. Austin, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Fred W. Austin of Chestnut street, leaves Wednesday night for Annapolis, the enter the Wilmer preparatory school. He will enter the Naval Academy in 1910. Foster Bumpus, the son of Judge Bumpus is at the same school.

SHIPYARD EXTENSION

Chubbuck Street Line the Only One Satisfactory To the People

Editors of Daily Ledger:

The conflict between the rights of the people and the interests of railway and railroad corporations that exist only by the will of the people ought not to and will not terminate immediately. With permission of the Quincy Daily Ledger, I propose to put the case of the street railway travelling public and more especially of the employees of the Fore River Shipbuilding Company on record somewhat more distinctly than has been done heretofore.

Why do I do this? To be sure I am a candidate for councilman from Ward Two this fall on the Republican ticket and as a great many of our voters have asked both myself and my friends how I stand on the question for the improvement of our street railway service, I take this opportunity of placing myself on record as being pledged to the interests of the people for the betterment of the service, which the railroad and railway corporations deem proper to hand out to the people.

The people who through their representatives gave these corporations the right to exist have rights as well as the corporations, or are entitled to and ought to have them, as good and as valid as those of the corporations. The rights which the railroad and railway corporations enjoy and which they have abused are the people's rights. These rights still belong to the people and if they are abused as is unquestionably a fact, then the encrouchment, unlawful intrusion of the railroad and railway corporations should be driven back by the concentrated remonstrance of the people and their leaders.

As regards the much talked of extension of the street railway car line from Washington street to the works of the Fore River Shipbuilding Co., via Chubbuck Street and Des Moines road, it is a well known fact that many months ago a franchise was given by the people to the Old Colony Street Railway Co., to build and operate this extension and up to the present time absolutely nothing has been done toward its construction. The defense set up by the street railway company for not having started this work is that Howard street is not wide enough at present to run a car line over to bring the workmen right up to the Fore River gates.

Right here I want to say, that although it is an excuse, it is a defense conspicuous not only for its weakness, but for its absurdity. No one and especially those most interested (the Fore River workmen) want this line to continue up Howard street. It is not only enough, but far better that this car line extension from Washington street be built and run only along Chubbuck street and Des Moines road to the end of same near the Fore River plant and then stop, than to continue up Howard street to the Fore River gates or even past that point.

If the cars come up Howard street and stop in front of the aforesaid gates of the Fore Fiver company it will cause great confusion to men forming in their proper lines which is absolutely necessary in entering the shipyard. This is a large plant employing a great many men and there must be some system of entering and leaving the works. This system which I know is a good one would be demoralized if the street railway company ran their cars right up to the very gates leading into the yard.

It is a fact and true that those most interested do not want the cars to come onto Howard street at all, simply over Chubbuck street, along Des Moines road and then stop. If this be done everyone concerned will be satisfied, not only the Fore River workmen and the Fore River company, but the people of Quincy as a whole. This work should be done and at once, then later if the street railway company desires to put in a connecting link to its line on Quincy avenue it could be done at very little further expense.

The right to do this has been granted to the street railway company. Why don't they get busy and start the work? To be sure another right has been granted them to put in an extension on Quincy avenue, but this will not fill the bill. It is not what is wanted and every man employed at the works of the Fore River Shipbuilding Company knows it, but conditions are so bad that it is better to take what they can get than to take nothing.

All sorts of pressure has been brought to have the Old Colony company put in this piece of car line, but all to no avail up to the present time. The officials of the Fore River Shipbuilding Co., Mr. Bowles, Mr. Smith, and Mr. Sedgwick have asked, pleaded for and demanded some relief from the street railway and there has been petitions from the people but nothing has been done.

It cannot be set up by the street railway company that the outfit is not on a paying basis. From the annual return of the Old Colony Street Railway Company to the Railroad Commissioners for the year ending September 30, 1907, it appears that the company declared a 4 per cent. dividend on $7,712,200 or $308,488, and had a surplus of $95,782 for the year, an increase in the surplus over the year before of $30,846. The gross earnings of the company from operation were $2,781,955; operating expenses were $1,787,600, leaving $994,-355 as net earnings from operation.

The following extracts appeared in the Quincy Daily Ledger of last year and were part of the proceedings of a Council meeting at City Hall: "The Mayor forwarded a communication received from the chairman of the Railroad Commissioners relative to complaints of street car service in Quincy. The chairman states: "The heating and ventilation of street cars has been the subject of a general inquiry upon which official report will soon be made. There has been much and well grounded dissatisfaction in Quincy with the running time of cars. At the hearing it became quite evident that the one remedy would be construction of additional tracks. It has been our understanding that locations needed have been granted and approved by us, and we had supposed that the work of construction of the tracks had been undertaken."

In the Quincy Daily Ledger, issue of December 19, 1907, the following item appeared concerning the "new line to Fore River" via Chubbuck street and Des Moines road: "The street railway company reports that the rails, ties and two-thirds of the special work to be used in the double tracking of Hancock street and for the new line to the Fore River has been received in Quincy and that work building these extensions will be commenced with the opening of spring."

The above extracts I have submitted for your consideration. It is by all means clear that the Old Colony Street Railway Co. never did intend to build that "new line to Fore River." They did not even want the right to build it, but were forced to ask for and take it to still the public clamor. The scheme was a winner, but the time has come when the people want to know what the railway is going to do about it. That great man, Edmund Burke once said: "Where there is abuse, there ought to be clamor; because it is better to have our slumber broken by the fire bell than to perish, amidst the flames, in our bed."

It is not the intention of the people to demand anything unreasonable from the Old Colony Street Railway Company or any other corporation. The people only ask for that little which is due them and that little the people should have, or know the reason why.

SUDDEN DEATH.

The citizens of Weymouth were shocked as well as grieved to learn of the sudden death of Arthur H. Cook of Front street, last evening. Mr. Cook arrived home from Boston at six o'clock, apparently as well as ever, he took off his coat, sat down, in a chair and expired within a few moments. Doctors pronounced it heart trouble. Mr. Cook was highly esteemed and well known in Weymouth and vicinity, and was about 63 years of age. For years he has resided on Front street, Weymouth.

Little Interest In City Nominations

Although the time for filing nomination papers for candidates to be voted for at the municipal caucuses expires Thursday night, there does not seem to be any great hustle on the part of either party to take out nomination papers.

Under the law persons who take out nomination papers are supposed to state who they are for. This rule is not being lived up to, however, for persons who have taken out papers in many cases have not told who they are for.

All that has been done is for the party who has taken papers to sign his name for one or more papers. For this reason it is hard to tell just who is seeking nomination. Persons who desire their names printed on the official ballot must file their papers before Thursday night, at which time they will be publicly opened. This refers to both the Republican and Democratic parties.

It is of course generally known that papers are being circulated in all wards in the interest of Eugene R. Stone for Mayor, and he will probably be the only Republican candidate before the caucuses.

Mayor William T. Shea will be the Democratic candidate, although there are rumors that he will have some opposition.

William J. Sullivan has taken out nomination papers for Mayor, but does not say who his candidate is.

For School Committee at large ex-Councilman Herbert J. Polk will be a candidate. Charles H. Owens of Ward Four and John A. Duggan will probably be candidates for reelection from Wards Four and Six.

As for Councilmen there does not seem to be any general understanding as to who is to run. The Daily Ledger has published from time to time names of gentlemen whose papers are being circulated.

This morning nomination papers were being circulated for James M. Nowland, George W. Abele and Joseph L. Whiton, Jr., for Councilmen from Ward One; also for George H. Corlis, Thompson B. Crane and James M. Melville in Ward Two.

Papers have also been taken out for Councilmen by Albert T. Whitman, Robert B. Craig, John R. Nelson, Reuben A. Grossman and William H. Deacon. It is not known, however, who these papers are being circulated in the interest of.

In Ward Six, nomination papers are bing circulated for Arthur C. Beal and Charles A. Hadlock for Councilmen at large, and for John Moir, Ralph W. Hobbs and Charles E. Cherrington for Councilmen from the ward.

Brief Locals Of a Busy City

Charles H. Penniman is doing New York city this week.

E. R. Stone seems to be enjoying his new auto riding about the city.

The new voting lists revised for the election next Tuesday have been posted this week.

The Quincy High foot ball team line up against Melrose at Merrymount Park this afternoon.

A handsome new sign was placed over the entrance to Wheeler's dry goods store in City Square on Monday.

You will not have to wait at Carle's hair dressing room 6 Washington street, for there are four first class barbers; everything clean; up to date work.

The Knockers club, whose dinners have become famous, have accepted an invitation from Mr. Thompson of the City Square restaurant, to be his guests on Wednesday at a chicken dinner. Every Knocker, both great and small, has accepted.

After many days, Quincy was visited by a heavy rain last night. There was a smart shower in the morning but it was not until afternoon that the rain fell as though it meant business. It rained hard all the afternoon and until late in the evening.

The big reservoir at Quincy Neck which in a short time will be supplying water for use at the shipyard, looked very much like a real reservoir this morning. The heavy rain of last night nearly filled the huge basin, and it was necessary to open the dam to allow the water to run off. Work will undoubtedly be suspended today on account of the condition of the basin.

Conductor Clague, of the Quincy avenue line of electrics, had a narrow escape from serious injury Monday afternoon. He had climbed nearly to the top of the car to fix the trolley pole, when he received a shock. He was knocked off the car and fell to the ground stunned. He was hastily put aboard the car and rushed to Quincy where he was attended by Dr. Garey. Fortunately he escaped with a few bruises.

One of Fogg's big four-horse express teams got stuck in the mud on Chubbuck street early Monday evening and the driver was forced to leave his team there all night, taking his horses home. The wagon was loaded with barrels of oil, and was exceedingly heavy. The Sewer department has been at work on the street and the ground was soft at that point. The wheels sunk to the hubs and it was impossible to move the team.

THE EMPIRE STATE VOTE

Presidential Candidates Both Making Hard Fight For It

BRYAN'S RECORD GATHERING

Great Ovation Tendered to Their Leader by Democrats, the Cheering Lasting Fourteen Minutes When He Appeared In Madison Square Garden--Taft Visits New Haven and Makes Speeches In Brooklyn

New York, Oct. 27.—At the close of a trying day—a day of out-door speaking in a drenching rain, of fast-flying trips by automobile and special train, of receptions and formal dinners, and of three big evening meetings in different sections of the city, William J. Bryan last night, in Madison Square Garden, addressed the most notable gathering of his three campaigns.

The great oval amphitheatre of the garden held a throng of thousands, limited only by its vast capacity. From platform to the farthermost reaches of the loftiest of the four encircling galleries there was no vacant place. The police, early in the evening, cut off all access to the building with a disappointed waiting line blocks in length.

Notably as it was in the size and enthusiasm of its great crowd, the meeting took superior rank in the distinguished personnel of its speakers and party leaders who sat with Bryan upon the platform and cheered his every sentiment.

Ex-Governor Francis of Missouri and Governor Smith of Georgia, both of whom were members of President Cleveland's cabinet; Lieutenant Governor Chanler, who is opposing Governor Hughes; former Judge Herrick, the Democratic nominee for governor in this state four years ago, and Augustus Thomas preceded Bryan. On the stage were Alton B. Parker, National Chairman Mack, State Senator Conners, Tammany Leader Murphy and a host of others.

It was 10:15 o'clock when Mr. Bryan first reached the garden. His coming was heralded by eager outposts at the door and the first cry of "Bryan" brought every man and woman to their feet in one rising wave of humanity. The waving of flags in a rippling sea of color, the cheering and the music lasted for fourteen minutes before Bryan, with uplifted hands, finally secured the silence that permitted him to proceed.

Mr. Bryan appeared tired and worn when he began to speak, but as he proceeded the cheers of his hearers seemed to imbue him with new strength, and he spoke with all his characteristic vigor.

The candidate began his long day with a dash through mud and rain to Paterson, N. J., in an automobile. He spoke in a downpour for twenty minutes and, like the thousands in his audience, was drenched to the skin. Returning to the city, he was the guest at a reception of the Women's Democratic club at the Waldorf-Astoria hotel, where two impulsive women threw their arms about Bryan and kissed him. Next he spoke at Yonkers, White Plains, Portchester, New Rochelle and Mount Vernon. Once more returning to New York, Bryan was the guest of honor at a reception and dinner at the Democratic club. Then began his evening tour, which concluded with the meeting at Madison Square Garden.

Indefatigable campaigner that he is, Bryan spoke at 3 o'clock this morning to night-workers, printers, etc., in front of the city hall.

In his garden speech Bryan devoted a large part of his time to labor topics and made a plea for the election of Chanler and the entire state ticket. The enthusiasm reached its highest point when Bryan predicted that, whether the Democratic party wins or loses, its policy of publicity of contributions would become the law of the land.

Mr. Bryan was given another ovation when he concluded at 11:55 o'clock. He had spoken several times of the lateness of the hour, but the crowd called to him to "go on." The demonstrations of applause and cheering seemed to increase in spontaneity and volume rather than diminish as the midnight hour approached.

Hisses for President Roosevelt were heard last night for the first time during the campaign. Former Secretary of the Interior Francis of Cleveland's cabinet was the man who called forth hisses against Roosevelt, when he referred in his speech to the chief executive's "strenuous efforts to name his successor."

Taft Has a Busy Day

New York, Oct. 27.—Devoting the day to a trip into Connecticut and the evening to speechmaking in Brooklyn, William H. Taft's first day of active campaigning on his present visit to this section was prosecuted by him with both vigor and earnestness. While the day, despite its call for a speech of some length at New Haven and a shorter one at Port Chester, on the return trip to New York, was one of comparative ease for the Republican candidate, the calls that were made upon him in Brooklyn last night were such as to keep him actively occupied every moment of his time. Before the night was over he had delivered five speeches, eaten dinner with a hundred prominent Republicans, and reviewed a parade, which, in spite of somewhat adverse weather conditions, was impressive in its size and inspiring in its enthusiasm.

The rainfall ceased some time before the parade was scheduled to start, and the function was carried out with all the elaborateness planned and with that enthusiasm for which the Republican cohorts of Kings county are famed. Similarly successful and enthusiastic were the meetings of the night, particularly those in the Clermont avenue rink and the Academy of Music, where Taft made his principal addresses.

The feature of the trip into Connecticut was the New Haven meeting. Here, with football enthusiasm, the candidate was pledged the support of a large portion of the student body of Yale, through the presentation of a handsomely bound memorial containing many pages of signatures.

The meeting at the Clermont avenue rink proved to be the biggest of the night, the building being filled to the doors, while many were turned away. This meeting continued so late that the reception at the Union League club was abandoned and Taft went from the rink to his brother's home in Manhattan, arriving there soon after midnight. At the Clermont avenue rink meeting Senator Dolliver and Senator Depew spoke before Taft was introduced.

Mr. Taft's remarks were along the line of his recent speeches, nothing especially new being introduced. The demonstrations of approval by his audiences were frequent and pronounced.

Hisgen at the Hub

Boston, Oct. 27.—The Independence League party held three stirring mass meetings in Boston last night, at each of which the principal speaker was the presidential nominee of the party, Thomas L. Hisgen. While meetings were held in the Dudley Street Opera house and Faneuil hall, the greatest assembly gathered in Tremont temple. The candidates of the party for governor and lieutenant governor, William N. Osgood and Robert J. McCartney, spoke on state issues. Former Congressman Howard of Alabama reviewed the history of the leading parties and was given a flattering ovation. Hisgen was the concluding speaker of the evening. He reviewed the history of his struggle with the Standard Oil company and closed with a plea for the party which, he claimed, was free from the taint of the Standard Oil trust's money.

Gompers Talks to Workingmen

Baltimore, Oct. 27.—Samuel Gompers last night addressed a large meeting of workingmen. He attacked Mr. Taft's record relative to injunctions and pointed out what appeared to him weaknesses in the claims made as to the friendship of the Republican candidate for the laboring man. He declared that in practice the courts issue injunctions against laboring men such as are never issued against any other members of society. He declared that the president has no right to call him to account for criticising the courts, since the president himself has more than once been unsparing in his criticisms of the official acts of the judiciary.

Uncle Joe's Promise

Philadelphia, Oct. 27.—Speaker Cannon of the national house of representatives was the central figure here last night in a series of Republican mass meetings. "I am asking you to abide by the policies of the Republican party, which will restore to you as good times as you ever enjoyed," said Cannon. "The revision of the tariff is a paramount issue in this campaign, but I say to you that if Bryan is elected you will not have revision—you will have nothing." Cannon promised that the election of Taft would be followed by the immediate revision of the tariff.

Skeleton Not Identified

Exeter, N. H., Oct. 27.—Medical Examiner Lance has taken possession of the human bones unearthed at Newfields by a dog owned by Albert Mcbirnie. While it is believed by many that the bones are those of John O. Wiggin of Stratham, who disappeared several years ago, there is also a theory that they may be those of an old man who lived in a shanty in Newfields about four years ago. This old man, whose name was unknown, lived alone in the woods and after a time disappeared.

Queer Form of Joking

Barcelona, Oct. 27.—The authorities were greatly alarmed by the explosion of a petard in one of the streets, but the police, after an investigation, expressed themselves as attaching no importance to the incident, as King Alfonso and Queen Victoria were not within miles of the place where the explosion occurred. The police regard it as a malicious joke.

Killed Wife, Daughter and Self

Cleveland, Oct. 27.—Roy Hardy, 40 years old, a private detective employed by the Big Four railroad, shot and killed his wife, 38 years old, and his daughter, Juanita, 12 years old, and then committed suicide. Just what led to the shooting has not been developed.

Duke Gets Three Months Off

Rome, Oct. 27.—The Vita states that the minister of marine has granted the Duke of the Abruzzi three months' special leave of absence, with permission to travel abroad.

Great Catches of Fish

Boston, Oct. 27.—All fish records for the port of Boston were broken yesterday when fifty-five fishermen brought in a grand total of 1,719,400 pounds of fish.

VICTORY RESTS WITH LAURIER

Canadian Premier Wins In His Final Contest For Office

SLIGHTLY REDUCED MAJORITY

Campaign Consisted Largely of Personal Attacks, No Great Question Being Discussed--Graft and Personal Misconduct Charged Against Members of Government and Conservative Members of Parliament

Ottawa, Oct. 27.—Elections for the federal house of commons were held throughout Canada. Of the 221 constituencies in the Dominion, only two, Rouville, Que., and South York, Ont., returned members by acclamation. In all the others with the exception of five, which holds their elections later, there were contests.

SIR WILFRID LAURIER.

The returns show that Sir Wilfrid Laurier, the present Liberal premier, who in the last house had a majority of sixty-six, will be returned to power for another five years, with a safe, although slightly reduced, majority.

French-Canadian Quebec remained loyal to the premier, electing a membership almost solidly Liberal.

Ontario, where the Conservatives expected to make their heaviest gains and where the campaign against alleged government extravagance and favoritism waged the hottest, did not come up to the opposition's expectations. The returns indicate an almost evenly divided membership, compared with thirty-nine Liberals and forty-seven Conservatives in the last house.

The opposition gained slightly in Manitoba, but the Liberals carried the remainder of the west with few exceptions.

Nova Scotia, which at the last general elections in 1904 returned a solid Liberal phalanx, gives the Conservative party several seats. R. L. Borden, leader of the Conservatives, was elected by a substantial majority in Halifax, which rejected him four years ago.

All the ministers have been re-elected with the exception of William Templeman of Victoria, B. C., who lost by five votes.

Laurier's Last Campaign

The campaign is the last in which Premier Laurier will participate. He told the directors that he desired to carry to completion the Grand Trunk Pacific railroad, the trans-continental system now under construction, and appealed for another term of office in which to further develop the northwest. He said the appeal was the last he would make to the electors of Canada.

The Conservative party, while not opposing the construction of a second trans-continental line, has severely criticised the heavy bond guarantee which the government assumed and condemned the indefinite plans for the eastern terminal of the system, in which the Conservatives claim there is no provision to prevent the traffic being diverted from Halifax or St. John to Portland, Me., the Atlantic port of the existing Grand Trunk road.

The Conservatives were charged by their opponents with circulating thousands of copies of a Boston financial publication containing an attack on the Grand Trunk Pacific project. It was further charged that rival railroad interests in the United States and Canada were behind the attack. Outside of the railroad question there has been little in the campaign of interest to Americans.

Throughout the six weeks' campaign there has been no great question discussed. The tariff is no longer an issue, and the business depression felt in other countries has not been acute in Canada. The campaign has been one largely of personalities, and many serious charges of grafting and personal misconduct have been made against members of the government and several Conservative members of parliament. No accusations involving their personal honor have been made against Laurier or Borden, however.

On the government side, William Pugsley, minister of public works, and Sir Frederick Borden, minister of militia and defense, were subjected to violent attacks, and a strong fight was made against them. As a result several persons were arrested on charges of criminal libel.

BLAME THROWN UPON MORSE

Accused by Fellow Defendant of "Busting" the Bank

DOINGS ON DAY OF COLLAPSE

Morse's Account Overdrawn to the Amount of $211,000, Stocks and Bonds of Doubtful Value Being Furnished as Collateral to Make Good the Deficiency--Money Was Loaned When Crash Was Near

New York, Oct. 27.—After the admission of testimony by John W. Gates, former Judge Morgan J. O'Brien, Charles M. Schwab, John H. Flagler and William F. Havemeyer, to the effect that, as directors of the National Bank of North America, they had never authorized the honoring of overdrafts by Charles W. Morse, the vice president of the bank, and had never known of the existence of such a practice, the prosecution late yesterday rested its case against the former banker and promoter and his fellow-defendant, A. H. Curtis, who are being tried for alleged violation of the national banking laws.

The day's session furnished a number of sensations, not the least of which being the declaration by W. W. Lee, a former vice president of the bank, that on the day of the institution's collapse Curtis, the president, had said to him: "I have just told Morse that he has 'busted' the bank."

Lee was questioned at length concerning the happenings behind the closed doors of the bank during the evening hours of Oct. 16, 1907, the day of the collapse. After the accounts of the day's transactions had been closed, it was discovered, Lee testified, that Morse had overdrawn his account $211,000. In order to make good this deficiency Morse had turned into the bank a quantity of securities, for the most part stocks and bonds not listed on the Stock Exchange and of doubtful value, as collateral for the loan of $211,000. This loan the directors repudiated on the following day, the collateral put up by Morse being found unsatisfactory.

Testimony intended to show the dominating influence exercised over the National Bank of North America by Morse was given by W. A. Nash, president of the Corn Exchange bank, and a member of the clearing house committee. Nash, it appears, informed Curtis of the intention of the clearing house committee to examine the Bank of North America.

"I took Curtis aside," testified Nash, "and asked him if the bank was all right. He waved his hand towards Morse and replied: 'If he is all right, the bank is all right.'"

It was noticed during the proceedings yesterday that counsel for Morse and counsel for Curtis differed sharply at times regarding their respective principals' part in the affairs of the bank.

E. B. Wire, former cashier of the suspended bank, testified to conversations between himself and Curtis about the depleted condition of the bank's reserve. The bank's money had all been loaned out, witness said, and the panic was impending. In the face of this crisis Wire said that a few days before the crash he refused a loan of $126,000 to Otto Heinze & Co. Morse, however, granted the loan, giving his personal check for $126,000 to F. Augustus Heinze, notwithstanding that at the time his balance with the bank was less than $4000. The Morse check, Wire testified, had to be paid back into the clearing house with the Bank of North America's funds. It was this overdraft that Morse later attempted to make good by means of a loan of $211,000 from the bank on collateral which the directors refused to accept.

Mr. Wire closed his testimony with an explanation of the loan of $135,000 made in 1905 to Davison Brown. This loan, he said, was really an accommodation to Mrs. Katherine Gelshenen, who used the proceeds to buy and sell ice stock. Wire declared that Mrs. Gelshenen was credited with the profits accruing from these stock transactions, but that in some instances at least the bank carried the losses.

Rain Subdues Forest Fires

Boston, Oct. 27.—Copious rains last night extinguished forest fires in many parts of New England and checked others for the time being. The rainfall was general and the parched forests were thoroughly drenched. The weather bureau reported a total precipitation of 1.32 inches during the storm. It was the first rain of any consequence since Aug. 25 and was felt generally throughout New England.

Mayflower's Hull Is Staunch

New York, Oct. 27.—For several weeks after she was abandoned, if not still, the old cup defender, Mayflower, continued to ride the waves. Fruiter Vincenzo Di Giorgio, from Jamaica, reports having sighted her about 150 miles southeast of Hatteras. She appeared to be in good condition except for the loss of her masts.

Roosevelt Fifty Years Old

Chapter 8

I WAS anxious to travel in an American train, so Mrs. Ess Kay said we might go by rail to Newport instead of by boat as she had intended. I know it was very wrong in principle, but when we got to the Grand Central station (or depot, as perhaps I ought to call it) I did wish that slavery existed again so that I could have bought two or three of those delightful cafe au lait colored porters in gray livery and red caps. There were several I would have given anything to have to take home with me and make pets of, but I suppose even if they had been for sale they would have come too expensive, and I should have had to give them up, for their eyes alone, to say nothing of their pleasant white grins, would have been worth pounds and pounds.

As for their voices, they were the sweetest I'd heard in America—soft and a little throaty, with a peculiar quality, quite different from the voice of a person who hasn't been dipped in cafe au lait. With their vivid red caps, their brilliant eyes and their lightning flash smiles they looked to me more like great, wonderful tropical birds than human beings, and they seemed so honey luscious in their good nature that I'm sure all the things that serious and learned people say in England about the "dangers of the increasing colored population in America" must be nonsense. Serious and learned people do make such mistakes through never seeing the fun in anything, and every few years they find out that they have been quite wrong in what they have taught with so much trouble, about comets and microbes and men and other progressive things.

We had a number of these tropical birds that have been famed to serve the railway, to help us with our bags and things getting into the train, although there were Louise and a couple of Mrs. Ess Kay's footmen as well. I looked at their brown hands, and they were quite pink inside, as pink as mine. I don't know why this gave me a shock, but it did. Perhaps one had the feeling that the nice creatures were only painted to play their parts or that their white souls—just like ours—were striking through their skins.

It was a beautiful train. Even the engine was different from our kind, much fiercer and reared its head higher, like a wild stag compared to a stout but reliable ox. Our carriage had no compartments in it, but was just one long, wide, moving corridor, all plate glass windows and mirrors and painted panels and velvet arm chairs dotted about rather like a hotel drawing room on wheels.

There were a good many people in it when we got in, which annoyed Mrs. Ess Kay so much that she wished she had borrowed a private car from a friend who would have loved lending it. But I was glad she hadn't, for the people were part of the fun. Mrs. Ess Kay was sure they were nobodies because she didn't happen to know any of their faces, but perhaps they were thinking the same thing about her.

Anyway, they were mostly women and all pretty and perfectly dressed, as even quite common people appear to be in America. I haven't caught sight of a dowdy woman since I came. None of their frocks hitch up in front and dip down behind, as you see people's doing if you are taken to a shop in Oxford street or even sometimes in Bond street, and their belts always point beautifully down at the waist, although it isn't the season in New York.

The train was a fast one and simply hurled itself and us through space, as if we had got onto the tail of a comet by mistake, but it hardly waggled at all, so that we could have studied the scenery nicely if we had been able to see it behind the advertisements.

Passing the outskirts of New York, it seemed as if every villa, even the quite smart ones, did their own washing. The gardens—which Sally told me to call back yards—were just as full of clean clothes as the meadows were of advertisement hoardings, and I rather wondered why some enterprising agents didn't go around and offer the people big prices for painting advertisements on their petticoats and shirts.

We tore through such charming places with fascinating houses built of wood, among parks of feathery green trees, that I was sure Newport could be no prettier, but Mrs. Ess Kay spoiled the most picturesque one for me by saying that it was practically settled by retired butchers and tailors. According to Mrs. Ess Kay and her brother all you have to do to be sure of being rich in America is to decide to be either a tailor or a butcher, so it seems quite simple, and I'm surprised that everybody doesn't do it. Only if you do, it appears there is no use in your going to Newport until you've lived it down, which, of course, must be a drawback.

Just as I had got rather giddy from looking out of the window, a boy (exactly like the boys in melodrama who begin by selling papers and end by saving the heroine from the villain) came into the car, piled up to his head with novels and magazines. He scattered a lot over us, like manna, without asking us to pay, but just as I had got passionately interested in a short story he came back and began to gather everything up. Seeing that I clung to my lot, Potter bought them all for me before I could stop him.

There were two books and four magazines, with superlatively good looking, well groomed young men and divinely lovely girls for the heroes and heroines. The story I was most interested in had a hero like Mr. Brett; but it was disappointing in the end, because he married a short plump girl with black eyes, and somehow it spoiled the realism, as I couldn't fancy he would really have cared so dreadfully for a girl like that. Anyway, it put me out of the mood for reading any more stories and I began glancing over the advertisements. At least, I glanced at first, but soon I was absorbed; for they were wonderful.

I had never dreamed that there were such kind, thoughtful men in business as the ones who advertised in those fat American magazines—and so clever, too; they seemed to have spent their whole past lives simply in studying things, so that eventually they could make you happy and save you trouble.

They lived only for that, those incredibly nice men. There were photographs of some of them with their advertisements, so that you could know what they were really like and have even more confidence in them than you would if you hadn't seen their style of features. There were two or three whose profiles I could never get to feel at home with, even if I had been born with one of them; but the majority were brave, energetic—oh, terribly energetic looking men, as indeed they would need to be if they were really to accomplish all the things they promised, not only for you but for the hundreds of thousands of other people who might be inclined to put them to the test.

There were things like this in the magazines—all the magazines:

"Listen to me, miss (or madam). I have something to say which will interest you. Do you want a perfect complexion? Don't move. Sit still in your chair. Cut out this coupon. Slip it into a stamped envelope and we will give you what you want by return of post."

"Why suffer? You have headache. We have the cure. We ask nothing better than to take away the one and give you the other."

"Let us lend you a beautiful diamond ring to wear until you are tired of it. When you are, we will take it back, and return you all but 5 per cent of your money."

"Don't come to us. Let us come to you and bring you something. You have always wanted health, wealth, wisdom."

"We would like to give you some friendly advice. We don't want a red cent for it."

"You are going to have a party, and you are worried. Don't worry. Just phone to us and we will arrange everything for you better than you could yourself, with no trouble to you and your servants."

TOOK A POISONOUS DRUG

Abbie Stark Declared Responsible For Her Own Death

Nashua, N. H., Oct. 27.—At the conclusion of the testimony of Medical Referee Congdon, Judge Runnells ordered the discharge of Miss Inez L. Philbrick and George O. Smith, who had been charged with murder in the second degree in connection with the death last Friday of Miss Abbie E. Stark.

Miss Stark died suddenly under circumstances that led to the belief that she had been poisoned, and the arrest of Miss Philbrick and Smith followed the allegation that they had given her a drug for the purpose of performing an unnatural function.

Only a few witnesses were heard before Runnells ordered the discharge of the prisoners. Congdon testified that his belief, after having performed an autopsy, was that Miss Stark's death was due to having taken a poisonous drug.

Judge Runnells ruled that an alleged confession made by Miss Philbrick to the medical referee was inadmissable as evidence, and then ordered the defendants discharged.

GUESTS DRIVEN FROM THEIR BEDS

Littleton's Only Hotel Is Destroyed by Fire

Littleton, Mass., Oct. 27.—A score of guests at the Littleton house, the only hotel in this village, were driven from their beds last night by a fire which started in the barn at the rear of the hotel and spread quickly to the main structure. Most of the guests had time to save their personal effects, but the hotel, with much of its furniture, was burned, as was also a double house just east of the hotel, owned by Mrs. Charles Lawrence. The total loss is $12,000.

That the fire did not consume other property in the immediate vicinity was due to the very prompt work of the village fire department, assisted by streams from a suspender factory, which were turned on the roofs of buildings to the west of the hotel.

The hotel was owned by F. O. Stiles, who also managed it. He was unable to assign any cause for the fire. The barn was completely enveloped in flames when the fire was discovered so that it was impossible to save the horses stabled there.

Mrs. Lawrence, an aged woman, and Mr. and Mrs. Foley occupied the dwelling house owned by the former.

Great Fire at Summer Resort

Salisbury Beach, Mass., Oct. 27.—A fire which started in the New Era house this morning swept along the beach, destroying over one hundred houses at the rear of the railroad tracks. The wind was blowing fresh from the northeast and carried the flames quickly and irresistibly from one building to another. Nearly all the structures were cheaply built frame houses, occupied only in summer. The burned area is south of the section where the large hotels and dance halls are located and, as the wind was blowing from a northerly direction, none of those structures were at any time in danger. The New Era house had been closed for the season. The cause of the fire has not been learned. Conservative estimates place the probable loss at upwards of $75,000.

Alleged Fugitive From Justice

Boston, Oct. 27.—Mrs. Mabelle Dumphy was arrested in her sumptuous apartments in this city as a fugitive from justice, it being claimed that she was wanted in Chicago on the charge of the larceny of $1000 worth of diamonds and jewelry from Charles E. Giles. Bail was placed at $4500, which was furnished, and Mrs. Dumphy was released. Giles is a Boston money lender and claims the larceny occurred when he met Mrs. Dumphy in Chicago to negotiate a transaction in which bonds and jewelry figured.

Safeguarding Registered Mail

Washington, Oct. 27.—Declaring that complaints come to the department alleging violation of the postal regulations concerning the disposition of registered mail endorsed for delivery to the addressee in person, an order has been issued directing that such mail must be delivered to no one but the addressee in person, not even upon his written order.

Egg-o-See Company Fails

Battle Creek, Mich., Oct. 27.—Circuit Judge North has appointed John E. Linihan receiver for the Egg-o-See company, which was organized here as the Battle Creek Food company. As the company was organized under the laws of Michigan it is understood that the legal proceedings in the receivership will center in the circuit court of this county.

MASS. NO-LICENSE LEAGUE.

President Charles W. Eliot of Cambridge, Honorary President of the Massachusetts No-License League, will preside and speak at the evening session of the second annual conference and banquet of No-License Workers of Massachusetts, Thursday, October 29th, in Ford hall, Boston. His Honor, Mayor George A. Hibbard will extend the address of welcome. Hon. James A. Head, ex-Mayor of Nashville, Tenn., will speak on the "Southern Movement." And there will also be at the evening session, eight bdief talks telling of the most notable No-License victories the past year. At the morning and afternoon sessions, twenty-one topics will be taken up, each with its leader of Discussion, who speaks from experience. One of the most notable features of last year's conference, the first gathering of its kind in the history of Massachusetts, was the large number of topics discussed, the many taking part and the fact that the whole program was put through on schedule time. The morning and afternoon sessions are designed, especially for the real workers in the No-License cause; the evening session will appeal more to the general public, as well as be of value to the No-License workers.

Quincy Locals Briefly Told

Interest is increasing in the proposed public landing on East Howard street.

Mrs. Fred Thomas of St. John, N. B., is the guest of Mrs. Thomas of Berlin street.

Mr. and Mrs. Alexander of Warren avenue are receiving congratulations upon the birth of a son, on Monday October 26.

Tom Skinner of North street has been selected by the Point Baracas to represent them at the coming laymen's meeting in Boston.

Quincy will be well represented on Wednesday at the Park Street church, Boston, at both the morning and afternoon sessions of the Woman's Home Missionary associates.

Work is rushing day and night and Sundays on the new battleship at the shipyard, trying to have everything in readiness for Nov. 10th. It will be the biggest launching ever witnessed at the Point.

Over 400 Sunday school teachers of East Norfolk County Sunday School association had their attention called on Sunday to the annual meeting at South Braintree on Nov. 11th, and many are expected to attend.

The condition of Atlantic Music hall has dampened the ardor of dancing enthusiasts. The floor is in a decidedly poor condition and the hall needs a general pruning up for the fall season.

A grand opening sale is announced for Nov. 4, at the dry goods store of G. W. Wheeler in City Square. Extensive alterations and improvements recently completed make this a very attractive store.

Papers were passed Monday morning through the agency of Frank Jenkins, conveying the property on 23 Webster street the estate formerly owned by Herbert Olmstead to Alexander Hill of Norfolk Downs.

The Shakespeare club expects the greatest year of its history and that its workings may be made public in all their interesting details, the club's secretary, Miss Elizabeth Cook, will write up a full account of each meeting for publication.

The Wollaston Glee Club are to commence their regular rehearsals on Monday evening, November 2, in the Unitarian vestry. They have been fortunate in again securing the services of their old director, John A. Crowley of Readville.

The Misses Josephine and Bernice Wright of Savin Hill, formerly of Atlantic have received a number of complimentary press notices this fall on account of the excellence of their concert work. The Misses Wright gave several entertainments in and about Quincy last season.

Only One "BROMO QUININE," that is Laxative Bromo Quinine

Charles R. Safford of Clive street is having his house shingled.

Mr. and Mrs. Sevenning have moved from Rawson road to Taylor street.

Miss Susie Atwood of Rawson road spent the week end with friends in Avon.

William Chase of Davis street is having a bungalow built on Davis street.

Miss Maud Bartlett of Rawson road was the guest of friends in Roxbury over the week end.

Miss Mildred Tyler of the City Treasurer's office has returned from a week's vacation trip to Worcester.

Miss Eva Gilbs of Sandwich, who has been visiting her cousin, Miss Eliza Miner of Old Colony avenue, has returned home.

Theta Sigma club met Monday evening in spite of the rain. A most enjoyable evening was spent playing cards and dancing.

At the installation of Rev. Walter B. Flanders as pastor of the Waldo Congregational church in Montello, Rev. Edward Anderson of Quincy offered the closing prayer.

There was a rumor about City Square this noon that the papers being circulated by William J. Sullivan were to nominate George H. Wilson for Mayor.

Now is the time to put in your winter's supply of coal. Remember that C. Patch & Son have just unloaded a cargo of Franklin, Shamokin and White Ash in the egg and stove size.

Salmon salad, raised puffs with raspberry filling, hot rolls and coffee, will comprise the menu of the lunch after the whist tournament at the Granite City club on Wednesday evening.

There are a few bad pit-falls along the left hand side of Atlantic street going toward Hancock street. In many places the earth has fallen away from the fence and left dangerous holes where one might easily fall through on to the track at night.

"Striking world movements" will be illustrated tonight by Henry Wade Hicks of Boston at the opening meeting of the Congregational Club of Wollaston, who recently took a trip through Turkey, Bulgaria, India, China and Japan. Chester J. Hougue is president of the club this season.

Regular meeting of Quincy lodge of Elks tonight. Several candidates are to be initiated.

The regular meeting of the Houghs Neck Associates, scheduled for Wednesday night, has been postponed.

Less than two inches of rain fell Monday, to be exact one and 13-16 inches. More, however, than for two months.

Ladies' shampooing and facial massage; nothing but first class work; at Carle's hair dressing rooms, 6 Washington street.

During the high wind Monday night one of Harvey's floats and a 25 foot motor launch owned by G. S. Whalan came ashore at Houghs Neck.

William P. Taylor, secretary of the Houghs Neck Associates, has the sympathy of a large circle of friends in the loss of his father who died at the Boothby hospital on Monday.

William H. Bain of Boston has been secured to address the Men's Club of St. Chrysistoms church, in the parish room Monday evening, November 2. Some six years ago Mr. Bain took a vacation of 22 months and made a trip around the world, so that his subject "Curious happenings while travelling abroad," will be especially interesting.

LAST NIGHT'S GALE.

Monday night's heavy gale from the north-east made things lively for the small craft in Wollaston bay. One of the Wollaston Yacht club's floats broke from its moorings and drifted up the brook. Yacht tenders were thrown promiscously around and the large run came down with a crash and also went up the brook.

SURVIVED THE RAIN.

Monday night's heavy rain did not succeed in extinguishing the peat fire which has been burning near the Norfolk Downs station for the past few weeks. The fire has burrowed so deep in the ground that it is now burning off the roots of trees and they are toppling over,—an unusual sight in these parts.

West Quincy Parish One of Oldest

But four cities and towns of Massachusetts have Catholic parishes which were founded before St. Mary's of West Quincy. These are Boston, Salem, Lowell, and Waltham. The St. Mary's parish was founded as early as 1841 by Rev. Fr. Carraher. It was not until 1872 that the St. John's parish was founded with Rev. Francis Friguglietti as pastor. The Sacred Heart church at Atlantic was founded in 1903 with Rev. J. P. Cuffe as pastor.

Pattee's History of Quincy in its sketch of religious societies says:

"As far as we have been able to learn, the first mass celebrated in Quincy, was in the old Crane house, on Common street, in 1828; this estate now being in the possession of Mr. Fallen. Father French of Eastport, State of Maine, officiated on this occasion. At various times mass was celebrated in the old long house, (so called), which was located on Adams street, a short distance northeast of Eaton's bridge.

About 1839-40, occasional mass was celebrated by Father T. Fitzsimmons of South Boston, in the old West District schoolhouse, from which they were expelled by those persons of the district who were opposed to Catholicity; but, after talking the matter over with those who had objected to their worshipping there, reconciliation was effected and services were resumed again in the old schoolhouse, where they remained until the erection and dedication of the St. Mary's church, on Crescent street.

"This society being now organized, and their meeting-house built, Father Fitzsimmons first began religious services in it in the fall of 1842. He was succeeded by Father John O'Beirne in 1843, who remained with them about one year, or until 1844, when the bishop appointed him to take charge of a parish in Roxbury Highlands. After the removal of Father O'Beirne, the Rev. Bernard Carraher was appointed his successor over the St. Mary's, July 27th, 1845, and was the first resident priest. After remaining here a few years he received his dismission, and Father Fitzsimmons was recalled to officiate over this church, where he remained three or four months; being succeeded by Father Rodden, who took charge of this extensive mission in December, 1848.

"This mission included at that time, the towns of Abington, Randolph, Braintree, Weymouth, Hingham, Cohasset and Milton. Father Rodden was a person of fine ability, improved by a finished education and extensive reading. At this time he was the principal literary editor of the Boston Pilot. His judicious management of the society, and his amiability, not only made him popular with his parish, but also with the town's people. At the close of his peaceful labors with this rapidly increasing mission, the bishop directed that Father Roche should officiate as Parish Priest over the St. John's church.

"Father Roche continued his able and efficient ministrations over his faithful flock for several years, and was succeeded by the Rev. James Halley, who was one of the most devout fathers that was ever installed over them; untiring in his exertions for the spiritual advancement of the society, working night and day, out of season as well as in season, for their temporal comfort. His social qualities were such as to endear him to all. By his executive ability and uncommon economical administration of the affairs of the parish, he was gratified at the close of his pastorate, to inform them that they were free from all debt. Rev. James Sullivan followed Father Halley as parish priest, but after being connected with the society for several years his health failed him, and a great share of the arduous duties of the church was conducted by the curate. After some time of painful suffering from a lingering consumption, he was removed by death from his parochial duties, Nov. 13th, 1871. Father Sullivan was the first priest who has died in the parish. After his decease, the former curate under Father Sullivan, the Rev. Francis Friguglietti, was called upon by the Right Reverend Bishop to assume the charge over this parish. Ater his installation, it was found necessary to enlarge the church, and in August, 1872, ground was broken for that purpose. Father Friguglietti continued to preside over this large and still increasing parish, ably assisted by the curate, Father Dannahy.

"In 1841, the Catholics purchased a piece of land on Cemetery street, of Mr. James Hall, for the purpose of building a church. As soon as all necessary arrangements could be made, thye began the construction of their meeting-house, which was finished in the fall of 1842, and dedicated to God under the title of St. Mary's church, Sept. 18th, 1842, by the Right Rev. Bishop Fenwick.

"In 1851, the Catholic worshippers of the central part of the town found it very inconvenient to travel so far as West Quincy to church; to obviate this difficulty Father Rodden, in 1851, purchased a site for a church of Mr. Francis Williams, on School street, corner of Gay; where immediately after the removal of the house and barn that stood on the land, they began building operations.

GET WITHIN

Piles Can't Be Cured From The Outside.

External treatment won't cure piles. Nor will surgical operations.

The cause is inside—bad circulation.

To cure piles you must free the circulation of blood in the lower bowel.

Foot Ball And Other Sports

Gore and Clapp will probably be in the High school game again today, and this pair will strengthen the team materially. Gore is undoubtedly one of the best quarters among the schoolboys, and certainly no one has come to Quincy this year that has had anything on him, unless it be Lansing ,the Everett star. Gore drives the team hard, and uses good judgment in directing his plays.

The uncertainty of football was shown in the Waltham-Somerville game on Saturday. Waltham won the game 5-0, but scored on a fumble and a long run. Not once did the Watch City boys make first down, while the red and blue of Somerville went through continually. On the merits of the game Somerville won, but Waltham's luck cropped up, and they still remain undefeated.

MAKES WORK EASIER

Quincy People Are Pleased to Learn How it is Done.

It's pretty hard to attend to duties
With a constantly aching back;
With annoying urinary disorders.
Doan's Kidney Pills make work easier.
They cure backache.
They cure every kidney ill.

James P. Daugherty, living on Hammond Place, Quincy, Mass. says: "I have used Doan's Kidney Pills and am glad to let others know what they have done for me. I suffered constantly from backache and had but little strength or energy to get through with my day's work. I took many so-called kidney cures but did not succeed in finding relief until I began using Doan's Kidney Pills which I procured at the Cox, Drug Store. I was surprised and gratified at the prompt way they relieved me. My back was soon strong and free from pain and I felt better generally. I would go to considerable trouble to get anyone to use Doan's Kidney Pills as I have so much confidence in their merit."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

WILL PARADE TONIGHT.

The Holy Name Society of St. John's church expects a large attendance at the drill tonight, for after tonight, there is but one more chance to practice, which is Thursday evening. Tonight the members will meet at the church at 8 o'clock, and with Commander Lennon in charge, will parade through streets of the city. A fife and drum corps will accompany the marchers.

The societies connected with St. Mary's church in West Quincy and the Church of the Sacred Heart in Atlantic, will also drill faithfully this week, the former using the Ward Four playground as a parade ground, and the latter the Ward Six playground. All three societies are efficiently drilled, and should show up in excellent style with the societies of other cities and towns.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it falls to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

Norfolk County And Vicinity

The storm of Monday was pretty bad on the SOUTH SHORE, and at HULL, the Stony Beach life-savers were on the watch for vessels in distress. The wind was from the right quarter to blow them ashore, and the weather was so thick that Boston light and the Graves could only be seen at intervals. At 10.30 a short circuit rendered the electric lights useless and the town was plunged in darkness.

One of HYDE PARK'S foremost residents, Dr. Samuel A. Tuttle, died Sunday at his home. He was born in Effingham, N. H., and was one of 14 children, of whom the only survivor is Charles Tuttle of Chicago. Dr. Tuttle has been in the WEST and SOUTH, owning first a ranch and then a cotton plantation.

The Inasmuch Circle of King's Daughters, connected with the Winthrop church, HOLBROOK, held a cooked-food sale Friday afternoon in the grocery of George T. Wild. Many purchasers came during the afternoon, and a snug sum was netted.

The Young Men's Catholic Lyceum of RANDOLPH held a shirt waist party in Stetson hall Friday evening, and people were present from all the nearby towns. The hall was tastily decorated, and the stage was draped with tissue paper. Refreshments were served during the evening.

Charles C. Mellen of Braintree, the Republican candidate for representative, was the principle speaker at a largely attended smoke talk in AVON on Friday night. The rally was held in Forrest hall, was addressed by several local men, besides Mr. Mellen.

Benefit lodge, N. E. O. P., met in Odd Fellows' hall, STOUGHTON, on Friday evening. Several applications were acted on and one candidate was initiated by the degree team. The degree team will visit Mansfield tonight, going in a special car, and a large delegation is expected to accompany them.

A general alarm, which was sounded Saturday afternoon by Chief W. W. Diehl, called the WELLESLEY entire fire fighting apparatus out for a systematic practice. This was the first since the reorganization of the department and the appointment of a chief.

The Central fire station apparatus of HOLBROOK was called out Sunday on a still alarm, for a brisk woods fire in the rear of Union street. After a two hour struggle, the firemen succeeded in extinguishing the fire.

The Ladies' Sanctuary society connected with St. Michael's church of AVON, will hold a whist party tonight in M. P. O. F. hall.

The people of STOUGHTON are complaining about the service on electric cars between Stoughton and Brockton. William Twooney proposes to organize a street railway committee to look out for the interests of the Stoughton people. He claims that one night last week 140 people were forced to ride from Brockton to Stoughton, in a car made for 36 people.

A quiet home wedding took place in RANDOLPH on Saturday evening, when Miss Edna Bump of Randolph, and Henry Porter of South Braintree, were united in marriage. Rev. Charles A. Dawson of South Braintree officiated at the ceremony, which was held at the home of the bride's parents. The young couple left for New York on a wedding tour.

WHIST AND DANCE.

A very enjoyable evening was spent by those who braved the weather to attend a whist party and dance, given on Monday night in Electa hall, by Mrs. F. Abrams and Miss Henrietta Winick. About 25 tables were in play, and some excellent prizes were given. The first prize was won by Miss Agnes Horrigan, while Joseph Scaro and J. Edmund Saunders captured second and third.

At 10 o'clock the floor was cleared, and to the strains of Wilson's orchestra the young and old joined in the dance, which lasted until 12. Refreshments were served during the evening.

Whist Tournament.

The Wollaston Whist club held their weekly tournament Saturday evening with eight pairs playing. J. G. and E. W. Taylor secured high score. The score.

J. G. Brown and E W. Taylor	p'us 10 1-4
A. B. Hillman and V. S. Brokaw	plus 4 3-4
J. H. Penniman and J. H. Broughton	4 1-4
G. R. Thompson and H. A. Stevens	plus 1-4
C. E. Bates and S. A. Gardner Jr.	minus 3-4
C. E. Barker and J. A. Slade	minus 2 1-4

Congregational Club Listens To a Grand Illustrated Talk

The season of 1908-9 was auspiciously opened by the Wollaston Congregational Club on Tuesday evening. The club has enrolled over 20 new members this month, and there was an attendance of nearly 75 at the meeting, including guests from the other men's clubs of Wollaston.

At 6.30 a hot roast beef dinner was served which gave perfect satisfaction.

Chester J. Hogue, the new president, presided at the brief business meeting which followed. The resignation of Leon F. Besse as secretary, was accepted with regrets, and N. H. Hoover was elected to the vacancy.

A letter was read from the Methodist club relative to a consolidation of the Mens clubs of the Wollaston church, and referred to the executive committee.

It was announced that next month the speaker would be James B. Connelly, who sailed with the American fleet around Cape Horn to San Francisco.

Rev. Edward Chase read a letter from E. E. White, relative to Dr. Grenfell's work in Labrador, enclosing a photo of the "Wollaston cot" with an occupant. The secretary was requested to send a message of good cheer.

The speaker of the evening was Henry Wade Hicks of Boston who recently returned from a trip through Turkey, Bulgaria, India, China and Japan, who gave an illustrated address on "Striking World Movements." The operation of the stereopticon was Charles A. Ufford of Dr. Little's church.

The pictures were original, being taken from Mr. Hick's own negatives. He said they were not the pictures of a world trotter or for politics, but dealt with the social, moral and religious movements for the uplift of the world. They illustrated all that there is in the life of these countries.

Mr. Hicks devoted most of the evening to China and Turkey, showing the great changes that are taking place. He said the influence of Japan was very strong in China. He spoke of the influence of modern medicine, and told how it gave christions a foothold in these countries. He illustrated the schools, the girls schools, the men's schools, the theological schools, etc. Idolatry was giving way, but he queried what should take its place. There were debasing influences from the New World as well as the uplifting.

China really had no religion, but it was different with Japan. America was missing a great opportunity commercially, which Germany had seized.

The revolution in Turkey was characterized as a "peaceful revolution." The "Young Turks" had led to the final mutiny; had killed the commander; and with the cry of Liberty" swept all before them. Mr. Hicks illustrated the country; told of the courtesy to travelers; and told how the Mohammeden religion had kept the people down. Until the change this year there were no newspapers in Turkey. The problem of today is to uplift the Mohammedens, to introduce education and foster liberty. Then christianity will work its way to the front.

The pictures were very clear and interesting, and Mr. Hicks and his assistant were given a rising vote of thanks.

CHORAL SOCIETY.

At the second business meeting held in Colonial hall on Tuesday evening, seventy-five people voted to organize under the name of the Quincy Choral Society. Thomas B. Pollard was elected president; Dr. George H. Ryder, vice-president; Mrs. Henry Tirrell, secretary; and John F. Hunt, treasurer. Three directors: Mr. E. E. Bullock, Mrs. Edith Cary Page and Dr. D. B. Reardon, were elected, and these, together with the officers of the society will form its executive board. The meeting was adjourned for one week with the understanding that at the next meeting regular rehearsals would begin under an efficient conductor to be selected by the executive board.

MONEY RAISED.

During the present year many improvements have taken place at the Congregational church at Wollaston. The ladies had a new hard wood floor laid in the auditorium and expended in all about $1,000. This spurred the men on and they have expended nearly as much more. Last Sunday a successful attempt was made to raise the necessary funds, the sum of $850 being pledged then and there to meet all the floating indebtedness. So that the church now has an attractive plant, a popular pastor, and is well organized for the season's work.

Quincy Tickets For Next Tuesday

The official nominations for candidates in Norfolk county will be published in the Quincy Patriot this week. It will surprise some voters to learn that there are six tickets for President and Vice President, which will appear on the ticket in this order: Democratic, Prohibition, Socialist, Socialist Labor, Independence League and Republican. Quincy will have electors on the Democratic, Socialist and Socialist Labor tickets.

There are also six State tickets in the field.

For Congress in the Tenth district, there are four candidates, all of Boston. J. Mitchell Galvin, the Republican, will be first; then C. J. Kidney, Independence League; J. F. O'Connell, Democrat; and Hazard Stevens, Free Trader.

Councillor Bemis has only an Independence League candidate against him.

For Senator, there are three, James E. Foley, Democratic; J. J. Gallagher, Socialist, and Eugene C. Hultman of Quincy, Republican.

In each of the Quincy Representative districts there are three candidates, a Republican, a Democrat, and a Socialist.

County Commissioner Merrill has but one rival, a Socialist, and the same is true of John D. Cobb, the candidate for register of probate.

FORESTERS' DANCE.

Electa hall is doing a rushing business these days, for on Tuesday night another social and dance was held. This time by the John Ericson Court, Foresters of America. It was the occasion of the 9th anniversary of the foundation of the Court, and the members and their friends were invited to have a good time.

It is the intention in Quincy to form an auxiliary to the John Ericson court, that is an order of Companions of the Forest. On Tuesday evening Mrs. Julia McCarthy of Lynn, grand secretary, and Mrs. Ayer of Boston, grand trustee of the Companions of the Forest, spoke to those present on the advisability of forming an auxiliary court. Many of the women are very much interested, and in all probability an auxiliary will be started in the near future. After the speaking, refreshments were served and then dancing was enjoyed till 12 o'clock.

—Playgrounds at the public schools of Jersey City, N. J., have proved so successful that the board of education will go into the work more extensively next year.

—Save the broken lens; we can match it. We grind them at 1473 Hancock st., Quincy. You may watch the operation. Williams Tel. 279-3.

Tugs Launched At the Shipyard

The first two army tug boats, of the eight under construction at the works of the Fore River Ship Building Co., were successfully launched at noon today. The boats are numbered 159 and 160 and are named General Robert Anderson and General Richard Arnold.

The first boat was sent down the ways at 12.45 and was followed half an hour later by the second.

There was no ceremony with the launching, and the boats went overboard without sponsors. It was simply a case of knocking away the shore blocks, sawing the soul pieces and let them slide.

Quite a few of the officials of the company were gathered about, however, to see that everything went off all right.

Although the tugs did not have the distinction of a sponsor they received the customary cheers from the workmen as they slid gracefully into their native element. A good part of the machinery was in place before the boats were launched.

This will be the last launch before the dreadnought North Dakota to be sent overboard Nov. 10.

No Hurry to File Nominations

Tuesday night was the first time for filing nomination papers of candidates to be voted for at the municipal caucuses. But few took advantage, however, to file papers thus early as they have until Thursday evening. Usually, however, everyone wants to be first on the list.

Republican papers were filed for Joseph L. Whiton, Jr., James M. Nowland and George W. Abele for Councilmen from Ward One, and two lists for Ward Committee from Ward One.

Democratic papers were filed for William T. Shea for Mayor, William H. Flynn for Councilman from Ward Two, and for James F. Burke for School Committee from Ward Four.

A number of papers for ward Councilman are in circulation at West Quincy. These are for John Smith, Charles J. McGilvray, Robert J. Teasdale and Joseph McDevitt. It is also said that there will be two lists for Ward Committee.

It is probable that Dr. Daniel B. Reardon will be a candidate for School Committee at large, and Robert E. Foy for Councilman-at-large.

James M. Cantfill has papers out for Councilman from Ward Three.

QUINCY BOYS WILL COMPETE.

Over twenty members of the Quincy Y. M. C. A. will compete in the relay race from Providence to Boston. The race will be started by Mayor McCarty of Providence. Providence boys will carry a message twelve miles toward Taunton. Three Taunton boys will take up the race, and speed toward Brockton. Boys from the shoe city will do their share and deliver the message to Quincy runners who will carry the message in relays to Quincy square. There to be met by young men from Boston who will finally deliver the message to President Johnson on the steps of the Boston Y. M. C. A.

It is estimated that the race will be completed slightly under five hours. High noon of Nov. 14, is the time chosen for the start.

Among The WOMEN'S CLUBS of Quincy and Vicinity.

[A Wednesday Feature.]

The Hospital Aid association meets tomorrow afternoon with Mrs. Thomas Fenno of Hancock street.

Mrs. Otho A. Hayward gave her paper on "Tolstoi" at a meeting of the Women's Alliance of the church of the Unity in Brockton on Tuesday afternoon, receiving many words of appreciation from her audience. Mrs. Hayward gave the paper last season in Quincy, it being one of the best afternoons in the Quincy Alliance program.

The Atlantic Shakespeare society held their first meeting of the season at the home of Mrs. Theodore Parker, Thursday, Oct. 22d. The study of Antony and Cleopatra was begun and much interest was manifested.

A large attendance of club women is anticipated at the State Federation meeting at Bridgewater next Tuesday.

The Quincy Women's club changed their day of meeting this week that they might have the pleasure of having Prof. Edward Howard Griggs with them for a lecture, the meeting being held this afternoon at the club house. A report of the meeting will be Thursday's Ledger.

"Canals and Bridges of Venice," should prove entertaining at the next meeting of the Friday club, on Nov. 6th at the home of Mrs. John F. Welch as Mrs. George W. Morton who has personally enjoyed all the delights of Venice has the afternoon's program in charge.

Adams Chapter Daughters of the Revolution at its meeting on Monday afternoon Nov. 2d at the John Adams birthplace is to have as a special guest, Mrs. Eleanor W. F. Bates of Roslindale, first vice president of the New England Woman's Press association, who will read an interesting paper on "The Evolution of the little Secretary Drawer." The council will meet at two o'clock and the regular chapter session at half past two. Mrs. W. F. Cumings and Miss Mary L. Hinkley of Atlantic and Mrs. Antonette Paige of Wollaston are the committee for the afternoon.

Miss Edith Randall entertains the Junior Friday club on Monday afternoon at her home on Spear street. The club has an interesting subject for the afternoon, "Around the Bay of Naples," with Grace M. Isaac as special conductor.

The next meeting of the Wollaston Alliance will be a sewing meeting on Nov. 4th at the Unitarian vestry.

The November meeting of the Quincy Day Nursery association will be held in the Women's Club house on Tuesday, Nov. 3, at 3 P. M. Anyone interested in the work of the Nursery is welcome to these monthly meetings held regularly on the first Tuesday of each month. Members of the association are especially urged to attend.

The tuberculosis exhibit at City hall under the auspices of the Quincy Women's club and the Board of Health opens on Thursday afternoon and continues through Friday, Saturday and Sunday. Besides the exhibit there will be afternoon and evening sessions.

QUINCY ALLIANCE.

On Monday afternoon, the Quincy Branch Alliance met in the chapel of First church and after the usual exercises, listened to an able address by Mrs. Lucia Ames Mead on "National Dangers and National Defence." She gave a calm and forceful but dispassionate presentation of the reasons for the abolition of war.

Mrs. Mead began by quoting Ruskin who once said, we should not know the devil if we saw him. She thought we did not recognize our own real enemies, they being chiefly of our own household; accident, fire and disease, all largely preventable. By actual count, we have killed by avoidable accidents in the last four years 80,000 more victims than the civil war had.

Occasionally a theatre fire or school disaster arrests attention for a time, but we yearly slaughter more people than war.

Ruskin speaks, said Mrs. Mead of the crime of destroying the efficacy of man's labor, yet we are constantly wasting his efforts and the products of such labor. The destruction of property in homes and forests last year reached $270,000,000 while in Switzerland and other countries means are taken to protect the forests and towns from engine sparks and other causes of fire. Simple lack of foresight in this country has destroyed almost $1,200,000,000 worth of property in five years independent of losses from forest fires. Such want of foresight is lack of good citizenship.

Mrs. Mead also alluded to the "White Plague" as causing a loss of 160,000 persons a year, a loss largely preventible.

In building expensive warships to meet suppositious enemies beyond seas and ignoring those actually in our midst we show ourselves the most fatuous of nations. Our life, our products, our property are being drained in a most astounding way. Our timber is rapidly disappearing and it has been impossible to get any appropriation to save it, although only the cost of one warship was asked for. Mrs. Mead believes that we need fear no more wars with European powers if armed forces do not stir up strife. Her remedy is a Supreme Tribunal of the Nations to arbitrate difficulties. Two Peace Congresses have been held and there will be a third. The speaker felt that, if any two European nations would join in an Alliance with us and agree that instead of making war on any inimical power, they would simply withdraw their trade from such power, in case of threatened war, such procedure would quickly lead to arbitration and save life and property. Such an agreement made for ninety years would practically eliminate war among civilized nations. She closed with an appeal to all to make war on war. Not, she said, that we should disband all armies at once which would indeed have evils of its own, but we should call a halt where we stand and divert the money to better uses.

The United States spends two thirds of its revenue on army and navy and the results of war. It has but one third left for the actual expenses of government in all its departments. So much good might be done with that other two thirds now largely wasted on warships at $10,000,000 a piece. Mrs. Mead spoke feelingly of the pathetic effort Japan has just made, at enormous expense which she could ill afford, to prove her friendliness to us in the welcome to our ships and the efforts of "Yellow journals" to precipitate war were strongly scored. The address showed a world wide knowledge of affairs and the audience gave close altention to a subject rather new to most of them.

Music for the afternoon was by Miss Bertha Carlson, soloist, with Miss Carrie Follett Spear at the piano, both receiving appreciative applause. During the social hour which closed the afternoon, chocolate was poured by Mrs. Henry Wright and Mrs. Thomas Fenno, assisted by Alliance members.

NEIGHBORING.

Mrs. Edith Rowena Noyes is to give a musical program at the meeting of the Old Colony club of Weymouth on Thursday afternoon of next week. It will be an afternoon with Mac Dowell and Mrs. Noyes will be assisted by pianist, celloist and a soprano soloist.

The New England Women's club expects to have a new club home in a few weeks as the club has leased an entire suite in the new Chancy Hall building, Copley square, Boston, which is ideally situated. Besides a home-room three connecting rooms can be thrown together for a large assembly room. In the meantime through the courtesy of the Women's Industrial union the meetings will be held in Perkins hall, 264 Boylston street, the opening meeting being on Monday Nov. 2d at three o'clock with "current events" by Mrs. May Alden Ward.

Theatricals in charge of Mrs. George O. Wales will attract all members of the Philergians next Tuesday afternoon and their meeting place, Cochato hall, Braintree, will doubtless be taxed to accommodate all members and guests desiring to attend.

Brief Locals Of a Busy City

A meeting of the directors of the Board of Trade will be held this evening.

Many Quincy Masons attended the annual visitation at Braintree Tuesday evening.

The material for the tuberculosis exhibit, which opens Thursday at City Hall, has arrived and will be set up today,

The Quincy Catholic club, organized for works of charity and social purposes is to hold a dance at Quincy Music hall next week Thursday evening.

Several candidates were initiated at the meeting of Quincy lodge of Elks on Tuesday evening, and a number of applications for membership were received.

Quincy lodge, Knights of Columbus, holds a ladies' night at Colonial hall this evening. There will be an entertainment and dancing in the hall and a lunch will be served.

Arthur W. Newcomb of Quincy, the present member of the School Committee at large, is a candidate for reelection, and has given faithful service during the three years.

Cochato club of Braintree is to have an informal social on Nov. 3d at the club house, with music by Mullaly's orchestra, cards, etc. Returns from the national and state election will be given.

Some of the Ward Three candidates for Councilmen are Robert B. Craig, John R. Nelson, Reuben A. Grossman and Thomas Bishop. Rumor has it that there will be a dozen names on the Republican ticket.

J. L. Miller, our leading monumental manufacturer and his brother, G. M. Miller of Abbott & Miller's Express, leave for California in a few weeks. J. L. Miller has built up a large trade in California for his artistic monuments.

Mrs. Frederick H. Bishop edits the Unity Club Meteor, a special edition on Friday evening at the vestry of the Wollaston Unitarian church, when a large attendance of members will doubtless be present to enjoy the breezy articles.

A lecture is to be given in First church chapel this evening under the auspices of the Quincy Historical society, when Hon. Everett C. Bumpus will speak on "Panama." As Mr. Bumpus has recently returned from Panama he will have much of interest to tell members of the society.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

A LIVELY DAY IN NEW YORK

Both Presidential Candidates Greeted by Great Crowds

BRYAN COVERS 115 MILES

Makes Several Speeches and Gets Only Two Hours Sleep Out of Forty-Eight, Winding Up With Undiminished Energy—Taft Journeys Along Hudson Valley, Devoting the Day to the Labor Issue

New York, Oct. 28.—Winding up his remarkable campaign in and about Greater New York, William J. Bryan was whirled 115 miles by automobile in Manhattan and Brooklyn during yesterday and last night, and made eight speeches between the hours of 6 and 12 o'clock. In New York he was accompanied by Charles F. Murphy. Arriving at Brooklyn bridge he was met by Senator McCarren, the Democratic leader of Kings county.

Lieutenant Governor Chanler's campaign for governor coincided with Bryan's itinerary, both in Manhattan and Brooklyn, and while he in one place was pleading for loyal support of the national ticket Bryan at another was urging votes for the state candidates from Chanler down and for the Democratic nominees for congress.

Mr. Bryan made eighteen speeches during the long and tiring day, and everywhere he went, ploughing at times through mud and rain in a rush to keep his many engagements, he was greeted by some of the largest and most enthusiastic audiences of his country-wide tour.

The Democratic candidate's eventful day begun at 3 a. m., when he addressed night-workers from the steps of the city hall at the most unique political meeting ever held in a presidential campaign. Then followed a Broadway meeting at 10 o'clock and a forenoon trip to Brooklyn to address an audience of laboring men in Wallabout Market square. From Brooklyn Bryan hurried across to Long Island City, being the first presidential candidate ever to visit that community. Next came a long journey across two rivers and Manhattan Island to reach Jersey City, where three speeches ended the New Jersey campaign.

Back in New York again, Bryan was the guest of the College Men's Democratic club and then was whizzed at breakneck speed in a powerful touring car to Sulzer's Harlem River Park and the Star Casino. Six meetings in Brooklyn—the principal one at Clermont Avenue rink, where Mr. Taft spoke Monday night—brought the day's work to a close.

Although he had had but two hours' sleep out of forty-eight, Bryan spoke with all his characteristic vigor and good humor at the last of his Brooklyn meetings. He pleaded, however, that the applause be curtailed as much as possible, especially at Clermont Avenue rink, where the crowd was so dense and the crush so great that the police were unable to even make a passageway in aisles.

In all of his speeches Bryan warned the workingman against traitors in their midst. He asserted that every laboring man who will vote the Republican ticket will vote to repudiate the things that labor demanded in the Denver platform. He held up Taft as the enemy of labor and assailed him and President Roosevelt at every opportunity.

Mr. Bryan's reference to the guarantee of bank deposits brought shouts of approval at all of his meetings, especially in Brooklyn, where several banks failed during the recent panic.

Lieutenant Governor Chanler shared everywhere in the welcomes that were accorded to Bryan. He again assailed the state public service commissions for their inaction, and charged Governor Hughes with responsibility for existing traffic conditions in Manhattan and Brooklyn.

Taft Along the Hudson

The industries of the cities and towns which line the banks of the picturesque Hudson from Greater New York to Troy were made the text of the speeches of William H. Taft yesterday to the people of these cities and towns.

Yonkers smiled on the Ohioan through a heavy shower. He talked at length to as many as could get into the largest theatre, and then addressed those who had stood waiting in the rain, whose number was even greater.

Mr. Bryan spoke in Yonkers Monday and, saying he understood his opponent had charged that the Republican party had done nothing for labor, Taft first asserted that the policies of the Republican party had been chiefly devoted to the interests of labor and then pointed out that the protective policy made possible the sugar refining industry, the chief enterprise of the city.

"The Republican party is just as much opposed to monopoly as the Democratic party," announced Taft later. "It passed and enforced the anti-trust law. It believes in going directly at the evil of monopoly by punishing men for continuing it, rather than by destroying the industries and the great combinations of capital that have so much utility and are of such benefit to the wage-earnerrs. It believes in stamping out the evil and not stamping out the corporation."

Tarrytown, Peekskill and Fishkill Landing listened in the rain to short speeches delivered by the candidate from the rear of his car. At Poughkeepsie the sun came out brightly.

Mr. Taft spoke to a crowd that filled the Collingwood Opera house. "'Shall the people rule?' has stranded," he declared. "The truth is that the proposition that the people had not ruled up to this date met with so much ridicule that it has faded out as an issue."

Mr. Taft made a second speech at Poughkeepsie from the steps of the Republican headquarters building. Another brief speech was made at Hudson and three at Schenectady, all of them predominant with labor issues. The employes of the American Locomotive works at Schenectady received the candidate with much enthusiasm. At the shops of the General Electric works thousands of workmen were told in detail the Taft position on labor from the time the candidate was a judge on the bench to the present time. At the third meeting at the Van Curler theatre Judge Taft devoted himself to a discussion of the labor situation, and brought to the fore the general prosperity issue which, he declared, confronted the voters of the country.

A faulty engine delayed the Taft special, so that it was nearly 10 o'clock before it reached Cohoes, where a monster meeting was addressed. The interests of labor were talked of at each place. Troy was reached at 10:30 o'clock. Bolton hall was packed with thousands who had been in their coveted places for three hours. The speech had proceeded but a short time when a woman in the audience fainted, making the fourth occurrence of the kind during the day. It was after 11 o'clock when the candidate had finished his day's work.

Mr. Taft left Troy this morning for New York, where he will speak many times today.

Kern Hustling In Indiana

Fort Wayne, Ind., Oct. 28.—The second day of the campaign of John W. Kern by special trolley car through Indiana ended last night with a big meeting at Decatur. In every city through which he passed Kern was besieged by scores of old-time friends, who grasped his hand and greeted him by his given name. He said that there were three methods by which the Republican party leaders hoped to win. The first method, he said, was by the use of money which was "being poured into their treasury out of the treasuries of every illegal monopoly in the land and out of the treasuries of every protected corporation. The second method," he said, "was coercion, and the third, threats of panic."

Protected Tariff the Main Issue

New York, Oct. 28.—Invading the Metropolitan district after putting in an active day campaigning in agricultural and manufacturing districts up-state, James S. Sherman made six speeches last night at different places in Manhattan and Bronx boroughs to large and enthusiastic audiences. He declared that the Republican party had made the foundation of the best money in the world—the American dollar. He urged his hearers to vote for an administration that guaranteed sound money. He also devoted remarks to the tariff, declaring that the main issue of the campaign is the protected tariff.

To Drop Ballots Into Barrels

Fremont, O., Oct. 28.—Sugar barrels will be used for ballot boxes in Sandusky county at the coming election. The board of elections purchased forty barrels. Tops with hinges and the necessary slot were placed on all barrels, after which they were distributed to the various precincts. This step was necessary because of the large ballots to be used in the presidential election.

A Lesson In Prohibition

Union, S. C., Oct. 28.—Union county again voted for prohibition yesterday by about 300 majority out of 1500 votes cast. During the past three years of prohibition the arrests for drunkenness decreased 50 percent and property valuations in the county are said to have increased $2,000,000.

Reckless Use of Revolver

Brunswick, Me., Oct. 28.—Entering the bedroom of his niece and her husband, Mr. and Mrs. Euzebe Lachappelle, while they were asleep, Leonce Aulette, who lives in the same tenement, opened fire with a revolver. Lachappelle grappled with Aulette at the last shot, while his wife ran for the police. Three officers had a hard time to overcome the assailant. Jealousy is said to be the cause of the attack.

Shots Land In Wrong Places

Newport, R. I., Oct. 28.—While a company of coast artillery were having target practice with machine guns at Fort Adams a stray shell struck the lighthouse at Beavertail, nearly two miles away. The damage was slight. Another missile struck a rock from which two men were fishing. The shell landed within a few feet of the men.

Fire In Oil Storehouse

Boston, Oct. 28.—Several hundred barrels of oil belonging to the Vacuum Oil company and stored in a stone warehouse on Long wharf made an unusually stubborn fire and threatened surrounding property, including a dozen fishing schooners in one of the docks. The fire caused a damage of nearly $20,000 before it was extinguished.

Her Services Appreciated

Denver, Oct. 28.—Mrs. Lillian M. N. Stevens of Portland, Me., was unanimously re-elected president of the National Women's Christian Temperance union.

THE
Young Men's Christian Association
OF QUINCY, MASS.
(Legal Title—Incorporated 1892.)
The Directors of the YOUNG MEN'S CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION of Quincy, with a firm faith in the great value of the work which is being done for the young men and boys of our city, make their appeal for donations and bequests toward paying the mortgage indebtedness on the new Association Building. When the building is free from debt it will serve as an Endowment, as there is a goodly income from the dormitories.
Should the Donor prefer, such sum as might be given could be used as an Endowment for an educational class or classes, the Boys Department, or as a special fund in other ways, and could be designated with the name of the Donor.
The Treasurer, WILLIAM F. CUMMINGS, 7 Clive Street, Quincy, or the General Secretary, ERNEST G. GAY, will be happy to answer inquiries.

OUR HOSPITAL
(Legal Title: City Hospital of Quincy)
INCORPORATED 1889
The Trustees of the City Hospital of Quincy earnestly appeal for donations and bequests for the Endowment fund. This now amounts to over $60,000 but a fund of at least $100,000 is urgently needed.
Five Thousand Dollars ($5,000) will endow a Free Bed to which such name may be given as the Donor may desire, but any sum for this noble institution which stands ready to serve us all in the hour of need will be most gratefully received.
The Secretary, TIMOTHY REED, Adams St Quincy, or the Treasurer, RICHARD D. CHASE, Savings Bank Building, Quincy, will be very glad to confer with any one or to answer any inquiries.

THE BALKAN PROBLEMS

More Likely Than Ever to Be Settled by International Congress

London, Oct. 28.—The recent pourparlers in European capitals appear to have brought the idea of an international congress for the settlement of the Balkan problems appreciably nearer realization. Both Austria-Hungary and Bulgaria are adopting a policy of moderation. Baron Von Aehrenthal, the Austro-Hungarian foreign minister, announces that his government is ready to enter the congress to discuss the annexation of Bosnia and Herzegovina, providing the discussion respects Austria's "sovereign rights" in those provinces, while the Bulgarian government is now reconciled to the payment of pecuniary compensation to Turkey.

A further rapprochement between the contending parties is expected to result from the visit of Emperor William to the Austrian emperor and Archduke Francis, who is regarded as the prime mover in Austria's forward policy in the Balkans.

M. Milovanovics, the Servian foreign minister, has arrived in London. To his policy of moderation at a critical moment is attributed the fact that Servia is not plunged in a war adventure. He will confer with Foreign Secretary Grey during his stay here, and the conferences are expected to confirm Servia in a policy of peace.

HOLLAND'S PLANS ARE KEPT SECRET

Some Talk of Her Blockading Venezuelan Ports

Washington, Oct. 28.—Diplomats, together with state department officials, are wondering just what is to be Holland's next step in her dealings with Venezuela, now that President Castro has declined to revoke his decree of May 14, prohibiting the trans-shipment of goods for Venezuelan ports at Curacao.

Neither at the state department nor at The Netherlands legation at Washington can any information be obtained as to the government's course regarding Venezuela in the event that Castro persists in his refusal to revoke the objectionable decree against Curacao.

There has been some talk of a blockade of the ports of Venezuela by Holland. With a blockade the Holland government believes that she can force Castro to terms.

Excitement Kills a Clergyman

Schenectady, N. Y., Oct. 28.—Rev. E. J. Cooke, rector of St. Stephen's Episcopal church at Schuylerville, dropped dead of heart disease on the street here last night. Cooke came to this city to hear Mr. Taft and was on his way home when stricken. Taft's automobile passed just before Cooke was stricken and the accompanying demonstration and attendant excitement is thought to have affected his weak heart.

Birds Should Be Protected

New York, Oct. 28.—President Dutcher of the National Association of Audubon Societies declared at the annual meeting of the association here that Americans were robbing posterity in permitting an annual crop loss of $800,000,000, due to destruction of insect-eating birds. He called for a fund to fight the commercial bird killers in every state legislature.

Strikebreakers For Paper Mills

Madison, Me., Oct. 28.—A force of forty-three strikebreakers, accompanied by fifteen police officers, arrived here from Millinocket to break the strike which has caused the mill of the Great Northern Paper company here to be shut down since early in August. There was no hostile demonstration and none is expected.

Asked to Be Punished

Providence, Oct. 28.—Admitting in the superior court that he had falsified his accounts to the extent of $19,385, and asking that he be punished for his offense, Robert L. Ward was sentenced to three years in prison. For twelve years he had been confidential clerk for the legal firm of Edwards & Angell.

CURTIS GOES BACK ON MORSE

Anticipated Division Between Defendants Is Realized

WILL "TELL ALL THE FACTS"

Hopes That His Testimony Will Not Injure Other Bank Officials of the Bank of North America--Admits Over-Certification of Checks to Amount of $40,000,000--Accepted Morse's Guarantee as to Safety

New York, Oct. 28.—The expected split between Charles W. Morse, bank promoter, financier and "ice trust" organizer, and Alfred H. Curtis, president of the National Bank of North America, both of whom are under indictments charging them jointly with violation of the national banking laws, came yesterday with the swearing in of Curtis as the first witness for the defense in the trial before Judge Hough in the United States court here.

Before the beginning of Curtis' examination the court had heard arguments on behalf of both defendants on motions to dismiss the indictments and had yielded on a few minor points, dismissing the counts charging conspiracy and misappropriation in one specific instance, but maintaining fifty-five counts charging over-certification, making of false reports, misapplication and the use of funds of depositors for speculative purposes.

Before calling the former president of the suspended Bank of North America to the stand in his own behalf, Mr. Olcott, Curtis' attorney, announced that he had persuaded his client to "tell all the facts."

"My client hopes," said he, "that his testimony will not injure any of the other directors or officers who had to do with the management of the affairs of the Bank of North America. It is not his purpose to point his finger at any one individual and say, 'You did it, not I.' He will, however, tell the facts and state things as they really happened."

Curtis began his testimony by relating his early career in the banking business. He had started at 14 in the office of a Wall street broker, he said, graduating ten years later to a clerkship in the Bank of the State of New York, the institution subsequently purchased by Morse and merged with the Bank of North America. There he had advanced through the various grades to the position of cashier, in which capacity he had over-certified checks to the amount of $40,000,000, he declared.

Morse was, at the time, vice president and director of the bank. During an absence abroad Morse was deposed by President Edwards. Upon his return he obtained control of the bank by purchasing a majority of the stock, Curtis recounted, and after ousting Edwards installed Curtis as president.

Morse, the witness testified, carried a balance of between $100,000 and $150,000 with the bank and had brought a great many customers and depositors to it. When the Carroll loan on 4000 shares of ice stock had come up for renewal in the name of Braun, of Primrose & Braun, Morse had instructed him, the witness said, to put it through, telling him that he would stand back of it and guarantee it. At the time, Curtis testified, he supposed Morse to be a very rich man, having heard his wealth estimated at $22,000,000. It was therefore not extraordinary, he thought, that he should accept Morse's guarantee as fully protective.

The witness then went into details relative to the transactions whereby 2000 of the 4000 shares of ice securities held by the bank had been sold to Mrs. Gelshenen and later disposed of by her at a profit of $24,580. The remaining 2000 shares had netted a profit of $24,580 and this Morse had turned into the bank, refusing to accept it for himself, although clearly entitled to it.

Other loans, with ice stock as collateral, had been made by the witness, he declared, notably those to Davidson Brown, but always upon the recommendation of Morse and after he had signified that he stood back of them and guaranteed them.

More Bail For Brandenburg

Dayton, O., Oct. 28.—Broughton Brandenburg appeared in the police court to answer the charge of being a fugitive from justice, charged with forgery and grand larceny in connection with the Cleveland letter. He asked further delay. On telegraphic request from District Attorney Jerome of New York bail was increased from $500 to $2000. This bail was given and the case was continued.

Spain Liquidates an Old Debt

Washington, Oct. 28.—The Spanish debt of $599,850, awarded to certain citizens of this country under a treaty of Feb. 17, 1834, with Spain, has been finally liquidated, according to the annual report of the register of the treasury. Spain has been paying annual interest on the amount since the treaty. The principal has been paid over three times in interest.

Boy Held For Manslaughter

Middletown, Conn., Oct. 28.—Louis Microne, 14 years old, who shot and killed his playmate, Tony Catrone, while playing with a revolver, was held in bonds of $1000 for the superior court on the charge of manslaughter. Bonds were furnished by the boy's father.

There were so many splendid things to have, to wear and to eat advertised in the same kind, fatherly way, that I felt as if I had unconsciously yearned for each one of them more than for anything else in my life, and now it had been put into my head in all its fatal fascination, I couldn't possibly exist another day without sending for it, to one in that procession of noble, self sacrificing American advertisers. I felt, too, that if anything disagreeable should happen to me, like a railway or motor car accident, I could spend the rest of my existence lying down, and still the splendid things would come running to me, if I just phoned or flung a stamp into space.

I mentioned something of the sort to Sally. "I wonder they don't offer to choose your husband," said I. "I didn't know advertisements could be so interesting."

"What about your own?" she asked. "They're a hundred times quainter."

I thought hard about the Morning Post and The Queen, but couldn't remember anything extraordinary in the advertising line, and said so.

"Perhaps you, being English, don't see anything extraordinary about a clergyman's wife offering to exchange a canary bird for six months' subscription to Punch, or the widow of an officer earnestly desiring an idiot lady to board with her, or a decayed gentlewoman inviting the public to give her five pounds, but we, being American, do," replied Sally. "Why, I'd rather read the advertisements in some of your morning papers and ladies' weeklies than I would eat."

"Talking of eating, it's lunchtime," said Potter. "There'll be a big menagerie feeding in the dining car, but there's no good waiting for it to finish, as then there'll be no food left."

So we took his suggestion, and there was a crowd, but he had secured a table for four, and we squeezed ourselves into the places.

I have traveled abroad with mother and Vic, where there were Americans in the dining car, and they have been cross because they didn't get served quickly, and they have said things. But in this car going to Newport you forgot what you had had last before the next course came, yet nobody seemed to mind. They were as patient as lambs and simply took what was given them when they could get it, although they looked as if they were used to everything very nice at home. I suppose it must have been because they were all Americans together, eating American things, with American waiters to wait upon them and no foreigners who ought to know they wouldn't stand that sort of nonsense, hanged if they would.

Some of Mrs. Ess Kay's servants had gone on before us, and some were in our train. Exactly how it was managed, I don't know; but things that would worry us into gray haired graves don't seem to bother Americans at all, and there was the motor waiting when we arrived at the end of our journey, with a private motor omnibus for the servants and luggage.

Sometimes it is rather a pretty sight at the station where you have to get out for Battlemead or for the village, when one of the best trains from town comes in, especially if mother or any one at other big places in the neighborhood should be having a house party. There are several rather good victorias with nice sleek horses, a handsome brougham or two, a motor car or two, to say nothing of dogcarts and phaetons. But it is a poor show compared to the scene at Newport. I felt suddenly as if I were at the theater and the curtain had just gone up on a brilliant new act.

There was a crowd of gorgeous carriages, and jet black varnish, gold and silver harness and horses' brown and chestnut backs all glittered blindingly in the sun. But there were even more motors than carriages, it seemed, or else they were more conspicuous, and many were being driven by beautiful girls in muslins such as we would wear to a garden party, with nothing on their pretty heads except their splendid hair, dressed everlastingly in the same way.

Now I saw Mrs. Ess Kay and Potter in their element. There was no suggestion that the people were not good enough for them here. Mrs. Ess Kay radiated smiles, bowing cordially right and left, sometimes even more cordially than her friends bowed in return. Potter was taking off his straw hat and waving it. They were delighted to see everybody, for everybody was somebody, and some, but not all, of the everybodies were delighted to see them. Sally alone remained unmoved, and I was glad to have her to keep me in countenance in this new act, where I knew none of the players or what part I should be called upon to take by and by.

I had heard so much that was dazzling about Newport, which I had imagined a great white city by the sea, that the part I saw first after leaving the railway station was distinctly a blow. "This quiet, half asleep village the greatest watering place of America, perhaps of the world!" I said to myself, almost scornfully, but when we had bowled into Bellevue avenue, where Mrs. Ess Kay said that her cottage was, I began to understand.

I wasn't sure at first sight what I did think of the great splendid houses, with mere pocket handkerchief lawns such as people would have for suburban villas at home, but they gave me a tremendous impression of concentrated wealth. This seemed a place where everybody was rich, where millions were at a discount, and I thought—whatever else I did think—that it would be a place to stop away from unless you were happy—happy and strong and gay.

But there was one thing I was very sure of. The avenue itself was more full than our park in the topmost height of the season.

People don't look happy driving in the park, not even the pretty people. I have found that whenever I have been, and, though that isn't so very often yet, Vic says it is really and truly always the same.

The great beauties look bored, and some of them have their faces painted and the air of wearing transformations, but not one of the charming women driving up and down Bellevue avenue that afternoon looked bored and hardly any were painted. I never saw people appear to be so delighted with life and so thoroughly alive, as if the glorious sea air were frothing in their veins, like champagne.

In the park you don't see people laughing and talking to each other in carriages. They simply lean back on the cushions with an expression that seems to say, "This is the only thing I can think of to do, so I'm doing it just to kill time." Probably they don't really feel like that, but they look it. And as for the people who sit and watch or stand and wait, they've usually a strained expression in their eyes as if they were afraid of missing somebody or something of importance.

But here in Bellevue avenue everybody was smiling and chatting, and I noticed that the men weren't so preternaturally alert as the men in New York. Some had actually taken time to get fat, which, so far I'd had reason to suppose, was a thing that never happened to American men.

And somehow the young girls had the air of being a great deal more important than we are at home. You could tell from the very way they sat and held up their heads in the motor cars and dogcarts and other things that they thought the world was theirs and they were the people to know in it. One was driving a tandem, and she didn't look more than seventeen. I was glad when she bowed to Mrs. Ess Kay, because she was pretty and I made up my mind that I should like to know her.

Piled up to his head with novels and magazines.

"That's Cora Pitchley's stepdaughter, Carolyn," said Mrs. Ess Kay. "Do you remember Margaret Taylour telling anecdotes of Cora? She doesn't bother much with the girl. People are talking about them both rather a lot this year, they say."

"Carolyn," I repeated. "What a pretty name and how American sounding, somehow. Fancy her driving tandem, with only that tiny groom if anything should happen. She must be plucky. How old is she?"

"Eighteen. She was one of last October's buds."

"October's buds," I repeated. "It sounds poetical—but unseasonable."

Potter answered with a laugh.

"Yes, we like things out of season in America, so we bring out most of our buds in October. Then they have the whole winter to bloom in, you know, before they're grafted on another stalk."

LOOKED LIKE A MURDER

Peculiar Method Adopted by a Man to Kill Himself

Boston, Oct. 28.—Although at first the police believed that the man whose body, with feet bound together and hands tied behind his back, was found floating in the harbor yesterday had been murdered, the harbor police announce that the suicide theory seems more credible.

The body was decomposed and evidently had been in the water for more than a month. An examination showed it to be that of a man about 50 years old, 5 feet 4 inches tall and 140 pounds in weight. The hands were fastened together behind the back by a kind of a slipknot, while the feet were tied together tightly. Braided rope, such as is used in baling hemp, was employed. Attached by a rope to the waist was a stone weighing about twenty pounds.

While at first the case was thought to be one of murder, officers attached to the harbor police demonstrated to the medical examiner that a person could easily bind his own hands behind him by use of a knot similar to that found upon the body.

AMOY WILL SPEND $280,000 ON FLEET

May Appropriate Even More to Entertain Our Men

Amoy, Sept. 28.—When the Chinese government selected Amoy as the port to receive the second squadron of the American battleship fleet it made, according to popular opinion, a wise choice. The broad, well protected harbor, the climate from October to April unsurpassed, and the scenic beauty of the surrounding country, all unite in justifying the selection.

The second squadron consists of the battleships Louisiana, Virginia, Ohio, Missouri, Wisconsin, Illinois, Kentucky and Kearsarge, under command of Rear Admiral Emory, and according to the itinerary they are due here Oct. 29 and will remain until Nov. 4.

The Chinese government has set aside the sum of 400,000 taels (United States gold, $280,000) to meet the expenses of entertaining the battleship squadron. The committee in charge of the arrangements has stated that the Pekin government has signified its willingness to make an additional appropriation should the original amount prove inadequate.

Although Amoy City, like most Chinese cities, is dirty and decidedly uninviting, yet there is a large open plot of ground, known as the drill grounds and race course, about one mile distant from Amoy City, and directly accessible from the sea. Thus is will not be necessary upon this occasion for anyone to enter the city of Amoy.

Conflagration Thought Incendiary

Salisbury, Mass., Oct. 28.—An investigation of the fire which destroyed more than a hundred summer cottages and several small boarding houses at Salisbury beach indicated that the blaze was undoubtedly of incendiary origin. Most of the cottages were of inexpensive construction, and it is believed that the aggregate loss will not exceed $100,000. Greater loss was prevented by a fortunate shift of wind at a time when the flames were beyond control.

Liberals Have Safe Majority

Ottawa, Oct. 28.—The Canadian capital turned out with bands and torches last night to welcome back Sir Wilffid Laurier, who was personally elected for this city and who was returned premier of Canada. The precise majority is not available even yet. It is certain that every member of the government, with the exception of William Templeman, is elected. The latest returns give the Liberals a majority of fifty-six seats.

An Unpleasant Voyage

New York, Oct. 28.—When the steamer Furnessia arrived from Glasgow her 300 passengers expressed great relief over the safe ending of the voyage. For thirteen hours on last Wednesday the ship was helpless during a ninety-mile-an-hour gale, due to an accident in her engine room. Meanwhile the waves were making a plaything of the big liner. The accident caused her to be a day late in reaching port.

Secret Tariff Rates For Oil Trust

New York, Oct. 28.—That secret tariff rates, which were not filed with the interstate commerce commission, were issued by the Pennsylvania Railroad company, and that the Standard Oil company only profited by these alleged illegal rates, was testified to in the hearing of the railroad phase of the government suit to dissolve the Standard Oil company.

Vacancies In Sacred College

Rome, Oct. 28.—The death of Cardinal Mathieu at London Monday and of Cardinal Salvador Casanas y Pages at Barcelona yesterday brings the vacancies in the sacred college to fourteen, thus making it more probable that the next consistory will be held in December for the creation of new cardinals.

Shortage of Over Half a Million

Norfolk, Oct. 28.—The report of Receiver Griffin of the People's bank at Portsmouth shows a shortage in the accounts of Cashier Butt of $549,884. Butt is serving a sentence of three years in the penitentiary for misapplying the bank's funds.

Quincy Locals Briefly Told

The Quincy Y. M. C. A. has made arrangements to receive the election returns on election night.

James F. Burke is a candidate for member of the School Committee from Ward Four. Mr. Burke served one term on the board several years ago.

The marriage of Patrick Murphy, circulation manager at Chapin's News agency, and Miss Mary Blanche Little of Mechanic street, is announced for this evening.

Joseph Barajah Frauenfelder, who sang so acceptably at the Fore River draftsmen's smoker last Thursday night will be the soloist at the Y. M. C. A. garden concert tonight.

Mrs. Esther Bentley of Putnam street, wife of David Bentley and mother of Walter H. Bentley, the master of the Coddington school, died this morning in her 68th year.

The annual meeting of the Quincy Charitable association is to be held next Wednesday afternoon at the clubhouse of the Qnincy Women's club. A full attendance is desired.

The Dorcas Society of the Universalist church will hold a rummage sale next week in the unoccupied store in the Keating building on Washington street. Articles may be left at the store on Monday. The sale opens Tuesday for three days.

The Norwegian Society of Quincy held its annual social and dance in Protection hall on Tuesday evening. After a brief and pleasing entertainment, dancing was enjoyed until 12. Thomson's orchestra furnished music and everyone had an enjoyable time. Refreshments were served during the evening.

The work of the United States at Panama is of great interest to all Americans, and Quincy people will have an unusual opportunity to hear of this country from a distinguished townsman who has recently returned. Hon. Everett C. Bumpus will speak under the auspices of the Quincy Historical Society at the chapel of the Unitarian church this evening.

The Pickwick club opened the season, its thirty-sixth, on Oct. 21st at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Wilson Marsh, when the members enjoyed some personally conducted tours. Next week Wednesday evening the club meets with Mr. and Mrs. Herbert W. Beattie and continues its travels, Miss Edith Randall giving a travel talk and some of her experiences enroute.

The social committee of the Point Christian Endeavor society has a novel plan for a hallowe'en social tonight in the vestry. The chairman Helen Sherburne announces that the price of admission is a cent for each seed found in the lemon brought by each one attending. No seedless lemons to be accepted. Other novel delights in keeping with the occasion are promised.

We are hearing a great deal through the press about Constantinople. History is being made these days in that city. The Turkish name for Constantinople is "The Gate of Felicity." On Nov. 6th the Rev. Charles A. S. Dwight, nephew of ex-president Dwight of Yale college, who spent eleven years in that Turkish city is to give a lecture, illustrated by the steropticon, at the Point church on "Constantinople, the Gate of Felicity."

MELROSE SHUT OUT

Quincy High Scores 17--0 In Tuesday's Game At The Park

The Quincy High school team completely outplayed the eleven from Melrose on Tuesday at Merrymount park, the score being 17-0.

Quincy was without the services of Nash and Clapp, but even at that, the team did not play its usual game. Melrose, outside of the Wellesley team perhaps was the weakest team that has come here this season, and if the home team played with its accustomed snap and dash, 40 points might have been scored. The Boston papers have been cracking up this Melrose bunch, and said they should win easily, but some of the Boston sporting writers should take a look at the local team in action and then judge their ability.

Melrose won the toss and chose the west goal, Quincy receiving the kick. The local team started in right away to play and rush Melrose. They were doing fine when someone was offside and they were penalized 15 yards.

Then they got the ball started again, but in the shadow of the goal they were held for downs, Melrose taking the ball. She tried to rush, but could not gain the required distance and the ball returned to the home team.

The latter were now determinted not to be stopped, and in about a minute R. Bates went over. "Venus" Carlson couldn't locate the goal posts and the score stood 5-0.

Melrose then chose to take the kick, but was forced to punt almost immediately. Quincy then tried an onside kick, and Melrose got the ball. On a forward pass Glover Howe was in the way, and grabbing the ball started for a touchdown. He ran about 20 yards and was forced outside, otherwise he would have scored on the play. An exchange of kicks followed, when Quincy was held for downs, and then the whistle blew, Melrose having the ball in the middle of the field. Score 5-0.

The second half started with a rush, for Quincy. "Venus" Carlson booted the pigskin to the Melrose quarter, and Hill nailed him before he started. Baker caught one of McDonald's onside kicks and brought the ball to the 10-yard line. From this point, on two plays, "Russ" Bates was pushed over again, the play going just outside tackle. Carlson kicked a pretty goal.

Quincy kicked to Melrose again, and again McClutchy was downed in his tracks. At this juncture, Melrose showed her only flash of good football, for on end runs and forward passes she gained repeatedly. But it was only a flash in the pan, for she was soon forced to kick. The local boys got back what they had just lost, and then fumbled the ball. It was a case of fumble all round, for on the next play the ball went to Quincy on a fumbled forward pass.

Finally Quincy held Melrose and got the ball on a punt. Then they started to do things. Hill got 25 yards on a forward pass and the Bates brothers and Baker took turns at banging the line. The latter went over for the touchdown and Carlson kicked the goal.

Nothing of interest happened during the rest of the game, as the whistle blew in a few minutes. The ball was in Quincy's possession on Melrose's 25-yard line at the time. Score 17-0.

Gore, the Bates boys, and Hill played a good game for Quincy, and Jones, McClutchy and McDonald showed up well for the visitors.

ARRESTED FOR ASSAULT.

Orazio De La Barberi who is alleged stabbed Antonio Pompei Sunday night on Edwards hill was arrested by the police this noon on a complaint charging him with an assault with a dangerous weapon. Barberi disappeared after the assault and it was thought that he had left for parts unknown. Word was received by the police this morning that he had returned and they went after him.

In the party were Chief Burrell, Inspector McKay and Goodhue, Officers Larkin and Whalan. The officers first went to the shop where it was supposed that he was at work. Not finding him there they went to his home. Here he was found hiding in the cellar.

When cornered Barberie made a desperate attenmpt to escape but the officrs had surrounded the house and after a fight he was subdued and locked up. He will be arraigned in court Thursday.

The regular meeting of the Houghs Neck associates will be held tonight at their clubhouse.

Return From Long Trip Along Rhine Valley Greeted by Cheering Crowds In Streets of Constance--Reached Height of a Thousand Feet and Disappeared In Clouds at One Stage of the Cruise

Friedrichshafen, Oct. 28.—Prince Henry of Prussia spent several hours in the air yesterday as the guest of Count Zeppelin, who made an ascension in his remodelled airship. Not only did the prince thoroughly enjoy his experience, but he sat at the steering wheel for many miles of the flight, guiding the movements of the craft and compelling it to execute all kinds of complicated maneuvers.

Prince Henry's satisfaction at the great flight was unbounded, and he gave expression to it in a telegram which he sent to the emperor: "Under Zeppelin's guidance I felt just as safe as on my own flagship."

Captain Mischke also was a passenger when the start was made in the direction of Uberlingen, to the northward of Constance. With Zeppelin at the wheel, the airship rose to an altitude of 600 feet and, moving rapidly against a strong wind, soon disappeared behind a bank of clouds. Soon messages began to arrive from the towns in the Rhine valley announcing the passage of the airship, but about 2 o'clock in the afternoon a sonorous sound from the sky indicated that the craft was returning. Soon it appeared above the thronged streets of Constance, where the prince saluted in acknowledgment of the ovation from the cheering crowds below.

It had been originally intended to make a flight of only three hours, and the royal family expected the prince to lunch at 2 o'clock, but the prince was so charmed with his successful aerial flight that he extended the cruise until he was driven home by the approaching darkness.

In all, the airship carried five men, two of them being mechanics, and after some water ballast had been cast off the airship rose gracefully and was soon lost in the haze. The Associated Press correspondent followed it in a racing motorboat, but was unable to keep the airship long in view, as it soon attained a speed of thirty-seven miles an hour. Shortly, however, the airship reappeared above the lake, emerging from a cloud bank like some uncanny visitor from an unknown world.

Count Zeppelin evidently wished to show the prince some maneuvering by the craft and he descended to about 300 feet from the surface of the water, turning from right to left and left to right like a well-drilled file of soldiers. Then suddenly it mounted a thousand feet and shot into the clouds, only the mighty hum of its propellers indicating the course it had taken.

The airship returned to its moorings at sunset. Captain Mischke said that the prince was anxious to remain for a few more flights, but that he was uncertain whether his engagements would permit. The prince expressed himself as astonished to find that the lengthy body of the airship showed only the slightest vibration. He regarded the vertical steering gear as simply perfect.

Another Airship Inventor

Dayton, O., Oct. 28.—Frank J. Heinfelt made a successful flight of 1500 feet with an aeroplane materially differing from that of the Wright brothers in that in this machine the single plane principle is used, the Wright machine having double plane surfaces. Although hitherto unknown in the aeronautic world, Heinfelt has built three previous machines, paying his expenses out of his slender salary as a stenographer. His motor was given him by a friend who took it out of an old automobile. The flight yesterday was terminated by a lack of skill on the part of the manipulator, who brought the machine to the ground too suddenly, breaking one of the wings.

Herring Æroplane Damaged

New York, Oct. 28.—During the first trial of A. M. Herring's aeroplane, with which he will try later to meet the requirements of a government test, which took place on Hempstead Plains, L. I., it is said the machine was considerably damaged and that at least two weeks will be required to effect repairs. It is said that the accident was due largely to haste and neglect in assembling the parts. Herring made a flight of about 300 feet at an altitude of three feet, but in attempting to turn certain parts of the machinery failed to work properly, and the aeroplane ploughed up the sand and was disabled.

Harrison Monument Unveiled

Indianapolis, Oct. 28.—The tribute of his home was paid to General Benjamin Harrison yesterday. The memory of Indiana's distinguished son, soldier, statesman and President of the United States, was honored in a way to be remembered by the thousands of citizens who gathered to witness the unveiling of the bronze likeness of their former fellow-townsman. Vice President Fairbanks presented the monument to the people. A parade preceded the unveiling exercises.

Old Coughs

Keep in close touch with your family doctor. No medicine was ever made that could take his place. Trust him at all times.

Old coughs, desperate coughs, rasping coughs, extremely perilous coughs, coughs that shake the whole body. It takes a strong medicine, a doctor's medicine, to master such coughs. A great many people rely on Ayer's Cherry Pectoral.

Delegates from Philergians Mrs. Alice F. H. Dow and Mrs. Lilu B. Porter.

RUNAWAY.

One of the Oak Grove pastry wagons was capsized in City Square this noon. The horse was left standing alone in front of Thompson's restaurant and become frightened as a passing automobile. The horse ran a short distance and then turned sharply toward the fountain. This caused the wagon to be upset. Both shafts was smashed, the springs broken and the top of the wagon somewhat smashed. There was a general mix up of the load although more of it went on the ground.

The young ladies who will grace the Y. M. C. A. garden concert tonight in the capacity of sewing ladies are:—Miss Beatrice Morrison, Ruth Penniman, Catherine Saville, Hazel Jennings, Helen Kingman, Lois Williams, Alice Webb, Dulah Miller, Elizabeth Leyman, Gladys Ganzel and Elizabeth Keating.

St. John's church and some private residences are decorated for the Catholic centennial.

GOOD SHOWING.

With drums beating and banners waving, the St. John's Holy Name society paraded the streets of Quincy last night in preparation for the big parade of Sunday in Boston. The society 175 strong, was divided into six companies and with Commander Lennon at the head of the line, left the church yard about 8 o'clock. The men marched down Hancock street through City square, in full company front, as far as Adams Academy and return. It was a pretty sight to see these men in line, and they marched like regulars. All in perfect step and straight lines. They made a fine showing and the people of Quincy can rest assured that the local society will not be behind the others in the parade, when it comes to efficiency in the marching.

Hussey—Mason.

William Hussey of Waterville, Me., an employe in the engineers department of the drafting rooms at the shipyard, was married Tuesday evening to Annie L. Mason of Bath, Me. Rev. Omar W. Folson of Bath performed the ceremony. After the reception the young couple left on a wedding tour, which will end in their new home 47 Bigelow street, Quincy.

—"You know, I suppose," he whispered, 'what a young man's privilege is when he sees a shooting star?" "No," she answered, "I haven't the slightest idea. There goes one!"—Chicago Tribune.

The Susanah Tufts chapter, D. A. R. of WEYMOUTH held a well attended meeeting on Monday afternoon, at the home of Miss Annah Hayward, 494 Quincy avenue. Mrs. O. W. Charles read a paper on the subject "From Boston to Havana."

The people of WELLESLEY are wondering if burning street lights all night affords the protection claimed. Some time ago it was voted to keep the lights going all night as a guard against yeggmen and thieves. The thieves are still at work.

The semi-monthly meeting of the Monday art club of RANDOLPH was held Monday afternoon with Mrs. Adoniram Smith. The study of Italian art was resumed, several interesting papers on famous Italian artists being read.

William T. Hickey, aged 5, of BROOKLINE, was instantly killed last evening by being hit by a fast moving electric car. The boy was at play on the tracks with his brother when the accident occurred.

Took Clerk for Burglar.

Inspector Daniel R. McKay of the Quincy police is one of the cleverest of officials, according to Chief Watts of Boston "there are none better." But "Dan" was badly fooled one night last week right here in Quincy. He happened to be passing the post office about 12.30 in the morning, and was surprised to see a light shining within at that hour. So he went to the door and knocked.

George Sullivan, who is the night clerk at the post office took his time about going to the door, and when he did go was surprised to have Igspector McKay ask him what he was doing there George replied that he was working and on being asked how long since they worked in the post office till that hour, was told that since Oct. 1, a new schedule of hours was in order. Mr. McKay said, "All right I thought you were a burglar," and departed.

BRAINTREE PHILERGIANS.

October 20th, the Philergians held a most successful meeting in Cochato hall. A large attendance of club members and invited guests were present, The president, Mrs. Albert E. Avery in the chair. After reading of the minutes and notices, Mendelssohn's "Spring Song" was delightfully rendered by Miss Eleanor Shaw, accompanied by Miss Gladys Shaw, pianist.

After a few remarks by the president, the chairman for the afternoon was introduced, who presented Dr. Ray DeWitt Mallory. The subject of the lecture, "Village Improvement," was well and ably treated, Dr. Mallory giving quite a full description of its beautiful villages in the Berkshire hills. It is imposible in this small article to give all that was presented, but if the close attention shown by the audience was indicative of intense interest in the subject, then the spirit of village improvement must spread until each individual in our beautiful town of Braintree will have its improvements at heart.

After the lecture the president thanked Dr. Mallory in behalf of the club, also the guests for their attendance. Time was given for discussion. Rev. Thomas Simms promptly responded, giving a vivid and graphic picture of the beautiful places in Braintree, as well as the undesirable localities. A few remarks were also made by Miss Carrie Loring of the School Board, Mr. Anthony, Supt. of schools and Rev. Frederick Griffin of All Souls church.

Twenty-two years ago a "village improvement" society was started in Braintree. People then were full of enthusiasm on this subject, but the society died a natural death. Times have changed, women's clubs have become a power in the land, a factor in the town of Braintree, strengthened by the desire of all to "love our city and make it lovely."

November 3d, the entertainment of the Philergians will be theatricals, given under the management of Mrs. George O. Wales. Club members are requested to be present at 2.30 o'clock, promptly.

Sixty new voters have been placed on the list from the Honghs Neck district.

HONEST WORK

Being Done on Panama Canal The Opinion of Judge Bumpus

Hon. E. C. Bumpus gave an interesting talk Wednesday evening in the Unitarian chapel under the auspices of the Quincy Historical society. Mr. Bumpus' subject was "Panama" from which country he recently returned.

Brooks Adams, Esq., presided and in introducing the speaker said that when he first began the practice of law it was in the district court at which Mr. Bumpus was the justice. He had watched his career from that time to his appointment to go to Panama to settle some land disputes, and noted his success.

Mr. Bumpus said that he would quote largely from authors who had written Spanish history. He spoke at length of the history of Panama from earliest times, and the famous canal, interspersing his remarks with some incidents by way of illustration. The first map known was published in 1507, and gave a margin of a water way between North and South America.

He spoke of the early Spanish settlers and the hardships they endured, and of the old trail across the isthmus and the search for a natural water way to connect the two great oceans. He told of the old woman his party had met on this old trail and in whose dirty hut they had taken shelter from the rain. This woman said she knew she was 90 years of age and did not know how much more. She gave them much insight into the early history of the trail, and the scenes and hardships endured by parties crossing the isthmus as early as 1849.

He spoke of the plan made under the reign of Charles V, and which was at first earnestly taken up by Philip II, but who became so discouraged that he decreed it would be contrary to divine will if anything better than the old laid trail was built.

Judge Bumpus then brought the history down to 1825, when the Central American envoy interested our government in the subject. This was the first serious attempt by our government when John Quincy Adams, a Quincy boy, was President. It was not until 1880, however, that a shovelful of dirt was removed during the attempt of the French. Up to 1903 there was no time in which the canal could be built. That it is being done now is due to the French and to President Roosevelt.

As far as he could observe literature did not flourish in the isthmus. Not a book or newspaper is being supplied by the government.

The past and the present, said the speaker, are so closely allied that you cannot take up one without taking up the other, which fact he illustrated with word pictures obtained from his own observation.

There is no great corporation he said, whose affairs are handled with more honesty than is the canal. The canal according to an engineer, he had met, would be ready for use in 1915. There are some problems yet to be worked out, but the most difficult have been overcome.

He spoke of the conditions of the men employed. Many of these have burned their bridges behind them, and they are likely to be discharged at a minute's notice. He believed colonization of these men would be a good thing, as there was much futile land capable of development which was now a jungle.

The more you know of the people of Panama the more you will realize that they are not so inferior to us as imagined. We should cultivate the friendship of these people, and they should have an object lesson from the 5,000 people now there.

Meeting of The Women's Club

One of the largest gatherings since the formation of the Quincy Women's club, assembled at the club house on Tuesday afternoon for the lecture by Prof. Edward Howard Griggs.

Promptly at half past two Mrs. Morton, president, called the meeting to order for a short business session, during which reports were given by the recording and corresponding secretaries. Mrs. Bishop announced that tickets could be had for the Federation meeting at Bridgewater. Mrs. Blanchard for the Arts and Crafts committee announced that classes had been formed in dress making and millinery; to meet Friday mornings and Friday afternoons respectively at the club house.

For the Civic committee Mrs. Whitcher told of the grand results of one month's trial of the School Savings bank. Her committee had expended less than fifty dollars to start the saving of pennies by the school children, furnishing books, etc., and there were now 2,839 depositors and a total of $1,569.49 saved during October. The announcement was received with applause. Mrs. Whitcher also spoke of the tuberculosis exhibit at City Hall and the work it hoped to accomplish in Quincy.

The entertainment opened with music as usual and the club was especially favored in having Mr. Walter E. Loud, violinist, and Mrs. John F. Hunt pianist, for both are artists and favorites. Mr. Loud was given a most hearty recognition as he enterel the room. He rendered the "Cradle Song" by Godard and "Serenade" by Drdla, with his usual delicate and skilful touch, the contrast in the two selections, was pleasing and harmonious and the applause was enthusiastic in its appreciation. Mr. Loud closed the afternoon's program with another solo, "Hungarian Fantasie" by Hauser.

The lecture was under the auspices of the Civic committee and in a few words Mrs. Whitcher presented Mr. Griggs to the club, the members giving him a hearty welcome.

"Public Education and the Problem of Democracy" seemed a solid subject for a women's club but the close attention accorded Mr. Griggs and the frequent applause showed the receptiveness and appreciation of the members.

A brief review of the lecture would not do justice to the speaker. He spoke of the old democracy of ancient times which was not a democracy at all, and of that of today and of the responsibilites of the citizens of these United States of America. He stood for moral elevation, less fickleness and selfishness.

What we received so abundantly should be returned in good measure to our fellowmen. Should not take our obligations lightly but live for a purpose not drift but progress.

Instead of a lecturer Mr. Griggs might very properly be called a teacher or leader, as his thoughts stand for right living and thinking and whoever listens and carries away even a part of what they have heard cannot fail to be benefited.

After the lecture Mr. Griggs was given an informal reception and a social tea was enjoyed.

Democratic Rallies Well Attended

Two largely attended and enthusiastic Democratic rallies were held on Wednesday evening, one in St. Mary's hall, West Quincy, and the other in A. O. H. hall, South Quincy.

The crowd at the Ward Four rally filled the hall to the doors, many being forced to stand during the entire evening. Charles McGilvray, president of the Democratic City committee, presided, and the speakers were all men who have been before the public eye for years. Joseph F. O'Connell, candidate for reelection to Congress, was the first speaker, and he was followed by Gen. Charles W. Bartlett, ex-Representative Theodore Glynn of Boston, James E. Foley of Randolph, candidate for senator, and Representative Rednor P. Coombs, candidate for reelection.

The rally at Ward Three was presided over by William A. Kelly and the speakers were Gen. Bartlett, C. Lawrence Cooney of Boston, Theodore Glynn, Edward J. Parker and Congressman O'Connell.

Congressman O'Connell spoke on the chief plank of the Democratic platform, the bank deposits guarantee. He also said a few words in regard to J. Mitchell Galvin, his opponent. Mr. O'Connell said: "The government of this country was first carried on by John Hancock, born a few rods down the street; by John Adams, and by John Quincy Adams, born around the corner. Quincy has never yet been represented by a political renegade, and, thank God, it never will be." The audience rose as one man at these words, and a burst of applause rang out which lasted several minutes. Mr. O'Connell was cheered as he left the hall, and forced to shake hands all round before he could get into his automobile.

Whist Tournament Monthly Prizes.

Although their were many events, social and otherwise, taking place Wednesday evening, seven tables participated in the weekly whist tournament at the Granite City club. Fairly good scores were made but the percentages did not average as high as usual. The best scores were accredited to J. T. Fuller and Mark L. Read, Jr.

The summary for the month, which includes the last Wednesday in September, gives Henry F. Tilden the first monthly prize with a percent of 59.9, and John W. Bell the second, with 57.6 The consolation prize went to Thmas G. Smith whose percent for the month was 41.6.

A 25-ride book between Quincy and Boston was the first monthly prize, a 12-ride book the second, and a five ride ticket the consolation.

Henry P. Furnald served the lunch, which included salmon salad, raised puffs, hot rolls, coffee, crackers and cheese.

An aged man, well known in DEDHAM, has been missing since Oct. 3, when he went to visit in Roxbury. He has not been seen since, and the police have asked to locate him. He is 85 years old, and has but one eye.

Complimentary to Knocker's Club

That unique dining club, known far and wide as the Knockers club, accepted the invitation Wednesday afternoon of Anthony Thompson, proprietor of the City Square restaurant, to be his guests at a chicken dinner. The club members reported for duty at 2 o'clock, and for the next two hours were kept busy partaking of one of the best of the many dinners ever enjoyed. There was but one guest. That was City Clerk Keith who occupied a seat of honor at the right hand of the president.

Mayor Shea occupied his usual seat at the head of the table with Inspector Goodhue at his right hand. Fred has but recently become a member of the club, but he is fast getting hardened to the knocks that were kept sailing in his direction. Directly in front of the president was a handsome bouquet of roses, while a fragrant bouquet of carnations were placed in front of the host by the club. There was but one absentee, and his absence was said to be due to the fact that he stopped in the South Terminal to have his shoes blacked and the job took so long a time that he missed the train.

It was but a few minutes past the hour assigned when the feast began with tomato soup. This was followed by scallops on toast, celery, cranberry sauce, roast spring chicken, not of the Pierce kind, julienne potatoes, spaghetti (such as Goodhue admires) with tomato sauce, mixed salad, Parker House rolls, fancy rice pudding, ice cream, cake, toasted crackers, cheese, black coffee, fruit, cigars and gum drops.

For two solid hours the diners sat about the festive board and enjoyed the many good things which were not only well cooked but well served.

The dinner over, Mayor Shea rising with difficulty, expressed the thanks of the party for the excellent dinner, and moved a vote of thanks. The motion was seconded by Leo and was put by Tim Collins, who said that all in favor should stand. This was intended to catch the president, but he was equal to the occasion and promptly arose with the others.

During the dinner the usual amount of good natured banter was on tap, and many a sharp pointed shaft went true to the mark. Perhaps the only unusual feature of the affair was the attempt of Chief Pierce of Milton to carry home a generous slice of roquefort cheese. The attempt was discovered in time however by the sharp eyes of Chief Burrell. The next dinner will probably be held the latter part of next month.

—"School yards or playgrounds is the latest slogan of those who are talking more room and more freedom for the children of the city, not only in behalf of their physical well-being, but also for their moral good. The agitation has arisen co-incidental with that in favor of the park system, in order that crowded districts may be relieved, and alleys, back yards and stone pavements be replaced by large, open and pleasant spots in which children can properly enjoy the recreation so necessary to their life and health."—From the Springfield, Ohio, News, August 30, 1908.

Ladies Night Of Quincy Council

Quincy council Knights of Columbus, held its annual ladies' night in Electa hall on Wednesday evening. The uncertainty of the weather kept many at home, but those that did brave the rain enjoyed themselves thoroughly. Whist and dancing were the attractions of the evening. Twenty tables were in play and the scores were exceedingly close, especially for second prize. The first ladies' prize was awarded to Mrs. Edward J. Barrett, and the second ladies' prize to Mrs. J. A. Keating. John Faircloth and Thomas Keating won the first and second gentlemen's prizes. While the whist was going on, Joyce's orchestra played for those who preferred dancing and thus all were entertained at all times.

After the whist was over refreshments were served, and then everyone joined in the dance, which lasted till 12. The success of the evening is due to the untiring efforts of William A. Carey, who had full charge of the affair.

—It may not be generally known that the minimum fine for carrying concealed weapons is now $25. This is a new law, passed by the last Legislature.

Last Day For Nominations

Nomination papers for all candidates to be voted for at the Municipal caucuses Nov. 10, by both the Republican and Democratic parties, will be opened tonight. This is the last day for filing papers, and unless in the hands of one of the secretaries of the two parties by 7.30 names cannot be printed on the official ballot.

In the case of the Democratic party, papers were given out by the ward secretaries so that it is not definitely known who will file papers. It is rumored however that there will be several seeking nominations for the City Council from Ward Four. It is also probable that Mayor Shea will have an opponent in George H. Wilson.

There will be several contests among the Republicans, particularly in Ward Committee and Councilmen from Ward One, and Councilmen from Ward Three. As far as known, Eugene R. Stone has no opposition in his candidacy as the party candidates for Mayor.

CLARK—WELTCH.

At Brookline, last night, Miss Florence Weltch, daughter of T. Henry Weltch, was married to Albert Earl Clark of Braintree, by Rev. Reginald H. Howe, D. D., rector of the Church of Our Saviour, where the wedding took place. Mrs. Edward Hill was matron-of-honor and the bridesmaids were Miss Marion C. Weltch, sister of the bride, and Miss Maude Sprague. The best man was Ernest Clark of New York, brother of the bridegroom, and the ushers were Frank Stadmiller, John Sharpe, William Meehan, and William T. Russell, all of Boston. Mr. and Mrs. Clark will live in Braintree.

GARDEN CONCERT.

The Y. M. C. A. gymnasium presented a very pretty appearance Wednesday night, being artistically decorated with autumn leaves and palms from Patterson's greenhouse. Music was furnished by the Boston Trio, supplemented by vocal and piano selections rendered by Messrs. J. B. Frauenfielden and Wendell Luce, all artists in their special line.

Light refreshment were served by a corps of charming young ladies dressed in white. They were keep busy supplying the needs of the audience who were seated about small tables chatting, and enjoying the good things. Great credit is due the social committee who had the affair in charge.

Brief Locals Of a Busy City

All Hallows eve Saturday night.

Sunday will be the first day of November.

There was a new moon Sunday night which sets tonight at 7.52.

For a first class hair cut or shave, try Carle's, 6 Washington street. Four chairs; no waiting.

Every voter should visit the polls next Tuesday. Quincy's political representation in the future depends on the vote cast this year.

The Holy Name societies of all the Quincy churches will have their last drill tonight before the big parade. All three societies will parade the streets of their respective districts.

Rev. Daniel C. Carey, C. S. P., who has been at home since Saturday, leaves Quincy today. Fr. Carey goes to St. John, Michigan, to give a mission for a week. From St. John, he goes to Racine, Wisconsin to give to series of sermons to non-Catholics. Fr. Carey is connected with the Paulist house in Chicago.

The decorations at St. John's church in honor of the centenary celebration are very striking. A huge cross has been placed over the middle door; over the left door is "1808" and over the right "1908." All are illuminated with electric lights. The national colors are hung in festoons across the front of the church.

The annual meeting of the Quincy Charitable society will be held on Monday afternoon Nov. 2, at the Quincy Woman's club, instead of Wednesday, Nov. 4. 3t

—Electric lights have been installed in the playground at Glens Falls, N. Y. The grounds are now open until 9 P. M.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

CAMPAIGN NOW AT ITS HEIGHT

TAFT'S TUMULTUOUS WELCOME

His Appearance In Madison Square Garden the Signal For Cheering Which Lasted Nineteen Minutes--Great Republican Parade--Bryan, Speaking In Tour Along the Hudson River, Predicts His Success

New York, Oct. 29.—The Republican campaign in New York city reached a climax last night when William H. Taft and Charles E. Hughes spoke from the same platform at Madison Square Garden to an audience that filled the enormous amphitheatre.

Their appearance at Madison Square Garden came at the end of a day that, from a political viewpoint, was one of the most remarkable on record. During the day Taft spoke at fourteen meetings and Hughes spoke fifteen times. Then last night, while the Madison Square meeting was in progress, a giant parade was wending its way through a downpour of rain down through the heart of the city. These were only the main features of the day.

Hours before the doors of the garden were thrown open long lines of ticket holders had formed. There is no other hall in New York that holds such a vast audience as Madison Square Garden.

Splendid police arrangements prevented any unseemly crowding when the doors were opened shortly after rain began to fall. The crowd flowed into the big auditorium from entrances on all four sides, and in half an hour the four gallery tiers of seats were filled and the reserved seats on the main floor had partly filled. The police had to close the doors at 8 and bar all but reserved seat ticket holders.

When Hughes entered the hall the crowd, which filled every available space in the auditorium, cheered him for sixteen minutes without stopping. Hughes made a characteristic address, which was received enthusiastically.

But it remained for Taft to inspire the greatest demonstration. It was two minutes after 11 o'clock when he arrived. As soon as he was recognized there was a tremendous outburst of cheering which lasted for nineteen minutes. The crowd shouted "Taft, Taft, big Bill Taft," and sang Yale college songs, while the band played, but could be heard only when the cheering died down a bit.

Mr. Taft stood on the platform with a smile of appreciation illuminating his face. As the cheering continued minute after minute Taft grew more serious and tried to compel silence by holding up his hand, but this simply caused more thunderous cheering than ever.

General Porter, who presided, stood beside Taft and finally secured comparative quiet. Then he introduced Taft as "our next president" and the cheering started again. When it stopped Taft started his speech. His voice was very hoarse and he made his address brief.

"The inspiration of this presence, no matter what happens on Nov, 3, will always be the sweetest memory of my life," said Taft. This sentence won the audience to the candidate at once. He added: "The spirit of loyal Republicanism that is instinct in this audience makes me rejoice that I have always been a Republican."

A moment later the candidate commended the Roosevelt policies, and another shout of approval went up.

Mr. Taft briefly reviewed the work of the Republican party. Because of the huskiness of his voice he spoke for less than ten minutes. He stood for a few minutes on the platform before leaving the hall, smiling broadly as the thousands cheered him and shouted that he would win.

Senator Lodge, in a speech previous to the arrival of Taft, declared Bryan unfit to be president because of indefinite, unsettled policies and lack of executive ability.

Before going to Madison Square Garden Taft spoke at Cooper Union. There he discussed the labor question in greater detail than he has heretofore. He endeavored to explain the labor decisions he rendered while on the bench which have been made the basis of political attacks. During the evening Taft also addressed gatherings at the Zion African Methodist Episcopal church, Camp Hughes, Camp Taft, the Thalia theatre on the Bowery and Huber's casino.

The march of the Republican cohorts to the garden was not the least spectacular feature of the occasion. Undaunted by a persistent drizzle which made tramping through four miles of city streets anything but a pleasant task, fully 6000 of the faithful trudged their way down Fifth avenue, their spirits excited by outbursts of martial music and their narrowing horizon made rosy by red fire.

Sparsely fringing the roadway stood the unregenerate, under shelter of glistening umbrellas. From these came unappreciated humor and meterological remarks about Bryan and Kern puddles, which fell on unheeding ears. With red fire flanking them, the marchers passed on disdainfully, their collars turned up, their steps giving out a wet squeaking as they went. Among the marchers the decorative accessories varied, although all had red fire. Many flaunted badges and flags, some carried red white and blue umbrellas, while others sported top hats.

The automobiles in which were the Republican gubernatorial candidate and members of the reception committee overtook the procession at Forty-second street and, preceded by a detachment of grand marshals on horseback, rushed through the marching hosts, the paraders falling back on either side of the avenue to let them by. In this fashion the 6000 were reviewed, the governor bowing his acknowledgments from behind the raised window of his Limousine.

Bryan Tours Up-State

Albany, Oct. 29.—The feature of Mr Bryan's tour up-state was the appearance on the platform here last night, where he presided, of former United States Senator Hill. It was the first time in several years that Hill had attended such a gathering, so that when he stepped forward to introduce Democracy's leader the great crowd which packed the hall rose and wildly cheered.

While disavowing that he was now in politics, Hill declared that he was heartily in favor of the election of Bryan. Referring to the Republican charge that a panic would follow Bryan's election, Hill declared that it would not be a business panic, "but it will be panic on the part of the hundreds of thousands of federal office-holders and public officials who will have to surrender their places to the victorious party."

Mr. Bryan got an ovation as he arose to speak, the audience reluctantly obeying the waving of his hand to them to become quiet. He expressed his appreciation of the cordial welcome he had received and said he believed that the Democratic party was going to win a great victory. "This victory is going to be won by the co-operation of the east and the west, the north and the south," he said, "and it will cement the Democratic party as a fighting force." He urged support of the Democratic state and congressional tickets, because, he said, they were fighting on the same platform and bearing the brunt of the battle and therefore deserved the people's suffrage.

As he had done at other places, he laid stress on the plank in the Democratic platform providing for publicity of campaign contributions before election. Bryan repeatedly referred to Taft's labor record. He declared Taft was the most objectionable public man to laboring men the country has ever known.

Everywhere along the line of travel immense crowds turned out in the rain to hear Bryan during the day. He frequently left the train to make speeches. His reception at Schenectady was notable. Two of his three speeches there were made in the open to the employes of the locomotive works and the General Electric company, who, notwithstanding the drenching they got, stayed throughout his remarks. He told them the tide was fast running with the Democratic party and that reports from all over the country indicated a Democratic victory. He met another large crowd at Troy, from which point he left this morning at 9:45 for Utica, Rome and Syracuse.

Conners' Figures on New York

New York, Oct. 29.—Chairman Conners of the Democratic state committee last night gave out the following statement:

"I am thoroughly confident that Bryan and Chanler will carry the state of New York. My confidence is based on a complete canvass of the state and on detailed reports I have received this week from every Democratic state committeeman, county chairman and prominent party leaders. These reports show that the labor vote of this state is practically solid for both the national and state tickets. Bryan's plurality in the state will be more than 40,000 and Chanler's not less than 100,000. These figures are conservative."

Sherman Reviews Marching Clubs

Saratoga, N. Y., Oct. 29.—Fourteen special trains over trolley and steam roads throughout Saratoga county brought many Republican marching clubs here last night to join in a big rally arranged for James S. Sherman, who spoke here. Despite a pouring rain that flooded the streets, the clubs paraded through the business section of the town and cheered the candidate as he reviewed them. At Convention hall, where he was given a great reception by an audience that filled the big auditorium, Sherman reviewed the general issues of the campaign, devoting most of his argument to the tariff.

Kern Made Brief Speeches

Elkhart, Ind., Oct. 29.—Electric cars, steam railroad trains and automobiles were utilized in turn yesterday by John W. Kern in campaigning through the northern part of Indiana. In each of the towns visited enthusiastic crowds of good proportions greeted the nominee. His speeches were, in the main, along lines previously covered by him and were brief, owing to a growing hoarseness and to fatigue.

Carbolic Acid For Chauffeur

New York, Oct. 29.—Louis Wormser, the banker, narrowly escaped serious injury at the hands of a person believed to be in sympathy with the striking taxicab chauffeurs. Two men hurled a bottle containing carbolic acid at the chauffeur of the taxicab in which Wormser was riding. The missile smashed against the window of the cab and a piece of glass struck Wormser, cutting his face. The police were unable to locate the men who threw the bottle.

Quincy People Are Pleased to Learn How it is Done.

It's pretty hard to attend to duties
With a constantly aching back;
With annoying urinary disorders.
Doan's Kidney Pills make work easier.
They cure backache.
They cure every kidney ill.

James P. Daugherty, living on Hammond Place, Quincy, Mass. says: "I have used Doan's Kidney Pills and am glad to let others know what they have done for me. I suffered constantly from backache and had but little strength or energy to get through with my day's work. I took many so-called kidney cures but did not succeed in finding relief until I began using Doan's Kindney Pills which I procured at the Cox, Drug Store. I was surprised and gratified at the prompt way they relieved me. My back was soon strong and free from pain and I felt better generally. I would go to considerable trouble to get anyone to use Doan's Kidney Pills as I have so much confidence in their merit."

TO OVERAWE SUBJECTS

Emperor's Object In Inviting Our Fleet to Japan

Kalispell, Mont., Oct. 29.—That the Atlantic fleet was sent to Japan at the request of the emperor to overawe his subjects was the statement made by United States Senator Dixon in an address here. Dixon said it was known at Washington long before the fleet started on its spectacular voyage around the world that the sentiment of many of the people of Japan was likely to bring on war. This sentiment was not shared by the ruler and his councillors, but was so great that they could make no headway against it.

Then it was that the emperor decided to ask President Roosevelt to assist him in clearing the situation by sending a large and imposing fleet to strike terror to the hearts of those Japanese subjects who insisted on war with a power of whose immense resources they knew nothing. It was to be an object lesson.

President Roosevelt was communicated with and later the plan was approved and the great fleet prepared for its trip around the world. The object lesson, said the senator, was successful, even before our fleet reached the shores of the island empire.

MYSTERY SHROUDS DOUBLE TRAGEDY

Man and Woman Die Without Making a Statement

Greenfield, Mass., Oct. 29.—Benjamin E. Gaines, 39 years old, and Miss Harriet M. Wing, aged 29, were found in a dying condition from bullet wounds in front of the girl's boarding place last night. Neither was able to make any statement before death.

The tragedy was discovered by Miss Jennie Reed, who, hearing groans, found the girl lying on the ground near the piazza, where she had probably fallen when shot, and Gaines hanging over the piazza railing, with his head and trunk on the outside. A revolver was also found on the piazza.

Medical Examiner Twitchell was called and ordered the body of Miss Wing, who was then dead, taken to an undertaking establishment, and Gaines was rushed to a hospital. Miss Wing had three bullet wounds in her right breast. Gaines was suffering from a bullet wound in the right temple. He died about 10:30.

A peculiar feature of the shooting is the fact that, although the shots were heard at 6:40 o'clock, the tragedy was not discovered until two hours after it had occurred. Henry Bates, at whose house the girl boarded, heard the four shots, but he thought that someone was shooting a dog. The house is located on a street used by many pedestrians and vehicles and why the two bodies had not been discovered before is something the police are unable to understand.

Although the police are of the opinion that Gaines did the shooting, that cannot be definitely ascertained. No clue to the motive can be learned. Both Miss Wing and Gaines were well known, popular and respected.

Gaines had been keeping company with Miss Wing for over a year and as far as is known there had never been any estrangement between them nor cause for jealousy on the part of either. They were both of a particularly pleasant disposition.

Trip Abroad Is Delayed

St. Petersburg, Oct. 29.—After an imprisonment of eleven months and five days, Nicholas Tschaikovsky, the Russian revolutionist, was yesterday afternoon released on $25,000 bail, pending trial. Tschaikovsky remains under police surveillance and will therefore be unable to go abroad immediately, as he expected. The rigors of prison life apparently have made little impression upon Tschaikovsky's physical and mental condition.

Decapitated by Red Hot Wire

Cleveland, Oct. 29.—Erick Els, a wire drawer at the American Steel and Wire company mills, was drawing a red hot wire when it broke. The end struck him about the neck and the wire, released from the tension, suddenly coiled about his neck. His neck was burned through in a few seconds by the hot wire, completely severing his head from his body.

NEWS IN BRIEF

Owing to the large increase of business on the Poughkeepsie Bridge system, the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad company has taken steps toward important improvements in connection with that line.

Loretto Di Gravio, for killing Valentino Di Pietro at Lynn., Mass., was sentenced to two years in the house of correction.

The village of Nepaug, Conn., named after an Indian chief buried there, is to be obliterated by the construction of a large reservoir for the Hartford Water company.

Melancthon W. Stryker, president of Hamilton college, is in a critical condition at his home at Clinton, N. Y., from injuries received in a runaway accident.

The body of Peter Polinski, 2 years old, was found in Middle river, near the home of his parents at Exeter, N. H. The child fell into the river accidentally.

Rev. Charles Stowe, son of the late Harriet Beecher Stowe, has decided not to change from a Congregationalist to an Episcopalian.

EACH LOOKING OUT FOR SELF

Break Between Curtis and Morse Is Sharper Than Anticipated

PRESIDENT WAS IN THE DARK

Disclaims Knowledge of Some of the Bank's Loans to Morse, to Whom He Vigorously Protested Against Continuance of His Practice--Further Testimony as to One Draft of $210,000 by Morse

New York, Oct. 29.--Charles W. Morse and A. H. Curtis parted company yesterday at their trial before Judge Hough in the criminal branch of the United States court on an indictment containing sixty odd counts charging them with as many deviations from legal methods in their management of the National Bank of North America.

That each defendant would look out mainly for himself had been expected, in spite of the intimation of counsel for Morse that they must hang together or hang separately, but the break that actually came was much sharper than had been anticipated.

Curtis, a witness in his own behalf, declared that he had never known about Morse's ice pools, and that he had never known that his bank was being used by Morse to further the interests of such a pool. Concerning several of the bank's loans to Morse, Curtis disclaimed all knowledge. About one of them he said: "I didn't know anything about that, I was in the Adirondacks when it was made."

The apparent determination of Curtis to exonerate himself of all blame became sharply defined when, under the prompting of his attorney, Curtis produced a letter written by him under date of June 13, 1907, and addressed to Morse, in which he made vigorous protest against the continuance of practices inaugurated by the latter and which, in Curtis' opinion, constituted a grave menace to the stability of the Bank of North America.

The incident of the over-draft of $210,000 by Morse, previously testified to, was made the subject of searching questioning by the witness' own attorney. Curtis related the coming of F. Augustus Heinze to him with a request for a loan of $126,000 and his refusal to grant the accommodation. Morse had remonstrated with him, saying: "Unless we let them have the money they must go to the wall." Curtis had stood firm, however, he said, and retorted: "They cannot have a cent of the bank's money; if they must fail, they must fail."

To his amazement, however, he testified, a personal check of Charles W. Morse for $126,000, drawn to the order of Heinze, came through the next day. The check had been honored, although Morse at the time, the witness said, had a balance to his credit of only $3100.

"I at once went to Mr. Morse," the witness stated, "and told him that he must protect the bank and at once wipe out this overdraft. Morse sent out and got two boxes of securities and turned over their contents to me. I told him that the securities he offered were insufficient, and he offered to give me an order on $1,000,000 of steamship bonds which he had on deposit in London. I accepted the offer, and upon being given the order at once cabled to London to have the securities held, subject to the Bank of North America's order."

The witness was then turned over to the attorneys for Morse for what virtually proved a cross-examination. Despite the efforts of the Morse attorneys to present Curtis in the light of a free agent, who had at all times been free from the control of Morse, the witness persisted in maintaining his contention that he had been but the instrument of another's will and purpose.

"I never made a dollar through any speculations in any of the enterprises upon which the bank was loaning money," said he. "I earned my salary and that was all. The bank was my life's business and I worked for it conscientiously and faithfully."

Suicide In Sight of Crowd

New York, Oct. 29.—A crowd that filled a platform of the Brooklyn elevated road was horrified when a woman darted to the edge of the platform and threw herself in the path of an approaching train. She went under the wheels and was instantly killed. She was Mrs. Adam Lindauer, wife of a Brooklyn hairdresser. Lindauer can give no reason why his wife should have wished to take her own life.

President Roosevelt's Hike

Washington, Oct. 29.—In a chilly and steady rain, President Roosevelt, shortly after 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon, left the White House with Major General Bell for a long walk. They struck out into the country and when they returned to the White House about 6 o'clock they were wet to the skin. The jaunt was about twelve miles.

Accidentally Killed by Cousin

Swanville, Me., Oct. 29.—Addison Knowlton, aged 25, died from a bullet wound received by the accidental discharge of a rifle in the hands of his cousin, Lester Knowlton. The two were rabbit hunting near their home here when Lester's rifle went off unexpectedly, the bullet passing through his cousin's body.

Lady Betty Across the Water

By C. N. & A. M. WILLIAMSON

Copyright, 1906, by McClure, Phillips & Co.

"Here comes Cora herself, now, in Tom Doremus' Electra," said Mrs. Ess Kay. "It must make Mrs. Van der Windt wild, his going so much with the Pitchley lot, as she can't stand them and would keep Cora and Carolyn out of everything in Newport if she could."

I didn't wonder at Mr. Doremus, though, as I bowed to him and found time to know exactly how Mrs. Pitchley looked and what she wore, in the half second before our two motors flashed apart. I thought her splendidly handsome, and I liked the gleam in her dark gray eyes, which promised fun. But just then our chauffeur slowed down before a house which seemed to cover about a quarter of a mile of ground.

"Welcome to my little cottage, dear Betty," said Mrs. Ess Kay.

If this is her idea of a cottage, I don't know what her conception of a castle must be! And yet, when you come to analyze it, there really is something about the place which suggests a kind of glorified, Titanic cottage, rather too grand for a king, unless he were a fairy king, but possibly suited to an emperor. But I do believe rich Americans think that what is good enough for a king is only just good enough for them at a pinch—and I've heard Mrs. Ess Kay call Windsor dreadfully shabby.

Her "cottage" looks as if it were built of gray satinwood, but it is really shingles, and shingles can be the loveliest material imaginable, it seems, for the covering of a house, especially with a foundation of granite sparkling with mica. They are soft and shimmery in their tints these shingles as a dove's breast; some are dark, some light, but all are feathery in effect, and altogether the Moorings, with its gables and porches and bow windows and balconies and wide verandas, gives the effect of a huge, ruffly and motherly gray bird with her wings spread wide to shelter her birdlings.

I felt quite content to be one of the birdlings as I went in. I am sorry to say I'm not a bit fonder of Mrs. Ess Kay than I was on the ship, but the "cottage" looked so hospitable and jolly and the air and the sunshine sparkled so that I couldn't help feeling that it was pleasant to be young and alive and on the threshold of amusing new adventures. I was happy, and I would have liked to sing. I wanted to be very good friends with everybody, including Potter, and I fell in love with the house the minute I set foot on the front veranda.

The great gorgeous palace in New York is far grander, of course, and must have cost four or five times as much, still only very rich people could have built and furnished the Moorings or afford to live in it.

There is a big square hall, not to be compared to ours at Battlemead, of course, though the Persian rugs and the pictures are fine, and the staircase is peculiarly charming. It looks a staircase made for sitting out dances with men you like, and evidently it knows its value as a flirting place and lives up to it, for there are fat, bright colored silk and satin cushions resting invitingly against the wall on each one of the shallow steps. Most of the rooms are enormous and consist half of quaint leaded windows with seats underneath. But better than anything else is the veranda, which runs all round the house and is not only as wide as a good sized room, but is fitted up like a succession of rooms. The delicate bead curtains that glitter like a rain of green and white and rose colored jewels give you a feeling of privacy, for you can see through them without being seen. The satiny gray floor is half covered with exquisite rugs, and everywhere there are oriental tables and chairs and cushiony sofas and green hammocks with frilly pink pillows and screens and bowers of palms and bright azaleas. I should like to live on that veranda swinging slowly in a hammock and looking through the cascade of glittering beads at the sea and sky. I spoke this thought out aloud, but Potter said I would soon learn that there wasn't much time in Newport for looking at the sea and sky.

"Why, isn't that partly what you come to Newport for?" I asked.

They all laughed. "You just wait and find out," answered Potter. "And we'll work you pretty hard doing it."

Mrs. Ess Kay and Sally took me up to show me my room and theirs, and Potter said that he would go around and look in at the Casino, but he would come back and have tea with us as soon as he had seen "what there was doing."

Each bedroom is done in a color, and mine is the "white room." It was almost too heavy sweet with some powerful flower fragrance when we went in. For an instant I could not think what it was. But in another moment I had seen on tables and cabinets and window shelves great bowls of water lilies, rising out of their dark leaves like moons out of cloud banks.

"From Potter," said Mrs. Ess Kay. "He telegraphed for them to be here and sent word to the servants just how he wanted them arranged. I must say he does think of rather pretty things when he cares to please. And he does care to please you, Betty. But you know that without my telling you, don't you, my Lady Witch?"

It was hard hearted of me, but all my pleasure in the gleaming white beauties went out like a bursting bubble. It gets on my nerves to be grateful to Potter three or four times a day!

Nevertheless when he came back (which he did after we had dressed and were having tea behind the rain of glittering glass) I had to thank him prettily. He was pleased, but was evidently thinking about something else.

"I didn't get to the Casino after all," said he. "I met Mrs. Pitchley going out to make a call (she was on her way home it seems when we met her), and she offered to turn back if I'd go with her, so I did."

"Now, see here, Potter Parker," broke in Mrs. Ess Kay, "I don't wish you to set up as another of Cora Pitchley's champions. It's all very well for Margaret Taylour to be forever quoting her, and she is fun, but she goes around being original in the wrong way, that nobody admires—that is, she does what she wants and not what other people want her to do. Margaret spends her summers at Blue Bay, and I spend mine at Newport, and I'm not going to have Mrs. Van der Windt down on me or on my brother either if I can help it."

"Thanks for your good advice," replied Potter airily "But may be, when you hear what Mrs. Pitchley had to say to me you'll change your tune."

Mrs. Ess Kay raised her eyebrows, but her eyes would look curious. "What could Cora Pitchley say that would have any particular effect on me?" she asked.

"She knows for a fact that she isn't to be asked to the pink ball on the 23d and that Mrs. Van der Windt herself scratched your name off the list before she sailed for Europe."

Mrs. Ess Kay's face went a dull, ugly red, and she laughed a loud laugh which sounded as if it would be the same color. "As for Cora, I can quite understand, but I don't believe the woman would have dared to try to exclude me," she said in a quivery voice.

"Why shouldn't she have dared, when you come to think of it?"

"Well, anyhow—she don't dare now."

"No, naturally, she won't dare now. You're as smart as they make 'em, Kath."

Then, for some reason, they both turned and gazed at me with a "thank-goodness-here's-a-floating-spar" sort of look, while Sally examined the grounds in her teacup with that funny little three cornered smile of hers.

"Was that the thing you thought would change me toward Cora Pitchley?" asked Mrs. Ess Kay.

"Yes, I thought it would give you a sort of fellow feeling."

"It doesn't," said she shortly, "and nobody but a man could have thought it would. It makes me feel all the more that I don't want to be mixed up with her, for—for Betty's sake."

Potter whistled, with one thumb in a breast pocket. "For the che-lid's sake," he remarked dramatically, and Mrs. Ess Kay looked angry.

"I shan't invite the Pitchleys to my big affair," said she—"the affair I'm going to have for Betty."

"Oh, but you must please not put yourself out for me!" I exclaimed. "I should be so sorry to have you do that."

Potter laughed. "Don't you try to rob her of her dearest triumph, Lady Daisy. You're the big gem for the middle of the setting. You're the Kohinoor."

"Potter! You ought to be ashamed of yourself, talking to her like that!" said Mrs. Ess Kay. "But all he means, Betty, is that I shall be very glad to do anything I can to make your visit pleasant, and it will be no trouble at all for me to give an entertainment, you may be quite sure."

She said this as the queen might say that it didn't matter to her whether there were seventy-five people or seventy-six asked to a garden party, and I realized that I was snubbed, so I said no more.

CATHOLIC CENTENNIAL

Noted Men Participate In the Observance at Boston

Boston, Oct. 29.—With Governor Guild making an eloquent plea for religious toleration in its broadest and kindest sense, which brought thousands of Catholics to their feet in applause, and foremost Catholic representatives and other noted personages delivering addresses and eulogies, the opening day of the observance of the centennial anniversary of the founding of the diocese of Boston came to a close in Symphony hall last night.

The day opened with a pontifical mass in the Holy Cross cathedral, celebrated by Papal Delegate Falconio, at which an historical sermon was delivered by Archbishop O'Connell and letters were read from President Roosevelt and Pope Pius X. Many of the highest officials of the Roman Catholic church in America were present.

Michael J. Murray presided at the mass meeting last night and besides Governor Guild there were addresses by Mayor Hibbard, Professor Dwight, Marquis Chavigny and others.

BULGARIAN ASSEMBLY MEETS

Emperor Defends His Course In Speech From Throne

Sofia, Oct. 29.—The fourteenth national Bulgarian assembly was convened for its autumn session yesterday afternoon. The speech from the throne was read by Emperor Ferdinand, and was eminently pacific in character. He defended the recent course of his government.

The emperor drove from the palace to the parliament, and this was made the occasion of a brilliant military display. A salute of twenty-one guns was fired as the royal procession issued from the palace grounds in the centre of the town. The emperor everywhere was greeted with enthusiastic cheers, which were redoubled when Ferdinand reached the building.

The cabinet led the way into the chamber, taking their places around the foot of the throne. The king seated himself and read his speech. He then arose and called for cheers for "the Bulgarian czardom and people," to which those gathered within the building heartily responded.

The Bulgarian national assembly is one of the most democratic legislatures in Europe. It is composed of a single chamber and its members are elected directly by the people.

Evidence Against Night Riders

Reelfoot Lake, Tenn., Oct. 29.—Within one week from the time the soldiers of Tennessee, under the personal direction of Governor Patterson, spread their tents in the heart of the night rider region, evidence of the most damaging nature against the murderers of Captain Rankin has been unearthed. Frank Ferriner confessed and implicated ten or twelve men now in custody. He gave names and went into details. The total number of arrests is eighty-five, and of this number it is alleged that half belong to the night riders' band.

Good Templars' Fiftieth Birthday

Boston, Oct. 29.—The Republican and Prohibition candidates for governor of Massachusetts met on the same platform in a common cause last night at the Bowdoin Square tabernacle, at exercises to commemorate the fiftieth anniversary of the founding of the first lodge of the Independent Order of Good Templars in Boston. The only living charter member of the lodge, Mr. Bickford, was present.

Child Wandered Into Swamp

Walpole, Mass., Oct. 29.—After a search occupying all Tuesday night and the greater part of yesterday, Emma Schneider, 3 years old, was found in a swamp about a mile and a half from her home. The child was suffering somewhat from hunger and exposure, but otherwise was all right. Two hundred men and boys participated in the search.

Life Sentence For Beecham

Manila, Oct. 29.—Private Mike Beecham of the First cavalry, who ran amuck at Camp Stostenburg and killed four of his comrades, was sentenced to life imprisonment by the trial court before which he appeared. The court took the view that the crime was unpremeditated and the result of a sudden fit of anger.

Prohibition Worker Assassinated

Charleston, W. Va., Oct. 29.—Grafton Starbuck, aged 45, a miller of Gauley Bridge, was shot and instantly killed as he was leaving his home by an assassin who was in ambush nearby. Starbuck was active in the recent fight against saloons in Fayette county and it is said that his life had been threatened on this occount.

Firebug Sent to Asylum

Clinton, Mass., Oct. 29.—After an examination by two physicians, LeRoy D. Noyes of West Boylston, aged 22, who confessed that he was possessed of a mania for setting fires and that he had started several fires in Boylston recently, was ordered committed to the Worcester insane asylum.

Employes' Wages Not Paid

Clinton, Mass., Oct. 29.—The Litchfield Worsted company, which was petitioned into bankruptcy last Monday, closed its factory here yesterday, throwing sixty hands out of employment. There is two weeks' salary due the employes.

EDITORIAL.

"As goes Quincy so goes the State and Nation." It has been true in the last eight Presidential elections, and also in the State elections since 1890. When the election was close, the Quincy vote was close. When the elections were one sided Quincy gave large pluralities on the winning side, sometimes Democratic but usually Republican.

Quincy Locals Briefly Told

A pair of eye glasses was lost in city square this morning.

Mrs. Frank F. Prescott has returned from a two weeks visit with relatives and friends in New Hampshire.

Papers are being circulated today placing J. Leonard Furguson in nomination for councilman at large.

Albert Hall of Faxon road has gone out west where he has transferred his business. Mrs. Hall and the children will join him in the early spring.

At the tuberculosis exhibit in Fall River there was an attendance of over 10,000. Will Quincy show as much interest?

Among the Quincy people at the centennial ceremony at the cathedral Wednesday were Miss Sarah A. Mundy, and Mr. and Mrs. Thomas A. McDonnell.

Rev. John J. Coan, pastor of St. John's church, and Rev. John P. Cuffe, pastor of the Sacred Heart church, attended the centennial ceremony at the Cathedral of the Holy Cross on Wednesday.

The union meeting of the King's Daughters will be held on Saturday, Oct. 31st from four until eight o'clock in the chapel of Bethany church. King's Daughters and all interested are cordially invited to attend.

The regular meeting of the Houghs Neck Associates for Wednesday night was postponed, but an informal meeting was held in the form of a rally. Congressman Joseph F. O'Connell, William R. Thomas and Edward J. Parker were the speakers. There was a large attendance and all three speakers received a great reception.

At the 31st annual meeting of the Women's Board of Missions of the Congregational churches of Norfolk and Plymouth counties held Tuesday at East Weymouth, Mrs. E. L. Tenney of Wollaston read a paper and Mrs. George Sidelinger of Quincy was elected delegate to the annual meeting of the mission board to be held at Hartford, Conn., Nov. 10, 11 and 12.

Prompt Arrest For Larceny

Albert Gordon who resides near Brewers corner was arrested in Boston Wednesday night by Inspector McKay for alleged breaking and entering the tailor shop of Sven Forenell at Brewers corner on Tuesday night, and the larceny of a fur lined coat, a melton coat and a sack coat.

Forenell reported to the police Wednesday morning that his place had been entered, and Inspector McKay started for Boston. He found the fur lined coat in a pawnshop on Pleasant street, where it had been sold for $2. From the description given of the party who sold the coat, Inspector McKay was quite sure Gordon was the man wanted, and he went looking for him.

Wednesday evening Gordon was found on Tremont row, and promptly placed under arrest. He had on at the time of the arrest the sack coat and the melton overcoat. He claimed that he did not break into the shop but that he found the door open.

Forenell, however, claims that he locked the door on closing Tuesday night.

Gordon was arraigned in court for larceny. He pleaded guilty and was held in $500 until Friday for a hearing.

—Through the activity of Rev. D. B. Aldrich, of West Springfield, Mass., a playground has been opened for the children of the vicinity.

PARLIAMENT IS DISTURBED

Another Demonstration by Suffragettes In Commons

GALLERIES WILL BE CLOSED

Two Women Chained Themselves to Grille and Were Removed Only After Portions of Iron Work Went With Them--Male Offender Also Creates a Scene--Affair Planned With Great Secrecy

London, Oct. 29.—Suffragette disturbances have driven the government to the unusual course of temporarily closing the strangers and ladies' galleries in the house of commons. This was announced by the speaker in response to a question from Premier Asquith and Mr. Balfour, the leader of the opposition, as parliament was adjourning last night.

During the course of the evening, while the house was discussing the licensing bill, a sensation was caused by the display of a placard and sudden shrill cries from the ladies' gallery demanding votes for women, while simultaneously a bundle of handbills fluttered down from the strangers' gallery at the opposite end of the chamber and a man shouted protests against "injustice to women."

Attendants hurried to the galleries and the male offender was unceremoniously ejected, but from the ladies' gallery sounds were heard of a desperate struggle. Two suffragettes had firmly chained themselves to the grille and resisted for a time all efforts at removal, crying continuously in shrill tones their demands for votes. The scene was watched with amazement from the floor of the house, but finally the suffragettes were dragged from their posts and removed, but only after portions of the grille itself were removed with them.

Ten minutes later there was another dramatic scene, a man in the strangers' gallery flinging another bundle of bills down upon the house and shouting "why don't you give women votes and relieve the unemployed?"

Attendants rushed upon him, but he resisted fiercely the attempts made to carry him bodily from the gallery. After a desperate struggle, the attendants succeeded in ejecting the man.

About the same time a large body of suffragettes made a demonstration outside the parliament building and fifteen of them were arrested.

The removal of the two militant suffragettes presented a comical scene to those in the corridors. Both of the offenders were laughing heartily as they were escorted by a posse of policemen, one of the officers carrying a portion of the ironwork of the grille to which the women were chained. They were conducted into a committee room and workmen were summoned to file off the iron from the chains, which were securely padlocked around the women's waists. It was found that the chains had been carefully padded to prevent noise and betrayal when the suffragettes entered the ladies' gallery.

According to their companions, the whole thing had been planned beforehand with great secrecy. One band was to demonstrate outside the building, another in the lobby of the house and a third in the gallery. The gallery contingent numbered fourteen, but it was attended by many passive sympathizers.

Montgomery Not a "Squealer"

Pittsburg, Oct. 29.—William Montgomery, cashier of the Allegheny National bank until the discovery of a shortage in its funds of over $1,250,000 necessitated closing the institution, was for the second time found guilty of embezzlement and abstraction of funds, his peculations in the two cases amounting to $613,000. Other indictments against Montgomery are pending. Every effort has been made to learn from Montgomery what became of the money abstracted or who besides himself received the money, but the cashier has steadfastly refused to involve others.

Dead Body Held Up Traffic

Newburyport, Mass., Oct. 29.—Traffic on the electric street railway line between here and Haverhill was held up for an hour and a half at West Newbury by the body of Felix Masseroux, which became firmly wedged under the rear trucks of a car. It was necessary to send to Haverhill for wrecking apparatus to raise the car from the rails before the body could be extricated. Masseroux was trying to cross the track in front of the approaching car when he was struck down. He was 60 years old.

Twenty Thousand New Members

Denver, Oct. 29.—The thirty-fifth annual convention of the National Women's Christian Temperance union ended last night with a general jubilee in which all the states represented took part by reporting the great gains in membership during the year. It was announced that a gain of 20,000 in membership had been made.

Russians Seize Sealing Vessels

Victoria, B. C., Oct. 29.—The seizure by a Russian patrol cruiser of two more raiding Japanese sealing schooners on the Russian sealing grounds in the north Pacific is reported by the steamer Moneagle, which has just arrived from those waters. The crews of both schooners escaped.

Free Exhibition Opened Today

The free tuberculosis exhibition in Quincy opened this afternoon at 3 o'clock at City Hall and will continue each afternoon and evening through Sunday. Dr. Gordon was the presiding officer this afternoon and Miss Ellen P. Emerson of Concord spoke on the subject "How women can assist in the campaign." Mrs. Mary L. Wade told of the "Preparation of food for the consumptive. The discussion will be led by Dr. Maria Drew.

Nearly a car load of articles for the exhibit has been set up in the Council chamber, City Hall.

The exhibit is given by the Quincy Women's Club and the city, and is designed to teach people how to fight this great white plague.

In the exhibit are many photographs and models of homes and workshops that are dangerous to health.

There are old pieces of stuffed furniture, which furnish admirable breeding places for gems. There are also photographs and models illustrating simple out of door life, which is the basis of the modern treatment. Then there are tents for patients. Large windows showing how they should be kept to ensure health, and how they are arranged in the crowded tenements which are the breeding places of the germ.

The exhibit takes up the whole floor of the Council chamber and is well worthy of a visit by everyone.

Many lessons may be drawn from it which if followed will eventually stamp out this great plague. No admission is charged, and local and out of town physicians will give helpful talks which will be illustrated by the stereopticon.

Silver Wedding At Houghs Neck

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas J. Thorn were pleasantly surprised at their cosy bungalow at 1058 Sea street, Wednesday evening, by a large party of their friends from Boston, Worcester and Houghs Neck, who came to help them celebrate the twenty-fifth anniversary of their marriage.

The guests were made welcome and the evening passed in a pleasant manner with games, music and refreshments. Mr. and Mrs. Thorn received many gifts of silver, including a twenty piece solid silver service from their twin sons, T. Archie and Randolph.

Mr. and Mrs. Thorn were married in the old French Catholic church in Boston, Oct. 28, 1883, the bride being Miss Catherine Walsh. Their union has been blessed by twin sons, who were present Wednesday evening.

The happy couple resided in Boston, where Mr. Thorn was employed at his trade. Two years ago he built himself a handsome bungalow at Houghs Neck, where he has since resided.

TWENTY-FIFTH ANNIVERSARY.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Hobart of 22 Mill street observed the twenty-fifth anniversary of their marriage on Wednesday evening at their home, over one hundred and fifty guests assembling to extend congratulations.

Mr. and Mrs. Hobart received in the parlor which was beautifully decorated with yellow and white chrysanthemums. The living room and dining room were in red crepe poppies and chrysanthemums, the effect being bright and artistic. Elmer Russell Sprague and Frank Lester Sprague, nephews of Mrs. Hobart, assisted in the receiving.

During the receeption there was most delightful music by the Dorchester Philharmonic Ladies' orchestra of Atlantic and a supper of ices and cake was served.

Seldom does a newly married couple receive more lovely, or as many gifts as did Mr. and Mrs. Hobart, which shows that during the twenty-five years of married life they have gathered many friends about them and not only from Quincy but guests were present from Winchester, Boston, Dorchester, Haverhill, Lynn, Braintree and Weymouth.

After a most happy evening the guests departed with promises to be present at the golden wedding.

Boys to Vote on Taft or Byran

Another great event for the boys of Quincy occurs Thursday, Friday and Saturday of this week, the registration days for the election will take place Thursday and Friday, from 2 to 7. Election Day is Saturday from 10 A. M. to 8 P. M. Every boy in the city is entitled to vote. No boy can vote on Election Day unless he has registered. Call in the boys' rooms of the Young Men's Christian Association and register.

WHAT IS HEM-ROID?

A Tablet, Taken Internally, That Cures Piles.

Piles (hemorrhoids) are getting more common ever yday, because we live unnaturally, overeating, overworking, taking little exercise, gradually causing a deadening of veins and tissues in the lower bowel. Blood stagnation is the cause of piles, and a condition that can't be permanently cured with ointments.

INVESTIGATE and ECONOMIZE

New System at Johnson Bros.

The way that our trade has taken to our

New Cash and Discount System

demonstrates to our satisfaction that we are giving them just what was needed in Quincy, and we have decided to extend our liberal offer, and will say, that to all our customers who find it impossible to carry their purchases home with them, if they bring or send their order to our store, and PAY CASH for it, we will deliver the same and allow 2% DISCOUNT from amount of purchase.

Now we think that this plan will give everyone a good Square Deal, and every intelligent buyer must see that we are more than doing our share to give then what every cash buyer deserves today, first class goods at a low price.

Now, don't forget our other proposition, that all who purchase goods of us, pay cash and carry their purchase home—we will give a Discount of 5% off the amount of purchase, besides selling our goods at the very lowest mark.

We will make a feature of having some special article each day marked at Genuine Bargain Price.

Now read this over carefully and we feel confident that you can see it just the way that we do—something that is surely needed in Quincy—a high grade of goods sold at a very low price.

TO STAMP IT OUT

Opening Day Of The Campaign Against Tuberculosis

Although stormy there was a good attendance of ladies, and a sprinkling of men, at the opening of the tuberculosis exhibit at City Hall Thursday afternoon.

Dr. John A. Gordon presided and in opening stated that the exhibit would continue the remainder of the week. There was no subject in the world more important than this. The campaign against tuberculosis has assumed great proportions, and great results will be accomplished. We rely upon the people at large to do the fighting. What people determine to do will be done. Throughout the world the death rate had been reduced from 2 out of 7 to 17 out of 100.

In Quincy the proportion among granite cutters was very large. In the early spring there were 78 cases in Quincy. A few years ago it was considered hereditary. We know now that it is not. In close rooms with bad air the germs develope rapidly. The germs are infinitely small, but abound everywhere in the dust of the street, and in the air of rooms occupied by tuberculosis patients.

A well developed case will throw out 1000 germs at every breath. They dry up and float about, ever ready to revive and thrive. Cases must be taken in the early stages to cure them.

Dr. Gordon then introduced Miss Ellen P. Emerson of Concord, who spoke on "How women can assist in the campaign."

In opening, Miss Emerson said, every year in this country as many people die of tuberculosis as were killed during the Civil war. All can do much to lessen the death rate. Quincy should especially work hard as the granite dust taken into the lungs by workmen make them ready to easily take the germs.

Every woman has a certain sphere of influence. Look out for your own children and have an eye on your neighbors child. See that the teeth are properly cared for and the mouth washed three or four times a day. Daily bathing is excellent. The old idea of bathing once a week is not sufficient. Fever, paleness, easily fatigued, a prolonged cough, and failure to gain weight are indications, and a physician should be called. Also the matter of diet. Do not give children too much rich food.

It is surprising how many educated people take quack medicines. It is all nonsense.

Miss Emerson also spoke of the fresh air campaign. Night air is the best there is. Always have a window open at night. Everyone should be educated to the necessity of fresh air.

What could not you do when organized as a club? See that the laws are enforced. In schools the children should have proper education in hygiene. In factories and shops, make employer and employee realize the danger and have proper hygenic conditions. If in the stone sheds the dust could be removed by forced draft it would be a tremendous improvement.

Miss Emerson suggested the establishment of night and day camps, where a small fee could be charged. These will help safeguard the family. If they could be located near the City Hospital a nurse could visit them and easily look after them. A free clinic would do a great amount of good. A woman's club could do much in the way of furnishing supplies like tents, steamer chairs, paper napkins, etc.

Dr. Maria E. Drew had charge of the discussion and spoke briefly.

Mrs. Mary L. Wade then gave a talk on "Preparation of food for the consumptive." Milk, said Mrs. Wade, was a valuable food for a patient. Peptonized milk was good, and she told how this could easily be done at home. Eggs should be boiled twelve minutes. All meats excepting fresh pork were good, also beef extract and fresh fish, but not fried. Figs, dates and prunes were also good, and the speaker explained how they could be cooked. All vegetables that grow above ground. Eggs in all forms except fried. One should not eat when fatigued. Warmed over food was not as digestible as fresh cooked. All food when put away should be covered. It was not well to feed children with soft foods.

Mrs. Wade's talk was a most helpful one.

The evening session began at 8 o'clock, with Dr. F. Ramon Burke presiding. The bad weather undoubtedly kept the attendance down, though there was a goodly number present. Dr. Burke said a few words by way of introduction and then introduced the first speaker of the evening, Hon. William T. Shea.

Mayor Shea said in beginning that he was suffering from a bad throat cold, and would speak briefly on this account. He was happy to extend the greetings of the city on such an occasion, and he congratulated the Women's Club which was instrumental in bringing the exhibit to Quincy. He concluded his remarks by saying that he would not encroach on the ground of the speaker of the evening who he said was one of the greatest tuberculosis authorities in the country today.

Dr. Burke then introduced Edward O. Otis, M. D., president of the Boston association for the relief and control of tuberculosis. Dr. Otis subject was, "The people's disease—tuberculosis." He spoke interestingly and instructively for an hour. Dr. Otis is a professor of pulmonary diseases at Tufts Medical School, and is a thorough student of tuberculosis, having giving many years to the study of the disease and to methods for its prevention.

The speaker said it was a people's disease, a disease of the working classes, and therefore must be combated by the people themselves. He gave statistics showing the number of people succumbing to the dread disase in one year and also in one day. Dr. Otis calls tuberculosis one of the penalties of civilization, for he said the Indians never knew what the disease was, living as they did out in the fields and hills, in the free, fresh air. The doctor said that it was the people between 15 and 45 years of age who died from this disease as a rule, and that, when the loss of these young people to the success and prosperity of a city, is considered, it is the duty of the people to stop the disease.

Dr. Otis explained the cause of the disease, and the manner in which it is spread, giving the direct and indirect methods for fighting it. "One thing I wish to impress on you," he said, is, that there is no danger whatever from a clean consumptive, as some people think and believe. Bear this in mind, and keep those suffering from tuberculosis clean."

Doctor Otis is a firm advocate of the playground system, and says that the children should have more room and chance to play. He also advocates and urges the formation of a tuberculosis association in Quincy, and the building of a tuberculosis dispensary here, where the poor may go for examination.

WILSON VS. SHEA

Unexpected Contest Among Democrats Over Mayoralty Nomination

Democratic nomination papers for candidates to be voted for at the Municipal caucuses were opened on Thursday evening. The principal contest is for Mayor, papers having been filed for William T. Shea and George H. Wilson.

The papers for Mr. Wilson contained 34 names. Of this number 26 neglected to put the street and number of their residence after their name, which is required by sect. 173 of chapter 560 of the Acts of 1907.

But one paper was filed for Councilman at large, and none for School Committee at large.

In Ward One, no papers were filed for Ward Councilmen.

In Ward Two, four papers were filed for Councilmen.

In Ward Three, but two nominations were made.

In Ward Four, there are four candidates for the City Council, and two lists for ward committee, the first list having but two names.

No papers for councilmen were filed in Ward Five.

In Ward Six but one paper for Ward Councilman was filed. No papers were filed for School Committee. But eight names were filed for Ward Committee, and these eight neglected to affix their address when they signed acceptance.

The complete list of papers filed is as follows:

For Mayor William T. Shea and George H. Wilson.

For Councilman at large, Charles J. McGilvray.

Ward One Committee,—Edward J. Dunn, Philip D. Cook, William Kelley, Alfred J. LaCroix, Luke J. Coyle, Walter M. Packard, Galen V. Bowditch, John W. Ryan and John F. Schatzel.

Ward Two Councilmen,—Michael T. Walsh, Joseph J. Kelley, William A. Carey and William H. Flynn.

Ward Two Committee,—Dennis J. Ford, William F. Carr, William A. Carey, Joseph J. Kelley, William H. Flynn, James B. Oakes, Andrew J. Fahey, Edward P. Histon, William T. Donovan and Michael T. Walsh.

EDUCATIONAL TALKS.

"Americans are becoming faddists on the subject of disease," declared Rev. Chauncey J. Hawkins in his lecture on "The relation of mind to health and happiness," at the Park and Downs church on Wednesday evening. By suggestion they make themselves believe that they have some disease when it is only a disease of the imagination. Disease of this kind may be cured by suggestion or auto-suggestion.

Americanitus, so called, is brought on more by worry than by overwork of the brain. Hard brain work, Mr. Hawkins said, under the right conditions, with proper care and nourishment of the body is harmful to no one. Mr. Hawkins has recently been abroad where he has made a study of this subject in England, Germany and Russia.

The next of this series of educational talks will be on Sunday, November 1, when Frank E. Parlin will speak on "The intellectual and Moral Value of Industrial Training."

EDITORIAL.

Just before the Civil War, this country was fourth in rank of wealth. England, France and Germany then outranked the United States. Now our wealth exceeds that of any two of them and our manufactures all three of them.

Our remote forefathers lived in the stone age. Ours in the cement age. There have been the intermediate ages of iron, copper, and as some day, the golden age—an imaginery period when things were better than they ever have been or ever will be. Fifteen years ago only 185,000 barrels of Portland cement were used in this country. Last year more than fifty two millions of barrels were used. Now the wizard inventor, Mr. Edison, is preparing mammoth iron molds by which he proposes to cast cement houses, very cheap, very comfortable, fire-proof, germproof, ratproof—everything but execution proof. President Roosevelt, in his zeal for reforming or improving everything, has recently appointed a commission to consider housing conditions in Washington. It might be well if Mr. Edison were one of its members. A cheap, clean habitation in the slums, it is believed, would greatly add to the health and moral well being of the inhabitants.

Brief Locals Of a Busy City

No school today.

The no-school signal was sounded this morning for the first time since the schools reopened in September.

The Metropolitan line steamship Creole, built at Quincy, scheduled to leave the Fore River works on Thursday, has been delayed by the weather.

Mrs. A. G. Adams, who has been spending a three months' vacation with her mother, Mrs. E. E. Field, has returned to Mobile, Alabama, her Winter home.

Supt. Charles Sherburne has started a monthly meeting of his thirty Sunday-school teachers and officers of the Point Sunday-school, and they are to meet Monday evening at the vestry at 7.30.

Rev. James Todd, D. D., was in town Wednesday evening to christen his first grandchild, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Milne, who will be known as Donald Thomas Milne. He was accompanied by his wife, daughters and son.

The weather kept the Holy Name societies from drilling Thursday night, and the rain today makes it seem probable that they will enter Sunday's parade without further practice. However, the local societies are pretty efficient in all the necessary tactics, and the layoff will do no harm.

The Fore River reservoir is full of water again this morning, the heavy rain of yesterday and last night causing the basin to be covered completely. Work will necessarily be stopped for awhile, and until the water can be drawn off. The work is progressing in good style these days, and is too bad to have it delayed.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

REPUBLICAN ESTIMATES

Increased Majority Expected In Next House of Representatives

CLAIM NEW YORK IS SAFE

Woodruff Predicts That Taft's Plurality Will Be Over 125,000, While Hughes Will Not Fall Below 75,000 --Lodge Gives Assurance of New England's Entire Electoral Vote For Taft and Sherman

New York, Oct. 30.—Representative Loudenslager of New Jersey, secretary of the national Republican congressional committee, who has been in charge of the New York headquarters of the committee during the campaign, has given out his estimate of the complexion of the house of representatives in the next congress.

"From the several thousand letters," said Loudenslager, "and from personal interviews with politicians and other observers from all sections of the country, I am convinced that a conservative estimate of the political complexion of the next house is 227 Republicans and 164 Democrats. I am confident that election results will give an increase in the number of Republicans rather than a decrease. This campaign has been a strange one in many respects and unusual conditions have existed in different sections. While there will be some change, the net result will, in my judgment, be as stated."

Chairman Hitchcock of the Republican national committee is still of the opinion that Nevada will be very close, but he is quite confident of Montana. Information from leaders in Kentucky and Tennessee continues to reach headquarters and is to the effect that the Republican candidate has more than a fighting chance in those two states. While he feels sure about Maryland, he thinks the fight will be close there.

The following forecasts were made at Republican national headquarters:

Senator Lodge: "New England will give its entire electoral vote for Taft and Sherman. Massachusetts will give about the same plurality it gave to McKinley, 82,000. I have been up-state in New York and am confident that not only Judge Taft, but Governor Hughes will receive large majorities in this state."

Secretary Straus of the department of commerce and labor: "Judge Taft will carry the state of New York by a majority ranging between that received by Roosevelt in 1904 and McKinley in 1900. Governor Hughes will receive a larger plurality than has been supposed."

Former Governor Murphy of New Jersey: "It is a question of majority only for Taft and Sherman in New Jersey."

General Streeter of New Hampshire: "Taft and Sherman will come out about 15,000 ahead in my state."

Congressman Hawley of Oregon: "Taft will carry every state west of the Mississippi, with the possible exceptions of Missouri, Oklahoma, Texas and Arkansas. Taft and Sherman will carry Nebraska by from 6000 to 10,000."

Chairman Woodruff of the Republican state committee: "From the canvass made up the state, I predict that Taft's plurality will be over 125,000 and Hughes' will not fall below 75,000. I do not hesitate to say he will poll a bigger vote in Greater New York than his most sanguine friends now think."

HONORS WERE EVEN

Taft and Bryan Address Large Audiences at Syracuse

Syracuse, N. Y., Oct. 30.—To this city fell, last night, the distinction of entertaining the two men most prominent in public interest. To applauding thousands William H. Taft and William J. Bryan expounded respectively Republican and Democratic doctrine.

Mr. Taft made addresses at two meetings and Bryan at four. On each occasion the warning "standing room only" was displayed long before the hour of the meeting, and before the "big men" arrived standing room was at a premium and hundreds were turned away. Also, in each instance, the presidential candidates were received with flattering demonstrations and their speeches were frequently interrupted by spontaneous applause.

The Taft and Bryan specials arrived at the station at almost the same moment, shortly after 6 o'clock, and the expressions of welcome were pretty evenly divided. Both candidates were met by local leaders and entertained at dinner. Bryan left his car upon arrival and shook hands with many on the platform. Taft improved the opportunity to rest for a little while after his car had come to a standstill.

Mr. Taft spoke at the Alhambra convention hall and Turn hall. Previous to the meetings there was a Republican parade.

Mr. Bryan was accompanied by Alton B. Parker and I. J. Dunne. His first address was at the city hall, this being followed by speeches at the Welling Opera house, Empire hall and before the Modern Woodmen of America.

In his principal remarks Bryan called attention to the fact that the campaign now was drawing to a close and that the Republicans were resorting to threats of a panic in case he should be elected. He expressed wonder that Taft had not been able to stave off the panic of 1907, when he was in Mr. Roosevelt's cabinet.

Mr. Bryan spoke yesterday at Cohoes, Utica, Rome, Oneida and Canastota, and at Rome, referring to the preparations being made for the Republican demonstration in New York city Saturday night, said that they would do better to spend their money for lodging the unfortunate people who sleep in the city's parks than to spend it in red fire, bands and costly reviewing stands.

Having delivered in this city his last speech of the campaign in the empire state, Bryan is now speeding westward, and today will make another invasion of Ohio.

A feature in connection with Bryan's arrival here was his initiation, in his private car, into the Order of Mystique Krewe of Kanoono, a Syracuse boosters' club. Taft was later initiated into the same order.

Mr. Taft remained in town last night. His train yesterday visited Lyons, Canandaigua, Geneva, Seneca Falls and Auburn. There was no lack of auditors and enthusiastic demonstrations wherever the Ohioan tarried. He hit at the roots of what he considers Democratic fallacies and was free in expressing his optimism as to what the result will be next Tuesday.

Another Chance For Hansbrough

Bismarck, N. D., Oct. 30.—Members of the North Dakota legislature will not be compelled to carry out their pledge to vote for the successful candidate at the primary senatorial election next Tuesday. The supreme court yesterday decided as unconstitutional the pledge feature of the primary law so far as it relates to the popular election of United States senators. A writ of mandamus is denied and the election will proceed, but all members of the legislature are free to exercise their personal choice in the election of a senator to succeed H. S. Hansbrough, which means that Hansbrough, who was defeated at the spring primaries, will try again. Many other candidates will be in the field.

Quick Lunches For Kern

Terre Haute, Ind., Oct. 30.—Two rousing meetings in this city last night brought the fourth day of John W. Kern's Indiana campaign to a whirlwind finish. His itinerary yesterday provided only for a speaking tour, no time allowance having been made seemingly for meal hours. In consequence, the candidate took his noon meal from a lunch basket while whirling along a dusty road in an automobile, and supper was served on board a special car.

Talks on Foreign Markets

Albany, Oct. 30.—After a day of active campaigning in Warren county, James S. Sherman last night addressed a large audience in Albany. Preceding the meeting numerous marching clubs paraded through the principal streets. After discussing general campaign issues in his speech here, Sherman sharply attacked Mr. Bryan's attitude toward the foreign markets for American manufacturers.

Debs Starts For Wisconsin

Chicago, Oct. 30.—A large crowd gathered at the station here last night to greet Eugene V. Debs on his arrival in the "red special" after a campaign tour of almost 20,000 miles. Debs left here this morning for a tour in Wisconsin.

Two Men Burned to Death

New York, Oct. 30.—Hemmed in by flames and unable to escape from the basement of a business house in Duane street, Henry Jones and David Mahoney were burned to death and William Settgast was so seriously burned about the face and hands that he will probably die. The men were employed by manufacturers of celluloid novelties and they were at work when a barrel of celluloid caught fire. The money loss is about $5000.

Father of Juvenile Courts

St. Louis, Oct. 30.—Rev. A. S. Orne, D. D., originator of the juvenile court system, is ill here with malarial fever. His condition is critical. He first promulgated his ideas when pastor of a Congregational church in Wentworth, N. H., and the establishment of the system in Chicago fourteen years ago is credited to him. Since then he has assisted in extending the plan to thirty-six states. He is 56 years old.

Parade of Women Suffragists

Boone, Ia., Oct. 30.—Six hundred women suffragists paraded the streets of Boone yesterday. Rev. Anna Shaw headed the parade. With her were Miss Rendell and Miss Costelle of London, famous for their participation in the attacks made on parliament by women suffragists. The spectacle of 600 women marching through the streets caused the whole town to turn out to witness it.

Secret Rates For Standard Oil

New York, Oct. 30.—The admission that the Standard Oil company benefited from a preferential freight rate lower than that quoted to any other shipper was drawn from a witness at the hearing in the government's suit to dissolve the company. George B. Ferguson, a clerk in the freight department of the Central Vermont railroad, gave the testimony referred to.

Yankee Not Yet Lifted

Newport, R. I., Oct. 30.—While the wreckers are working night and day on preliminary details, no attempt has been made as yet to lift cruiser Yankee from the rocks. The water in the ship will be allowed to remain until the wreckers are ready to lift her.

The Weather Forecast

Almanac, Saturday, Oct. 31.
Sun rises—6:17; sets—4:39.
Moon sets—9:55 p. m.
High water—3:30 a. m.; 3:45 p. m.
Rain will be followed by fair and cooler weather in New England.

FALL RIVER WAGE SCALE

It Is to Be Further Reduced by About Eight Percent

Fall River, Mass., Oct. 30.—James Tansey, president of the Fall River Textile Council, has notified the union representatives that under the wage agreement between the Manufacturers' association and the council there will be a further reduction in wages in the cotton mills here next month. As nearly as can be figured the cut will amount to about 8 percent, which will reduce the price of weaving from 19.66 cents per cut to 18 cents.

The agreement, which runs for six months, expires on Nov. 25, but will be renewed until May, 1909, as a required three months' notice of discontinuance has not been given by either side.

The wage scale is based on the margin between the cost of spot cotton in the New York market and the selling price of 64x64 regular print cloths here. In May last the margin fell off to such an extent that a cut of 18 percent in wages was made. As less than a month remains before the expiration of the existing agreement and the margin has been still less, Tansey estimates that wages will be lower by 8.44 percent during the half year beginning Nov. 25.

The Fall River mills employ 30,000 operatives.

BECAUSE SHE COULD NOT RUN HOUSE

Woman Takes Life of Her Babe and Then Her Own

Worcester, Mass., Oct. 30.—Louis Minoli, a granite cutter, aged 35, returned home from his work last night to find his wife, aged 19 years, and their year-old baby, Caesar, dead in bed in their little tenement with their throats cut. The woman had killed the child and then committed suicide with the same weapon, her husband's razor.

Mrs. Minoli left a letter for her husband, in which she declared that she loved him, but that he was going to end her life because she did not know how to run a house. The Minolis had been married two years, but had boarded up to a week ago, when they went housekeeping, together with Minoli's brother, in a three-room tenement on the ground floor of a large block occupied by many Italian families.

Both the Minolis say that the young woman had not shown any signs of despondency and that Wednesday night she appeared to be in good spirits. She was asleep when they left the house at 4:30 yesterday morning. In a trunk in the room a bankbook, showing a deposit of $100, was found, and also a hand satchel belonging to the woman containing $23.50.

A Startling Confession

San Francisco, Oct. 30.—Standing in the shadow of the penitentiary with sentence about to be passed upon him, and having seen his young wife just led from the courtroom hysterically crying "no, no," E. A. S. Blake, a contractor, convicted of attempting to bribe John M. Kelly to qualify on the jury to try Abraham Ruef and vote for Ruef's acquittal, made a full confession in court. He told of an alleged offer of $10,000 and provision for his wife while he was in prison if he would not make a confession. The story told by Blake created consternation in court and the case was continued for two weeks.

Arms Severed by Black Hand

Newark, N. J., Oct. 30.—Villardo Dippitti appealed to the police here for protection from the Black Hand. Exhibiting the stumps of his arms, the man declared that members of the Black Hand had lured him to a shanty in St. Michael's, Pa., where his arms were amputated. After four weeks in a hospital he came here and now declares that the same band is preparing to amputate his legs in further revenge for his betraying a member.

Botkin Sentence Affirmed

San Francisco, Oct. 30.—The district court of appeals has affirmed the judgment of the lower court in the case of Cordelia Botkin, who was convicted in 1904 of murder in the first degree and sentenced to life imprisonment. Mrs. Botkin murdered Mrs. John P. Dunning of Dover, Del., by means of poisoned candy sent through the mails from San Francisco.

Students' Foreheads Branded

Los Angeles, Cal., Oct. 30.—Six students of the Polytechnic high school have been suspended and three others are in danger of sharing the same fate because they branded the foreheads of two students of the Los Angeles high school with nitrate of silver during the initiation ceremonies of the Kappa Delta fraternity, a forbidden secret society.

Two Drowned In Wreck

Baltimore, Oct. 30.—Schooner Charles S. Hirsch, lumber-laden, from Brunswick, Ga., for Baltimore, was wrecked near Paul Gamiel's life saving station, N. C. Captain Hunter and five sailors were rescued in the breeches buoy by the lifesavers, but the cook and one sailor were drowned. The vessel is a total loss.

Long Service In One Church

Stamford, Conn., Oct. 30.—After a long illness, Rev. F. W. Brathwaite, 71 years old, and for fortysix years rector of St. Andrews' Episcopal church, died at his home here last night. He was a native of Barbadoes and leaves a son and two daughters.

La France SHOE
FOR WOMEN
The "WHY" of the Flexible Welt

Here is something new for women to whom ordinary shoes seem clumsy and uncomfortable. It is the La France Flexible Welt. The little illustration below shows in a graphic way how elastic this shoe is.

The leather sole bends with remarkable ease, thus adapting itself to every position assumed by the foot, particularly when walking.

This shoe produces the effect of lightness and a delightful sensation of comfort. Perhaps a good way to express it would be to say that the Flexible Welt feels like no-shoes-at-all, except that the foot is supported just as fully and satisfactorily as would be the case if a heavy stiff shoe were worn.

We want every woman who is looking for a maximum of comfort combined with true beauty and the latest shoe styles, to come in and ask to see this Flexible Welt Shoe.

ADMISSION OF FINANCIER

Morse Ignorant of Legal Exactions Covering Banking

NOT POSTED ON BOOKKEEPING

Personal and Private Affairs, as Well as Bank Accounts, Left In Charge of His Secretary--Tells of Plan to Buy the Ice Stock Held by Carroll --Loan of $80,000 to Youthful Clerk Was an "Accommodation"

New York, Oct. 30.—Charles W. Morse, who, with Alfred H. Curtis, former president of the National Bank of North America, is on trial in the criminal branch of the United States circuit court on a charge of conspiracy and violation of the national banking laws, took the stand in his own defense yesterday.

All during the tedious days of the trial Morse has sat inside the railing, nervously awaiting the moment when it would become necessary for him to take the witness chair and undergo the ordeal of what he knew was in store for him. When his name was called he sprang from his chair as though greatly startled, looked inquiringly at his counsel and when the latter nodded his head affirmatively, the financier hurried to the witness stand and moved about restlessly in his seat while the lawyers were framing questions to ask him.

In a voice so low as to be inaudible to the jury, Morse gave his birthplace as Bath, Me., said he had graduated from Bowdoin college and that on coming to New York he engaged in the shipping and later in the ice business. After these preliminary interrogations the lawyers for the government volleyed questions at Morse so rapidly that his voice failed him when he endeavored to answer them.

More was kept on the stand until an adjournment had been taken. He related how he came to have an interest in the National Bank of North America, saying that he secured an interest in the consolidation in 1902. The banker said that he had had no experience in the routine of banking.

Morse said that he was not a salaried officer of the bank and knew nothing of the legal exactions covering national banking. He explained that after 1905 he had accepted an office in the directors' rooms in the new bank building. The financier then told of forming the acquaintance of Curtis and Wire.

"I had confidence in them and used my influence to have them made president and cashier of the bank," said Morse.

Morse testified that he knew nothing of the bank's method of bookkeeping and admitted that he saw the bank's loan sheets only a few times each year. "My secretary, Kate A. Wilson, and my former secretary, Arthur Braun, attended to my personal and private affairs," said the witness. "Miss Wilson kept my bank account straight."

Morse's counsel then asked a number of questions regarding the connection of Morse with the American Ice company. Morse said that he had been connected with that company since its formation "in 1898 or 1899." The company was then paying a dividend, witness testified, and dealt principally in natural ice. A difference in the demand came in 1902, he said, and artificial ice was all the market wanted. That effected a change in the business of the company.

As this line of questioning was continued it finally led up to the point of the loans made to John F. Carroll by the National Bank of North America, amounting to $135,000 at one time. There was such a maze of figures that Morse confessed his inability to follow the questions without the aid of a memorandum. He was given the necessary data and constantly referred to it when he answered questions.

In explaining the Carroll loans he said they were secured by 40,000 shares of ice stock. Morse told of a plan to buy half of the Carroll stock at $30 a share and give the bank the profit of the deal. Then he purchased 4000 shares of ice stock, he said, at $40 a share for Mrs. Gelshenen. He said he gave the profit to the bank.

The loans made to Leslie Whiting, the 19-year-old clerk in a broker's office, were then taken up. Morse said that the first loan of $80,000 to the youth was made at his (Morse's) request, "and was an accommodation borrow."

Attorney General Stimson objected to Morse telling of his gift to the bank of the profit on the purchase of the Carroll ice stock for Mrs. Gelshenen until the witness had outlined step by step the entire deal. This led Morse to tell of conversations with Curtis in which he told the latter that several loans would be made on ice stock and that he would give the profits to the bank.

Morse added that the directors of the bank were "very much pleased" when he gave the profits of the deal to the bank. Morse next told of how the loan of $82,000 made to Whiting had been used to take up 2000 shares of Carroll ice stock. The second Whiting loan of $69,000 was secured by 2000 shares of ice stock, being one-half of the Carroll stock he (Morse) had purchased.

Judge Hough at this juncture adjourned court and Morse left the witness chair with an expression of relief on his face.

Chapter 9

MRS. ESS KAY had a headache next morning and stopped in bed. She couldn't speak or be spoken to, and so we couldn't possibly ask her advice about going to Bailey's beach for a dip in the sea. Potter, whose proposal it was, said that this was perhaps providential, as she was almost certain to want me to stay in till I could be taken out officially. "But you don't need to know that," he added.

I looked at Sally, and she laughed, so I knew that I was to go.

"Oh, but what about bathing clothes!" I exclaimed on sudden thought. "How stupid of me not to have remembered that I would want them before I left home or in New York!"

"I reckon it would have been stupid of us if we hadn't remembered," said Sally. Then she went on, irrelevantly, it seemed at first, "What day of the month is tomorrow?"

"The 29th of July," said Potter promptly, while I was resigning myself, after a slight struggle, to the fact that I had lost track of dates.

"Seems to me that's somebody's birthday, isn't it?" Sally appeared to address her remark to the ceiling.

"How did you know?" I exclaimed.

"A little bird told me. The kind that builds in birthday books. It lives on a table in Lady Victoria's 'den.'"

"Fancy your keeping the date in your head all this time!"

"I've a weakness for remembering birthdays—when I'm fond of the people who own them. You see, everybody thinks about Christmas, and I don't want to be confused with everybody in the minds of just those special people. Now, the truth is, I've got a little birthday present upstairs which I didn't mean you should see until tomorrow, but as part of it may come in rather handy this morning, perhaps we might run up and have a look at it."

"Oh, Sally, you dear!" I exclaimed.

"Oh, Sally, you wretch, to have kept that birthday to yourself! I want to be in on this act," grumbled Potter. But I hardly heard him, I was so excited about what I was going to find upstairs.

We went to my room, Sally and I, and she rang for Louise, who was told to fetch from what Sally called her "closet" a certain black "trunk" of whose existence Louise was evidently already aware.

It was a good sized box, big enough to hold two or three dresses. And when it was opened by Sally after Louise had gone it proved to contain three and a half.

One of the three was a blue gauze ball gown, embroidered with patterns of thistles in tiny sparkling things that looked like diamonds. The second was pink tulle, with garlands of tiny roses. The third was a white linen, made as only Americans know how to make up linens, and the half was—well, I was not quite sure what it was at first, though I could see that it was pretty. It was pale green, and there were two parts of it. The bigger of the two (it was not very big) was of soft silk and extremely fluffy. It had a low necked and short sleeved bodice, and attached to that was a skirt—or something that would have been a skirt if it had had more time to grow. The second part was silk, too, but more difficult to describe. Perhaps I'd do best to say that it was like long stockings, only it was in one piece and evidently meant to fasten around the waist.

"There's also a pair of sandals and a really sweet cap, deah," Sally explained.

"Is it a fancy dress for a little girl?" I asked puzzled.

"For a little girl about your size. Why, you funny child, it's your bathing dress. I had to get it and all the other things ready made, for there wasn't time for anything more than having them altered to your measurement if they were to be ready for your birthday."

"Oh, Sally, are they all for me?"

"Well, they're for nobody else. It's your birthday."

Of course I told her she was an angel, and so she was, quite an exceptional kind of an angel, and I kissed her and was saying a great many things when she stopped me. "So glad you like them, deah. But now we must be moving if we're to have our bath this morning. Louise can't leave Katherine, but we'll have one of the other maids come with our things. It's getting late."

I felt frightfully. "It is late, isn't it?" said I hopefully, looking at my watch. "Perhaps it's too late to go this morning, after all."

"Not a bit of it," said Sally. "Come along."

"I'm not sure but that I'd better stop in if Mr. Parker thinks Mrs. Stuyvesant-Knox would want me to," I floundered on.

"She won't mind—not much, anyway, if we don't take you to the Casino without her," Sally tried to reassure me. But her eyes had begun to twinkle.

"Don't you think she might? There are a lot of letters I ought"—

"Now, child, out with it. Don't you like the bathing dress?"

"Oh, I admire it immensely," I stammered. "It's like a—a picture. But—I can't see myself wearing it. That is, I can't bear to think of any one else seeing me wear it."

Sally went off into a fit of musical southern laughter. "You poor baby. I forgot the shock it might be to you if you're accustomed only to English bathing clothes. They certainly are the limit! Have you never been to Trouville or Ostend?"

I shook my head, sad at having to seem ungrateful. But how could I help it?

"Well, they have this kind there, and so they do here. Everybody has it. My prettiest one is much like yours, only it's poppy colored. Katherine's is cornflower blue this year, and she's got a black one and a lilac one. When you see all the others prancing about in the same sort of things you won't feel a bit funny."

I was far from sure that I should attain to such a peaceful state of mind as not to "feel funny." But Sally had called me a baby, and I had to redeem myself from that aspersion at any price. So I tried to compose my countenance over a beating heart and think about other things on the way to the beach, as you do if you are going to the dentist's.

Potter went with us, though I supposed that when we came to the end he would bid us goodby and trot off to the place where the men bathed, wherever that might be. Our things had been taken on ahead by a servant or two, and we walked, as the day was perfect, and I was thankful to get a little exercise.

We met a great many people whom Sally and Potter knew, and just as Potter had said, "Here we are at Bailey's beach," that handsome Mrs. Pitchley and her stepdaughter, with Mr. Doremus came up. They called to us, so we stopped to speak, and I was pleased, because I'd been wanting to know them. We were introduced, and I was wondering what Mrs. Ess Kay would do if she could see us chatting with the Pitchleys in sight of all Newport when a little thin man, looking perfectly furious, with a striped bathing suit rolled up under his arm, came hopping along toward us as if he were a cricket ball that somebody had batted off the beach.

His panama hat was on the back of his head. His single eyeglass on its chain was flying out behind him in the breeze, and my first thought was how comical he looked. My second, as he came nearer, was something quite different.

"Why, Mohunsleigh!" I cried.

He stopped hopping so abruptly that he stumbled and nearly fell down.

"Hello, Betty!" he growled, hauling off his hat as if he hated the bother of doing it. "Where did you spring from?"

"Home. Where on earth did you spring from?" I echoed.

"They've sprung me off their beastly beach," said he, glaring and sticking in his eyeglass. Then he almost waved his hideous little bathing suit at me. "Wouldn't let me bathe, the bounders!"

"Wouldn't let you bathe?"

"No. Said: 'You can't get in here. This beach is for millionaires.' I'm blest if I don't shake the sand off my feet as soon as I can pack up and get out."

"No, no! Don't do that," I begged. "There's some mistake perhaps."

"No, there isn't," said he. "I'm not a millionaire. But I did think I looked as if I could afford a bath."

"Sally, dear, do let me introduce my cousin, Lord Mohunsleigh," I said in a great hurry.

Potter opened his eyes at the thin little man, and Mrs. and Miss Pitchley looked at him with interest.

China Much Pleased at the Visit of American Squadron

Amoy, Oct. 30.—Eight battleships, comprising the second squadron of the American Atlantic fleet, under command of Rear Admiral Emory, arrived here this morning after an uneventful voyage from Yokohama. To the Chinese the visit of the Americans is of far-reaching importance and every preparation has been made to impress upon the representatives of the United States China's desire for even more cordial relations with the republic than have hitherto prevailed.

The sixteen ships of the fleet left Yokohama together on Sunday morning, but divided into two squadrons when two days out, the first, under command of Rear Admiral Sperry, heading for Olongapo, P. I., and the second bound for Amoy. The two squadrons will join forces again at Manila on Nov. 7.

Chinamen of exalted rank will take part in the festivities. China today is struggling to preserve the territorial integrity of Mongolia and Manchuria from the encroachments of Russia and Japan, and the presence of the American battleships at Amoy is welcome to the Pekin government because of the interpretation that China has chosen to give to this friendly act—that the United States is inclined to support her in her contentions with her neighbors—an interpretation that is not recognized officially but is of China's own making, the desire in this case being father to the thought.

POLICE DESCEND ON POOL ROOMS

Nearly Three Hundred Arrests In a Gotham Raid

New York, Oct. 30.—Two spectacular raids of alleged pool rooms were made by the police at different places on the East Side of the city. In the aggregate 280 prisoners were taken and in addition it is said that a considerable quantity of gambling paraphernalia was confiscated. So great was the haul that there were not sufficient cells at police headquarters to accommodate the prisoners, and it was necessary to distribute them among five other police stations.

In preparing for the raids, which were made at the instance of Deputy Police Commissioner Bughere and over the heads of the inspector and captain of the precinct, extraordinary precautions were taken to make it successful. The raiders all were picked men from various stations in Manhattan and Brooklyn.

A contingent from the traffic squad was also pressed into service. At both the houses raided it was necessary to use axes in gaining entrance, and at one of them the heavy iron doors were impregnable, and it was necessary to breach the wall of the building. Not one inmate of either house escaped arrest.

Large crowds watched the police at their work and jeered the prisoners as they were hustled away to the prisons in patrol wagons.

Considerate Housebreakers

Morristown, N. J., Oct. 30.—The resentment of the members of the Perkins household towards the trio of masked burglars who invaded their home during the early morning hours of last Friday was somewhat tempered last night by the receipt of an express package containing a number of trinkets. At the time of the robbery the burglars had promised that any heirloom possessing a sentimental value which they inadvertently took would be returned.

Bulgaria Won't Disturb Peace

Sofia, Oct. 30.—The Bulgarian government, in reply to the note recently presented by Great Britain, France and Russia, requesting Bulgaria to give assurances of abstention from mobilization pending the proposed international congress, undertakes not to call out fresh reserves or adopt any measures that might disturb the peace.

Sultan May Be Dethroned

Paris, Oct. 30.—A special dispatch from Smyrna says that the Young Turks, believing that the sultan has a secret understanding with Tewfik Pasha, the foreign minister, have decided to dethrone him and replace him by his third son. Saloniki troops will be sent to overawe the Albanian guard and fanatical exactionaries.

Couden Reaches Retirement Age

Washington, Oct. 30.—Rear Admiral Alfred R. Couden was placed upon the retired list of the navy today, his 67th birthday. He will probably continue as president of the special board of ordnance of the navy. He has held many important commands in American and foreign waters.

EDITORIAL.

If a person takes the list of speakers engaged for the tuberculosis and runs them over; considers the amount of money it would cost if he had to pay personally for their services; it will be evident to him that this exhibit is a great thing for Quincy. It is for those who are well, to keep well, and for those who are sick, to get better. The chance to learn something about this disease should not be neglected, and every person in Quincy should visit City Hall and examine the exhibits.

Naval Wedding At Wollaston

A wedding of unusual interest and brilliance was solemnized at Wollaston on Thursday evening, when Mr. William B. Ferguson, Jr., constructor U. S. N., son of Mr. W. B. Ferguson, a prominent lawyer of Waynesville, N. C., and lately appointed to the Fore River shipyard, and Mrs. Maud M. Stevens, daughter of Rev. Dr. and Mrs. Charles C. McLean of Chicago, were united in marriage.

In marked contrast to the drear outside was the brilliancy of the scene within. The skilful hand of Mr. Patterson had transformed the house into a veritable bower by means of palms, autumn leaves, and yellow chrysanthemums, yellow being chosen to harmonize with the gold lace of the uniforms worn by the navy men.

At eight o'clock, to the strains of Lohengrin, entered the bridal party, preceded by Rev. Mr. Heath, pastor of the Wollaston M. E. church, and Dr. McLean, father of the bride, who took their stand in the bow-window. Following came the navy men, Mr. G. C. Westervelt and Mr. E. L. Land of the New York navy yard, Mr. J. C. Sweeney and Mr. A. B. Court of the Boston navy yard, Lieut. S. H. R. Doyle of the S. S. "Birmingham," Capt. E. Theiss, Mr. H. G. Gillmor, Mr. C. L. Arnold of the Fore River yard, and Mr. Ferguson of the S. S. "New Hampshire," all attired in full dress uniform who arranged themselves in two columns, forming an aisle, through which the bridal party proceeded.

First came the groom and the best man, Mr. J. A. Spilman, constructor U. S. N., of Bath, Me. Then the two dainty little flower girls, Miss Elizabeth Stevens of Wollaston and Miss Amanda Vaughan of Philadelphia, dressed just alike in white with yellow sashes, each carrying a basket of flowers tied with yellow ribbon. They were followed by the maid of honor, Miss Bessie Loomis of Wilkesbarre, Pa., who wore a beautiful gown of white satin and carried a bouquet of yellow chrysanthemums.

Then came the bride, beautiful and radiant, leaning on the arm of her brother, Mr. Charles McLean, gowned in an exquisite creation of lace over chiffon and pale pink satin, and carrying a bouquet of white roses and lilies-of-the-valley. After the very impressive ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Ferguson turned to receive the many and hearty congratulations and good wishes which were showered upon them.

About half-past nine amidst a shower of confetti they departed for North Carolina, the home of the groom, where the honeymoon will be spent. On their return they will reside at 333 Highland avenue, Wollaston, where they will be at home to their friends after December first.

Conference of No-License Workers

The second annual conference of the No-License workers was held Thursday in the Ford building, Boston, fifty cities and towns being represented.

Delcevare King, chairman of the executive committee of the Massachusetts No-License League, called the meeting to order at 10 o'clock, and and introduced Hon. Henry Fosdick of Pittsburg, president of the State Anti-Saloon League as presiding officer.

Mr. King in welcoming those present called attention to the working agreement between the anti-saloon and the No-License Leagues.

The first topic on the program was the "No-License sweep in Massachusetts, and the present outlook." The discussion was led by Robert H. Magwood.

Judge W. Alden of the Brockton league led the discussion on the druggist problem. He denounced the sixth and eighth class licenses for druggists and urged the passage of a law that would require druggist to furnish a certificate from the local court judge as to character.

D. King was the leader of the express problem, and the liquor law enforcement which was participated in by Ralph A. Wood and Charles A. Bliss of Newburyport.

Hon. Guy A. Ham led the discussion on "Liquor law enforcements, the wisest methods."

"The liquor fees and their distribution" was led by Samuel H. Davis.

Other topics discussed were: "Just no-license; not temeprance, prohibition, or politics." "A citizen's not a church movement.' "How to start a no-license movement." "Registration and canvass, etc."

At 6 o'clock a banquet was served, and in the evening there was an address by President Eliot of Harvard college.

NEW MANAGER

William T. Donovan, manager of the Scenic theatre, retires from that position Saturday night. Mr. Donovan's policy was to give a first class entertainment, free from any objectionable feature, for a minimum price. How well he succeeded is best shown by the constantly increasing attendance. Mr. Donovan retires owing to pressure of other business. He will be succeeded by H. A. Chenowith, who will conduct the Scenic on the same lines as those of Mr. Donovan.

"WINE MAKETH A GLAD HEART"

But Eliot Doubts Expediency of Its Use For That Purpose

EFFECT IS BUT MOMENTARY

Head of Harvard College Uses Alcoholic Beverages, But Declares That They Are of No Benefit to Man Exposed to Cold, Heat or Hardships, or to Mental Laborers --Maine Law a "Dead Failure"

Boston, Oct. 30.—After declaring that he had been a moderate user of alcoholic beverages in the form of wine and beer during most of his life, President Charles W. Eliot of Harvard university declared that his earlier ideas had since undergone a radical change, in a notable address last night before the Massachusetts No-License league, of which he is the honorary president.

"I have been all my life what is sometimes called a moderate drinker," declared Eliot. "That is to say, I have used beer and wine on occasions, not habitually, and I have never experienced any ill effects whatever in my own person from either beer or wine and I recognize the truth of the Bible saying about wine, that 'it maketh glad the heart of man.'

"That is true. Whether it be expedient or not that the heart of man should be made glad in that way should be doubted. But there is no doubt about the fact that wine or spirits will momentarily make glad the heart of man. * * * This dinner has a cheerful aspect, but for hilarity, jollity and boisterousness, it cannot be compared for a moment to the dinner of the Ancient and Honorable Artillery company."

Continuing, Eliot declared that recent researches in physiology and medicine tended strongly to show that moderate drinking of alcohol was inexpedient and that men exposed to cold, heat or hardship are not better prepared for such encounters by alcohol. Eliot declared further that alcohol even moderately used did not quicken the action of the mind or enable one to support mental labor.

Speaking of no license, Eliot declared that while he had formerly considered it infringement of individual rights he had come to see that the greatest good for the greatest number justified, sometimes, infringement of the rights of the individual, but held that a town which went strongly for no license or for license, consistently, was far better off than the town which continually "wabbled," on such vote. He declared he had seen something of prohibition in Maine and knew that the prohibitory law in that state was a "dead failure" and that under prohibition you will always have numerous illicit places of sale.

James M. Head, formerly mayor of Nashville, who also spoke, declared the liquor interests of his state had allied themselves with the corporate forces in aiding the Democratic party, the Republicans taking up the slogan of the temperance party.

Three Bodies Still Missing

Deer Isle, Me., Oct. 30.—The body of Miss Emma Pay of Washington, who was drowned through the capsizing of the sloop Minnie Belle off here on Sept. 1 last, was recovered yesterday. It was identified by laundry marks on the clothing. This is the fourth body to be found of the seven victims of the accident. The place where the body was recovered was about two miles from the scene of the accident.

Cabinet Meetings Cut Out

Washington, Oct. 30.—Owing to the absence of most of the members of the president's official family, who are campaigning for Mr. Taft, there will be no meeting of the cabinet today. The next cabinet day falling on election day, when the president will be at Oyster Bay and most of the other cabinet officers at their homes to vote, no session will be held.

Many Corporations Involved

New York, Oct. 30.—Application for a joint receivership for the Hudson River Electric Power company and seven other kindred corporations, having an aggregate capitalization of $15,000,000, has been made by lawyers representing the bondholders. Insolvency, mismanagement and mingling of funds is charged.

Mad Steer Scares Citizens

Atlanta, Oct. 30.—A mad steer ran amuck in the business section of Atlanta and before it was caught two persons were injured and others fled to places of safety, some being forced to climb telegraph poles. In one of his furious rushes at pedestrians, a horn of the steer was torn from his head.

Summer Cottages Destroyed

Belfast, Me., Oct. 30.—A fire which wiped out five summer cottages at the Northrop camp ground is believed to have been of incendiary origin, and the local authorities have asked for state aid in the investigation which has been started.

Congo Riches Discovered

Brussels, Oct. 30.—R. D. Mohun, leader of the American expedition in the Congo, states that he has discovered rich deposits of gold, tin and copper in the Manyema district.

Fore River Foremen Hold a Smoker

Thursday evening, the weather outside was dark, rainy and gloomy. Inside of Colonial hall however all was bright and clear. The occasion of the gathering was the annual smoker of the foremen and assistant foremen employed at the Fore River Ship Building Co. plant. The guests of the evening were President Bowles, General Manager Smith and Secretary MacQuarrie.

The fun began shortly after 8 o'clock and it was nearly midnight when "Auld Lang Syne" was sung as the closing number. The committee on the affair were James Gibbs of the ship fitters department, James H. Lalley of the painters department, and J. F. Kemp the purchasing agent. Mr. Gibbs was master of ceremonies which opened with songs by Harry Hudson and Channing Willis. Clarence Fouche presided at the piano.

There was but little in the oratory line. President Bowles had his little to say on the merchant marine, and Manager Smith had a word to say on the apprentice system at the yards. Then it was announced that Caterer LaCroix was ready with his part of the program. This included lobster and chicken salads, escalloped oysters, rolls, coffee, etc. The lunch was nicely cooked and was excellent.

This over, the fun commenced. The bald heads were escorted to the orchestra chairs where their shiny tops glistened in the gas light. On the extreme right was President Bowles. Others in this row were Purchasing Agent Kemp; Leon Chappell, the brass man; Charles F. Fox, chief draughtsman of the engineers' department; Jim Lalley, the painter; H. E. Frick, not the steel magnet, but the general foreman of the North Dakota; R. P. Lovell, assistant chief engineer; and Dan Scouler, the angle smith man. Crowded out from this row, but close in the rear were Sunny Jim Holliwood, the village blacksmith; John W. Bell, of the forge department; and John F. Bruton, master mechanic.

Thomas Quinn was also there and he was the busiest man in the bunch. In fact he was so busy that he lost part of the entertainment that followed.

For the entertainment Manager Donovan of the Scenic brought over some of his best talent. They included Ira Kessner, the celebrated vocalist, Miss Ada Corbett, the change artist; little Joseph Daley, the Midget tenor, and Ben Ryan, the monologist.

While little Joseph Daley was singing he was showered with pennies by the appreciative audience. This included all of the professional talent. The home talent then took the platform. Clarence Fouche played the piano as he never played before, and everybody had their little sing. Agent Kemp and Peter Hines did the cake walk; H. C. Kerwin read a poem; William R. Hayson sang a slumber song, during which the hook was brought into use and he was hooked off the stage.

W. F. Rice told the story of his life and of the new piano that he was playing now. H. E. Frick led the chorus singing and dancing on the side, while Tupper MacQuarrie looked on in amazement. Jim Lalley did nothing unusual, except to talk. He was on the committee, and he saw to it that nothing was lacking to make everybody happy.

The audience showed their appreciation of some of the home talent artists by showering them with round tin disks that they had obtained from some unknown source.

During the latter part of the program the occupants of the bald headed row, realizing that they were a little conspicuous, left the orchestra seats and mingled with those who were blessed with more hair on their tops, so that they would not be so noticeable. Thus the fun went on until it lacked but a few minutes for the last car for the Point to leave. Then the party sang "Auld Lang Syne" and the smoker of 1908 was over.

Everybody had a good time and the only regret expressed was that they did not come oftener.

TIN WEDDING.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Sampson of Granite street celebrated the tenth anniversary of their marriages on Thursday evening. Many friends were present to offer congratulations, Mr. Sampson being well known both in Quincy and Weymouth. The couple were recipient of many gifts, among them being a cut glass bowl and glasses from the Sons of Veterans and Ladies Auxiliary. The house was beautifully decorated with autumn leaves, ferns and Japanese lanterns. Master John Thomas Lane acted as usher. Refreshments were served during the evening and there was music by Guilant's orchestra.

—The Board of Education of New York City is committed to the extension of playgrounds. In the budget for next year it has requested funds for the organization of fifty new afternoon playgrounds; 106 summer playgrounds have been in operation under the Board of Education during the past summer. At a recent meeting, the Board of Superintendents adopted resolutions to the effect that all new buildings should be provided with roof playgrounds; also that the organization of school gardens should be encouraged. The Board of Education decided on September 23d to open many buildings after school hours and on Saturdays as recreation centers for vacational work. A standing committee of five commissioners will be appointed.

The Republican town committee of STOUGHTON met in Monk's block last evening and arrangements were perfected for election.

Foot Ball And Other Sports

The two Carlson boys are playing a great game for Quincy in the two guard positions. Several times against Melrose they broke through and tackled the runner almost before he got started. "Venus," the bigger of the two, is as solid as rock, and when the opposing team strikes his point in the line there is a sudden stop. He is also pretty clever at kicking goals.

Quincy High was scheduled to play Brockton today at the Park but the rain put a damper on the sport. Quincy has been very lucky so far in her games, having only one cancelled and none stopped by rain until today. There would have been a good game too, for Brockton has been practicing hard of late in preparation for this game.

However the local management has arranged to have the Brockton team here Saturday afternoon, and then we can see which is the best team. Indications today point to clear, chilly day on the morrow, a day that will bring out all the football there is in a team. The local team has only lost one game on the home grounds, the one with Everett going against them 12-0. Everett swamped Brockton 38-0, and if you take this as any dope, Quincy should win tomorrow.

The Fore River soccer team plays at home Saturday, meeting the J. & P. Coats team of Pawtucket. The local boys have been playing rather a slow game the last two weeks, having been trimmed 3-1 and 4-1 the last two Saturdays. However the Coats team has yet to defeat the local crowd and so Fore River looks good to break the losing streak tomorrow.

While Fore River is battling with the Coats eleven, the Fall River Rovers will have to stack up against the champion Howard & Bullough team. If Fore River wins and Howard & Bullough beats the Rovers, the latter will be tied again with the local team for first place. The Fore River team is still in the race and a few wins now will put them in the running.

The annua meeting of the Quincy Charitable society will be held on Monday afternoon Nov. 2, at the Quincy Woman's club, instead of Wednesday, Nov. 4. 3t

HERE'S A SQUARE DEAL FOR YOU!

We have just taken up a new line of men's hose which are becoming famous throughout the whole country because of their marvelous wearing qualities. We have investigated this hosiery and know it has unusual merit, and so we are asking each person who has trouble with holes coming in the toes of his socks, to come and buy just one pair of half-hose made with the Interwoven TOE AND HEEL REG. U.S. PAT. OFF.

This will cost you just 25c.

Then, after you have given them a thorough, fair test, if you don't say they are the best wearing socks you have ever worn, come again, bring the pair back and we'll refund your money.

If you think you might not like the looks of these new socks, come and see. You don't have to buy them. Just come and see them first.

WHY DO WE MAKE THIS OFFER? Because we know this is the greatest wearing hosiery ever made. We have tried them, and all to whom we have sold them say they are best thing they ever saw. We know a single trial pair will convince the most particular person. Let us show YOU.

HOME TREATMENT

And Sanatorium Methods Outlined At Tuberculosis Meetings at City Hall

The second day of the tuberculosis exhibit was opened Friday afternoon at 3 o'clock, and the fair weather brought out the largest attendance that has been present at any of the sessions thus far. Dr. W. L. Sargent presided and the speaker of the afternoon was Dr. John B. Hawes, secretary of the commission for erecting State Hospitals for tuberculosis.

Dr. Hawes chose for his subject "Home treatment of tuberculosis," and his paper was interesting every minute of the half hour he spoke. The doctor said that the home treatment of a person sick with consumption is a most important matter, because tuberculosis is a home disease. It is practically the most important social question of the day, and the general public are by duty bound to know something about the disease, and be able to explain treatment for it.

A brief history of the different phases through which the disease has passed, served to show the successes and failures of the various treatments. The sanatoriums are all right as far as they go; that is to say, while the person is there he gains weight and health, but when he returns home he loses it all. This is because he does not know how to live at home and treat himself at the same time. Thus home treatment becomes a very important part of the general treatment.

Dr. Hawes explained the working of the Tuberculosis class of the Emanuel church, Boston, a class of consumptives who meet once a week to receive instructions from competent doctors as to how to get cured. Each member has a little book in which he keeps a diary of every little thing he does, no matter how insignificant it may seem. When the class meets, the doctors go over the books with persons individually, show them where they have done wrong and instruct them how to do better. The class is doing very valuable work and at a comparatively little expense. Dr. Hawes advocated such a class in Quincy especially, from the very fact that many of the Emanuel Church class are Quincy people.

Dr. Hawes concluded his remarks by saying, what he thought a very important consideration, that this exhibit is as much to show well people how to keep well as it is to show sick people how to get well.

The discussion of the question was led by Dr. F. J. Peirce, who spoke in praise of the great work being done by Dr. Hawes. He gave a few examples of some cases he has seen of people who do not know how to live at home. Dr. Peirce also thought a tuberculosis class should be started and said he would do all in his power to further the interests of the proposition.

"Sanatorium methods in the treatment of pulmonary tuberculosis" was the topic for Friday evening at the tuberculosis exhibit. Dr. John F. Welch presided and there was a very large attendance of ladies and gentlemen.

Dr. Welch in opening the meeting said a few words complimentary to the Quincy Woman's club. All medical men appreciate the importance of this exhibition, but had never succeeded. He was hopeful of seeing tuberculosis societies formed as a result, for the knowledge and prevention of the disease.

Tuberculosis was not a question of medicine but of good air, sunlight and pure food. Considering the progress that had been made in twenty-five years, he would feel safe in saying that at the end of the next twenty-five years there would be no more tuberculosis then there was pneumonia today. It is simply a practical education.

He then introduced the speaker of the evening, Dr. Herbert C. Clapp, formerly visiting physician to the State sanatorium at Rutland.

Dr. Clapp said our ideas about tuberculosis have changed within a few years, years ago it was considered that the New England climate was bad for that disease. Today if only taken early enought, and do the right things, the majority of cases will be cured. One of the things today is the importance of fresh air. In the olden times patients were kept in close rooms, and not a breath of fresh air allowed to reach them. Nowadays one literally soaks them in fresh air, summer and winter, no matter what the weather.

A Beautiful Masonic Monument

There is now standing in the showyard of J. L. Miller, Liberty street, a very massive elegant Masonic monument made from the medium Quincy granite. Anyone seeing this monument must conclude that when the Quincy granite is properly treated in design there is no granite equal to it for memorial purposes.

This monument is for an ex-lieutenant governor of California and will be erected in the Woodlawn Masonic cemetery, San Francisco. It is very massive, and is 10 feet, 6 inches long; 6 feet, 11 inches wide, at the base; and stands 9 feet, 6 inches high, and will weigh over 25 tons. The Knight Templar badge, the 32d degree badge, and the Scottish Rite badge, are beautifully carved in relief on polished surfaces. There are cluster columns at each corner of the die which adds to the symmetry of the whole structure.

The monument will remain standing at the works over Sunday and will then be taken apart and shipped to destination. The design and all detail or working drawings were made by Mr. Miller, and certainly show careful study of proportion and embellishment, and should stimulate a demand for Quincy granite in far away California.

Mr. Miller also has an elaborately carved celtic cross that stands 14 feet high and costs several thousands dollars, which also goes to the Pacific washed shores of California. His monuments have been set in nearly every state in the union and he himself travels some 30,000 miles a year, and few men possess a better or larger knowledge of the monumental business.

ROBERT P. SULLIVAN DEAD.

Robert P. Sullivan, one of Quincy's well known and popular young men, passed away at his home 255 Newbury avenue last night, at 11.30 in the 23d year of his age. He has been sick for about three weeks with diabetes, but it was not until this week that he was forced to take to his bed.

Mr. Sullivan was well known socially, being a member of the Knights of Columbus and the Iroquois club. He was very popular with the members of both clubs and took an active interest in everything connected with them. "Bob" will be remembered as an end in the annual minstrels of the Iroquois club and he always made a big hit. Besides he played first base on the K of C. baseball team and never failed to play a good game.

A little over a year ago, Oct. 16, 1907, he was married to Miss Mollie Callahan of East Milton. Besides a wife he is survived by a brother and a sister, who live with their aunt on Penn's hill. He was a machinist by trade and had been employed at the Tubular Rivet works till he was forced to give up work.

The funeral will take place Monday morning at 8.30, from his late home, and a high mass will be celebrated at 9 o'clock at the Sacred Heart church, Atlantic.

Miss Theresa Lindberg of Quincy, a nurse in the hospital at Vineland, New Jersey, died there Tuesday, Oct. 27. Funeral services will be held at her late home 160 Elm street, Quincy, Sunday afternoon at 1 P. M. and at the Swedish Baptist church on Granite street, at 2 P. M.

Lady Betty Across the Water

By C. N. & A. M. WILLIAMSON

Copyright, 1906, by McClure, Phillips & Co.

SYNOPSIS.

CHAPTER I—The story is told in the first person by Lady Betty Bulkeley, the pretty young sister of the Duke of Stanforth. She is to visit America in care of Mrs. Stuyvesant-Knox (Mrs. Ess Kay,) a leader of American society, and the latter's cousin, Miss Sally Woodburn, in order that her elder sister Victoria's prospective fiance, Sir Gilbert Mantell, may not be attracted by her.

II—On board ship Betty is attracted by a young American steerage passenger, who saves a child from drowning. Mrs. Ess Kay, who is very "exclusive," objects to Betty's interest in the young man. Betty also meets Tom Doremus, cousin of Mrs. Vander Windt, of New York society.

III—Lady Betty gets her first impression of America. On the dock she is rescued from reporters by the steerage hero, who tells her he is Jim Brett, employed at the Manhattan club, New York. In Mrs. Ess Kay's splendid New York home Betty meets Lieutenant Parker brother of the hostess, who is to take them to visit West Point.

IV—Vivace, a beautiful and expensive dog, is sent to Betty. Mrs. Ess Kay does not know who the donor is, and Betty does not tell her that it is Brett. Lieutenant Parker, whom Betty does not like, makes love to her.

V—Lady Betty has a good time at West Point despite Parker's proposal, which she rejects.

VI—In a walk in Central park Sally tells Betty her love story (she had been seperated years before from the poor man she loved by her family, the man becoming a monk) and advises Betty to marry only when she is sure of her love. They meet Brett.

VII—Betty is introduced to Mrs. Harvey Richmount Taylour, a typical young society woman.

VIII—At Newport Betty falls in love with Mrs. Ess Kay's splendid "cottage," the Moorings. Parker continues his attentions. Mrs. Ess Kay is chagrined on learning that Mrs. Van der Windt, Newport's leader, has planned to "cut" her and her acquaintance, Mrs. Pitchley. Mrs. Ess Kay relies on Lady Betty's presence to maintain her social prestige. She plans an entertainment to introduce Betty.

"Do introduce us all," laughed Mrs. Pitchley, "and then we can sympathize with Lord—Lord—oh, but I can never learn to pronounce him!"

I introduced him to the mother and stepdaughter then, though I hadn't thought of its being necessary, and explained that my cousin, though spelled very elaborately, was pronounced Moonslee.

He had evidently abandoned all intention of immediate flight now, and his rage was visibly cooling. He was looking at Mrs. Pitchley with quite as much interest as she showed in him and with even more at the girl, although he talked to Potter Parker and answered his questions quite civilly. He explained that he had actually been ordered away from the beach, bathing suit and all, by some "impertinent ass of an official."

Potter was hospitably distressed, but Mrs. Pitchley was moved to laughter.

"Ha, ha, won't the man be sick when he sees you coming back with us and hears us call you Lord Mohunsleigh?—for if you'll point him out in time, that's what I shall call you, right under his nose. You see, this is a private beach. We all subscribe for our bath houses, but you'll be our guest, of course, and I'll put Mr. Pitchley's box at your service. He's gone off fishing for a few days. Only to think of the Earl of Mohunsleigh being turned back. Delicious!"

"Why, Mohunsleigh!" I cried.

"Can't say I thought of it that way till now," said Mohunsleigh, pulling his wiry mustache and condescending to grin slightly at last. "But it's true I'm not a millionaire you know."

"You're an earl. You can't say you're not, for I read in the Flashlight only the other day that the Earl of Mohunsleigh had sailed for America, though it couldn't be ascertained on what ship."

"Didn't know there was any particular reason why it should be ascertained," said Mohunsleigh. "I've run over to visit a chap in California—dashed nice chap, too, but thought I'd have a shot at New York first, and blest if I could stand it. Never could stand being grilled since a sunstroke I got when I was serving in India."

"Dear me, who and what does a lord serve?" broke in Miss Pitchley, which surprised Mohunsleigh and me both so much that he stared and I blushed. But she didn't, though no girl under Vic's age at least would think of cutting in like that with a stranger at home. Mohunsleigh was delighted to be spoken to by her, though, one could see. His eyes brightened up and he smiled, looking straight at her as if she were a new and absolutely desirable kind of rifle. I say rifle because Mohunsleigh is a great shot and would rather spend his money (what he has of it) on a new invention by way of a gun than anything else.

"Used to be in the army. I've chucked it now," he explained affably, beginning to look quite nice, for really, though small and wiry, with ginger colored hair and mustache and no colored eyes, Mohunsleigh isn't an ugly man when you come to notice his nice, sharp features. He's only a distant cousin of mine and so old (he's nearly forty) that in the first years of our acquaintance he made himself agreeable by teaching me to ride on his foot, but I always liked him—whenever I remembered his existence. Naturally, though, this hasn't been often, as one of his many eccentricities is to be continually prowling at the ends of the earth—anywhere where there may be animals to shoot. What kind he doesn't seem to care if they are only large enough. Once he was fond of tigers, but the last thing he had a fad for was polar bears, and he sent mother a skin, which makes the oak room smell strongly of camphor.

"I hope, anyhow, you're going to pay a good long visit to Newport," said Mrs. Pitchley.

"I meant to go back tomorrow morning," replied Mohunsleigh, "but perhaps I might stop on a bit longer."

"We'll give you some fun," volunteered Miss Pitchley, looking frightfully pretty.

"Will you?" said Mohunsleigh. "Jolly nice of you. I must think about it." Then he deigned to remember that I was his little long lost cousin, asked when I'd arrived on this side the water and a few other things, but he looked more at Miss Pitchley than at me. I suppose it is difficult to be much excited about a person who has taken riding lessons on your foot.

Potter asked Mohunsleigh where he was staying, and when he heard it was at a hotel he said his sister wouldn't allow that to go on. Lord Mohunsleigh would have to come to the Moorings, that was settled, and his man must be told to pack up his things directly. Mightn't word be sent by messenger at once?

"Haven't brought a man, thanks awfully. Shed that habit long ago," said my cousin. "I've got precious little luggage, too; picked this thing up in a shop as I came along and they charged me the deuce of a lot for it. You're awfully good, you know, and all that, to offer to put me up, but I only came prepared to spend a night or two."

Then Potter insisted and blew all Mohunsleigh's objections away one by one as if they had been threads of cobweb, still my cousin wouldn't give a definite answer, perhaps not understanding American hospitality, or perhaps having other ideas which he preferred. At all events we went to the bathing machines (which weren't bathing machines at all, but dear little houses) without anything being decided. The only invitation which Mohunsleigh had really accepted was Mrs. Pitchley's, for her husband's bathing box.

She kept her word and called him "Lord Mohunsleigh" in quite a high voice, just as we passed the man who had refused to let him go on to the beach before, but the man didn't seem impressed in the least. I think he didn't even recognize Mohunsleigh as the same person, or if he did he pretended very cleverly not to.

I had forgotten the horror of the bathing dress in my surprise at meeting Mohunsleigh, but it fell over me again like a cloud as soon as I was shut up in the bathing box with those wisps of green silk. I wouldn't have the maid help me and wrestled with the ordeal alone. It took me some time, but when everything was on (there were only four things, counting the cap and smart little sandals) I couldn't say to myself that the effect wasn't attractive. It was, and I did approve of myself in the quaint headdress, which was more like a fetching silk toque with an Alsatian bow in front than a mere cap.

But the awful moment came when I was ready, with my hand on the door. I'm sure Joan of Arc must have felt like that when she had let her hair down and put on that graceful white dress of hers one sees in the pictures, to be burned. She may have been dimly aware that she was looking quite her best, as I was, but even that couldn't have buoyed her up much at the moment, and it didn't me.

As I stood hesitating, somebody knocked. I peeped out, and it was Sally—quiet, unassuming little Sally, with her middle aged airs—looking like one of Stan's gaiety girl photographs, in a short, low necked dress of bright poppy color, with silk legs as shiny as an archdeacon's, only with quite a different effect.

"Come on, my green Undine," said she, and I came, because she pulled me so suddenly that otherwise I should have fallen flat on my nose.

Having seen her dressed so much in my style, it wasn't quite as bad as before, and when I was out of my box—like one of those little barometer women that tell fair weather—there was Mrs. Pitchley in crimson and Carolyn Pitchley in white, and lots of pretty women, all with the same lovely stockings. There hadn't been any standing about when we arrived, because we were early, not having gone to the Casino first as the others had, and it was a relief to find them, or it was, until I had a great shock.

Instead of the men being away at a separate beach of their own, they were put with us, and kept popping out of boxes every minute, and running up to talk to the girls they knew, just as calmly as if they were in evening dress. My eyes almost came out of my head for an instant. Then I just swallowed hard and leaped over about five centuries of prejudice as if I were jumping across a tiny beck.

"Everything's a matter of custom," said I to myself, and in another minute I was racing gayly down to the water, hand in hand with Sally, as if we had been little girls with sand pails and shovels.

I expected to feel as if I had plunged into a million gallon bath of iced water, when I got out among the creamy breakers, but, judging from the sensation, Americans have had their part of the Atlantic beautifully warmed from underneath with some patent heating apparatus. It would be just like them!

STEEL MEN ARE GUILTY

Pay Fines of $1,000 and Boston Recovers $5000 on Judgment

Boston, Oct. 31.—David H. Andrews, president of the Boston Bridge works, and Charles N. Fitts, secretary of the New England Structural company, defendants in the so-called steel cases that were exposed by the finance commission some time ago, were before Judge Harris in the superior court on an indictment accusing them of conspiracy. Each pleaded guilty to the indictment and was fined $1000, which was paid. They paid the city of Boston $5000. It was the amount of a judgment obtained by the city, which brought suit to recover this sum for the extra profit. The judgment obtained was the full amount sought.

The indictment specifically charged them with conspiring to secure the signature of City Engineer Jackson to a contract to build the steel superstructure of Broadway bridge, by falsely representing that their bids for the job were made in good faith. The bids were made in collusion with a view to have the Bridge works get the contract and then pay a certain amount to the Structural company, so that there was no real competition.

The finance commission laid bare an arrangement that had been carried on some time in dealing with the city. As a result of a hearing in the municipal court several of the men were held for the grand jury. Andrews and Fitts pleaded not guilty in August, but yesterday retracted their former pleas. The steel cases were fought hard in their preliminary stages on the points of law.

BATTLESHIPS GET "FROST" AT AMOY

Participation In Celebration Is Denied the Chinese

Amoy, Oct. 31.—Rear Admiral Emory, commanding the second squadron of the United States Atlantic fleet, came ashore yesterday afternoon and made a formal call upon Prince Yu Lang and Liang un Yen, vice president of the foreign board, who are representing the imperial government in the welcome of the Americans. Later 1600 men of the fleet and 124 officers landed. No special program had been arranged for their entertainment and the men spent the time wandering about the temple and reception ground.

Last evening 124 officers of the fleet were entertained at dinner by the imperial Chinese commissioners and the reception committee of Chinese. The menu was native.

Only a few natives turned out to witness the arrival of the battleships, composing as they do the strongest naval force that ever entered this port. Only 100 Chinese guests will be admitted to the grounds on which the celebrations are planned for the reception. Resentment at the severe measures taken to exclude Chinese from participation in the celebration is the cause of the apathy shown. The British consul has issued a circular stating that the local officials have declined to issue more than sixty passes to the enclosure to British subjects and that in consequence he will refuse to accept a pass.

Sperry's Fleet at Olongapo

Manila, Oct. 31.—The first squadron of the Atlantic battleship fleet reached Olongapo, P. I., this morning. The weather has been fine throughout the trip from Japan and the ships have been occupied with squadron evolutions and careful preparations for target practice. Otherwise the journey has been uneventful. Wireless communication will be retained with Manila while the fleet is at Olongapo.

Contest Over Rich Woman's Will

Boston, Oct. 31.—Three New York women began a contest for $1,500,000 in the Suffolk probate court when they disputed the will of Mrs. Caroline E. Johnson. The contestants are her daughters, who were given an absolute legacy of $20,000, and the income of the estate, which is left in trust in equal shares for life. The will is contested on the grounds that Mrs. Johnson was not of sound mind when it was made in October, 1903, and that it was procured by alleged undue influence.

Twenty Miles by Æroplane

Mourmelon, France, Oct. 31.—Henry Farman, for the first time, gave a practical demonstration of the possibilities of the aeroplane by flying direct from this place to Rheims, a distance of twenty miles, without mishap. The time of flight was twenty minutes and the height reached was between 120 and 150 feet. The course was literally as the crow flies, over trees, fields and streams.

Remarkaly Fast Balloon Trip

North Adams, Mass., Oct. 31.—In a northwest gale, William Van Sleet, accompanied by M. Menard, made an ascension in the balloon Greylock and were carried swiftly toward the southeast, landing in Whatley. A distance of about forty miles as the crow flies was covered in thirty minutes, or at the rate of eighty miles an hour.

Got Quite Pleasant.

The mistress of a hospitable home in New York recently had to employ a new second girl whose work she liked, but whose blunt and forbidding manner she liked not at all. She talked to the girl and urged her to be pleasant and agreeable whenever she had to say anything to other people, particularly visitors.

A great surprise for the mistress followed this admonition. The next day the girl happened to attend the door, and she opened it just as her mistress was passing through the hall. To the astonishment and bewilderment of the latter the girl reached out and, catching the caller by the hand, actually dragged her inside the door, expressing her pleasure at seeing her, and then hastened to announce the call to her mistress.—New York Sun.

Canaries of Paris.

The vender of chickweed in Paris is a well known figure. The sellers are numerous, and their cry is one of the most noteworthy of those that resound in the morning in the streets of the French capital. According to the Bulletin des Halles, there are about a hundred thousand canaries in the capital, and the daily consumption of chickweed is estimated at $2,000. This sum looks large, but it allows only 2 cents for each bird. A Paris contemporary points out that a goodly portion of land between Suresnes and Courbevoie is set aside for the cultivation of the weed.

The Excitement.

"How fast do you usually travel?"

"I don't pay much attention to that," answered the motorist. "I get most of my excitement in watching the rapidity with which pedestrians move out of my way."—Washington Star.

Feminine Nerves.

There are nervous women, there are hypernervous women. But women so nervous that the continual rustle of a silk skirt makes them nervous—no, there are no women so nervous as that.—Wellington Free Lance.

LONG A RULER OF SOCIAL SET

Death of Mrs. Astor, Who Established the "Four Hundred"

SUCCUMBS TO HEART DISEASE

Remarkable Vitality Kept Her Alive Until She Reached Age of Eighty-Two--Held Social Domination Up to a Year Ago--Astor Emeralds Are Said to Be the Finest In the World--Leaves Son and Daughters

New York, Oct. 31.—Mrs. William Astor, who for thirty years has been regarded as the social leader of New York, died last night of heart disease at her home in Fifth avenue. For nearly four weeks Mrs. Astor, who was 82 years old, had been in a critical condition, owing to the return of an affection of the heart from which she suffered for a number of years. Only her remarkable vitality kept her alive.

Mrs. Orme Wilson, a daughter of Mrs. Astor, has been almost constantly at her mother's bedside for several days and was with her mother when she died. Mrs. Wilson has suffered a nervous breakdown as a result of her attendance upon her mother and is under the care of the Astor family physician.

There is not a name in the social register that is so well known from one end of the land to the other as that of Mrs. Astor. Despite her advancing years, Mrs. Astor continued to hold her social domination up to a year ago, when her failing health compelled her to retire into comparative seclusion.

It was in the summer of 1907 that Mrs. Astor's friends learned of her ill-health. While she was abroad last year her son, John Jacob Astor, made the announcement that Beechwood, Mrs. Astor's summer home at Newport, would not be opened and this led to the knowledge that Mrs. Astor was in poor health. Word came later from Mrs. Astor while she was in Paris saying that she would open her Newport villa, and that she would make the season there one of the gayest in years.

This promise was not kept, however, for when she returned from abroad she broke down in Boston and had to be brought to New York. She had remained at her home here ever since. Four weeks ago the heart trouble returned in a more serious form than ever before and Dr. Flint was in daily attendance upon her. A bulletin was issued yesterday that the society leader had spent a comfortable night, but last night she grew rapidly worse and her relatives were called to the bedside. Mrs. Astor passed peacefully away.

The society functions given and presided over by Mrs. Astor have gone down into history as the most brilliant on record in America. It is said that the ballroom in the mansion on Fifth avenue would accommodate 1000 people. It was Mrs. Astor who established the famous "400," her visiting list being confined to that number of names. In 1905, however, she was said to have "let down the bars" when she invited 1200 persons to one of the most memorable social events ever given in New York. Mrs. Astor received her guests at these gatherings seated in a high-backed chair beneath a portrait of herself. The Astor jewels were worn by Mrs. Astor on these occasions. It is said the Astor emeralds are the finest in the world.

William Astor, who died in Paris in 1892, took little part in the social activities his wife enjoyed. Mrs. Astor was Miss Caroline Schermerhorn, a daughter of a well-to-do merchant. She was married to William Astor on Sept. 23, 1853. John Jacob Astor was their only son. There were four daughters, two of whom, Mrs. Ogilvie Haig and Mrs. Orme Wilson, are now living. The eldest daughter, Miss Emily Astor, who married J. J. Van Allen, died some years ago, as did Miss Helen Astor, who married James Roosevelt-Roosevelt.

Turkey Alone Holds Aloof

Washington, Oct. 31.—Persia has consented to join the international conference to consider measures for the restriction of the opium traffic which is to meet at Shanghai in January next. All the countries interested in the production of opium and its imports have now signified their intention of participating in the conference except Turkey. Persia exports considerable opium.

Fifteen-Year Hunt Ended

Chicago, Oct. 31.—United States officers arrested Joseph Hunt and W. H. Boyle, charged with counterfeiting. In rooms occupied by the men equipment for counterfeiting dollars and half-dollars was found. It is said that a search for the men had been conducted for fifteen years. Unable to give bond, the men were locked up.

Orville Wright on Crutches

Washington, Oct. 31.—Delighted with the prospect of returning to his home at Dayton, Orville Wright, the aeroplanist, today left the hospital at the army post to which he has been confined for the past six weeks. With the aid of crutches Wright is able to walk.

THE OUTLOOK.

The indications are that Quincy will give big pluralities on Tuesday next, not only for Taft and Sherman, but for the whole Republican ticket, including Draper for Governor, Frothingham for lieutenant governor, Bemis for councillor, Galvin for congress, Hultman for senator, Thomas and Langelier for representatives to the General Court, and the county candidates.

In 1904 Quincy gave the Roosevelt electors 2,453 votes; Parker and Davis, Democratic 1,340.

Last year for Governor the vote was: Guild, R., 1,754; Whitney, D., 696; Hisgen, Ind. League, 974.

Quincy people gave a most enthusiastic support to the No-License Mass Meeting held in Boston on Thursday. The attendance of Quincy people during the day was very large and at the banquet the following well known temperance workers were present: Mr. H. M. Faxon, Mr. and Mrs. Theophilus King, Mr. D. King, Mrs. Pattee, Dr. E. N. Hardy, Mrs. A. Isabelle Davis, Miss Amelia Bumpus, Messrs. Frank Crane, Abbot Melcher, Carle Hayward, Dea. R. D. Chase, D. F. Chase, Dea. C. T. Sherman, N. P. Hardy, Bert Miller, Miss Eva Brown, Mrs. F. Crane and others. The convention was a great success and reflects much credit upon Mr. D. King who was the one who planned the meeting and so successfully carried out the splendid program. President Elliot's address was a notable contribution to the subject of no-license and will materially add to the effectiveness of the organization and the success of the movement.

Dr. E. N. Hardy and Mr. E. D. Gourd represented Bethany church at the council which installed the Rev. George Luther Cady, D. D., pastor of Pilgrim church, Dorchester, Tuesday afternoon and evening. Dr. Cady is successor to the late Dr. William H. Allbright who was well known in Quincy.

MUSICAL SERVICE.

The first of a series of Musical services for the winter will be given at Bethany church Sunday evening at 7.30 by Madame Morey, organist, and musical director of the church. The following music will be rendered at this service:

Organ Prelude, "Cujus Animam" Rossini
Anthem, "Rejoice in the Lord" Calkin
Trio, "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God" Casta
Solo and Quartette, "Song of Redemption" James
Solo and Quartette, "Peace I leave with you" Roberts
Sanctus from St. Cecilia Mass. Gounod
Postlude, Bubois

The choir will consist of Mrs. Emma S. Moore, Miss Winnifred White, Miss Anna N. Adams, Mr. James B. Forrest, Mr. James S. Whyte and a large chorus. Dr. Hardy will give a short address.

CHRISTADELPHIAN LECTURES.

A Christadelphian fraternal gathering will be held in Quincy Sunday, Nov. 1, in Electa hall, Johnson building. The different ecclesiasts from Boston, Providence, Dorcester, Lowell, Campello and Quincy will meet at 11 A. M. Two lectures will be delivered one at 11 A. M., the other at 7 P. M. The public are cordially invited to attend. Bring your Bibles and compare notes. These meetings are free to all, positively no collections. 2t

The annua meeting of the Quincy Charitable society will be held on Monday afternoon Nov. 2, at the Quincy Woman's club, instead of Wednesday, Nov. 4. 3t

Home Treatment

We attach more importance to good food to enable patients to throw off the disease. It is imposible to escape the germs but we can fortify the system so it will not give these germs proper nourishment. No agent can be found that will kill them. Some people think all they have to do to cure consumption is to go out into the air and be cured. The result is half of those patients die. We need medical supervision. It does not make so much difference where, but how we live.

The methods used at the sanatorium can be used at home. These methods are useful in preventing the disease, and in preventing a relapse of those who have been cured.

At this point a large number of pictures were thrown upon the screen by the stereopticon. These pictures were of buildings and scenes at Rutland. They showed the building, patients sleeping in the open air, forms of recreation and amusements, enjoyed by the patients, etc.

Pictures were also shown of sanatoriums in other states, also many of the outdoor sleeping tents and balcony rooms that are in use at many private houses.

The ladies who assisted Friday were Mrs. J. F. Welch, Mrs. E. W. Sheppard, Mrs. Otho Hayward, Mrs. Alice D. Sanborn, Mrs. Wilson Marsh and Mrs. Drinker. The nurses who are assisting are: Miss Robinson, the visiting nurse of the Woman's club; Misses Eva and Anna Blair, Miss Marshall and Miss Falconer.

This evening at 8 o'clock Dr. N. S. Hunting will preside, William H. Potter, president of the Dental Hygiene Council of Massachusetts will speak on "Hygiene of the Mouth" with stereopticon illustrations. Discussion led by Charles I. Adams, M. D.

Sunday, November 1, at 3.30 P. M. J. F. Reynolds, M. D., Presiding. "The Conservation of Natural Resources as applied to the Problem of Tuberculosis" by Cleveland Floyd, M. D., House of the Good Samaritan and Boston Consumptive's Hospital. Discussion led by S. W. Ellsworth, M. D.

Sunday, November 1, at 8 P. M., Mr. James Duncan Secretary and Treasurer, International Granite Cutters and First Vice President, American Federation of Labor, Presiding. "Standard of Living and Tuberculosis" by Henry Abrahams, Secretary International Cigar Makers Union, No. 9. Discussion led by D. B. Reardon, M. D.

City hall will be open Sunday from ten o'clock in the morning until ten at night and every one is invited to visit the exhibit and also to attend the lectures. Admission is free.

FIRST REHEARSAL.

The executive board of the Quincy Choral society has sent cards to all members who had left their names with the secretary announcing the first rehearsal with a conductor for next Wednesday evening at Colonial hall. These names already number one hundred, and it is hoped that many who did not sign at the business meetings will sign at the rehearsal. It is the wish of most members of the society to begin the study of some complete work at once, preferably an oratorio, and if they do, all lovers of good choral work in Quincy will watch their progress with great interest.

AUTO ACCIDENT.

The chain on one of Abbott & Miller's auto express wagons broke while the machine was climbing a hill on Adams street, Dorchester, yesterday. The chauffeur, Chester Lowner thinking to stop its backward plunge down the hill, turned the steering wheel and backed the machine toward the sidewalk. The machine went over the low curb and brought up against the window of a Chinese laundry. The window was smashed and some linen soiled.

MADE IT A LIFE STUDY

Dr. J. S. Leonhardt Found the Cause and Cure of Piles.

Dr. J. S. Leonhardt, the celebrated specialist of Lincoln, Neb., proved after years of study, that the cause of piles is internal—bad circulation. Then he perfected Hem-Roid ,an internal remedy, and in 1000 different cases it cured 98 per cent. By Dr. Leonhardt's order, Hem-Roid is sold under an iron-clad guarantee. If it fails, the money is paid back.

Autumn Party At Atlantic

The annual autumn party of the Ladies' Auxiliary 19, A. O. H., of Atlantic, was held in Atlantic Music hall last evening. The hall was prettily decorated with red and brown autumn foliage, and the stage was a mass of ferns and potted plants. The ever present national colors and the banners of "Old Erin" were hung with tasteful effect about the hall.

Cuff's orchestra furnished the music and dancing was enjoyed till 12.30. During the intermission an entertainment was given, including vocal solos by Master Dan O'Meara and Cornelius M. Duggan, also xylophone solos by Gerald Sullivan.

The success of the party is to the energetic work of the officers of the auxiliary, who formed the committee of arrangements. Miss Myra Shea, president, was in charge of the floor, and she was assisted by the following aids: Miss Elizabeth Monahan, Miss Margaret Dolan, Miss Annie McGuinness, Miss Katherine Sullivan, Miss Elizabeth Sullivan, Miss Mary Whelan, Miss Grace Barry, and Mrs. John Derringer.

Farmers' Ball With Prizes

Abigail Adams circle, Companions of the Forest of America, celebrated its ninth anniversary last night by holding a Farmers' ball. The affair took place in A. O. H. hall, and the inside of the building was a veritable barnyard way down home on the farm. Cornstalks and vegetables of all kinds were about the hall giving it a very rustic and picturesque appearance.

There was a concert by Wilson's orchestra from 8 to 9, followed by a grand march of all the "rubes" in costume, about forty couples participating in the march. The march was headed by Frank Sampson and Chief Companion Mrs. Mary Pritchard. The judges were Mayor William T. Shea, Chief Engineer Peter J. Williams of the Fire department, and John E. Ford. They awarded the prizes as follows: First ladies' prize Mrs. Mary Barnicoat; second Miss Henrietta Malcolm; third, Mrs. Josephine Daw; first gentleman's prize, Frank Sampson; second James Daw; third, John Mason who impersonated a bald headed farmer.

After the prizes were awarded the march broke up into a Portland Fancy, after which dancing was enjoyed until 2. Refreshments were served during the intermission.

BUTLER—HILL.

The marriage of Miss Mary E. Hill of East Milton and Mr. Harry A. Butler of Easton, Penn., was solemnized at the bride's home on Brackett street on Saturday afternoon, October twenty-fourth at half past four o'clock.

The bride was attended by her sister, Miss Elizabeth M. Hill, and Mr. Arthur L. Butler, brother of the groom, acted as best man. Mr. William H. Reece of Dorchester and Mr. Jesse B. Baxter of East Milton were ushers. Little Edwin Dualey Dodge, Jr., of Newtonville was the ring bearer. Rev. Andrew H. Mulnix of Faneuil, former pastor of the East Congregational church, was the officiating clergyman.

The bridal party entered the parlors promptly at the appointed hour to the strains of Lohengrin's wedding march, which was played by Mr. Raymond piper of Dorchester. The episcopal form of the marriage service was used during which Miss Flora Thrasher, a cousin of the bride sang, "O, Perfect Love."

The bride was charming in a gown of white net lace over silk, and carried a shower bouquet of white roses. Her only ornament was a gold brooch, a gift from the groom.

The maid of honor wore a beautiful gown of white silk muslin over pink, and carried a shower bouquet of pink and white sweet peas.

During the reception which immediately followed the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Butler were assisted in receiving by the bride's parents Mr. and Mrs. Ira M. Hill, and the groom's brother and sister, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur L. Butler of Somerville. The bride's mother wore a most becoming costume of grey voile with grey ornament for the hair.

The house was prettily decorated with autumn foliage and clematis. Particularly beautiful was the bow window where the bridal party stood with its solid background of dark red oak leaves and potted palms.

After the receptica Mr. and Mrs. Butler left for a short trip to the Berkshires from which place they will leave for Easton, Penn., their future home.

The bride has resided in East Milton during the past eight years, and has made a very large number of friends whose best wishes follow her to her new home.

Kenneth Gay of Webster street and F. Gordon Jenkins of Billings street are to run the first dance of the season in Atlantic Music hall on the 20th of November. Both young men are popular and are making every effort to make the party a success. A great many young people are interested in the affair and have promised their support.

MEMORIAL MONUMENT.

By testamentary direction of the late Charles E. French of Boston a memorial monument was placed in the First church cemetery, Saturday in loving tribute to his late uncle, Benjamin Vinton French, late of Braintree. The stone is of a beautiful Westerly granite and shows a very fine likeness of Mr. French, above this being a large wreath of fruit which is a splendid reminder of his agricultural business of which he was so very fond.

Mr. French's interests were always for the town in which he lived and through his efforts many improvements were made about the town. The old cemetery was a very sacred spot to him and through him the old wall which once fronted the spot was torn down and the neat iron fence which now stands there was put in its place. The wall at the back was also put there through his endeavor, as have been many other improvements.

The memorial stone has been set with the bas relief work facing the east so that the work may be seen in several different directions. The inscription reads as follows:

Erected in 1908,
by testamentary direction of Charles E. French of Boston to the memory of his uncle
Benjamin Vinton French.
Born in Braintree, July 29, 1791
Died in Boston, April 11, 1860
Founder of Mass Horticultural Society,
U. S. Agricultural Society,
Norfolk County Agricultural Society.

The fine specimen of stone was the work of F. Barnicoat of Quincy.

THAYER ACADEMY NOTES.

On Friday evening the anual senior middle reception was held at the girls' gymnasium and as usual proved a success. Three pieces from Stetson's orchestra furnished the music and a pleasant evening was enjoyed by all. Dr. Gallagher has extended an invitation to Principle Shaw and the other teachers of the High school, and to Superintendant Anthony.

Saturday Dr. Gallagher attends at Hartford a meeting of the executive committee of the Head Masters' Association of which he is secretary. The president this year is Horace D. Taft, brother of the candidate for the presidencey of the United States.

Everybody satisfied clean, first class, up to date work at Carles hair dressing room, 6 Washington street. Four chairs no waiting. 1t

Quincy Plans For the Parade

St. John's Holy Name society was out in force last night, and with Edward J. Lennon in command, marched down Hancock street through City Square to Adams Academy and back, going throught the moves that will be necessary on Sunday. The boys will meet at 11 A. M. at the corner of Quincy avenue and School street, marching from that point to the station. They leave Quincy on the 12.45 train. On arriving at the South station they march with the other companies to the starting point.

The marchers will wear dark clothes, black hats and ties and white gloves. Each one will also wear his Holy Name button and one of the badges made especially for this occasion.

The St. Mary's society will leave on a special train that comes through from Cohasset and arrives at West Quincy at 12.26. They will wear the uniform dress of the others. A large number were out for their final drill last night and showed up well.

The Sacred eHart church members from Atlantic will board the train that takes the St. John's society. They too were drilling last night, and Commander John A. McGowan feels very well satisfied with the way the members have progressed. The Sacred Heart church is decorated in somewhat the same style as St. John's only in proportion to the size. The illuminated cross in the centre with "1808" and "1908" on either side show up brilliantly at night.

One of the interesting features of the parade on Sunday will be the salute on Sunday will be the salute to Archbishop O'Connell, Cardinal Gibbons, and the others in the reviewing stand. As each company passes in review, every member at the same instant, on the order to salute, uncovers his head ;and when commanded to recover the hats go back as if they were one. It makes a pretty sight and will be interesting to watch.

PORTER—BUMP.

One of South Braintree's most popular young men, Mr. Henry L. Porter, Jr., of Randall avenue has become a benedict. Saturday evening, Oct. 24, Mr. Porter was united in marriage to Miss Edna Frances Bump, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Bump of Randolph.

The ceremony, which was a very quiet one, on account of the illness of the groom's sister, was performed by the Rev. C. A. Dawson of the South M. E. church at the parsonage.

The happy couple will reside on North street, Randolph, and are planning in the near future a reception for their many friends.

BRAINTREE.

Mr. W. A. Torrey and Mr. G. W. Stevens have returned after a very pleasant sojourn in Washington, D. C.

Miss Nellie Monk, so long a successful teacher in Braintree schools and lately teaching in Malden has accepted a similar position in Newton.

Mrs. Henrietta T. Blanchard of this town attended the fiftieth wedding anniversary of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Chesterfield, at Stoughton last Saturday.

Walter Blake of Franklin street resumed his work as conductor on the Old Colony street railroad after being confined to his home for six weeks with a broken bone in his foot.

George Gammons of this town is coaching the Rockland high school football team and has high hopes of defeating the best elevens in the state. George is also sub-master at this school.

Last Monday evening at Randolph, the very exciting roll-off between teams representing Randolph and South Braintree was won by the South Braintree team, the score standing 1347 to 1310.

Leo Brett of Brown University, Providence, R. I. has been quite ill at his home on Summer street. Although not fully recovered he is feeling much better and expects to return to his studies Monday.

The many friends of H. Alton Rogers will be pleased to learn that he is playing a great game at end with the second team at Harvard university. Many look upon him as one of the best players on the gridiron but a technicality prevents his playing on the varsity.

Nov. 3d the Philergians will present its play, "Cranford" under the management of Mrs. George O. Wales. Club members are requested to attend promptly as business will begin at 2.30 o'clock.

Dr. Elihu Oliver, who is on his way to accept a position in Tien Tsin, China, is keeping his friends advised of his progress and reports himself well and happy. After crossing the continent he expected to sail last Tuesday by the steamship, "Siberia" from San Francisco with Honolulu as the next stopping place.

Mr. and Mrs. George L. Hender of Elmwood park are receiving congratulations on the advent of another grandchild, a little son being born to Mr. and Mrs. Charles Price this week.

Master Raymond Adams Hubbard of Stedman avenue, celebrated his twelfth birthday, Thursday, by inviting some of his young friends to visit him, between five and eight o'clock. A jolly good time was had, playing games, guessing conundrums, etc.

National President John F. Tobin of the Boot and Shoe Workers' Union was greeted by a large and enthusiastic audience at the South Methodist Episcopal church last Sunday evening. This was the first of a social series arranged by Rev. Charles A. Dawson and was eminently successful in every respect.

Braintree pupils still continue to win prizes in drawing. The names of those who received awards in the June contest, as published in the October number of the "School Arts Book" are: Third prize, George Brow, IV, Jonas Perkins school, East Braintree; fourth prize, the badge to Irving Bates, VI, Jonas Perkins school, East Braintree; honorable mention to John J. Drinkwater, Braintree; Olive M. Drinkwater, Braintree; Alfred Ellsworth, Braintree; Albert Frazier, East Braintree.

The overflow at the Union school is to be provided for by the removal of the third grade to the building on Washington street, near River, formerly occupied by the Dow Portable Electric Co.' This building has been remodelled and put in good repair, a furnace installed, and the result is a very attractive room, well suited for school purposes. Miss Carson has been appointed the teacher for this grade.

The executive committee of the Men's club, affiliated with the South Methodist Episcopal church, met last Wednesday evening at the residence of George O. MacDonald for the purpose of making arrangements for the November meeting of the club.

H. S. Simms of Braintree, who is a freshman at Wesleyan this fall, has been initiated into the Delta Kappa Epsilon fraternity, and has pledged to Pi Kappa Tan, one of the freshman class societies. He is also rehearsing with the mandolin club, playing first mandolin, in preparation for the extensive trips to be taken during the Thanksgiving and Christmas vacations. The entering class at Wesleyan this fall is the largest the college has ever admitted; it shows an increase of twenty-five over last year.

Captain S. Everett Whitmarsh of East Braintree is the oldest fireman from point of service in this town. He was a member of the Union company when that engine arrived in town Sept. 27, 1864 and has been an active member of the department ever since. Mr. Whitmarsh is a member of the hose company and while the oldest man in the company he is usually one of the first at a fire and has a wide reputation as a fire fighter. He rounded out 44 years of service September 27 last and he says that he can see no reason why he will not serve a half century before retiring.

The public schools will be closed next Friday, November the sixth, to allow the teachers to attend the annual convention of the Norfolk County Teacher's Association. Supt. Anthony is a member of the council, and will preside over the grammar and primary sections in the morning. The general theme for the day is "Education for Citizenship." Among the prominent speakers are Miss Julia Richman, supervisor, New York city; Principal William McAndrew, Washington Irving school, New York; President S. C. Mitchell, University of South Carolina; Supt. James H. Van Sickle, Baltimore, Md.; and James H. Canfield, librarian, Columbia University.

In a spelling test of fifty words studied during the term, Justin McCarthy, George Carmichael and Harold Allen of grade eight Noah Torrey school received 100 percent and Miss Helen A. MacDonald of grade seven in a test of 100 words received 100 percent.

The largest vote ever cast in Braintree will not compare with next Tuesday's vote. There are now 1539 names on the voting lists, 625 in precinct one, 508 in precinct two and 406 in precinct three. In South Braintree 95 names have been added to the list, Braintree 51, East Braintree 60, a total of 206

Miss Annie King daughter of Mrs. Viola and the late Francis L. King died at her home on Brookside road Tuesday evening after a long illness, aged 19 years. The funeral took place yesterday afternoon and was conducted by Rev. Frank B. Cressey of Cambridge a former pastor of the Weymouth Baptist church. Interment was at Village cemetery.

Congratulation are being received by Mr. and Mrs. William Burr of Jacksonville, Florida, on the birth of a son on Monday, October 19. Mrs. Burr was well known here as Miss Lillian Gutterson of Bellevue road.

Mrs. I. W. Jordan entertained a former resident, Mr. Denton, for three days this week at her home on Allen street. Mr. Denton formerly owned the place on Commercial street now known as the Joshua Wilkins estate. He enjoyed revisiting scenes once so familiar for he is now 83 years old and comes not so frequently as in former days.

Will Drollett was married last Saturday in Boston to Miss Ada Dunkly and has gone to St. Louis, Mo., to reside.

COCIAL BY SONS OF ST. GEORGE.

The Sons of St. George held their first social and dance of the season at Doble's hall Wednesday evening. Despite the inclement weather, the hall was taxed to its utmost capacity and the participants were well repaid for their courage.

An excellent program was carried out between the dances, songs being rendered by Messrs. Tate, Acton, Prout, Mitchell, Meyers, Perkis and the Poole Brothers, selections by the Granite City quartette, Messrs. W. and Fred Warmington, G. Guston and E. Collins, and recitations by Miss Louisa Moyle. Mr. R. Whittaker of Wollaston executed beautiful designs in paper with no other means than his fingers. Encores were liberally given and the hits of the evening were the rendering of the "Soldiers' Farwell" by the quartette and "Bobby" Mitchell's kissing song. Refreshments were served and the event closed at midnight after four hours of solid enjoyment. The pianist for the evening was Mr. W. Wilson. The committee in charge was Messrs. Vanner, Prout, Winship, King, Pascoe and Dunstan.

MAKES WORK EASIER

Quincy People Are Pleased to Learn How it is Done.

It's pretty hard to attend to duties
With a constantly aching back;
With annoying urinary disorders.
Doan's Kidney Pills make work easier.
They cure backache.
They cure every kidney ill.

James P. Daugherty, living on Hammond Place, Quincy, Mass. says: "I have used Doan's Kidney Pills and am glad to let others know what they have done for me. I suffered constantly from backache and had but little strength or energy to get through with my day's work. I took many so-called kidney cures but did not succeed in finding relief until I began using Doan's Kindney Pills which I procured at the Cox, Drug Store. I was surprised and gratified at the prompt way they relieved me. My back was soon strong and free from pain and I felt better generally. I would go to considerable trouble to get anyone to use Doan's Kidney Pills as I have so much confidence in their merit."

HITCHCOCK'S FORECAST

Claims Majority of Eighty-Three In Electoral College

IS CERTAIN OF WIDE MARGIN

Taft Will Carry States Where Battles Have Waged the Hottest and Has Even Chances In Kentuckey and Missouri--Taft Hammers Bryan-Gompers Plans and Bryan Arraigns Alleged Trust Sympathizers

New York, Oct. 31.—In his forecast of the composition of the electoral college which will choose the next President and Vice President of the United States and made public at Republican headquarters last night, National Chairman Hitchcock claims 325 Republican members, or eighty-three more than will be required to elect the party's candidates.

Mr. Hitchcock is sure about New York, Ohio and Indiana. He also includes in the Republican column Nebraska, Montana, Maryland and Nevada. In explaining his list, Hitchcock said that he believed that the chances were even in Kentucky and Missouri, with their thirteen and eighteen votes, respectively. If, by any chance, any of the states claimed went Democratic, he said, they would be Maryland, Montana and Nevada, with a total of fourteen votes.

This would leave a Republican margin of sixty-nine and of this advantage he expressed himself as entirely assured. The national chairman does not include Tennessee and Oklahoma in his list and concedes that the chances in these states are against the Republican ticket. His forecast, Hitchcock says, was based upon information received by him last night from party leaders throughout the United States. The states claimed for Taft and Sherman, with their electoral votes, follow:

California, 10; Colorado, 5; Connecticut, 7; Delaware, 3; Idaho, 3; Illinois, 27; Indiana, 15; Iowa, 13; Kansas, 10; Maine, 6; Maryland, 8; Massachusetts, 16; Michigan, 14; Minnesota, 11; Montana, 3; Nebraska, 8; Nevada, 3; New Hampshire, 4; New Jersey, 12; New York, 39; North Dakota, 4; Ohio, 23; Oregon, 4; Pennsylvania, 34; Rhode Island, 4; South Dakota, 4; Utah, 3; Vermont, 4; Washington, 5; West Virginia, 7; Wisconsin, 13; Wyoming, 3. Total, 325.

GETS AFTER GOMPERS

Taft Says Many Labor Leaders Are Deserting Federation President

Buffalo, Oct. 31.—Sledge-hammer blows at the Gompers-Bryan labor legislation plans were delivered here last night by William H. Taft before two immense audiences. "The attempt of Mr. Gompers," he declared, "to deliver the labor vote of this country is as audacious as act of political effrontery as has ever occurred in the history of politics. It is most reassuring to note that the men associated with Mr. Gompers in the executive council of the Federation of Labor are falling away from him in this effort of his to make the Federation of Labor a political factor."

After giving the names of many labor leaders high in the councils of the American Federation of Labor, who, he said, were leaving Gompers, Taft asserted that the protective system was decidedly the most important consideration for the American workman and added:

"Mr. Gompers, however, has so committed himself on one subject with reference to labor that he is willing to sacrifice every other consideration, however important and material, to the welfare of the wage earners. He is willing to have a return of the conditions that existed in 1896 if only he can secure what he regards as the proper legislation concerning injunctions. He proposes to abolish injunctions in industrial disputes where the injunction is issued to protect the business of a person whose business is injured by the lawless acts of workingmen, and this by statute. He also proposes to legalize the secondary boycott, although many trades unions have distinctly renounced the use of the secondary boycott as an instrumentality in industrial disputes, which is un-Republican, un-American and which is certain to react upon the user as a boomerang with disastrous effect."

After expressing the belief that the legislation which Gompers proposed would be unconstitutional, Judge Taft concluded:

"The charge that I ever sentenced a man without a full hearing or made an order affecting his wages without a full hearing is altogether unfounded and false, and it is one of those slanders circulated at the end of the campaign for the purpose of awakening the prejudices of ignorant or uninformed persons."

The meeting at Utica between Taft and James S. Sherman and the magnitude of the reception the Republican presidential candidate received in this city last night were other features of the campaign Taft made yesterday in northern New York, although at Batavia, late in the afternoon, he left his car in a driving snowstorm to speak to many thousands of people.

The Utica demonstration in honor of the two nominees afforded a lighter side to the serious work of the campaign. The neighbors and friends of Sherman made the occasion one of cordiality in every way. Taft gained the esteem of his audience at each of the two big meetings held here by familiarly speaking of his colleague as "Jim," and declaring his absolute confidence in "Jim's" prediction of Republican success next Tuesday. The two candidates had a brief consultation in Baggs hotel prior to the meetings.

FINANCIERS ATTACKED

Bryan Says Trusts Furnished Funds For Republican Campaign

Cleveland, Oct. 31.—Heaping denunciation upon the heads of John D. Rockefeller, Andrew Carnegie, President Roosevelt and William H. Taft, because, as he charged, of the connection or sympathies with the trusts, William J. Bryan, in this city last night, brought to a close another strenuous day of campaigning.

The principal meeting was held in the big Centray armory, while a second audience was addressed at Gray's armory. Later the candidate spoke to the street crowds from the balcony of the Hollenden hotel. The arrival of the candidate at the armory was heralded by a great throng outside. Their cheers were taken up by those on the inside, who broke out in frantic applause when he made his appearance on the platform.

Mr. Bryan apparently was at his best and he spoke with a vigor and earnestness that showed nothing of the strain of the campaign which he has conducted. The Democratic candidate discussed the Democratic platform, laying great stress on the planks relating to the guaranteeing of deposits, publicity of campaign contributions and the trusts.

The two latter topics furnished him the texts for his attacks on the financiers, the president and Taft. The Standard Oil company and the Steel Trust, through Rockefeller and Carnegie, were credited with furnishing the funds for the Republican campaign.

Earlier in the day Bryan gave out a statement of his views regarding the declarations of the two capitalists that they were supporting the Republican candidate and this statement was practically embodied in his speeches here. He also emphasized the labor planks of the Denver platform and made an appeal for the laboring men to stand together and support the national Democratic ticket if they expected the remedial legislation they desired.

Not content with his strictures on those named, Bryan had something to say about Secretary Root, who is quoted as having stated that Bryan's election would be a menace to the country. "I see Mr. Root has made an argument against the election of senators by the people," he remarked. "I am not surprised. No man in public life has more reason to fear an election at which the people vote.

"He also thinks my election would be a menace to the country. That is not surprising. He began his legal career with a defense of Boss Tweed and has been so intimately associated with the big law breakers ever since that he would naturally resent the Democratic idea of enforcing the law impartially against offenders."

"Disinterested Patriots"

Indianapolis, Oct. 31.—John D. Rockefeller and Andrew Carnegie were made the target for shafts of ridicule by John W. Kern in a speech here last night. "A precious pair of disinterested patriots," he called them for their championing the Republican presidential candidate. Kern's comments were called forth by the published statement that Rockefeller intends to cast his vote for Mr. Taft and were made before one of the largest audiences he has addressed during the campaign. The meeting was the final one of the day's series, which began at 9 o'clock in the morning. The meetings were in the nature of all-day demonstrations, speakers having preceded the special or remaining after its departure, to take up the issues at length.

Sherman Speaks In Three Counties

Oneonta, N. Y., Oct. 31.—Beginning the day's campaigning at Utica, where he spoke from the same platform with his fellow-nominee, Mr. Taft, James S. Sherman traversed three counties yesterday in the Mohawk and the Susquehanna valleys, ending here last night with a big rally. Delegations by special train and trolley poured into this city from Oneida, Herkimer and Otsego counties, crowding the city with cheering thousands who enthusiastically welcomed the candidate. Sherman devoted most of his time to showing how the protective tariff had benefited American industries and all classes of citizens. Mention of Governor Hughes was heartily cheered at every place at which the candidate spoke.

Students Parade at Boston

Boston, Oct. 31.—The spectacular feature of the presidential campaign in this city occurred last night when the Republican organizations of Harvard university, Massachusetts Institute of Technology, Boston university, Tufts, Amherst and the North Shore marching clubs made up a big torchlight parade through the Back Bay section. The parade was split up into six divisions. On account of the strenuous meetings in previous years between the student bodies after the procession had been broken up a large detail of police was on hand to preserve order, but there was no undue excitement.

Democrats Claim New Jersey

Newark, N. J., Oct. 31.—A plurality of approximately 17,000 for Bryan and Kern in New Jersey is the prediction made by the Democratic state committee in an official statement. This estimate, the committee says, is based on a careful canvass of all the counties of the state.

REBUKE FROM THE CZAR

No Sympathy With Attitude of Crown Prince of Servia

St. Petersburg, Oct. 31.—The audience of Prince George, the Crown Prince of Servia, with Emperor Nicholas, like all the details of his reception, was of a purely private and unofficial character, Russia having insisted upon this as a preliminary condition to the prince's visit to Russia. As emphasizing this, King Peter's letter to Nicholas will be presented by M. Pasics, the Servian premier, at a later date. Pasics did not accompany Prince Pasics did not accompany the prince when he visited the emperor yesterday.

It is understood that in the course of a long conversation with the prince, the emperor dilated upon the necessity of abandoning bellicose tactics, which he said would find no support in Russia. The general attitude of Russia toward the Servian crown prince is one of rebuke for the prince's recent utterances at Belgrade.

CHILDREN ACQUIRE COCAINE HABIT

Excessive Use of Poisonous Drug In Philadelphia

Philadelphia, Oct. 31.—In a crusade to break up the cocaine habit, which, it has been discovered, is prevailing among children in some of the public schools in the Tenderloin district of this city, the police last night arrested eleven men and three women, either users of the drug or poisons, accused of supplying it to others. This makes a total of twenty arrests since Monday, including a number of boys and two men, who are held to be largely responsible for the boys becoming users of the drug.

Since the first of the year 150 persons, including boys, girls and many young men who were victims of the habit, have been sent to the house of correction from the same district, and twenty-three have been indicted for engaging in the traffic.

Denial of Fight With Indians

Nogales, Ariz., Oct. 30.—After a thorough investigation of the reported killing of forty Yaquis, in an encounter at Hermosillo, it is said that there is no foundation for the reports. There have been no encounters with the Yaquis since the battle of Aug. 30 between the Indians under Chief Bule and soldiers, in which eighteen Indians, including Bule, were wounded and several killed. Conferences are now being held between representatives of the Yaquis and Mexican officers looking towards the signing of a treaty guaranteeing permanent peace.

Great Improvement In Business

New York, Oct. 31.—R. G. Dun & Co.'s Weekly Review of Trade says that decided improvement is noted in most trade reports, especially in respect to distributive departments. Orders have come to manufacturers more freely, in many cases accompanied by requests for immediate or very early delivery. Evidences of increased confidence are numerous, and prices are more firmly held where concessions have been offered recently without attracting buyers.

Suspected of Giving Tips

Cincinnati, Oct. 31.—As a result of charges by the Chicago Board of Trade that market quotations had been permitted to leak to "bucket shops," five trusted employes of the Cincinnati Western Union office have been suspended, pending investigation. The chief operator, the chief lineman, the chief clerk in the superintendent's office, the head of the ticker department and head switchboard operator were dropped.

Whitmore Accquitted by Jury

Jersey City, N. J., Oct. 31.—After being out two hours, the jury in the case of Theodore Whitmore, on trial for the murder of his wife, whose battered body was found on Dec. 26 of last year in a swamp near Harrison, N. J., returned a verdict of not guilty last night. Whitmore's defense was an alibi which he was able to establish by a number of witnesses. The jury was out a little more than two hours.

Army Officer In Disgrace

Leavenworth, Kan., Oct. 31.—Major John Stone, chief surgeon of the military prison at Fort Leavenworth, has been sentenced to a reduction of ten files in rank, six months' confinement to the limits of the post and a monthly fine of $50 for the same period, as a result of a court martial trial. Stone was charged with refusal to obey orders and conduct unbecoming an officer.

Date of Wedding Kept Secret

New York, Oct. 31.—The latest sensation to be reported concerning the Duke of the Abruzzi and Miss Katherine Elkins is that the couple will marry privately and unknown to the public to escape the curiosity of the crowd. Then, after the occurrence, they will announce the fact officially, giving at the same time the date of their union.

Night Riders Still Busy

Lexington, Ky., Oct. 31.—Night riders burned the merchandise store belonging to J. C. McClure at Sherburned last night. Bloodhounds were sent to the scene with officers.

HIGH FINANCE IS EXPLAINED

Morse Is Cross Examined by Counsel For Government.

WILSON AND WHITING LOANS

Admission That They Were Both His, In Spite of Fact That It Had Previously Been Officially Denied That "Ice King" Was Interested In Them

--Declares His Liability Was Verbal

--Did Not Share Alarm of Curtis

New York, Oct. 31.—For more than six hours yesterday Charles W. Morse, who a year ago was one of the dominant figures in Wall street, sat in the witness chair in the criminal branch of the United States circuit court endeavoring to defend the financial operations by the National Bank of North America, which resulted in the indictment of Morse and Alfred H. Curtis, on charges of conspiracy and violation of the national banking laws.

Several times Morse refused to answer questions unless permitted to explain himself at length. He sparred cleverly with Attorney Stimson, who took up the cross-examination for the government, and a number of times, rather than insist upon an answer to a question with an explanation accompanying it, Stimson withdrew the question.

Stimson rather took Morse by surprise when he took up the loan of more than $125,000 made to Miss Katherine A. Wilson, Morse's secretary. The financier had testified that the loan was made in his behalf and that the Leslie Whiting loans were also his. Then, with Morse still sitting in the witness chair, Stimson read a letter addressed to the then comptroller of the currency, W. B. Ridgely, and signed by Morse and other directors of the New Amsterdam bank, saying that Morse was not directly interested in the loan.

Stimson asked Morse again if he understood that the Wilson loan was made in his behalf, and Morse replied that the loan was his. Stimson then read another letter, this one being from Ridgely to the president of the New Amsterdam bank. It called attention to the executive loans made by the bank and especially mentioned the one to Miss Wilson, saying that the 430 shares of National Bank of North America stock put up to secure the loan were not sufficient collateral. The letter pointed out that the stock was only quoted at $115,000 at the time and added that "the examiner is under the impression that Mr. Morse is in some way connected with the loan."

It was this letter from the comptroller which called forth the one signed by Morse and the New Amsterdam bank directors declaring Morse was not directly interested in the Wilson loan.

When the cross-examination was begun Stimson asked Morse about the banking and fiduciary institutions he was connected with. This was to show that Morse was familiar with the every detail of the banking business and with the national banking laws, but the witness insisted that he did not understand the legal exactions and details of business, saying that he always retained a lawyer when any legal point arose. Stimson was counsel for the National Bank of North America two years ago and Morse called attention to this.

It was then brought out that Morse never read the reports to the comptroller of the currency showing the bank's outstanding loans, endorsers, etc., but that he signed them off-hand. Stimson produced a number of these reports and opposite the name of Morse appeared figures representing his liability to the bank as an endorser of loans, etc. Then Stimson read off the figures and showed that when the Whiting and Wilson loans were still outstanding the amount was not charged to Morse.

Morse protested that his liability on the notes in question was purely verbal and that there was nothing in his verbal guarantee that would justify the bookkeeper in charging any of the liability to him.

Stimson laid great stress on the liquidation of a note for $100,000 on Oct. 14 through the purchase by the bank of 2000 shares of ice stock and a $40,000 loan to Morse. Morse admitted Thursday that he requested Mr. Curtis, the president of the bank, to wipe out the $60,000 balance due the bank by charging it on the "commission account." Morse said the amount should have been charged against the $135,000 profits he turned into the bank just before the situation arose.

When the prosecutor took up the letter sent by Curtis to Morse, in which the former expressed alarm at the financial standing of the bank, Morse was asked if he shared the alarm of Curtis.

"Not in the least," was the answer.

"Was the alarm of Mr. Curtis shared by the directors?" was the next question.

"Not to the extent of making them pay off their loans," observed Morse, who added that Curtis was a timid man.

The Heinze loan of $212,000 was entered into briefly, Morse explaining that the loan was made on supposedly good collateral. Curtis refused to make this loan, and Morse afterwards put it through. Morse was then asked to give a list of the securities he had at the bank and he read off a score or more of names, giving the amount of stock of each concern that he held.

OF QUINCY, MASS.
(Legal Title—Incorporated 1892.)

The Directors of the YOUNG MEN'S CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION of Quincy, with a firm faith in the great value of the work which is being done for the young men and boys of our city, make their appeal for donations and bequests toward paying the mortgage indebtedness on the new Association Building. When the building is free from debt it will serve as an Endowment, as there is a goodly income from the dormitories.

Should the Donor prefer, such sum as might be given could be used as an Endowment for an educational class or classes, the Boys Department, or as a special fund in other ways, and could be designated with the name of the Donor.

The Treasurer, WILLIAM F. CUMMINGS, 7 Clive Street, Quincy, or the General Secretary, ERNEST G. GAY, will be happy to answer inquiries.

OUR HOSPITAL
(Legal Title: City Hospital of Quincy)
INCORPORATED 1889

The Trustees of the City Hospital of Quincy earnestly appeal for donations and bequests for the Endowment fund. This now amounts to over $60,000 but a fund of at least $100,000 is urgently needed.

Five Thousand Dollars ($5,000) will endow a Free Bed to which such name may be given as the Donor may desire, but any sum for this noble institution which stands ready to serve us all in the hour of need will be most gratefully received.

The Secretary, TIMOTHY REED, Adams St Quincy, or the Treasurer, RICHARD D. CHASE, Savings Bank Building, Quincy, will be very glad to confer with any one or to answer any inquiries.

The Scrap Book

The Kind Captain.

A certain sea captain had the reputation of being a cruel tyrant, but in reality he was a kind hearted man, as the following incident will prove.

In midocean the cook approached the captain timidly.

"Captain," he said, "the men are growlin' about the beef. They say they can't chaw it nohow. They say it's only fit to mend their sea boots with."

"How much beef are you givin' 'em, cookie?" the captain asked.

"A pound apiece a day, sir," said the cook.

"Well," said the captain gently, "give 'em half a pound apiece from now on. I should be sorry to force 'em to eat what isn't to their taste."

THE VASTNESS OF THE NIGHT.

When we confront the vastness of the night
And meet the gaze of her eternal eyes,
How trivial seem the garnered gains we prize.
The laurel wreath we flaunt to envious sight,
The flower of love we pluck for our delight.
The mad sweet music of the heart that cries
An instant on the listening air, then dies—
How short the day of all things dear and bright!

The everlasting mocks our transient strife.
The pageant of the universe whirls by
This little sphere with petty turmoil rife—
Swift as a dream and fleeting as a sigh—
This brief delusion that we call our life,
Where all we can accomplish is to die.
—Louise Chandler Moulton.

A Crusher.

Legge, bishop of Oxford, who had not youth as his excuse for his vanity, asked his friend Canning to come and hear his first episcopal sermon. They dined together afterward, and from the politician's silence the other ought to have known better than to push him; but, being rather nettled, he exclaimed, "Canning, you have said nothing to me about my sermon."

"Well, it was short."

"Oh," said the bishop, "It is better to be short than tedious."

"But," replied Canning, "you were that too."

The Parrot's Response.

A maiden lady in England owned a parrot, which somehow acquired the disagreeable habit of observing at frequent intervals, "I wish the old lady would die." This annoyed the bird's owner, who spoke to her curate about it.

"I think we can rectify the matter," replied the good man. "I also have a parrot, and he is a righteous bird, having been brought up in the way he should go. I will lend you my parrot, and I trust his influence will reform that depraved bird of yours."

The curate's parrot was placed in the same room with the wicked one, and as soon as the two had become accustomed to each other the bad bird remarked, "I wish the old lady would die," whereupon the clergyman's bird rolled up his eyes and in solemn accents added. "We beseech thee to hear us, good Lord!"

The story got out in the parish, and for several Sundays it was necessary to omit the litany at the church services.

Modest.

A young Canadian humorist who went over to England hoping to find London editors in receptive mood forwarded a contribution to Punch with this note: "Dear Sir—I arrived in London this morning and paid a visit to Westminster abbey this afternoon. I found this call depressing, for a man naturally shrinks from inspecting the spot where he is to be buried."

A Black Mark For the Other One.

A man by the name of Evans died and went to heaven, of course. When he arrived at the pearly gates he said to St. Peter:

"Well, I'm here."

St. Peter looked at him and asked his name.

"John Evans," was the reply.

St. Peter looked through his book and shook his head. "You don't belong here," he said, pointing to the exit.

"But I am sure I belong here," said the man.

"Wait a minute," said St. Peter.

He looked again and in the back of the book found his name.

"Sure," said the guardian of the gate, "you belong here, but you weren't expected for twenty years. Who's your doctor?"

Man's Study of Himself.

Omit a few of the most abstruse sciences, and mankind's study of man occupies nearly the whole field of literature. The burden of history is what man has been; of law, what he does; of physiology, what he is; of ethics, what he ought to be; of revelation, what he shall be.—George Finlayson.

Smart Press Agent.

While George Ade was conducting a dramatic column on a Chicago paper the press agent of a coming theatrical attraction walked brightly into Ade's office one morning and offered the author a long article, which was primarily an advertisement for the coming show.

"Ade, I want you to use this story for me," said the theatrical man. "It's a good, interesting article, and you'll do me a great favor by printing it."

"I'm sorry, but it's not the sort of stuff the paper wants," replied Ade. "It's too much of an advertisement. Why, if you took that down to our business office they'd charge you regular advertising rates!"

The press agent mournfully departed, but the next morning Ade looked through the paper and was astonished to find the agent's story occupying a full column on the editorial page. Later in the day the managing editor came into Ade's office and spread out the editorial page.

"That's the sort of theatrical stuff we want," he said, pointing to the agent's article. "And what do you think, Ade? I only paid $20 for that story!"—Lippincott's.

Huffed.

In the olden times a woman in the north of Scotland went to visit her husband, who was condemned to be hanged on the following day. The doomed man began to give his instructions to his wife preparatory to bidding her farewell, when all at once she broke in upon the conversation and exclaimed, "By the bye, John, whaur will I plant the tatties this year?" The unfortunate man, as may be imagined, grew exceedingly indignant at the indifference of his wife and exclaimed angrily: "What need I care whaur ye plant them? I'm not likely to need ony o' them." "Hech," replied the woman, turning to the warden, with a wag of the head, "oor John's huffed because he's gaun to be hanged the morn!" and marched out of the cell.

A Landseer Story.

Landseer, riding down Bond street, London, saw the following notice in a picture dealer's shop window: "A Fine Landseer on View Within." He went into the shop and asked to see the "fine Landseer." The dealer, who did not recognize him, proudly pointed out the work. It was rather an early one. The dealer was, of course, loud in its praise.

"And how much do you want for it?" said Landseer.

"Two thousand guineas, sir," was the reply.

"Two thousand guineas? That seems a long price for an early work."

"I could not take a shilling less," said the dealer. "He's gone, sir," touching his forehead significantly. "He's out of his mind. He'll never paint another."

"Is he indeed?" said Landseer. "I'm very sorry to hear that." And as he was coming away he noticed a large picture by Stanfield. "May I ask what you want for this Stanfield?"

"That, sir, is also 2,000 guineas."

"What!" said Landseer, touching his forehead and imitating the dealer's gesture. "Is Stanfield gone too?"

The Evil Eye.

The possession of two eyes does not confer upon us any advantage. One of them serves to show us the good things and the other the evils of life. A large number of people have acquired the bad habit of shutting the first eye, but very few shut the second, and that is why there are so many people who would rather be blind altogether than see all they have to see. Happy the one eyed who are only deprived of that evil eye which spoils all that we look upon!—Voltaire.

Fooling Sandy.

An old Glasgow skinflint breakfasted every morning on porridge and in order to save fuel cooked a whole week's supply every Saturday.

One Friday morning the stuff seemed very cold and very salt, and he felt he must abandon the struggle to eat it.

But his stubborn nature forbade any such thought. So he fetched the whisky from the cupboard, poured out a glass and placed it before him on the table.

"Now, Sandy," said he, "if ye eat that parritch ye'll hae that whisky an' if ye don't ye won't."

He stuck again at the last spoonful, but, keeping his eye steadily on the glass of whisky, he made a bold, brave effort and got it down.

Then he slowly and carefully poured the whisky into the bottle, with a broad grin, as he said to himself:

"Sandy, my lad, I did ye that time, ye auld swindler."

Had Been to Sea.

An Irishman, brought before a New York police judge on a charge of vagrancy, was thus questioned:

"What trade do you follow?"

"Shure, yer honor, I'm a sailor," Pat made answer.

"What—you a seafaring man? I doubt whether you were ever at sea in your life," exclaimed the irate justice.

"Shure, and does yer honor think I came over from Ireland in a wagon?" grinned Pat.

Irish Wit.

In the early sixties there lived in the west of Ireland a priest and a Protestant minister who were very friendly with one another. Each of them possessed a spice of the true native wit.

The priest owned a mare which had been given to him by a parishioner in the days of his youth. The old mare was getting on in years and at last fell very sick. She tottered rather than trotted and refused to eat the finest corn or the freshest hay. Each day the minister on meeting his friend, Father Daly, would inquire particularly after the poor old animal's health, and each day for a week or so he received the same answer, "She is no better, but still alive." At last one day after the usual sympathetic inquiry he was told that the mare was dead. Thinking to take his friend unawares and with a twinkle in his eye, he asked Father Daly if he had given the poor animal absolution before she died. Quick as a flash of lightning came the priest's reply: "No, your reverence, I couldn't. The unfortunate baste was a Protestant."

Quincy Locals Briefly Told

John R. Walters is on business in New York and Pennsylvania.

George W. Jones announces that he has a square deal for his customers, in the interwoven toe and heel hose for men.

James F. Burke is a candidate for member of the School Committee from Ward Four. Mr. Burke served one term on the board several years ago.

The W. C. T. U. hold their next meeting Thursday, Nov. 5, at 3 P. M. sharp, in Protection hall. The hour of the L. T. L. is at 4.15 after school.

The Wm. A. Bradford Co. are prepared to install a steam or hot water heating plant in your house, as well as do a first class job in plumbing or gas fitting.

Miss A. Maud Briggs of Appleton street took part ih the religious exercises at Bingham Friday night. Miss Briggs appeared for St. Chrysostom's church and read one of the most interesting papers of the evening.

The music at the Wollaston Congregational charch Sunday morning will include: Anthem, "Send out thy light," Gounod. Response, "Like as the heart desireth," contralto solo with cello. Communion anthem, "As Christ upon the cross."

The funeral of Mrs. Esther A. Bentley, wife of David Bentley and mother of Mr. Walter A. Bentley, master of the Coddington school, was held yesterday afternoon at 104 Putnam street. Dr. E. N. Hardy officiated. The burial was at East Walpole, Mrs. Bentley's former home.

To every observant citizen of Atlantic it is particularly noticeable that there has been a marked change in the conduct of those leisured individuals who empty their talent on street corners of sidewalks especially of evenings to amuse or annoy the populace. The cause of this much welcomed reform is not far to seek, for Officer Larkin, since taking his post, has concentuated his efforts to vocate such offenses. He is succeeding remarkably and all good citizens are glad to recognize his worth an officer and give him their hearty support.

The Wollastou Glee club starts its ninth season with its usual membership under the directorship of Mr. John A. Crowley, who for the past five years has so successfully conducted this popular organization. The first rehearsal will be next Monday evening in the Unitarian vestry. Part of the winter will be spent in the study of William G. Hammond's arrangement of Sir Walter Scott's ballad "Lochinvar." This work is for chorus with baritone solo and is deservedly popular among men's choruses. The club expects to give several concerts during the season in Quincy and neighboring towns. Men who sing are invited to communicate with Dr. E. R. Johnson, secretary, Wollaston, for information concerning admission to the club.

Mrs. George E. Pfaffmann of Presidents hill entertained at whist on Thursday afternoon for the benefit of the fair to be held early in November by the ladies of First church, in which she is much interested.

ARNOLD—HAYWARD.

On Tuesday evening at eight o'clock, at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. William H. Hayward on Lowell street, Braintree, occurred the marriage of their daughter, Emily Frances and Ralph Ward Arnold. The single ring ceremony was performed by Rev. Thomas Simms in the presence of the nearest relatives. Frank W. Leonard, Jr., acted as usher and the bride's brother and sister, Charles H. Hayward and Miss Alice A. Hayward attended the bride and groom.

The bride wore a dainty white lingerie gown, carried a bouquet of bride's roses and wore lilies-of-the-valley in her hair. Her attendant wore white and carried a bouquet of La France roses.

The house was beautifully decorated with carnations, chrysanthemums and green. In the corner of the parlor where the ceremony took place was an arch of evergreen with a wedding bell directly overhead.

Refreshments of cakes and ices were served in the dining room which was decorated in pink.

—With Montreal passing New York, this year, with grain shipments abroad, and Canada rapidly pushing the survey for a railroad to Hudson Bay, this country must be alive to her transportation enterprises. Both New York and Boston should handle a much greater quantity of grain than they do at present, and the only way to do this is to make rail rates on as favorable terms as those of Canadian ports.—Old Colony Memorial.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it falls to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

AMUSEMENTS.

Keith's Theatre.

The latest of the recognized theatrical stars to leave the legitimate stage for vaudeville is that highly popular actress, Virginia Harned, who is to play her first engagement at Keith's the coming week. Supported by a capable company, Miss Harned is to present a playlet from her own pen, called in New ork, Philadelphia, Pittsburg and Washington. Annette Kellermann commences the third and last week of a really sensationally successful engagement, next Monday. "La Petite Revue" is the title given by Charles Lovenberg to a vocal comedietta that is one of the hits of the season. It is based upon an old idea —the puppet show—most artistically developed. Julius Tannen returns after an absence of more than a year. The Six American Dancers, an act that stands in a class by itself; Mr. and Mrs. Jimmie Barry and company in Mr. Bary's new rural skit "At Hensfoot Corner," the best vehicle they have ever had; Sam Elton; "The Man Who Made The Shah Laugh," a most amusing comedy juggler, Harry Bree, vocal comedian; Ina Claire a very clever comedienne and minic and new Kinetograph pictures will round out a most attractive offering.

Boston Theatre.

For election week at the Boston theatre, the attraction will be "The County Chairman," by George Ade, which is one of the very best works of the famous humorist in many respects. It is one that will strike home, particularly at this time when the country is interested in a national election, for in this comedy, Mr. Ade has all the types that are usually found prominent at election time, particularly in the smaller communities, and the fact that the action of this piece takes place in the Mississippi Valley during the early 80's doesn't detract one bit from the interest. Politics are no different now than they were then. All the members of the company will have important parts, including Wilson Melrose, Eleanor Gordon, Frank Losee, Gertrude Binley, Mary Sanders, Rose Morison, Walter Walker, Dudley Hawley, Beverly West, William Hasson and Henry Edwardes. Election night returns will be read from the stage.

Hollis Street Theatre.

Joseph Brooks will present Lillian Russell at the Hollis Street theatre, Boston, for a limited engagement of two weeks commencing Monday, November 2d, in the racing comedy success "Wildfire" by George Broadhurst and George V. Hobart. It will be recalled that Miss Russell made an unusual hit in this play in Boston last season. Since then she has scored the success of her career in New York where her work in "Wildfire" proved a revelation. Miss Russell's play "Wildfire" is exceptional in that it combines a refined home atmosphere with the intense action encountered on a metropolitan race track and is realistic in both instances. It is dramatic, possesses a world of comedy and is held together by an appealing love story. Miss Russell displays some wonderful gowns of the Directoire pattern. Her supporting company is exceptionally strong and a fine production of "Wildfire" completes the bill.

Castle Square Theatre.

William Gillette for the past twenty years and more one of the most distinguished of American actors and playwrights, has had a career of success that many may well envy. One of his greatest plays is "Secret Service," and the news of its revival at the Castle Square next week will delight the many lovers of romantic drama. Its plot deals with a crucial period of American history, that of the Civil War, and its presentation of the scenes of actual strife, of the exciting and soul stirring episodes in the life of a spy, and of the softer emotions of love and human sympathy, are both moving and convincing. It is now some ten years since "Secret Service" was first produced with William Gillette in the leading role and it has been played thousands of times througnout this country, and also in England and France where it was received with extraordinary acclaim. For week after next, the John Craig Stock Company will appear at the Castle Square in "Brown of Harvard."

Orpheum Theatre.

A novelty bill, full of variety and interest is to be given at the Orpheum theatre beginning Monday, Nov. 2. At its head is Amelia Bingham, probably the most distinguished American actress in a copyrighted production called "Big Moments From Famous Plays." This is an entirely new idea in vaudeville and Miss Bingham is the latest recruit from the legitimate ranks to the circuit of William Morris Inc. Her idea is as big as the Moments. Instead of a lot of introductory dialogue by actors who are not always big, Miss Bingham entertainingly outlines what led up to the "Big Moments." At the right instant her company, headed by Malcolm Williams, enters and the "Big Moment," is dramatically shown. The plays from which these are taken are "A Modern Lady Godiva," "Mme. Sans Gene," "School for Husbands," and "Mlle. Marni." The week of Nov. 9, is to be made notable at the Orpheum theatre by the presence of Harry Lauder, the famous Scotch comedians. Seats for this week go on sale Monday. Mail orders, accompanied by a remittance, will be filled in the order received. The Orpheum theatre is now making a feature of its Sunday concerts, and a new program is given every Sunday evening.

Voting Today For President

The question as to who the next President of the United States and the next Governor of Massachusetts will be will be settled tonight as far as the registered voters of the Quincy Y. M. C. A. are concerned.

The registration of the boys reached a total of 135 and today they are voting.

The polls opened at 10 o'clock this morning and remain open until 8 o'clock tonight. Eight election officers are on duty, four Democrats and four Republicans. The Independents and Socialists are not represented inside the rail.

The election officers are: Henry Trask, warden, Roland Grant, clerk, Henry Prescott, and Robert Cranshaw, inspectors ,all Republicans. The Democratic inspectors are William Hall, Ernest Rich, William Cranshaw, and Roy Sidelinger.

The ballot being used contains the name of the Democratic, Republican, Independent and Socialist candidates for president, vice president, governor and lieutenant governor.

A fairly good vote was cast up to 1 o'clock, but the rush is not looked for until this afternoon.

Estimates of the boy politicians are that nearly 100 percent of the registered vote will be cast.
